For answer to this question, these things are to be known.

1. A Lord may distrain any thing of his Tenants upon the place out of which the Rent is to come, as soon as ever it is there, and also the Beasts or Goods of any other mans after they have been levant and couchant, a some reasonable time; as if they be living Cattel, that they have fed and lien down. D. & S. 15. Term. 17. 10 H. 7. 21. Dyer 317. 1. H. 7. 1.

2. And if a stranger will put in his Beasts or Goods into the Tenants ground wilfully and trespass him, then the Lord may distrain it presently before it have been levant and couchant. 15 H. 7. 17. 1 H. 7. 1. So it seems where the stranger is to pay the duty as Lord Mefne and Tenant, and the Mefnes goods come upon the Tenancie, 15 H. 7. 17.

3. A man may distrain for Damage-fesant any mans goods, and it matters not who is Owner of them; nor by whom they are put on his ground, if they be doing him trespass. 1 H. 7. 1.

4. So for Issues a man may distrain any mans Cattel upon his ground upon whom the Issues are returned; that is, if he take them in the nature of a Distress only to impound, &c. there he may take any mans Beasts levant and couchant. But if they be to be taken and sold for Issues lost upon a Warrant out of the Exchequer to levy them upon the Lands of him that lost them, the Sheriff cannot do so. Goldsb. 149. pl. 50. 5 H. 7. 1.

5. A hath a Close adjoining to the Close of B. A. leaseth his Close to C. for sixty years; C. leaseth it to D. for ten years, rendering Rent which is Arrear. D. being to make the Bounds between these Closes, suffers the Bounds to be ill, whereby the Cattel of B. come into the Close of D. Now in this case C. may distrain them, and B. may have his remedy against him. Court in B. R.

6. If any be fined in a Leet or Court-Baron, or amerced, and he have other Beasts in his ground, they may not be taken and distrained for this, as in the Case of Rent, 12 H.7. 15. 41 Ed.3. 26.

7. It seems that for Rent, one may not distrain the Cattle of a stranger, upon the ground, before they have been Levant and Couchant; but in case where the stranger doth wilfully put them into the ground of the Tenant: And that if they come in by Escape, they are not distrainable till they have been Levant and Couchant. Yet (me thinks) if they get in by default of the owner, as if the bound be his, and he let them lie open; in this case the Lord may distrain them as soon as ever they come in. See 22 Hen.6. 37. Broo. Distress 21. Dyer 317. Doff. & Stud. 15. 15 Hen.7. 17. 22 Ed.4. 49.

8. It seems to me also, That if a mans Beasts be in his own ground, and the Tenant that ought to make the Closure suffer it to lie open, so that my Cattle come in his ground; that these are not distrainable when they are Levant and Couchant: But there must be either a default or consent in the owner, that his Cattle shall be there, else they are not distrainable, Dyer 317. 15 H.7. 17.

9. Such things as the taking of them may be prejudicial to the Commonwealth, are not distrainable; as Cloth in a Tailors shop, in a Weavers or Fullers house, 10 H.7. 21.

10. The Goods of a stranger that are distrainable in their nature, yet may not be distrained, when they are in the custody of the owner; as if a man ride his Horse, or have him in his hand, in the place where the Distress may be taken, or one bring his Horse to the House to fetch things, and tie him while he is loading: In these cases these things are not distrainable, Adjudg Reads case, 39 Eliz. C.B.

For the clearing of this point, take these things:

1. One may distrain any thing Damage-tenant, Shocks of Corn, or any thing else forbidden, to be distrained in other cases, 22 Ed.4. 47. 15 H.7. 13. 21 H.7.39.

2. One may distrain for other causes, all manner of Cattle, Oxen, Sheep, &c. all manner of Householdstuff and movables, as Beds, Bedsteads, Peuter, Brass; also a Wain laden, and the Oxen, though laden with such things as otherwise are not distrainable; as a load of Corn in Shocks or Sheaves, and almost all Chattels personal are distrainable; a Fold of Sheep, &c. is distrainable, 20 Ed.4.3. 2 H.4.15. 21 H.7.9. Dyer 281. 22 Ed.4.51.

3. Also Windows, Doors, Mill-stones, and the like, when they are laid aside, and are parted from the Freehold, and no more to be used with it, are distrainable, 14 H.8. 25.

4. Such things as whereof the Sheriff cannot tell how to make Replevin, and deliver them in as good plight as they were in the taking, are not distrainable for Rent, as dead Victuals, Flesh, or the like, that will corrupt: So Sheaves and Shocks of Corn, are not distrainable; but for Damage-tenant, these may be distrained, Co. Inst. f. 41.

5. Such as cannot be distinguished from others of the same kinde, as Money or Corn out of a Bag or Box, Sheaves or Shocks of Corn which is not in a Cart or Wain, Tithes, or the like, are not distrainable, 11 H.7. 15. Kelw. 126. 2 H.4.15. 7 H.7. 11. 22 Ed.4. 47,51. 11 H.4. 40. 9 H.6.9. 13 Ed.4.6.

6. Such things as are fixed to a Freehold, and parcel of it, are not distrainable, as Doors, Hinges, Windows, Millstones used in a Mill, Furnaces, Fats fastned to the house; Pales, Stanks, Gates, Evidences, and the like, 14 H.8. 25. 21 H.7. 26.

7. Such necessary Tools and Instruments as are necessary to keep men in their Callings; and for their livelihood, as a Carpenters Ax, as a Smiths-Anvil, or the like, are not distrainable, 14 H.8. 25.

8. Such things as are for mens present necessity, as a Horse when a man is riding, or the like, are not distrainable, 6 R. 2. Broo. Distress 16.

9. Such things as tend to the Common good, as a Draught, or Plough laden, Mens Plough Cattel, or Flock of Sheep, if they have others enough in the place, where Distress is to be taken, at the very time when a man comes to distrain, are not to be distrained, no not for the King, Dyer 312. But for Damage-tenant, these may be distrained, 51 H. 3. And in the other case the Distress must be there at the very time, for before or after is nothing in it. F. N. B. 174. 22 Ed. 1. Distress 61. Co. lib. 1 part 147. 2 part 133.

10. The Instruments of a mans profession, as the Books of Scholar, and the like, are not to be distrained.

11. Such things as are distrained already, and are in Pound as a Distress, cannot be distrained again, whiles they are in Pound, 22 Ed. 4. 11. Bro. Distress 75.

12. Such things as are for the Commonwealth, or tend thereunto; as a Millstone, when it is off from the Mill to be Pecked and Beaten. Things in a Common Hostery, or that are brought into a Fair or Market to be sold, are not distrainable. Vide infra & supra, 14 H. 8. 25.

13. Such things whereof no valuable property is in any body, as Dogs, Does, Bucks, Coneyes, and things that are Fera natura, are not distrainable, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, 47.

14. Fetters upon a Horse Leg, may be distrained with the Horse, March. f. 91. pl. 149.

15. Nor (as it seems) Poultry, or Fish, Vessels, or Apparel, distrainable, nor Armor, nor Jewels, Co. 2 part, Inst. 133.

Stat. 6.
In respect of
of the Distress.

The Distress must be reasonable somewhat proportionable to the cause and duty, for which it is taken, and yet if the cause be so as one cannot take a Distress of less value, and the thing be after a sort intire, as in the Distress of a Cart with his carriage, or with the Horses or Oxen annexed to them there (it seems) though there be a great deal of inequality, as if one take two Chariots of Corn for twenty shillings Rent, it may not be unreasonable, Marlb. 1. 4: 22 Ed. 4. 15. 20 Ed. 4. 3. 41 Ed. 3. 26. So (it seems) one may distrain a flock of Sheep for two shillings, because they are intire, 41 Ed. 3. 26. Broo.

One may take any Distress for quantity, if he distrain for Homage, Fealty, Expenses of Knights in Parliament, or the like; for in these cases, no Distress shall be said to be excessive, Co. 4. 8. Distress 89. 27 Aff. 51. 28 Aff. 50. But such Distresses as either are excessive for magnitude, as if one take two Sheep for two pence, or two Oxen for sixteen pence, or the like, or else for multitude; as when one distrains very often for one cause, these are unlawful Distresses, for which the distrainer shall be punished, Excessus in re qualibet in jure reprobatur. If the Lord distrain two or three Oxen for twelve pence, or the like small sum, and the owner Replieve, and the Lord avow for twelve pence; in this case he shall be fined upon his own shewing, or the party may have his action upon the Statute. But if he take a Horse or Ox for a penny, where no other Distress is to be had, it is not excessive; but if there were a Sheep or Pig to be taken, there it is excessive and punishable, Co. 2 part. Inst. 107. 51 H. 3. Marlb. 4. Co. 11. 44. 4. 8. 11. 4. Marlb. 4. F. N. B. 174. 45 Ed. 3. 26. But Horses traced shall be said to be but one Distress, March. f. 91. pl. 149.

the time of taking the Distress.

For Damage-lesant a man may distrain in any part of the day or night; and for other causes, as Rent, Amercement, and the like, any part of the night or day, 35 H. 6. 10. Co. super Littl. 142. Noy 51. If one make a Lease, rendering Rent at Michaelmas, provided, That if it be behinde twenty days after he shall distrain; now it seems, by this he cannot distrain till the twenty days be past, 1 Just. Haughton, Tem. 14 Jac. nullo contra dicente. But the opinion of some is otherwise where Distress is incident, and the words are Affirmative, Co. super Littl. 204. That he may distrain at any time after the day, Co. 9. 66. But one cannot distrain for any cause but Damage-lesant by night, Co. 9. En Mackallies Case, Super Littl. 142. If a Distress be got out of Pound (it seems) the party may not distrain them again, unless he do it presently after they are gone out, 9 Ed. 4. 2. If one distrain for Rent before, or at the day it is due, it is unlawful, 21 H. 6. 4. Brownl. 1 part. 176. If one have distrained once, and in the Sute the Seigniori is in question, he cannot distrain again till this be decided, 7 H. 4. 4.

The Lessor cannot distrain for the Rent due the last day of the Term, and therefore the best way is to reserve the last half years Rent at Midsummer, and then he may distrain between that Feast, and the Feast of Michaelmas, Co. Inst. 1 part. 47.

Though

Though generally a man cannot distress for Rent out of his Fee and Seigniorie, (i.) The ground or place out of which it doth issue; and if he do, the party grieved may either have Trespass, sue upon the Statute, or by Indictment; yet if he be coming to distress, and the owner or another perceiving it, drive the Cattle or carry the thing out of the ground into another mans ground, or into another place: He that distressed them, may pursue them or it presently, and upon his fresh pursuit may take and distress them, or it, in any other place, Plow. 38: 33 H.6. 18. So (it seems) is the Law where one have distressed, and another drive them away; he may either take them again, or have a Writ of Rescous at his Election. And yet if the Cattle, of themselves, go out of the Tenancy without Inchaesment before the Lord can distress them; there he cannot distress them, though he have the view within his Fee, Co. 2 part. Inst. 131. Dyer 44. 25. 33 H.6. 53. 11 H.7. 5. 21 H.7. 40. Co. 9. 22. & super Littl. 160, 161. 3 H.6. 53.

So if an Officer in a hufe Court take a Distress, or be coming to distress, and another seeing it, drive the Beasts out of the Hundred; (it seems) the Officer having them in his view upon fresh pursuit may take them out of the Hundred or Liberty, 3 H.6. 18. 33 H.6. 53.

For Issues a man may distress in his Land upon whom the Issues were put, though he have sold it away, or it be another mans Land, 5 H.7. Brvo. Distress 40.

For a Fine or an Amercement, or a Pain forfeited in a Leet, or any other such like Court, one may distress in any place within the Jurisdiction, and Precinct of that Court as well without as within the ground of him that is fined, amerced, or pained, 11 H.4. 89.

One may distress in a Common, as before is shewed.

If one grant a Rent out of a Manor, or Rent be otherwise issuing out of a Manor; Rent. one may distress upon the Demeans, 12 Aff. 4: 8.

If the Rent be issuing out of a House and Land, one may distress upon the Land, or in the House, either if the doors be open that he may get in; but he cannot open the doors, Co. 5. 91. 92. 38 H.6. 26.

If one grant a Rent of one ground, and grant withal by that Deed or another, that the Grantee shall distress for that Rent in any of his grounds in that Parish; in this case, though the Rent issue out of that ground onely, yet the Grantee may distress in any ground of his within the Parish, Co. 7. 23. 9 H.6. 9.

A Collector of Fifteenths may distress in any place within the Village, where the man doth dwell that is to be distressed, 16 Ed. 4. 16. 16 Ed. 4. 10.

For Herriot Service, the Lord cannot distress out of his Fee, no more then for a Rent: But he may seize a Herriot-Custom out of his Fee, Goldsb. 97. pl. 14.

If one be distressing a Distress to Pound, and the Beasts escape into another mans ground by the way that lieth overt (it seems) here he may follow them, and take them away to pound, 35 H.6. 10.

If one distress Beasts, and put them in the Pound, and after the owner take them out, the distrainer may take them in any place, and put them in Pound again, or have a Parce fraids at his Election, 34 H.6. 16. 7 Ed. 4. 5.

If a Lease be made to be for ten years, rendering Rent, and after the Lessor doth grant the Reversion to C. for twenty years, and B. attorns, and the Rent is behinde, C. licences a stranger to put in his Cattle, yet he may distress them, for his Licence is void, having no possession: But if a Lessor drive the Cattle of the Lessee upon the Land, he cannot then afterwards distress them, 3 Chr. Heydens case.

For the most part one may not distress for any Rent, or other duty upon any place, but upon that out of which the Rent doth issue, Marlb. cap. 3. cap. 15. except it be by the Tenants own grant, 9 H.6. 9. But the King may distress out of the place, any where in the High-way, Common, Street, or elsewhere, Marlb. 19.

One may not distress for Damage-sefunt in any place, but in the place or ground where the damage is done, F. N. B. 904. Plow. 38. Co. 9. 22. though the party drive them out in his sight, Co. super Littl. 161. 9 H.6. 9. Brownl. 1 part. 87. 148, 149.

One may not take a Distress in the High-way or Common, Street, Marlb. 15.

9 H.6.9. Nor in the ancient Fees of the Church, unless it be for the King, Art. Cler. 9. And if he do so, the party grieved may have remedy by Action upon this Statute: But a Herriot Custom the Lord may seize in the High-way, for that is not a Distress but a Seizure. But otherwise it is of Herriot Service, for he cannot distrain for this there. Co. 1 part. Inst. Sect. 69. 2 part. fol. 122. But if the Lord coming to distrain, and see the Beasts within his Fee, and the Tenant before he can distrain, drive them into the Highway; in this case the Lord may take them in the Highway.

One may not distrain Goods in a Fair or Market; nor Horses in an Inn or Common Hostery, 7 H.7. 21. 21 Ed.4. 361. 22 Ed.4. 49. But if the Distress in driving, fall into any such place, the Distrainer may follow it thither, and take it thence; and so he may if it go into the House of the owner of the Distress, if he follow them presently, 22 Ed.4. 36. 9 Ed.4. 2.

A common person, though he be the Grantee of the King, cannot justify the taking of a Distress for a Rent or Seigniorie out of the Land whence the Rent doth issue, and in the Land holden of him, 9 H.6.9.

A Horse cannot be distrained whilst the owner or other is riding on him; nor an Ax while he is in a mans hand, cutting of Wood, or the like; nor Goods that are in custody of the Law, that are taken Damage-lesant: The Lord may not break the Gates or Hedges, to come in to distrain, *Co. lib. And in all these cases of Distress taken unlawfully for time, place, &c. an Action will lie for the party grieved, against the wrong doer; albeit the party distrained, do agree or sue Replevin, or the like: And if it be for Rent, and he pay the Rent; yet doth not purge the offence, Co. 2 part. Inst. 133.

Se8. 8.
4. How a Distress shall be used, when it is taken.

The party that doth distrain Goods or Cattles, may not sell them (but in some special cases hereafter set down) neither may he use them as his own; for in so doing, he shall make himself a Trespassor; nor may he esloyn them that they cannot be relieved, if he do, the owner may have Trespass for it. But he must put the Distress altogether in some one lawful Pound: (if one Pound will hold them) within the County and Hundred, where the Distress is taken, or else within some Pound overt within three miles of the place where the Distress is taken. And if the thing distrained be living and quick, and be put in any Pound overt within the same County, where the owner may possibly and lawfully come to it, without doing Trespass to any man; and there, if it be live Cattle, they be suffered to perish for want of mear; in this case the owner shall answer them, and the party may distrain again. But if he put them in a Pound close, where the owner cannot come to them, either because it is impossible, as if they be in a Fort, or unlawful, because they be in anothers ground; or if he drive them out of the County, or the Kings Writ come to deliver them, and he refuse to deliver them, or resisteth the Kings Writ; or if the Distress were for Damage-lesant, and before the impounding, the distrained person offer sufficient amends for the Trespass, and the other refuse; and after this the Cattle be suffered to perish for want of meat; or if the Distress be of a thing that will corrupt, as an inanimate thing, and put in a Pound close; in all these cases, he that doth distrain, and not the owner must answer them.

If there be a clause in a Deed, that the party shall distrain and keep the Distress till he be satisfied; yet it seems he may not work the Distress; and if the words be, That he shall distrain without Gage or Pledg, yet it seems the Distress must be impounded, and may be replevied; Co. 8. 146. 9. 146. Brownl. 1 part. 145.

And if one distrain a Cow, yet he may not milk her, but let him put her in an overt place or Pound: And albeit he have the Cattle upon a Return Irreplevisable, yet he cannot work them, M. 7 fac. Levis Case.

And if the party distraining, do put an animate thing distrained into a Pound-close, he must feed it at his peril, and yet he shall have no satisfaction for it. And if the Distress be the Utensils of a House, or the like, which may take harm by Rest, or Weather, or be stolen away; in these cases he must put them in a House or other Pound-close, within three miles in the same County: For if he put them in a Pound overt, he must answer them if any hurt come to them, Co. super Littl. 1 part. f. 47. Marl. 1, 2, 3, 4. Noy 53.

One took a wilde Colt as an Estray, and because he could not keep him in Pound, otherwise he did cross-fetter him there, and for this the owner brought an Action of Trespas: But the Chief Baron directed the Jury to finde against the Plaintiff; and he held it lawful in this case, but not otherwise, at Sarum Affize, 19 fac.

If the party that distrained, put them in Pound out of the County, that the Sheriff cannot make a Replevin; in this case the party may have the Writ called Withernam; and if he put them in a Fort or Castle in the same County, that the Sheriff cannot Replevie them, then the Sheriff may take Posse contrarius, and demolish it, if he cannot otherwise do it, Westm. 1. 17.

If the Distrainer will of his own accord give the Cattle meat in a Pound overt, he cannot require it of the owner, nor keep the Beasts till he have it; but if the owner did promise to pay him for it, he may have an Action upon that promise, 21 Ed. 4. 53. Distress 53. 5 fac. Bagshaw Case. B. R.

If one have Land in one County, of a Manor in another County; the Lord of the Manor there, if he distrain, may bring the Distress to the Pound in his own Manor, though it be in another County, notwithstanding the Statutes of Marl. 3. 1 H. 6. 31. 21 Ed. 4. 119.

If one distrain Beasts for the King, he must put the Distress in Pound; and if the owner doth give them meat himself, he shall pay nothing for the keeping of them, and they may not be sold within fifteen days after the taking; and if the party shew an Acquittance for Tail out of the Exchequer, or under the Sheriffs hands, and offer to put in Bail, to answer it in the Exchequer, upon the next Account day; then they must deliver the Beasts again, 21 Ed. 1.

If one distrain for an Amercement or Fine in a Leet, he that distrained may sell the Distress, and pay himself with the money, Co. 8. Grandboys case.

If Beasts be unruly in the Pound, and will leap over the Distrainer (as it seems) in this case, it cannot binde them to the Pound, nor fetter them, 27 Aff. 64. Broo. Trespas 250.

It is a Writ lying where one, or his Servant, doth distrain for Rent-services, or Damage-tenant, Fifteenths, or for an Amercement, or the like, and being about to impound them, another taketh them from him, and will not suffer him to impound them; then he from whom this Distress is taken away, may have this Writ against him him that taketh them away, and shall recover his damages, Term. Leg. 279. F.N.B. 101, 102. Co. super Lint. 160.

How this Writ is to be brought,

There is a Rescous of a person also, which is when a man attached or arrested, is rescued by himself or another; for which see Rescous, F.N.B. 102. and Return of the Sheriff: For in that case one may have this Writ also. If he break or be taken away from under a lawful Arrest: And this Writ sometimes must be brought in his name that doth distrain, sometimes in his name for whom the Distress is taken. See F.N.B. 101, 102.

Where this Writ lieth, or
not.

If one distrain Beasts Damage-ferant, and drive them along the Highway, and going to Pound, they enter into the House of the owner, and he withholdeth them, and will not suffer the Distrainer to have them to Pound; then he may have this Action against him. For this is a Rescous in Law, Co. super Lint. fol. 161. 315.

If a Lord be coming to distrain, and the owner drive away the Cattle, and the Lord distrain them upon a present pursuit (as he may) and the party will not let the Lord have them, but drive them away; in this case the Lord may have this Writ, 44 Ed. 3. 20.

If a Lord distrain his Tenant without cause, and unjustly, and a Rescous be made upon him, it seems he may have this Writ of Rescous, F.N.B. 102. 40 Ed. 3. 32. But in another case, where it is not between Lord and Tenant, it will not lye.

If any be coming to distrain onely, and the owner drive out the Beasts before, or they go out themselves, so as he is not possessed of the Distress; in this case this Writ will not lie against the owner, or any other, Co. super Lint. fol. 160. And so also it seems it is in all cases where the Distress is unlawful in time or place, &c. See before Adillegat Distress, 2 H. 4. 15, 22. 44 Ed. 3. 20. Co. super Lint. fol. 160, 161.

6. Pound, what.

A Pound is a place of strength, wherein Cattle distrained, are put for the time, till they be relieved or redeemed. And this is either

The kinder.

Overt, which is such a place, as to which the owner may possibly and lawfully come to give his Cattle distrained, meat or drink: And this is either publick or common, as the Pounds in every Township, Lordship, or Village, or else private and particular; as any Court, Backside, Yard, or Ground where the Beasts may be without doing Trespasse; and whither the owner may come without trespassing any man to give them meat and drink.

Or else Close, which is such a place, as to which the owner of the Distress may not either lawfully or possibly come to give his Cattle meat and drink, as in another mans house or ground, or in a Court or House inclosed with high Walls, or closed. But Co. lib. Just. 1 part. fol. 47. makes the Pound overt to be the Pinfold, made for that purpose, or his own Close, or the Close of another by his consent; and the Pound-close is, when it is some part of the house of the owner, New Term. Law 154. 9 Ed. 4. 2. Brow. 246. 20 H. 7. 1. Distress 112. Dyer 288. 11 H. 7. 32. 5 H. 7. 9. Nov 55. 52, 53.

The owner may give his Beasts meat in the Pound, though taken for the Kings Debt, 51 H. 3. without giving any thing for their keeping.

Distress, what.

It is a Writ where one hath cause to distrain, and he doth it so often for the same cause; as that the Tenant is grieved thereby, and is not able to manure his Land; then the party shall have remedy by this Writ, for in this Suit he shall have Judgment to hold his Land free, Abque multiplici Distractione. But when the cause of taking is for Homage, Fealty, Suit of Court, or other like Corporal Services, though a man do so distrain, yet this Writ doth not lie, Co. 4. 8. 11. 44.

8. Parco
Fraido, what.

Parco Fraido is a Writ lying where a Distress is taken out of Pound, after he is impounded, either by the party distrained, or some other; then in this case the party for whom the Distress was taken, may have this Writ against him that took it out, and shall recover his damages, and then he may also distrain the Cattle again, where-soever he finde them, or for this the party may be punished, as for a Pound breach in a Leet. See Leet, F. N. B. 100. 20 H. 7. 1. 34 H. 6. 18. Co. Inst. 1 part f. 4. 7. Broo. 402.

And this Action lieth, though the Cattle were impounded, unjustly, and without caute; as if one offer sufficient amends before impounding for the Trespass, and the party refuse it, and after the owner take the Beasts out of the Pound; this Writ lieth. Where it lieth, or not.

And if one that hath a Replevin, or other colour, take upon him to take out the Cattle; and in truth his Authority is not good, this Action lieth. So if a man that hath authority, break the Pound, before he demand the Beasts of the Keeper of the Pound, and he refuse or interrupt him in the taking of them, D. & Sr. 112.

And whether the Distress were taken Damage-fesant or for Rent, or Services, and whether they were taken out of a Common-Pound, or other private pound; so it be a lawful one, it is all one.

But if one distrain Cattle Damage-fesant, and put them in Pound, and the owner that had right there of Common, make fresh Suit, and finde the door unlocked, he may justifie the taking of them away in this Writ, Co. Inst. 1 part fol. 47.

See more of these things in Prerogative, Return, Rent, Avowry, Trespass. And see the Statutes for Distresses, 1 & 2 Phil & Mar. 12. Articuli Cleri. 9: Westm. 2. 37. 36. 1. 17: 16. Marlb. 15. 1, 2, 3, 4. And De Districcione Staccarii.

CHAP. LXIX.

Of Division of Places.

IN Division, the Law doth look upon Things and Places.

For the Division of Things, see Appportionments. And for Division of Places, it had one Division in Relation to the Spiritual Jurisdiction by Provinces, &c. and Diocesses, now gone, and Parishes; and another in Relation to the Civil Jurisdiction. For so it looks upon the whole Country, as divided into Counties, Hundreds, Cities, Towns, Parishes, or Villages, and Hamlets, and Burroughs.

See. 1.
Provinces.

The Provinces were the Circuits of the Jurisdictions of the Archbishops of York and Canterbury.

Province,
what.

The Diocesses of the other Bishops, the Circuit of their Jurisdiction.

Diocess, what.
Parish, what.

The Parish is a multitude of Neighbors, gathered together, and belonging to one Church, and under the charge of one Minister. And Parish Churches were those that were instituted for the Service of God, for the people dwelling within a certain compass of Ground near it: Of which were in England, in the time of Henry the Eighth, 4500 or near thereabouts.

A County is a certain Circuit, or part of the Country, into which the whole was divided for the better Government thereof; so as there is no part of the Country, but is in some County. And every County is governed by an Officer yearly chosen, called the Sheriff. And in England there are One and forty Counties, and in Wales Twelve Counties. And some Cities are Counties of themselves, or with a little addition of places near them, as Glocester; and some others of the Cities, as Cambridge, Ely, Westminster; and others are not so, but are within other Counties. Co. upon Littl. 109, 110.

Hundred, what. A Hundred is a certain circuit or part of a County, into which, the whole County for the better Government thereof, is divided: which at first were (as some say) an Hundred Towns; or (as others more probably affirm) because they were made up of Ten Tithings, which were a Hundred households of men, over which they had Jurisdiction, and over their Pledges, dwelling happily in two or three or more Parishes, Burroughs, or Towns, lying and adjoyning near together for the better Administration of Justices in their own distinct and proper Courts; and for the better Government of the whole Hundred, that they might not run out disorderly into one another's Hundreds, Laths, or Tithing, wherein they did not dwell; or so called, because every Hundred did finde the King a hundred able men for his Wars. Sir Thomas Smiths Commonwealth. Terms of the Law.

Ville or Village, what. A Village and a Tithing, it seems to me, were in the consideration of Law, one thing. By a Village is meant a little Neighborhood and company of Houses and Householdors compact together in one place.

Tithing, what. A Tithing did at first signifie the number or company of ten men, with their Families cast or knit together in a Society, all of them being bound to the King for the peaceable and good behavior each of other, whereof one was chief, and an Officer, called Tithingman, and in some places by other names.

Tithing-man. And of these Villages or Tithings, there are in many places many belonging to one Parish: There are more Towns in England then Parishes, for there is about Eight thousand eight hundred and three Towns, and but Four thousand five hundred Parishes.

Town, Burrough, City, what. And in Law, Towns, Cities, Burroughs, and Hamlets, seem to be included: And therefore some give one definition to a Tithing, and a Town, and a Burrough, and say, That they were heretofore taken for those companies of ten Families, which were one another's Pledg.

Every Burrough is a Town, but not every Town a Burrough: For a Burrough is an ancient Town holden of the King, or any other Lord, which sendeth Burgesses to the Parliament. And of these Burroughs, some be Incorporate, and some not; and some be Walled, and some not.

So every City is a Town or Villa, but every Town is not a City: For a City is defined to be a Burrough Incorporate, which hath or have had a Bishop, and though the Bishoprick be dissolved, yet the City remaineth; and with us, Town and City are commonly taken one for the other: There are seven and twenty Cities in England, and some of them are Counties, and some are not: And though Towns or Burroughs be decayed, so as no houses remain, yet they are called so still, and the Burrough doth send Burgesses to the Parliament. And some say it cannot properly be called a Town that had not a Church, the Celebration of Divine Service, Sacraments, and Burials, Co. upon Littl. f. 109, 110, 113.

Hamlet, what. A Hamlet is taken for a little Village, or that which was so and is now become, being depopulate, and but a Farm or entire Seat of one man: And of these Villages and Parishes are made up, for there may be many of them in one Parish, Town, or Village.

There are also in most Counties, some places that are not now known to be within any of those Divisions, Fines Ley 84. 2 R. 3. 1. Co. upon Littl. the same, Co. 11. 26.

There are some other Divisions by Wards, and otherwise used in some great Towns and Cities.

CHAP. LXX.

Of Drapery, Cloth, Cloathing, and Dogs.

And for him and his Office, see the Statutes of 25 Ed. 3. 2. 27 Ed. 3. 4. 3 Ed. 6. 6. 8 Eliz. 12. 13 R. 2. 11.

of Dogs.

FOR Dogs, these special things are to be known.

1. If a man keep a Dog that doth use to kill Sheep or bite Cattle, and he hath notice given him hereof, and after this the Dog doth hurt to any man herein, the Master must answer for it. See for this Action upon the Case.

2. No Felony can be by stealing Hounds, Spaniels, Grey-hounds, or the like Dogs. But for a Blood-hound, or Mastiff, perhaps it may be otherwise. And for Dogs of Pleasure, the owner may bring an Action of Trespass for them, against him that shall take them away; for in these a man hath a property, and they are valuable to him. See Trespass, Property.

CHAP. LXXI.

Of Droit & Tort, or, Right and Wrong.

Self. 1.
Droit or Right,
what.

Tort or Wrong,
what.

The kinds of
it.
Droit of Entry, of Action.

DROIT, called in Latine Jus, in English Right: This in a general signification doth signifie and include a Right, for the which a Writ of Right doth lie; but also any Title or Claim to Land, by force of a Condition, Mortmain, or the like; for the which, no Action but an Entry is given by the Law. And this seems to be opposed to Tort. Right is most properly where the estate is turned to a Right; but it doth sometimes include the estate in Esse, Co. on Dist. ch. 8.

Right is said to be of Entry, or of Action: For when a man is put out of his Land by Disseisin, Discontinuance, or Ejectment, and layeth claim to it, he hath sometimes a Right to an Action, the which he may have to recover it, and sometimes he may enter and take it. Sometimes he may do either; sometimes he hath an action, but cannot enter, sometimes may enter, but cannot have any Action, sometimes he is barred of Entry and Action both, and without remedy.

There is Jus proprietatis, a Right of Ownership, and a Right of Possession: As if a man be disseised of Land, the Disseisee hath the Right of Property, the Disseisor the Right of Possession: And if the Disseisee release to the Disseisor, he hath both.

There is a Right, first, of Recovering, secondly, of Entering, thirdly, of Having, fourthly, of Retaining, fifthly, of Receiving, sixthly, of possessing, Co. 8. Altham's Case, Co. 2. 56.

This Right also is Present, or Future, when the Right one hath, is to be had hereafter.

A Pretensed Right is where one is in Possession of Lands, and another who is out of Possession claimeth it.

Pretensed Right, what.

As concerning Right and Wrong, these general Rules are to be known.

General Rules concerning Right and Wrong.

1. Right doth sometimes sleep, but it never dies, trodden down it may be, but it can never be trodden out; so much favor it hath in Law, Co. upon Littl. Sect. 478.

2. When two are in possession by divers Titles, the Law doth judge the possession in him that hath the Right, in favor of Right, Littl. Sect. 458.

3. When due Rights do concur in one person, it is as good and effectual, and shall work, as if it were in divers persons, Co. upon Littl. 278. &c.

4. In Rights the most ancient shall be preferred, Idem.

5. Rights do help them that do watch, and not them that do sleep, Plow. 372.

6. Any man may be prejudiced in his Right by his delay, Idem.

7. The Law doth wrong to no man.

8. To him that doth agree to the thing, there can be no wrong.

9. Men are so to use their own Right, as thereby not to hurt another man.

10. None may have advantage, or take benefit by his own wrong, 13. H. 7. 1.

11. No man shall be twice punished for any wrong.

In some cases to recover a mans Right to Land, he hath an Affize which is given to a man for his Land, where he is disseised of the Freehold, as being Tenant in Fee-simple, Tail, or for life; and so if he be Tenant by Elegit or Statute: And if a man be disseised, and then recover by this Writ, and after is disseised again by the same Disseisor; then he may have a Writ of Redisseisin. And if one recover by Affize of Mort-damnsfer, &c. and then be again disseised, he may have a Writ called a Postdisseisin.

Affize, what.

Redisseisin.

Postdisseisin.

The party put out of Land may also have remedy by a Writ of Right, which is a Writ of the highest nature of all others: And wherein if a man have Judgment, and no Claim be made within a year: and a day after; by this all persons are barred for ever, F.N.B. 2.

Writ of Right, what.

And this is either Open or Paten (that is) not inclosed within the Seal; or it is Close, (that is) inclosed within the Seal.

Patent or Open, or Close, what.

And in London by their Custom they have a Writ of Right, in this case much of this nature, Co. super Littl. 158, 159. See Proces.

Droit in London, what.

Eviction is, where one is cast out of something, whereof he had the possession and property. And this may be either lawful or unlawful; and lawful either by Act of Law, which doth no man wrong, or by the Act of the party: And this also may be either Peaceable or Forcible.

Eviction, what.

Forcible Entry into Lands, is a violent Actual Entry into Lands, Houses, &c. by any person weaponed, whether he offer violence or hear of hurt to any there, or furiously drive out any out of the possession thereof. And the Forcible Detainer is a Violent Act of resistance, by a strong hand of men, weaponed with harness or other action of fear in the same place or elsewhere, by which the lawful Entry of the Justice, or other is hindred. But as to this, see Forcible Entry.

Forcible Entry, or Forcible Detainer, what.

CHAP. LXXII.

Of Drunkennes, Dyers, and Dying.

Or Dyers and Dying, these things are to be known.

1. That no man is to Dye any Cloths, Kersies, or other things with Logwood, but the same is to be burned, 23 Eliz. 9. 39 Eliz. 11.

2. The Dyer must fix a Seal of Lead to his Cloth, 19 Eliz. 9.

3. No person that Dyeth Worsteeds, Stamins, or Sayes, is to Kalender them, 25 H.8. 5.

4. In what manner Woollen-cloth, and Wools shall be used in the Dying; and with what Stuff they shall be died, 25 H.8. 5.

Of Drunkennes and Alehouses.

SeE. 1.
Who must take Licences.

AS to Drunkennes. Alehouses, and Alehouse-keepers, these things are to be known.

1. That none may keep any common Alehouse or common Victualling-house, or use commonly to sell Ale, Beer, Cider, or Perry, that is not licenced in open Sessions, or by two Justices of the Peace, Quorum Unus, 5, 6 Ed. 6. 25.

Taverns, In-holders.

2. That Taverns keeping Victualling, Inn-keepers, and Victuallers, are within the Statutes, as well as Alehouse-keepers; so that if they offend by suffering Tipling, or selling less for a peny, or two pence, then the Statute appoints; they are to be punished as Alehouse-keepers are. And they are to be bound for keeping of good order, as well as Alehouse-keepers: And the Justices of Peace may require them to take Licences, and enter into Recognizance to keep good order, or else commit them as Alehouse-keepers. And all those Inns which were erected since 5 Ed. 6. and not Inns before, must have Licences, and be bound as well as others, Crompt. Jur. p. 77. Dalt. 7. P. ch. f. 37. 1 Car. 4.

Commitment.

Recognizances.

3. The Justices when they Licence Ale-selling to a man, must take Bond and Surety of him against the using of unlawful Games, and for the keeping of good order, which they must certifie at the next Quarter Sessions, Subpoena three pound six shillings eight pence.

4. When they commit any man three days for selling without Licence, they must ere they deliver him, take Bond with two Sureties, that he shall not offend again. And this Recognizance, Discharge, and Offence, they must certifie at the next Quarter Sessions: And this Certificate will be a sufficient Conviction in Law, to make him liable to the twenty shillings fine upon the 5 Ed. 6. 25.

5. If two Justices of the Peace, discharge an Alehouse-keeper of selling of Ale, and two others after, out of Sessions, allow him again, it seems the first two may commit him. So if he be Convicted of any of the Offences in the Statutes, by which he is disabled, and is, or is not suppressed for it: If he be licenced within three years after, the Licence is void, and he to be punished as one unlicensed. And he that is Convict for selling less than the Assize, for suffering Tipling, or that doth Tiple, or is Drunk, is disabled to sell again for three years; and being put down by two Justices, he cannot be licenced, but in open Sessions, Dalt. 7. P. ch. 7. 1 Jac. 9. 4 Jac. 5. 21 Jac. 7.

Femes Covert.

Good-behavior.

6. If a Woman that hath a Husband, sell against her Husbonds will, they may be both punished, in purse, and she, if the Justice think fit, may be imprisoned till she finde Sureties for the Good-behavior, and that she will not sell again, Dalt. 7. P. chap. 7.

7. He

7. He that is not licensed, may be punished by 3 Ed. 6. 25. or by the 3 Car. 3. But he cannot be punished upon both, that is, if he be committed and pay his twenty shillings, he cannot be sent to Bridewel. If he be sent thither, he is not to be committed to Gaol, and pay twenty shillings; and yet he that is unlicensed, may be punished for suffering Tipling, or breaking the Assize, as those that are licensed may be, Dalt. 7. P. ch. 7.

8. The Traveller and other necessarily accompanying him, and invited by him, during his necessary abode in the Alehouse, Handicraftmen, Workmen, and Laborers, that are there for an hour at dinner time; and such as do sojourn and lodge there, and such as are licensed by two Justices of the Peace, are not to be accounted Tiplers within the Statute: But all other men living in the same place, or elsewhere, except the stranger himself, are to be accounted Tiplers, Dalt. 7. P. ch. 7. 1 Car. 4 Jac. 5. 1 Jac. 9.

9. Brewers may not sell more Ale or Beer to unlicensed Alehouse-keepers, then what will serve for their own use, 4 Jac. 4.

10. Selling of Ale at Fairs, is not against the Statute of 3 Ed. 6. 25. 3 Car. 3.

11. All the Forfeiture of all these offences upon 4 Jac. 7. 3 Car. 3. 21 Jac. 9. are given to the poor of the place, where the Offence is done; and so is the one half upon the Statute of 4 Jac. 4. and must be delivered to the Church-wardens, who must account for it: But the twenty shillings on the Statute of 5, 6 Ed. 6. doth go to the Lord Protector.

12. It is held fit to hear the parties offending in these cases, before the Forfeitures be levied in, Dalt. 7. P. ch. 7.

13. If any Alehouse-keeper shall be lawfully convicted of any offence against any breach of 1 Jac. 9. 4 Jac. 5. He is for the space of three years next after the Conviction, to be utterly disabled to keep any such Alehouse, 7 Jac. 10.

14. A man convicted the third for his selling Ale or Beer of his own Brewing, and not compounding with the Commissioners of Excise, is to be punished as an unlicensed Alehouse-keeper, and to be for ever disabled to keep such a common House, Att. 14 Aug. 1649.

15. If a man be punished on the 5, 6 Ed. 6. that is committed and hath entred into Bond, and hath paid twenty shillings, he cannot be punished on 3 Car.

16. He that is drunk, is for the first offence to pay five shillings, or be put in the Stocks six hours; for the second offence, to be bound to the Good-behavior.

17. He that is Convict of Tipling, is to pay three shillings four pence, or be in the Stocks four hours.

18. The Innkeeper, &c. that suffers Tipling, is to pay ten shillings, or go to Gaol, till he pay it.

19. If he sell less then measure, he must pay twenty shillings, or go to Gaol, till he pay it.

See more of these things in my Book of Justice of Peace.

CHAP. LXXIII.

Of Election.

Here is an Election of Things and of Persons. That of things is Election, what. where one hath a liberty or free choice, to have or do one thing or another, as he pleaseth; and is by Dyer 281. thus defined, Electio est interna, libera, & spontanea separatio unius rei ab alia sine compulsionē, consistens in animo & voluntate: As if one be bound to pay a pound of Pepper, or a pound of Raisons, he may do which he will; and if one give me one of his Horses in his Stable, and say not which, I may take which I will, Dyer 281. 18. 21 H. 7. 29.

2. In what case an Election is given, or not.

If one for money make a Lease by the words Demise, Grant, Bargain, and Sell; the Lessee may take it, by way of Bargain and Sale, or Demise at Common Law at his pleasure, Co. 236. Dyer 39. see Deed.

So if a Husband and Wife be jointly seized of a Manor, out of which another hath a Rent-charge; and he do Release, give and grant this Rent to the Husband alone; he may use this as a Release, or a Grant, as will be most for his advantage at his own pleasure; See more of this Dyer 35. 11. 16. 302. Dyer 319. 109. Co. 71. 6236. 11. H. 6. 43. 44. Ed. 3. 31. 32. H. 6. 42. 10 Ed. 4. 3. Plow. 156. 433. Co. upon Deed 301. 302. see Grant.

Rent.

If one grant a Rent-charge, the Grantee may chuse either for to distrain for it, and so charge the Land, or so bring an Action, and so charge the person of the Grantor, or his Heirs, &c. and where this Election is given, and where not, see Co. 3. 29. 236. 448. 658. 724. Dyer 65. 140. 344. Litt. 48. see Rent.

Contract.

If one be to pay one of two things for Rent, or by a Contract, or Obligation, he that is to pay it, may pay which he will at his choice; 1 Rich. 3. 2. 9 Ed. 4. 36. Co. 2. 37. 399. 21 H. 7. 19. See Obligation and Contract, 7 Ed. 4. 26. 9 Ed. 4. 48. 50 H. 7. 31. 7 H. 6. 7.

If one give me one of his Horses, I may take which I will, and the Law gives me Election to make the gift good, Dyer 23. 21 H. 7. 19. Dyer 91.

Rent.

If one make a Lease for years rendering Rent, and the Lessee assign over his Term; the Lessor may sue the Lessee, or his Assignee for the Rent, at his pleasure, Co. 3. 23. 19 H. 7. 41. and Rent.

If a Tenant that held by Knights-service be dead, his Heir within age, the Lord may either seize the Wardship, or waive it, and demand his Services; so also it seems he may accept or refuse any of his Services at his pleasure, Dyer 285. 39. Co. 2. 68. see Services.

Action.

In some cases when one hath cause of Action, he may bring one Action or another at pleasure, Co. 2. 37. 61. 493. 5. 38. 6. 44. 9. 51. 72. Kelm. 61. 92. Dyer 20. 59. 51. 21 Hen. 7. 30, 37. Dyer 121. 140. 230. 344. 27 Hen. 8. see Action.

Dower.

In what cases a Woman may at her Election have Joyntor, or Dower, or both; and in what cases not, see Dower.

In what cases one may sue one or another at his pleasure, see Dyer 204. 107. 10 H. 7. 8. 22 H. 6. 40. and Action.

Lease.

In what cases by Acceptance, one hath Election to affirm or avoid a Lease, see Acceptance and Leases.

Executor.

And know that a man hath Election in divers other cases: As if one be a Legatee or Executor, to take as one or other. Cum multis aliis, Plow. 520.

But if a Lease be made to Commence after the death, Surrender, forfeiture of a former Lessee of the Land; this Lessee hath not any Election here, but his Lease shall begin, after the first of these Contingents when it hapneth, Co. 2. 36.

Deed.

If one sell Land to me by Bargain and Sale, and before Inrollment levy a Fine to me of the Land: Now I have not Election here to take by either, but I must take by the Fine, and the Inrollment afterwards will not relate to this purpose, Co. 4. 72.

Grant.

If one sell to me two Acres of a great Wood of one thousand Acres, and give me Livery of Seisin in part of the Wood; it seems this is void, and I have no Election given to me now to help it, because after the Livery it is too late, Dyer 281.

If one grant to me and my Heirs a Rent-charge, but doth not say in his Grant pro se & heredibus suis, and he die: Now here I must charge the Land, and I have not any Election given me to charge the person, because the person of the Heirs is not chargeable, Co. 10. 128. Plow. 344. See more Infans, Contract.

3. Where Election is necessary, and in what time it ought to be made, or not.

If one be to have one of two things, by one title of Gift, Grant, or the like, and the Gift or Grant is so uncertain at the first, that nothing passeth till Election be made; and the Election doth precede the property or interest of the Feoffee or Grantee Grantee (as in such cases it doth) there Election is very necessary; for till then no interest or property is in the Feoffee or Grantee, neither can he grant it over.

And it must be done also in this case, in the life time of the party, that is to chuse for his Heirs, Executors, or Administrators cannot chuse, Co. 2. 35, 36, 37.

And if the Election be not in his life time, the Gift or Grant will be void: As if one make a Feoffment to another of White-acre or Black-acre, or of a House and ten Acres of a great Wood of his of one thousand Acres, or one give one of his Horses: in all these cases, till Election be made nothing passeth, and after the death of the Vendee or Donee, no Election can be made, Dyer 281. Grant:

Where an Election is given to several persons, there Election is necessary, and nothing doth pass till Election be made: As if one Lease two Acres for life, the Remainder of one to J. S. and of the other to J. N. till one of them chuse, it seems nothing passeth; and therefore Election must be during life, Co. 2. 36.

But if one be to have one thing only, but by two several Titles, or in two several degrees or manners, and the estate passeth presently (as in that case it doth) there Election is not so necessary, because the thing is grantable before Election; and in this case Election may be made by the Heirs or Executors, after the death of the party: As in the cases of a Grant of a Rent-charge, and of a Lease made by the words, Demise, Grant, Bargain, and Sell, there the Grantee or Lessee, or his Executors or Administrators, may at any time make their Election, Co. 2. 35, 36.

Dyer 91. 70. If one grant me ten load of Wood, in his Wood, to take at my Election, and he or a stranger cut down Wood; now I may not take that cut down, but I must serve my self elsewhere in the Wood, Co. 5. 25. What thing is elegant, or
not.

In all cases where an Election is given of two or more several things, he that is the first agent, and to do the first act, shall have the Election: As if one grant a Rent of Money or Robe, or a Lease be made, rendering a Rent or Robe, the Grantor or Lessee before the day of payment hath the Election; and may pay which he will. 14. What person shall make the Election, or not.
Grant.

So if one promise, or enter into obligation, with condition to do one of two or more things, the party, obligor, or promising hath the Election: But if he fail payment of his Rent at the day or performance of his promise, then the other party may sue for one or the other, for then he hath the Election. But if the Grantee bring an Annuity for the Rent-charge, he must bring it for both, else he will lose his own Election, Co. 2. 37. 9 Ed. 4. 3. 13 Ed. 4. 4. 5 Ed. 4. 6. Kely 700. Co. 10. 118. Co. 9. 94. Dyer 18. 21 H. 7. 19.

If a Warrant come from a Justice to an Officer, to require him to bring a person before him, or some other Justice, the Officer, not the offender, shall chuse to which Justice he will go, Co. 5. 59. Officers

If one give to me one of his Horses in his Stable, I shall have the Election, and may take which I will: But if he say he will give me one of his Horses, in the words of the future-tense; there it seems, I cannot chuse, but he hath the Election, 21 H. 7. 19. Gift.

If one be bound in an Obligation, with a Condition, to pay fifteen pound at Easter next, or before at the request of the Obligee, it seems here the Obligee shall have the Election: But if the Bond be with Condition, that the Obligor shall pay fifteen pound before Easter, at the request of the Obligee, or at the said Feast of Easter, here it seems the Obligor shall have the Election, Dyer 108. Condition of Obligation.

If the Condition of an Obligation be to deliver up the Obligations that be in his hand, or to seal to the Obligee such a Release as he shall devise, before Michaelmas next, the Obligor must do one of them at his peril; and the Obligor hath no Election in this case, but the Obligee may tender a Release, if he will. Goldsb. 141. pl. 55.

If one grant to another twenty Loads of Hazel, or twenty Loads of Maple, to be taken in his Wood of D; there the Grantee shall have the Election, 2 H. 7. 13. Co. super Litt. 146.

And

And when the thing granted, is of a thing Annual, and to have continuance, there the Election doth remain to the Grantor, when the Law doth give him the Election, as well after the day as before; as when one grants the Annuity of twenty shillings, or a Robe at Easter, but when it is to be performed Unidâ vice onely, contra: And therefore if one contract with me to pay me twenty shillings, or a Robe at Easter, if he fail, I may sue for either.

5. What Act shall amount to an Election, and be good and binding, or not. Services: Dower.

If an Election be given to divers persons, and one of them make a choice; this shall binde all the rest, though they agree not to it, Co. 2. 36: Co. super Litt. 146.

If two be Joyntenant of a Manor, and a Wardship happen, and one of them seize the Ward; this will binde the other, and he cannot after waive him, and demand his Services, Co. 1. 23.

If a Rent-charge be granted to a man and his heirs, and the wife of the Grantee brings a Writ of Dower against the Heir, and the Heir to prevent the wife of Dower, claims it to be an Annuity, and not a Rent-charge; this is no good Election, and therefore she shall recover her Dower; and after this Endowment, the Heir cannot have Annuity for the two parts, for he must have all as a Rent-charge, Co. super Litt. 444.

6. By what means an Election may be gone, or not.

If two things pass by one Gift or Grant, altogether uncertain at the first, and the Feoffee or Donee die before Election; this Election is gone, and the Grant void: As in the case of the Feoffment of one of two Acres, and of the Wood, and the gift of one of his horses, Co. 2. 36, 37: Dyer 181.

If one have an Election to pay one of two things at a day, and he do not pay it at the day, then his Election is gone to the other, as in the case above, Kew. 18. Domesday case, Trin. 8 Jac. B.R. And if after the Election given to the Grantee he brings a Writ of Annuities for one onely, and have Judgment for that one; his Election is gone, and he can never demand the other, Co. 2. 36, 37.

If one enfeoff another of two Acres, to have the one for life, and the other in tail, and before Election the Feoffee make a Feoffment of both: Now his Election is gone, and the Feoffor may enter upon which he will for Forfeiture, Co. 2. 37.

If one grant a Rent-charge, and after the Grantee distrain and avow for it in a Court of Record, or bring an Annuity, and have a Judgment in it; in these cases his Election is gone: So if the Grantee of the Rent, before Election, purchase the Land, or release all Annuities, it seems his Election is gone, Dyer 344. 140. But in cases where the Gift or Grant is of one thing, but by several Titles, or in a divers manner: As in the case of Lease that hath words of Bargain and Demise also, or of a Grant of a Rent; the alteration of the estate of him in Reversion, or the death of either of the parties will not determine the Election: And if in the first case the Lessee enter generally, and do not declare how he will take it; this is no Determination of his Election, Co. 3. 37.

If a Term be given to the Executor, and he enter generally, and do not declare how, whether as Legatory, or as Executor; this is no Determination of his Election, but he may afterwards make his Election well enough, Co. 2. 37.

Rent.

If a Lessee for years be of Land, determinable upon the death of J. S. and he grant a Rent-charge out of his Land, and before the Election of the Grantee how to take this Rent J. S. die; so that now the Land cannot be charged; yet the Grantee his Election is not so gone, but he may charge the Grantor in an Annuity, Co. 2. 36.

If one give to a man two Acres of Land, to have one in Tail, and the other in Fee, and he make a Feoffment of both; in this case the Election is not gone, to the Heir in Tail; for he may bring a Formedon for either, Co. 2. 36.

If an Issue in Tail make a voidable Lease and die, and the Guardian of his Heir avoid him (as he may) yet, this notwithstanding, the Election of the Heir at his full age remaineth, Co. 7. 7.

If one grant a Rent-charge in Fee, without the words pro se & hereditariis suis, and the Grantee bring a Writ of an Annuity against the Heir, and after discontinue his Suit, yet he hath the same Election he had, and may distrain the Land, Dyer 344.

If

If a Grantee be in the dis-junctive of two Annual things, and things of continuance; if the Election belong to the Grantor, and he fail of the day, his Election is not gone; otherwise it is of things that are to be performed, unit & vice onely. As if one grant by Copy, twenty Trees growing upon Black-acre, or White-acre to be cut down yearly by himself, and delivered to the Grantee such a day, and the Grantor fail at the day, yet his Election is not gone, Co. of Copihold, 120.

In most of all these cases before, when once a man hath made his Election, it is peremptory to him, and shall never after wave it, and chuse again; So also after a Judgment for Debt or Damages, where a man hath an Election what execution to take; if he have taken Execution by Elegit, it seems he cannot afterwards take any other remedy for recovery of his Debt or Damages upon the Judgment, Dyer 329. 60.

Where a Lord by Custom may seise a Herriot, the best Beast, and he chuseth one of the worst; he is bound by this, and he shall not chuse again. See more for this in Contracts, 16 H. 7. 4.

But where a man hath the Election of one Action of two, and he sue, and the other appear, and after is non-sure; this is no Determination of his Election, Co. upon Littl. 146.

For Election of Persons to any Office or place, these things are to be known.

1. Elections to Colledges, Churches, Hospitals, Schools, Halls, Benefices, Ecclesiastical Dignities, and Societies must be free.

2. So must the Admissions and Institutions be into such places, free.

3. None may by threats disturb free Elections.

4. If any take any thing, or a promise of any thing to give his voice for an Election, it makes the Election void, and another may be chosen.

5. If a man take any thing, or a promise of any thing for resigning a place, he that gives is hereby made incapable of the place:

6. If any take any thing, or any promise of any thing for a Presentation or Collation to a Benefice, by this he is made incapable of it, see Simony.

7. So it is of Corrupt Exchanges and Resignations, between Incumbents of their Benefices, if they be with cure of Souls, 31 Eliz. 6. Westm. 1. And Articuli Cleri, and Wingate, Abridgment of them: Fit: Election.

7. Where an Election is peremptory, or not.

8. Election of persons.

CHAP. LXXIV.

Of an Infant and Engagement.

BY an Infant, commonly and properly in our Law, is meant one that is in his Nonage, under the age of one and twenty years, whether Male or Female, Co. super Littl. 171. But the word is sometimes taken more largely: And the Law hath a great respect to Infants, to protect them from wrong, and to preserve their estate; and therefore doth give them many Privileges, and Benefits above others; as in many cases.

First, Not to be sued, till they be of full age.

Secondly, Not to be bound by their Contract, or their other Acts, that may turn to their prejudice, but onely in some special cases; for which see in Age. And wrongs done to them, are more severely punished then to others.

1. An Infant, what. Nonage. Their Privileges.

Self. 1.

2. What acts done by an Infant shall binde him, and others, or not.

For the Answer of this Question, take these things.
1. If the King be an Infant, yet most Acts that he doth, as King, are good, and will binde him, and his Successors, Co. 3. 27. Dyer 209.

2. If an Infant be the head of a Corporation, all Acts that he doth in that capacity, will binde him and his Successors, as if he were of full age, 21 Ed. 4. 13. Co. 3. 27. Broo. 478.

3. If a Parson, Prebend, or the like, had made any Lease of their Ecclesiastical Living, it seems it is good, and will binde them, as if they had been of age, Broo. 478.

4. If an Infant male after fourteen years of age, and a Female after twelve years of age, Contract for marriage, or make any Will or Demise of their Goods and Chattels, it is good; and will binde them, as if they had been of full age: But by the new Act, the age of a Man to consent, is sixteen, and of a Woman fourteen, 35 H. 6. 41.

5. If he do any thing that by Law he is compellable to do, it is good and will binde him; as to Attorn to the Grantee of his Lord, or the like, Co. 10. 43.

6. If an Infant after fourteen years of age, being a Patron, do present to an Advowson the Church being void, or the like, it is good, and will binde him, Perk. 15.

Apprentice.

7. An Infant may in many cases binde himself an Apprentice, and in such cases, his Covenants in such an Indenture will binde him; 5 Eliz. 4. 21 Ed. 4. 6. 31 H. 6. 31. 9 H. 6. 8.

8. All Acts done to an Infant, as Conveyances of Land, making of Obligations, or Statutes, or the like, the Infant may accept of it, and they are good to him, as if he were of full age, see Grants. If Land be conveyed to him, he may agree to it at his full age, or disagree and avoid it, and so may his Heirs before Agreement, Co. lib. Inf. 3 part. fol. 2. And therefore a Lease for years made to an Infant, rendering Rent, was adjudged good; and that an Action of Debt may lie against the Infant for the Rent, and yet this may be a prejudice. But if he do not enter and manure the Land, or take the profits, it is otherwise: For it is in his Election to make the Lease good, or not; For if he before the Rent day refuse, and wave the Land, he shall not be charged with the Rent; but if the Rent be of greater value then the Land, and he shew it in pleading, he may perhaps avoid the Lease, Br. lib. 1 part. 130.

Election.

Executor.

9. If an Infant be Executor, and do any thing according to the duty of an Executor, as sue for, receive, or pay debts, and upon Receipt of a debt to make a Release for it; all such Acts are good, and will binde him, or others, as if he were of full age, Co. 3. 27. Perk. Sess. 14. Broo. Executor 115. See Executor.

10. If an Infant Contract for necessary Food, Physick, or Apparel, or Schooling, or the Nursing of his Lawful child; such a Contract will binde him, as if he were of full age, Co. 9. 87. 13 Ed. 4. 2. Perk. 4. And a single Bill given for such money is good; but if the writing be with penalty, it is void, Co. super Littl. 172. M. 39. 40 Eliz. Agreed: And what is necessary, or not, shall be tried by the Judges, not by a Jury, Goldsb. 168. pl. 99.

11. If a Feoffment be made to an Infant, and he make a Letter of Attorney to take Livery, this seems to be a good Warrant, Perk. 48. Sess. 14. 21 H. 6. 31.

12. If an Infant sell a Horse, or the like for money, and deliver him with his own hands, and after sue for, and receive the money; this should seem to make the Contract good, 18 Ed. 4. 21 H. 7. 39. 26 H. 8. 2. But that this oppugns a Rule of Law: Qua male sunt inchoata, &c. Ergo quare. For no Acceptance will make a void Contract good.

13. If an Infant levy a Fine, he may declare uses upon the Fine, and it will binde so long as the Fine is in force, Co. 2. 58.

14. If an Infant be Lord of a Mannor, and grant Copihold estates, according to the Custom, it is good, and will binde him, Co. 6. 3. 8. 44.

15. An Infant may not submit to an Award, nor shall it binde him as another man; nor will any Bond or Assumpfit of his to stand to an Award, binde him, March. 4. 112. pl. 189. He may present to an Advowson, Co. super Littl. f. 172.

16. But

16. But all such Gifts and Grants, Deeds, and Acts, as are done by an Infant, during his minority, as are or may be to the prejudice and hurt of the Infant, are void, or at least voidable: And amongst these Acts, most commonly those things that pass from him without Delivery of them by his own hands, are void; and those that pass by the Delivery of his own hands, are voidable, Co. Super Littl. fol. 171. Perk. Sess. 12. F. N. B. 102. Brownl. 1 part. 110. 21 H. 6. 31.

17. All Contracts made by him, though he be within a day of his age, and the bargain be never so much to his benefit, except it be for necessary Apparel as before, are void, and will not binde him; and in these cases a man shall have no remedy in a Court of Conscience, per Curiam, Plow. 364. Co. 9. 37. 10 H. 6. 14. 11 H. 6. 39. 18 Ed. 4. 1. 21 H. 6. 31. 26 H. 8. 2. 21 H. 7. 39.

18. If an Infant devise Land by Will, it is void, Co. 6. 23. Dyer 143.

19. If an Infant be Executor and Release Debts he hath not received, or do any other act contrary to the duty of an Executor, and prejudicial to himself, as pay Legacies before Debts, all such Acts are void, Co. 5. 27.

20. If an Infant grant an Advowson, or Rent, or Common, by Deed, it is void; and if the Grantee present, or distrain, or take the Common, the Infant hath the same advantages, as if no such act had ever been made, 26 H. 8. 2. F. N. B. 102. Perk. Sess. 13. And yet an Infant may present to a Church for fear of Lapse, Dyer 104.

21. All Bills, Bonds, Covenants, and the like, entred into by an Infant, may be avoided in pleading to any Action upon them, that he was within age, Co. 5. 19. 21 H. 6. 31.

22. If an Infant sell a Horse, or any other such like thing for money, or else, and the Vendee take it of himself; in this case the Infant may have an Action of Trespass for the taking: But if the Infant delivered the thing with his own hands, the Vendee is excused from any Action of Trespass; yet the Contract is voidable at least: And therefore the Infant may take his Horse again, and cannot sue for the money, but may sue for his Horse, if it be kept from him. If an Infant buy a Horse, and give Earnest, and the seller break with him, he may sue him, because of his Earnest, which onely is recoverable in damages, and may be sued for by Action of Accompt, Hobb. Rep. 96. 14 H. 8. 29. 21 H. 7. 39. 21 H. 6. 3.

23. If an Infant make a Feoffment in Fee with a Warrant to give Livery of Seisin to a stranger, and he do it accordingly, this is void, and the Feoffee when he doth enter a Disseisor, and so the Infant may sue him, or enter upon him: But if the Infant had given Livery of Seisin, with his own hands, then had the estate been onely voidable; and the Feoffee not to be charged, as a Disseisor or a Trespassor, Co. 5. 119. 4. 125. 3. 422. Dyer 109. 36. 26 H. 8. 2. Littl. 400.

24. If an Infant make an Exchange or a Partition, it seems this is voidable onely, for he may affirm it at his full age, F. N. B. 62. 18 Ed. 4. 2. 12 H. 4. 11.

25. So if an Infant make a Lease for years, rendering Rent, it seems this is voidable, onely because the Infant at his full age, may accept the Rent and make it good; which if the Lease were void, it seems he might not do; but if it be without any render of Rent, it seems to be void, 9 H. 7. 24. 18 Ed. 4. 2. Plow. 545. Co. 3. 69. It is said that it hath been adjudged, That an Infant shall not be charged for Wares that he doth buy for his Trade, 14 H. 8. 19.

26. If an Infant levy a Fine, suffer a Recovery, enter into a Statute, or Recognizance, or Inrol any Deed, he may during his minority, avoid them; the first and second by a Writ of Error, the third and fourth by an Audita Querela, and the last by Entry or Action: But after the Infant is of full age, these Acts are not to be avoided, 17 Ass. 17. F. N. B. 104. Co. 10. 43. Keln. 19. Co. 1. 76. Co. 2. 57. Perk. 19.

27. If an Infant sue or be sued in any Court by Attorney, and Judgment be given for, or against him, it is Error; and for this the Judgment may be avoided, Co. 9. 76.

28. If an Infant Tenant in Tail make a Lease for years, within the Statute of 33 H. 8. Yet it is not good, though the Statute be general, M. 7 fac. B. R.

29. An Infant is not bound by a Partition that is not equal, made by Agreement, or in Chancery; but if it were made by Writ, he were, Co. Super Lint. fol. 171. See Crompt. Jur. f. 37. But a Release may be by Decree in Chancery, in some cases against an Infant, when no other remedy can be had. See Conscience.

30. If the Guardian of an Infant suffer a Decree in Chancery against him, by consent, it shall not binde him; by all the Judges at Reading, Term. But a Decree involuntary upon the merits of the cause, shall binde him. Out of all which, it appeareth that all Deeds, Gifts, Grants, &c. made by an Infant, which take not effect by Delivery of the Infant, be absolutely void. But matters in Fact or writing, which take effect by hand and Delivery, are onely voidable by the Infant, or by them which have the Infants estate. And yet Acts that are apparently of necessity or profit to the Infant, or which can be no disprofit to him, as for Meat, Drink, necessary Apparel, and Schooling, the Obligation or Covenant of an Infant, is good, Dyer 104.

See more in Agreement, Acceptance, Ability, Capacity, Testaments, Numb. 4. Fine, Numb. 5, 7, 8. Grant, Numb. 1, 3. Recovery, Numb. 3.

Sec. 3.
3. What persons shall take advantage of a voidable Act done by an Infant, and when.

Privies in Blood inheritable, as Heir General, Heir Special, or as Heirs General and Special, shall have advantage of Infancy, Co. 8. Whittinghams case, fol. 42. As if an Infant, Tenant in Fee-simple, make a Feoffment and die; his Heir may enter or bring an Action.

So if Lands be given to one, and the Heirs-Males of his Body, and the Donee within age make a Feoffment in Fee; his Son as Heir General and Special, may enter or have Action. So also may the Heir Special, as in the case before, Co. Super Lint. 337. Co. 8. 42.

If the Donee have Issue two Sons, and the Elder hath Issue a Daughter; and the Donee die, and the Elder Son within age, make a Feoffment, and die without Issue, the younger Son being now Special Heir per formam doni, may avoid the Feoffment of his Brother.

So if Lands be given to a Man, and the Heirs-Females of his Body, and the Donee having issue, a Son and a Daughter, makes a Feoffment within age, and die, the Daughter may enter or bring Action; so the Heir in Burrough-Englis. For in these last cases, the Heir General cannot enter; for there is no right that doth descend to him.

So if a Tenant in Tail, within age, make a Feoffment in Fee, and is attainted of Felony; in this case the Issue may enter, and avoid the Feoffment. See more in Privies.

If the Husband being an Infant, make a Feoffment of his Wives Lands, and die, the Son and Heir may avoid it after his Mothers death, but before he cannot; but she may avoid it, during her life, Co. 8. 42.

Also Privies in estate in some special cases, may take advantage of Infancy; as if two Joint-tenants within age, make a Feoffment in Fee, and one die; the Survivor may enter or bring an Action for the whole, Co. 4. 41.

But Privies in Estate generally, shall not take advantage of the Infancy of another: As if a Donee in Tail, within age, make a Feoffment in Fee, and die without issue, the Donor can neither enter, or bring an Action.

So if two Joint-tenants are in Fee within age, and the one make a Feoffment in Fee of his Movery, and die, the Survivor cannot enter nor bring Action for his Companions part, but the Heir of the Joint-tenants that is dead, may, Co. 8. 43.

If a Tenant in Tail, being an Infant, make a Feoffment in Fee, and die without issue; neither the Donor, nor Collateral Heir of the Infant can enter or bring Action, Co. 3. 43.

If an Infant be Tenant for anothers life, and make a Feoffment in Fee, and he for whose life he hold it, dies; in this case the Infant, or his Heir, shall never enter, or bring Action, but he in Reversion or Remainder shall, Co. 8. 43.

Privies in Law, as Lord by Exchange, &c. shall never have any benefit by any such avoidable Act of an Infant: As if a Feoffment be made, and Livery given by the hands lands of an Infant, and after he die without an Heir, or commit Felony, or the like : Now in these cases the Feoffment is an avoidable by any body, Co. 8. 44.

For Answer to this, take these Cases.

1. If an Infant after he is of the age of fourteen years or before, if he be of discretion (whereof the Justices must judge) commit Felony : He must suffer as another man, Malitia supplebit aetatem, Co. 4. 127. Plow. 19.

2. If an Infant do any personal wrong, as Assault or Battery, or the like, it seems he shall be punished, as another man : And so is the experience of our time, per Tylerton, Just. Pasch. 9 Jac. Co. 8. 44.

3. If an Infant be a Gaoler, and suffer an escape, he shall be punished as another man, Co. 8. 44. Byo. Courtine 68.

4. If the Estate of the Infant be upon Condition to be performed by the Infant ; and the Condition is broken, during his minority, the Land is lost and the Infant is perpetually barred : As if a Feoffment or Lease be made to the Infant, or to his Ancestor (whose Heir he is) upon Condition of Re-entry for non-payment of Rent, or the like ; and the Rent is not paid, or the Condition broken, the Land is lost, Co. 8. 44. 31 Aff. pl. 36. 36 H. 6. 28.

5. So also in some cases the Infant shall be barred, and bound by a Condition in Law, if it be such a Condition, as is founded upon skill and confidence : As if Infants have an Office of Parkership, or Stewardship (unto which the Law hath annexed this Condition, that they do discharge the duty of that Office) and they neglect their charge, or any way misdemean themselves. So if an Infant have Liberties or Franchises, and do any way abuse or misuse, or disuse them ; in these cases, for such causes as another man may forfeit such Offices or Franchises, an Infant may forfeit : See Forfeiture. The same Law is of a Woman Covert, Co. super Littl. 233, 234.

6. If an Infant do actually Disseise another man of Land, he shall be punished as a Disseisor, Perk. Sect. 47.

7. If an Infant do commit Waste or Lease, in payment of his services, and the Lord or Reversioner recover the Land in an Action of Waste, or a Cessavit (as he may) this shall binde the Infant for ever. And so in all cases where a Statute doth give a Recovery upon a Condition in Law : But if such an Infant at the time of his Ancestors death, hath cause to enter into Land, and a Discent is cast, during his Infancy ; this will not bar him. And yet a dying seisor of the King, and a Discent will bar an Infant, Co. 8. 44. Co. super Littl. f. 245. 380. 246.

8. But when the Condition in Law is of that nature, as it is without any confidence or skill, and it be broken, it will not bar the Infant : As if the Infant be Tenant for life, in Dower, or by courtesie, and he make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Lessor, or he in Reversion, enter for a Forfeiture, as he may ; yet this will not bar the Infant, but he may after re-enter, Co. 8. 44. Co. super Littl. fol. 234.

9. So if an Infant alien in Mortmain, and the Lord enter ; yet the Right of the Infant is not barred, but he may enter again upon the Lord. So in all cases where a Statute doth give an Entry, but no Action for Recovery upon a Condition in Law. Co. 8. 44.

10. If an Infant make a Feoffment in Fee, and after his full age the Feoffee die seised, and the Land Disceid ; this doth bar him of his Entry, Plow. 364. Perk. Sect. 409. 408.

But if the dying seised were during the minority of the Infant ; it will not bar him of his Entry, Plow. 364.

11. If an Infant make default as another man in a real Action, it seems he shall not lose his Land as another man shall in such an Action. So if he be non-suited in any Action, he shall not be amerced as another man shall, Co. super Littl. f. 173. 31 H. 6. 40. Dyne 338.

12. An Infant shall not be barred by Non-claim in five years upon a Fine, and yet yet if the five years begin in the time of the Ancestor, there he shall be barred, Co. super Littl. 380.

13. An Infant shall not be barred or hurt by time in cases of Wreck, Waif, Estray, or sale in a Market Over, as another man of full age shall be, Co. super Litt. 380. Plow. 364. Co. 5. 108. Dyer 153. 164.

14. If an Usurpation be made upon an Infant, to whom an Advowson is descended by Presentment, the Infant is not barred as another man, but he at his full age may have a Quare Impedit: And yet if he present not to a Church in six weeks, there will be a Lapse, Co. super Littl. 246.

15. If Tenant for life alien with Warranty, his Heir within age, and after die, his Heir within age; in this case the not-Entry of the Heir will not hurt him, nor the Warranty bar him. But if after the Alienation, he become of full age, before the death of the Tenant for life, there he will be barred. And in case where a Warranty doth descend upon an Infant or Feme-Covert, and their Entry is not lawful; in this case they will be barred, Co. super Littl. 380.

See §. 5.

16. If one make a Feoffment to another, rendering Rent: And it is agreed, That if the Rent be not paid, he shall pay double the Rent, and the Land come to an Infant, and he fail; it is said he shall not be charged. But quere, for in case of a Condition, he shall forfeit as another man. See the Cases before, Co. super Littl. f. 47. 6. 50.

Account.

17. An Infant before he is one and twenty years old, cannot be charged in an Account; and therefore till then, he cannot be a Bailiff or a Receiver, Co. super Littl. f. 172.

18. If an Infant have Title to enter for Mortmain, and he enter not within the year; this will not prejudice him.

What acts he may be compelled to do, or not.

An Infant-Tenant may be compelled to Attorn to the Grantee of the Seignior, or of the Reversion, Co. super Littl. 315.

And if one make a Lease, rendering Rent to him, and he occupy the Land, he must pay the Rent, 21 H. 6. 31.

But an Infant cannot be compelled to serve in a Jury, Littl. 259.

And by Statute Laws, how bound.

What Statutes shall binde him, or not. See Plow. 364. 236. 359-376. 372: Co. 8. 44. 100. 31. 91. Dyer 104. 133. Littl. 246.

But this is a Rule, That an Infant is bound by all Statute Laws, if they be not by name excepted.

§. Where an Infant may sue or be sued, and how.

An Infant Regularly may both sue, and be sued in all Personal Actions; and so also in all Real Actions, but where the Sute must stay for Nonage: For which see Age. 718. 2001.

Prochein Amy, what.

But the Infant may not sue or be sued, as another man; and therefore in most cases where the Infant will sue, he must sue by his prochein Amy, (i.) his next friend, which is said to be one that appeareth in any Court for an Infant which sueth any Action, and is allowed by the Court to aid the Infant in the pursuit of his Sute; and he is sometimes called a Gardein.

Gardein, what.

And if an Infant be sued in any Action, he cannot appear and defend it by Attorney, but it must be by a Guardian, which is one allowed by the Court to make defence for the Infant in that Sute. And this is commonly one of the Officers of the Court.

Guardian in Chivalry or Socage.

And yet it seems, that an Infant in some special Cases may sue by Attorney; as where he is (a) Executor, or (b) Administrator, or in Waste against his Guardian in Chivalry, for making Waste in his Land, or an Accompt against his Guardian in Socage, after the Infant is fourteen years old; (c) or in this case he may also, if he will sue by his Guardian, F. N. B. 27. Littl. 123. Co. 4. 53. 124. 71. 8. 58. 9. 30. 21 Ed. 4. 78. Dyer 104. 162. 312. Westm. 2. ch. 15. 1. 47. (a) Mich. 7 fac. Co. B. (b) Trin. 38 Eliz. Adjdg. (c) Allowed by the Judges. Hil. 6 fac. B. R.

Attorney.

Also if an Infant be sued upon his Contract for necessary Apparel, or for an Assault Assault or Battery, or the like, there he may sue by his Attorney, as other men do, Co. 9. 87. F. N. B. 118. Ca. 8. 44. 58. Dyer 239. 27 H. 8. 11. Co. 4. 124. Brownl. Rep. 1 part. 151.

If a dumb man bring an Action, he must sue by Prochein Amy, 10 Ed. 3. 53. See Age.

This is a Writ lying where an Infant, within age, alieneth his Land, which he hath in Fee-simple, Fee-Tail, or for life; in this case, when he cometh of full age, he (or if he die, his Heir, when he comes of full age) may have this Writ to recover the Land again. Dum suit infra etatem, what.

Or in this case, the Infant may enter upon the Land, before he is of full age, or after he is of age, if there be no Discent to hinder him: And when he doth enter, he is said to be remitted, and put in, as of his first estate. Discent. Remitter.

And where this Writ will lie, may be gathered by what hath been said before, F. N. B. 27.

This is where a Woman is with childe, at the time of her Husbands death, with such a childe. That if he had been born, had been Heir to some of the Husbands Land. Infant in the Mothers Womb, called En ventre sa mere.

And this is sometimes privily and unknown, and then she is said to be Priviment Enfant: And sometimes it is open and visible, when she doth notoriously appear so. Priviment Enfant, what. Posthumus.

This Infant is called a Posthumus or Postnatus; and is one that the Law doth much favor and regard, as appeareth by that which doth follow in the next Question.

For Answer to this, take these Cases.

1. In all Cases where the Daughter or Female-heir, or other person, Heir, cometh into Land by Discent, or in the nature of a Discent; there the Son, or more immediate Heir that shall be born after, shall out her, and have the Land. And therefore if one seised of Land in Fee, and have but one Daughter, but his Wife is with childe of a Son, and he die, and the Daughter enter, and after the Son is born; in this case he may out the Daughter, and have the Land, and the Daughter can by no means prevent him of it. So where the Wife doth discontinue the Land, she hath by her Husband, and so make a Forfeiture of it within 11 H. 7. 20. And she have at that time a Daughter, and is with childe of a Son by her deceased Husband, and the Daughter enter, the Son shall after out her. So if a Gift be in Tail to a Man and his Heirs-males of his Body, and the Donee die without issue having a Brother, that is next Heir per formam Doni, but the Wife of the Donee is Privily with childe of a Son, and the Brother enter; in this case, the Issue after he is born, shall have the Land, and put out his Uncle. So if a Tenant in Tail having issue two Sons, and the elder die in the life time of the Father, leaving his Wife with childe of a Son, and then the Tenant in Tail suffer a Recovery to the use of himself for life, and after his death to a stranger for twenty years, and after of the Heirs-males of the body of the Tenant in Tail and after the Tenant in Tail die, and then the youngest Son enter, and after the Son of the eldest Brother is born; in this case he shall have the Land, and out his Uncle. So if a Son purchase Land, and die without Issue, and the Uncle, and after a Daughter is born, she shall have the Land from him. So if there be Son and Daughter, and the Son purchase Land, and die without Issue, it shall go to the Daughter. But if there be a Son born, after he shall have the Land, and if he have another Daughter, she shall be Copartner with her sister. And if a Daughter have a Seignior by Discent; and a Tenancy Elcheat, and after a Son is born; in this case he shall have the Tenancy, and out her of it, Co. 3. 61. 9 H. 7. 25. Co. 1. Shelbys case. Broo. Age 51. Plow. 375. Co super Littl. 11.

Self. 6.
6. Where an Heir born after, shall put out another Heir born before, or not.

2. But in all cases where the Daughter and Female-Heir, or other Heir cometh into the Land by Purchase, or in the nature of a Purchase, or the like, there the Son or other, more immediate or next Heir that shall be born after him, shall not out him. As if Lands be given to one for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. and J. S. hath a Daughter, his Wife with childe of a Son, and the Remainder fall before the Son is born; in this case the Daughter shall have the Land for ever, and never never be put out by the Son. So if one by a Ravishment forfeit his Land within the Statute of 6 R. 2. And a Daughter is the next Heir in being, but there is a Son in Utero matris, and the Daughter enter, the Son shall never out her. So in like manner, if an estate be made on Condition, that if the Feoffor or his Heirs pay twenty pound, that they shall have the Land again, and the Daughter pay the money, and after a Son is born, he shall never have the Land, Qui sentit onus sentire debet & commodum: But if the Condition were to be performed on the part of the Feoffee, or it were broken in the life time of the Ancestor; in these cases it seems the Son may enter afterwards, and put out the Daughter. If one by Will devise to J. S. and his Heirs, and the Devisee had then a Daughter, when the Devisor died, his Wife being privily with childe of a Son, and the Devisee dieth, and the Heir be doth enter; in this case the Son that is after born, shall not out her, but the daughter shall have the Land; Co. 3. 61. 9 H. 7. 24. 5 Ed. 4. 6. Co. 1. 95, 99. See Purchas.

As to this point, these things are to be known:

7. How the wrongs done to Infants, shall be punished, &c. only.

1. To lie with an Infant-Maid, though with her consent; this abuse of her is Felony, see Crown.

2. By force or fraud to steal, or cause to be stolen, or taken away any person under the age of one and twenty years, with intent to marry the same person: For this a man shall forfeit his whole estate; the one half to the childe, the other half to the Commonwealth, and he is to be imprisoned and kept to hard labor in some House or Correction or other publick Working-house, during life. And all that are aiding and abetting herein, are to be imprisoned and kept at hard labor for seven years.

3. If any Marriage be so made by force or fraud, it shall be void.

4. If any Guardian or Overseer shall betray his trust, touching any childe, by seducing, selling, or otherwise wilfully putting such childe into the hands or power of any person who shall marry her, without his or her free consent; he shall forfeit double the portion, which of right did belong to such childe; the one half to the childe, the other half to the Commonwealth: The new Act of 24 August, 1653.

5. If any take or convey away any Maid, under sixteen years of age, out of the custody of her Parents Guardians or Overseers, against their wills, they are to be imprisoned two years without Bail or Mainprize, 4, 5 Pb. & Ma. 8.

6. If any take and marry any such yong woman against the will of them that have the Government of her, they are to be imprisoned five years without Bail or Mainprize, 4, 5 Pb. & Ma. 8.

7. Where an Infant shall have his age, you shall finde in Age.

8. Where an Infant shall be in Ward or not, you shall finde in Guardian.

CHAP. LXXV.

Of Emberitance or Inheritance:

Inheritance or Inheritance is an Estate in perpetuity descendible to a man and his heirs.

Emberitance or Inheritance,
what.
The kinds,

And some do make three sorts of Estates of Inheritance or Inheritances, which may be called Estates in Fee.

The first is Fee-simple absolute; and this is, where he hath Land to him and his heirs indefinitely without any limitation whatsoever of his Estate: This is an absolute Estate in perpetuity, and this is most properly and aptly called Fee-simple.

Another kind of Inheritance or Fee-simple is, where one hath an Estate to him and his heirs so long as J. S. hath heirs of his body, or so long as he shall pay twenty shillings a year to the Grantor, or to J. S. or so long as Pauls Church shall stand: This is an Inheritance, but it is limited and determinable; for if J. S. fail of heirs of his body, the Rent be not paid, or Pauls Church fall or be taken away, this Inheritance is gone.

Another kind of Inheritance is, where a Donee in tail is attainted of Treason, so that he forfeits his Estate to the Lord Protector: He hath a Fee, but it shall be only for so long as the Tenant in tail hath issue of his body. So if Tenant in tail by Indenture of Bargain and Sale inrolled, bargain and sell the Land to another and his heirs; this is a Fee-simple, but this is a base Fee, for this Inheritance is but during the life of the Tenant in tail: And in both these cases there is a Fee-simple under a Fee-simple; for the absolute and supreme Fee-simple is in the Donor. And yet this base Fee is such a Fee as shall descend, as the Lord Protector or Bargainee may grant over to another: And so long as these Estates last, they shall be Assises in the Heir in Debt, or to render in value upon the Warranty of the Father, and the Wife shall be endowed out of it, Plow. 557. Co. 10. 96. See more of this in Estates, Chap.

Discent, what.

Discent signifieth in our Common-Law, an order or means whereby Lands or Tenements are derived unto any man from his Ancestors. And this is sometimes Lineal, as when the descent is conveyed in the whole line of the same blood, as Grandfather, Father and Son, and so downward, Old N. B. 201. Lit. 1. And sometimes it is Collateral; which is, when it is out in another branch above of the whole blood, as Grandfathers brother, Fathers brother, and so downwards. And by this means the Property of Land is gotten and transferred from one to another. And for the guiding of these Descents, there be three general Rules:

1. The eldest Male shall first inherit; and if it come to Females, then they being all in equal degree of nearness, shall inherit all together.

Sec. 1.

2. That no Brother or Sister of the half blood shall inherit to Brother or Sister, but to the Parents.

3. Land purchased by the party himself dead, is to go to the Heirs on the Fathers side; and if he have none, then of the Mothers side: But of Lands descended it is otherwise. Co. upon Lit. 1. 13. 237. 238. 164. D. & S. 17.

For answer to this, these things are to be known. That the Law of Inheritance preferreth the first Child; amongst the Children, the Male before the Female; and amongst Males, the first-born. If there be no Children, then the Brother; if no Brother, then Sisters; if neither Brother nor Sisters, then Uncles; and for lack of Uncles, Aunts; if none of them, then Cousins in the neereft degree of Consanguinity. So that if a man die seised of Lands or Tenements in Fee-simple, and do not dispose them after his death, and appointeth that they shall descend in this manner as followeth.

of the Ancestor.

Escheat.

1. If there be any lineal Heir, it shall descend to him: And for want of such, if there be any collateral Heir, it shall descend to him: And for want of either, it shall escheat to the Lord. Lex regis semper prefertur transversali. Noy 26, 27. D. & S. 17.

Parceners.

2. If there be any sons, it shall go to the sons before the daughters: And if there be many sons, it shall go to the eldest before any of the younger; for the Rule is, Detur digniori. And if there be no sons, it shall go to all the daughters, who then are called Parceners. If a man have neither son nor daughter, then it shall go to the next Cousins Males lineal of the whole blood, (if any be;) and for want of Males to the Females. And if there be no lineal Cousins, then it shall go to the next Cousin Male collateral of the whole blood; and for want of Male to the Female, (Numb. 17. v. 3, 6, 7, 8.) But by special Customs in some places, Lands shall go to all the sons or next Heirs males; and in some places to the youngest son. See Gavelkind, & Burton-Engliff.

Sec. 2.

3. If Lands come to one by the Fathers side, and he die without issue, it shall go to the next Heir of the Fathers side, and not of the Mothers side. So contra, if it comes by the Mothers side, it shall go to the next Heir of her side, and not of the Fathers side. N.B. 10. Plow. 132. 12 Ed. 4. 14.

Demy-junk, or Half-blood.

4. If one purchase Land in fee, and die without issue, those of the blood of his Fathers side shall inherit, if there be any; and for want of Heirs on the Fathers side, it shall go to the Heirs of his Mothers side. But if the Land come to the Son by descent, it shall never go to the Heirs of the Mothers side: For if there want Heirs of the Fathers side to take it, it shall escheat to the Lord; and so on the other side, if it come by descent from the Mother. Lit. c. 4. 12 Ed. 4. 14. 39 Ed. 3. 30. 1 Ed. 4. 14. Co. 3. 14.

Escheat.

5. If there be Grandfather, Father and Son, and the Father die before the Grandfather, and after the Grandfather die seised; the Land shall go to the son or daughter of the Father, if he have any, and not to any of the other children of the Father or Grandfather: And this Heir is called Heir jure representationis, because he doth represent his Fathers person. But if in this case the Father die without any Child, it shall go to the next eldest Brother; or for want of a Brother, to the Sisters of the Father, Br. 303.

6. One hath issue two sons, A. and B. and dieth: B. hath two sons, C. and D. and dieth: C. the eldest son hath issue, and dieth: A. purchaseth Lands in Fee-simple, and dieth without issue; in this case the issue of C. shall inherit it, Co. lib. Inst. 1 par. f. 30.

7. If a son purchase Land and die, and have no other Heir but his fathers brother, he shall have it: But if after his father have any son or daughter born, that son or daughter shall have it, Co. upon Lit. 10. 12.

8. If a man seised of Land as Heir of the part of his Mother, make a Feoffment and take back an Estate to him and his Heirs; this is a new Purchase, and if he die without issue, the Heir of the part of the Father shall first inherit it, Co. lib. Inst. 1 par. f. 12.

9. If there be three Brothers, and the middle purchase Land and die without child, the Land shall go to the eldest Brother, and not to the youngest: So if the youngest die, it shall go to the eldest, and not to the second, Litt. 5. Stamf. lib. 3: chap. 523.

Sec. 3.

Escheat.

10. If a man be seised of Lands, and have two Daughters, and one is attainted of Felony, and the Father die, both Daughters living; the one moyetie shall descend to one, and the other shall escheat, Co. super Lit. 163.

11. If there be two Sons or Daughters by two women, and the elder purchase Land and die without issue, or his issue die without issue; in this case the Land shall go to his or her Uncle, or the Kinsman of the entire blood, and not to the other Brother or Sister, but shall rather escheat to the Lord; for none can have Lands in Fee-simple as Heir to another, unless he be Heir of the whole blood. But in this case if the eldest Son die before he enter or is actually seised of the Land, there the Brother by the other woman shall be Heir, Lit. c. 6. 37 Ass. 15. Dyer 291. Litt. s. 4.

12. If a man have issue only a Daughter, and die and leave his wife with child of a Son, and after the Son is born: Now in this case the Land shall go to the Son after his birth, but till then it is to go to the Daughter, Park. c. 521. 9 H. 6. 23.

13. If a woman Covert an Inheretrix of Land die seised, and have issue by her husband, and the issue die without any issue; now one of the next of kin to the Mother shall have this Land, and not any of the other Children of the Father. So if the Land came by the husband, and he have issue by his wife and die, and after she have issues by another husband, and the issue of the first husband die without issue: In this case some of his next Kin shall have the Land, not any of the other Children of the woman by other husbands, Lit. c. 4.

14. If there be two Brothers, and one of them hath one Son only, and no Daughter, and the Son doth die seised of Land in Fee: Now this Land shall go to the Uncle, and not to the Father; because it is a Principle of Law, That Land cannot lineally ascend. But if the Uncle after he is actually seised of it die without issue, then it may go to the Father as Heir to his Brother: But if he had not been actually seised, then it could not have gone to his Brother, Co. 3. 39. Litt. ch. 3. Co. 3. 14.

15. If there be a Son and Daughter by one woman, and a Son by another, and the eldest Son purchase Land and die seised of it; his whole Sister, and not his half Brother shall have it: So also shall she have the Land that came to the eldest Son by descent from their Father, if her Brother be actually seised of it by an Entry himself, or by another, a Lessee for years, or a Gardein, (as he may) if the Land were leased, and the Lessee enjoy it, or the Gardein enter.

16. But if their Father die seised, and the elder Brother die also before he be actually seised of the Land; in this case the Land shall go to the younger Brother, and not to the Sister: For it is Possessio fratris, qua facit sororem esse heredem. As if Land, Common, Rent, Advowson, or the like descend, and the elder Brother die before Entry, Claim, receiving the Rent, or Presentment to the Advowson; in these cases it shall go to the younger Brother, as Heir to his Father, Co. 3. 43. See the Writings of a Lawyer, f. 10, 11. & F.N.B. 36.

17. If there be two Sons by divers women, and the elder is seised in Fee and die without issue, and the Land go to the Uncle, (as it must supra) and after the Uncle die seised of it without issue; here the younger Brother may have the Land as Heir to the Uncle, though he might not have it as Heir to the Brother. But then the Uncle must be seised of it; for he must make himself Heir to him that was last seised of it, and that was his Half-Brother, to whom he cannot be Heir, Co. 3. 42, 43.

18. If a man have issue three Daughters by one woman, and one by another woman, and die seised of Land; the Land shall go to all the four Daughters equally, 20 Aff. 2627. And yet if two of the Sisters by the one woman die without issue, the third Sister by that mother shall have all the Land of those two Sisters, and the Sister by the other mother shall have no part of it, 20 Aff. 271.

19. If a man hath one only Child, and he doth purchase Land and die, and the Land go to the Uncle, (as it must) and after he hath another Child; in this case the Land shall go to the Child that is after born, D. & S. 211.

20. If there be a Grandmother of the Fathers part, Mother and Son, and the Grandmother hath a Brother, and the Mother another, and the Son purchase Land and die without issue; it shall go to the Great Uncle, and not to the Uncle, Don. 314.

21. Land purchased (as appears in some cases before) may go to the Heirs of the part both of the Father and Mother of the Purchaser, unless it be once attached in the Heir of the part of the Father; for then the Heir of the part of the Mother shall never have it, because they are not of blood to him that was last seised. But Land descended go only to the Heir of that part from whence it doth descend: As if from the Father who did purchase it, then it may go to the part of the Heirs of the Mother of the same Father, but not to the Heirs of the part of the Sons Mother; for though they be of blood to the Son that was last seised, yet they are not of blood to the Father which was the first Purchasor, 49 Ed. 3. 1. 1. Finch's lty. 119.

22. In the Collateral Discent of any one that doth purchase Lands, and die without issue; the Heirs of the part of the Father, and that are of blood of the Ancestors males, and in the lineal Ascent by the Father, shall be preferred in the Discent, before the Heirs that are of the blood of the Females in the lineal Ascent by the Father in the same degree: As the Brother of the Grandfather or Great-Grandfather of the part of the Father, and his Issues (be they male or female) shall be preferred before the Brother of the Grandmother or Great-Grandmother of the part of the Father and his Issues. But if one purchase Lands and die without Issue, having no Heir of the part of the Father, the Land shall descend to the next Heir of the part of the Mother; yet so, as to the Heirs of the race of the Males first: As if the Father of the Father of the Mother of the Purchasor have one Brother, and the Mother of the Father of the Mother of the Purchasor hath another; the Brother of the Grandfather, and not of the Grandmother of the Mother shall have it, Plow. 444.

23. If one have issue two Daughters, and die, each Daughter shall have alike; But if the eldest have issue three Daughters, the youngest one; the Daughter of the youngest shall have as much as the three of the eldest. And if the eldest have issue divers Sons, and the youngest divers Daughters; the eldest Son of the eldest, and the Daughters of the youngest shall have all alike; the eldest Son shall have a moyetie, and the Daughters of the youngest the other moyetie, Co. super Lit. 164.

24. But if there be Father and Son, and the Son be attainted of Treason or Felony in the Fathers life, and overlive his Father; the Land shall not come to the Son, nor any of his Issues: But if the Son had died before the Father, it should have gone to the other Issues of the Father. (See Corruption of Blood.) For if the Son die before the Father having Issue, neither the second Son, nor the Issue of the first Son shall inherit it, but it shall escheat, 27 Aff. 11. Co. 3. 41. 4. 124.

25. If a man be attainted of Treason or Felony, his blood is so corrupt, that Land can neither descend to him from any Ancestor, neither can any have Land from him that shall make himself Heir to him immediately, Co. lib. Inst. f. 8. par. 1. And the Kings Pardon will not help this.

Sec. 5.

26. If a Purchasor of Land have issue a Son, and die, and the Son enter and die without issue, and without Heir of the part of the Father; the Heir of the part of the Mother of such issue shall never inherit, but the Heir of the part of the Mother of the Father may inherit it, Plow 446.

27. If a Purchasor die without issue, and there be a Brother of the Grandmother of the part of the Father, and another Brother of the Great-Grandmother of the part of the Father; the Brother of the Great-Grandmother shall not have it, but the Brother of the Grandmother shall be Heir, Plow. 449.

28. A Monster that hath not the shape of Mankind, shall not be Heir nor inherit any Land: But if he have some deformity only, as four or six fingers, or crooked parts; this will not hinder.

29. A Bastard also shall not be Heir to another.

30. Nor shall an Alien born out of the Kings liegeance, inherit from his Father. See Crompt. Jur. f. 53. 6. Co. lib. Inst. 1 par. f. 7, 8.

4. What Discent shall take away Entry, or not.

The Law doth much regard Discents, and every Discent seems to add some strength to the Title. And therefore if one have right to enter into Lands which another enjoyeth, and he doth not enter, but suffer him to die seised of it, and the Land to descend; in this case his right of Entry is gone, and he hath no remedy but to bring his Action to recover his right. And this holdeth in most cases, and almost in all where these particulars are in the case.

1. A dying seised by the Ancestor of an Estate in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, and not for life only.

2. A dying seised of the Possession and Frank-tenement also, and not a Reversion or a Remainder only.

3. Where he that died seised, and he that hath right of Entry, do claim by several Titles, and not by the same.

4. Where

4. Where he that hath the right of Entry is of full age infra quatuor maria, of sane memory, out of the Prison, and sole, and not a Woman covert.

5. Where the Disfeisor or Abator must have the quiet possession of the Land five years before the Discent, without any Entry or continual Claim made by him that hath the title or right of Entry.

6. There must be a Discent, and not a Succession only: As where a Corporation disseise, and there be twenty Successions, this will not bar him that hath right of his Entry. For the illustration whereof, see the Cases and Examples following. Lit. l. 1. c. 6, D. & S. 24. Lit. c. 387, 388. Finch 46. Lit. 397, 398, 401, 412. St. 32 H. 8. 33. Co. 11. 33. Dyer 219. Lit. 413, 448.

1. If one be seised of Land in Fee, and disseised by another, and he die, and the Land descend to his Heir, and he enter; in this case the Entry of the Disseisee is gone, and he is put to his Writ of Entry sur disseison for his remedy: But this Disseison and Discent must be in time of Peace; for if it be in time of War, contra. Lit. 383, 47.

2. If one be disseised, and the Disfeisor give the same Land to another in tail, and the Tenant in tail hath Issue and die seised of that Estate, and the Issue enter; in this case the Entry of the Disseisee is gone, and he is put to his Action if he will have remedy, Lit. c. 38.

If a Feoffee in fee, or Donee in tail be upon Condition, and he is disseised, and the Disfeisor die seised; the Feoffee or Donee hath lost his Entry, and is put to his Action, Lit. 392.

3. If a woman Disfeisor marry a husband and have issue, and after the wife die seised, and after the husband die, and then the Heir enter; it seems the Disfeisor is barred of Entry, 9 H. 7. 37 H. 6. And if a woman sole be disseised, and after take a husband, and the Disfeisor die seised during the Coverture, the Entry of the Wife is gone, and she is put to her Writ, Lit. 404.

4. If an Infant disseise another, and alien the Land, and the Alienee die seised, his Heir within age; the Disseisee is barred of his Entry. But if the Disfeisor within age enter upon the Heir, (as he may) then may the Disseisee enter upon the Infant, because the Discent is defeated, Lit. 407, 408. If one disseise another, and make a Feoffment upon Condition, and the Feoffee die seised; then the Entry of the Disseisee is gone: But if the Disfeisor enter for the Condition broken, then he may enter upon him, Lit. 409.

5. If one disseise a man, and put out his Lessee for years at once, and die seised; the Disseisee cannot enter, but is put to his Action; but the Lessee for years may enter. But if it were a Disfeisor of a Tenant for life, contra. Lit. 411.

6. If a Daughter be disseised, and after there is a dying seised, and then the Son is born; this Discent will bar him of his Entry, Bro. 450.

7. If a Disfeisor make a Lease for years, and after die seised; this will bar the Disseisee of his Entry, Bro. 453. If an Infant make a Feoffment, and after his full age the Feoffee die seised; or a Feoffee for life alien, and the Alienee die seised; or a Devise be of Land on Condition, and the Heir of the Devisor enter, and die seised: In these cases the Entry is gone, and they are put to their Action, 21 H. 6. 71. Lit. 98. 9 H. 6. 25. If one bargain and sell his Land and the Bargainee enter, and after the Bargainor enter upon him and die seised; the Entry of the Bargainee is gone, Dan. & Carlson, M. Jac. B. R.

8. If an Abator or Intruder, or one that hath but title of Entry, or that may have an Action, die seised; this Discent taketh away Entry, Lit. Discents. Plow. 47. See more of this in Co. upon Lit. 238.

9. The dying seised of the Inheritance and Freehold together, whereby the Land descends unto his Heir, taketh away the Entry of every one that may have an Action, Lit. Discents.

10. The whole time from the Disseisin to the Discent cast, is considerable: For if the person be not privileged at all times, the Discent binds: As if a Woman covert be disseised, and the Husband die, and she take a new Husband, and then the Discent is cast; or a man infra mara is disseised, and he return into England, and then go over, and then a Discent is cast; this Discent doth bind, because of the interim, 9 H. 7. 24. Dyer 143.

St. B. 6.

St. B. 7.

11. If one wrongfully enter upon anothers Possession, and put the right Owner of the Freehold and Inheritance from it, he doth thereby get the Freehold and Inheritance by Disseisin, and he may hold against all men but the disseised. And if such Disseisor or Abator having quiet possession five years after Disseisin or Abatement, die in possession, and the Land descend to his Heir; hereby they have gained the right to the possession of the Land against him that hath right, until he recover it by a fit Real Action: And if it be not sued for within sixty years after the Disseisin or Abatement committed, the right Owner doth lose his right for ever.

12. But if the Ancestor do not die seised in Fee or Fee-tail, but of a Term of life only, this will not take away Entry, Lit. c. 387. Finches ley, f. 120. And if one be seised of a Reversion or Remainder only, and die so seised, and it descend to his Heir, this will not bar him that hath right of his Entry, Lit. c. 388.

13. If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant be disseised, and he alien in Fee, and the Alienee die without Heir, and the Lord enter as in the Bfcheat; here the Disseisor is not barred of his Entry, but may enter upon the Lord, for here is no Discent to the Heir, Finches ley, f. 120.

14. If one be seised of Land in Fee or in Fee-tail upon Condition, and the Condition be broken, and the Feoffee or Donee die seised; yet this doth not take away the Entry of the Feoffor or Donor, but he may enter upon the Heir. So if the Feoffee or Donee on Condition be disseised, and before or after the Condition broken the Disseisee die seised; yet the Entry of the Feoffor or Donor is not gone, but he may enter upon him, Lit. 391. 22 H. 6. 11.

15. If a Disseisor die seised, and after his Heir endow the Wife of the Disseisor of a third part, and she enter into it; now the Disseisee after the Endowment is not barred of his Entry into this third part, but may enter upon the Wife, Lit. 393. If a Disseisor infeoff his Father, and he die seised, and the Land descend upon him, the Disseisee may enter upon him notwithstanding this Discent, Lit. 395.

Sett. 8. 16. If any of the younger Sons enter by Abatement after the Fathers death, and have issue and die seised, or his issue die seised; this will not bar the eldest Son of his Entry: So if one Daughter enter upon all the Land descended, and die seised of it. But if after the eldest Son have entred, or all the Daughters have entred, one of the younger Sons, or one of the Daughters disseise the other and die seised, contra. Lit. 397. 22 H. 6. 306.

17. If an Infant have cause of Entry, and the Discent happen while he is within age, this will not bar him of his Entry. So if the right of Entry happen to a Woman, so long whiles she is so, and the dying seised be before she is sole, her Entry is not lost. So if the cause of Entry and Discent happen whiles a man is de non sane memoria, yet the Heir of such man so disseised may enter. So if the Disseisee be in Prison or out of the Realm at the time of the Disseison and dying seised, their Entry is preserved for them, Lit. 402, 403, 405. 21 H. 6. 17. Lit. 437.

18. If a Disseisor enter into Religion, whereby his Land comes to his Heir; this will not bar the Disseisee of his Entry upon his Heir, Lit. 410.

19. If a Tenant for life be, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S.; and the Tenant for life die, and a Discent is cast, and after J. S. die, and after the Tenant for life die; in this case the Entry of the Heir of J. S. is not gone, but he may enter, for his Remainder was in custodia legis, Co. 1. 134.

20. If one intrude upon the King, and after the King grant away the Land, and before Entry or Seisure by the Patentee, the Intruder doth die seised; this will not bar the Entry of the Patentee, Dyer 266.

21. If the Alienee in Mortmain die seised, yet the Lord or his Heir may enter upon the Heir of the Alienee, 21 H. 6. 17. 33 Aff. p. 11.

22. The dying seised of a Disseisor by strength and without title, taketh not the Entry of him and his Heirs, which at the time of the Discent had good title of Entry, (unless the Disseisor had peaceable possession by five years next after the Disseison). See the Womans Lawyer, fol. 133. Stat. 32 H. 8. chap. 33. See Enfans: 22 H. 6. 17. 33 Aff. p. 11. 22 H. 6. 17. 33 Aff. p. 11. If

If one have divers children, and the eldest being a Bastard, he doth enter after his fathers death, and quietly hold the Land all his life-time, and hath issue and death seized, and the issue enter; in this case the Entry and Action both of the lawful Heir is gone, and he is without remedy. But if the right Heir had ever made his Entry or Claim upon the Bastard, Donbrd. Lit. c. 401. 409. 360. 36 Aff. 2:

See. 9.
5. What Discent doth take away Entry and Action also.

If one have issue a daughter Bastard, and another daughter Mulier; and both of them do enter together and make partition, and the Bastard die seized of her part, and her Heir enter; the Mulier shall never have any remedy for that part, 27 Ed. 3. 34.

An Heir is he that succeedeth by right of blood in any mans Lands or Tenements in Fee: For nothing passeth jure hereditario, but only Fee; and one may be Heres sanguinis, and yet not Heres hereditarius, being disinherited. And this Heir is either General Heir, or Heir at Common-Law. And this (by our Law) is the eldest Son; and for want of Sons, all the Daughters: And in some places, and by some Customs, all the Sons are the Heir, as in Gavelkind Land; and in some places the youngest Son, as in Burrow-English Land. Or else he is Special Heir, which is he that is Heir only by some Conveyance (as we say) per formam doni, and not Heir at the Common-Law; as when Lands are given to J. S. and the Heirs females of his body, and so by any other special limitation. An Heir is also, as a Discent is, Lineal and Collateral: (See it in Discent.) And no man can be said to be Heir to another, whilst his Ancestor is living; for so long he is only Heir apparent, Co. 1. 66: super Lit. 8. 10. 376.

6. Heir, what.

The kinds.

For answer to this, take these things. That every Heir having Fee-simple Land, be it by Common-Law, or by Custom of Gavelkind or Burrow-English, is chargeable as far as the value thereof with the binding Acts of the Ancestor; Qui sentit commodum, sentire debet & onus. For the opening whereof, take these Cases.

7. Where the Heir shall be charged for his Ancestor; or not; and how.

1. If a man bind himself and his Heirs by any Obligation, Bill, Covenant, Annuity, or other Especialty, to pay money, or do any other thing, and his Heirs have any Land in Fee-simple descended to him from the same Ancestor, and the Action be brought before he sell away the same Land bona fide; in this case the Heir (be he Lineal or Collateral Heir) will be charged for so much as is so descended to him, and he may be sued upon that Especialty. And where there be many to make one Heir, as Daughters, or Sons, they may and must be all sued; and if one alone of them be charged, he shall have remedy against the rest by Audita Querela. Or the Creditor may in this case for bear to sue the Heir, and sue the Executor; for the Law gives him his choice to sue which he will.

Upon an Especialty.

Audita Querela: Election.

But to make an Heir chargeable in this case, there must be these three things

1. The Heirs must be bound by name in the Especialty, as, I bind me and my Heirs. And yet if a man do but bind himself to pay money, or do a thing, and do not name an Executor, at, I bind me, my Executors, &c. his Executors be bound as he is. But otherwise it is of Heirs: And therefore it is, that if one by any Writing bind himself, his Executors and Assigns, and do not name his Heir, the Heir shall not be charged, though he have never so much Land by Discent. So if one grant an Annuity to one and his Heirs, and do not say, [For me and my Heirs] or [I bind me and my Heirs to pay it] or the like. So if I by Deed bind my Heirs only to do a thing, and do not bind me and my Heirs; in this case it seems the Heir shall not be charged: Yet by a Warranty in Law, the Heir may be charged without being named.
2. The second thing needful to make an Heir chargeable to the Deed of his Ancestor, is, that he must have Assets in Fee-simple descended to him from the same Ancestor. And therefore although he have never so much Land come to him by Gift in Tail, or of any other Estate then Fee-simple, or Fee-simple Land; if it come by Conveyance of the Father, and not by Discent, it will not make the Heir chargeable.
3. The Land descended to the Heir, must continue in the hands of the Heir till the Action be brought: For if he after his Ancestors death sell away the Land descended to him before the Action brought on the Especialty, he shall not be charged; for he is chargeable only in respect of the Land. And yet if an Heir shall fraudulently and

See. 10.
Executors.

of purpose to avoid the force of a Suit, convey away the Land descended; this will not help him, but he may be chargeable notwithstanding: 4. When he is chargeable, he may not be charged for more then the value of the Land descended to him, except it be by his own false Plea in the Suit; for so he may make himself chargeable further. See for all these things, D. & S. 170. 173. F.N.B. 120. Co. 3112. 6. 47. upon Lit. 102. 183. Dyer 204. 114. 149. 373. 344. 111. 239. Plow. 457. Fitz. Grant 85. 21 H.7.4. 30 Ed.4.10.

2. Thus an Heir may be charged upon the Bond, Bill, or Covenant of his Ancestor, or by an Annuity granted, or Warranty made by the Ancestor, Plow. 457. Co. upon Lit. 102. 376.

3. If a Judgment be had against me for Debt or Damages, and I leave Land to descend to my Heir in Fee-simple, the one half of these Lands will be liable to Execution in his hands by the Writ of Elegit. See Elegit.

Elegit.

4. All the Lands that come to the Heir as Fee-simple Land, and Fee-tail Land, from his Ancestor, will be liable to pay the Debts due from the Ancestor to the Lord Protector, albeit the Heir be not named, and albeit there be no Specialty, and albeit it come by Conveyance, and not by Discent, Plow. 439. 33 H.8.39.

5. An Heir shall not be charged with an Annuity by a Prescription only without Record, or Writing; as that he and his Ancestors time out of mind have paid: For this will not charge the Heir, 10 Ed.4.10. Bro. Prescr. 11.

For this, take these Cases.

8. What lands and estates of the Heirs shall be subject to this Charge, or not.

1. None but Lands descended in Fee-simple shall be subject to the Charge of the Ancestor, and put in execution. And therefore in the Suit against the Heir, the Judgment is only against the Lands descended, and not any other Lands, nor Body or Goods of the Heir, except it be by his false Plea. And upon the Lands he hath in possession, Execution is to be made presently, that the Plaintiff shall recover and hold the Land till he be satisfied the Debt. And for the Land in Reversion, that he shall have Execution of it when it doth happen to be in possession. And where Lands descend to divers Heirs, as on the part of the Father, and on the part of the Mother, in Gavelkind, or the like, they must all of them be equally charged. Dyer 393. Kelw. 61. Co. upon Lit. 102. 376.

2. The Heir is not chargeable in respect of any Frank-tenement descendible. And therefore if Lands be granted to J.S. and his heirs during the life of J.S. or Tenant for life doth grant his Estate to another during his own life, and he bind him and his Heirs to pay Debt, or do any other thing, and this Land descend to the Heir; this will not be chargeable. So neither will entailed Land be subject to such a Charge, Co. 10. 98.

For this, take these Cases.

9. What Pleas the Heir must plead, and how.

1. The Heir that is sued upon such a Deed of the Ancestor, must take heed to his Plea: And his safe way is, to confess the truth, and shew what Land it is that is descended to him in Fee-simple; and then he cannot be charged further in his other Land, Body or Goods. But if he plead, That nothing came to him by discent, and it be found against him, or Judgment go against him by Nihil dicit, Confession, Non-suit, or the like, or upon a Non est factum pleaded to the Deed of the Ancestor; in all these cases the Plaintiff after Judgment given may have Execution against the Body, Goods, or other Lands of the Heir, Plow. 440. Co. 5. 36. 8. 53. Dyer 85. 62. 344. 149.

2. If a Judgment be given against the Heir by Nihil dicit, Confession, or the like, and after a Scire facias is sued to have Execution; the Heir cannot now plead he had nothing by Discent, Dyer 344.

3. If a Debt be paid by the Executor, or released to him, and after the Heir is sued for this Debt; the Heir may plead this in Bar of the Action, Co. 10. 93.

StB. 11.

4. If the Plaintiff be Executor to the Debtee, and hath enough of the Goods and Chattels of the Ancestor to pay himself; he may plead this in bar to the Action, Fitz. Bar. 188.

Escheat

Escheat is, where a Tenant of Fee-simple Land is dead, and there is no Heir capable of the Land, then it shall escheat to the Lord. And as to this, take these things. Escheat, what?

1. When the Heirs be all dead, so that there is no Heir general or special: Or when the blood of the Ancestor is corrupt, as where the Ancestor is attainted for Felony or Treason, so that now no body can be Heir to him; in these cases the Lord may enter and take the Land by Escheat. Or if a Bastard die without issue of his body, and leave Land to descend, in which case he can have no Heir; the Lord shall have the Land by Escheat. (See Bastard.) And if the Tenant or Bastard in these cases be disseised and die, the Lord may enter. But if the Disseisor die, or alien the Land to another bona fide before Entry, the Lord may not enter. Bastard.

2. In cases of Treason, the Lord Proteſtor is to have the Land by Escheat; but in cases of Felony and other Escheats, the Lord of whom the Land is held shall have it.

3. Conditions, Uses, Rights of Entry and Action, regularly cannot escheat.

4. By this Escheat the Property of the Land is altered, and given to the Lord of the Land, who may enter or have an Escheat. For all these things, see 29 Aff. pl. 61. Co. 8. 42. Lit. 2. 22 Aff. pl. 49. 6 H. 7. 9. Co. 3. 1. upon Lit. 268. 312. 314. 13: See Forfeiture.

For answer hereunto, take these things.

1. Pigeons in a Dove-house, Fishes in a Pond, Conies in a Warren, Deer in a Park, where the Ancestor had the Inheritance, or but for life in the Pond, Warren, Park or Dove-house, will not go to the Executor, but to the Heir, or other that hath the Land wherein these things are. 11. What things shall come to the Heir from the Ancestor, or not, but to the Executor or some other, Executor.

2. Rents reserved on Leases made of the Lands descending, shall go to the Heir, not to the Executor.

3. If the Ancestor recover Land and Damages in an Action, or a Deed and Damages, and die before Execution; in this case the Heir shall have Execution for the Land or Deed, and the Executor for the Damages.

4. Heir-looms do signifie in some Countries all Implements of Household, as Tables, Presses, Cupboards, Bedsteads, Wainscotes, and such like, which by the Custom of that Country have belonged to a House certain descents; and these by that Custom are not to be inventoried, nor shall go to the Executor, but to the Heir with the House, Co. upon Lit. 183. Goldsb. 129. pl. 24. 12. Heir-looms what.

But see for a more full answer to this question in Testament, sect. 25. and Chattels, sect.

CHAP. LXXVI.

Of an Entry into Lands, or into Religion.

Entry, what.

The kinds.

Attorney.

Right or Title of Entry.

Sett. 1.
Where it is lawful, or not.
Where the Entry of one shall give advantage to another, or not.

Sett. 2.
Where an Entry into part shall gain the possession of

Entry into Lands is taken two ways. It is most properly taken for the taking or having of possession of Lands or Tenements: But it is also used for a Writ of Possession. The first is either in deed, or an actual Entry; when a man doth by himself, or some other by his appointment, actually enter into Lands, which is by setting his foot upon it, and claiming the Land. Or it is in Law; and so a congeal Claim is an Entry, for it amounts to, and is of the same force with an Entry in deed. The actual Entry may be made by a mans self, or by his Attorney by warrant from him that hath right of Entry; for which see Attorney. And he that hath a lawful power to enter, is said to have a Right or Title of Entry: For sometimes a man doth it by a Right of Entry, as a Disseise put out; and sometimes by a Title of Entry, as upon a Condition, or the like. And by this Entry, if he have Right, he brings the Possession and Right together: But if he have no Right, he doth gain no Property in the Land by the Entry in any case, but in the case of an Occupancie, whereby the Freehold is gained. See Occupancy. Terms of Law. Co. upon Lit. 253. 257. 243. 258. Dyer 337.

Where an Entry is lawful or not, See in Discontinuance, Forfeiture, Disseise, Condition, and other Titles. And where it is necessary, Co. upon Lit. 258.

If one Coparcener or Jointenant enter generally, or enter for himself and the rest, or in his own name and the names of the rest of the Jointenants or Coparceners, and the rest do agree to it, or do not disagree to it; this Entry will give advantage to the rest, and put them all into possession of the Land. But if one of them enter specially to his own use; as if Tenant in tail die, having two Daughters, and one of them enter and make a Feoffment of all the Land with Warranty, this Entry of the one Daughter will do the other Daughter no good at all; Lit. 160. Dyer 128. 53. 4 H. 7. 9. So if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee; the Entry of the Tenant for life shall enure him in Remainder. (Idem.) So the Entry of the Husband shall avail to the Wife to put her in possession, Nej 97.

And so it is if one have issue a Son and a Daughter by one woman, and a Son by another, and is seised of Capite Land, and devise all to the youngest Son and die, and then the youngest Son enter into all and die; in this case his Entry shall avail the eldest Son for a third part. And the Entry of one Tenant in Common shall be the Entry of the other; and that so to give him possession, that he may have an Action of Trespass. Adjudg. Smalls Case, M. 14 Jac. Com. B. And in all cases where the Entry is not lawfull, the Entry of one shall not benefit or advantage another, 1 H. 6. 5. 8 H. 6. 16.

If one have cause to enter into any Lands lying in divers Villages within one County, and he enter into a parcel of the Lands or Tenements that are in one Village, in the name of all the Lands and Tenements to which he hath right to enter within all the Villages of the same County; by this Entry he shall get the possession of all the same Lands, unless it be in some special cases hereafter set down; and much more, if all the Land lie in one Village. If therefore one disseise me of two Acres of Land, (though it be at several times) and I enter into one of them in the name of both; this is good for both. Lit. sett. 417. Dyer 337. 227. Co. super Lit. 252. 9 H. 7. 25.

The Entry must be made as the Action must be brought: And therefore if the Land lie in several Counties, as there must be several Actions, so there must be several Entries, 9 H. 7. 25. Co. on Lit. 15.

If one make a Feoffment of several parcels of Land in one County on Condition, and the Condition is broken; in this case an Entry into parcel in the name of all the rest, is good for all. But if the Feoffment were made of several Lands at several times with several Conditions; there such an Entry is not good for any more but what he doth enter upon, 9 H. 7. 25. Co. upon Lit. 252.

If Lands be in the occupation of A. B. C. and a stranger enter into the Land in the occupation of A. generally, and without any special Declaration in the name of all the Lands in the occupation of B. and C. this Entry doth not gain the possession of the Lands in the occupation of B. and C. But by a special Declaration it may be good for all, by Just. Hutton, 21 Jac. at Sarum-Assises. Co. upon Lit. 251. And yet if one disseise me of two Acres of Land, and he let the same to three several persons for life; in this case if I will enter, I must enter upon some of the Land in every one of their occupations, and no special Entry will serve here. But if the Leases were made to three persons for years; in this case a special Entry upon one of them in the name of all the rest, will gain the possession of the whole, Co. super Lit. 252.

If one disseise me of Land lying in three Villages in one County, and he levy a Fine of the Land in one Village, and after I enter into the Land of one of the other Villages in the name of all the rest; this is no good Entry for to reduce the Possession of the Land of which the Fine was levied, but there must be a particular Entry upon that Land, because the Conusee is in by Title, Dyer 337.

If two men severally do disseise me of two Acres, and I enter into one of these Acres in the name of both; this is good only for that whereupon I put my foot, and not for the other. But if these two Acres come after into one hand, then the Entry upon one in the name of both, will reduce the Possession of both, 9 H. 7. 25. Co. super Lit. 252. And therefore if in the first case I enter, and make a Lease of the two Acres; this Lease will be good only for the Acre I do enter upon, and not for the other, Curia M. 8 Jac.

If my Father die seised of Land in B. he had in his own right, and of other Land he had jointly with my Mother, my Mother being alive, I enter into that he had in his own right in the name of both Lands; this Entry will not give me a possession into the other Land to which I have neither Right nor Title, 39 Ass. pl. 16. And in all cases where-ever a man doth intend by his Entry into part to gain the Possession, he must be sure to make his Entry specially, (that is) in that part in the name of the whole, Co. upon Lit. 252.

He that hath right to enter into Land, must enter within twenty years of his right first accrued, if there be no let by Infancy, Coverture, Imprisonment, Non-sane-memory, or his being beyond Sea. If so, then within twenty years of that Impediment removed. And after this time he cannot enter, his Entry is gone, 21 Jac. ch. 16.

When a man must enter that hath Right.

Of Entry in Religion:

Entry in Religion is, where a man doth enter into a Profession of any Religious Popish Order of Friars, Monks, or the like. This Religious life, in judgment of our Law, is a Spiritual or Civil death; and he that doth intend so to do, may then make his Will and appoint an Executor. And yet if at any time after he shall leave this Profession again, then he shall have all his Lands and Goods in statu quo primum; and this is called a Dearthment, St. 31 H. 8. 6.

In Suits.

THis word is taken two ways. 1. Either for some fault committed in some Suit, or for a Writ of Error; which is a Writ given to the party grieved, for the relief of the party grieved by this Error. In the first sense Error is sometimes in matter of fact, as when one of the parties were dead at the time when Judgment was given: And this point, if it come to issue, is to be tried by Jury; and so of the like Errors. Or it is where there is any discontinuance or undue proceeding in the Suit, which appeareth by the Record it self. And sometimes in matter of Law, which is when it appeareth by the Record as the Case is there, that Judgment was not given according to Law. And these two last sorts of Errors appearing upon the Records themselves are to be tried and determined by the Judges themselves of the same, or of some other Court.

Also the Error is sometimes in the process and proceeding of the Suit before Judgment; and then it will overthrow and nullifie the whole Record. And sometimes it is in the very Judgment it self; and then also it mairs all the Record. And sometimes it is in the Execution after Judgment only; and then the Execution only shall be avoided, and the Proceedings before the Judgment, and the Judgment are good, and a new Execution may be made out. And where there are two Judgments, as in some cases there are, there the last may be avoided, and the first may stand good. And in case where Execution is avoided, Restitution must be made of all that the Sheriff hath levied by vertue of any such Restitution, F.N.B. 120. Co. upon Lit. 259. 288. Finches ley 468. 12 Ed. 4. 11. Stat. 9 R. 3. c. 3. 29 Eliz. 2. 27 Eliz. 3 fac. 8. Crompt. Jur. 12. 13. 29. 30. 53. Errors may be also in Fines and Common-Recoveries, St. 23 Eliz. c. 3. 27 Eliz. 9.

For this, what shall be Error in any Suit, or not, See Hob. Rep. 7, 8. Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 3. 65. 69. 128. 201. and in very many other Books. And what shall be said Error in Fines and Common-Recoveries, See Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 3. 65. 66. 128. 30. 35. 36. Co. 3. 1. 2. 15. 4. 93. 11. 38. 5. 39. 44. 111. 9. 16. 11. 40. 8. 58. March Rep. f. 7. 15. 20. 24. 25. 56. 88. 111. 140. and divers other places.

Some Errors (as before is shewed) may be reformed in the same Court where the Suit is depending; Some must be reformed in other Courts. The Errors in the Court of Common-Pleas are to be reformed in the Upper-Bench: The Errors in the Upper-Bench are to be reformed in the Exchequer-Chamber: The Errors in the Exchequer-Chamber, or in any other Court, may be examined and reformed in the Parliament. The Errors in the Courts of Corporate-Towns, Cities, County-Courts, and Hundred-Courts, may be reformed in the Upper-Bench or Common-Pleas: And an Error in Process in a Suit, may be reformed in the same Term in the Court where the Suit is depending, Stat. 27 Eliz. 8. Dyer 250. F.N.B. 21. Plow. 393. 14 H. 7. 1. 7 H. 9. 28. 23 Eliz. 3. 31 Eliz. 1. 31 Ed. 3. 12. 28 Ed. 3. 10. 1 H. 4. 15: Co. 3. 70. 111. 34. 4. 53. and other Books.

Amendment is, where there is some Error escaped in the Process and Proceedings of a Suit. There in some cases the Judges may amend it, and prevent the bringing of the Writ of Error. For this see Stat. 14 Ed. 3. 6. 9 H. 3. 4. 4 H. 6. 3. 8 H. 6. 12. 15.

There are some Errors in the Proceedings of Suits, that the Judges of the Courts where the Suits are ought to take notice of, and to stop the Proceedings of the Suit for them. And therefore the Rule is, That of all apparent faults proceeding from the Action, as in false Latine, default of Form in the Writ, Insufficiencie in an Office or Indictment, misawarding of Process, (as if an Exigent go forth where none lieth) Impossibility in the Plea, as in Account supposing him to be his Receiver for for seven years, and the Defendant pleads fully accounted such a day, which is the first day of the seven years. In these cases the Court (ex officio) is to take notice of it to abate the Writ, award Superfedeas upon such Offices, Indictments, or Process to stay Judgment, if the Defendants Plea be found against him, &c. and this without exception taken, or motion made by the party. And therefore although he that casteth an Effoin cannot plead in Abatement of the Writ by way of Plea, yet if it be a matter apparent to the Court, any stranger as Amicus Curia may do it, and the Court is bound to abate it, though the Tenant or Defendant make default. And on the other side, the Judge is to see that either party in a Suit is to be hurt, by any Error of a Clerk of the Court and by his mistake; as where a good Original Writ is ill entred in the Roll; as where the Writ is against A. and B. and the whole Process against B. and C. Or a Scire facias out of a Fine and part of the Land omitted: Or where the Clerk writeth a syllable or a letter too little, or too much: Or where any Error is assigned by razing, enterlining, adding, subtracting, or diminishing of words, Letters, titles, or parcel of letters in any Record, Process or Warrant of Attorney, Original Writ, or Judicial Pannel or Return, though it appear suspicious to the Judges. For, for such things as these no Judgment or Record is to be reversed or adnulled for Error assigned therein; but the Judges of the same Court, before or after Judgment, may and must amend it.

But in case of Appeals and Indictments for Treason and Felony, and Outlawries thereupon, and after Demurrer joined and entred; the same Court wherein the Suit is depending may amend all imperfections and want of form, other then those which the party demurring shall particularly set down in his Demurrer. And after Verdict given in any cause on the one side or the other, no prejudice shall be to either party because of any variance in form only between the parts of the Record, or for lack of Averment of any life, so the party be alive, and it be proved upon examination: Or by reason any Writ of Venire facias, Habeas corpora, or Distingas is awarded to a wrong Officer: Or by reason the Visne is misawarded; or by reason that any of the Jury are misnamed; or in any Return, so as upon examination it appear to be the same person; or by reason of lack of Entry of the Return, or Mis-return, so as upon examination it appear it was duly done: Or by reason that the Plaintiff in an Ejectione firme, or any personal Suit, being an Infant, did appear by Attorney therein. For all these things must be amended by the Judges of the same Court. But for all these things, See more *Stat. 21 Jac. 13. 4 H. 6. 3. 14 Ed. 3. 6. 9 H. 5. 4. 4 H. 6. 3. 8 H. 6. 12. 15. 32 H. 8. 10. 18 Eliz. 13. 11 H. 4. 3. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 32. Most Mistakes and Errors in Fines and Common-Recoveries, are not fatal, but amendable: For there the Rule is, Consensus tollit Errorem; Consent takes away Error. But see for this, Brownl. Rep. f. 30. 35. 36. 80. 57. 130. 144. 151. 149. 136. 200. 233. 2 par. 101. 103. 270. 273. Co. 5. 44. 38. 2. 57. 77. 1. 76. 8. 58. 11. 69. 77. 23. Eliz. 3. 27 Eliz. 9.

Self. 2.

The manner of Proceeding herein, is: First, the Record is removed out of the Court wherein the Suit is, into that Court where the Error is to be redressed: And there in some cases Bail is to be put in by the Prosecutor in the Writ of Error; and then he is to assign his Errors, and the Court is to allow of them as fit to be questioned: And then the Plaintiff in the first Suit for whom the Judgment was given, is to be warned by a Scire facias to come in, and to defend it and maintain his Judgment. And to this he may plead, That there is no Error; or what he will elset 3 Jac. 8. 27 Eliz. 8. F.N.B. 120. Plaw. 393. Dyer 250. But the Act of March 11. 1649. is at an end.

False Judgment
what.

False Judgment, is a Writ lying where an erroneous Judgment is given in any inferior Court that is not a Court of Record, as County, Hundred-Court, or Court-Baron, then the party grieved by the Judgment may have this Writ, and remove all the Process of the Suit into the Common-Pleas, and there it shall be examined: And if it be found, the Judgment shall be reversed, and the Suitors or Judges of the Court shall be amerced. And the Errors in this Court are and may be in the kinds thereof, as the Errors of other Courts, Marl. c. 20. F.N.B. 18. Co. on Lit. 188.

CHAP. LXXVIII.

Of an Exchange.

1. Exchange or Exchange, what.

N Exchange is the mutual grant of equal Interests the one in exchange for the other. Or it is, where a man is seised or possessed of Land in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years, or is possessed of Goods, and another is seised or possessed of other Lands, or possessed of other Goods in the like manner, and they do exchange their Lands or Goods the one for the other. And in this there is a double Grant; for each of them doth grant that which is his, to the other. Terms of the Law, tit. Exchange. Finches ley 27.

2. The effect
and fruit of it.

This manner of conveyance (which heretofore was very frequent) is sometimes made by word without any writing; and sometimes it is made by Deed or in writing: And which way soever it be made, it must be made by this word [Exchange], which is a word so appropriated to this thing, as the word [Frankmarriage] is to a gift in Frankmarriage; neither of which can be made or described by any circumlocution, Brownlows Rep. 1 par. 40. Co. super Lit. 50. Perk. sect. 153.

Condition.

Warranty.

The fruit and effect of an Exchange is, that it doth give the interest, and after the property of the things exchanged to either party, according to the Agreement. And if the Exchange be of Lands or Tenements of any Estate of Inheritance or Freehold, whether it be by word or deed, it hath a Condition and a Warranty in Law incident and annexed to it as a thing made by the word Exchange, and tacite implied in every grant of Exchange: A Condition to give a Re-entry upon all the Land given in exchange, if he be put out of all or part of the Land taken in exchange, and a Warranty to enable him to vouch and to recover over in value so much of his own Land again given in exchange, as shall be recovered from him of the Land taken in exchange, if he be sued for it, Co. 4. 121. 15 E. 4. 3. 9 E. 4. 21. Bro. Exchange in tot. Fitz. Exchange in toto.

Assignee.

So that upon every Exchange, either party, if he be put out of or lose by Action the Land he taketh in Exchange, hath a double remedy against the other. And yet this remedy doth go only in the Privy, and shall not go to an Assignee: As if A. exchange Land with B. and B. be put out of all or part of the Land upon a Title paramount by a Recovery in a real Action or otherwise; in this case B. may either enter upon his own Land again which he gave in Exchange, or else if it be in an Action brought, he may vouch A. upon the Warranty in Law, and shall recover as much in value against him of the Land he gave, as he hath lost of the Land he took in Exchange. But if B. alien his Land taken in Exchange to C. and C. be put out of all or part of the Land upon a Title paramount; C. in this case can neither enter upon the Land given to A. in Exchange upon the Condition in Law, nor vouch A. to Warranty and recover over in value upon the Warranty in Law. And yet A. in this case shall have the like remedy against C. the Alienee upon the Condition and Warranty both, as he had against B. But if A. himself implead C. for the Land he gave to B. in Exchange, C. may make use of this Warranty in Law by way of Rebutter against A.

Rebutter

And in all these cases, where one of the parties is put out of all or part of the Land, or out of part of the Estate by Entry, and the other party enter upon the others

Land

Land upon the Condition in Law, he may enter upon the whole Land, and avoid the whole Exchange. But if he be impleaded for a part only, or for the whole, and a part only be recovered from him; in this case he shall recover so much in value of the other Land only as he hath lost, and no more. As if an Exchange be of three Acres for three Acres, and after one of the parties is put out of one of the Acres by the Entry of a stranger; in this case he may enter upon the whole three Acres he had given in Exchange, and so avoid the whole Exchange if he will. And if A. and B. be Jointenants for life, and the Fee-simple to the Heirs of A. and A. exchange this Land with C. in Fee, and then die, and B. enter and avoid the Exchange for his life (as he may) in this case C. may avoid the whole Exchange, and enter upon his own three Acres again. So if he in Reversion disseise his Tenant for life, and then exchange the Land, and after the Tenant for life enter; in this case the other party may defeat the whole Exchange. But in this case of an Exchange of three Acres for three Acres, if one of the Acres were gained by Disseisin, and the Disseisee bring an Assize and doth recover it against the Disseisor; in this case if he vouch over the other party to the Exchange, he shall recover so much in value only of the three Acres he gave in Exchange, as the Acre he hath lost, and no more.

To the perfection of an Exchange, and to make things to pass by this kind of Conveyance, these things are requisite. 1. That the persons or parties thereunto be able to give and take, and not disabled by any special impediment. And for this it must be known, that such persons as may be Grantors and Grantees, may make Exchanges; and such persons as are disabled to grant, are disabled to make Exchanges. See Grant Ramb. 4.

An Exchange made between the King and a Subject is good, albeit the King hold his Land in one capacity, and the Subject in another, Ca. super Lit. 51.

An Exchange made between an Infant and another is not void, but voidable only; for the Infant at his full age may affirm or avoid it at his election, Idem.

An Exchange made between a Tenant in tail and another, is not void, but voidable; for it is good against himself during his life, and his Issue at his full age may affirm or avoid it at his election, Bro. Exchange 9. Perk. sect. 279.

An Exchange made between a man de non sane memorie and another, is not void, but voidable; for it is good against him, but his Heir may avoid or affirm it at his election, Bro. Exchange 9.

A man that doth hold Land in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life in the right of his wife, may exchange this Land, and the Exchange will be good as long as he and his wife doth live. And he with his wife may exchange it for longer time, and the Exchange is good against him; but his wife after his death may affirm or avoid it if she will, Bro. idem. Perk. sect. 279.

One Parson or Vicar may exchange his Church or Benefice with another, and this Exchange is good, Perk. sect. 288.

The Disseisor and Disseisee may joyn together and exchange the land whereof the disseisin was made with a stranger for other land: but if it be made out of the land and before the entry of the disseisee it shall not bind the disseisee, for he may avoid it. And a disseisor cannot exchange the land he hath gotten by disseisin with the disseisee for other land, for this exchange is void, unless it be by indenture, or fine, that it may work by way of estoppel, Perk. sect. 280. 273.

The Lessor and Lessee may joyn together and exchange the Land leased for other Land, and this is good; for it shall be said to be the Surrender of the Lessee to the Lessor, and the Exchange of the Lessor; and therefore the Lessee (as it seems) shall have nothing to do with the Land taken in exchange. Sed quare of that. Perk. sect. 279.

Jointenants for life, the Fee to one of them, may exchange their land with a stranger for other land to hold in the same nature, and the Exchange is good. But Jointenants, Tenants in common, and Coparceners cannot exchange the lands they do so hold with another, before they have made partition, Perk. sect. 277. 281.

If A. and B. be Jointenants for life, the Fee to A. and A. exchange the whole land with another for other land; this is good only for his moiety, as some have said: But it seems notwithstanding it is good for the whole, until it be avoided by the other Jointenant, Perk. sect. 277.

2. In respect of the matter whereof it is made, or the nature of the thing exchanged. And of what things and estates an Exchange may be made,

The second thing required in a good Exchange is, that the things exchanged be such as whereof an Exchange may be made. And for this it must be known, that an Exchange may be made of things of the same nature, as of a temporal thing for a temporal thing, a spiritual thing for a spiritual thing; as a house for a house, land for land, a Manor for a Manor, a Church for a Church, Rent for Rent, Common for Common, a Horse for a Horse, one Piece of Plate for another, or the like: Or it may be made of things of a divers nature; as of a temporal thing for a spiritual, as of a House for Land or Rent; a Chamber in a house for Common, or for a Reversion, Seignior, or Advowson; of Land or Rent for a Right of Land, or Release of Right; of an Advowson for Land; of a Rent for a Way; of a Horse for a Piece of Plate; of a Gown for a Horse, or the like. And Exchanges made of these things, albeit the things exchanged do lie in divers Counties, are good. Also a Seignior by Homage and Fealty, or the like, which is not valuable, may be exchanged for Land, Rent, or any other such like thing. So may a Seignior by Divine service. But a Seignior in Frankalmoigne cannot be exchanged with any but the Tenant of the Land that doth hold by the Tenure. And Houses, Manors, Lands, Rents, Commons, Seignior, Reversions, and the like, may be exchanged in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years. So that an Exchange may be of an Inheritance for an Inheritance, of a Frank-tenement for a Frank-tenement, and of Chattels real for Chattels real. Perk. sect. 263. 261. 262. 266. 258. Lit. sect. 62. Co. super Lit. 51. 52. Perk. sect. 259. 260. 258.

If one grant White-acre in Exchange for Black-acre lying within the same, or in two Counties, this is a good Exchange. So if I grant a Rent-charge issuing out of my land in Exchange to J. S. for an Acre of his land, &c. this is a good Exchange. So if I have a Rent issuing out of the land of J. S. and I grant this to J. K. in Exchange for Land or other Rent; this Exchange is good, when the Tenant hath attorned to the Grant of the Rent. So if one have a Rent out of my Land in Fee, and I have the Land in Fee, and I grant the Land in Exchange for the Rent; it seems this is a good Exchange. But if one grant me a Manor or Land, and I in Exchange for the same Manor or Land grant unto him a Rent de novo issuing out of the same Land or Manor, this cannot take effect as an Exchange. So if one release his Estovers that he hath in such a Wood, and deliver the Release in Exchange for Land given to him in Exchange for the same Release; this is a good Exchange. Perk. sect. 244. Idem 263. 3 E. 4. 10. 9 E. 4. 21. 9 E. 4. 21. Perk. sect. 262. 266. Fitz. Exchange 16.

If there be a Disfeisor and Disfeisee, and the Disfeisee release his right to the Disfeisor in Exchange for other Land, this is a good Exchange. So if the Disfeisor of an Acre of land enfeoff a stranger of the same Acre of land, and the Feoffee give to the Disfeisee an Acre of land in Fee in Exchange for a Release of all his right in the Acre of land of which he was disfeised; this is a good Exchange. Perk. sect. 271. Idem 282. But if the Disfeisee grant his right to a stranger that hath nothing in the land, in Exchange for an Acre of land; this Exchange is not good, neither shall the stranger take any thing by this Grant, Idem sect. 271. If there be Lord and Tenant by Fealty, and Twelve pence Rent, and the Lord exchange the Seignior with the Tenant for the Tenancie, or à converso, by Deed indented; this is held by some to be a good Exchange, Perk. sect. 260. If I have a Rent issuing out of the land of J. S. and I grant or release the same land to J. S. in Exchange for other land; this is a good Exchange. So if I release the same Rent unto him in Exchange for a Way over his ground; this is a good Exchange, Perk. sect. 267. If I be seised of lands to which J. S. hath a right of Action, and I give to him other land for a release of his right; this is a good Exchange. And the same Law is of an Exchange of Land, and an Advowson by Deed indented, for a Release of right in another Advowson to an Usurper, when his Incumbent hath been in possession of the Church six moneths, Idem 268, 269. If two Parsons of a Church make an Exchange of their Benefices by words of Exchange, and each of them resign his Benefice into the hands of the Bishop to the same intent, and the Patrons present accordingly, and the Presentations are per viam permutationis; this is a good Exchange, Perk. sect. 257.

If three Acres of Land with an Advowson Appendant be given in Exchange by T. K. to J. S. for a Chamber to be assigned by the said J. S. at the election of T. K. and he assign two Chambers, and T. K. chuse and enter upon one, and J. S. enter upon the Land; this Exchange is good, notwithstanding the incertainty. So if J. S. give his Manor of A. to T. K. in Exchange for his Manor of B. or for his Manor of C. and he enter upon one of these Manors, and T. K. enter upon the Manor of A.; this Exchange is good, Park. sess. 264, 265.

Out of all which, these things by the way, may be observed.

1. That the things exchanged need not to be in esse at the time of Exchange made, for a man may grant a Rent de novo out of his Land in Exchange for a Manor. And yet if I grant to another the Manor of A. for the Manor of B. which he is to have after his Fathers death by descent, it seems this Exchange is void, Co. super Litt. 50. Park. sess. 265.

2. There needs no Transmutation of Possession, for a Release of Rent, Estovers, or Right of Land, for Land is good.

3. The things exchanged need not to be of one nature, so as they concern Lands or Tenements, for Land may be exchanged for Rent, Common, or any other Inheritance which doth concern Lands or Tenements, or Spiritual for Temporal things, as Tithes: A Tenure by Divine Service for Land, or a Temporal Seignior. But Annuities, and such like things, which charge the person onely, and do not concern Lands or Tenements, or Goods and Chattels, cannot be exchanged for Land.

The third thing required in a good Exchange is, That it be made in that manner and order, that Law doth require, wherein these things are to be known.

1. That if all or part of the things whereof the Exchange is made, do lie in several Counties; or if all or part of the things whereof the Exchange is, be such as lie in grant and not in Livery, albeit it be in the same County; in these cases the Exchange must be made by Deed indented in Writing. But where the Exchange is of Lands, and of Lands lying in the same County, albeit it be of any Estate of Inheritance or free hold, yet it may be by word of mouth without writing. And so also may it be when the things exchanged do lie in divers Counties, when the Exchange is made onely for a term of years: And therefore if an Exchange be made between J. S. and T. K. of Lands lying in one and the same County in Fee, or for life, it may be by word of mouth: But if all or part of the Lands of J. S. lie in one County, and all or part of the Lands of T. K. do lie in another County, the Exchange must be made by Deed indented. If an Exchange be made of Rent for Land, and the Land out of which the Rent is issuing, and the Land given in Exchange for it do both lie in one County; this Exchange cannot be good without Deed: So if an Exchange be made of the Reversion of an Acre of Land for three shillings of Rent issuing out of another Acre of Land, and both Acres are in one County; this Exchange must be made by Deed indented, or it will not be good. So if an Exchange be made of an Acre of Land, and a Rent out of another Acre, for another Acre of Land and Common for three Beasts, and all is in one and the same County, this Exchange must be by Deed indented, or it will not be good. But if I be seised of a Manor to which I have Common Appendant or Appurtenant, and T. K. is seised of another Manor to which he hath a Villain Regardant, and both the Manors are in one County, an Exchange may be made of these Manors by word of mouth without writing, and the Common and Villain will pass as incidents well enough. And yet if J. S. hath an Office whereunto Land doth belong, and T. K. hath Rent issuing out of the Land of a stranger, and all the Land is in one County, and the Office is to be used and occupied in the same County; if these things be exchanged, it must be by Deed indented, Park. sess. 244. Co. super Litt. 51, 52. Litt. sess. 61. Co. 9. 14. Park. sess. 247, 248, 249, 250, 246.

2. The word [Exchange] or [Exchanges] must be had and used between the parties in the making of the Exchange. And grant to you Whiteacre. To have and to hold to you and your Heirs in Exchange for Blackacre: And in consideration hereof you grant to me and my Heirs Blackacre in Exchange for Whiteacre, for this word is so individually requir'd as it cannot be supplied by any other word, neither

3. In respect of the manner of the making of the Exchange: And where it shall be good without Deed, or not:

Exch. of a villanage to villanage is good without deed, as the former.

will any Averment that it was in Exchange, help in this case. And therefore if A. by Deed indented, give to B. an Acre of Land in Fee-simple, or for life, and by the same Deed B. doth give to A. another Acre of Land in the same manner, this cannot count as an Exchange: And therefore if no Livery of Seisin, so as it may take effect by way of Grant, it is utterly void. But by this means, Lands may be granted from one to another, for there needs no Livery of Seisin. So if an Exchange be made by words between two of Lands in one County, and before their Entry, Indentures are made between them of the same Lands without words of Exchange, and no Livery of Seisin is made; this shall not pass by way of Exchange: And yet it hath been held by some, that Permutatio, or some other word of like effect may supply this word Exchange, Co. super Lit. 50, 51. Perk. fess. 252, 253. 92d. 421. Fitz. Exchange 12.

3. That if any Rent, Reversion, Seignior, or the like, be granted by either party, that then the Tenant do Attorn to the Grant, for that Attornment is requisite in this case. And yet in the case of the Grant of Land, in Possession, in Exchange, no Livery of Seisin is needful. Neither is it needful that either party to the Exchange come to the thing given to him in Exchange, by the same mean and manner of Assurance: For if Lessee for life of one Acre, give another Acre to his Lessor, in Tail, in Exchange for a Release from him of that Acre, To have and to hold in Tail in like manner; this is a good Exchange, Perk. fess. 259. 263. 289. 276.

An Exchange may be made to take effect in presenti, as well as in passenti, for if an Exchange be made between me and T. K. That after the Feast of Easter T. K. shall have my Manor of Dals in exchange for his Manor of Sals, this is a good Exchange, Perk. fess. 265.

If an Exchange be made in writing of Land, and it doth limit and express no estate, that either party shall have in the thing exchanged, yet this is a good Exchange. But if an estate for life be limited expressly to one, and no express estate is limited to the other; this is not a good Exchange, as shall be shewed in the next place, 19 H. 6.

27. Perk. fess. 275. The fourth thing required in a good Exchange, is Equality of Estate, viz. That either party have the like kinde of estate of the thing exchanged; so that if one have an estate in Fee-simple, the other have so likewise, and so for other estates: For if the one grant that the other shall have his Land in Fee-simple, for the Land which he hath of the other in Fee-tail; or that the one shall have in the one Land Fee-tail, and the other in the other Land but for term of life; or that the one shall have in the one Land Fee-tail general, and the other in the other Land Fee-tail special; or that the one shall have in the one Land for life, and the other in the other Land but for years; these Exchanges are void, and cannot take effect as Exchanges, Fitz. Exchange 14. 2d. Inst. fess. 64, 65. Co. super Lit. 50, 51. Perk. fess. 276. And therefore if the Lord release to his Tenant his Services in Tail, in Exchange for other Lands given to the Lord in Exchange in Tail also; this Exchange is void, for by this Release made by the Lord the Services are gone for ever, Perk. fess. 283. So if Tenant for his own life exchange with him that is Tenant for life of another; this is not a good Exchange. And by the same reason it should seem if Lessee for twenty years of his Land Exchange with another for other Land for forty years, that this should not be a good Exchange, Perk. fess. 275. Fincles Ley 29. But if Lessee for life be of an Acre of Land, and he give another Acre of Land to his Lessor in Fee-tail in Exchange for a Release of all his Right in the Acre that he holdeth for term of his life, To hold to him and the Heirs of his body engendred; this is a good Exchange, Perk. fess. 276. Or if Tenant for his own life exchange with him that is Tenant in Tail after possibility of Issue extinct; this Exchange is good, Co. lit. 89. And yet if an estate for life be expressed to the one party upon the Exchange, and no estate is expressed to the other party; it is said, that this Exchange is not good, and yet where no estate is expressed, the party shall have an estate for his own life, Perk. fess. 275. 19 H. 6. 27.

But in these cases it is not necessary that the parties to the Exchange, be seized of an equal estate at the time of the Exchange made; for if Tenant in Tail or Husband in right of his Wife, exchange their Land in Fee-simple, with another for Lands he hath in Fee-simple; this is a good Exchange until it be avoided by the issue or the the Wife, Co. super Littl. 511. Perk. fect. 289. Littl. fect. 65. Perk. fect. 280, 281: Neither is it necessary that both Estates be in possession, for one may grant an Acre in possession in exchange for an Acre in Reversion, and this Exchange is good, Idem. Neither is it necessary that there be an equality in the value or quantity of the Lands exchanged, for if the Land of one of the parties be worth one hundred pound, and the Land of the other but ten pound, or the Land of one of the parties be one hundred Acres, and the Land of the other but ten Acres, if the Estates given be equal, the Exchange is good, Idem. Neither is equality in the quality or manner of the Estates requisite, Idem. For if two Joyntnants be in Fee of an Acre of Land, and they grant that Acre to another in exchange for other Lands, To have and to hold a Moyety to one of them and his Heirs, and a Moyety to the other and his Heirs, which is an Estate in Common; or two men give Lands in exchange to A. and his Heirs, for Lands from A. to them two and their Heirs, albeit the one party hath a Joynt estate, and the other a Sole estate, yet the Exchange is good. The like Law is if the Land of one of the parties be of a defeasible Title, and the Land of the other of an undefeasible Title, this Exchange is good till it be avoided.

The fifth and last thing required in a good Exchange is, That there be an execution and perfection of the Exchange by Entry or Claim in the life time of the parties, viz. That both the parties to the same Exchange, do enter into the things taken in Exchange; if they be such things as they may enter into, for until the Exchange be executed by Entry, or the like, the parties thereunto have no Freehold in Deed, or in Law, in the things exchanged, albeit the same things do lie in one County: And if either of the parties die before he enter into the Lands by him taken in Exchange, hereby the whole Exchange is become void, if his Heir will; but if one of the parties enter, he shall not first begin to avoid the Exchange. But if the parties enter at any time, during their lives, it is sufficient, unless the possession be before divested by an elder Title, as by Entry for a Condition broken, Entry by a Disseisor or his Heir, or the like, and not re-vested again before the Entry. As if an Exchange be had between two of Land, and before their Entry by force of the Exchange they are, or one of them is disseised of the Land exchanged, and the Disseisor die seised thereof, and then they enter according to the Exchange, and put out the Heir of the Disseisor, this shall not be said to be an execution of the Exchange; but if the Disseisor have recovered the same Land against the Heir of the Disseisor by Writ of Entry, and have Execution, then he may execute the Exchange by Entry: And in case where a Reversion, Rent, or Seignior, is granted in Exchange, it must be perfected and executed by the Attornment of the Tenant in the life time of the parties, otherwise the Exchange is not good; but in this case after Attornment is made, it seems the Exchange is perfect without any Entry or Claim, Co. super Littl. 50, 51. Co. 1. 98. 105. Perk. fect. 284. 286. 292. 289.

If two Parsons exchange their Churches, and resign them into the Bishops hands, this is not a perfect Exchange until they be inducted; and therefore if either of them die before they be both inducted, the Exchange is void, Perk. fect. 257.

Where a Deed shall take effect as an Exchange, there must be all the Conditions before mentioned in the case. And yet note that where one thing is granted for another in the nature of an Exchange, and for some of the causes aforesaid, the things cannot pass by way of Exchange, there they may pass notwithstanding by way of Grant, and the Deed may take effect to other purposes, albeit it may not enure and take effect as an Exchange. And therefore if two be seised of several Acres of Land, and the one of them by Deed doth give his Acre to the other, and the other his Acre to him without any word of Exchange, and each of them doth make Livery of Seisin to the other; in this case albeit the Acres will not pass by way of Exchange, yet will they pass by way of Grant. And in this case, if no Livery of Seisin be made, either of them shall hold the Lands granted at will onely. And in like manner it is if two agree to exchange Land, and after each of them levy a Fine or make a Feoffment of the Land to other; by this the Land will pass each to other, but not by way of Exchange. So if A. and B. his Wife, and C. and D. his Wife agree to

3. In respect of the Execution of it.

4. When a Deed shall take effect as an Exchange, or not.

Exchange Lands, and A. and B. enter into the Land, they are to have in exchange, and then they do make a Feoffment of their own Land unto C. and his Father, and not to C. and D. his Wife; this shall not enure as an Exchange, and therefore C. and D. may enter upon their own Land again; but the Feoffment is good. And if one assign a Woman her Dower in exchange for Land; this shall not take effect as an Exchange, but it shall enure to be a good Assignment of Dower, Perk. Sess. 255, 256.

Fitz. Exchange 14. Perk. Sess. 272.

5. How an Exchange shall be construed and taken,

If two do exchange Land by Deed, and limit no Estates, this shall be taken for Estates for life, and the Exchange is good; but if an Express estate be limited to one, and no Express estate to the other, it is said this is not good, and that construction of Law will not help it. 19 H. 6. 27. Perk. Sess. 275.

If an Exchange be made between two men of two Acres of Land by Deed, and in the habendum, it is set down that each of them shall have the Acres given in exchange with divers other Acres not expressed in the premises; this addition shall be taken as surplusage, and the Exchange shall be good for the two Acres. See more in Exposition of Deeds, Perk. Sess. 251.

6. Where an Exchange shall be determined, or the nature of it changed by matter Express facto, and how, and where not.

If after an Exchange is made before or after the parties enter, all, or part of the Land given to either party be recovered from him upon an elder Title, as by an Entry upon a Condition broken, alienation in Mortmain, or upon a Disseisin; in these cases if that party enter again upon his own Land, which he gave in exchange (as he may) hereby the whole Exchange is determined. But if after the Exchange is perfect, one of the parties do enter upon the Land, he doth give in exchange, this doth not make void the Exchange, neither may the other party hereupon enter upon the Land he doth give in exchange, but he may have an Assize, or an Action of Trespass against the other: And yet if an exchange of a Common for a Way, or a Rent, or the like, if the one party deny the Common, it hath been said the other party may deny the Way, or the Rent. Sed quere. Perk. Sess. 286. Co. 4. 122. Perk. Sess. 299. Broo. Exchange 12. Perk. Sess. 299.

If an Exchange be made of Fee between two of a Manor, whereof the one half is in Tail, and the other half is in Fee-simple, and the Tenant in Tail that made the Exchange, die; and his issue disagree to it, so that the Exchange of the tailed Land is become void; this doth determine the whole Exchange, for when an Exchange becometh void in part, it becometh void in all, and until it be avoided it is good for all. As if one be seised of White-acre, and he exchange White-acre and Black-acre (which is none of his) with another for two other Acres, this shall continue for a good Exchange, and not be avoided until he that hath right to Black-acre doth evict him that hath it in exchange, Broo. Exchange 8. Perk. Sess. 297.

If an Exchange be made by Tenant in Tail, and his issue after his death wave the possession of all or part of the Land taken in Exchange, and disagree to the Exchange, hereby the whole Exchange is determined. So if the Wife after the Husbands death, the Infant at his full age, or the Heir of him that is de non sane memorie disagree to the Exchange of the Husband, the Infant, or him that is de non sane memorie, hereby the whole Exchange is determined, and no subsequent Agreement can make it good again, Co. 4. 122. Perk. Sess. 296. 294. 290. 298.

If two do make an Exchange by word of mouth, and after before either of them enter, they make Indentures of the Lands exchanged, and grant the same from one to another; it seems hereby the nature of the Exchange is changed, and the Exchange determined, 15 Ed. 4. 3.

7. Who may take advantage of a void or avoidable Exchange, or not, and when.
Infant.
Tenant in Tail.
Husband and Wife.

The parties themselves, and all privies and strangers for the most part may take advantage of such Exchanges as are void for the defects before-named; but when the Exchange is onely voidable, contra. And therefore when an Exchange is made by an Infant; the Infant himself at his full age, or his Heir, and none other may avoid it: And when an Exchange is made by a Tenant in Tail, the Issue in Tail after the death of his Ancestor, and none other may avoid it. And when an Exchange is made by the Husband, or Husband and Wife of the Wives Land, the Wife after the Husbands death, or Heir of the Wife after her death, and none other may avoid it. And when an Exchange is made by a man of non sane memorie, his Heir after his death and and none other may avoid it. But in all these cases of Infant, Tenant in Tail, Woman Covert, and a man de non sane memorie, and where Lands are recovered by an elder Title, the other party may not enter, and avoid the Exchange until the Infant, Issue in Tail, Woman, or Heir of him that is de non sane memorie, or him that doth lose the Land, by an elder Title, doth first enter. Park. Sect. 285. Co. 1. 105. Dyer 285. Perk. Sect. 290. 294. 298. Co. 1. 98.

If an Infant exchange Lands, and after at his full age occupy the Lands taken in Exchange for his own Lands, hereby the Exchange is made good. So if Tenant in Tail exchange his intailed Lands with another, and after his death the issue occupy the Lands taken in exchange by his Ancestor, hereby the Exchange is made good for the life of the issue in tail. So if the Husband and Wife exchange the Land of the Wife for other Land, and the after her Husbunds death agree to it, and enter into and agree to the Lands taken in Exchange, hereby the Exchange is made good. But if the Husband alone make an Exchange of his Wives Land, and she after his death agree to this, and enter into the Land, it seems this will not make the Exchange good. And if a man leased of Land in right of his Wife in Fee thereof Infeoff a stranger, and take an estate back again to him and his Wife, and a third person in Fee, and they three joyn in exchange of the same Land in Fee for other Lands to a stranger in Fee, and the Exchange is executed, and the Husband dieth, and she doth occupy the Land taken in exchange with the other third person, hereby the Exchange is made good. If a man de non sane memorie make an Exchange, and his Heir after his death enter into the Land taken by his Ancestor in Exchange, and agree to the Exchange, hereby the Exchange is made good. And in all these cases, when the Exchange is once by Agreement made good, it can never by any subsequent disagreement be afterwards made void. Co. super Litt. 51. 12 H. 4. 11. Perk. Sect. 290. 294. Fitz. Exchange 13. Perk. Sect. 291. 279. 293. 298.

CHAP. LXXIX.

Of Estates.

NE Estate is, that Title, Time, or Interest, that a man hath to Lands or Tenements. Terms of the Law.

Estates are either of Freehold, that if they continue go to the Heir, or are Chattels that go to the Executor.

Estates of Freehold, are either Estates of Inheritance, or Franck-tenement.

Estates of Inheritance, are either Fee-simple or Fee-tail. Fee-simple is either absolute and indeterminable, as where Land is given to a man and his Heirs, or it is determinable; And then it is either Express, when it is derived out of an absolute and pure Estate in Fee. As first, where it is upon Condition, as in case of Mortgage; and this is called Fee-simple Conditional: And for this see Condition. Or secondly, it is by Limitation, as where Land is given to A. and his Heirs, so long as B. hath Heirs of his body; this is called Fee-simple limited or qualified: And for this see Limitation. Or else they are implicate and derive out of an Estate-tail: As where Tenant in Tail doth bargain and sell his Land by Deed, indented and inrolled, and after levy a Fine of it to the Bargainee and his Heirs, with Proclamations; by this the Bargainee hath an Estate in Fee-simple so long, as the Tenant in Tail hath Heirs of his body.

Fee-tail is either General, as where Lands are given to J. S. and the Heirs of his body; or Special, as where Land is given to J. S. and the Heirs of his body begotten on the body of J. D.

Franck-tenement is also Express or Implied, Express is where Land is granted to one one and his Heirs, during the life of 7. S. Or where Tenant for life doth grant his estate to another and his Heirs; in these cases the Lessee or Grantee hath an estate of Franch-tenement descendible: Or it is Implied, as where Tenant in Tail doth pass his Land by way of Bargain and Sale, to another and his Heirs; by this the Bargainee hath an estate descendible, and determinable upon the death of the Tenant in Tail.

Chattels. Estates that are called Chattels, and go to Executors, are either Leases for years, Leases at Will, or at Sufferance; or heretofore Wardships in Capite, and Knights Service now abolished, Co. 10. 97. 4. 30. 82. of Copbold, sect. 47. Plow. 555. &c.

All Estates may be Conditional, as well as Fee-simples. Some divide Estates into Certain, as Fee-simples; and for life or years; and Incertain, as Estates at Will or Sufferance.

3. Fee-simple,
what:
The nature of
it.

Fee-simple is where one hath any Lands or Tenements inheritable by a perpetual Right, to him and his Heirs for ever: And this is of all kinde of Estates, the greatest, largest, and most excellent; and therefore no Remainder can depend upon this. And he that hath this Estate, may give, grant, or charge it by his Deed, or will at his pleasure. He may make what waste or spoil upon it he pleaseth; he may charge it in his Heirs hand by any Obligation or Warranty, he shall make in his life time. The Wife of him that hath it, will be endowed of a third part of it; the Husband of her that hath such an Estate, will be Tenant by the Courtesie. But this Estate is forfeitable by Treason or Felony. See for all this in Treason, Felony, Dower, Tenant by the Courtesie, Heir, Littl. f. 1. Co. super Littl. 273. Dyer 33. 330. Perke. sect. 276. Crofts. Jur. 214. &c. To what Execution it shall be liable, see Execution.

Deed.

1. It is a Rule, that Fee-simple is commonly made by a Deed, and by this word (Heirs) and cannot well by Deed be made without it. But in a Will it may be made by other words. And when it is made by Deed, it is commonly made by Livery of Seisin, and cannot otherwise be made; and yet it may be, and sometimes is made without Deed, without the word Heirs, and without Livery of Seisin, Littl. 1. C. 61. 62. super Littl. 12. 94.

2. If Lands be given or granted by Fine, Deed, or Will, in Possession, Reversion, or Remainder, Plow. 134. to a man and his Heirs; this is a Fee-simple.

3. If Lands be given or granted by Deed, or Fine, or any such like way to 7. S. and his Heirs Males, or to 7. S. and his Heirs Females; these are Fee-simples. But if it were by Will, it would be Estates Tail; and so if it were the Kings gift, 27 H. 8. 27. Littl. sect. 31.

4. If Lands had been given to 7. S. & haredibus, without the word Sein; these words make a Fee-simple: But if it be to two & haredibus, it maketh but an Estate for life, 20 H. 6. 35.

5. If Lands be given or granted to 7. S. and to the Heirs of 7. S. this doth make an Estate in Fee-simple, 20 H. 6. 35.

6. If Land be given or granted to 7. S. and his right Heirs; this is a Fee-simple, Co. 2. 91. 33 H. 6. 5.

7. If Lands be given or granted to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of A. By this A. hath a Fee-simple, 40 Ed. 3. 9. Bro. Dones 55. So if Lands be given or granted to the Wife of 7. S. for life, after to 7. S. in Tail, and after to the right Heirs of 7. S. By this 7. S. hath a Fee-simple, Co. 2. 91.

8. If Lands be given or granted to a man and his wife, and the Heirs of them issuing, or their Heirs issuing; this is a Fee-simple, and not a Fee-tail, Bro. Estates 34.

9. If one make a Lease of Land to another for twenty years, and that after the twenty years the Lessee shall have it to him and his Heirs by the Rent of ten pound a year; if in this case Livery of Seisin be made upon the Deed, this will be a Fee-simple, otherwise but a Lease for twenty years, Co. super Littl. 217.

10. If Lands be given or granted to a Corporation aggregate of many; this is a Fee-

Fee-simple without words of [Heirs or Successors] But if it were to a sole Corporation, as a Bishop, Parson, or the like; by this he hath onely an estate for life, Co. upon Littl. 24.

11. If one seised of Land in Fee, make a gift of it in Tail, or Lease for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs Males of the Body of the Donor; it seems this Remainder is a Fee-simple, and not a Fee-tail, because the Donor cannot make his right Heir to come in as a Purchaser, unless he put the Fee-simple out of his person, Dyer 156.

12. If one by Deed, or Will, give or grant Land to J. S. and his Heirs, and if J. S. die without Heirs, that J. D. shall have it to him and his Heirs; by this J. S. hath a Fee-simple, and J. D. no estate at all, Dyer 4. 33.

13. If one by the first part of a Deed, called the Premises give or grant Land to one and his Heirs, and in the Habendum say, To have and to hold to him for life or years onely, and make Livery of Seisin upon the Deed; this is a Fee-simple, Co. 2. 21, 24.

14. By a Will an Estate in Fee-simple may be made without the word (Heirs) Will, And therefore if one by Will devise any Land or Rent, &c. to J. S. and his Assigns for ever, or to J. S. for ever, or to J. S. paying ten pound to J. D. in all these cases there is a Fee-simple made, Co. 3. 21. 1. 44. 85. Dyer 4. 33. Littl. 1st. 1.

15. Upon a Partition a Fee-simple may be made without the word (Heirs) See Partition, Plow. 134. Co. upon Littl. 94. 22.

16. If a Grant or Gift, or Devise, be of a Reversion, Common, Rent, or the like things which lie in Grant, there the like words do make the like Estate. And then it passeth by the Sealing of the Deed without any Livery of Seisin, Co. 2. 21. 24. But for this point, see much more in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 101, 103, 439, 440. Brownl. Rep. 1 part 47. 49, 167, 169. 2 part. 271, 272. Who shall take by such an Estate, or not, see Discontinuance.

Fee-tail is a kinde of Fee-simple, but limited in it self, and cut off from the pure and absolute Fee. Terms of the Law. And this kinde of Estate may be made of any Manors, Lands, Tenements, Commons, Rents, Advowsons, Mesuagies, Services, and of some Offices and Dignities, as the Office of a Steward, Bailiff, or Receiver of a Manor; the dignity of a Duke, Countie, or the like. Also Uses, Offices, and Dignities that concern Land, and certain places; as the Office of the fourth part of the Serjeant; the Office of keeping the Church of our Lady in Lincoln; and so likewise of all other things that favor of the Realty: But an Annuity is not to be In-tailed, nor Copihold Land, but by Custom, Brownl. Rep. 2 part. 42, 43. Co. 9. 105. upon Littl. 30.

This is the next great Estate to a Fee-simple; and therefore he that hath this Estate, however he cannot give, grant, or charge it by his Deed or his Will, as he may a Fee-simple estate; for he cannot so grant or charge it for longer then his own life: Nor can he make the Land in the hands of his Issues liable to his Warranty, or Obligations, or Debts, unless it be the Kings debts; yet by a Fine, or Common Recovery, he may dispose his Estate and bar his Issues, and all the Remainders to come after his own estate. And he is not punishable for any spoil or waste he doth upon the Land, his Wife shall be endowed, and her Husband that hath it, shall be Tenant by the Courtesie; and if he commit Felony, he doth not forfeit it; and yet if he commit Treason, he forfeits his Land, so long as he hath Heirs of his Body, Westm. 2. chap. 1. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 11. 32 H. 8. 36. Co. 6. 40. 7. 41. 10. 39. And see the Titles of Heir, Felony, Treason, Recovery, Fine, and Warranty.

And to what Execution it will be liable for payments of the Debts of the owner thereof, see Execution, or Debt.

4. What shall be said an Estate-tail, or not.

And how words of Limitation shall be taken herein.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known; 1. If Lands be given or granted to one, and the Heirs Males of his Body, or his Heirs Males of his Body, or to the Heirs Females of his Body, or his Heirs Females of his Body, or to the Heirs Males of his Body begotten, or to one and to his Issues Males begotten, or to one, and his Issues Females begotten, or to *J. his Heirs, if he shall have any Heirs of his Flesh, and if none, that then the Land shall Revert, or to J. S. and his Heirs, if he have issue of his Body, or to J. S. and the right Heirs Males of his Body, or to J. S. and his Heirs; provided, that if he die without Heir of his Body, that the Land shall Revert; or to J. S. and the Heirs of his Body issuing, the Remainder to J. B. in forma pradiſta. In all these cases there is, whether it be in a Deed or Will, by these words made an Estate in Tail in General; and so to him in the Remainder, in the last case, by the words in form aforesaid, Litt. Sect. 13, 14, &c. 18 Ed. 3. 45. 37 Aff. 15. Dyer 156. Plow. 140. Co. upon Litt. 20. 385. 26. And by these words in forma pradiſta any other Estate may be made, Adjudge, Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. And so if it be to J. S. and his Heirs, To have and to hold to him and the Heirs of his Body; but in this case he hath a Fee-simple after the Estate-tail, 35 Aff.

2. If Lands be given or granted to J. S. and M. his Wife, and the Heirs of the Body of the Survivor of them; by this the Survivor hath an Estate in General-tail after the others death, Co. upon Litt. 26.

3. If one give or grant to J. S. that if he and the Heirs of his Body be not yearly paid forty shillings, that he shall distrain in the Land of the Grantor; this is an Estate-tail of this Rent, Co. upon Litt. 147.

Will.

4. If one by Will give Lands to J. S. and his Heirs Males, or his Heirs Females; this makes an Estate-tail in either of these cases, otherwise it is if the words were in a Deed, 27 H. 8. 27. 20 H. 6. 35.

5. If one Devise Land by Will to J. S. and his Children; this if he have no Children at the time, will make an Estate-tail: But if he have, they will all have Estates for their lives jointly with the Father: And so it is if the Land be given to him and his issues, Co. 6. 17.

6. If one Devise to his Wife for life, and after to his Son; and if his Son die without issue, having no Son, then that the Land shall go to another; this is an Estate-tail to him, and the Heirs Males of his Body: So if the words had been, if he die having no Male, Adjudge, Trin. 7 Jac. Co. B. Robinson case.

7. If one by Will Devise Land to J. S. & femini suo to his Seed, these words do make an Estate in Tail. But if it be to him & sanguini suo, to his Blood; these words make a Fee-simple, Adjudge, Mich. 40, 41 Eliz. Downhal and Gashin case Broo. Tail 21.

8. If one have issue three Sons, and Devise his Land (to wit) one part to one Son, another to another, another to another in Tail, and that neither of them shall sell his part, but that every one of them shall be Heir to the other, this is an limited Estate: So as if one of them die without issue, his part shall not Revert, but shall go to the other for it is an implied Remainder, Broo. Devise fol. 38.

Tail Special.

9. If one give or grant Lands to J. S. and M. his Wife, and the Heirs [or Heirs Males, or Heirs Females] of their two Bodies begotten; or to the Heirs [or Heirs Males, or Heirs Females] of the Husband begotten on the Wife, or to J. S. and M. his Wife, and the Heirs he shall beger on the body of his Wife, or to J. S. and his Heirs, which he shall have by his Wife M. or to J. S. and M. his Wife, and the Heirs of their two Bodies: All these Limitations, whether it be by Deed, or Will, make Estates in Special Tail, Litt. Sect. 13, 14, &c. Co. 140. 141.

10. If Lands be given by Deed to J. S. and M. his Wife, To have and to hold to the use of the Husband and Wife, and of the Heirs of their two Bodies, this is an Intail in them; otherwise it were if the use were limited to a stranger, Adjudge, Hil. 6 Car. B. R.

11. If Lands be given or granted to a Man and Woman unmarried, and the Heirs of their two Bodies; by this they have an Estate-tail, Co. 1 part. 26. 5 H. 7. 10. So if Lands be given or granted to the Husband of M. and Wife of K. and the Heirs of their two Bodies; this is an Estate-tail to them, Co. super Litt. fol. 20.

12. If Lands be given to another, and to his Heirs on the Body of such a Woman lawfully begotten; this is an Estate in Special Tail, and begotten shall be intended begotten by the Donee, Co. on Littl. 26.

13. Husband and Wife be, and they have issue a Son and Daughter, and the Husband die, and Lands are given to the Wife, and the Heirs of her late Husband on her body begotten; by this the Wife hath estate for life, and the Son a good Estate-tail, and if he die without issue, the Daughter shall have it, Co. upon Littl. 16.

14. If Lands be given or granted to the use of a man and his wife for their lives, and after to the use of their next Issue Male to be begotten in Tail, and after to the use of the Husband and Wife, and of the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, they having then no Issue Male; in this case the Husband and Wife are Tenants in Special Tail executed, and after they have Issue Male, they are Tenants for life; the Remainder to the Son in Tail, the Remainder to them in Special Tail, Co. upon Littl. 28.

15. If Lands be given or granted to a man and his wife, and to one Heir of their Bodies lawfully begotten, and to one Heir of the Body of that Heir only; this is an Estate-tail, but it is for so long only, Co. on Littl. 22.

16. If Lands be given with ones Daughter or Cousin in Franck-marriage; this is an Estate in Special Tail. See for this Littlton, Self. 17. Co. upon age. Littl. 21.

17. If Lands be given by Will to J. S. and M. his Wife, and the Men-children of their Body begotten, and at this time they have no children, this is an Estate-tail, Co. 6. 17.

18. If one have issue, a Son, and die, and Lands are given to the Son, and the Heirs of the Body of his dead Father; this is a good Estate-tail: But it seems in this case the Son shall have it but for life, unless he also be the Issue in Tail to the Father per formam doni. So if the gift were to the Father, and the Heirs of the Body of the Son, Littl. cap. 30. Co. 8. 87. Dyer 247. 12 H. 4. 1. So if there be Father, Mother, and Son, and the Father die, and the Limitation is by Deed, To the Son and the Heirs of the Body of the Father and Mother; it seems this is a good Estate-tail, Littl. Self. 352. So if Lands be given or granted to J. S. and the Heirs, that he shall happen to have of his Wife; this is a good Intail to J. S. but the Wife hath nothing in it, 12 Hen. 4. 1. So if Lands be given or granted to J. S. and the Heirs of the Body of his Wife (she being then dead) engendred; this is a good Estate-tail, 12 H. 4. 1.

5. What shall be said a good manner of Intail, or not.

19. If one Lease Land to a Woman sole for years, and then she take a Husband, and the Lessor doth release and confirm to them, and the Heirs of his Body, or the Heirs of her Body; these are good Estates in Tail, 6 Ed. 3. 19.

20. If one give or grant Land to J. S. and M. his Wife, and one Heir of his Body lawfully begotten, and one Heir of that Heir only; this is a good Intail, 39 Aff. pl. 20.

21. If one give or grant Land to J. S. and M. his Wife, and their Heirs, and other Heirs of the said J. S. If the said Heirs of the said J. S. and M. issuing shall die without Heir de se (that is) of them, &c. this is a good Estate-tail, 5 Hen. 5. 6.

22. If one give or grant Land to J. S. and the Heirs he shall beget of his first Wife, or the Heirs he shall beget of his Wife; these are good Estates in Tail, albeir there be no Wife at the time. So if it be to J. S. and the Heirs of his Flesh, or the Heirs de se from him, or to the Heirs that he shall happen to have, or that shall happen to him, Co. 1. 20.

But for all these things, see much more in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 102, 103, 104, 440, 441, 442.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

6. What Acts such a Tenant in Tail may do to Alien or Bar his own Estate, or nor.

1. Regularly, he that hath this Estate can lawfully grant no longer time, but for his own life: And therefore if he grant by way of Bargain and Sale, indented and enrolled more then that as Fee-simple or Fee-tail, no more will pass, but what he may lawfully grant. But if he make such an Estate in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, by Fine, or Peoffment; this will make a Discontinuance, and raise another Estate, but a tortious one, Co. 1. In Alton Woods case, Brob. Discontinuance 35.

2. But he that hath an Estate-tail of Land, may levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery of it, and by this to convey his estate, that the Issues in Tail and all Remainders may be barred, and a good Estate made of the Land to another: And for this see Co. 9. 140. 30. 50. and Littl. 371. and in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 41, 42, 43, 44, 24, 25, 26.

3. This Estate may be barred by a Lineal or Colateral Warranty and Assets, Ca. upon Littl. 371. See for this in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 190, 191, 192, &c.

4. The Tenant in Tail may make a Lease for three lives, or one and twenty years of the Land, so usually let. See 32 H. 8. 28. and my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 277, 278, 279, &c.

5. Tenant in Tail of a Copihold Manor, may grant Copihold Estates according to the Custom of the Manor, as well as any other man. See my Book of Copihold.

6. If another man have Right to his Intailed Land, and he grant a Rent-charge out of the same Land to him, for a Release of his Right to the Land; and this will binde the Issues in Tail.

7. If the Tenant in Tail do commit Treason, he doth forfeit his Land Intailed, whether it be in Possession, or in Right only; but otherwise it is in the Case of Felony. See for this Co. upon Littl. 372. 392. 34 H. 8. 20.

8. But Regularly, no Grant, Gift, or Charge, made or done by a Tenant in Tail, of or upon the Land Intailed, if it be executed by Deed, will binde or be good longer then for the life of the Tenant in Tail, and will not conclude the Issues; and yet if Tenant in Tail make a Lease for life or years, or grant a Rent-charge out of the Land, and after this he levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery of the Land; this may make good the Lease, or Charge for all the time, Co. 1. 48 62. upon Littl. 373, 383. 24 H. 8. 5.

9. If there be Tenant in Tail in Possession, the Remainder to another in Tail; in this case, he in the Remainder may do for the most part, all that he in the Possession may do, and it will bar him and his Issues when it hapnech, as it will him in the first Estate, and his Issues. But if the Tenant in Tail in Possession, suffer a Recovery; this will utterly bar and overthrow the Remainder Estates, and all that the owners thereof have done upon them. And if both of them make Leases of, or Charges upon the Land, the Leases and Charges of the Tenant in Tail in Possession, shall be preferred before the Leases and Charges of him in Reversion or Remainder, Co. 1. 61.

10. If Tenant in Tail levy a Fine with Proclamation, according to the Statute; it is true, this is a Bar to the Estate-tail; but it is no Bar to him in Reversion or Remainder, if he make his Entry or Claim, or bring his Action within five years after the Estate-tail spend.

And if a Gift be to the eldest Son, and the Heirs of his Body, the Remainder to his Father, and the Heirs of his Body; the Father dieth, the eldest Son levieth a Fine with Proclamations, and die without Issue; by this the second Son is barred, Co. on Littl. 372.

And if Tenant in Tail be disseised, or have a Right of Action, and the Tenant of the Land levy a Fine with Proclamations, and five years pass, the Estate-tail is barred. See Discontinuance.

For Answer to this, take these Cases.

1. If the Limitation be to the Heirs Males, then the Heirs Females can never enjoy it. And if it be to the Heirs Females, the Heirs Males shall never have it. And therefore if Lands be given to one, and the Heirs Females of his Body, and he have a Son and Daughter, in this case his Daughter, and not his Son, shall have it, Co. on Litt. 25. 164. Litt. sect. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

2. And whatsoever will make his Claim as Heir per formam doni, to such an Estate, he must make his Descent by such Heirs, as if it be to Heirs Males, he must derive his Pedigree by Heirs Males, one after another; and so if it be by Heirs Females. And therefore if a Gift be to one, and then Heirs Males of his Body, or to a man and his wife, and the Heirs Males of their Bodies, and he or they hath or have Issue a Daughter, who hath Issue a Son, and die; in this case this Son shall not inherit it, because he cannot make his Descent by Heirs Males, Co. upon Litt. 376. 377. And if Lands be given to one and his Heirs Males of his Body, and he hath two Sons, and die, and his eldest Son enter, and hath Issue a Daughter, and die; in this case the eldest Son's Daughter shall not inherit the Land, but the youngest Brother shall have it: And yet the Daughter is next Heir at Law, and were it Fee-simple, would have it, Litt. sect. 22. 23.

3. If Lands be given to the Husband and Wife, and Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, and they have two Sons, and the eldest die, and leave a Daughter; in this case, she and not the youngest Son, shall have it. So if the Limitation be to a man, and the Heirs of his Body issuing, and he die and have two Sons, and the eldest die, leaving a Daughter; in this case, she and not the other Son, shall inherit the Land, Litt. sect. 23.

4. If Lands be given to one, and the Heirs Males of his Body, the Remainder to him, and the Heirs Females of his Body, and the Donor hath Issue a Son who hath Issue a Daughter, who hath Issue a Son; in this case, the Son is not inheritable to either of these Estates-tail, but the Land shall Revert to the Donor for lack of Heir: For in case where there is no Heir to inherit and take per formam doni, as when Issues fail, then the Land shall return to the Donor, or go to him that is to have it after the Estate-tail, determined and spent, Co. upon Litt. 25. Litt. sect. 24. And if the King had given Lands to one and his Heirs Males, which is a Fee-simple in case of a common person, and he die without Heirs Males; the Land (as it seems) shall Revert to the King, Locals case.

5. If Lands be given to Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of their two Bodies, or in any such like manner, and the Husband alone levy a Fine, or is attainted of Treason or Felony; in this case, the Issues they have are barred to Claim the Land; For they cannot make themselves Heir to them both, as he must do that will Claim the Land by Inheritance; for the Husband's Blood is corrupted by the Felony, and no man can be Heir to him, Co. 9. 138. Plow 351. Dyer 332. 333. But see more for this in Disens.

An Estate-tail after possibility of Issue extinct, is where Lands are given to a man and his wife in Possession or Remainder, and to the Heirs of their two Bodies engendred, or to him and his Heir of the Body of his wife issuing, or in any other manner in Special Tail, and one of them die, having no Issue between them, or the Issue die, living the Father or Mother; so that now there is no Issue to inherit it per formam doni. In these cases he or she that doth so survive, hath this Estate, and it is called an Estate-tail after possibility of Issue extinct, Co. 11. 82. 26 Hen. 6. 77. 2 H. 4. 17. Co. 9. 139. 8. 75.

This Estate is an Estate made by the Act of God, and the Law together, and not ex provisione hominis, doth much relish of the nature of an Estate-tail, out of which it is derived; and of which, it is the Remain and Residue: And therefore as to the qualities of it, it hath more Privileges than any other Estate for life hath. For first, the Tenant of this Estate of Land is not punishable in Waste. Secondly, If he alien the Land, he in Reversion cannot have a Writ of Entry in casu consuetudinis. Thirdly, He shall not be compelled to Attorn. Fourthly, He shall not have need to require aid. Fifthly, No Writ of Intrusion lieth after his death. Sixthly, He may joyne the Mife in a Writ of Right is a special manner: Seventhly, In an Action brought by or against him, he shall not be named Tenant for life; and all these run in the Privy for if he grant away his Estate, they are all gone: But in respect of the Quantity of the Estate, this Estate hath no privilege above other Estates for life. And therefore if a Tenant of Land by this Estate, make a Feoffment of the Land, he in Reversion may enter upon him for the Forfeiture. 1. If the Fee-simple, or any greater Estate then this descend upon him: this Estate is drowned. 2. If he be impeaded for the Land, he in Reversion shall be received upon his default. 3. If he exchange his Estate with a Tenant for life, it is a good Exchange. 4. A Confirmation by him in Reversion to him, is good to enlarge his Estate. Co. upon Little 18. Co. 9. 139. 18 H. 6. 45. For Answer to this Question, take these cases.

9. How a Limitation to divers persons, and of divers Estates shall be taken; and what manner of Estates every one shall have.

1. If a Grant or Gift be to a Husband and Wife, and a third person; and to the Heirs of the Husband, and the third person: By this the Wife hath only an Estate for life in a Moyety with her Husband, and the Husband and the third person, Estates in Fee, in Joynutenancy of the rest by Moieties. Dyer 103.

2. If Lands be given to a man and his wife, and the Heirs of the Body of the Husband; by this the Husband hath an Estate in General Tail, and his Wife but an Estate for life. Little 27.

3. If Lands be given to two Sisters [or two Brothers, or to a Brother and a Sister] and to the Heirs of their Bodies begotten; by this they shall have Joynt Estates for lives; so that the Survivor will have all for his life, and after both their deaths, their Heirs have several Inheritances (that is) Estates in General Tail by Moieties in common one with another. So if Lands be given to Father and Son, and the Heirs of their two Bodies engendered, or to two men that have wives, and their wives and the Heirs of their Bodies engendered; in these cases they have Joynt Estates for lives, and after the one Husband and Wife shall have one half, and the other Husband and Wife the other half of the Land in Common. So if it be to a man and two women in Tail, by this all three of them shall take severally; so in other like cases. Cur. 140. 8. 87. 10. 50. 8. Aff. 33. Dyer 149. 17 H. 4. 16. Co. on Little 25.

4. If Lands be given in Tail in the Premises of a Deed, To have and to hold to the Donee and his Heirs; by this Limitation there is made an Estate-tail first, and a Fee-simple upon it. But otherwise it is where the words of Fee-simple be in the Premises, and the words of Intail in the Habendum, for then there is made by it only an Estate-tail according to the Habendum, and no Fee-simple Expectant upon it, Co. 8. 154. Dyer 126. 45. Ed. 3. 19.

5. If Lands be given to a man and the Heirs he shall beget upon the Body of his Wife; by this he hath an Estate-tail, but she hath no Estate at all. But otherwise it is where it is a Gift to a man and his wife, and to the Heirs they shall beget. So if Lands be given to the Husband and Wife, and to the Heirs of the Wife upon her Body, begotten by the Husband; by this the Husband hath but an Estate for life, and the Wife an Estate in Special Tail. So if Lands be given to Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of the Husband, which he shall have by his Wife; by this the Wife hath only an Estate for life, and the Husband an Estate in Tail. Little 26, 18, 29. Co. on Little 26.

6. If Lands be given to a married man, and the wife of another man, and the Heirs of their two Bodies, or in any such wise; by this is made and executed a good Estate-tail presently, and while the Husband and Wife of the Donees live, they hold for life; and if they happen to die, and the Donees to marry and have Issues, then their Issues shall have it according to the Intail, 15 H. 7. 10.

7. If a Gift be made to a man, and to such a woman as shall after be his wife in Tail; this may be a good Estate-tail, but the Wife whom he doth after marry, hath nothing by it. But if a Feoffment be made to the use of a man, and the wife he shall after marry, and after he take a wife; in this case the Wife may happily have a good Estate joyntly with her Husband. Co. 1. 101. Dyer 340.

2. If one by his Will Devise his Land to his two Daughters, and the Heirs of their Body engendered; by this they are Joynttenants in Tail, and if one of them die before, Remainder made, the Survivor will have all the Land, Dyer 198. 20. And so it is of Remainders, as it is of Possessions. For if a Remainder be limited to two Brothers in Tail, they shall have several Inheritances by it, Dyer 199. And if a Remainder be given by Will to two Sisters, and the Heirs of their two Bodies, to be equally divided; by this they have several Estates-tail, and shall hold the Land in Common, Co. l. c. 3710. See more of this in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 114.

An Estate for life, it where one hath any thing for his own, or for anothers life. This is but a Particular Estate derived out of the Inheritance, upon which a Reversion or Remainder may depend. And this some call a Frank-tenement, and is an Estate in some cases descendible to the Heirs, as when Lands are granted to J. S. and his Heirs for the life of J. D. In this case if J. S. die, his Heir shall have it, during the life of J. D. And this is called a Frank-tenement descendible, whereas in these and such like cases of Grants for anothers life, as it doth not so contrived, to be made to the Heirs of the Grantee after his death, it will be an Occupant, and he that can first get into the Possession, after the death of the Tenant for life, shall have the Estate. And this Estate is next in order to an Estate-tail, and may be made without Deed, but not without Livery of Seisin.

He that hath this Estate may charge or grant it, during the time, for which he hath it, and not longer. He may have Fire-boat, Plough-boat, House-boat, &c. (see House-boots.) He cannot do Waste upon it, and if he make any Feoffment of the Land a man holdeth for life, he doth forfeit to his Wife that hath this Estate, is not to be endowed of the thirds, nor her Husband that hath it, to be Tenant by the Courteseie, no, though it be an Estate descendible to his Heirs. It will be liable to Execution for the Debt of the owner, but it must be by Extent only, for the Sheriff cannot sell it, as he may a Lease for years. It will not be forfeited by an Outlawry against the owner, as a Lease for years will be. But if the owner commit Felony, or be Outlawed for Felony; by this it will be forfeited. Nor it is forfeited by Peine Levaine, nor upon a Fugam fress, nor in case of Premunire, nor for departing the Realm without Licence, Co. l. 140. Dyer 253. Fines Ley 23. 39 Edw. 3. 25. See the Titles in their places; and see in my Book of Common Assurances, chap. 14.

For this matter, take these cases.

1. If a Gift, Grant, or Feoffment, be made to another by Deed in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail, in the intent of it; but there are no words [Heirs, or Heirs Males] or other words equivalent in the Deed, such as are in the cases above; this will make only an Estate for life. So if one bargain and sell to another by Deed indented and inrolled, and the word [Heirs] be omitted, by this no Estate but for life only is made, 20 H. 6. 33. Co. l. 100.

2. If Lands be given or granted to two et heridibus, without the word [et], by this they take Estates for their two lives only, 20 H. 6. 33.

3. If Lands be given or granted by Deed, To have and to hold to him or his Heirs, in the dis-junctive; by this he hath only an Estate for life, Co. l. 311.

4. If a Tenant in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail, grant all his Estate without the word Heirs; it seems this is but an Estate for life, in the first case of the Grantee, in the last of the Grantor, Little. Plow. 361.

5. If one give or grant to J. S. and to his Successors; this is but for life. But this grant to a Body Politick, will make a Fee-simple, Co. l. 11 part. 8.

6. If one give or grant to J. S. et semini suo, or to J. S. et heredibus vel prole sua de corpore suo, or the like; by this is granted no more but an Estate for life, Co. upon Little. 20.

7. If one give or grant to J. S. and his Heir (in the singular number) by this he hath only an Estate for life, Co. upon Little. 8.

8. If Land be granted to A. and B. for their lives, to the use of C. for his life; this is an Estate for the life of C, if A. and B. so long live, Dyer 186.

And so it is to be understood of most of the Cases here, Co. on Littl. 41. 234. 238.

11. If one grant Land worth twenty pound a year to J. S. till one hundred pound be paid by this, if Livery of Seisin be made, there passeth an Estate for the life of J. S. determinable upon the payment of the one hundred pound. But if it be of a thing Certain, as of a Rent of five pound a year till twenty pound paid, this were a Lease for four years, Co. on Littl. 42.

12. If one leased in Fee of Land, make a Lease to another for life, and doth not say for what life, this shall be taken for the life of the Lessee. But if he be seised of an Estate-tail, it shall be taken for the life of the Lessor: And so if he have onely an Estate for his own life, Co. on Littl. 42. 183.

13. If one Devise by Will to A. for life, the Remainder to B. and C. his Wife, and after their decease to their Children, and they have Children at the time of the Devise, by this B. and C. shall take for their lives, and their Children they then had shall have it for their lives after them, Co. 64. 6. 114. W. ob. 100. 11. (100. 11. 100.)

14. If a Gift or Grant be to J. S. and doth not say for what time, nor doth limit any Estate, this maketh an Estate for life of the Grantee, Co. 85. Dyer 300. Co. 86.

15. If one have a Lease for anothers life, and be in Reversion confirm to him for his own life, by this he hath for his own life, D. & S. 20.

16. If one grant to J. S. and to his Heirs and Assigns for his life, and for one year over, this is but an Estate for his life, Co. 111. 39. E. 43. 25.

17. If a Grant be to two & sui, or to two & assignis sui, this is but an Estate for life, Co. 4. 29.

18. If one grant to J. S. and M. his Wife, and to the men-children of their Bodies begotten; this maketh an Estate for life to the Parents, and those children they then have, Co. 6. 17.

19. If one grant his Land to another to pay his debts, and say not for what time, this is an Estate for life of the Grantee, Co. 8. 96.

20. If Tenant for life be the Remainder to an Infant, and they two joyn in a Fine to a stranger of this Land, and after the Infant doth Reverse it for Minority; yet the stranger hath an Estate left, during the life of Tenant for life, Co. 1. 76.

21. If a Lease be made to A. for life, the Remainder to B. in Tail, the Remainder to C. in fee, in forma predicta; by this it is said C. hath onely an Estate for life, Dyer 15. 81. Co. on Littl. 42.

22. If a Feoffment be made to two & hereditis sui, to the use of the Feoffor and J. S. and say no more; it seems that by this the Feoffor and J. S. have onely Estates for their lives, Dyer 169. Ch. Just. Trin. 14. 1st. B. R. And so of other Declarations of Uses, Co. on Littl. 42.

23. If one grant that if A. be not paid yearly for his life twenty pound a year, he shall distrain for it; this is a good Grant of it for life, Co. on Littl. 147. And if one grant an Annuity to another, and his Heirs; but the Grantor doth not say for him and his Heirs, nor is it chargeable upon any Land; it is said this shall be taken for a Grant onely for the life of the Grantor, 21 H. 7. 4. Dyer 344.

24. If one grant to J. S. Common in his Land, when he doth put in his own Beasts there, or Estovers when he comes to his Manor; this is for life of the Grantee, 17 Aff. 117.

Dower hath two significations, First, That which the Wife bringeth to her Husband in marriage: Secondly, (and so it is most commonly in this place taken) A Portion Portion of the Husbands Lands given to the Wife, after his death, for the Term of her life; which is in five manners, 1. By the Common Law, and then it is a third part of all his Fee-simple Land. 2. By Custom, and then it is a Moyety, or all his Land, as the Custom is. 3. Ex assensu patris, and then it is so, as is agreed upon. 4. Ad osium Ecclesie, and then it is of as much as is agreed. 5. De la plus Beale, and then it is of a third part onely. Terms of the Law. Littleton, Tit. Dower.

Dower by the Common Law is a third part of all the Fee-simple, and Fee-tail Lands of the Husband, which the Law doth give to the Wife after her Husbands death, for her livelihood. And this she may not enter, and take her self; but the Heir, or he that hath the Land, may assign it to her by Deed in the Country: Or if it be not done, but she be denied, or delayed, and she have no part of it, she may have her Writ of Dower, unde nihil habet; or if she have received part she may have her Writ of Right, of Dower, for the rest: And by these means she shall recover her Right.

Dower by Custom, is a Portion that the Wife is to have of the Husbands Lands after his death, by the Custom of some place: as in Burrough-English, all, in Gavelkind, a Moyety; and this she must take and enter to, according to the Custom of the place, Perk. sect. 435, 436.

Dower ad osium Ecclesie, is where one of full age is seised in Fee-simple, and about to be married, when he cometh to the door of the Church to be married, doth there after affiancing between them, endow his Wife of all, or part of his Land, and openly shew the quantity and certainty of it: In this case the Wife after the death of her Husband, may enter into the said quantity of Land assigned to her without any other Assignment, Perk. sect. 437, &c.

Dower ex assensu patris, is where the Father is seised of Tenements in Fee; and his Son and Heir apparent (when he is to be married by a Deed of his Fathers consent also) endow his Wife at the door of the Church, of part of his Fathers Lands, and declare the certain quantities: In this case also, the Wife after the death of her Husband, may enter into the Land assigned to her, without any other Assignment, Perk. sect. 441.

Dower de la plus beale, is in case where a man seised of twenty Acres, ten in Capite, and ten in Socage, held of several Lords, and hath issue a Son, within age and die, and the Lord of whom the Land in capite is held, enter into that Land as Gardein, and the Mother of the Issue enter into the rest as Gardein in Socage; and she brings Dower against the Gardein in Chivalry. In this case the Gardein in Chivalry may shew all this matter, and pray that Judgment may be given, that she shall endow her self De la plus beale, i. e. that she may take her whole Dower out of that Land; and after such a Judgment given, she may in the presence of her Neighbors, endow her self accordingly; and this she shall hold for her life, Perk. sect. 450.

And if in the cases before of Dower Ex assensu patris, & ad osium ecclesie, the Wife after the death of the Husband do enter into the Land assigned her, and so agree to it, then she is concluded to claim any other Dower by the Common Law of any of the Lands of her Husband; but if she will refuse such Dower, then she may be endowed according to the course of the Common Law, English Lawyer.

In all cases where the Wife shall be endowed, these things must necessarily concur.

1. There must be a good marriage.
2. There must be a Seisin or Possession in Deed, or in Law in the Husband, of that thing whereof she demandeth Dower.
3. The Frank-tenement and Inheritance must be Simple and Several in the Husband, at some time, during his life.
4. The Husband must be dead when she doth demand her Dower.
5. The Husband must be seised of an Estate of Fee-simple or Fee-tail, at the least, Plow. 373. Co. 20. 49.

12. In what case, and of what Inheritance and Possession of the Husband, the Wife shall have Dower after the Husbands death, or not.

If the Husband be Sole seised, during the Coverture of any Lands or Tenements in Fee-simple, or of such an Estate-tail, as by possibility the issue had between the Husband and Wife, during the Coverture, might or may inherit it, though they have no issue, yet the Wife shall be endowed, and though the Estate-tail be determined, yet the Wife shall be endowed, Co. 1 part. upon Littl. 35. Co. 8. 34. Perk. Sect. 302.

Per metas & Bendas.

If the Husband be seised of Land in Common, with others, the Wife shall be endowed of it; but here the Judgment shall not be, That she shall hold per metas & bendas in several, as in other cases upon the Writ of Dower, but she shall hold in Common her part, with the Tenants in Common, F. N. B. 149.

If one seised in Fee, make a Lease for years, and after take a Wife, and die, she shall be endowed; but she must stay the end of the Lease for Execution. If a Lease be made for years, the Remainder to B. for life, and after to the right Heirs of B. and after B. takes a Wife, and dies, during the years; in this case his Wife shall have Dower, but she may not enjoy it, till the Lease for years be ended. So if a Lease be made to J. S. for life the remainder to a stranger for years, the Remainder to J. S. in Fee, and J. S. take a Wife, his Wife shall have Dower; but she cannot have the Execution of it, till the Lease for years be ended; and if there be any Rent reserved, it seems she shall have her thirds of that in the interim.

Election.

If the Husband after the Coverture exchange Land, his Wife may have Dower of the Land given, or the Land taken in exchange at her Election, but she cannot have Dower out of both. So if a Lord purchase the Tenancy after the Coverture, she may chuse to be endowed of the Tenancy or Signiory: So if a Husband were seised in Fee of a Rent, and after purchase the Land out of which the Rent did issue, she may chuse to have her Dower out of the Land, or out of the Rent, F. N. B. 149. Perk. 343.

S.* take a Wife, and I fail to pay the money at the day, in this case his Wife will have Dower, and J. S. and J. cannot defeat her of it by Agreement, to accept the money after, Perk. Sect. 392. Kitch. 161.

If the Kings Tenant die, and his Son die before any Entry made, or Livery sued, yet the Wife of the Son shall be endowed; and so where the Son entreteth and dieth before Livery sued, and Office found, and so of any Seison in Law, for which vide Franch. tenement, 1 H. 7. 17. 17 Ed. 2. 17.

And if in this case the wife of the Father be first endowed of the whole, and after the Grand-mother sue the Mother, and recover of her when the Grand-mother dies, the Mother may enter again, and retain that she had before, Dow de dote post non debet. Co. lib. Inf. 1. part. fol. 314. Park. fol. 315, 316. F. N. B. 149. Co. 4. 121.

If a Man have a Title of Action to recover any Land, and after he enter and Disseise the Tenans, and die seised, and his Heir enter; in this case his wife shall not have Dower, because the Heir is remitted, and the Estate the Baron had, is determined, F. N. B. 149.

If a Joyntenant make a Feoffment of his part, and die; his wife shall not have Dower out of it, F. N. B. 150.

If the Husband or Wife be not nine years old at the time of his death, the wife shall have no Dower, Dyrr. 313. Litt. fol. 36. F. N. B. 149.

If there shall be no good marriage in the Case, the wife shall have no Dower; and if she demand it, this Plea may be given, Non quia accipit in loyal Matrimonio: And this was used to be tried by the Certificate of the Bishop, Co. 49. Dyrr. 313. 314.

If the Wife be an Alien Born, and not made Denizen by Parliament, it seems she shall have no Dower. So if the Husband be an Alien, Co. lib. Inf. 1. part. fol. 314.

If Lands be given to two men, and the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, and one of them take a wife, and die; she shall not be endowed, Co. lib. Inf. 1. part. fol. 30.

If the Heir of the Kings Treasures shall die of him by Knights Service in capite, after Office found, intrude; the wife shall not be endowed, Co. upon Litt. fol. 30.

If Lands be to the Husband and Wife and the Heirs of their Bodies, and he have issue; and then she die; and he have another wife, and then he make a Feoffment, and take back an Estate in Fee, and die; the wife shall not have Dower of this, Co. lib. Inf. 1. part. fol. 30.

If a Man have an Estate for life; the Remainder to another in Tail; the Remainder to his own right Heir; in this case his wife shall have no Dower, 40 Ed. 3. 15.

If a Tenant for his own life make a Lease to him in Reversion, or Remainder in Fee or Fee-tail for the life of him in Reversion or Remainder, Now he is not by this so seised of the Freehold and Inheritance, as to make his wife dowerable, See Dower 95. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 43.

Sett. 18.
23. Of what things the wife shall have Dower, or not.

The Wife shall have Dower almost of all things of profit, of which the Husband may have an Inheritance, that by possibility may come to the issue between them. And therefore she shall be endowed of Messuages, Houses, Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Rent, Commons, Advowsons, Reversions, Seigniories, Towns, Iles, Woods, Old Mines of Coals, Predial Tithes, Villains, Estovers that are certain, Wind-Mills, Water-Mills, Offices, Chambers, Rectories, Fairs, Markes, Velvete of the Land or Ground, Perk. sett. 3.

The Wife of a Donor shall be endowed of a Rent, reserved upon the Gift in Tail. See more above. Perk. sett. 348. Co. super Littl. fol. 144. F. N. B. 148, 149, 150. Plow. 40.

But of such things as are of no value or certainty, the wife shall not have Dower, as Common, and Estovers without number, Annuity, Homage, nor of matters of pleasure onely, nor of a Castle, nor a House that is Caput Baronie or Comitatus. If they be for the defence and honor of the Kingdom, else she may be endowed of them, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. 31. 9 H. 7. 4. Perk. Sett. 342.

If the Freehold of Rents, Common, &c. be suspended and so continue, during the Coverture, she shall not be endowed of them; but a Release after the Coverture will not bar the wife. Sett. 89.

14. Assignment of Dower.

Where a Woman hath title to have Dower, in some cases there is no need of any Assignment of it to her, but she may enter and take it without Assignment. In most cases, Assignment must be made to her, and she cannot take it without Assignment; and this is sometimes before an Action brought, and sometimes after Action brought, and sometimes by the Heir, sometimes by the Alienor or Purchaser, sometimes by the King, sometimes by the Gardein, sometimes by a Disseisor or Abator, and sometimes by a Sheriff or Escheator. And this hath favor in Law, and therefore if the Heir assigned Dower to the Feme of the Ancestor, where she is not dowerable, yet she shall hold in Dower. See for Assignment of Dower, the Woman Lawyer, 243.

In case of Dower De lapide Brach, the Wife may assign her Dower to herself by Metes and Bounds before her Neighbors, ut supra, Littl. sett. 43.

In all cases where the Certainty appeareth, what Lands or Tenements the wife shall have for her Dower, there the wife may enter after the death of her husband, without any Assignment to her. As where the wife is to have all her husband's Lands, by some Custom; and where she is endowed ex assensu patris, or Ad personam ecclesie, vide supra. Littl. sett. 43.

If she have a Judgment, and the Sheriff offer her the thirds, by Metes and Bounds, and she then refuse; yet she may afterwards enter her self, and take it when she will, Dyer 178.

In all such cases wherein the Certainty doth not appear, what the wife is to have for her Dower. As when she is to have a Mowery by the Custom, or a third part by the Common Law.

In such cases her Dower must be assigned to her before she can enter into it, and if she enters before, and after sue for her Dower, this may for that time be pleaded in Bar.

Sett. 19.
14. Assignment of Dower.
In what case the wife may assign Dower to her self, or enter without Assignment, or not.

Bar to her, that she hath entred into part of the Land, which will be a Bar, so long as she holdeth the Possession, List. sect. 43. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 22. 6. Dyer 36.

If the Wife have obtained a Judgment to recover her Dower, yet she may not enter, and take it her self, but must wait till Execution, Plow 529.

If a Feme disseise the Terre-Tenant, she cannot endow her self by way of Retainer, Dyer 343.

If one seised of three shillings Rent, charge in Fee, and take a wife and die, she cannot take this Rent, nor Distrain for it before Assignment. And if she recover it in a Writ of Dower, yet she cannot distrain before Execution.

But in other cases where one demands a thing in Certain, Land, or Rent, the Demandant after Judgment, may enter or distrain before any Seisin, delivered him by the Sheriff, upon an Habere facias Seisnam, 10 Ed. 3. 12. Park. sect. 416. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 34.

Where the Wife of a Tenant in Common, demands a third part of a Moyety, yet after Judgment she cannot enter until the Sheriff deliver her a third part, though the Delivery of the Sheriff do not alter the case.

To make a perfect Assignment of Dower, these things are required.

1. Regularly the Assignment must be Certain.

2. It must be either of some part of the Land, whereof she is dowable, or of a Rent, or some other profit issuing out of the same, either before Judgment or after.

3. It must be absolute, not subject to Condition or Limitation.

4. It must be made by him that is Tenant of the Land.

5. If it be by a Disseisor, it must be without Covin.

6. And it must not be prejudicial to the Disseisee.

7. It must be by him, against whom the Writ may be brought.

8. The Guardian in Chivalry may do it, so the Heir before the Guardian enter; as in the cases beneath, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 34. 35.

If the Father endow the Wife of his Son and Heir at marriage, this is Assignment is enough, as before. See Dower as assensu patris. And this is a good Assignment without any other.

And if the Heir of the Husband assign the Woman her Dower (as he may) by a Deed in the Countrey, and she accept of it, this is good, and will bar her from demanding any Dower by Writ, Co. 3. 27. Park. sect. 493.

If there be a Lord and Woman Tenant, and they intermarry, and he die, she may endow her self by a third part of the Services, by way of Retainer, Park. sect. 303.

417. If a Woman have a Right of Dower to Land, that is in the hands of two or three Joynrenters, and one of them endow her by Assignment of part of the Land, it self for her Dower, this will binde the rest. But if it be of a Rent out of the Land, it will not binde the rest. Park. sect. 396. Co. 3. 61.

If a Disseisor or Abator, do assign Dower to the wife that hath Title of Dower, and it be not by Covin (as in the case beneath) it is good and lawful, and will binde the party that hath right. But then it must be of the Land it self, and not anything out of the Land, in lieu of it, 44 Edw. 3. 46. Co. 3. 78. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 34.

If a Man seised of Land in the right of his wife, or jointly with his wife, assign a third part to a woman, that hath right of Dower, this is a good and lawful Assignment, and will binde his wife after his death, Park. sect. 399. Co. 3. 61.

If there be two or three several Feoffees of Land, to which a woman hath Title of Dower, and one of them assign Dower for the whole Land, it is good, and she cannot demand Dower of the rest, Park. sect. 78.

The Guardian in Chivalry may assign Dower to a Woman, and it is good, and though the Woman have no right to Dower, yet it seems to be good till it be avoided:

ed: And he may assign a Rent out of the Lands he hath in Ward in Recompence, and it is good, Fitz. Dower 75. 155. Washb. 2.

It seems Assignment of Dower by any one that hath a Freehold, against whom an Action of Dower may be brought, is good; and with the Wives acceptance will bar her; and therefore if it be done by a Tenant for life, it seems to be good, Perk. Sess. 404.

If the King have the Wardship of the Land, he may endow the Wife by Assignment, upon or without a Petition, in Chancery; and if he do so before she reach the full age of the Heir; it is good and lawful, and will binde the Heir, 1 Ed. 4. c. 11. Ca. 16. Dyer 228.

If the Husband make a Feoffment of divers Parcels to divers persons, and die, and leave some to descend, and the Heir endow the wife of some of the Lands descended, in full satisfaction of all she is to have out of all the Land; this is a good Assignment for all the rest of the Lands, and the Feoffees may take advantage of it, Ca. 116. Just. 1 part. fol. 351.

The Sheriff or Coroner upon a Writ and Authority given, and sent to them, may assign Dower; and if they do so, it is good, and will binde all parties, Perk. Sess. 414.

If the Wife be married again to another Husband, and Assignment be made to him and his wife, and accept it; it seems this is good, and shall binde the wife. Bar. Quart. Fitz. Dower. 35 Bail. Dower 177. 38 Ed. 4. Dower 12 term.

An Heir, or any other that hath a Sole, and lawful right to Land; out of which a Woman may have Dower may endow her of a Rent, Common, or Profit issuing out of the same Land, and if she accept it, it will bar her of any other Dower, Perk. Sess. 405.

But the Assignment of Parcel of the same thing, is the most proper Assignment; and that any one may do that may assign, and it matters not whether she have a third part, for if she accept it, it is good enough, Washb. 2.

So neither is it material what part of the Capital House, or for if she accept any other part, it is sufficient, Washb. 2.

So if she accept a Chamber, it is good, Dyer 362. Washb. 2.

If a man seized of two Acres in one County, the one of one Acre with Warranty, and die, and his wife is endowed by the Heir, out of the other Acre, for the whole; now this is a good Assignment to bar her of any Dower in the other Acre, Washb. 2.

So if the Heir make a Lease of part, and endow her for the whole out of that, Washb. 2.

For the most part, it must be assigned by Mors and Bouds; and when it is so, it is a good Assignment, Perk. Sess. 411.

If the Wife be endowed by Assignment of the third part of a Mill or a Bailiwick, it seems this is good; but the best Assignment of a Mill, or the like, is the whole every third month; and of Fishes, the third Cock; and of an Adowson, the third Presentment of a Villain; the endowment shall be the third day, week, or months work; of a Dove-house or Fishing, the third part of the year; and of divers other Things, *Perk. If a man be seized of the Land, of which a wife hath right to have Dower, and the wife, or she and another discontinue the Tenure, and then the wife is assigned her Dower by one that comes to the Land from her, or from her and the other Disfeisor; this is no good Assignment, but the Tenure Tenant may avoid it, *Perk. In respect of

So an Aſſignment by a Leſſee for years, Tenant by Statute or Elegit, Perk. ſett. 404. Co. 9. 16.

If the Husband make ſeveral Feoffments of ſeveral Parcels, and die, and one Feoffee aſſign Dower to the wife, of Parcel of Land in ſatisfaction of all her Dower in all the Lands of the other Feoffees; this will not bar her of her Dower in the reſt, neither may they plead it in Bar to her: But if the Heir aſſign Dower ſo, contra. See above, Co. lib. Inſt. 1 part. fol. 35.

If an Intruder or Diſſeiſor endow a Feme of a Rent, or profit out of the Land, it is not good, Perk. ſett. 349. Co. 2. 67.

In reſpect of the thing which is aſſigned.

So if one Joyntenant aſſign a Rent out of the Land, in which the Wife hath Title of Dower; this is no good Aſſignment to binde his Companions, neither may their Cattle be diſtrained for ſuch a Rent, Perk. ſett. 397.

If the Demand be of divers Manors, and the Sheriff one Manor to her, for her Dower; this is good. 12 Ed. 4. 1.

If other Lands be aſſigned to her in recompence of her Dower, or a Rent iſſuing out of other Land; this is no good Aſſignment, neither will it binde her, though ſhe accept it. But of a Rent out of the ſame Land contra; and that Rent may be aſſigned by word; and if it be after Judgement, in a Scire facias, it may be pleaded, Perk. ſett. 407.

In reſpect of the manner of the Aſſignment.

If a Woman that hath Title of Dower, cauſe the Tenre Tenant to be Diſſeiſed of purpoſe, that he may endow her either upon an Action brought, or by Agreement; this is no good Aſſignment made by him, thus by Covin. Non facias malum ut inde fiat bonum. Dyer 266. Perk. ſett. 410. Co. 6. 58. 3. 78.

If the Husband were Tenant in Common, the Aſſignment muſt not be by Metes and Bounds; for if it be, it is not good: But the Woman muſt hold in Common with the other Tenants in Common.

So if ſhe be endowed of Land that doth belong to Coparceners: But if they make a Partition firſt, then the Aſſignment may be, Per metes & bundas, Perk. ſett. 411; 412.

If an Heir enter and aſſign to his Mother a third part, to hold with him in Common; this is not a good manner of Aſſignment, Perk. ſett. 413.

So if a Sheriff do aſſign Dower, and do not do it in Severalty, Per metes & bundas; it is not good, if it may ſo be done, Perk. ſett. 414.

If the Husband be attainted of High, or of Petit Treſon (as it ſeems) his wife ſhall loſe her Dower; and though he had made a Feoffment of it to a ſtranger, before the Faſt done, yet ſhe is barred, and cannot recover her Dower of it, 3 Ed. 6. 11. Staunf. lib. 3. 33.

16. Where the Wife ſhall be barred of her Dower perpetually. By the Means of the Husband.

If the Husband be attainted of Murder or Felony, and the Land Eſcheat to the Lord or King; the wife is perpetually barred of her Dower: But this it ſeems is altered by the Statute of 1 Ed. 6. 13. in the caſe of Treſon; for in that caſe ſhe loſeth her Dower, Co. upon Linl. fol. 31. Little ſett. 55. Perk. ſett. 387. 3 Ed. 6. 12.

If the Baron have cauſe to recover Land for Waſte or Ceſſer, and doth not; but dieth before it be recovered; by this delay of his, the wife is perpetually barred.

So if the Husband have Land, and is impleaded for it, and he voucheth, and the Demandant recovereth againſt him, and he hath Judgement to recover over, and die before Execution; the wife in this caſe is barred of her Dower.

So if he do not enter when he may; as when he is Diſſeiſed, or a ſtranger doth abate upon him after his Fathers death. See Supra 1 Hen. 7. cap. 17. 21 Ed. 4. 60.

If a Rent be granted to one in Fee, and the Grantee will not diſſein, but brings an Action againſt the Grantor, and recovers it, hereby the wife is perpetually barred (as it ſeems) of this Dower. Perk. 373.

If the Husband alone levy a Fine, and die, and ſhe do nothing, her Action, nor make her Claim in five years after his death; hereby ſhe is barred of her Dower in that Land for ever, Co. 2. 93. 8. 100. Dyer 124. 72.

By the Means of the Wife her ſelf.

If she depart from her Husband and live with another man, in Adultery, and be not reconciled unto him of her own accord before his death, without compulsion of the Church, she hath lost her Dower for ever. Sponsa virum mulier fugiens & adulterii facta, Dote sua caret, nisi sponso sponse retracta. And this seems to be cause of Forfeiture of Dower, though she do not dwell with the Adulterer, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. 32. Perk. Sect. 354. F. N. B. 150. Dyer 106. Westm. 2. chap. 35.

If she after her Husbands death will enter upon the Heir, and make a Froffment of the Land whereof she is to be endowed, 11 H. 7. 20.

If the Husband lie dying in the same House, wherein the Wife is, and hath need of her, and desireth her, and she doth wilfully refuse to come to him; it seems reasonable she should lose her Dower by this. But Quere. Perk. Sect. 364.

SeB. 24.

If she detain the Heir that is a ward, from the Gardein; this will bar her of all the kindes of Dower, so long as she doth so detain him, 2 H. 7. 6. Fitz Dower 174. 187.

So if the wife be an Heretick, and will not receive the Christian Faith, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. 332.

So if she consent to a Ravisher after he had ravished her; in all these cases she loseth her Dower. 6 Rich. 2. 61.

By their mutual Act and Agreement.
By a Joynture.

If she had a Joynture made to her before marriage, and she is not evicted out of it, 27 H. 8. 10. Vide beneath Joynture, Co. 45. 59.

And so also it is, if she had a Joynture made after marriage, and after her Husbands death she hath by any means accepted it; in these cases she shall never be received to demand Dower also; and in these cases it is not material what the quantity of the Lands made in Joynture be; if it be but an Acre, if it were intended a Joynture, it is sufficient Joynture, Co. 2.

If the Husband and Wife during the Coverture, levy a Fine, or suffer a Common Recovery of the Land; the wife is perpetually barred for any Dower in this Land, whereof the Fine or Recovery is, 6 & 10. 49. 12. 74.

See Sect. 24.
If the Wife be evicted out of her Joynture, she shall be endowed according to the rate of Land of her Husbands, whereof she was Dowerable. But such a Joynture being made after marriage, the Wife after her Husbands death may refuse it, and betake her to her Dower, unless the Joynture be made by Act of Parliament, 27 H. 8. 20.

Where an Estate is made in possession, or use to Husband and Wife, and his Heirs, or the Heirs of their two Bodies, or to them for their lives, or for the Wives life for her Joynture; in these cases she shall not have any Dower, unless she be lawfully evicted, then she shall be endowed according to the rate of Land of her Husbands, whereof she was Dowerable. But such a Joynture being made after marriage, the Wife after her Husbands death may refuse it, and betake her to her Dower, unless the Joynture be made by Act of Parliament, 27 H. 8. 20.

If she were endowed ad ostium ecclesie, or ex assensu patris, and after the Husbands death she accepts it; by this she is barred of Dower. Litt. Sect. Dower.

If she have a Joynture made her before marriage, and after the Husband and she do levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery, and grant it all away, and the Husband take back all either of this Land again to him and his Heirs, or he have other Land, she shall not have any Dower of any of these Lands, but is barred. By three Counsellors opinion.

By Act of Law:

If there be a perpetual Divorce made by Law between them, she is perpetually barred of Dower. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 32. Perk. 319. N. B. 7.

If the Husband be the Kings Villain, she shall not be endowed, contra of the Villain of a common person; if she be entitled to her Dower before the Entry of the Lord upon the Villain. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 31.

SeB. 25:
Where the Wife shall not be barred of Dower, only by the Act or Default of the Husband.

If the Baron be in Religion, the Wife shall have her Dower, notwithstanding after his death, and is not barred of it. But she shall have no Dower till his natural death.

So if the Baron be convicted of Felony, Homicide, Praemunire, or the like, if it be a Felony of the Common Law, or for an Offence made Felony by Statute Law, unless the Statute do except this, as commonly it doth. See Perk. Sect. 307. F. N. B. 150.

If

If the Husband do commit Felony, and after purchase a Charter of Pardon; now she is not barred of her Dower by this, but of all such Inheritance as he shall have after the purchase of his Charter; it seems his wife shall be endowed. See Womans Lawyer, f. 149, 150, 151, 152, 153.

If the Baron after the Coverture make a Feoffment of his Land, and after commit Felony; in this case the wife is not barred against the Alienee, neither shall she lose her Dower, Little. Sess. 55. F.N.B. 150. Nor if the Baron kill himself, Flow. 262.

In such Felonies as are made so by Acts of Parliament, wherein the Wives Dower is saved, if the Husband do any such Felony, his wife shall not lose her Dower by it: So it seems of Felony by the Common Law, committed at any time; that it will not bar the wife of her Dower, Dyer 263. 97. 1 Ed.6. 11.

If the Baron cease, or alien in Mortmain, and the Lord enter; hereby the wife is not barred of her Dower, but she shall have it as before, Perk. Sess. 308, 309.

If the Baron be out-lawed by Trespass, this is no bar to the wife for her Dower, Perk. Sess. 388. So if he be out-lawed in Felony, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 31.

The wife shall not be barred of her Dower, by the Laches of her husband in pleading, unless it be in some special cases, Perk. f. 73, 74, 75.

If she being de non sane memorie kill her husband, or another man; she shall not be barred of her Dower by this, Perk. Sess. 365.

If she do not, or will not go to her husband in another County, where he lieth wounded, and he die of that wound; it seems she shall not lose her Dower for this, Perk. Sess. 364.

If she Elope, and continue in Avowtry, in the Lands or Manors of her husband: As when her husband is at one of his Houses or Manor, she go to the other; or if after her Elopement, she be reconciled to her husband by his good will, or lie with him in Bed, though they never cohabit; in these cases she shall not be barred of her Dower, F.N.B. 150.

If she take a Joynture after marriage, this will not bar her of her Dower, if she waive it after her husbands death, (as she may) Co. 4. 2.

If a Joynture were made to her after marriage, and during the Coverture, she and her Husband levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery of it; yet she is not hereby barred to demand her Dower in the residue of his Lands, Co. 4. 2. Dyer 358. Co. 2. 27. Trin. 9 Jac. B. R.

If a Free-man take a Neiff to wife, she shall be endowed, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 31:

The wife of an Idiot, Non comp' mentis, shall be endowed, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 31.

When a Divorce is onely a mensa & thoro, as for Adultery, or the like, and not a vinculo matrimonii; there the wife shall be endowed. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 32.

If she have entred upon any part of the Land, out of which she doth demand Dower, and doth hold the Possession of it; this is a bar to her for her Dower, so long as she doth hold the Possession of it, unless it be in the case of Quarantine hor., which see Infra, Dyer 76.

If the Woman detain the Charters and Evidences that belong to the Heir, and concern the Title of his Land; this will bar her of Dower, for so much as the Charters doth concern, so long as she doth detain them, and he may plead Detainment Des Charters. But this Plea and Bar, is onely given to the Heir, and not to any other, though he be Tenant of the Land, and the Charters were delivered to him. See Infra. Co. 9. 17. Dyer 250. 127.

If she detain the Body of the Heir from the Gardein in Chivalry, she shall be barred of Dower, so long as she doth detain him, 1 H. 7. 6. Co. 9. 19.

Sess. 27.
Detainment of Charters.

But Detainment of Charters is no Plea for the Heir, neither will it bar the Woman, in these cases following.

First, Where the Heir doth come to the Land by Purchase, and not by Discent.

Secondly, Where the Heir himself delivered the Charters to the Woman:

Thirdly, Where the Heir is immediately, and not immediately vouched by the Tenant in the Writ of Dower.

Fourthly, Where the Heir doth come in as Vouchee, having no Land in the County where the Dower is demanded.

Fifthly, Where the Heir comes in to the Sute onely, as Tenant by Receipt, Co. 5. 75. 7. 9. Dyer 230. 251. 33 Hen. 6. 15. 2 Hen. 7. 6. Perk. Sess. 355. &c.

Sess. 27.

So if she detain Charters from the Heir that do not concern the Land, in which she demand Dower, Perk. 356.

Quarentine, what.

If she take her Privilege and Liberty of Quarentine, (i. e.) where her Husband died seised of any Manor or Mansion-house, whereof she is to be endowed; that she may abide in that House forty days after his death, and live of the store and profits thereof, which benefit the Law doth give her.

Quarentina Habenda, what.

If the House be not a Castle, and she marry not within the time; and if the Heir evict her within the time; she may have a Writ called De Quarentina habenda. And within this time the Heir ought to assign to her Dower. See Womans Lawyer 242. Co. 2 part. Inst. 17.

18. Writ of Dower, what.

It is a Writ and lieth where the Woman hath right to have Dower in her Husbonds Lands, and cannot have it; then she may have this Writ to recover it. And this is of two sorts.

The kindes of it.

One whereof is Unde nihil habet, when she hath received no part of her Dower.

Writ of Dower Unde nihil habet, Writ of Right of Dower, what.

And the other is called the Writ of Right of Dower, and lieth where she hath recovered part of her Dower already in one place; and she is to recover more in that place, then she may have this Writ for the recovery of it.

And in these cases, if the Husband did die seised, she shall recover Damages from his death.

But if any Alienation or Estate were made, during the Coverture, so that he die not seised, she shall not recover Damages. Terms of the Law. Dower.

In what case this Writ lieth, or not.

In all cases where the Wife is to have Dower, or hath right to Dower; there she may have this Writ to recover Dower.

And where she hath right to Dower, see before.

She may have this Writ for Dower, Ad osium Ecclesie, Ex assensu patris, and for Dower by the Custom, as well as for any other Dower. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 35.

Sess. 28. 19. Against whom this Writ may be had, or not.

This Writ lieth, and may be brought against any of them that have power to assign Dower (for which see before) excepting onely the King, against whom no Action will lie: But to him she must sue by Petition, as an Heir, an Alienee, a Gardein, Disseisor, or Abator, &c. against any of these this Writ lieth; and during the minority of an Heir, as long as he is in the Kings Custody she must sue to him by Petition in Chancery. And after he hath committed him, she may sue the Patentee by this Writ, or another Gardein in Chivalry; and when the Heir is of age, she must sue him himself.

And if divers have some of the Land, the Heir and others, she may sue any one of them: But if she sue a Purchasor, she shall recover but a third part of his own Land; whereas, if she sue the Heir, she shall recover a third part of the whole.

And it seems this Writ doth lie against the Committee; of the King, of a Wardship and Ward, and Executors of a Gardein in Chivalry, See the Statute of 1 H. 7. 17.

But

But this Writ doth not lie against the Heir as long as he is within age, and in the Kings custody; and therefore if any woman bring this Writ against him in this case, the Heir may have a Writ called Circumspexi Agatis, which is in the nature of a Prohibition to forbid the Judges to proceed any further against the Heir at the Common Law, Co. 9. 16. 4 H. 7.

Circumspexi Agatis, what.

It lieth not against a Gardein in Chivalry, after the Heir is of full age, though the Gardein hold the Land over for a Forfeiture of marriage: Neither doth it lie against the Heir, during his Minority and Wardship, but against the Gardein, Co. 9. 16. Plow. 141.

It lieth not against a Gardein in Socage, Lessee for years, nor a Lessee for years of a Gardein in Chivalry, nor against a Tenant by Statute or Elegit, nor against a Gardein in Chivalry, till he have entred, and after his entry it lieth not against the Heir, Co. lib. Inf. 1 part. fol. 39. Co. 9. 16. Co. 6. 57. F. N. B. 147.

It is a good Plea for the Defendant to say she is endowed already by the same party, or some other for the Land that she doth now demand Dower of: And what else is a good Plea, or not, see before, where Dower is barred temporally or eternally, and where not, Co. 9. 16.

20. What matter is a good Plea to a writ of Dower, and who may plead it,

So to say that her Husband was never seised of any such Estate, as whereof the wife may have Dower, Dyer 41.

So to say she hath accepted a Rent out of the Land in recompence of her Dower, Dyer 19. These are good Pleas.

A Gardein in Chivalry may plead in Bar of Dower, Detainment, or Eloigning of the Body of the Ward; and this is a good Bar to the Woman, so long as she do detain: And if the Heir come in as Vouchee, he may plead the same Plea: But he cannot plead Detainment of Charters, Co. on Litt. fol. 39. Never lawfully married, is a good Plea, and was triable by the ordinary: So that the Husband is yet living, Co. lib. Inf. 1 part. fol. 39.

It is a competent livelihood of the Franck-tenement of the Husband, made and assured in consideration of marriage for the wife, to take effect forthwith after the Husbands death, to endure for her life at the least, if she by her own act do not forfeit or determine it before: And this is made sometimes before, and sometimes after marriage; if it be made before marriage, it will bar the Wife of Dower, but if it be made after marriage, the wife after her Husbands death, hath power either to waive it, and demand her Dower at Common Law, or to accept it; and thereby to be barred of her Dower at Common Law: But that Joynture made before marriage, that must be a Bar to the wife of Dower, must be such a Joynture, as within the words or meaning of the Statute of 27 H. 8. 10. Or else the Wife may have that, and demand Dower also: See before, under the title of Joynture, see fol. 38, &c.

328. 29.
21. Joynture, what.

A Joynture may be made of such things, as whereof a Woman may be endowed, and not of any other things.

22. Of what things a Joynture may be made, or not: What shall be said a good Joynture before marriage to Bar Dower.

If an Estate be made to the wife before marriage, in either of the forms hereafter following, it shall be adjudged within the Statute, and be a Bar of Dower, as to the Husband and Wife, and Heirs of their two Bodies begotten; or to the Husband and Wife, and their Heirs, or to the Husband and Wife, and Heirs of one of them, or to the Husband and Wife for their lives, or to the Husband and Wife, for the term of the life of the Wife, or to the Husband for life, the Remainder to the wife for life, or for life upon condition to perform his Will, or dum vixerit sua, or to the wife in Fee-simple, or in Fee-tail, or to the Husband and Wife, and the Heirs Male of their two Bodies.

And to all such like Estates as beneficial to the Wife, as the least of all these. Co. 4. 2. 27 Hen. 8. 10. Dym 316. Co. 3. 26. & 7. 46. Dyer 96. 218. 317. Plow. 307.

So that the making of a Joynture good by this Statute of 27 H. 8. these things are requisite.

1. The Joynture by the first Limitation, must take effect for her life, in possession or profit, presently after her Husbands death.
2. It must be for her life, at least.
3. It must be made to her self, and not to another.
4. It must be made in satisfaction of the whole, and not a part of her Dower.
5. It must be expressed or averred to be in satisfaction of her Dower, Co. upon Little. 1 part. 35.

But if the Estate be not so made in his first Creation, as the wife may take immediately after her husband, though after it fall out so; yet this is not a Joynture within the Statute to Bar Dower: As if an Estate were made to the Baron for life, the Remainder to another for life, the Remainder to the wife for life; and after it falleth out that he in Remainder for life, die before the husband: So that now by this matter ex post facto she shall take immediately after her husband, yet this is not a Joynture within the Statute. Quod ab initio non valet, in tractu temporis non convalescat; & quæ mala sunt inchoata principio, vix essent bono peragantur exitu. Co. 4. 2. & 4. 3.

If Lands be conveyed to be a Womans before marriage, for part of her Joynture; and after more Land is conveyed after marriage, in full satisfaction of her Joynture; this is no Bar of Dower for Incertainty: And therefore if she refuse that conveyed after marriage, she may have her Dower in all, saving that conveyed before marriage, which she may also keep.

And if an Estate be made to the Wife, for one or more lives of others, or for one thousand years, if she live so long, or for a thousand years; these Estates are not within the Statute, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 36.

If an Estate be made to others in Fee, for her life, upon trust for her benefit, by her assent, and express in full satisfaction of her Dower; this will not Bar her, Co. Idem.

If one Covenant to stand seised to the use of himself in Tail, and after of his wife for life; this is not a Joynture within the Statute, Pafche; 16 Jac. B. R. Wood case.

Señ. 30.
What shall be said a Joynture after marriage
or not.

Such a Joynture as will be a Bar of Dower, being made before marriage, will be a Bar of Dower, if it be made after marriage; so as the wife do accept it and agree to it, after her husbands death: As in the examples before, if such a Form of a Joynture be made after marriage, and accepted after the husbands death by the wife, it will be a Bar of Dower, Co. 4. 4.

If the Husband Devise Land to his Wife for ever in Tail, or for life, for her Joynture, in satisfaction of Dower, and she accept it after his death, this will be a Bar of Dower, Co. 4. 4. Dyer 220.

But if one seised in Fee of Socage Land, and in Tail of Capite Land, Devise by his Will a third part of his Lands and Tenements to his wife in recompence of her Dower, and die, and she enter into the third part of the Fee simple Lands only; by this she is barred of having any more Dower, Dyer 210. 20.

Averment.

If one Devise Lands by Will to his Wife generally, this will not Bar her of Dower, neither can it be averred to be intended for a Joynture: (but upon a Deed of Lands granted in general, such an Averment will lie) unless the Will express so, Co. 4. Broo. 421.

If a Man makes his Wife a Joynture after marriage, and after in his Will devise, that his wife shall have a third part of all his Land with her Joynture; in this case she will have a third part of the whole as a Legacy, and then if she will wave her Joynture, she may have a third part out of all the Residue for her Dower.

If the Husband make a Lease of Lands to his Friends for any number of years, in trust for his wife and children, that she shall have a hundred pound a year out of it, or in any such manner; in this case she may have her Dower out of this Land, and yet have this Provision also. Bridgman Justice.

If an Estate be made to the Husband in Tail, the Remainder to the wife for life, the Remainder to others; this is no such Joynture, as with her Acceptance within the Statute will bar her of Dower; though the Husband die without issue, yet this will not help, but the wife may have Dower in his other Land. But if an Estate be made to the husband and wife for their lives, contra. By three Justices in Sherleys case, M. 12 Jac. B. R.

If her Joynture, after marriage, be made to her by Act of Parliament, she cannot wave it. 27 H. 8. 10. Crompt. Sett. 41.

And note that in all the cases above, where the Joynture is not within the Statute, the wife shall have that Estate, and her Dower also, by Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 36.

If the wife be endowed, and after be evicted out of her Dower, she shall be re-endowed again, in these cases following, viz.

If she be endowed of the immediate Estate of the Heir of her Husband, and be after impeaded and evicted, she may vouch the Heir, and be newly endowed of the rest of the Land she hath from her husband, as if the Ancestor had two Acres by a good Title, and one by a bad; and the wife is endowed of the bad Title Acre, and she is sued for it, and lose it: Now she shall recover her Thirds out of the other two Acres.

And so if she were endowed by the Heir of the Father, and after she be impeaded, and pray in aid of him, and he make default, and she lose the Land, she shall be newly endowed.

So if a Tenant in Tail discontinue, and the Discontinue die, and the wife recover Dower against his issue, after the Issue in Tail brings a Formedon against the wife, and she vouch the same, and that is lost; in this case she shall be re-endowed of the rest, till it be recovered also by the Issue in Tail, Park. Sett. 410.

If there be Great Grand-father, Grand-father, Father and Son, and the Great Grand-father being seised of Land in Fee, and having a wife, doth give it by Deed to the Grand-father in Tail, and he die, and the Father endow his wife after the Father and Great Grand-father die; the Great Grand-mother brings Dower against the wife of the Grand-father, and recovers: Now in this case it seems the Grand-mother shall be re-endowed of as much as she lost. But contra if it were in case of Discent. As Supra. See Crompt. Jurisd. fol. 43. Co. 4. 122.

But if the Heir have no Land in the same County where her Dower doth lie, it seems she shall not be re-endowed by him after Eviction. Co. 9. 19. & 4. 122.

If she be endowed by the Alienee of the Husband, or of the Heir, and she be afterwards evicted, she shall never be re-endowed against either of them, unless it be in case, where her Judgment for her Dower were Conditional, upon the Voucher of the Heir (as the manner is) and after the Judgment is avoided by a Writ of Disceit, and hereby the Heir being Voucher, restored to his Land. Yarm. Part. Sett. 421.

But if she sue the Feoffee of the Husband, and he vouch the Heir in what County soever she shall be endowed of the Heir, to that end, That if she lose, she may be newly endowed, which she could not, if she were not endowed by the Feoffee of her Husband. Coke, Justice in Treckmorton's case.

24. To whom the wife shall be Attendant, and by what Services.

The Wife most commonly shall be Attendant to the Heir in Reversion, and not to the Lord; and she shall Bar a third part of the Services: But if she be endowed by the Gardein in Chivalry, she shall be Attendant to him during the Minority of the Heir for a third part of the Services.

And if she be endowed by a Disseisor, she may be Attendant to him till the Disseisor have the Land again.

And if the Heir grant away the Reversion, and she Attorn to the Grantee, then she shall be Attendant to him.

And if her Husband die without Issue, or Heir, being Tenant in Tail, or in Fee, she shall hold of the Donor or Lord, by the third part of the Services.

But if the Lord purchase the Tenancy, and after the Wife is endowed, she shall hold it discharged of any Services, Perk. Self. 424, &c. Co. 8. 36. 9. 135. Ca. super Littl. 341. 34 Aff. 1.

If the Husband hold of 7. S. by three pence, and he hold over by twenty pence Rent, and *7. 25. Advowson of Dower, when.

It is a Writ lying where an Heir within age, or Gardein doth endow a Woman, that is dowable of more than she should have; then the Heir at his full age may sue the Woman again, and shew this, and get her endowed again more equally, and Re-situation made.

And if the Heir within age, enter and assign before the Gardein enter (as he may) the Heir at his full age may have this Writ, or the Gardein after his Entry, but not the Assignee of the Gardein; and this Writ lieth upon an Assignment in Chancery. *Co. lib. Tenant by the Courtesie, what.

Tenant by the Courtesie, is where a man taketh a wife, seised in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail, General or Special, and hath Issue by his Wife, Male or Female, and the Child be living or dead, if the Wife die, the Husband shall hold this Land, during his life by the Courtesie of the Law of England; and then is he Tenant by the Courtesie. Term. Ley 118.

Self. 34:
25. Of what things the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, or not. In what case the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, or not.

And the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie of Lands or Tenements in Demerit, and of Commons, Advowsons, and the like; also of Honours and Offices (as it seems) and of a Castle and Commonfens number. De Excegnitione, Eng. lib. Law 170 fol. 79. Co. lib. Inf. 1 part. fol. 29, 30.

In all cases where the Issue of a Woman (Inheretrix of Lands) begotten by her Husband, might by possibility inherit that Land as Heir to the Wife of her Estate there, the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, yea; though the Wife had Issue inheritable to the Land by a former Husband, Littl. self. 52. Co. 4. 61. 834.

But then these things must be in the case.

1. The Birth must be a Child, not a Monster; but though it have some deformity, or defect in the Hand, or Foot; if it have Human shape it sufficeth.

2. It must be born living, not dead.
3. It must be born before, not after the Mothers death.
4. The wife must have an Actual Seisin of the thing, whereof he would be Tenant by the Courtesie before her death, if it be to be had, as in these cases:

If a Man have issue by a Woman Inheretrix, that hath issue by a former Husband, and the last issue be dead; or if the Inheritance descend to the wife, after the issue born, or after the issue is dead, or the Estate-tail determine by the death of the Woman Tenant in Tail, without issue; yet in these cases the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, Co. 8. 34. Littl. 35. 52. Dyer 25. 95. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 29.

If a Woman have a Rent or Advowson in Fee, and die before any day of payment, or Avoidance come; yet the Husband shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, for here he could not have Seisin, Co. 192. Keth. 104.

Str. 35.

But if the Inheritance whereof the wife is seised, be such, as by no possibility, the Issue between them may inherit the Estate the wife had, as Heir to the wife, or the child be a Monster, or born dead, or born after the Mothers death, as if it be ripped out of the Mothers Belly, or the wife have no actual Seisin, or the wife have onely a Right, or the Estate is in suspense at her death, he shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie.

And yet if the Suspension of a Seigniorie, Rent, or Common, be but for years; as if a Tenant make a Lease for years of the Tenancy to the Seigniorie, who taketh a husband and hath Issue, and the wife dieth; now he shall be Tenant by the Courtesie, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. 29.

And therefore in all these cases following, the husband shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie: As if the Intail be on the Heirs Males, and they have onely Heirs Females; or the wife be disseised, and she die before any re-entry made; or a Wife-Lady, and a man her Tenant, and they inter-marry, and they have issue, and the wife die, the husband shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie of the Seigniorie; or if the Ancestor die seised of the Land, and before the Woman enter, she die; or if he be attainted of Felony, and after get a Pardon, and after his wife dieth; or the wife have onely a bare Title, Use, or Reversion, or Remainder, Expectant on a Freehold; in all these cases he shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie, Co. 4. 81. 8. 34. Perk. sect. 457, 458, 459. Co. 1. 98. 3 H. 7. 5. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 29. 40, 338. Co. lib. Inst. fol. 29.

An Occupant or Occupancy is either General or Special; the General Occupancy, is where an Estate is made or granted of Lands or Tenements to J. S. (or to J. S. his Executors or Assigns) during the life of any other person or persons, and he that hath this Estate dieth, during the life or lives; in this case, now he that can first get into the possession, by Entry into these Lands or Tenements, so granted after the death of the Tenant, he shall have it during the same life or lives, and then he is said to be a General Occupant, and his Estate a General Occupancy. So that in this case the Law is, Capiat qui capere potest.

26. Occupant or Occupancy, what. The kinds.

The nature of it.

And this Estate, he that gaineth it, he may grant away to another, and if he do not so but die, and leave it so, then it will be in the same case as before, and so as oft as it so hapneth; but otherwise it is of such a Grant of Rent, Common, or such like thing.

The Special Occupancy and Occupant, is where Lands or Tenements are granted to J. S. and his Heirs, during the life of any other person or persons; in this case, if he that hath this Estate, dieth, the Heir shall have it, and no other person can gain it by Entry, as in the first case; and this is called a Franck-tenement Descendible.

lives; for neither he to whom it is made, his Heir, nor the Occupant, shall have aid: This Heir shall not be charged by a Specialty, whereby this Tenant doth binde him, and his Heirs; he is punishable for Waste or Forfeiture, and liable to pay Rent, and perform the Service of the Tenant, as another Tenant for life is; the wife shall not be endowed, the husband shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie, and the Occupant is bound to pay the Rents, and perform the Covenants annexed to the Estate, as another Tenant for life is bound.

And the right that men have to Beasts and Birds that are Fera natura, is but a kinde of Occupancy, whiles they keep them they are their own, though they have no Property in them; and when they are gone, they are any mans that can catch them. See Property. Co. 10. 98. on Littl. 41. Littl. Self. 167. 41. 339. 388. Dyer 264.

A Special Occupancy may be of a Rent, Annuity, Advowson, Common, or the like thing that lieth in Grant. But a general Occupancy (as it seems) can be of nothing but of Houses, Lands, and such like things. And therefore if a Rent, Common, or the like thing be granted to J. S. during the life of any other person or persons, and J. S. die, during the life or lives of that person or persons, or those persons; in these cases, it seems the Rent doth cease, and the Common cannot now be enjoyed by any other person or persons, the first Grantee being dead, Littl. 168. Plow. 556. Co. upon Littl. part. 41. Nor can an Occupancy be of a Copihold. And therefore if a Tenant for his own life, of Copihold-Land, Surrender his Land to the Lord, to the use of A. B. and the Lord admit A. for the life of A. This is a Surrender of all his Estate, and when A. dieth, the Estate is ended, and the Copiholder shall not have it again, Co. 1. 41. Mich. 7 Car. Agreed by all the Judges in the Exchequer Chamber.

27. Where a man shall be said to be an Occupant, and adjudged to be in as of an Estate in Occupancy, or not.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. If one make a Lease to J. S. (without more words, or to J. S. his Executors and Assigns,) during the life of any other person or persons; this after the death of J. S. will be an Occupancy; and if in this, and such like cases, the first Lessee for life make a Lease for years, or at Will to a stranger; and this second Lessee is in Possession, and the Lessee for life die, the Lease for years, or at Will, not ended; it seems this Lessee for years, or at Will, shall be the Occupant, albeit he never claim as Occupant. But if in this case the Lessee for years, or at Will, be out of Possession, and the Heir, Executor, or Administrator of the first Lessee, can first get into Possession, he may be the Occupant. So if one Disseise the Tenant for anothers life, and the same Tenant die before his Entry; the Disseisor will be the Occupant. So if he in Remainder for life Disseise the Tenant for life, and then the Tenant for life dieth, he in Remainder shall have it, and the wrong is purged, Hill. 38 Eliz. B. R. Ross case. M. 17 Jac. B. R. Wherrywoods case. 38 H. 6. 28. Plow. 38. 558. Fitz. Bar. 303. Co. 10. 98. Dyer 321.

2. If Tenant by the Courtesie, or Tenant in Dower grant his Estate to J. S. and J. S. die; in this case there will be no Occupancy, and therefore it seems these Tenants shall have it again, for they are Tenants to the Lord notwithstanding the Grant, Adjudg, Stanhops case. Mich. 17 Jac. B. R. So if Tenant in Tail Grant totum status suum. (i. e.) all his Estate, Mich. 17 Jac. B. R. But Quere.

3. If a Tenant for anothers life, Grant away his Estate for life to J. S. and say not to him and his Heirs; this after the death of the Grantee, will be a general Occupancy: And the like is said of Tenant in Dower, and by the Courtesie, Plow. 556. 28. Fitz. Bar. 303.

4. If one seised in Fee of Land, or seised of it for his own life, or the life of another, and he grant it to J. S. and his Heirs for his life: this is not a General Occupancy, but a Special Occupancy. So if a Lease be to J. S. and his Assigns, for the life of J. D. and J. S. assign it to K. L. and his Heirs for the life of J. D. this is a Special; and by this the mischief of the General Occupancy is avoided, Co. 10. 98. Dyer 321. Bakers case. Hill. 37 Eliz. Co. B.

5. If

5. If a Tenant in Tail bargain and sell his Land by Indented Deed to another and his Heirs, the Bargainee hath but a Franck-tenement descendible to his Heirs, determinable on the death of the Tenant in Tail; this is not an Occupancy, nor after that nature; for the Wife of the Bargainee will be endowed, as long as the Estate doth continue, and the Bargainee cannot be punished for Waste or Forfeiture, Co. 10. 98.

6. No Occupancy shall be against the King, neither shall Entry before him; prejudice him, Co. on Littl. 41.

7. Every Entry or coming upon the Land after the death of the Tenant, will not give a man this Estate as an Occupant, but it must be a purposed Entry: And therefore if a man follow his Hawk or Hounds over the Ground; by this he is not an Occupant, Udall's case, 32 Eliz. B. R. Adjudged.

8. An Executor cannot be a Special Occupant, but he that first enters, though he never Claim the Land, shall be the Occupant: And therefore if Lessee for three other lives, make a Lease for years, and then die; the Lessee for years is the Occupant, and the Lease for years is drowned. By Baron Thorpe at Gloucester Assizes, 1654.

9. The way to prevent the mischief of a General Occupancy is to take in the word Heirs, or for the Tenant that hath an Estate of Land lyable to this mischief, to grant it away, and make Livery upon it, or bargain and sell it by Deed indented and inrolled, or to Covenant to stand seised of it to the use of his Wife, or some of his Blood, or to make a Lease for years of it determinable upon the lives, by which the Estate is held.

An Estate for years is, where one holdeth Lands or Tenements for a time, or number of years in Certain. And this is one of the left and lowest kinde of Estates; (for this though it be a Lease for one thousand years) yet is it (in Judgment of Law) but a Real Chattel that shall go to the Executor or Administrator, and may be forfeited upon an Outlawry in any Action, as a mans Goods and Chattels may be; and this may be made without Deed. And yet this in many things is like to a Lease for life; for he that hath this Estate, shall have House-boot, Fire-boot, Plough-boot, &c. (for which see Houf-boot.) He may charge or grant it, during his Term, and no longer; he may not make Waste in it, or make any Estate of the Land he so holdeth for longer time, then he hath in it; and if he do make any Estate of Freehold of it, and it be executed by Livery of Seisin, it is a Forfeiture of the Estate. No Wife in this case shall have Dower, nor Husband be Tenant by the Courtesie, 14 Hen. 7. chap. 3. Finches Lay 44. Littl. Sess. 38. Co. upon Littl. 46.

28. Estates for years, what, The nature of it.

Houf-boot.

For this, take these things:

1. A Lease for life or years, may be made with, or without a Deed, or by way of Fine, Record, Bargain, and Sale, or Covenant to stand seised to Uses upon good consideration of marriage, and the like.

2. If one by writing, make a Lease of Land for years in the Premises, Habendum to the Lessee, and his Heirs; this, if Livery and Seisin be made upon it is a Fee-simple. But if it be, To him and his Heirs for a certain number of years, and no Livery of Seisin made; this is but a Lease for yeares, Co. 2. 24. 34 H. 6. 17.

3. A. by Articles in writing, covenanted and agreed to and with B. that he should occupy and enjoy White-acre for seven years; this is a good Lease for seven years, Adjudge, Hubbard, Rep. 49. 5 Hen. 7. 2. 21 Hen. 6. 37. Dyer 150.

4. If one grant a Rent of twenty pound a year, until one hundred pound be paid; this is a Lease for five years of the Rent. But if it be of a Manor of the value of twenty pound a year, that such a Lease were made of in this manner; this were a Lease for life of the Lessee, determinable upon the payment of the money, Co. upon Littl. 42.

What shall be said to be a Lease for years, or not.

5. If one grant the next Advowson of a Church to J. S. and his Heirs; this is

but

but in the nature of a Chattel, 34 H. 6. 27. But see much more of this thing in my Book of Common Assurances, fol. 110, 111. and Chap. 14. fol. 267:

Estate at Will,
what.

The kindes.

An Estate at Will, is either by Custom, and so are all Copihold Estates; for which see Copihold, or by Common Law: And this is where a Lease is made, during pleasure. And this is either at the will of the Lessor; and this is most Common: Or at the will of the Lessee, or during the pleasure of the Lessor and Lessee both together: As when it is made at will indefinitely, and say not of the Lessor or Lessee. And so are all Leases at Will, though it be exprest onely to be at the Will of one of them, yet the other is implied.

And this is the least and lowest kinde of Estate that can be made, yet the Lessee may enter upon, or have Action against a stranger that doth enter upon him. It is a Chattel also that will go to the Executor or Administrator, if the Lease be not determined, (as commonly it is by the death of the party;) but if he have a Copihold Manor, he may make Estates according to the Custom. But this Estate is neither grantable over, nor chargable; yet if the Lessee sow the Land, and die, his Executors shall reap the Corn: And the Lessee here, must take heed he do not make voluntary Waste; for this is punishable: And yet it seems he may take the Shrouds of the Trees. This Estate may be made, rendering Rent or Service.

Election.

And for this the Lessor may distrain as long as the Lease doth continue; and when it is determined, have an Action of Debt for it. And during the Lease, he may distrain or bring Action of Debt at his Election. And this differeth from the Estate of the Tenant by Sufferance, for he holdeth always by wrong; but Tenant at Will holdeth always by right. If the Lessor enter and determine the Will, he shall not hurt the Lessee, for he shall have the Corn, and time to take his Goods, Co. upon Littl. 56. 551. 57. 270. 14 H. 8. 17. Littl. 14. 72. 27 H. 6. 3. 21 Ed. 4. 5. Co. 2. 24. 20 H. 6. 30.

Sec. 38.
29. What shall be said an Estate at Will,
or not.

If a Feoffment be made in Fee, Gift in Tail, or Lease for life, and no Livery of Seisin is made upon the Deed, to perfect the Estate; this is but an Estate at Will, Co. 2. 24.

So if a Lease be made for years, and it is not exprest for what number of years; this is a Lease at Will, 21 H. 7. 38.

So if one Lease a ground to J. S. for a year, and after by consent of the Lessor J. S. doth continue it for many years, as the course is; some would have this a Lease from year to year, at the first years Rent by Implication; but this (it seems) is nothing but a Tenancy at Will.

If one enter upon anothers Land, and occupy it, and Claim onely an Estate at Will; this is no Estate at Will, but a Disseisin.

So if a Bargain and Sale be made that is void, as if it be by a Corporation, and done by a wrong name, or the like; in these cases there is no Estate at Will made, but they are Disseisins, Littl. sett. 461. Plow. 537.

By what means it is, or may be determined, or not.

This Lease at Will, may be determined by his Will, at whose Will it was made: Or if it be made indefinitely at Will, and it say not at whose will, it is at both their Wills, and either of them may determine it.

But this may be determined by the Act of God; As where the Party by whose will the Lease is held, die; but otherwise it is, if onely one of them, if it be at the will of two, die; or by the Act of the Law, when the Law doth make a Construction upon some Acts to be a Determination of the Will, as if the Lessee do make voluntary Waste; or the Lessor doth take the Cattle of the Lessee upon the ground for Rent, and impound them; by this the Will is determined. And yet if a Femsole make a Lease at Will, and after take a Husband; this doth not determine the Will. So if a Woman-sole be Tenant at Will, and take a Husband; the Lease at Will, is not determined by this. So (it seems) the Law is where two Joyntenants make a Lease at Will, and one die; the Lease at Will is not ended, but the Rent shall go to the Survivor. So if it be made to three, and one of them die, the Lease is not determined. And by the Act of the Parties themselves, it may be determined many ways; as by an Actual Countermand in writing, or by word, made by him, at whose Will the Estate is held: Or by his making of a Feoffment, or Lease to another of the

the same Land; or by the Entry of the Lessor upon the Lessee; or by the Lessee's leaving of the possession; these and other things will determine the Estate. But when the Determination is, be it by what means it will, no prejudice shall be to either Party; for if the Lessee sow the Land, he shall not be prevented of the reaping of it, unless he turn out himself by his Determination of the Will. And if there be a Rent reserved, the other Party cannot determine the Lease a little before the Rent day, to prevent him of his Rent. See for all these things, Co. upon Littl. 55, 56, 57. 11. 18. 2. 35, 55, 59. Kelm. 65. 162. 9 H. 7. 24. 13 H. 8. 25. Co. 8. 17. 21. 6. 35. Dyer 62. 4 Hen. 6. 11. 21 Hen. 6. 37. 11 Aff. 14. 8 Edw. 3. 63. 8 Aff. 28.

An Estate at Sufferance (if it be any Estate at all) is (strictly taken) where a man's Entry into Land was once lawful, or by Authority, or he had an Estate, which is now ended, and yet he doth continue in the Possession of the Land: As where one is Lessee for years, and the years are expired, or Lessee for another's life, who is dead, and yet the Lessee keeps in Possession, and keeps out him that hath next right; in this case, if it be an Estate, it is an unlawful one. And the Party in Reversion or Remainder kept out, may have against him that is in Possession, the Writ called Ad terminum qui prateriit. And yet if the Lessor, or he in Reversion, have once entered upon the Lessee, then he may not have this Writ, but must have some other Remedy; nor will this Writ lie after the death of Tenant in Dower, or by the Court's lease. But if such a Tenant hold himself in the Land, after his Term ended, unless it be against the Lessors will, he is no wrong doer, till the Lessor have made his Entry. But for all this, see Co. upon Littl. 270, 271. 7 Ed. 4. 6. 11 Aff. 14. 21 H. 7. 38. 22 Ed. 4. 38. 14 H. 8. 11. 37 Aff. 8. Brownl. Rep. 338. 30.

This Tenant by Sufferance (more largely) is any one that entrencheth into, and taketh the profits of my Lands by my Sufferance: For which see Plow. 537, 538. Co. 4. 24. Dyer 28. 57. 62. 328. Co. upon Littl. 270, 271.

Quare ejecit infra terminum, is a Writ lying where a man maketh a Lease for years; and after the Lease made, and before it be expired, he himself putteth out the Lessee; or he maketh a Feoffment, or Lease to another, and the Lessee or Feoffee doth put out the Termor; in this case he may have this Writ against him, that so putteth him out, and therein shall recover his Term, and his Damages: Westm. 2. ch. 24. F. N. B. 197.

This Writ of Ejectione Firme, is now become one of the most common Actions in Use, and is used frequently for Tryal of Titles, and is the common roade that men go to the Recovery of the Possession of those Lands wherein, or whereto they have a Right or Title, the which they do in this method. They first enter upon the Land, and then they make a short Lease of it to some Friend, and this they Seal and Deliver to him upon the Land, and then he enters, and being put out, brings this Action, and thereby recovers his Lease, and the Possession of the Land. To this Action (being of every days use) we shall therefore speak somewhat largely, and especially to these things. 1. The Entry of the Lessor that hath the Right. 2. The Lease made by him for the Tryal of the Title. 3. The Entry of the Lessee. 4. The Entry upon him and his Ouster and Ejectionment. 5. The Proces or Pleading in the Action or Suit.

As touching the Entry of the Lessor that hath right to the Land, there are two things considerable; First, Whether he hath any Right or Title to the Land at all: For if it appear the Defendant to have Right to the Land, the Plaintiffs Action will fail. But this is a point too large and general to be discussed here: And yet take here these few things by the way; 1. That a man may have a Right or Title to that Land whereof, and wherein he hath not the possession or property. 2. Right is where Land is taken wrongfully from another by Disseisin, or the like, the Challenge or Claim of him from whom it is taken, is called a Right. 3. There is a Right of Action, which is when there is no Remedy left but an Action to recover the Land, and there is a Right of Entry, when the party claiming, may for his Relief, either enter into the Land, or have an Action to recover it; and there is a Title of Entry, which is where no wrong is done, and yet one hath a lawful course to enter upon the Land which another hath, but hath no Action to recover it: As where Entry is given to a man for a condition broken, upon an Elcheat, the dying of a Tenant without Heir; in all which cases he must make his entry before he can bring any Action; Plow. 358. 255. Finchley 105. Co. 10. 48. 8. 153. 4. The property and title of Land is made and may be gained either by entry, as in case of occupation, where Land is granted to L. S. per ann. vic. and L. S. die, in this case he that gets first in possession shall have the Estate. By descent where a man hath Land of Inheritance, and dieth not disposing of it. By Elcheat where the Owner dieth seised, without any Heir, which may be because he is a Bastard, or because he is attainted of Treason or Felony. By Conveyance, and so the property of Land is transferred, and so it is passed by ten manner of waies, or by ten kinde of Conveyances, Fine, Recovery, Feoffment, Grant, Bargain and Sale, Lease, Exchange, Surrender, Release or Confirmation. Of all which see my Book of Common Assurances at large. A man may come by a property of Land by an Execution also, as by an Elegit or Extent, of which see in Execution. And just, Dodridge 2. part. f. 28. Co. upon Litt. 10. 2. If he ever had a right of entry into the Land, the next thing considerable is, whether it do continue and be not taken away: for one may have a right of Action and no right of Entry to recover his Land, and he that will maintaine this Action must make himself a title under the Lessor that had a right of entry into the Land when he made the Lease, for he that makes the Lease must have a power and right of entry at the time of the Lease made, otherwise neither the entry nor the Lease will be good. We shall therefore insist a while upon this point, to shew when a Descent will take away an Entry. For the opening whereof let these things be observed.

When an entry is gone by a descent or not.
See 2.

1. That the Law doth much regard descents, which seem to adde some strength to the Title. And therefore if one wrongfully enter upon the possession of my Land, as being a Disseisor, Abator, or Intruder, and put me out of my Freehold and Inheritance by Disseisin, Abatement, &c. he may hold it against all men but me, and if I suffer him in quiet possession five years after his entry, without entry or continuall claim, and then he die in possession and this Land descend to his Heir, by this means he hath gained the right of possession against me, and I have lost my right of entry; and have no remedy left me by which to recover the Land; but by a feall Action, Writ of entry, Assise, or the like. And this Action if I bring not in the time appointed by the Statutes of Limitation, I shall lose also, and consequently my right to the Land it self, having no means to recover it, and so be without remedy, Litt. lib. 1. Chap. 6. Plow. 47. Finchley 120. D. & St. 24. 32 H. 8. 33.

If I be seised of Land in Fee, and disseised by another, and he continue in possession five years without entry or claim, and then die, and his Heir enter; in this case my entry is gone, and I am put to my Writ of entry Sur Disseisin for my remedy, Litt. Sect. 385. So if the Disseisor give the Land in taylor, and the Tenant in taylor die seised, having issue, and it descend to his issue, Litt. Sect. 386. So if I be Feoffee in Fee, or Donee in taylor, and be disseised, and the Disseisor die seised, Litt. 392. So if a Feme sole be Disseised, and after take a Husband, and the Disseisor die seised during the coverture; the entry of the wife is gone, and she is put to her Writ, Litt. 404.

If one be disseised of Land, and the Disseisor give the same Land to another in taylor, and the Tenant in taylor hath issue and die seised of that Estate, and the issue enter; in this case the entry of the Disseisee is gone, and he is put to his Action if he will have remedy, Litt. chap. 386.

If a Feoffee in Fee, or a Donee in taylor be upon condition, and he is Disseised, and the Disseisor die seised, the Feoffee or Donee hath lost his entry and is put to his Action, Litt. 392. If a Feme Disseisor marry a husband and have issue and after the wife die seised, and after the husband die, and then the Heir enter, it seems the Disseisor is barred of entry, 9 H. 7. 33. H. 6.

If an Infant Disseise another, and Alien the land, and the Alienee die seised, his Heir within age; the Disseisee is barred of his entry, but if the Disseisor within age enter upon the Heir, as he may, then may the Disseisee enter upon the Infant because the descent is defeated, Litt. 407, 408. If one Disseise another, and make a Feoffment upon condition, and the Feoffee die seised, the entry of the Disseisee is gone:

gone: but if the Disfeisor enter for the condition broken, then he may enter upon him, List. 409.

If one Disfeise a man and Ouste his lessee for years at once, and die seised, the Disfeisee cannot enter, but is put to his Action; but the Lessee for years may enter. But if it were a Disfeison of a Tenant for life, Contra. List. 411. If a Daughter be Disfeised, and after there is a dying seised, and then the Son is born; this Descent will barre him of his entry, Broo. 450. If a Disfeisor make a Lease for years, and after die seised, this will barre the Disfeisee of his entry Broo. 453. If an Infant make a Feoffment, and after his full age the Feoffee die seised; or a Lessee for life Alien, and the Alienee die seised; or a Devise be of Land on condition, and the Heir of the Devisor enter and die seised; in these cases the entry is gone, and they are put to their Action, 21 H. 6. 7. List. 96: 9 H. 6: 25. If one bargain and sell his Land, and the Bargainee enter, and after the Bargainor enter upon him and die seised, the entry of the Bargainee is gone.

If an Abator or Intruder, or one that hath but title that may have an Action, die seised, this descent taketh away entry, List. Disceints Plow. 47. List. 96: 1 Cow. super List. 238. If the Ancestor do not die seised in Fee, or Fee-tayle, but term of life only, this will not take away entry, List. Cap. 387. Finchessley. F. 120. If one be disfeised of a Reversion or Remainder only, and die so seised, and it descend to his Heir, this will not barre him that hath right of his entry, List. cap. 388. 390. If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant be disfeised, and he Alien in Fee, and the Alienee die without Heir, and the Lord enter as in his Ekcheate, here the Disfeisee is not barred of his Entry, but may enter upon the Lord, for here is no descent to the Heir, Finchessley. f. 120. If one be seised of Land in Fee, or in Fee-tayle upon condition, and the condition be broken, and the Feoffee or Donee die seised, yet this doth not take away the entry of the Feoffor or Donor, but he may enter upon the Heir. So if the Feoffee or Donee on Condition be disfeised, and before or after the condition broken the Disfeisee die seised; yet the entry of the Feoffor or Donor is not gone, but he may enter upon him, List. 391. 22 H. 6. 11. If a Disfeisor die seised, and after his Heir endow the Wife of the Disfeisor of a third part, and she enter into it; now the Disfeisee after the endowment is not barred of his entry into the third part, but may enter upon the Wife, List. 393. If a Disfeisor infeoff his Father, and he die seised, and the Land descend upon him, the Disfeisee may enter upon him, notwithstanding this descent, List. 395. If any of the younger sons enter by abatement after the Fathers death, and have issue, and die seised, or his issue die seised, this will not barre the eldest son of his entry. So if one daughter enter upon all the Land descended, and die seised of it: but if after the eldest son have entred, or all the daughters have entred, one of the younger sons, or one of the daughters disfeise the other and die seised Contra. List. 397. Plow. 306. If an Infant have cause of entry and the Descent happen while he is within age; this will not barre him of his entry. So if the right of entry happen to a Feme covert whiles she is so; and the dying seised be before she is sole; her entry is not lost. So if the cause of entry and descent happen whiles a man is de non sane memory, yet the Heir of such man so disfeised may enter. So if the Disfeisee be in prison, or out of the Realm at the time of the disfeison, and dying seised, their entry is preserved for them, List. 402. 403. 405. 21. H. 6: 17 List. 437. If a Disfeisor enter into religion, whereby his Land comes to his Heir, this will not barre the Disfeisee of his entry upon his Heir, List. 410. If a Tenant for life be, the remainder to the right Heirs of I. S. and the Tenant for life is disfeised, and a descent is cast, and after I. S. die and after the Tenant for life die; in this case the entry of the Heir of I. S. is not gone, but he may enter, for his remainder was in Custodia Legis, Coo. 1. 134. If one had intruded upon the King, and after the King grant away the Land, and before entry or seisure by the Patentee the intruder doth die seised, this will not barre the entry of the Patentee, Dyer. 266. Out of all which it appeareth that if one man do wrongfully enter upon another mans possession, and put the right Owner of the Freehold and Inheritance from it, he doth thereby get the Freehold and Inheritance by Disfeison, and he may hold it against all men but the Disfeisee. And if such a Disfeisor or Abator

having the possession five years after the Disseisin or abatement, die in possession and the Land descend to his Heir, by this the Heir hath gained the possession of the Land against him that hath right untill he can recover it by a fix real Action. And if this be not brought within 60 years after the Disseisin or abatement, the right Owner doth lose his right for ever. But then that descent which taketh away entry, must be a descent and not a succession; as if a Corporation disseise me, and there be twenty successions, this will not hurt me. And this descent must be such as hath in it these things.

1 It must be a dying seised of an Estate in Fee-simple or Fee tayle, and not for life only.

2 It must be a dying seised of the possession and Franktenement also; and not of a Reversion or Remainder only. 3 He that dieth seised, and he that hath right of entry do claim by severall Titles, and not by the same Title.

4 The Disseisin and descent must be in time of peace, for if it be in time of war, it doth not prejudice to him that hath right.

5 The Disseisor or Abator must have the quiet possession of the Land five years before the descent without any entry or continuall claim, made by him that hath the right of entry or title.

6 He that hath the right of entry is of full age infra quatuor Maria, of sound memory, out of prison, and sole; for if the party be within age, beyond sea, non Compos mentis in prison, or a Feme covert at the time of his descent, it will not Bar.

7 But herein the whole time from the Disseisin to the descent cast is considerable; for if the person be not privileged at all times, the descent binds: As if a Feme covert be Disseised, and the husband dieth, and she take a new husband, and then the descent is cast: or one ultra mare is disseised, and he return into England, and then goeth beyond sea again, and then a descent is cast, in these cases the descent will bar the entry because of the interim, 9 H. 7. 24. Dyer. 143. Ca. upon Lit. Descent. Stat. 32. H. 8. 33.

If one have divers children, and the eldest being a Bastard doth enter after his fathers death, and quietly hold the Land without re-entry or claim all his life time, and hath issue, and dieth seised, and the issue enter, in this case the Action and Entry both of the mulier are gone, and he is without remedy.

So if one have two Daughters, one a Bastard, they divide, and the Bastard die seised of her part, and her issue enter, the other Daughter is without remedy. Litt. sect. 401. 499. 300.

An entry also may be gone by lapse of time, and therefore if the right or title of entry did first accrue to a person more then twenty years since, and he were at that time of full age, not a Feme covert, nor in prison, not beyond the seas, or Non Compos mentis; and if he were so, and have not made his entry within ten years after his full age, discoverture, coming, of sound mind, enlargement out of prison, coming into the Realm or death; the entry is gone and the party barred thereof for ever, 21. Jac. 16.

Now having shewed where this entry is given, we are to shew how it must be made, and when it is well made or not; for if it be not well made, this Action is not maintainable. And for the clearing of this point, take these rules and cases following.

1 This entry is to be made by the party that hath right.

2 It is a purposed going into or setting his foot upon the Land as upon his own Land, Co. upon Litt. 143. Dyer. 337.

3 This may be done by the party himself that hath right to enter, or by his Attorney by warrant from him, or by another to his use, and if it be done by Attorney he must have a good authority, and see he do duely pursue it, Co. on Lit. 257. 258.

4 The Lessor must have a right of entry; for if the right of entry be taken away the Lease is not good. And for this see the case before.

5 He or one of them at least that hath the right, or one for him must make the entry. But for the opening of this branch, these things must be known:

1 That

Entry good or not.

Sec. 3.
Entry of one gives advantage to another.

1 That one Joyntenant, Tenant in Common or Coparcener having right to enter may if he will, enter for all the rest.

2. If such a person enter generally, or for or in the name of himself and the rest, and the rest do not after disagree to it, this is a good entry for himself and the rest. And therefore if one have issue a son and daughter by one venter, and a son by another, and being seised of Capite-Land devise all to the youngest son, and die, and he enter into all, this entry shall avail the eldest son to put him in possession of the third part, Adjudg. Swals Case. M. 14 Jac. Co. B. But if he enter specially to his own use; as if two have right of Entry, and one of them enter, and make a Feoffment of all the Land with warranty; this Entry will not help the other. So if the other do after disagree to it, he shall have no advantage by it, Lit. 160. Dyer. 53. 128. Co. upon Litt. 243. 3. If the Tenant for life enter he in remainder may take advantage by it, 4 H. 7. 9. Dyer. 53. 4. By the entry of the husband into that Land he claimeth in right of his wife, the Freehold and possession is in the wife, Noy 97. 5. When the entry is not lawfull, the Entry of one will not advantage another, 1 H. 6. 5. 8 H. 6. 16. 31 Aff. 33.

4. The Entry into one part may be sufficient to gain the possession of the rest of the Land. But for the further opening of this branch these cases must be laid down;

the whole;

1. If a man have right to enter into Lands or Tenements in divers Villages within one County accrewed to him at one, or at several times, and he enter upon one part of it in one Village in the name of all the rest, to which he hath right to enter within all the Villages of that County; By this he hath gotten the possession of the whole, Litt. Self. 417. Dyer. 337. 227. Co. upon Litt. 252. 9 H. 7. 25. And yet some make a difference here, and grant this only where an Estate is to vest, as where the Freehold in Law is in one, as in an Heir by descent, and the possession is in no man, nor no Estate to be divested, that here only entry into part reduceth all into possession: And therefore, that if the Lord be to enter for a mortmain, or the Feoffor for a condition broken or the disseisee upon a Disseisin, and he enter upon part for all; that this is not sufficient to reduce all. But I take it the experience is otherwise, however therefore it is safest to enter upon every part of the Land, Co. upon Litt. 15. 6. 252. 2. If three several men severally disseise one of three Acres in one County, and he enter into one of them in the name of all the three Acres, this is good only for that he doth enter upon, and will not reduce them all in possession. And yet if these three Acres come after the Disseisin into one mans possession, there perhaps an Entry upon one may reduce all. But if one man disseise me of three Acres in one County at several times; My Entry into one of them in the name of all the rest will reduce them all, 14. & 15. Eliz. Earl of Arundels Case. Co. upon Litt. 15. 2. 9 H. 7. 25. But for Land that lies in several Counties there must be Entries made in every County, 4 H. 7. 25. Litt. 417. 3. If one man disseise me of three Acres, and make a Lease thereof to three persons for life, and I enter upon one of them in one mans possession in the name of all the rest, this will reduce that Acre only, and is not good for the rest. And if one disseise me of three Acres lying in three Villages in one County, and he levy a Fine of the Acre in one Village, and after I enter into one of the other Acres in the name of all the three Acres; this doth not reduce the Acre whereof the Fine was levied, without a special Entry into it. Dyer. 337. But if Leases were made for years of three Acres and gotten by Disseisin to several Tenants, and Entry into one in the name of the rest will recontinue, and reveist all the three Acres, Co. upon Litt. 252. And so a fortiori, where three Acres are in the possession of three men, and I having right to them enter into one of them in the name of them all, this will reduce all the three Acres: The course is in the cases where Entrie is needfull upon every parcel, as where Lessees claim by several Titles, &c. to enter upon every parcel, and leave a friend upon it to keep the possession, and then to seal the Lease upon the principal parcel where his last Entry is made, and then the Lessee doth enter upon all, and the men depart; for if he enter in one part only, and seal a Lease of the whole, this is not good for the rest, M. 8. Jac. Curia. But otherwise it is where Entry into a part is good for all, as where a disseisor hath made several Leases for years years, there the Disfeisee doth enter into any part in the name of all, and seal a lease of all, and this is good for all. And if the lessees do continue in the possession, this is an Ouster upon which the Lessee may have an Ejectione Firme, Curia Pasch 9 Jac. B. R. Lovess Case. 4. If I enfeoffe one of one Acre of ground upon condition, and enfeoffe him of another Acre upon condition, both Acres in one County, and both conditions are broken; in this case an Entry into one Acre in the name of both is not good to reduce both. 5. The entry into parts must be in the name of all. For if one that is disfeised of two Acres in one County, enter generally into one of them without saying in the name of both; this will only reveist that Acre wherein the Entry is made, 5 H. 7. 7. Co. super Litt. 252. And therefore if Lands in one County be in the occupation of A. B. and C. and I have right to them, and I enter into one of them generally, and do not declare my intent to reduce all; it is said this is a good Entry only for that one Acre wherein I put my Foot, Per Justice Hutson at Sarum Affises, 22 Jac. If one restrain his own Entry, and make it special, and say that it shall be to that Acre only, wherein he puts his foot, in this case it reduceth the possession of no more but of that part, Co. upon Litt. 15: 6. If a Lease be made to A. and delivered to B. to the use of A. and B. enter to the use of A. and after is ousted, A. may bring this Action upon the Entry, P. 44. Eliz. B. R. Purtil v. Bishop.

Sect. 5.

And now having done with the matter of Entry of the Lessor, we are to speak of Leases; for to maintain this Action a good Lease must be shewed forth. For the opening of the learning thereof, take these Observations. 1. The Lease to try the Title must be well made, sealed and delivered as other Deeds and Leases are to be done. For this See my Book of Common Assurances, Chap. 4. & 14. 2. The Lease and Entry may be made by the party Lessor himself, if he be of full age, and not a feme covert, or by his Attorney by a Letter of Attorney thus. The Lessor may seal and sign the Lease, and seal and deliver a Letter of Attorney at the same time to some friend, and in this he must recite the Lease and give the Attorney power to enter in to the Land, and there to deliver the Lease to the Lessee as his Deed, and then the Attorney must do it in such sort as the Lessor himself is to do it, and he must not deliver it till he come to the Land. 3. The Lease must be delivered upon the Land; For if the Lessor seal and deliver the Lease before his Entry, it is void.

And for this cause, if a wife and J. S. be Jointenants in Fee, and being ousted they make a Lease to try the Title, and J. S. and the husband enter and deliver the Lease upon the Land, or the wife enter and before the ouster deliver the Lease out of the Land, this is not a good Lease by the wife. But if the husband and wife make a lease and Letter of Attorney to enter and deliver it upon the Land, this may be good, Trin. 9. Jac. B. R. Burnel and Merediths Case. A Copie-holder may make a Lease for a year without license to try the Title: So may a Tenant in common make a Lease of his part for this end. See more Brownl. 1 part. 129.

If a Lease be made of white Acre to B. from off the Land, and in the Lease is a Letter of Attorney to a stranger to deliver it as his Deed upon the Land, but the Lease is not delivered, this is not a good Authority, B. R. 4. Car. If A. Lease his Land to B. from off the Land, and seal and deliver it as his Deed off from the Land, C. being then in the Land, by Disfeisin, and after this the Attorney that hath power by another Deed to deliver it as his Deed upon the Land doth so, this is not a good Lease to maintain an Ejectione firme, Curia B. R.

Authoriti e Verball in writing.

A woman Covert, or an Infant, cannot make a Letter of Attorney to seal a Lease to try a Title, as a man of full age may do; but the husband alone may make a lease of his wives Land, Per Just. Turner at Lent Affises, 23 Car. And some hold that where a Letter of Attorney may be made, that this power may be given and executed by paroll without writing, Just. Jones, 5 Car. If the Declaration be of a Lease made by husband and wife, and it is made by Letter of Attorney from the husband and wife; this is not good. But if he declare in this case upon a Lease made only by the husband, it is good. Brownl. 2 part. 248.

If one that hath right to land enter & make a lease for years to one to try the Title; and and the Tenant continue in possession, and then he that hath right doth enter and make another Lease to another, the first Lease continuing, and the ancient Tenant continuing in possession, the second Lessee cannot maintain this Action upon this Lease, Curia Brownl: 1 part. 128. 129. 130. 134.

3. The next thing is the Entry of the Lessee, for unless it be proved that the Lessee after the Lease made, did enter, this Action will not be maintainable; where in these things are to be known; 1. He must make such an Entry, as to gain the possession, for he cannot be ejected out of the possession of that wherein by Law he was never in the possession. 2. His possession must continue, and not be removed.

Entry of the Lessee.
Entry, General

Brownl. 1 part 130.

4. The next thing to be weighed is the ouster and Ejectment of the Lessee, for if it do not appear that the Defendant in the Action did oust and Eject the Lessee, this Action will fail. For this then observe these cases; 1. The ouster must be real and involuntary: for if one enter by license and agreement of the Lessee, and (as some say) of the Lessor; this is no Ejectment in which the Action will lie. 2. The ouster shall be taken largely against the Ejector: It is said therefore, that if A Lease two Acres to B, and C enter upon one of them, that this is an ouster out of both Acres, Justice Hutton at Sarum Assises, 22 Jac. Quare of this. 3. If a woman do enter and continue in possession, and after the husband cohabit with her, he is no Ejector, unless he agree to it; and therefore in this case the Action is to be brought against them both. But if the husband agree to it, the Action is to be brought against him alone. And yet a Lease was made to try a Title of a house, and the Lessee enter into it; and the wife of the party that is in possession oust him, and shut the door, and after the husband cometh and entreth in the house, and the Action was brought against the husband alone, and ruled to be good, M. 44. 45. Eliz: B. R. Clement vers. Classy. 4. The continuance of the same Tenant in possession that was in at the time of sealing of the Lease, is an Ejectment by him. 5. The Entry of a man upon the Land, or the putting in of a beast into the Land after the sealing and delivery of the Lease, is an Ejectment. 6. If a Lease be made to try the Title, and the servants of the former possessor enter with their Masters Carts to do their ordinary business, and the Action is brought against the Master, it is maintainable without proof of the Masters Commandment for this Entry, P. 1. Car. B. R. Cally vers. Fish. 7. A Tenant in common may by an actual Ejectment be an Ejector to, and sued by his companion: The thing in Lease was two houses, I S was in possession of one of them, and I D in the possession of the other, and the Lease was sealed in the house of I S and the Action was brought against I D only, the principal Ejector not sued, and the Plaintiff was forced to be non-sure, Per Just. Aske at Summer Assises at Glo. 1650. 8. A servant that doth dwell with the pretended owner is a sufficient Ejector, Brownl, 1 part 143.

Self. 6.

5. The last thing is the Process and pleading; for, admitting a good power and form of Entry, a Lease duly made and executed, an Entry and Ejectment upon the Lease, yet there may be in the proceedings in the Action fatal errors. For this then take notice. 1. This writ lyeth not in every cause, or for any thing, for it lieth not upon a Lease of a stock of Cattel, nor upon a Lease of a Summ of money, in modo decimandi; nor of a water-course, M. 6. Jac. B. R. Challoner, vers. Moor. But it lieth of a Mannor, House, Land, Medow, Pasture, Tithe, or such like thing, Co. 11. 25: It lieth de pomario. M: 43. 44. Eliz B. R. Wright vers. Wheatly. So it lieth de Coquina, Trin. 2. Jac. Co. B. So also de Cubiculo. It lieth also of a Colemine, P. 5. Jac. B. R. Comin, vers. Wheatly. It lieth also of a Bailery, of Salt Hill. 6. Jac. B. R. Saunders Case. It is not good for a Course of water, nor for Common of pasture nor a sheep gate. But it is good for 10 acres of pease. Brownl: 1. part 129. 146. 142. 150. 2. The writ must set forth the thing in certain for quantity and quality, as one Messuage, two Cottages. 7 Acres ver. 4 Acr: prati. 5 Acr. pasture, and so of Tithes. And it is not sufficient to say de Tenemento, or de uno rapsorio, or of Messuage and the Lands thereunto belonging, or of so much of a Messuage in the occupation of I S as doth stand upon the bank, &c. or of one close called D containing 3 Acres to a Messuage belonging, or the like, for this is uncertain. And yet an Ejectione Firme of a Gate-house one Acre parcel of a Mannor, a Moity, or a third part of a Mannor, or of a room of a house certainly described, is good. Co. 11. 59. 25. Dyer 84. 305. F. N. B. 220. Finch. 107. Pasch. 17. Car. B. R. Trin. 17. Car.

Self. 7.

3. The Lease and the Declaration upon it must agree. If a Feme Covert, and A be Jointenants in Fee, and A and her husband, and the other Jointenant make a Lease for years by Deed indented, and the husband and A enter, and deliver Lease upon the Land, and the Lessee declare upon a Lease from them three, this is nought. 9 Jac. B. R. Curia.

If the Lease be for ninety years, if three lives so long live, and the Declaration be upon a Lease for ninety years without limitation, this is nought, Per Just. Turner at Lent Assises 23, Car.

CHAP. LXXX.

Of an Estoppel.

1 Estoppel what.

The Kinds.

IT is where a man is concluded and barred, by some thing he hath said or done, to speak and make use of the truth for his own advantage: where a mans mouth is stoppt, and his hands bound that now he cannot say or doe, that which otherwise he might have said or done: And this may be in divers things, and by divers means: As in pleading, or in Deeds and writings under mens hands; when they shall assent to or confess any thing therein that is not true, or in their own disadvantage, now they are in many of these cases afterwards forbidden to say the contrary, if they have need for their advantage: so where a man hath election by law: to have one of two things, and he make his choyce of one of them; or to sue one of two persons and he sue one; or to have one of two remedies for the recovery of a thing and he make his choice: now in all these cases, he is concluded ever after to take, or demand, or use the other. And some of these Estoppells are by matter of Record. Some by matter in writing, and some of matter by fact; of which there are infinite examples: some of which see below. And see Election, and Acceptance, and in other titles where many cases of Estoppel will fall out. Co. 2. 4. 3. 88. Plow. 397.

2 Where it may be or not.

For Answer to this, take these things.

1. Note that by a bare supposall or unnecessary recitall, or by words or sayings of another partie, an Estoppel shall never be produced. 35 H. 6. 33. 3 H. 6. 15. 9 H. 6. 8. for which see examples below. So when it appears in the very Deed that the Grantor had no power to grant, Co. 1. 155. Dier. 244. So when it enures by way of passing an Interest. Co. 6. 15. So when it is to cover-wickedness and defeat an Act of Parliament, Co. 5. 64. For Estoppells are odious in law. Co. upon Litt. 365. See divers rules for Estoppells in Co. upon Litt. 352.

By matter of Record.

2. A Record is of that high and excellent nature that the Law will not admit any deniall of that which is apparently within the Record. But that which the parties doe say and do there in the Law, doth give great heed unto. And therefore if the Daughter and right Heir will admit a Bastard of her Fathers

Fathers, or any other to sue a Livery out of the Kings hand with her; by this means the Bastard, or other, will get the one half of the Land, and the right Heir shall never be afterward received to say the Bastard is not Heir; because she hath allowed the contrary to be true by the Record.

So if two Joyntenants be that do hold in capite, and one Release to the other, and yet after they both Respite Homage together in the Exchequer: Now hereby the other Joyntenant hath gained his Moyety again of the Land, and the other Joyntenant shall not be received to say the contrary.

So if one plead the Kings pardon for his Alienation without Licence, and rei veritatis the Land is not held in capite; now he cannot afterwards say, that it is not held in capite, Co. 7. 1. 8. 16. Plow. 396. Dyer 202. 33 H. 6. 7. Doct. & Stud. 33. Littl. Selt. 175. Broo. 306. Co. super Littl. 122. Cromp. Jurisd. 49: F. N. B. 97.

3. If one acknowledge upon Record, to hold of his Lord by more services then he doth; he is barred to say after that he holdeth by less, though it be true:

So if one plead a Release or a Pardon to an offence, he shall not say after, he is not guilty of the offence, Stamf. 555. 22 Edw. 4. 39. 9 Hen. 4: 8. 11 H. 4. 69.

If a Tenant in Tail, Lease for life, and die, and the Tenant for life is impleaded, and he doth vouch the Issue in Tail, and he do enter into the Warranty generally; now the Issue is concluded and cannot afterward bring any Formedon to recover this Land. But if he had entred into the Warranty specially, contra. Tenant in Tail Warranty.

4. If the Husband do discontinue the Wives Land, and die, and after his death she brings a Writ of Dower, and doth recover against the Discontinuee; now by this she is concluded to demand the whole Land, as otherwise she might, Co. 4: 5: Dower.

5. If A. and M. his Wife, by the name of A. and B. levy a Fine, she shall not avoid it, and say against the Record, her name is not B. F. N. B. 97. Tenant in Tail Recovery.

If a Tenant in Tail suffer a Recovery that his Issues may avoid; yet he himself is concluded by it, and cannot demand the Land against his Recovery, Co. 3. 3.

1. 9.

6. If a Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment, or be disseised, and levy a Fine with Proclamations to a stranger, the Issues of the Tenant in Tail are barred for ever of the Land. Tenant in Tail Fine.

So if an Issue in Tail before his Right descended, in the life of his Ancestor, levy a Fine of the Land, whereof he hath possibility, and the Proclamation be passed; this will bar the Issues by Conclusion, Co. 3. 944.

If Lands be conveyed to a Woman in Tail, within the Statute of the eleventh of Henry the Seventh, and her Husband die, and their Issue levy a Fine to a stranger, and after the Woman discontinue within the Statute, and forfeit: Now the Issue by the Fine is estopped that he cannot enter; but perhaps the Conusee may: See more of these matters in Fines and Recoveries. And how a Lease by a Fine may be good by Estoppel, Co. 4. 53. Plow. 434. 21 H. 7. 24. Co. 4. 71.

7. If one bargain and sell Land to another, and before Inrollment levy a Fine of it to the Bargainee. Now the Bargainee must take by the Fine, and cannot take by the Deed inrolled.

8. If one in pleading doth confess the thing that he is charged with, or accused for; he is barred now of denial of it afterwards, although it be not true he hath confessed: As if one endited of Trespass, confess it, and after be sued in an Action of Trespass for the same Trespass; he is concluded now to plead not guilty by his Confession before. By Confession, or Nihil dicit.

9. If the Defendant after Appearance and Declaration, do not plead to the Action, or maintain his Plea, but maketh default, then Judgment shall be given against him; and this will be peremptory, and as great an Estoppel to him as a Confession.

But where one shall be estopped by matter of pleading, and where not: See the Books at large, Dyer 287. 21 H. 7. 24.

10. If a Plaintiff or Defendant be barred in any Sute upon a Demurrer, or Verdict; they are concluded to begin any new Sute, or to move again, but in special Cases, Co. 6. 7. 44.

Judgment.

11. If one have a Judgment for a thing already in a Court of Record, he is barred to begin a Sute again for the same thing, for which he hath a Judgment, Co. 6. 45. Trin. 3 Jac. Brown & Wolston.

So Judgment against another for the same cause, so that it be such a cause as where in Damages be to be recovered.

If a Tenant for life make a void Lease for life, and the Lessee make a Lease at Will, and the Tenant for life levieth a Fine to the Tenant at Will: Now both these parties are estopped to say against this Fine, Quod partes inter finem nihil habuerunt, Co. 2. 55.

Fine.

If a Precipe be brought against one for Land, and he since the Statute of Communis Feoffatis, plead JoynTENANCY with another by Fine; and now by this the other may take advantage, and he is estopped to say the contrary at another time, Plow. 6.

12. If a Feoffment be made to two and their Heirs, and after the Feoffor levies a Fine to them two, and the Heirs of one of them: Now this is no Estoppel to the other to demand Fee-simple according to the Deed, for the Fine doth enure as a Release, Co. 6. 7. 44. Co. 2. 74. 6 R. 2.

13. If a Lord Paramount distrain the Lessee of his Tenant, and he in pleading say, he holdeth for ten years by a Lease from the Tenant, when in truth it is by a Lease for twenty years: Now he is not estopped hereby to demand his Term of twenty years, Dyer 289.

14. If a Fine be levied Sur Release onely, a man may say, that the Comtee had nothing at the time of the Fine levied in the Land, and to Letters Patents, one may say that nothing was granted by them; and in this case there is no Estoppel, Co. 3.

15. Though in all Personal Actions Regularly, when one is barred by Judgment, Confession, Verdict, &c. He is barred for ever (as above) yet in Real Actions he is not so concluded; for if he be barred in a Real Action, he may have another Real Action upon the same cause, so it be an Action of a higher nature, as he may have.

So also where the Plaintiff hath mistaken his Action onely, as hath brought a Formedon in Remainder for a form in Reversion, or the like, and the Defendant doth plead to the Action of the Writ, such an Action brought without Judgment upon Verdict or Demurrer, or where the Plaintiff is Non-suit, or the Plea be discontinued will not conclude him, but he may bring the same Action again.

So where the Plea is to the Writ onely in Abatement of that, and that be abated by Judgment, or a Demurrer, or Verdict; yet there he is not estopped, but may have the same Writ again.

So if the Sute be onely discontinued, or the Plaintiff be Non-sute; in this case he is not barred to begin the same Sute again: But if the Plaintiff enter a Retraxit, he is barred for ever, vide Retraxit. F. N. B. 48.

16. If one have used as Administrator, and it have been put in Issue, and found against him; yet he is not barred by this to sue as Executor, Co. 5. 32. Though a Judg-

Judgment given for the same thing against the same person or another, is an Estoppel for the suing again upon the same cause (as before,) yet if the same Judgment be reversed that was at first, or it were for some thing else, or not for all, that which is in the new Sure; in this case the Party is not estopped. So where the Judgment is not in a Court of Record, Co. 6. 45.

17. If a Woman covert levy a Fine as a Feme-sole, her Husband is not estopped, but may avoid it by Entry or Claim for him; his wife, and her Heirs without any Writ of Error.

So if J. S. with another mans wife, by the name of J. S. and Jean his wife levy a Fine of the Land of the wife, the right Husband may avoid it so, but it seems the wife is estopped, Keble Whites case, Trin. 7 Jac. Co. 8.

18. One shall not be estopped to say any thing against that which before he hath said in a Writ, or Court, as in a Formedon, 21 H. 7. 24.

19. If one Claim by Discent from J. S. yet in another Formedon he may Claim from J. D. but one shall be estopped to say any thing contained in his Plea, in Bar, or Replication; yea, though the Plaintiff be afterwards Nonsure.

20. If the King Licence to another, to alien the manner of Dole, which is held of him Us dicuntur; this is not any Estoppel to him to whom the Licence is made to say, the Land is not held of the King, for it is no precise Affirmance of the Tenure, Plow. 398.

Hitherto of Estoppels by Records, now by Deeds.

1. If one seised of Land in Fee, take a Lease of the same Land from a stranger by Deed indented, now during the Term (and no longer,) this is an Estoppel to him, and he cannot to avoid it, say it was his own; and if there were any Rent reserved, he must pay it also to the Lessor, during the Term. So if one make a Lease of Land by Deed indented, and at that time he had nothing in the Land, but after he purchase it, or it doth descend to him; this is a good Lease by Conclusion, contra in both cases, if it were by Deed Poll. Co. 4. 53. Dyer 256. Plow. 344. 14 H. 6. 23. 4 H. 7. 14. Plow. 434.

1. By Matter in Writing.

2. If two men do make an Exchange by word, and after before Entry, by either of them, they make Indentures of the Land, each to other; now it seems they are bound by these Indentures, and they shall have such Estate as doth pass by the Indentures, and not by the Exchange, Perk. sect. 264. Plow. 433.

3. If one Lease to one man for eighty years, and after make another Lease by Deed indented, to another for the same time; this second Lease is good by Estoppel only; and if the first do determine by Surrender or Forfeiture, or the like, the second Lessee shall have it; whereas otherwise, if it were, by Deed Poll, the second Lease were void, Co. 1. 155.

4. If a Lessee for thirty years of Land, assign it over, and after make a Lease for six years by Deed indented, and then repurchase the Lease again: Now this Lease for six years shall be good against him by Estoppel, and he cannot avoid it, Co. 5. 53.

5. If one by Deed indented, make a Partition of Land with another that hath nothing to do in the Land; by this he hath gotten a part of the Land, and the other is concluded to say ought against it, Broo. 306.

6. If one make a Defeasance by Indenture of a Deed; now he is hereby estopped to say, that there is no such Deed, Plow. 397. But if there be any thing put in the Deed by way of Recital, he is not concluded to gainsay that, Broo. Estoppel 5.

7. If one that hath nothing in Land make a Lease of it by Indenture, rendring Rent, the Lessee is estopped to say, that the Lessor had nothing in the Land at the time time of the Lease made, and so by this cannot Bar in an Action of Debt; but if it were in a Deed Poll, he might, Littl.

8. If the Husband make a Feoffment of the Land of the Wife, and the Feoffee make a Lease to the Husband and Wife for life or years, and the Husband commit Waste, and the Lessor brings an Action of Waste; now the Husband is estopped to say that the Lessor hath no Reversion (as the truth is) for it is in the Wife, Littl. fol. 666, 667.

9. If one have a Rent common, or the like, by Prescription, and take a Partent from the King, or Deed from a common person for it; now by this he is concluded ever after to Claim it by Prescription, 21 H. 7. 5.

10. If one in consideration of one thousand pound, bargain and sell Land, and rei veritate no such money was paid; yet this being expressed upon the Deed of Bargain and Sale, and a Receipt of the money; the Bargainor, it seems, is concluded to say the contrary, Dyer 169.

11. If one do make a Deed per duces, and after when he is at large, he do make a Disseisin to it, it seems, he is estopped to say it was per duces, Broo. Disf. 17. If one by the name of J. S. of W. binde himself in an Obligation, or Bill, or the like: Now he is concluded by this, and he cannot say that his name is otherwise, or that he is of another place, and so avoid his Deed; for which see 10 H. 6. 8. 3 H. 6. 25. 22 H. 6. 53.

12. So where a Condition of an Obligation is in the particularity, as to infeoff J. S. of the Manor of J. or to pay such a sum as J. S. doth stand bound by Obligation to pay to W. S. or to stand to the sentence of M. S. in a matter of Tithes, in Question between them, there the Obligor is estopped to deny any of these things, which in the Condition of the Obligation he did grant: But if the Condition be in the generality, as to infeoff one of all his Lands in B. or to the Nonsute in all Actions; there he is not concluded, but may say, That he hath no Land there, or that there be no Actions depending, and the like, Dyer 196. 18 Edw. 4. 21 Ed. 4. 34.

13. If a Condition be to perform an Indenture, the Obligor is estopped to say, there is no such Indenture, 28 H. 6. 7. Bro. Rep. 57.

14. If one binde himself by the Condition of an Obligation, to give the third part of his Goods, which his Father Devised to him, he is estopped to say, in pleading gave him none, 8 Jac. Co. B.

15. If one Recite in the Condition of an Obligation where A. doth Demise to B. and B. to the Obligor. If now the Obligee shall hold it quietly, &c. now the Obligor is estopped to say A. did not Demise to B.

So if it be a Condition to pay the Rent reserved on such a Lease, he cannot say no such Rent, Trin. 9 Jac. Sherleys case.

16. If one be bound to perform the Award made by J. S. he is estopped to say J. S. Nullum fecit arbitrium King & Percival. B.R. Hil. 14 Jac.

17. If the Condition of a Obligation be, That the Obligor shall grant to the Obligee all the Lands mentioned in certain Indentures, bearing date with the Obligation, the Obligor cannot plead no such Indentures; but if the Condition were to infeoff the Obligee of all his Land in S. Contrà per totam Curiam, M. 18 Jac. B. R. Sur. 28 H. 6. 7. 21 Ed. 4. 4, 54.

So if A. be bound to B. in one hundred pound with Condition that A. before Michaelmas shall seal a Lease to B. under the Covenant contained in an Indenture, bearing date, &c. A. cannot plead that there is no such Indenture. But if the Tenant do confess by Deed indented, That he holdeth by other Services, then he doth of his Lord; it seems this is no Estoppel, neither shall the Services be increased hereby, 39 Ass. pl. 3.

18. If the Lord by Deed indented, reciting, that whereas his Tenant holdeth of him by such and such Services (otherwise then he doth hold by) doth confirm to his Tenant (saving his Services) this is no Estoppel to the Tenant, Plow. 136. 35 H. 6. 33.

18. If

18. If a Lessee for life, and he in Reversion make a Feoffment, by Deed indented; this shall not enure by way of Estoppel, because it doth enure by way of passing an Interest; and wheresoever any Interest passeth from a man, there a Deed shall never work by way of Estoppel against him. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 45.

19. If a Husband make a Feoffment of his Wives Land, and after the Feoffee make a Lease to the Husband and Wife for life or years; this is no Estoppel to the Wife, after her Husbonds death, but she shall be remitted to her first Estate, Litt. sect. 667.

20. If A. Lessee for life of B. make a Lease for years by Deed indented, and after purchase the Reversion in Fee, and B. dieth; in this case A. is not estopped to avoid his own Lease, by Confession and Avoidance: But if A. had nothing in the Land, and made a Lease for years so, and after purchase the Land contra, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 47.

21. If one take a Lease of the Herbage of his Land, and not of the Land it self by Deed indented; this is no Estoppel, Co. Idem.

22. If one by Deed call himself J. S. Heir of W. S. Now he is not hereby concluded, but in another case he may deny himself to be Heir of W. S. for it was a superfluous Addition, 35 H. 6. 33.

23. If one Recite, that whereas he is seised of the Manor of W. he doth after grant a Rent-charge out of it: Now this Recital in the Deed, shall not prejudice him at another time, but he may say he is not seised of the Manor of W. for these Recitals are not material, Plow. 18. 397. 33 H. 6. 10.

24. If one by Deed Poll recite that he hath leased Land for ten years; and then Lease the same to another, for the same time; this will not work by way of Estoppel. So if one recite that he hath a possibility, or a thing not grantable over, and then grant it away; this shall never enure by way of Estoppel, nay, though it were by Deed indented, because it appears by the Deed it self, the Grantor had nothing to grant, Co. 155. Dyer 244.

25. If a Deed be of a Contract, which in truth is Usurious, and the Deed acknowledge; yet in this case a man shall not be concluded to say the truth, Co. 5. 69.

26. If one have a debt due to him by Contract, and he take an Obligation for it; he is barred to sue upon the Contract. By other means.

So if it be a debt due by Specialty, and he get a Judgment, he is estopped to sue upon the Obligation again, whiles the Judgment is in force, Co. 6. 45.

27. Sometimes by Acceptance of one thing, one is concluded to demand another, (For which see Acceptance;) As if a Woman enter upon, and accept a Joynter made to her after marriage, after her Husbonds death; now hereby she is barred of her Dower.

So if she bring a Writ of Dower, and demand, and recover Dower; she is barred of having any Joynter made to her after marriage, Co. 4. 5. Dyer 317.

28. If one have a Judgment, and have chosen an Execution by Elegit; it seems he is estopped to have any other Execution after. See Execution for this matter.

29. If an Exchange be between two, and one of them enter; now he is estopped and concluded, and he cannot avoid Exchange first made. See for this, Exchange, Co. upon Litt. 170.

30. If one have his choice of one of two Actions, and he hath chosen one: Now he is barred of the other. So if one have choice of two Remedies, as if one have brought an Appeal of Maime, and recovered Damages, he is barred after to bring any Action of Trespass for the same, Et sic è converso. So upon an Executory Contract if he bring Debt, and recover, he is barred of any Action of the Case, Et sic è converso, Co. 4. 43. Co. 4. 94.

31. If

31. If a Tenant make a Feoffment by Collusion, and the Lord accept the services of the Feoffee; hereby he is Estopped of the Wardship, and of this Averment of Collusion. So if the Husband sell his Wives Land and die, and she accept part of it in Dower; she is barred of her, Cui in vita for the whole, F.N.B. 142. 144.

32. If the Husband do discontinue the Wives Land, and the Aliens make a Lease to the Husband and Wife for their lives, and the Lessor bring Waste against the Husband; he is Estopped by the Feoffment and Waste, to speak of the Remitter to his Wife, Littl. 167. 667.

33. If a man seised of Land in Fee, take a Wife, and then grant a Rent-charge, and after make a Feoffment in Fee, and taketh back an Estate-tail, and die, and the Wife recovereth Dower against the Issue in Tail by Reddicion, the Wife sheweth that her Husband died seised, and pay a Writ, to enquire of Damages, and bath it; in this case she shall hold the Land charged with the Rent; for by her prayer she accepteth her self dowable of the second Estate, and she is Estopped to be endowed of the first, 14 Ed. 3. 28.

34. J. S. seised of Land in Fee hath two Daughters, a Bastard signe and mulier pnisne, and die, and they both make Partition, the mulier is hereby concluded forever, Co. upon Littl. 170.

35. But if one bring Action of Trespass, the Case, or the like, where the things are uncertain, and Damages is onely to be recovered, and he hath no Judgment, yet, this is no Estoppel to him, but he may bring any other, or the same Action at another time. But if he have obtained a Judgment upon the first, he is Estopped, and the other may plead it in Bar to the second Action, Adjudg, Bridges and Difty, M. 5 Jac. B.R.

36. If Partners do make Division of the Lands they have in Tail, and one of them hath the worst part, though she be concluded, yet it is no Estoppel to her Issue.

So if Husband and Wife be Tenants in Special Tail of certain Lands in Fee, and they have Issue a Daughter, and the Wife dieth, and he take another Wife, and have a Daughter by her; and both these enter and make Division, though this be an Estoppel to the eldest Daughter, during her life, yet it is none to her Issue, Co. super Littl. 170.

3. What persons are concluded by an Estoppel, or not.

37. Estoppels do commonly conclude none but such as be Parties or Privies; and no strangers are bound by them, unless it be in some special cases; as when the Estoppel is by Act of Parliament, or the like. And therefore a Jury upon Oath, are not concluded and bound up as the Parties be: As if an Obligation be delivered before the date, and dated after the Delivery, the Obligee cannot plead it so, but must plead it after; yet if the other plead Non est factum, the Jury will and may finde it to be his Deed, Co. upon Littl. 352.

38. The Heir at Common Law is commonly to be barred by the Estoppel, not another Heir, though the Land be to go to him: As if there be Father and Son, and the Son have Issue a Son and Daughter by one Woman, and a Daughter by another, and the Grand-father do an Act of Estoppel by Deed, the Father die, and the Son die, and his Son also die without Issue; his Daughter now that must have the Land, shall not be barred by this Estoppel: So an Estoppel on the part of the Mother, shall not binde the Heir on the Fathers part. And therefore if Bonds be given to Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of the Husband, the Husband makes a Gift in Tail, and dieth, and the Wife recover in a Cui in vita against the Donee, supposing she had Fee-simple, and make a Feoffment and die, the Donee die without Issue, and the Issue of the Husband and Wife bring Formedon in the Reverter against the Feoffee; he is not Estopped, but may so do, Co. upon Littl. 365. So if the Husband and Wife be Tenants for life, the Remainder to the Heirs of the Baron, and the Husband give in Tail, and die, the Wife Recover in cui in vita, supposing that she had the Lands to her and her Heirs in Fee; and after recovery Infeoff another, and die, the Donee die without Issue. Now the Heir of the Donor shall shall recover this Land, and is not barred by the Estoppel of his Mother, because he was Heir to them both; and therefore the Estoppel of one of them, could not Bar him, 35 H. 6. 33. Broo. Estoppel 22. Co. 8. 53. 18 Ed. 3. 9. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 12.

39. If one Joyntenant in Fee take a Lease for years of a stranger, the Survivor shall not be bound by this, Co. upon Littl. f. 185.

If one make a Lease of part of a Term, whereby he is estopped, and after assign away the Term, the Assignee is estopped also; and Regularly none but Parties and Privies shall take advantage of an Estoppel (and not strangers); and therefore none may take advantage of any Estoppel in any Fine or Recovery; but Parties or Privies, or such as Claim the Land, or the Estate, or part of it under him that was party to the Fine or Recovery, 30 H. 6. 2.

But of such Acts by matter of Record, as trench to the dis-inheritance of him, in Reversion or Remainder: There he in Reversion or Remainder may take advantage, though he be no party to the thing; as if Lessee for life or years, pray in Aid of a stranger, or levy a Fine, Co. 4. 53.

Privies in Blood as the Heir, Privies in Estate as the Feoffee, Lessee, &c. Privies in Law as the Lords by Escheat, Tenant by the Courtesie, in Dower, the Incumbent of a Benefice, and others that come under by Act in Law, or in the Poss. shall take advantage, and be bound by Estoppels, Co. upon Littl. 352.

It is where one Estoppel is pleaded against another; and that doth put the matter at large, Co. upon Littl. 352.

How an Estoppel must be pleaded, and the manner of the Conclusion of the Plea, Co. 4. 53. 111 52.

4. What persons shall take advantage of an Estoppel, or not.

Estoppel against a Plea, what.

CHAP. LXXXI.

Of Estovers, Exchangers of Gold and Silver, Excise and Evesdroppers.

Estovers is a word that hath many significations: For sometimes it signifieth the Sufenance that a man that hath done Felony, is to have out of his Lands and Goods, for himself and his Family, during his Imprisonment. Sometimes it signifieth an Allowance in Meat and Cloath. Sometimes an Allowance of Wood, to be taken out of anothers Wood. Sometimes it signifieth Houf-boot, Hay-boot, and Plough-boot: But most properly it signifieth the Right that a man hath to cut and take Houf-boot, Hay-boot, and Plough-boot, to expend and use in and upon his House, and Tenement, out of the Wood of another man, i. e. Which is either Certain, as ten or twenty load; or Incertain, so much as he shall spend in such a House; or in Grofs, F. N. B. 181. 28 H. 8. 28. See Co. 2 part. Inst. 17, 18.

Of Exchangers of Gold and Silver, or Bankers.

See for this the Statute of 25 Ed. 3: 12.

Of Evesdroppers.

Evesdroppers are such as lie about Mens Houses or Windows to hear Tales, and to carry them about to breed Division, and do so; they are to be punished for this in a Leet, or may be punished by Justices of the Peace, by the Good-behavior, or Indictment.

CHAP. LXXXII.

Of an Execution.

See. 1.

1. Execution, what it is.

Execution is the last performance of some Act, it is most commonly taken for the next Act which doth pursue the Judgement, which is the Sentence that a Judge doth make at the end of a Cause or Sute, speaking the Law in the case, as it appears upon the proofs before him.

In Civil Causes it is, where a Judgment is given in any Court for the Recovery of any Debt or Damage, or any Lands, or Tenements, or other things: Or a man doth acknowledge a Debt by a Recognizance or Statute (which is in the nature of a Judgment) and the Party by a Writ, is put into the Possession of the thing, so recovered by the Judgment, or acknowledged by the Statute. Briefly, It is the obtaining of an Actual Possession of any thing acquired by Judgment of Law, Terms Ley, Co. upon Litt. 154.

How many kinds there are.

And some of these Executors are small and valuable, as where the Sheriff doth take the Defendants Lands or Goods, and deliver them to the Plaintiff in satisfaction of his Debt; or not valuable, or quousque tending onely to an end: As when the body of the Defendant onely is taken and put in prison, where it is to lie as a pledge till the Debt be satisfied; but this doth not satisfy the Plaintiff, Co. 6. 87.

The means whereby this is done, are by Writs, which are called Writs of Execution; and these are some of them against the person, and some of them against the Goods, and some of them against the Lands, and some of them against them all, Co. 8. 143.

The Writs whereby Execution is done, are for Recovery of Land in a Real Action; as, Habere facias Seisinam, and an Habere facias Possessionem. And for Recovery of Debt or Damage in a Personal Action; a Capias ad Satisfaciendum, Fieri facias and Elegit, Co. 6. 51: F. N. B. 265. Westm. 2. 18.

Extendi facias,
Levari facias
Liberate.

There are other Writs of Execution, which see in Desinnee, Chap. 37. And for all the Writs of Execution of a Statute; as, Levari facias, Extendi facias and Liberate; and for a Statute and Recognizance, and that which doth concern it: See in Statutes in my Treatise of Common Assurances, cap. 20.

Habere facias
Seisinam,
what it is.

It is a Writ Judicial, and it lieth where one hath recovered certain Lands in the Kings Court, then he shall have this Writ directed to the Sheriff, commanding him to put him in Actual Seisin of that Land, Perk. sect. 206, 207, 208. Terms Ley 217. F. N. B. 220.

Habere facias
Possessionem,
what it is.

It is a Writ Judicial, and lieth where one that was Evicted out of his Farm, hath recovered the same in an Ejectione Firme, or, Quare ejecit infra terminum, there he shall have this Writ directed to the Sheriff, to command him to put the Plaintiff

Plaintiff into Actual Possession of the Term again; and in Execution of both these Writs, the Sheriff may justify the breaking of a House to do it, if he cannot do it otherwise, F. N. B. 220, 221. Co. 104. 5. 91. 6. 51. Dyer 278:

It is a Writ Judicial, and lieth where a man hath recovered any Debt or Damages in any Action personal in the Kings Court; then he that hath recovered, may have this Writ unto the Sheriff to command him to take the Body of the Deb or, and thereupon he shall be put in prison, and there shall stay without Bail or Mainprise, until he hath made satisfaction to the Plaintiff, the Debt or Damages recovered. This Writ was given by the Stat. of Westm. 2. ch. 11. Martb. 13. Terms Ley 256. Co. 8. 141. super Littl. 289, 290.

Capias ad Satisfaciendum, what it is.

It is a Writ Judicial, and lieth where a man hath recovered any Debt or Damages in any Action Personal in the Kings Court, then he that hath recovered may have this Writ to the Sheriff, commanding him to levy the money of the Goods and Chattels of the Defendant, and to bring it into the Court, that the Party Plaintiff may have it, Co. 3. 9. Dyer 306.

Fieri facias, what it is.

And if the Sheriff take Goods and return so, and that he cannot finde buyers for the Goods, or delay to deliver it to the Party, then he may have a Venditioni exponas, and compel the Sheriff to sell the Goods, and bring in the money. And if he say the Goods were taken by his Predecessor, he must have a Distingas nuper voc' to the Precedent Sheriff to command him to sell them, and bring in the money, Dyer 363. 13 H. 7. 1. 34 H. 6. 6.

An Elegit is a Judicial Writ that lieth for him that hath recovered Debt or Damages in the Kings Court against another, directed to the Sheriff to command him to make Delivery of the one half of the Parties Lands and Tenements, and of all his Goods, except his Oxen and Beasts of his Plough to the Plaintiff for satisfaction of his Debt, Old N. B. 152. Co. upon Littl. 289. Dyer 306. It lieth also upon a Recognisance in any of the Kings Courts.

Elegit, what it is.

But these Writs of Execution must be had within a year after the Judgment; otherwise it cannot be had till there be first sued out a Scire facias, which is a Judicial Writ going out of a Record, and lying where one hath recovered Lands or Tenements, Debt or Damages, and the Demandant or Plaintiff doth not sue out Execution within a year after the Judgment had; in this case he cannot sue Execution, till he have first summoned the Party to shew cause why Execution should not be done; and if now he neglect to answer, or cannot be found to be summoned, then a second Judgment shall be given, that Execution be done on the first Judgment. And in this case the Defendant may plead any matter growing after Judgment, as Outlawry, Release, &c. to prevent Execution, Co. upon Littl. 19. Dyer 148. Co. 3. 12. And yet if he sue out Execution within the year, it seems he may continue it after the year without a Scire facias, Old N. B. 163. Dyer 207. 271. Fines Ley 477.

Scire facias, what it is.

After Judgment had in the upper Bench or Common Pleas, the Plaintiff may have Execution, either of the Body of the Defendant by a Capias ad satisfaciendum, or upon his Lands by Elegit, or upon his Goods and Chattels by Fieri facias. But a Capias ad satisfaciendum will not lie in Execution, unless it be in such an Action wherein, and against a person, against whom a Capias doth lie at the beginning, as Debt, Account, Action upon the Case, Action of Trespass, Vi & Armis, Annuity, and Covenant; in all which cases Capias ad satisfaciendum doth lie, but no Execution by Capias ad satisfaciendum may be had for Recovery of Damages in a Real Action, nor in any Action against a Duke, Earl, or Baron, or their Wives, unless it be in some special cases: Nor against an Heir, or an Executor, but in some special cases, Magna Charta 2. 18. Co. 3. 12. Westm. 2. 11. Co. 5. 88. 6. 53. Co. 8. 141. 11 H. 7. 15. 2 H. 4. 657.

Scire facias, 3. What Execution the Plaintiff may have upon a Judgment, to recover Debt or Damage, and how, or not.

If one have a Judgment against divers for one cause, and take out a Capias ad satisfaciendum against one of them, it seems, that after this he can have no other Execution against any of the rest of the Defendants, Trin. 9 fac. B. R. The Plaintiff after a Fieri facias, if Execution be not done upon it, may have an Elegit or a Capias ad satisfaciendum. But after he hath taken out a Capias ad satisfaciendum, and the same be entred upon Record or returned, he can have no other Execution. So also it seems after an Elegit sued out and returned, the Plaintiff can have no other Execution by Fieri facias or Capias ad satisfaciendum; but he must have an Alias Elegit, or he may have an Elegit in another County, 13 H. 2. 1. Co. 5. 87. 15 H. 7. 15. 33 H. 6. 47. 28 H. 8. 9. 19 H. 6. 4. 17 Ed. 4. 4. 21 H. 7. 19.

If one have recovered part of his debt by a Fieri facias, he may have a Capias ad satisfaciendum to recover the residue, Mich. 4 Jac. B. R. Carri Case, 18 Ed. 4. 11.

If the Defendant be arrested on a Latitat, and he in prison for want of bail, and after the Plaintiff do get a Judgment against him; in this case, if he will, he may waive his body, and take Execution of his Lands or Goods, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Curia.

If a Judgment be had against the Defendant, and he having Land, die, and the Land descend to his Heir, after a Scire facias, he may have Execution by Elegit against the Heir for this Land, Dyer 2. 8. If a Judgment be given in the Common Bench, and removed from thence into the Upper Bench, by Writ of Error, and there affirmed within the year; in this case the Plaintiff shall have the same Proces of Execution in that Court, as he might have had in the Common Pleas without any Scire facias, Co. 5. 88.

If a Judgment be for Damages against two Defendants, and the Plaintiff take out an Execution by an Elegit against one of them: In this case it seems he can have no other Execution against the other, 33 H. 6. 47. The same Proces of Execution as a man may have before a Scire facias sued out upon a Judgment, the same he may have after the Scire facias, and none other. And therefore where a Capias ad satisfaciendum will not lie before a Scire facias upon the first Judgment, it will not lie upon the second Judgment, 48 Ed. 3. 48. 34 H. 6. 45.

If one be condemned in Trespas, and taken Pro fine Regis, and the Plaintiff pray he may be in Execution for him; in this case he cannot after have an Elegit, or a Fieri facias, unless the Defendant die in Execution before the Plaintiff be satisfied his debt, F. N. B. 246. Co. 5. 77. After Judgment had in an Annuity, the Plaintiff upon a Scire facias may have a Fieri facias to levy it as it becomes due, 11 H. 4. 34. Broo. 119. After the Sheriff upon a Fieri facias hath returned a Fieri feci, sed non inveni emptores, &c. The Plaintiff cannot have a Capias ad satisfaciendum, or an Elegit, 13 H. 7. 1. When the Defendant was outlawed after Judgment, the Plaintiff must have prayed when he was taken for the King, that he may stay in Execution for him also; for he hath no other Proces of Execution afterwards, nor hath he any other Remedy, unless it be by a new Action of Debt, brought upon the Judgment, Co. 5. 88. No Execution can be had against Executors on a Judgment against the Testator, but by Fieri facias, and that De bonis Testatoris only, unless it be in case where he hath wasted these Goods. But for this see in Executors in my Treatise of Common Assurances.

See 4.
4. For and against whom Execution shall be had upon Judgments for Land, Debt, or Damage, or not; and when, and how it shall be done.
Heir.
Executor.

If one have a Judgment to recover Land, and die before he have Execution, his Heir after his death, may and must have Execution. And if there be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder in Fee with Warranty, and he have Judgment to recover in value, and die before Execution without Issue, in this case he in the Remainder may sue Execution. If one have Judgment to recover a Term, or any Goods, or a Debt, or Damages, and he die before he have Execution; in these cases the Executor or Administrator, not the Heir, shall have the Execution. And if one have a Judgment to recover Land and Damages together, he may have Execution of both together: But if he die, his Heir must have the Execution for the Land, and his Executor or Administrator must have the Execution for the Damages. And so it is in case of a Judgment to remove a Nuisance, and to recover Damages for the times past. And if a Judgment be to recover a Deed belonging to his Land, or twenty pound, and the Plaintiff die before Execution; in this case the Heir must first have a Disfringe for the Deed, ere the Executor sue Execution for the money; and if the Deed may be had, the Heir is to have him. But if the Deed cannot be had, the Executor shall have Execution for the money, Terms-Lay Proces, Dyer 208. 19 Ed. 4. 5. Co. upon List.

Litt. 251. 22 H. 6. 41. But in all these cases neither the Heir nor the Executor nor Administrator may have Execution of the Judgement till first they have sued out a Scire facias against the party against whom the Judgement was had, to warn him in, to shew cause why Execution should not be had against him. And then if he either make default, or appearing can shew no good cause why Execution should not be done against him, the Execution shall be done for the Plaintiff, as it should have been for him under whom he claims, 19 Ed. 4. 5.

If an Administrator get a judgement on the behalf of the intestate, and die; neither his Executor (if he have any) nor his Administrator shall have Execution of this Judgement, but the Administrator de bonis non Administratis of the first intestate, shall have Execution. And if an Executor get a judgement on the behalf of the Testator, and then die; If he make an Executor he shall have Execution upon this Judgement. But if he die intestate, his Administrator, unless he have also an Administrator de bonis non Administratis of the Testator, cannot have Execution upon this Judgement, Co. 5. 9. If an Executor durante minore etate, get a Judgement, and before Execution the Executor doth come of age; in this case the Executor himself may have Execution of this Judgement. So if one be Executor till he be married, and get a Judgement, and before Execution he is married; in this case it seems the first Executor may sue out Execution, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Darnley Case.

If Judgement be given against a Tenant in tayl, and he die before Execution, it may be done by Habeas facias seisinam against the issue in tayl, Co. 1. 94. 196. If a Judgement be against two Disseisors, and one of them die before Execution, the whole damages shall not be levied of the survivor, but a part of it shall be levied upon the Heir or him that is dead, Co. 3. 13.

If the principall upon a speciall Bayl do not after Judgement pay the money, or yield his body; then and not before, Execution is to be sued against the Bayl, Co. 5. 70. An Heir or an Executor shall never be charged by an Execution, but for so much in Land, Goods or Chattels, as are come to his hands from the debtor, unless it be by his own false or foolish pleading. If the Defendant be taken upon a Capias ad satisfaciendum upon a Judgement, and he die in Execution; in this case the Plaintiff may have a new Execution against his Heirs, Executors or Administrators (as the case is) and shall recover his Debt upon his lands, goods, or chattels, Co. 5. 86. 87. F. N. B. 267.

But no Execution can be had against an Heir, Executor, or Administrator, upon a Judgement given against another under whom he comes, and in whose room he stands, albeit it be within a year after the Judgement had, but there must be first a Scire facias against him to shew cause why it should not be had, Co. 3. 11: Dyer 208.

If two or more be bound in an Obligation jointly and severally (as the manner is) and the Judgement is given against them all, in this case the Plaintiff may take them all in Execution by a capias ad satisfaciendum. But he can be satisfied the debt but once; and therefore if one of them pay the debt, and any of the rest be in Execution; in this case he and all the rest are to be discharged of the Execution. So if he recover the Debt or value thereof by fi. facias or elegis of one of them, the Lands and goods of the rest are to be discharged; for he shall have Execution with satisfaction but once. So if the Judgement be on a joint-bill, it seems the Law is the same; And if in these cases the Judgement and Execution be had against one only, the Sheriff may levy the whole debt of him. Co. 11. 7. 3. 87. 119. 4 H. 7. 8. And yet if one have a Judgement for damages against divers men for one joint-Trespas, in this case he can have but one Execution against them all. But upon this, if it be against the bodies by capias ad satisfaciendum, the Sheriff may take all or any of them at that time in Execution, and if it be against their goods by fi. facias, he may levy it once, of all or any of them. But it must be levied but once, and they must bear it equally amongst them. And therefore if in the case before, Execution be first sued out against one of them, and the damages is levied, and after another of them is sued for the same Trespas, he may pleade Execution with satisfaction against the other, *Co. 11. 43. 3 H. 4. 13. 20 H. 6. 11. 34 H. 6. 33. Upon a Judgement given for debt or damages in the two Courts of Record at Westminster, generally all the Land that the Defendant hath tempore redditionis Judicii, or at any time after, and all the goods and chattels he hath tempore executionis shall be subject and liable to the Execution. And all these may be taken in Execution by the Sheriff, in whose hands soever they be, Di. 306. 34 Co. 3. 12. 34 H. 6. 45.

Upon a capias ad satisfaciendum, the Sheriff can take nothing but the body of the defendant, for the writ is to doe no more but to take his body: and to detain him in prison till he hath satisfied the Debt. Co. 5. 8.

Upon a Fieri facias the Sheriff may take in Execution any Goods or Chattels real or personall, that the Defendant hath at the time of the Execution awarded as Lease for years, wardships, cattell, corn, household stuff, apparrell, and the like, and this having taken he may sell and make money of it, and this money pay to the Plaintiff. Co. 8. 171. 7. 39. But the goods or Chattels a man hath as Executor or Administrator, cannot be taken in Execution, for the Executor or Administrator own debt, as they may and must for the Debt of the Testator. Plow. 525. And yet it hath been held that the goods I have to the use of another are liable to Execution for my Debt, because they are mine by Law, and his only in equity, M. 7. Jac. C. A. B. So if the defendant deliver his goods to me, to deliver over to another, that in this case before the delivery they are liable to Execution, Co. 9. 171. If a man have a Lease for years in the right of his wife, & a Judgement be had and Execution awarded against him, and he die before it be executed, yet it is said, the Lease is liable to the Execution: So likewise if the Defendant have a Lease for years in Jointenancy with another, Plow. 224. And yet if the defendant die before Execution awarded out, the Term is discharged and shall goe to the survivor. But goods pledged and not redeemed, or leased for any time and the time not expired, goods distrained and continuing as a distress, goods taken in Execution for another man and another Debt, are not liable to Execution. So offices of Trust which are not grantable over, may not be taken in Execution, Dyer 363. 7 H. 6. 11. Dyer 67. Co. 8. 171. 2 H. 4. 14. But some say that if there be other goods enough that the Sheriff may not take in Execution the Beasts of the Plow, if the other goods be then and there present and to be had, whether it be an Execution for the Lord Protector, or a subject, Therefore let the Sheriff take heed to this, Co. 2 parts Inst. 133.

Upon an Elegit the Sheriff is to make Execution of the one half of all the Houses, Lands, Medows, Pastures, Rents, Versions, and Hereditaments, whereof and wherein at the time of the Judgement had, or after the Defendant had any sole estate or interest in Fee tayl, or for life, into whose hands soever the same doe afterwards come, so also the one half of all such Lands he doth hold in Jointenancy, so long as the Defendant doth live, and of all, if he do outlive his companion: So also if the husband and wife hold Lands for their two lives, this is extendable upon this Writ. But a right only to Land, an Annuity, Copiehold Land, Land the Husband had in right of his wife in Fee, or for life after her death, is not extendable, nor liable to Execution. And all the Goods and Chattels (except only the beasts of the Plough) which the Defendant hath at the time of the Execution made, are liable to Execution on this writ, as on a Fieri facias. But none of the Goods or Chattels before Execution, Bona fide made away, are liable to Execution on this writ, Westm. 2. 18. Co. 6. 78. 8. 171. Dyer 206. 335. Co. 7. 59. 38. 4. 67. 78, F, N, B. 48. Plow. 224. 178, 2 H. 4. 14.

And if the one halfe be extended by one elegit, and then another elegit comes, the one half of the Residue only, and not the one half of the whole shall be extended upon this second writ. Brownl. 2 parts 97. As to this purpose, these things must be premised, &c. That if a Sheriff enter into a Franchise to do execution, it is good, Fieri non debet, factum valet. But the Lord of the Franchise may have an Action of the case against him for it. But if the Bailiff of a Franchise do Execution without this Franchise, it is void, and he a Trespassor in all he doth, 11 H. 4. 7. 2. If the Sheriff open or break any house to do Execution at the suite of a common person, the Execution is good, but the party whose house is broken may have an Action of Trespass against him for the breaking of the house, Co. 5. 93.

3. If a Sheriff do make Execution upon a Capias ad satisfaciendum, Fieri facias, Habere facias seisinam, Habere facias possessionem, a Liberate, or any such like final Proces, upon which no further Proces is to go, though he never return the Execution, yet is the Execution good. But if the Execution be made by Inquest, as upon an Elegit, or the like, there Execution is not well done, if it be not returned. If the Sheriff levy the money, and give it to the party Plaintiff, though he never make any return to the Court, it is good enough, Co. 5. 90. 4. 67. 11. 40. 20 H. 6: 24.

4. If the Sheriff have a Fieri facias, or Capias ad satisfaciendum against a man, and before Execution he pay him the money; in this case he cannot do Execution after: If he do, an Action of Trespasse or false Imprisonment lieth against him, Per Just. Jones. & Just. Berkly, B. R. Pasch. 12 Car.

Trespasse.
False Imprisonment.

Upon an Habere facias seisinam, or possessionem, the Sheriff is to put the Plaintiff into possession of the Land recovered according to the Writ; and if it be of a house, and he cannot otherwise do Execution of the house, he may break open the house to do it, Co. 5: 93. If the Judgement be for Rent, the Sheriff may make Execution by word, or by any part of the Land out of which the Rent doth issue, F. N. B. 179.

Sett. 7.
Upon an Habere facias seisinam, or possessionem.

The Sheriff upon this Writ is to do his best to take the body of the party in Execution, and for this purpose he is to seek for him, and if the door of his house be open he may go into his house, and take him out of the house. But he may not break open the house, nor (as it seemes) may he pull the latch, and open the dore if it be shut, Co. 5: 92. 93. Dyer. 67: 224. And yet if the Officer do so, and by that means doth apprehend and arrest the party, the Arrest is good, but the Officer may be punished for his excess, Per ch. Just. Hobart. Pasch. 21 Jac. And if the Sheriff cannot find him he must return upon the Writ a non est inventus, and thereupon the Plaintiff may have a Writ of Exigent, and so out-law him, Dyer. 67. 224.

Sett. 8.
Upon a Capias ad satisfaciendum.

The Sheriff upon this Writ is to do his utmost endeavour to levy the money upon the Goods and Chattels of the Defendant, and for that purpose to enquire and seek if he can finde out any Goods or Chattels of his, whereof Execution may be made; And it will be wisdom in the Plaintiff to make a diligent search to see if he can finde out any thing to be taken hold of, and if he can discover any, to direct the Sheriff to it, who ex Officio is to take it, and to sell it; and if he cannot sell it, he is to return it so, and thereupon a Writ called a venditioni exponas shall be sent to the Sheriff to force him to sell them, and pay the Plaintiff. But for the opening hereof, these things are to be known.

Sett. 9.
Upon a fieri facias.

1. If the out-dore of the house be open, the Sheriff may go into the house, and take any thing there liable to the Execution, and being come in at the open door, it seemes he may break open any of the inner doors 18, Ed. 4: 4. Co. 5. 90. Co. 4. 74.

2. If any of the Defendants Goods or Chattels be made away by fraud and covin of purpose to deceive Creditors, the Sheriff may notwithstanding take them in Execution, Co. 5: 90.

Fraud.

3. If the Sheriff take Leases for years or other Chattels real in Execution, he may seise and sell them without taking an Enquest by a jury of them, and the sale will be good, Co. 5. 90: 4. 74.

4. If a Sheriff after Execution made, sell Goods or Chattels and after the judgement whereupon the Execution was had is reversed by Writ of Error, yet the sale made by the Sheriff is good and unavoidable, Co. 5. 90.

5. If the Sheriff sell the Goods under foot, yet the sale is good, and the Defendant hath no remedy; And yet if there be Covin between the Sheriff and the buyer, perhaps the owner may have remedy by an Action of the Case, or by some other means, Kelw. 64.

Action of the Case.

The Sheriff upon this Writ is to pursue the charge and direction of the Writ (that is) to deliver to the Plaintiff the one half of the Defendants Lands he had, at, or after the time of the Judgement, and all the goods and Chattels the Defendant hath at the time of the Execution done. But in this case the Sheriff may not do all himself, as he doth upon the Fieri facias. For in this case, the Lands, Goods and Chattels must be found and prized by an Inquisition, and the verdict of a jury, and the same, and the value thereof returned before he can deliver them to the party or sell any of them

them away, and then if there be any Lease for years, the Sheriff may either sell it, and deliver the money to the Plaintiff, or he may deliver it to the Plaintiff at a yearly value, which he will, Co. 6. 73. 4. 75. 7. 39. Plow. 324. 441. Dyer. 1 c. 0. Westm. 2 ch. 202

If there be two several Judgements against one man, he that first sues out the Elegit shall have the one half of the whole, and he that sueth out the Elegit last shall have but the one half of that which is left, Trin. 38. Eliz. Co. B. Curia in Hints Case. If an Action be brought against one upon the Deed of his Ancestor, Binding his Heirs to do any thing, and Judgement be had against the Heir, in this case the Plaintiff may either have this Execution of the one half of his Land upon the Stat. of Westm. 2. or (as it seems) he may have Execution of all his Land by a Writ at the Common Law, Plow. 440.

7. In what case the Defendant in Execution shall be said to be discharged, or not.

By Act of God.
By Act of Law

If a man be in Execution for a Debt upon a Capias ad satisfaciendum, and die under Execution, the Debt unpaid; in this case the Execution is not discharged. But the Plaintiff shall have as much remedy to take his Execution upon his Lands, Goods or Chattels, as if he had never taken his body in Execution, Stat. 21. Jac. ch. 24. Cus. 86. If two be in Execution for one Debt, and one of them die under Execution, this doth not discharge the other, F. N. B. 146.

If one be in Execution upon a Capias ad satisfaciendum, and the Court adjudge the Judgement or the Execution erroneous, and so Null it; by this the Defendant shall be discharged of Execution, Co. 8. 143. 38 H. 6. 4.

If one taken in Execution escape, and the Plaintiff bring his Action against the Sheriff, or have a Capi returned upon the Capias ad satisfaciendum, and this is filed; in this case the Defendant as to the Plaintiff is discharged of Execution for ever; But if no Capi be returned, nor Action brought against the Sheriff; in this case the Law doth judge him to be out of Execution, 13 H. 7. 1. Plow. 36. 33 H. 6. 24.

If divers be in prison for one cause, and the Plaintiff receive satisfaction from one of them, all the rest are to be discharged, Co. 11. 7. 2. R. 3. 9. But if two be bound in a bond, and Judgement and Execution against them both, this will not discharge the other, nor shall he be discharged till the Plaintiff have recovered the Debt of the Sheriff, Co. 5. 86. If one be taken by a Capias pro fine, in such a case wherein he shall be said to be in Execution for the Plaintiff also, and he do after sue Execution against the Defendant by Fieri Facias, or Elegit; in this case the body is discharged from Execution, as to the Plaintiff, 13 H. 7. 6. If one be in Execution by a Capias pro fine, and he is after taken in Execution for a felony; in this case he is discharged of the first Execution, 6 Ed. 4. 4. Dyer. 60. If a prisoner be delivered out of Execution by privilege of Parliament, this is no discharge, but after the privilege is determined he may be taken again, Stat. 1 Jac. ch. 13.

By the Act of the parties.

If the defendant pay the money, he is hereby to be discharged of the Execution: But if the Plaintiff make any release, defeasance, or other such like Act to the Defendant being in Execution, amounting to a discharge of the Execution; this is not a discharge ipso facto, but by this means the party may procure a discharge; and yet if the Plaintiff himself shall deliver the prisoner out of Execution, hereby he is ipso facto discharged of the Execution for ever. So if the Plaintiff acknowledge satisfaction of Record, by this the Defendant is for ever discharged, Co. 5. 86. 6. 13. Co. 8. 152. Dyer. 152. Trin. 9. Jac. B. R.

Self. 12.
8. When a man shall be said to be in Execution, or not.

If the Sheriff have a man in his custody by Process of law, and after this a Writ of Capias ad satisfaciendum is delivered to him; in this case in Judgement of Law he shall be in Execution presently upon that Writ, though he never make any actual Arrest thereupon, Co. 5. 89. 11 H. 4. 12. 14. In all cases where the Plaintiff may have a Capias ad satisfaciendum in the suit, and the defendant is taken by a Capias pro fine, or a Capias ut legatum after Judgement, there the Defendant shall be in Execution presently as the suite of the party, also without prayer or motion to the Court: And in all cases where he may have a Fieri facias, and no Capias ad satisfaciendum, as in Assise, Rediffisin, and the like, and the party is taken by a Capias pro fine, and committed to prison at the Keepers of the Liberties suite; in all these cases also, upon a prayer and motion to the Court, the Defendant shall be in Execution for the party also, but not without prayer. And in cases where the Plaintiff hath a Judgement,

Judgment, and doth surcease his time, so that now he cannot have Execution by Capias ad satisfaciendum, or Fieri facias, but he is put to his Scire facias; in these cases if the Defendant happen after to be taken by a Capias pro fine for the Keepers of the Liberty, or by a Capias ut legatum, he shall not be in Execution for the Plaintiff, without Prayer or Motion to the Court, Co. 5. 89. F. N. B. 121. 7 H. 6. 6. Dyer 306. 11 H. 7. 15. 13 H. 7. 1.

If a man arrested by a Latitat be in prison for lack of Bail, and the Plaintiff get a Judgment against him; in this case he shall not be said to be in prison, unless the Plaintiff desire it, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Carrs case. So in case where a prisoner is committed to a wrong prison, or unduly committed to prison, Dyer 197. 306:

If after a Judgment given, the Judges of their own heads, or at the request of a Gaoler, or the like, without any Prayer of the Plaintiff, do commit the Defendant to prison; by this the Defendant shall not be said to be in Execution at the Sute of the Plaintiff, Dyer 297.

And in all these, and such like cases where the Law doth once adjudg the party to be in Execution at the Sute of the Plaintiff, if the Sheriff suffer him to escape, he is chargeable for the same to the Plaintiff in an Action of Debt, or the case, Dyer 306:

If a Defendant die, his body being in Execution, the Plaintiff may have a new Execution against the Lands or Goods of the Defendant as he pleaseth. But the Plaintiff whiles he hath the body of the Defendant in Execution, can have no other Execution against his Lands or Goods, Co. 5. 65, 66, 86, 87.

If a man have Lands in Execution by an Elegit, and he be wholly evicted out of it; in this case he may have a new Execution, either against the Defendants Lands or Goods, as he might have had before the first Execution, onely he must first have a Scire facias against the Defendant, or he that comes in under him: But if a man be evicted out of part of the Land, or for a time onely, so that he may take his full Execution by holding it over afterwards; in this case he shall not have a new Execution, for a man shall never have a new Execution by the Statute of 32 H. 8. 5. But in case where he is clearly evicted out of all that which he had in Execution, Co. 4. 66. A new Execution may be sued against any man, who by Privilege of Parliament shall be set at liberty, 5 Jac. 13.

It is a Writ lying where a man hath a Judgment in the County-Court, Court-Baron, or Hundred-Court, against Plaintiff or Defendant, and the Execution is deferred in favor of him, then the party grieved may have this Writ to hasten it, F. N. B. 120.

CHAP. LXXXIII.

Of Extinguishment.

T signifieth the effect of Consolidation, and is used for a perpetual stop of a mans right; as for example, If one have a Rent-charge, issuing out of Land for ever, and after he purchase the same Land for ever; now hereby the Rent is extinct for ever. So if a Lessee for years obtain the Fee-simple of Land, so that both Estates are simul & semel, in him, now by this the lesser Estate for years, is extinct; and this differeth from Suspension, because in that case the right suspended doth revive again: But in this the right extinct dieth for ever; but in this they both agree, that whiles the thing suspended or extinct doth so remain, it is as if it were not, and cannot be used or disposed, or had as before; as a Debt so Suspended or Extinct, cannot be sued for, or had by Executors: A Term of years so suspended or extinct, cannot be had, or disposed, or devised, neither shall go to Executors as another Term, and so for the rest; for this operation of Law makes a kinde of nullity of it: And yet in some special Cases, a thing suspended, or extinct, shall be said to be in esse, as to a third person; as if one that is Lessee for years, charge his Land he holdeth, so for his Term with a Rent, and then surrender to his Lessor. Now howsoever his Term be extinct, as to his Lessor, and to himself, yet as to the Grantee of the Rent it hath his esse still: So if an Executor have a Lease for years, and purchase the Fee-simple of the Land, as to the Executor, and others; this is, and shall be said to be extinct; but as to Creditors to be accounted Assets, this shall be said to be in esse, and the Executor shall answer for it. See Extinguishment. Co. 10. 52.

1. Suspension,
what:

This word is sometimes used Pro minori Excommunications. For which see the Statute of 24 H.8. 12. But more commonly, and so in this place it is used for a Temporal Stop of a Mans Right. As for example, When one hath a Rent or Service out of Land in Fee, and then Purchase an Estate in the Land for life or years; now by this, the Rent for the time is suspended, and the Purchaser cannot have it, Co. upon Littl. 313. 379. 147. Co. 2. 61.

3. What things may be Extinguished or Suspended, or
not.

All kinde of Rent, Seigniories, Services, Commons, Ways, Customs, Franchises, Liberties, Immunities, Uses, Executions, Warranties, Debts, Statutes, Obligations, Rights, Titles, Actions, Conditions, Prescriptions, Authorities, and Estates for life or years, may be Extinct, and some of these suspended. But Estates in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail cannot be suspended, nor extinguished by a greater Estate. See Infra, Dyer 181. Co. upon Littl. 101. 389. 390. And this Suspension may be of any of Seigniorie, Rent, Profit, Appreder, &c. By reason of the unity of possession of the same, and of the Land, out of which it doth issue, and then it sleepeth only, and may be awaked or revived; but when they are extinguished, they die, and cannot be revived, and so long no benefit can be taken of the Possession, by Rent, Wardship, or the like; but of an Escheat, or any thing touching the Right, Contrà, Co. upon Littl. 313.

4. In what case an Extinguishment shall be, or not.
Of an Estate.

Where a greater and lessor Estate do come together, by what means soever in one person final & semel, and the one is less then the other, and that other so great, as it is able to swallow up the lesser; in this case the lesser shall be drowned in the greater, and utterly extinct: As for example, If an Estate for life, or years, and the Fee-simple, or Fee-tail, come together, the Estate for life or years, is extinct. So if a Lease for years, and a Lease for life, come together, the Lease for years (though it be for never so many years) is extinct. Broo. Extinguishment 51: 34. Co. upon Littl. 300.

So if an Executor have a Lease for years from his Testator, and then purchase the Fee-simple, or the Fee descend upon him, the Lease for years, is extinct. So if one have an Estate for his own life, and an Estate, (i. e.) for anothers life at once, the Estate pur auter vie, is extinct, and drowned in the Estate for his own life. So if a Lease be made to A. for the life of B. the Remainder to A. for his own life; the Estate for the life of B. is extinct, and drowned, Co. 1. 87. Bro. 409. Dyer 11. Co. 11. 87.

If one be possessed of a Term of years, and do by his will devise it to A. for life, the Remainder to B. and after A. purchase the Fee, or it do descend upon him; in this case the Lease is extinct, because the Remainder to B. is void, Ca. 10. 52.

If the Tenant for life or years, and a stranger purchase the Fee-simple, the Term is extinct; as to one Moyety of the Land, Co. 2. 61.

If a Lessee for years be ousted, and he in Reversion disseised, and the Lessor do Release to the Disseisor, the Term is extinct, and the Disseisor may enter: But conversim if he that Release had an Estate for life, Co. upon Littl. 276:

If an Estate be to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for life, the Remainder to A. in Fee, and A. die; now the Estate for life to A. is extinct, 46 Ed. 3. 16.

If one that hath an Estate, as Tenant in Tail after a possibility of Issue extinct come by an Estate in Tail, or in Fee; the Estate he hath as Tenant after Possibility, is extinct. Bro. Estate 25.

If one that hath an Estate for his own life, get after an Estate for two other lives, his last Estate for two other lives, is extinct. But such Estates may be one in Remainder after another, Co. 5. 11.

Sess. 2.

If a Tenant by Elegit take a Confirmation from the Conusor, for the Term of his life, his Estate he had by the Elegit, is extinct; and the Tenant that was by Elegit, hath now an Estate onely for life, from the Confirmor, subject to his charges before the Confirmation as other Estates for life. Bro. Extinguishment 30.

If a Tenant by Statute obtain the Fee-simple of the Land, his Estate he had by the Extent, is extinct. Bro. Extinguishment 30. 56.

If an Estate in Fee Conditional, and an absolute Fee-simple come together, and they are united, the absolute Estate hath drowned the other, Co. lib. Inf. 1 part. fol. 18.

If one after his Title, begun to be Tenant by Courtesie, make a Feoffment in Fee upon Condition, and enter for the Condition broken; yet by this he hath extinct his Estate, so that though his Wife die, yet he shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie.

But to make an Extinguishment of an Estate, these two things must be.

1. The two Estates must be together in the same person simul & semel in possession; and there must be no intervening Estate between them.

Of Rent, Services, Way, Common, and the like.

2. The one of them must be greater and higher then the other, able to drown and swallow up the other, or else there will be no Extinguishment of either; as for Examples.

If there be a Lessee for ten years, the Remainder for ten years, or the Lessor grant to another for twenty years, and the first Lessee for ten years, have or purchase an Estate for life, or in Fee: Now in this case his Lease for ten years is not extinct. Bro. Extinguishment 1. 54. Bro. Sess. 409.

If the Lessor make a Deed of Feoffment, and a Letter of Attorney to the Lessee for years, to make Livery, and he doth it accordingly; this will not extinguish the Term, Co. lib. Inf. 1 part. fol. 52.

If Lands be given to two men, and the Heirs of their two Bodies, though here they have an Estate for life jointly, and several Inheritances; yet the Estate for life, is not extinct: But if it were by several conveyances, contra; as if a Lease were made to two for lives, and after the Lessor grant the Reversion to them two, and to the Heirs of their two Bodies, the Estate is drowned, Co. upon Litt. fol. 182.

Sess. 3.

If an Estate-tail, and a Fee-simple come together, they continue divided in him, and the one of them doth not drown the other, Co. 1. in Altonwoods case.

If an Estate in Tail after possibility of Issue extinct, and an Estate for life, otherwise come together, they are neither of them extinct; for they are all one in quantity.

So if a Fee-simple, and a Fee tail Estate meet together, the Estate-tail is not extinct. Co. 12. 81. 3. 61.

If a Man or Woman Lessee for years, take a Husband or Wife that hath the Reversion, it seems this Term by this is not extinct.

If an Estate be to a Husband and Wife for the life of the Wife, the Remainder to the Husband in Tail, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Husband, the Estate for life here, is not extinct, 8 Ed. 4. 20.

If a Lease be made to one for his life, and twenty years over, these two Estates will stand together well enough, and there shall be no Extinguishment: But if it were a Lease for twenty years, the Remainder to him for life; here the Estate for years were extinguished, Bro. Extinguishment.

If a Lessor make Livery upon the Land of his Lessee for years Rendering Rent, and the Lessee give him leave to do it; it seems this is not Extinguishment of the Term, Dyer 33.

If one that hath a Lease for years, grant it to his Wife that hath the Reversion, and to a stranger; by this the Moyety, that the Wife hath, is not extinct, Plow. 67.

If one that hath Execution by a Statute, get a Judgment against the Conusor, and and Execution of the same Land by Elegit; here is no Extinguishment. Bro. Extinguishment 67.

If A. makes a Lease to B. for years, and after Covenant with C. to levy a Fine to B. and do so till a Recovery be had, to the intent onely that B. might be Tenant to the Precipt, and that a Recovery might be had, which was to be to the use of C. and his Heirs, and a Fine and a Recovery is had accordingly; in this case the Term is not drowned, but saved by the Statute of 27 H. 8. of Uses, Hill. 20 Jac. B. R. Fermers case. See Afts.

Of Rent, Services, Way, Common, and the like.

Where one hath as high, as good, and durable Estate in any Land, as he hath in any Rent, Common, or other profit, Appreder in or out of the Land, there the Rent, Common, or other profit, is extinct: As if the Lord do purchase the Land, or the Land do descend to him from his Tenant; now the Services are extinct.

So if one have a Rent-charge issuing out of the Land to him, and his Heirs, and he purchase the Fee-simple of the Land, out of which the Rent doth issue, or of any part of it, the Rent is extinct.

So if the Lord and another do purchase the Land, out of which he is to have Services, the Services are extinct: But if in that case the Grantor by his Deed, reciting the said purchase of part, doth grant that he may distrain for the Rent; in the Residue this will amount to a new grant, Co. upon Littl. fol. 147, 148.

Sec. 4.

If a Lord disseise the Tenant, and make a Feoffment of the Land on Condition, and enter on the breach of him; yet the Seignior, is extinct. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 30. Co. Rep. 1 part. 38. 134.

If the Grantee grant the Rent to the Tenant of the Land, and a stranger, it is extinct for a Moyety, Co. idem.

If there be Lord Mesn and Tenant, and the Lord purchase the Tenancy in Fee; the Mesnalty is extinct; but if the Tenant infeoff the Lord, and his Wife, and their Heirs, here it is but suspended; for if the Wife survive, both Seignior and Mesnalty are revived, Co. upon Littl. f. 155. See more there.

So if the Tenant purchase the Seignior, the Mesnalty is extinct: So if one that hath Common Appendant in another Land, purchase all that Land; this unity of that Land doth extinguish the Common. So if one have a Way Appendant to his Mill, or House, or to Church, or the like, through another mans ground, and he purchase the ground, through which his Way is, whiles he hath the ground, or House to which it is Appendant; now by this, the Way is extinct: And therefore if he sell this ground, after it will be wisdom for him to take care, that he do except and reserve his Way again which he may de novo, if he will: But if a whole Parish had such a Way, through a ground to Church, and one purchase the ground; this would not extinguish the Way.

If A. have White-acre and B. Black-acre, and A. have a Way over Black-acre, belonging to White-acre, and he purchase both the Acres, hereby the Way is extinct. And therefore if A. afterwards infeoff C. of Black-acre without exception, his Way is gone, B. R. Trin. 2 Car. Mich. Mr. Dovers case, 11 H. 4. 5. 21 Ed. 3. 2. So by a Release of Rent or Services, they may be extinct: For which see Release, Co. upon Littl. fol. 147. a. b. & 312. Co. 2. 73. Co. 4. 38. D. & Sr. 35. Dyn. 45. Plow. 72. 3 Afs. 2415.

A Lord by Disclaimer of Services or Seigniority, doth extinguish them, Co. upon Littl. fol. 102. If it be in a Court of Record, to make an Extinguishment of Rent, &c. these three things are requisite,

1. That the Land and Rent, &c. to be had out of it, be in one hand.
2. That he have both by a good Title.
3. That he have a like Estate in both, for otherwise there shall be no Extinguishment. Plow. 419. Littl. fol. 561. As for examples.

If a Woman have a Rent out of three Acres, and after she recover one of the Acres by a Title of Dower; now hereby it seems the Rent is not extinct, but shall be Apportioned. Bro. Extinguishment 52. Homage and Fealty are not extinct by the Lords purchase of part of the Land, Co. upon Littl. 149.

If one make a Lease for years, rendring Rent, and after make a Feoffment of the Land, and give Livery without the leave of the Lessee; this is no Extinguishment of the Rent. Bro. Extinguishment. So also of a Lease for life: But if one be seised of a Rent in Fee, and Disseise the Tenant of the Land, and make a Feoffment in Fee, the Rent is extinct, and will not be revived by the Regress of the Tenant. Co. 5. Sir Mory Finch's case. Co. upon Littl. 319.

If a Commoner alien part of his Land, to which the Common doth belong, by this his Common is not extinct, but it shall be divided. See Common. If a Copiholder by Custom claim Common in a great Waste, and the Lord grant part of it to another, and then make a Copihold Estate, yet the Tenant will have Common still, Co. 8. 64.

If one have a Warren in other Land, and he after purchase the Land; this Unity of Possession alone, doth not extinguish the Warren; but if he make a Feoffment of the Land without excepting his Warren, it seems it is extinct, Co. 11. 13. Bro. Extinguishment 5.

If one make a Lease of three Acres of equal value, yielding three shillings Rent, and the Lessor grant the Reversion of one, the Grantee shall have part of the Rent, Co. 8. 79.

If a Parish hath Way through a ground to Church or Market, and one of them purchase it, the Way is not extinct; for this is of necessity, otherwise it is for other ways, Adjudged, Jordens case, Hill. 4 Jac. B. R. Crompt. Jur. 95. Co. 517.

If a Lessee for years grant a Rent-charge, and then doth Surrender, yet the Rent doth continue.

If one that hath a Service in Chivalry, purchase Parcel of the Tenancy, yet the Service is not extinct, but remaineth entire, Co. 26.

So if one purchase of his Tenant, that holdeth by Rent, Service, Parcel, the Rent shall be divided, and is not extinct, Co. upon Littl. 149.

If one that hath a Rent-charge of twenty shillings, Release to the Tenant of the Land ten shillings, or more, or less; this doth not extinguish the rest: So if such a Grantee grant over ten shillings parcel of the same to another, and the Tenant Accorn; and yet these are good, and hereby the Rent is divided, Co. upon Littl. fol. 149. 9 H. 6. 12, 53. F. N. B. 152.

If the Land out of which Rent-charge is granted, be recovered by an elder Title, the Rent is not extinct, but the party hath this Writ of Annuity for yet, though the Land be discharged, Co. upon Littl. f. 148. So if cestuy que vie of Land grant a Rent out of it for one and twenty years, and he for whose life it is, dieth within the one and twenty years, yet the Rent shall continue as an Annuity, Co. upon Littl. 148.

If B. make a Lease of one Acre to A. for life, and A. is seised of another Acre in Fee, and granteth a Rent-charge to B. out of both, and doth Waste in the Acre, which he holdeth for life, or maketh a Feoffment of it, and B. recovereth or entereth; in this case the whole Rent is not extinct, but shall be apportioned, Co. upon Littl. fol. 148.

If one de cease the Term-Tenant, that hath a Rent in Fee, or take a Feoffment on Condition; this will not extinct the Rent, Littl. 58.

If

If a Debtor by Obligation, or otherwise be made Administrator to the Debtee; this doth not extinguish the Debt, Co. 8. 136. Trin. 7 Jac. Simons case, Adjudg.

If an Obligation be given, and taken for a Debt due, or a Judgment, or another Obligation; this doth not extinguish the former Debt. So neither an Obligation for a Debt due before Auditors on an Account. See Debt, Co. 8. 135. Brow. Oblig. 23:

If an Obligation be made to a Feme-sole, and three Executors be, and one of them marry the Feme-sole; yet it seems the Debt is not extinct, and that he and his Wife may sue the other Executors, and himself, Fitz Executors 81.

If an offence of a lower nature, be made of an higher nature, the lesser offence is gone: As if that which is murder at Common Law be made Treason, the offence of murder is gone, and no Appeal will lie for it; for things of a higher nature do determine things of a lower nature, Dyer 30.

Of an Offence.

In all cases, for the most part, where a Feoffment will make an Extinguishment of an Estate, Condition, Rent, or the like, there a Lease for years will make a Suspension, Co. 8. 79. See above and beneath.

5. In what case a Suspension shall be, or not.

And Note, that where there is a Suspension there is no Extinguishment: As if one that hath Common Appurtenant in Land, take a Lease of part of the Land; this doth suspend his Common, Co. 8. 79.

Note.

If one have a Rent or Services out of any Land in Fee, and he purchase the same Land for life or years, by this the Rent or Service is suspended for that time: So if one have a Rent-charge in Fee, and grant it for life to the Tenant in Fee of the Land, or in Fee to the Tenant for life of the Land; this is a Suspension of the Rent, Finches Ley 134. But it is no Extinguishment, and therefore in the first case, it may be with a Remainder over; in the next, the Tenant may grant it in his life, if he do not, his Heir shall have it.

If a Feoffment be made in Fee or Lease for years, rendring Rent, and the Feoffee, or Lessee make a Lease for years, to the Feoffor or Lessor, of all or part of that which passes by the first Lease or Feoffment; by this the Rent is suspended, Co. 4. 52.

Rent.

If a Lessor do enter upon his Lessee for life or years, wrongfully, and keep him out of Possession: Now by this, the Rent is suspended till the Lessee re-enter again; and if he enter upon his Lessee, and make a Feoffment (and this be a good Feoffment) till the re-entry of the Lessee, the Rent is suspended. So if he enter upon part only, and keep but the Lessee; this is a Suspension for the whole. So if he keep the Possession at first, and the Lessee never enter. But if the Lessor re-enter severally, the Rent is revived, if he enter specially contra, where the Lessor doth enter lawfully, as upon a Surrender, Forfeiture, or the like, there shall be Apportionment of the Rents. *Co. 2. 31. & 4. 5. 21. Rent.

If Lessor grant a Rent-charge, and die, the Tenant for life, being his Heir, he shall hold it discharged for his life; and therefore the Rent is not extinct to all purposes; but if the Tenant for life purchase the Fee, contra, 9 Edw. 4. 18. 11 H. 7. 12.

If Tenant for life make a Lease for years, rendring Rent, and after this, the Reversion discend to the Tenant for life, the Rent is not gone, Adjulg. Winsors case: But if he purchase the Reversion, contra, Co. 1. 96.

If one make a Feoffment of Land in Fee, on condition that the Feoffee shall re-lease the Feoffor of it, and before it be done, the Feoffor make a Lease of all or part of this Land to another; now by this the Condition is suspended: So if the Feoffee had made a Lease to the Feoffor of all or part of the Land; this had suspended the Condition, during the Lease, if the Condition were to pay Rent, or the like: But if the Condition were for a Collateral thing, the payment of a sum in gross, or the like, contra. If a Feme-sole Inseoff a man of Land by Deed indented, reserving Rent to her, and her Heirs, at Easter, on Condition to re-enter for non-payment, and then they intermarry; now hereby, during the Coverture, the Rent and Condition are suspended; and if the Condition had been to pay him ten pound at a day, and before he marry her, the Condition is gone, Co. 4. 52. 2. 59. Co. upon Littl. 217, 218.

A Rent-service may be extinct or suspended in part by purchase of the Land, but not a Rent-charge; but by a Release, part of a Rent-charge (as it seems) may be extinct. Bro. Extinguishment, Perk. sect. 71.

A Seigniority Rent, or the like, cannot by any rightful or wrongful act of the party be suspended in part, and in esse, for another part, in respect of the Land, out of which it is issuing: So neither can it by such act be suspended for a Remainder, and in esse for the particular Estate; but by the act of Law, or of a third person, such a Suspension may be, Co. 9. 129.

By act of the party, a Rent-service cannot be suspended in part, and in esse for another part, but by act of Law it may: As when the Gardein in Chivalry entreteth into his Wards Land within age; now is the Seigniority suspended, and yet if the Wife of the Tenant be endowed of a third part of the Tenancy, she shall pay to the Lord the third part of the Rent, Co. upon Littl. 148. So if the Tenant give part of his Land in Tail to the Father of the Lord, and he die, and it descend to the Lord; and so it is of a Rent-charge. Idem.

A Seigniority may be suspended in part, by the act of a stranger, as if two Joyntenants or Coparceners be of a Seigniority, and one of them doth Disseise his Tenant, the other may distrain for his part, Co. upon Littl. 148.

All the things noted before to be suspended, it seems, may be revived again, unless it be Estates; and personal things, for they being once suspended, can never be revived, unless it be in special cases; as the case of marriage of a Feme-Executrix with a Debtor (before) and as some hold, if a Feme-Obligee marry with the Obligor, and after they be divorced, that now here shall be a Reviver of this Debt: But Rents, Seigniorities, Services, Conditions, and the like, being once suspended, may be after revived; and therefore if the Tenant Infeoff his Lord on Condition, and after enter; for the Condition broken, the Seigniority is revived, Perk. 19.

If one have a Rent-charge in Fee going out of his Land, and marry with the Woman-Tenant in Fee of the Land, after the marriage dissolved, the Rent is revived; and if the Husband grant it away, during the Coverture (as it seems he may) the Grantee may distrain for it presently. If a Man Lease a House and Close, rendring Rent, and the Lessor enters into the House, and pulleth it down, and then the Lessee doth re-enter in the Close; in this case the Rent once extinct, is not revived, Goldsb. 125. pl. 15.

If one hold 3 Acres by three Rent, and Lease one to his Lord for years, here the whole Seigniority is suspended, Bro. 133. If a Feoffment or Lease be of divers Parcels of Land, rendring several Rents out of every Parcel, with Condition of re-entry for non-payment, and the Feoffor or Feoffee make a Lease or Feoffment of one Parcel onely, or a Lessee in such a case Surrender one Parcel onely; in these cases the whole Condition is extinct or suspended, Co. 2. 59. 5. 54.

Toll in a Fair or Market.

12. Toll to the Fair or Market, is a reasonable sum of money due to the owner of the Fair or Market upon sale of things, tollable within the Fair or Market, or for Stallage, Vicage, or the like.

As touching which, these things are to be known.

1. If the King had granted to a man a Fair or Market, and granted no Toll, the Patentee should have had no Toll; and this is a free Fair or Market: And after the King could not have granted Toll without Quid pro quo, (i. e.) some proportionable benefit to the Subject.

2. If the Toll be outrageous that the King grants, it is void, and it is a free Market or Fair.

3. No Toll is to be paid for any thing brought into a Market or Fair to be sold to the owner of the Fair, before sale of the thing, without especial Custom for it time out of minde.

4. It ought to be taken of the buyer onely, when the thing is sold, but in ancient Fairs and Markets, Toll may be paid for a standing in a Fair or Market, though nothing be sold, Co. 2 part. Inst. 320, 221.

5. If the King had granted to any generally or specially to be discharged of this Toll; this will discharge him from all Tolls, to the Kings own Fairs or Markets, and if the Tolls of any Fair or Market, granted after such Grant of Discharge, but cannot discharge Tolls formerly due to subjects, either by Grant or Prescription. Exemption from Toll.

6. Tenants in Ancient Demesne for the Lands in their own possession, are to pay no Toll; but if he be a common Merchant, and use buying and selling of things that rise not upon the Manurance and Husbandry of those Lands, for these he must pay Toll.

7. The King was not to pay Toll for any of his Goods.

Of Farm-Farmers.

THe word Farm is most properly taken for the chief Messuage in a Village or Town, whereunto doth belong great Demesne of all sorts, and hath been used to be let for life, years, or at Will: So that it is a Collective word, consisting of divers things gathered into one, as a Messuage, Land, Meadow, Pasture, Woods, Commons, and the like. And he that is Lessee of such a Farm, or occupieth it, is called the Farmor; but the Rent reserved upon a Lease of such a Farm, is called a Farm or Ferm. And a Farmor doth sometimes signifie any Lessee for life, years, or at Will, of Lands or Houses, though never so few: So sometimes by Farm or Ferm, is understood any House of Land, taken by Indenture of Lease or Lease-Parol: And Fee-Ferm properly is where the Lord upon the making of the Tenancy, doth reserve to himself, and his Heirs the Rent, for which it was before let to Ferm, or at least the fourth part thereof, and is always a great Rent, and reserved upon an Estate in Fee for ever, Plow. 295: Co. 2 part. Inst. 44.

Of a Feoffment.

Feoffmentum, i. e. Donatio feodi, strictly and properly is the Gift or Grant of any Honors, Castles, Manors, Messuages, Lands, Houses, or other Corporal Immoveable things of like nature, which be hereditable to another in Fee-simple, i. e. to him and his Heirs for ever, by the Delivery of Seisin and Possession of the things given. And from hence comes the word Infeoff, for by this word and the words Give and Grant (as the most apt words for that purpose) is this kinde of conveyance most commonly made. Hence also it is, that he that makes this Feoffment is called the Feoffor, and he to whom it is made the Feoffee. Also it is sometimes, but improperly, called a Feoffment, when an Estate of Freehold onely doth pass, New Terms Ley. Co. super Lit. 9. Litt. sect. 57. 1. Feoffment. what. Infeoff. Feoffor. Feoffee.

This kinde of Conveyance, albeit it may be made in most cases by word without any writing, yet it is most commonly done by writing, and this writing is then called a Deed or Charter of Feoffment, but hence is the division of a Feoffment by word, or a Feoffment by writing. The ancient Forms and Examples of these Deeds are very brief, and yet they had these parts contained in them. 1. The Premisses. 2. The Habendum. 3. The Tenendum. 4. The Reddendum. 5. The Clause of Warranty. 6. The In cuius rei Testimonium. 7. The Date. 8. The clause of Huius testibus. Hac fuit candida illius atque fides & simplicitas, qua pauculis lineis omnia fidei firmamenta posuerunt. See West Sym. 1 part. sect. 235. Co. super Lit. 6. 2. The kinds.

And this manner of Conveyance, as it is the most ancient kinde of Conveyance, so is it the best and most excellent of all others, and in some respects doth excel the Conveyance by Fine or Recovery: For it is of that nature and efficacy by reason of the Livery of Seisin evermore inseparably incident to it, that it cleareth all Disseisins, Abatements, Intrusions, and other wrongful and defeasible Titles, and reduceth the Estate clearly to the Feoffee when the Entry of the Feoffor is lawful, which neither Fine, Recovery, nor Bargain and Sale by Deed indented and inrolled 3. The nature and operation of it.

will doe when the Feoffor is out of possession. And it passeth the present estate of the Feoffor, and not only so, but barreth and excludeth him of all present and future right and possibility of right to the thing which is so conveyed, insomuch that if one have divers estates all of them pass by his Feoffment, and if he have any interest, Rent, Common, or the like into or out of the Land, it is extinguished and gone by the Feoffment. And further it barreth the Feoffor of all collateral benefits touching the Land, as condition, power of revocation, writs of error, attaint and the like, insomuch that if a man make an estate of his land upon condition, or with power to revoke it, and after he make a Feoffment of the Land; by this he is barred for ever of taking advantage of the condition or power of revocation. It destroyeth contingent uses, gives away a future use inclusively, gives away a Seignory inclusively, and gives away a right of action: for both the Feoffment andivery of feisin incident thereunto are much favoured in law, and shall be construed most strongly against the Feoffor and in advantage of the Feoffee. And besides all this, because it is so solemnly and publickly made, it is of all other conveyances most observed, and therefore best remembered and proved. Co. super Lit. 49. 9. Co. 1. 111. 112. Plow. 554. 9 H. 7. 24. 39 H. 6. 43. Co. super Lit. 237. Perk. sect. 210. 24 E. 3. 70. Co. 1. 111. Co. 6. 70. Bro. scire facias. 28. Plow. 423. 424.

If the Feoffment be made by Deed, then must the Deed be so made, written, read, sealed, and delivered as all other Deeds that are well made must be. For which see Deed supra cap. 4. Numb. 5.

And in every good feoffment that is made there must be a Feoffor: i. a personable to grant the thing passed by the Feoffment; a Feoffee: i. a person capable of it and able to take it, and a thing grantable; and it must be granted in that manner as law requirith. And for this therefore observe that whosoever is disabled by the common law to take, is disabled also to make a Feoffment, gift, grant, or lease, and many also that have capacity to take by such conveyances, have no ability to grant by them, as men attainted of treason, felony, or in a Premunire, alien borne, the Kings villaines, Ideots, mad men, a man deafe, blind and dumbe from his nativity, a Feme covert, an infant, and a man by duress, for the Feoffments, gifts, &c. of such persons may be avoided. But such persons as have committed treason or felony if attainder doe not follow, such as are attaint of heresie, a leper removed by the Kings writ from the society of men, bastards, such as are deafe, dumbe or blind, that have understanding and sound memory, albeit they cannot expresse their intentions otherwise then by signes, those that are drunken; the villaines of a common person before entry, &c. also excommunicate persons, and outlawed persons, albeit the King take the profits of their lands, all these may make Feoffments, gifts, &c. and all these have capacity to take by such conveyances. See Grant Numb. 4. Co. super Lit. 2. 42. 43. Perk. sect. 182. 183. 185. Bro. Feoffments. 2. 7. 8. 9. 17. 39 H. 6. 43. 21 H. 7. 7.

Neither the head alone, nor any one or more of the members of a Corporation aggregate of many alone may make a Feoffment of any of the Land belonging to their corporation. But all of them together may make a Feoffment: and if any of them be seised of Land in his own right and in his naturall capacity, he may make a Feoffment of this land as another man may doe; yea he may make a Feoffment of this Land to the same corporation whereof he is a head or member, and so give and take also in a divers capacity. Fitz. saitt & Feoffments 29. Perk. sect. 205. 224. 225.

One Jointenant cannot make a Feoffment of his part of the Land to his companion; for a man cannot give a possession to him that hath before. And hence it is also that the Lessor cannot make a Feoffment to his Lessee for life, years, or at will. And yet perhaps a Feoffment in this case if it be in writing, may work as a confirmation: But one Tenant in common, or one coparcenor may make a Feoffment of his part of the land to his companion. *Perk. fell. 197. If a man make a Feoffment of another's land, it is a Disseisin, but a good Feoffment against all men but the Disseisee himself. And if four join in a Feoffment of Land, and three of them have nothing in the Land, and the fourth hath all the estate; this is a good Feoffment. Bro. Feoffment 4. Perk. fell. 222.

Disseisor and Disseisee.

A Disseisor cannot make a Feoffment of the Land to the Disseisee, but it will be void, for the Disseisee will be remitted. But a Disseisee may make a Deed of Feoffment and a letter of Attornay to enter and give livery; and if the Attornay do so, this will be a good Feoffment. Perk. fell. 197. Co. super Lit. 48. 49.

If there be a meadow of one hundred acres which time out of minde hath been divided amongst divers persons, and each person hath a certaine number of acres, but in no certaine place; the custome being to allot each person his number one yeare in one place, and another in another alternis vicibus, in this case either of these persons may make a Feoffment of his part by the name of so many acres lying in such a meadow without any bounding or describing of it. Co. super Lit. 4. 48.

If parceners have made partition of their Land, that the one shall have it from Easter to Lammas to her and her heirs, and the other shall have it from Lammas to Easter to her and her heirs, or that the one shall have it one year, and the other the other yeare alternis vicibus: Or if they have two Manors descended, and they agree that the one shall have the one Manor one year, and the other the other Manor the same year, and the next year that he that had the one shall have the other alternis vicibus for ever; in these cases the parceners may either of them make a Feoffment of this Land or Manor. Co. super Lit. 4. 48.

If there be any lease for life or years in being of that land or thing whereof the Feoffment is made, and he that hath this lease for life or years, or in his absence his bailiff or servant keeping in the house or land whereof the Feoffment is to be made doth give leave and agree that livery of seisin shall be given upon the house or Land by the Lessor himself or by his attornay, and for this cause doth leave the possession of the house or land, and thereupon livery of seisin is made; this is a good Feoffment and a good livery of seisin, and yet it doth not prejudice the estate of the Lessee. And if the lessor make a Feoffment of the Land to a stranger, by assent or licence of the Lessee, the Lessee then being on the land; this is a good Feoffment. In like manner as it is, where the Lessor doth enfeoffe a stranger to which the Tenant doth doth agree saving his terme. And if the Lessor make such an entry upon the Lessee for life or years as to put him out of possession of the House or Land, and then he doth make a Feoffment and livery of seisin of it, or if the Lessor in the absence of the Lessee, his Wife, Servants and Children enter upon the thing in Lease and make a Feoffment and livery of seisin thereof; in these cases there is a good Feoffment to pass the reversion, for in these cases when the Lessee for life or years doth re-enter, the law doth adjudge this to be an attornment in law. But if a Lessor will enter upon his Lessee, and against his will (the Lessee being still in possession of the land) make a Feoffment of the Land and give livery; this is void and can never take effect as a Feoffment. And therefore if there be a conveyance made of a house, and Land thereunto belonging in Lease, and the Feoffor come into part of the Land without the leave of the Lessee, and there make livery of seisin of that part in the name of all the rest of the Land, (the Lessee himself, his Wife, Child, or servant being then upon any other part of the Land, and especially if they be in the house) this is no good Feoffment for any part of the Land, but void for the whole. And yet if the Lessee for years make an under-lease of part of the Land to another, and the Feoffor doth make a Feoffment of this part, and give livery of seisin upon this part, in this case the possession of the first Lessee in the residue will not hurt the Feoffment or livery for this part, but it is a good Feoffment. Veynors case Trin. 7 Jac. B. R.

Also if the Lessee give the Lessor leave to make livery and depart and leave a servant of the Lessee upon the Land; in this case it seems his presence upon the Land whiles the livery is made, will not hurt. Co. super Lit. 48.

And so if the Lessee leave the possession and leave nothing upon the Land but his cattell; they will not keep his possession nor prejudice the livery of seisin.

If a Lease be made of one acre to one, and another acre to another, and the Lessor make a Feoffment of both these acres, and make livery in one of them in the name of both acres; this is no good Feoffment for the other acre, for by this livery he is not put out of possession of that acre. 21 H. 7. 7. Dier 18.

So if one make a Feoffment of two Manors, the one in possession, and the other in Lease, and give livery of seisin of the Manor in possession in the name of both the Manors; this is no good Feoffment for the other Manor, neither will it pass by this Feoffment. So if one make a lease for years of a house, and after Feoffment in Fee of the house, and of a close adjoining, and give livery of seisin of the house, the termors wife and children being then in the house; in this case this is no good livery neither to pass the house nor the close. 21 H. 7. 7. Dy. 18.

Forfeiture.

If Lessee for life, or years make a Feoffment of the Land, the Lessor being then upon the Land and not contradicting it; it seems this is a good Feoffment, and that the presence of the Lessor upon the Land, especially if he doe not contradict it, will not hinder the virtue of the Feoffment; as against the Feoffor and all others: but the Lessor may enter afterwards for the forfeiture notwithstanding if he please. Perk. fess. 222. Dier 362.

Husband and Wife.

If the Husband alone make a Feoffment of the Land, he hath in the right of his wife, or that he hath jointly with his wife, his wife being then upon the Land and disagreeing to it; in this case the Feoffment is good against the Feoffor and all others but the wife notwithstanding her presence and disagreement, but the wife may after his death avoid it. Perk. fess. 223.

Jointenant.

If one jointenant make a Feoffment of the whole Land, his companion being then upon the Land; by this there doth pass no more but a moiety, and the Feoffment is void as to the moiety of his companion, for the Feoffment doth not give his moiety. Perk. fess. 229.

If a man enter into my Land by wrong, and make a Feoffment of it to a stranger, I being then upon the Land; this Feoffment is void, for in this case the law doth adjudge me to be alwaies in, and never out of the possession, Perk. fess. 210.

Prerogative.

If the King have any possession of the Land by wardship or otherwise, the owner of the land can make no feoffment of it: And therefore if the King be entitled tuled to land by wardship, or primere seisin after office found after the death of an Auncestor of one of his tenants; in this case it is said the feoffment of the heire is void and passeth nothing, for the King is still in possession. And if it be before office found it will be all one, for the office shall relate to the death of the Auncestor. And yet in these cases the feoffment is good against the heire himself, and all others besides the King. If the heire before office found, enter and make a feoffment, and then the King doth pardon the feoffee; in this case the feoffment is good. And yet such a feoffment after office with a pardon is void. And the like law is if the entry be before office, and the pardon after the office; for this is void also. But if a man be out-lawed for debt or trespass, and thereupon the King hath the profits of the lands, in this case the owner may make a feoffment of this land notwithstanding. Perk. Sect. 219. Bro. Feoffment: 3. 17: 21 H. 7. 7. a H. 6. 5. 1 H. 7. 5. Stamf. prer. Regis, 40.

Outlawed persons.

Divers persons cannot make a feoffment but it must be by deed, as corporations, and such like: Also divers things cannot be granted by a feoffment, but the feoffment must be made by deed, for a feoffment cannot be made of a reversion of land but it must be by deed. But a lease may be made of land to one for life, the remainder to another in fee, and this may be done without any writing by word only. Also a feoffment may be made of the moiety, third, or fourth part of a manor, or of a pece of land without deed. And yet if one be seised of a manor, whereunto an Advowson is appendant, and he make a feoffment of three acres parcell of the manor, together with the Advowson to two men, Habendum the one moiety with the Advowson to one of them, and the other moiety to the other, in this case the feoffment cannot be well made unlesse it be by deed. Fitz Fais & feoffments. 32 See Grants Numb. 4. Litt. Sect. 60. super Litt. 190.

4. In respect of the manner of making of it. Reversion.

If a lease be made for five years, on condition that if the lessee pay to the lessor within the two first years ten pound, then that he shall have the land to him and his heires, or otherwise but for five years; in this case if livery of seisin be made to the lessee before his entry, this is a good feoffment. Es sic de similibus. Litt. Sect. 350.

Every feoffment also whether it be made by deed or without deed, must be made with livery of seisin, and this livery of seisin must be made according to the rules of livery and seisin herein after laid downe, for this is of the essence of a feoffment, and a feoffment is not accounted perfect untill livery of seisin be made, for untill then the feoffee hath only an estate at will in the land, and the feoffor may put him out when he will. And if either of the parties die before the livery of seisin be made, the feoffment is void, and no warrant of attorney to make livery can be executed after the death of the feoffor or feoffee, neither is there any remedy in this case to get the assurance to be made perfect but in a Court of Equity. But in case where there are many feoffees, there the death of one or some of them will not hinder the livery but it may be made to him or them that doe survive, we must see therefore in the next place what this livery of seisin is. Litt. Sect. 59. 66. Co. super Litt. 52. Doct & Stud. 13.

Equity.

Livery of seisin, or giving of possession is a solemnity or overt ceremony required by law and used for the passing of lands or tenements corporall as an evidence or testimoniall of the willing departing by him that makes the livery from the thing whereof livery is made, and the willing acceptance thereof by the other party. And this is as ancient as a feoffment, for no feoffment is made without livery of seisin, albeit livery of seisin be sometimes made upon other conveyances. And it was first invented as an open and notorious act to this end, and that by this means the country might take notice how lands doe passe from man to man and who is owner thereof, that such as have title thereunto may know against whom to bring their actions, and that others may know that have cause, of whom to take leases, and of whom to require wardships &c. And by this means if the title come in question, the jury can the better tell in whom the right is. And of this livery of seisin there are two kinds. 1. A livery in deed. 2. A livery in law, called a livery within view. The livery in deed is when the feoffor, donor &c. by himselfe or another, taketh the

3. Livery of seisin, what ring of the door of the house, or a turfe or twig of the land, and delivereth the same upon the land unto the feoffee, donee, &c. in the name or seisin of the house, or seisin of the land. And this is done sometimes by the parties themselves if they be present, and sometimes in their absence by their attornies or procurators. The livery in law is where the feoffor saith to the feoffee being in view of the land, I give you yonder house to you and your heires, goe enter into the same and take possession thereof accordingly, or the like. New terms of the Law West 2. part Symk. Sess. 251. Co. super Litt. 48.

7. The nature and operation of it.

Because this manner of conveyance by feoffment is so ancient, therefore this ceremony (being inseparably incident to a feoffment) is much favoured in law. And therefore it is expounded and taken strongly against him that doth make it, and beneficially for him to whom it is made. And for this cause it worketh not only to transmit the present estate, but also to barre all present and future rights and possibilities. If therefore one make a lease for life to I. S. the remainder to the right heires of I. D. (which I. D. is then living) and give livery of seisin according to the deed, in this case albeit he in remainder be not capable of this remainder, yet by the livery it shall passe out of the feoffor, and shall be in Abeyance during the life of I. S. So if a feoffment be made to one & heredibus, without the word [Suis,] and livery of seisin be made of the deed; this livery perhaps may make the estate good. Bro. estates 4. Plow. 28. 29.

8. Where and in what cases it is requisite, Or not.

Livery of seisin is needfull and must be had and made in all cases where any estate of fee-simple, fee-taile, or for a mans owne or another mans life is made or granted by writing, or word in the country of any lands or tenements corporall. And so also where one doth make a lease of land to another for years the remainder to a stranger in fee simple, fee tail, or for life; in these cases livery of seisin must be had and made to the lessee for years or else nothing will passe to him in remainder; and yet the lease for years will be good. And so also where a lease for years is made upon condition that if such a thing happen the lessee shall have the fee-simple; in this case the lessee must have livery of seisin before his entry; otherwise the estate will not increase. And so also if the King make a feoffment of the land be hath in the right of the Duchy of Lancaster that is not within the county Palatine; in this case livery of seisin must be made as in the case of a Subject. And in all these cases where livery of seisin is requisite and it is not made, there doth passe no estate by the conveyance, but an estate at will at the most. Co. 5. 92. Litt. Sess. 70. Co. 6. 26. Doff. & Stud. 13. Co. super Litt. 49. Co. super Litt. 216. Plow. 214. 219.

But livery of seisin is not needfull or requisite to be had and made in cases where any estate of fee-simple, fee-taile, or for life is made or granted of any lands by matter of record, as by the Kings Letters Patents, Fine, Recovery, Deed indented and inrolled, and the like; nor is it needfull where any such estate is created by way of covenant and raising of use, by way of Exchange, Indowment ad officium Ecclesie or ex Assensu patris; nor is it needfull where any such estate is passed or granted by way of surrender, devise, release, or confirmation, or by way of increase or executory grant, as when the fee-simple is granted to the lessee for life or year in possession; neither is it requisite or can be made where any incorporeall hereditaments, as reversions, rents, commons, or the like are granted in fee-simple, fee-taile, or for life: for in some of these cases there is an attornment to be made that doth supply a livery: Neither is it requisite in some cases where an estate of freehold is made of a corporall thing, as if a house or land belong to an office, and the office be granted by deed; in this case the house or land doth passe as incident thereunto. So if a house or chamber belong to a corody; in this case by the grant of the corody the house or chamber passeth without any livery of seisin. Neither is it requisite upon a lease for years, for if a man make a lease for one thousand years; this lease is perfect by the delivery of the deed without any livery of seisin. Neither is it needfull where one doth grant to me and my heires all the trees growing on his ground; for these will passe without any livery of seisin at all. Co. 2. 23. Litt. Sess. 59. Co. super Litt. 49. Co. 8. 137. 11. 49.

Nor is it needfull when an estate is made to one that is in possession already, be he Tenant at will or sufferance only, or (as it seemes) but a Disseisor only. But if an estate be made to A. in possession of the lands and to B. out of possession of the land, this without livery of seisin cannot execute any Estate in B.

Livery of seisin may and must be made either by the party himselfe that maketh the estate, or if it be a livery indeed, it may in his absence be made by his attorney sufficiently authorized by writing. And he that may make an estate, to the perfection whereof livery is requisite, may himselfe and in his owne right make livery thereupon: and in the right of another, and as attorney to another, so divers that cannot make any estate may notwithstanding make livery of seisin. And therefore the husband albeit he may not make a feoffment in fee, or lease for life, &c. of land to his wife, yet he may as an attorney make livery of seisin to her upon a conveyance made by another. And so also may the wife upon a conveyance made to the husband or her: And so also Monks, Infants, Aliens, and such like Persons disabled to make feoffments &c. may notwithstanding make livery of seisin as attorneys upon conveyances made to others. And so likewise may he in remainder in fee make livery to the lessee for years. Et sic de similibus. And this livery of seisin may and must be made to the party himselfe that taketh the estate, or in his absence to his attorney or procurator sufficiently authorized: and in this case any one may be an attorney to take that may be an attorney to give livery. If a feoffment be made to divers by deed and livery of seisin is made to one or some of them; this is a good livery to execute the estate to them all. But if a feoffment be made to divers without deed, and livery of seisin is made to one or some of them in the name of all the rest; in this case the feoffment is good to execute the estate in him or them to whom the livery is made, and void as to the rest. If a lease for years be made to A. and B. without deed, the remainder to D. in fee, and livery of seisin is made to A. or B. in this case this is a good livery to make the remainder to passe to D. But if a lease be made for years to A. the remainder to the right heirs of J. S. in fee, J. S. being then living, and livery of seisin is given to A. this remainder is void: for terminus heredes viventis. One Jointenant cannot take livery of seisin to his companion as a tenant in common may. And a lessor cannot make livery of seisin to his lessee for life or years. See before Numb. 4. Perk. Sell. 184. Co. super Litt. 48. 49. 52. Co. super Litt. 48. 49. Dier. 35. Co. super Litt. 49. 359. Co. 5. 95. Co. super Litt. 217. Perk. 40. 10 E. 433.

In all cases where this ceremony is requisite, whether it be done by the parties themselves in person or their deputies, it must be done and made, 1. in the life time of the feoffor, donor, or lessor, and in the life time of the feoffee, donee, or lessee, for if either of them die it cannot be done afterwards: neither can a warrant of attorney be made to deliver seisin after the death of the feoffor &c. But if there be more feoffees, donees, or lessees, then one, in such cases albeit all of them die but one, the livery of seisin may be made to that one that doth survive, and it will be good to him to execute the estate in all the land. And so it is if there be a warrant of attorney made by a Corporation aggregate, as a Mayor and Community, Deane and Chapter, or the like, to give livery of seisin, in this case the death of the Mayor, &c. will not determine the authority, and therefore in that case the livery of seisin may be made after his death. 2. If it be a lease for years with a remainder over in fee, the livery must be made to the lessee for years before his entry or at the time when he doth enter for that purpose, for afterwards it cannot be made: Quod semel meum est, amplius meum esse non potest. Quare also whether the law be not so in all other cases, and let men take heed they doe not (as commonly they doe) enter into the land before they have livery of seisin made thereof unto them: And yet it seemes the livery of seisin is good when it is made afterwards, by Co. 2. 55. 3. It must not be made before the estate begin, for if a lease be made for years to begin at Michaelmas with a remainder over, and the livery of seisin is made before Michaelmas, this livery of seisin is void; for if a livery worke at all, it must worke presently, and so it cannot in this case, because it is before the estate doth begin. Co. super Litt. 52. Co. super Litt. 49. 216. *Perk. 3. In respect of the place or thing wherein it is made.

in this case the making of livery of seisin of land in any part thereof in the name of all the rest, or of one parcell according to the deed, albeit he doth not say in the name of &c. sufficeth for all, if all the peeces be in the grantors possession and out of lease. But if the peeces of land lie in divers counties, or in the same county and they be in lease, or out of the possession of the feoffor contra; for in that case the making of livery in one part in the name of all the rest is not sufficient for the rest, for in this case it is requisite that livery of seisin be made upon and in some of the land in both counties, and upon every parcell of land that is out of possession, or at least in some parcell of the land in the occupation of every severall tenant. And yet if one part of a Manor be in one county, and the other part in another county in view of that part; in this case it seemes livery of seisin in the one part in the one county in view of the other part in the other county is good and sufficeth for all. So if the scite of a Manor lie in one county, and the rest of the Manor in another county; in this case the making of livery in the scite of the manor is sufficient for the whole Manor. If a feoffment be made of the Manor of Dale in Sale, the which Manor doth extend in Dale and Sale, and livery of seisin is made accordingly in Dale only and not in Sale also; by this feoffment there doth passe no more of the Manor but that which is in Dale only. If I be seised of one acre in fee, and of another acre for life, and I make a feoffment of both acres, and make livery of seisin in that acre whereof I am seised in fee in the name of both acres; in this case it seemes this sufficeth to passe both the acres. But if I be seised of one acre in fee, and possessed of another acre for years, & I make a feoffment of both acres and livery of seisin in that acre only whereof I am seised in fee in the name of both the acres, contra; for this is as if I make a feoffment of land whereof I am seised, and of other land whereof I am not seised &c. If I be seised of two acres of land, and let one of them for years, and then make an estate of both of them to another, and make livery of seisin in that I have in possession in the name of both the acres; this will not serve to passe the other acre, but livery must be made in that acre also. And accordingly it was agreed in a case in the Kings Bench Hil. 38. Eliz. which was, that a man was seised in fee of a Manor and other lands called Groves, and he made a feoffment of it (Groves being then in lease for years) and a letter of attorney to give livery, and the attorney made livery of the Manor in the name of the rest, the lessee being still in possession of Groves; in this case it was agreed that this was no good feoffment for Groves. Co. super Lit. 48. *Perk. When a feoffment is made of a house and land, the livery of seisin is most aptly to be made of in the house in the name of the rest, and at the door of the house &c. And when a feoffment is made of a Rectory or Parsonage; the livery of seisin may be made in the Parsonage house; or if there be no house, it may be made upon the Glebe; or if there be neither, it may be made at the ring of the Church door: See infra.

4. In respect of the presence or possession of others.

In the making of every livery of seisin it is requisite that all persons that have any lawfull estate and possession in the thing whereof livery is to be made, as lessees for life, years, and such like joine in the making thereof or be removed thence, for every livery ought to bring an immediate possession to the feoffee, donee, &c. See before Numb. 4.

If lessee for years make a feoffment and a warrant of attorney to give livery of seisin, and the attorney make livery of seisin the lessor being present upon the land and not contradicting it, it seemes this is a good livery of seisin: Dier. 362.

The presence of the feoffor, donor, &c. upon the land after he hath delivered seisin to the feoffee, donee, &c. albeit he stay upon the land a while and doe not depart and leave the feoffee &c. in possession, will not hurt the livery. See more supra Numb. 4. Bro. Feoffments. 24.

5. In respect of the matter whereof it is to be made.

Livery of seisin may be made of any corporall thing, as Manors, houses, lands, meadows, pastures, woods, chambers, or the like. And these things therefore are said to lie in livery. But of incorporall things; as rears, advowsons, commons, flowers, and and such like things livery cannot be made. And these things therefore are said to lie in grant and not in livery. And therefore when a livery is made of these nil operaturus. See more above Num. 4 Co. Super Litr. 49.

To every good livery of seisin is requisite either such an act as the law doth adjudg to be a livery, or apt words that doe amount unto it; for a livery may be good by words without any act or deed at all. But it cannot be good by an act or deed without any words at all: howbeit that livery that hath an act or ceremony in it is the best, because it taketh the deepest impression in the witnesses. Co. 9. 137. Super Litr. 49.

The most usuall formall and orderly manner of making of livery of seisin is thus, that the feoffor, donor, &c. and the feoffee, donee, &c. if they be present, or in their absence their attorneys or servants that have authority doe come to the door, backside or garden if it be a house, if not, then to some part of the land where seisin is to be delivered; and there in the presence of many good witnesses doe shew the cause of their meeting, openly and plainly, doe read the deed or declare the contents thereof and of the letter of attorney if there be any. And then the feoffor, &c. or his attorney (if it be a house) doe take the ring, latch or haspe of the door (all the people, men, women and children being out of the house,) or (if it be of a peece of ground) doe take a clod of the ground or a bough or twig of a tree or bush growing thereupon; and (all the people being out of the ground) the same ring &c. clod, bough &c. with the deed doe deliver to the feoffee, donee, &c. or to his attorney: and in the delivery hereof doe use these or some such like words, viz. I deliver these to you in the name of seisin of all the lands and tenements contained in this deed, To have and to hold according to the forme and effect of the same deed. Or, I deliver you seisin and possession of this house or ground in the name of all the lands contained in the deed according to the forme and effect of the deed. And then if it be a house, the feoffee, &c. doth enter in first alone and shut to the door, and then he doth open it and let in others. And if the feoffment, gift, or lease be made without deed, then they doe and must withall expresse the very estate it self, which the feoffee, donee, or lessee is to have: as for example, the feoffor, donor, or lessor must come to the house or land which is to be granted and where livery of seisin is to be made and there must by apt words grant the house or land to him that is to have it in fee-simple, or in taile, or for life, (as the agreement is) and in seisin thereof must deliver him the ring of the door, or a turfe or twig of the land, And if the feoffment &c. be made by writing, then it is wisdom to indorse and set downe on the back of the same, how, when and where the same is made, and the names of the witnesses thereunto. But a livery of seisin that is not so exactly made, may be good notwithstanding. And therefore if the feoffor, donor, &c. or his attorney take any thing else that comes from off the land, as a stone, or the like, and therewithall doth make the livery of seisin; or if he take a turfe, or twig from off another mans ground, and not from the same whereof possession is to be given, and deliver that upon the ground in the name of seisin; or if he take a peece of silver or gold, or a rod, stick or the like, and deliver this upon the land in the name of seisin; all these are good deliveries of seisin and possession. So if the feoffor &c. be at the door of the house, or by the land, or in the house, or upon the land, and after he hath delivered the deed, he say to the feoffee, donee, &c. [Here I deliver you seisin and possession of this house or land in the name of seisin and possession of all the lands and tenements contained in the deed.] Or [have and enjoy this house or land according to the deed.] Or [enter into this land or house, and God give you joy of it.] Or [I am content, you shall enjoy this land;] in all these cases there is a good livery of seisin, Et sic de similibus. West. Symb. 1 part. Sect. 251. Perk. Sect. 109. 210. Co. Super Litr. 48: Co. 9: 137. Fitz feoffments & saits. 111. Co. 6: 26. 41. E. 3: 17.

If I being seised of a house in fee make a feoffment of it and of divers lands to a man then present with me in the same house, and there deliver him the deed in the name of seisin of all the lands contained in the deed; in this case this is a good delivery of the deed, and a good livery of seisin also, albeit I continue in possession of the house still and goe not out of it. And if I be Lord of a Manor, and lying sick within some part of the Manor I make a feoffment of the Manor, and deliver the deed to the feoffee saying to him, I will that you take seisin presently, and thereupon command all my tenants of the manner to attune to him, and they doe so; this is a good livery of seisin. So if I make a deed, and after I have read it, being upon the land I deliver it to the feoffor, donee, &c. and say, Here I deliver you this charter as my deed in the name of seisin of all the lands therein contained, or the like. this is a good delivery of the deed and of seisin. But if I doe only seale and deliver the deed upon or in view of the land without saying or doing any more; this will not amount to a livery of seisin. And therefore if a man make a feoffment with a letter of attorney to give livery of seisin, and then he deliver the deed upon the land, this is no good making of livery of seisin. And so also if there be no letter of attorney. Bro. feoffment 28. Perk. Sess. 21. 212. Perk. Sess. 215. Co. 6. 26. Cromwale case Adjudged in the exchequer 13. Elix.

If I be seised of a house in fee, and being in the house say to I. S. Here I. S. I demise you this house for terme of my life; this will not amount to a livery of seisin; and therefore it is no good lease untill livery of seisin be made; but it is a good beginning of a lease. Co. 6. 26.

If the father infeoffe his son of land, and the son suffer his father to enjoy it, and after the son doth come to the Parish Church where the land doth lie, and there in the audience of the parishioners useth these words to his father, [Father you have given me such and such lands (and doth name them) as freely as you gave them to me I give them to you againe;] this is no good livery of seisin, neither doth any estate passe hereby. So if one being upon his land say to I. S. [I. S. stand forth, I doe here referring an estate to me for mine owne life give this land to thee and thy heires for ever;] this is no good livery of seisin, neither doth any estate passe thereby. So if one make a charter of feoffment to me and make no livery of seisin thereupon, and after I make a feoffment of the land to I. S. and the feoffor hearing and having notice of it [I doe willingly agree to it and am contented that I. S. shall have it;] or I doe agree to the feoffment, or the like, in this case this doth not make the feoffment that was made to me good, Perk. Sess. 216. Hil. 37. Elix. B. R. Callards case. Fitz. Fess. & feoffments.

If divers parcells of land be conveyed and livery of seisin is made in one; or there be divers feoffees, and livery of seisin is made to one of them according to the deed without using any more words; this is good. But the best forme and order of making of livery in this case is to adde these words, [in the name of all the rest &c.] Co. super Lit. 48. Fitz. E. 10. 177.

Livery in law,

If the feoffor, donor, &c. deliver the deed in sight or view of the land, and use these or any such like words, [I will that you shall enter into the land and have it according to the deed;] Or, [take and enjoy the land according to the deed;] Or, [I deliver you this deed in the name of seisin;] Or, [enter you into the land and take seisin of it;] Or [take the land, and God give you joy of it;] Or, (if the estate be made without deed) [I give you yonder land to you and your heires and goe and enter into the same and take possession thereof accordingly;] Or [enter into the land and enjoy it in fee simple to you and your heires, or for your life &c.] in all these cases the estate and the livery is good, albeit the feoffor &c. stand in one county, and the land in view be in another county. But an Advowson will not passe by livery made in view of the Church without deed, there being an Incumbent in the Church per. ch. Just. & Just. Manwood 18. Elix. in Carys. Rep. 52. And in all these cases of livery within the view, 1. It must be made by the person himselfe that doth make the estate, for it cannot be made by his attorney. 2. There must be a relation to the land: for if the feoffor doe deliver the deed only to the feoffee in sight of the land; this is not a good livery within the view. 3. The parties must stand within view of the land, for if the feoffor &c. being out of the sight of the land say to the feoffee &c. Goe and enter and take seisin of the land and God send you joy of it; this is no good livery of seisin. 4. There must be some body capable of a freehold to take by the livery, for if it be made to a lessee for years the remainder to the right heires of I. S. and I. S. is then living, it is void. 5. The feoffee &c. must enter presently, for if either the feoffor, donor &c. or feoffor, donee &c. die before entry; the livery cannot be made good. And yet if the party dare not enter for feare, in this case if he claime it only commandement, all that he doth is void. But for the most part where the Attorney doth that which he is authorised to doe, and more also, it is good for so much as is warranted, and void for the rest. And therefore if the letter of Attorney be to give livery of seisin to A and the Attorney give it to I and W; this livery is good to I and void to W. So if the letter of Attorney be to give livery of seisin of white acre only, and he make livery of white acre and black acre also, this livery is good for white acre, and void for black acre. Co. super Litt. 52. 258. Park. fell. 187. 188. 189.

So if the letter of Attorney be absolute; and the Attorney give livery upon condition, some hold this to be good, and the condition to be void. Park. fell. 109. Co. super Litt. 258.

If a letter of Attorney be made to two jointly to make or take livery of seisin, and one of them alone doth it without the other, this is a void livery. But otherwise it is, when it is made to two jointly or severally, for there one of them alone may doe it. Co. super Litt. 49.

If a letter of Attorney be to make livery of seisin after the death of another man, and the Attorney doth make livery of seisin during that mans life; this livery is void. Park. fell. 39.

If I make a letter of Attorney to I to give livery in the Capital messuage, and he doth it in another place, or to doe it between two 2 or 3 a clock, and he doth it at another time, or a Feoffment be made to A and B and the letter of Attorney is to give seisin to A, and he give it B, in all these cases it is not good. But if the Feoffment be to I and a letter of Attorney to make livery to him and the Attorney doth make it to his Attorney this is good. 10 H. 7. 39. Dyer 337. 483. 68.

Livery of seisin is sometimes made single, and without any Relation to the Deed whereby the estate upon which the livery is made is created at all: and sometimes and most commonly it is made with reference to the Deed in these or such like words [secundum formam charta.] In the first case the estate is oftentimes made upon the livery; and then there may be one estate contained in the Deed, and another made by the livery, also there may pass more Land by the livery than is in the Deed, and by this means when there is a fault in the Deed, so that the Land will not pass by the Deed, it may perhaps pass by the livery: but in this case then there must be apt words used in the making of the livery to create the estate also; as well as to give the possession. But where the livery of seisin is made with relation to the Deed, there it must take effect according to the Deed, or not at all, for these words secundum formam charta. are to be understood according to the quantity and quality of the effectuall estate contained in the Deed. And therefore if one make a Deed of Feoffment to another, and in the Deed there is contained no condition at all, and when the Feoffor doth make livery he doth make livery upon condition; or if the Deed contain an estate to him and his Heirs, and he maketh livery of an estate in taile or for life; in these cases there doth pass nothing by the Deed. And yet if there be apt words used to create such an estate at the time of the livery made; such an estate may be made by the livery without the Deed, and then the Deed shall be void. But if in these cases the Feoffor say when he doth make livery on condition in taile, or for life, secundum formam charta; in this case there is a good Feoffment made according to the Deed, and the additional words are void. So if a man make a Lease for years, and make livery secundum formam charta; this is but a Lease for years still. And if A give land to B To have and to hold after the death of A to B and his heirs; this is a void Deed, and therefore if the livery of seisin be made secundum formam charta, the livery of seisin is void also. But if when he doth give livery of seisin, he give it to him and his heir, without these words, secundum formam, &c. or if in the making of livery he say Here I deliver you seisin of this Land, To have and to hold to you and your Heirs for ever, or the like; this may make a fee-simple. So if one make a Deed of Feoffment of 3 acres, & after make livery of seisin of 4 acres; in this case if there be words in the livery of seisin sufficient to make a new estate, the other two acres may pass also. Litt. fell. 359. Co. super Litt. 48. 122. Fitz. Estoppel 177. 7 Ed. 4. 25. Co. super Litt. 49. Fitz. feoffments & sais. 23.

11: How it shall enure, and be taken, and construed.

If A by Deed give Land to B to have & to hold after the death of A to B and his Heirs; this is a void Deed, and therefore if upon this Deed livery of seisin be made before the day by the party himself, or at, or after the day by his Attorney secundum formam & effectum chartæ; the livery is void also, for it cannot enter so. And yet if a Lease be made for life to begin in futuro, and at, or after the day come, the Lessor himself in person doth make livery of seisin secundum formam chartæ; in this case, the Lease perhaps may become good by this livery of seisin. Co. 2. 55. 5. 94. & Greenwoods case. B. R. Mich. 17. Jac.

If an agreement be between two, that the one shall enfeoff the other upon condition for surety of money, and afterwards livery of seisin is made generally without any such condition; in this case it is said by some the estate shall be on condition still. Co. super Litt. 222.

If there be a fault in the Deed, as by the mis-naming of the Feoffor, &c. Feoffee &c. or the like, and afterwards the Feoffor, &c. doth himself in person make livery of seisin upon this Deed to the Feoffee, &c. by this the fault of the Deed may be holpen and cured. Perk. fell. 42.

If one make a Feoffment to himself and another, and give livery of seisin to the other; this is a good Feoffment and shall enure to the other wholly, and he shall take the whole by the Feoffment and the livery. And so if the livery be made to one that is capable, and to another that is not capable; he that is capable shall take the whole, and the other shall have nothing. So if a Feoffment be made to two, and one of them die before the livery is made, and after the livery is made to the survivor; in this case the livery shall enure to the survivor only, and he shall have all the estate thereby. So if a Feoffment be made without Deed to a Corporation, and to I S, and livery is made to I S alone; in this case I S shall have the whole and the Corporation nothing at all. Perk. fell. 204. 203. 7 H. 7. 9.

If a Feoffment be made to four, and livery of seisin is made to one, two or three of them; this shall enure to them all. But if the Feoffment be without Deed, it shall enure to him wholly to whom the livery is made. And if one of them give warrant to the rest to take livery for him, and they do so; this shall enure to them wholly, and not to him at all for any part. Dier. 35. 10 E. 4. 1. G. 5. 95.

If the Tenant make a Feoffment to his Lord and another, and give livery of seisin to the other; this shall enure wholly to the other untill the Lord agree to it, and then to them both. 10. E. 4. 12.

If one make a Deed of Feoffment of one acre of Land to A and his Heirs, and another Deed of the same Land to A and his Heirs of his body, and deliver seisin according to the form and effect of both Deeds; in this case it shall enure by moieties; i. he shall have an estate taile, and the Fee-simple expectant in the moiety, and a Fee-simple in the other moiety. Co. super Litt. 21.

If two severall Deeds of Feoffment be made to two severall persons of one and the same thing; he that can get the seisin first shall have it. Rem. domino vel non domino vendente duobus, In jure est potior traditio prior.

If Lessee for life make a Feoffment, and a Letter of Attorney to the Lessor to make livery, and he doth make livery accordingly; in this case this shall not enure to bar him of his entry upon the Feoffee for the forfeiture of his Lessee. But if Lessee for years make a Feoffment in Fee, and such a letter of Attorney to the Lessor, and he doe deliver seisin accordingly; this livery shall bind him, for it shall be said as in his own right, because the Lessee had no freehold whereof to make livery. Co. super Litt. 52.

If a Lessor make a Deed of Feoffment, and a letter of Attorney to the Lessee for years to give livery, and he do accordingly; this shall not be construed to extinguish or hurt his term. See more in Exposition of Deeds, supra ch. 3. Co. super Litt. 52.

CHAP. LXXXV.

Of a Fine.

Fine, what.

His word is ambiguously taken in our Law, for sometimes it is taken for a sum of money or mulct imposed or laid upon an offender for some offence done, and then also it is called a ransom: And sometimes it is taken for an Income or a sum of money paid at the entrance of a Tenant into his Land. And sometimes it is taken for a final agreement or conveyance upon Record for the settling and securing of Lands and Tenements. And in this sense it is taken here; and so it is defined by some to be, an acknowledgement in the Kings Court of the Land or other thing to be his right that doth complain. And by others, A Covenant made between parties and recorded by the Justices, And by others, A friendly, reall and finall agreement amongst parties concerning any Land or Rent or other thing whereof any suit or writ is hanging between them in any Court. And by others more fully, An instrument of record of an agreement concerning lands, tenements or hereditaments, duly made by the Kings license and acknowledged by the parties to the same, upon a writ of covenant, writ of right, or such like, before the Justices of the Common Pleas or others thereunto authorized, and ingrossed of Record in the same Court, to end all controversies thereof both between themselves which be parties and privies to the same, and all strangers not suing or claiming in due time. And in every Fine there is a suit supposed, wherein the party that is to have the thing is called the Plaintiff, and sometimes also in another respect the Conusee or Recognisee, and the other that doth depart with the thing is called the Deforciant, and sometimes in another respect the Conusor or Recognisor. And it was anciently the end of a suit indeed, for after there had been some contention about the thing by suit, the parties became agreed who should have it, and so a fine was levied of it, and there was an end of the matter; and hence it is said to be fructus or effectus legis, because it gives a man the fruit or effect of his suit. And to this day therefore a writ doth alwaies goe forth before a fine can be levied, and this is now one of the common Assurances of the Kingdom. Co. upon List. 126, 127. Plow. 357.

The parts of it.

There are five essentiall parts of a Fine. First, the originall writ taken out against the conusor, for without this a fine cannot be levied: Secondly, the Kings license for the levying of the fine, and for this the King is to have a fine or sum of money, which is called Kings silver, for this is properly that money which is due to the King, in the Court of Common Pleas, in respect of a license there granted to any man for passing a fine. And this is part of the revenues of the Crown. Thirdly, the Concordance or Concord it selfe which is the very agreement between the parties that intend the levying of the fine how and in what manner the thing shall pass, and doth begin thus: Et est Concordia talis, &c. (i.e.) And the Concordis such, &c. And this is the foundation or substance of the fine, for if upon this the Kings silver be entred, albeit the Conusor die afterwards, yet the fine is good, and the note or foot of the fine are but abstracts out of this. Fourthly, the note of the fine, which is an abstract of the originall Contract or Concord, and doth begin thus, Between A plaintiff and B and C deforciant, &c. Iner A. quarentum & C. deforciantes, &c. Fifthly, the foot of the fine, which doth begin thus. Hac est finalis Concordia, &c. this is a final Concord, &c: and containeth all the matter, the day, yeer, and place, and before what Justices it was levied, which is therefore called the Foot of the fine because it is the last part of it, and when this is done all is done: And for this there are indentures made by the Chirographer and delivered to the party to whom the Conuance is made, which is called the Ingrossing of a fine, for then a fine is said to be ingrossed when the Chirographer makes the indentures of the fine, and doth

A Fine is either without Proclamations, which is also called a Fine at the common Law, and this is such a Fine as is levied after such manner and forme as Fines were usually levied before 4 H. 7. upon which no Proclamations were made, which Fine doth still remain of the same force as it was at the common Law to discontinue the estate of the Cognisor if it be executed. Or it is with Proclamations, which is also called a Fine according to the Statute, and which is such a Fine as is levied with Proclamations after the forme and manner ordained by the statute of 4 H. 7. chap. 24. (and such a Fine shall every Fine that is pleaded intended to bee if it bee not shewed what Fine it is, and of this sort were and are most Fines since 4 H. 7. as being the best kinde of Fine of all; and it is in the election of him that sueth out the Fine as long as he liveth to have it with, or without Proclamations. A Fine also whether with or without Proclamations, is either executed, which is such a Fine as of his owne force giveth a present possession (or at the least in Law) unto the Cognisee, so that he needeth no writ of Habere facias seisinam or other means for the execution thereof; but he may enter: of which sort is a fine Sur Cognissance de droit come ceo que ad de son done, an acknowledgment of Right &c. which is in every deed the best and surest kind of Fine of all, and this kind of Fine doth alwaies suppose a feoffment, or gift precedent of the same thing whereof the Fine is had, which the Fine is to corroborate and strengthen. Or it is Executory, which is such a Fine as of his own force doth not execute the possession in the Cognisee, and of this sort is a Fine Sur Cognissance de droit tantum, when the party that doth levy the Fine is seised of the thing, and hee to whom the Fine is levied hath no freehold therein, but it passeth by the Fine: and a Fine Sur Done, Grant, Release or Confirmation. And if these kind of Fines be not levied or such Render made unto them that be in possession at the time of the Fines levied, the Cognisees must enter or have writs of Habere facias seisinam, according to their severall Cases for the obtaining of their possessions. But if at the time of levying of such an executory Fine the party unto whom the estate is limited be in possession of the lands passed, he shall not need any writ of execution to put him in possession, for then the Fine will enure by way of Extinguishment of right, and doth not alter the estate or possession of the Cognisee, however perchance it doth better it. The fine Sur consance de droit tantum, also doth serve sometimes to make a surrender, and then it is therein recited that the Conusor hath an estate for life, and the Conussee the reversion: and sometimes it doth serve to grant a Reversion, and then the particular estate is recited to be in another, and that the Conusor willeth that the other shall have the reversion, or that the Land shall remain to the other after the particular estate spent: a Fine also is either single, which is such a Fine by which an Estate is granted to the Cognisee and nothing granted or rendred back again to the Cognisor by the Cognisee. Or it is double, which is such a Fine as doth contain a grant, and render back again either of the Land it selfe, or of some rent, common, or other thing out of it to the Cognisor for some estate, limiting thereby many times remainders to strangers which be not named in the writ of covenant, which also is sometimes with reservation of rent, clause of distresse, and grant of the same over. West. Symb. part. 2. Sect. 19. Dyer. 216. Plow. 265. Co. 3. 86. stat. 32. H. 8. 36. 4 H. 7. 24. 1 R. 3. 7.

A Fine is a Record as of great antiquity, so of a high nature, great force, and much credit and esteeme, and it is now become and serves for a formall conveyance of land, and one of the common Assurances of the Kingdome, for by this meane a man may convey his land to another in fee simple, Fee-taile, for life or years, with reservation of rent also. It is therefore called a Feoffment of record, for it doth countervaille a Feoffment with livery of seisin in the country; and it includeth all that the Feoffment doth; and worketh further of his own nature, and it is indeed for many purposes the best and most excellent assurance of all others, for by the ancient common Law it was so high a barre, and of so great force, and of so strong a nature in it selfe, that it did conclude and barre not onely such as were parties and privies thereto and their heirs, but all others of full age, out of prison, of good memory, and within the four Seas the day of the fine levied, if they did not make their claim within a year and a day. And it is still of that force, albeit it be somewhat enfeebled by some Statutes, that either it passeth all the right and interest of the Conusor to the Conusee, or else it worketh by way of extinguishment and Estoppel, and doth perpetually barre the Conusor and his heires of all present and future right and possibility of right or other collaterall benefit to the thing whereof the fine is levied. And if it be a fine with Proclamations, it doth in time become a perpetuall barre to all others also, that have right, except they doe take care to prevent the barre by their claime, Action or entry within five years after the proclamations ended. And it barreth locatiles peremptorily whether the heire do claim within five years or not, if he make his claime by him that levied the fine. Statute of Fines. 18: E. 1: Co. 1: 3. Plow. 358. 365.

What shall be said a good Fine, or not: and how.
1. In respect of the persons thereunto and their capacity. And by, or to whom a Fine may be levied, and who may be conusors or conusees. And by what names. Persons attaind. Non sana memoria. Infants.

Any person male or female, body sole, or corporate, that hath capacity to grant, or is able to be a grantor by a deed, may levy a fine and be a Conusor therein, but there are certain persons prohibited by Law, which the Judges or Commissioners that take the Conusance of fines ought not to admit or receive, and yet if they doe admit them, and a fine be levied by such persons, the fine is good and unavoidable, and of this sort are mad men, lunatikes, villaines, Ideots, men that have the Lethargy, doing old persons that want discretion, drunken men, and men that are forced to it by threatening, imprisonment or the like, also such as are born blind, deafe and dumb, but a man that becomes so accidentally may be received and ought not to be refused.

Also persons attaind of felony or treason ought not to be received to levy a fine, but such persons being admitted to levy a fine, the fine will be good against all persons but the King and the Lord, of whom their lands whereof the fine is levied, are held for their times: but persons waived or outlawed in personall Actions only, ought not to be refused. West. Symb. in his Treatise of Fines. 17 E. 3. 32. 17 Aff. pl. 17 Litt. Sect. 731. Perk. Sect. 24. Fine. Fines. 120. See in grant infra chap. 11. Numbr. 17 E. 3. 32. Crompt. Jur. 37. 10 E. 4. 13. Also Infants ought not to be received to levy a fine, and yet if an Infant be admitted to levy a fine, and he doe not avoid it by writ of error during his minority (as he may if it be not a fine Sur Grant & Render in taile or for life, the fine will be good for ever against him and all others. And if he die during his nonage, before he hath avoided it, it seemes his heir can never avoid it, and yet upon this point the Judges of the Common Pleas have been divided on a solemn argument, and of this Just. Dod. in 17. Jao. made a Quere. Perk. Sect. 19. Dyer. 220. et per Just. Bridgman's opinion in private. 17 E. 3. 53. 30 E. 3. 5. 17 Aff. pl. 51. Perk. Sect. 19. 20. Co. 7. 8. Also women that have husbands ought not to be admitted alone without their husbands to levy fines, and yet if such a woman alone levy a fine of her own land she hath in Fee simple, and her husband doe not avoid it (as he may if he will) by writ of Error, entry, or otherwise during her life, or after her death during his own life, if he be Tenant by the Curtesie, this is now a good fine, and will bind her and her heires for ever, except she be an Infant at the time of the fine levied, and her husband happen to die during her minority, for then in this Case, if it be not a fine Sur Grant & Render to her in taile or for life, she may avoid it during her minority; but if the coverture continue untill her full age, in that case she cannot avoid it except her husband joyne with her in it, but the husband and wife ought to be received together to levy any fine of her Land. If such persons as are civilly dead, as Fryars, Monkes, and the like, be admitted to levy a Fine, the Fine is void. But such civil bodies as have absolute estate in their possessions, as Maior and Commonalty, Dean and Chapter, Colleges, and other Societies corporate, may levy Fines of the Lands they hold in common, even by the Common Law, and such Fines are good, but Ecclesiasticall persons, as Bishops, Deans, Masters of Hospitals, Parsons, Vicars, Prebends, and such like, are by divers Statutes refused to levy Fines of their spirituall inheritances. West. Symb. part. 2. Sect. 9. Plow. 538. 579. Co. 11. 78. 1. in Adagdale College case.

Corporations.

Any person that hath capacity to take by grant, or may be a Grantee by deed, may take by Fine and be a Conusee therein, as any person male or female, of full age or under age, whether it be a Feme Covert, mad person, lunatike, Ideot, any person in prison, or beyond the Sea, also any person attaind of felony or treason, or outlawed in any personall action, a Bastard, Clark convict, or Alien, may be Conusee in a fine and

and a Fine levied to such persons is good. 3 H. 6. 42. 41 Ed. 3. 7. 50 Ed. 3. 9.

Also Corporations spirituall and temporall may be Conveyed in Fines, and Fines levied to them are good, but before the ingrossing of such Fines there goeth alwaies a writ to the Justices of the Common Pleas, Quod permittant finem illum levare. But such persons as are civilly dead, as Fryers, Monkes and the like, cannot be Conveyed in a Fine, and therefore a Fine levied to such persons is void. See Grant Numb. 2.

The names of Cognisors and Cognisees in Fines must bee certainly set downe; and they must for the most part bee described by their right names of Baptism and Surname, whether they be King, Prince, Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Vicounts, Barons, Lords, or Knights, which be names of dignity; but some of these are sometimes described without their surname, as Georg' Comes Salop. Iohannis Dux Lancast. Or whether they be Esquires or Gentlemen, which be names of worship and honour. But these additions of names of dignity and honour given to such persons or any others, as Bishops and the like, are used in Fines, rather of curtesie then necessity, for they are not needfull in Fines. But in case where there bee two of one name it is safe to make some addition by way of distinction, as Senior and Junior and the like.

If a woman, living her first husband, take a second husband and with him and by his name knowledge a Fine; it seemes this is void, because of this mistake: but if a woman with her right husband, by a wrong Christian name, levy a Fine she is concluded by it, and cannot avoid it during her life. And yet if a Fine be levied to a man and his wife by a wrong name, as to A. and Sybil his wife, when her name is Isabel, this is holden to be void. But if a Fine be levied by a woman by the name of Margery when her name is Margaret, or by the name of Agnes, when her name is Anne, it seemes this Fine is a good Fine. Brumf. 1. part. 30. 7 H. 4. 22. 1 Aff. pl. 11.

A Fine may be levied of all things whereof a Præcipe quod reddat lieth, and of all things which are inheritable and in esse at the time of the Fine levied, whether the thing be Ecclesiastical and made Temporal or Temporal: As of an Honor, Manor, Island, Burgony, Castle, Messuage, Cottage, Mill, Toft, Curtilage, Dove-house, Garden, Orchard, Land, Meadow, Pasture, Wood, Underwood, Chappel, River, Chauntry, Corrody, Office, Fishing, Warren, Fair, Rectory, Mises, a view of Frankpledge, Waste, Ertay, Relons goods, Deodands, Hospitall, Furzes, Heath, Moor, Rent, Common, Adrowson, Hundred, Way, Ferry, Franchise, Seigniorie, Reversion, Toll, Tallage, Pickage, Pontage, Aquitaine, Service, Portion of tithes, Oblations, or the like. 33 H. 7. West. 1. ymb. his Tract of Fines, sect. 25. 30. See Exposition of Deeds infra.

If either the Cognisor or Cognisee at the time of the Fine levied be seised of any estate of Freehold in Fee-simple, Fee-taile, or for life, in possession, reversion, or remainder, whether the same be by right or wrong, the Fine will bee a good Fine in this respect. And therefore if one that is seised of Land in Fee-simple, or Fee-taile, generall or speciall, levy a Fine of this Land to a stranger, this is a good Fine. So if a stranger levy a Fine to him of this Land, this is a good Fine. So also a Fine levied by, or to, a tenant for life of the Land he doth so hold is good in this respect: but hee must take heed of a Forfeiture in this case, for if tenant for life levy a Fine Sur Cognisanc' de droit come ceo, &c. to a stranger, or levy a Fine sur Grant & Release to a stranger, to hold to the Cognisee for a longer time then for the life of the tenant for life, howsoever in this case the Fine be a good Fine, yet this is a forfeiture of the estate of the tenant for life whereof he hath reversion or remainder may take present advantage. And yet if such a tenant for life levy a Fine sur Grant & Release, to hold so the Cognisee for the life of the tenant for life, or grant his estate by such a Fine to him in reversion or remainder; or by Fine grant a rent out of the Land for longer time then for his own life, in these cases the fine is good, and there is no forfeiture of the estate of the tenant for life. So likewise if a Fine be levied to a tenant for life by a stranger, who doth thereby acknowledge all his right to be in the tenant for life, and release and quite claim to him and his heirs, and go no further, this is a good Fine and no forfeiture of the estate of the tenant for life, for his estate is not changed thereby, and it may come to him in reversion, but if the stranger say further in the Fine Come ceo que'il ad la son done, this is a Forfeiture. Seas. 27. Ed. 1. m.

But if neither the cognisor nor cognisee be seised of any estate of Freehold in possession or reversion of the lands whereof the Fine is levied at the time of the levying of the same, but have only a lease for years; or not so much, the Fine is void and of no force as to any stranger, howsoever it may be good between the parties by way of Estoppel. And therefore if a lessee for years, or a disseisor, or one that hath right only to a remainder or reversion levie a Fine to a stranger that hath nothing in the Land, this Fine is void, or at least voidable as to, and by any stranger thereunto, and he that hath cause may shew that the free-hold estate and seisin of the land was in another before and at the time of the Fine levied; and that Partes finis nihil habuerunt tempore levationis finis. The parties to the Fine had nothing when they levied the Fine, and by this avoid it. And yet a vouchee after he hath entred into the warranty may levy a Fine unto the demandant, but not to a stranger. And a disseisor may levy a Fine to a stranger that hath nothing in the land; and this is a good Fine, for he hath the Fee-simple by wrong in him. Also the issue in taile may be barred by way of Estoppel, by a Fine levied by Ancestor being tenant in taile, albeit neither consor nor Conusee have any Estate of Freehold in the Land. Co. 3. 123. 3. 88. 90. Super Lis. 251. 3 H. 7. 9. 5 H. 7. 40. 3 H. 6. 21. 27 H. 8. 4. A Joint Tenant, Tenant in Common or Coparcenous, may levy a Fine of his part to a stranger, and this will be a good Fine: And so also as it seemes, may one Coparcenour or tenant in common to another. 26 H. 8. 9. Dyer. 334. 49. Plow. 375. 138. E. 4. 13. 11. E. 4. 68. One single member of a corporation aggregate of many cannot levy a Fine of the Lands of the corporation, as the Major or Master of a College cannot levy a Fine without the communalty, or his fellows, &c. But such persons may levy Fines of the Lands they are solely seised in their own right as othermen may doe. Such as have Estates of freehold in Ecclesiasticall Lands in the right of their Churches, houses, &c. as Bishops, Deanes, and Chapters, Prebends, Parsons & the like, may not levy a Fine of such lands, for if they doe it wil not bind the successor. Cam. 78.

He that hath an Estate of fee-simple in lands in the right of his wife ought not to levy a Fine thereof without her, and if he doe, shee and her heires may avoid it after his death. Also he that hath an Estate of Lands given in taile by the King, or by the provision of the King ought not to levy a Fine of this Land, for it is void as against the issue in taile and the King. Also he that hath an Estate of Lands that are prohibited to be sold by Act of Parliament, ought not to levy a Fine of such Land. Also she that hath an estate of Lands of her husband, or of any of his ancestors assised to her for her Jointure Dower, or in taile by the meanes of her husband or any of his ancestors, may not levy a Fine of this Land; for if she grant a greater estate then for her own life, this worketh a present Forfeiture. Stat. 32 H. 8. chap. 28. 12 E. 4. 12. Co. 6. 55. Broo. Fines. 111: Stat. 32 H. 8. ch. 36. Co. 5. 3. 4 Stat. 1 H. 7. chap. 10.

A Fine at the common Law, or a Fine without Proclamations was once a perpetuall bar to all persons that had right and no impediment at the time of the Fine levied, and that did not claime within a year and a day after the execution of the Fine by possession; but now this Law is changed, and this kind of Fine will barre none but such as are parties and privies thereunto. But a Fine by the Statute, or a Fine with Proclamations is now much of the same virtue and force as a Fine at the common Law was, for by the Statute of 4 H. 7. it is provided, that every Fine after the ingrossing thereof shall be proclaimed in the Court the same Terme, and the three next following Termes, four severall daies in every Terme; which Proclamations so made, the Fine shall conclude all parties, privies and strangers, except women covert, persons within 21 years of age, in prison, out of the Realme, or of non sane memoris, (being no parties to the Fine) so as they or their heires take their Action or Lawfull entrie within five yeares after these imperfections removed. Saving to all persons and their heires (other then parties) the right claime and interest which they have at the time of the Fine, so as they pursue it by Action or entrie within five yeares after the Proclamations. And saving to all other persons such right, title, claime and interest as first shall grow or come to them after the proclamations by force of any matter before the Fine, so as they make their claime or entrie within five yeares after the same grow due; or if at that time there be any impediment as aforesaid, within five yeares after the impediment removed. And by the statute of 32 H. 8. (which is an exposition of this statute) it is provided, that all Fines with Proclamations levied according to 4 H. 7. by any person of 21 yeares of age of any land land, &c. before the fine levied entailed to him that doth levy the fine or any of his Ancestors in possession, reversion, remainder, or use, immediately after Proclamations had, shall be a bar against him and his Heirs, claiming only by force of any such entail, and against all others claiming only to the use of him or any Heir of his body. By which Statute it doth appear, that all the parties to the fine, Conusors and Conusees, whether they be femes Covert, men de non sane memorie, or others, (Infants only excepted who during minority may avoid it) and whether they have a naturall or civill capacity: and privies, viz. privies in blood, as Heirs whether they be lineall or collaterall, or privies in representation, as Executors and administrators: and all strangers also, viz. all others besides parties and privies that have or pretend any present right or title (except women covert, and the rest that have impediment that doe make their entrie or claim, or bring their action within 5 years after Proclamations had, & those persons excepted also if they make not their claim, &c. within five years after the impediment removed) all these are concluded. 1. so shut & closed up together, for their right is so extinct hereby, as they can never open their mouthes or lift up a finger against it. Saving to all others. 2. such as have no present right at the time of the fine levied, and were excepted before such Right, Title, Claim or interest as shall accrue to them after the Proclamations upon any trust, gift in Tail, or other cause, before the fine levied, so as they make their claim, &c. within five years after their right first accrued if they have then no impediment, or if they have, within five years after the impediment removed. Stat. 18 Ed. 1. de finibus, Stat. 34 Ed. 3. 16. Plow 373. Stat. 4. H. 7. chap. 24. 1. R. 3. chap. 7. 32 H. 8. chap. 36.

For a more full understanding of which Statutes and this matter, these things in generall must first be observed. 1. That the persons to be barred by a fine are, 1. Parties. 2. Privies. 3. Estrangers. The parties if they be of the age of 21 years, are bound for ever by the fine, and shall have no time to claim to preserve their right, The privies also, being heirs and Executors to the parties and void of impediment at the time of the fine levied, or not, if they claim by the same title that their Ancestor had that levied the fine, are barred for ever by the fine, and shall have no time to claime to preserve their right. And therefore if my Father disseise my Grandfather of Land, and then levie a fine of the Land, and then my Grandfather die, and after my Father die, by this fine I am barred of the Land for ever. Dyer 3. paschs. 7. Jac. B. R. And here note, that he that is a privie within the intent of 4 H. 7. is an Heir within the Statute of 31 H. 8. Et sic e converso. Trin. 21 Jac. Com. B. Curia in Will. Godfreys Case. And that privies or Heirs in estate and blood, as he that is Heir to whom the land doth or should descend, are within these Statutes, and shall be barred by the fine of their Ancestor of that land. And so also shall privies in estate that are not privies in blood, as where one hath land in burrow English, and levie a fine of it, hereby the youngest son is barred. So if one be Tenant in taile to him and the Heirs females of his body, and he levie a fine, having a Son and Daughter, hereby the issue female is barred, and yet she is not the Heir of his blood. But he that is privie in blood only, and not in estate also, is not within these Statutes; neither shall he be barred by the fine: and therefore if Lands be given to a man, and the Heirs females of his body, and he hath a Son and a Daughter, and the son levie a fine and die without issue, this is no barr to the Daughter, for howsoever she be Heir of his blood, yet she is not Heir to the estate, nor shall need to make her conveyance to it by him. The strangers that are to be concluded by the fine, are either, 1. Such as have present right and no impediment, and these are barred within five years if they make not their claim within five years after the Proclamations. 2. Such as have present right, but have impediment of infancy, &c. and these are barred if they doe not make their claim within five years after the impediment removed. 3. Such as have no present but future right upon cause precedent, and they are either without impediment, and then they are barred if they claim not within five years after their right doth accrue: or they have impediments, and then they are barred if they claim not within five years after the impediment removed. 4. Such as have neither present nor future right at the time of the levying of the fine by reason of any matter before the fine, but whose right groweth either either entirely after, or partly before, and partly after the fine, and these are not barred at all by the fine, but they may make their claim, &c. when they will. And parties, privies, and strangers to fines that are barred thereby, are such as have naturall capacities or civill, for both these are barred. And therefore it is held, if such a Corporation as hath an absolute estate and authority of his possessions so as he may maintaine a writ of right thereof, as Major and Communalty, Deane and Chapter, &c. levie a fine of their Lands, they and their successors are barred presently, but if a Bishop, Deane, or Prebend, without assent of the Dean and Chapter, or a Parson or Vicar without assent of the Patron and Ordinary had levied a fine, this would not have barred the successor; neither will it bar now with their assent, for they are restrained by divers Statutes. Plow. 337. 375. 378. So also such persons are barred by the fines that are levied by others if they make not their claime in time, as if one disseise a Corporation aggregate of land belonging to their Corporation, and after levie a fine of it with Proclamations; and they doe not make their claim, &c. within five years, hereby they are barred. 2. Where the Ancestor is barred by the fine, there for the most part the Heir is barred also. Co. 9. 105. And therefore if Tenant in taile be disseised, and the disseisor levie a fine with Proclamations, and the Tenant in taile suffer five years to pass without claim, &c. hereby he and his issues are barred for ever, so that the heir doth suffer for the laches of his Ancestor. 3. The estates that shall be barred by the fine are estates by the common Law, or by Copihold in Fee-simple, Fee-taile, or for life, or for years, the estates also of Tenant by Statute, Elegit, and of Gardeins in Chivalrie, and of Executors that have land untill Debts and Legacies be paid. And therefore if one enter upon, and put out a Copyholder of Land, and levie a fine thereof, and the Copyholder suffer five years to pass and make no claim, &c. the Copyholder and his Lord both are hereby barred for ever. And if a Lease be made for years, and the Lessor or another before entrie of the Lessee levie a fine with Proclamations, and the Lessee doth not make his claim, &c. within five years, hereby the Lessee is barred of his interest for ever. 4. The Things whereunto these Statutes doe extend, are Lands and Tenements, and not a Rent, or other profit appender out of the Land, and therefore if I have a Rent, Common, or Erovers out of Land, or a way over Land, or power to sell the Land, and a fine is levied of the Land it self, and I doe not make my claim of my rent, &c. within five years, yet I am not hereby barred of my rent, &c. And for this cause it is, that if a Tenant in Ancient demesne levie a fine of his Land, and five years pass, the Lord is not hereby barred to avoid it, for herein he claimed not the Land, but his ancient Seigniorie. Co. 9. 104. 5. 124. Plow. 378. *Bro. Lord Zouches case. 6 The time wherein they must make their claim or bring action whose right happens afterwards, if they have no impediment, is within 5 years after the time that their right accrues, and if there be any impediment within 5 years after impediment removed. Dyer 3. Co. 3. 86. 91. Plow. 373. 7. The persons whose right is saved and preserved, are mentioned in the first & second saving of the Statute of 4 H. 7; and they are strangers, and not parties nor privies. 8. They that have benefit by the first Saving of the Statute shall have none by the second Saving, for he that will be within the second Saving to have benefit by it, must be, 1. Another person. 2. The right must come and accrew to him first. 3. It must come to him after the fine and proclamations. 4. His right must be upon some cause or matter before the fine. Co. 5. 124. 9. 106. 9. No fine shall bar any estate in possession, reversion, or remainder which is not devised and put to a right at the time of the fine levied. And therefore if one levie a fine of my Land whiles I am in possession of it, this fine will not hurt me. So if the Tenant of the Land, out of which I have a Rent or Common, &c. levie a fine of the Land, this shall not bar me of my Rent or Common, for I am still in possession of this in the Judgement of the Law. So if there be Tenant for life, the remainder for life, or Tenant in Tail, the Remainder in Tail, and the first Tenant in Tail or for life do bargain and sell the Land by Deed

indented and inrolled, and after levie a fine to the Bargaineer, in this case the remainders are not barred, albeit five years pass without claim, for the Law in these cases doth adjudge them alwaies in possession. So if I make a Lease for years of Land, rendering a rent, and a stranger levie a fine of the Land, and the Lessee for years payeth his rent to me duly, in this case I am said to be alwaies in possession, and therefore am not barred by this fine of my reversion. So if there be a Tenant by Copy or Lease for life, the remainder for life, and the first Tenant for life accept of a fine of the Land with proclamations and 5 years pass without claim, &c. hereby he that is in remainder is not barred. So if one have a Lease for years of Land to begin in future and a fine is levied of the Land, and five years pass after the terme begin, it seems this is no bar, because this estate is not put to a right. Brownl. Rep. 1 part. 181. 2 part. 134. 75. 153.

And for the further illustration of all these things see the examples following. If Tenant in Tail levy a fine of the Land intailed with proclamations according to the statutes, this is a bar to the estate taile, wherein these things are to be known. Stat. 4 H. 7. 32 H. 8. Co. super Litt. 372. 1] Co. 9. 138. 140. Dier. 3.
 1. That wheresoever the issue doth claim by the same title and must make his Conveyance to the Lands by him that levied the fine, there the fine will bar him, and therefore if Lands be given to the husband and wife in speciall taile, viz. to them and to the Heirs of their two bodies issuing, or the like, or if the gift be to them and the Heirs males or females of their two bodies, or to them and the Heirs of their bodies with the remainder to the right Heirs of the Husband in Fee, and the Husband alone levieth a fine with proclamations, by this the issue in taile is barred. And yet so as the right of the wife is saved so as she makes her claim, &c. within five years after her Husbands death. So if Husband and Wife Tenants in speciall taile have issue and the Wife die, and the Husband marry another Wife and have issue and levy a fine Sur cognifances de droit come ceo, &c. and take back by the same fine an estate in speciall taile the remainder over, &c. and die, the issue by the first Wife is barred. Dier. 354. So if Tenant in Taile be Disseised, or make a Feoffment in Fee, and after levie a fine with proclamations to the Disseisor or to a stranger, the issues in taile are hereby barred for ever, the continuance of the possession in another notwithstanding. Co. 3. 90. So if a gift be made to the eldest son and the Heirs of his body, the remainder to the Father and the Heirs of his body, and the Father dyeth, and the eldest son levy a fine with Proclamations and dyeth without issue, this shall barr the second son for ever for the remainder descended to the eldest. Co. super Litt. 372. So if Lands be given to an eldest son and the Heirs of the body of his Father (the Father being then dead) and he levy a Fine of this Land, this will barr the younger brother. Curia trin: 21 Jac. Co. B. But if the issue in taile does not make his title by him that did levy the fine, there the fine will not barr, and therefore if my Father be Tenant in Taile, and his brother Disseise him and levy a fine, and he and my Father dye, this fine shall not barr me as issue in taile, because I do not make my title to the Land by him: but if I suffer five years to pass and do not make my claim, &c. by this means I may be barred by the fine. Dier. 3. And if the fine be levied of another thing then the thing it self entailed, As if the Tenant in taile grant by fine a Rent, Common, or the like out of the Land intailed, this fine will not barr the issue. So if a Rent be entailed and the Tenant in Taile of the Rent Disseise the Terre-Tenant of the Land out of which the rent doth issue, and then levy a fine of the Land, this is no bar to the issue of the Rent. Plow. 433.
 2. Albeit the fine be a double fine with a grant and render, yet it is within these Statutes, and will barr the issue in taile as well as a single fine, so as the grant and render be of the Land it selfe and not of any profit appender out of it. 2] Co. 76. 3. 85. super Litt. 353. Bro. fines. 118. Dier. 272. And therefore if Husband and Wife be Tenants in speciall taile, and they levy a fine with proclamations, and the Consee grant and Render the Land to them and their Heirs, this fine will barr the issue in taile. And if Tenant in taile joyne with IS and levy a fine to a stranger, and the stranger doth grant and render the Land againe to IS for years, and to the Tenant in taile in Fee afterwards, the issue in taile is barred by this fine.

2. Issue in taile barred by the fine of his Ancestor or some other.

fine: So if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in taile, and he in remainder in taile accept of a fine from a stranger, and grant and render to the stranger againe for years with a remainder over, hereby the issue in taile is bound. If Tenant in taile accept of a fine of the Land entailed from a stranger, and then grant and render a Rent out of the Land to the stranger by the same fine, this will not bind the issue in taile to pay the same Rent. Plow 435. If Tenant in Taile make a Feoffment on Condition, and die having two sisters inheritable to the taile, and one of them levy a fine with proclamations sur release to the Feoffee of the whole, in this case it is doubted whether the other sister be barred of her half or not. Dier 117.

3. Albeit the Tenant in Taile die before all the proclamations be finished, yet when they be finished as they may be after his death, the issues in taile are bound by the fine, for howsoever by the death of the Tenant in Taile the right of the estate taile doth descend to the issue, yet when the proclamations are passed, this right that doth descend is bound by the Statutes, and the issue cannot by any claim, &c. save the right of the estate taile that doth descend unto him. 3 Co. 3. 86. 87. 1 in Shelley's Case. 4. Albeit the issue in Taile be within age, out of the Realme, under Coverture, non compos mentis, or in prison at the time of the fine levied and the proclamations passed, yet the estate taile is barred by the fine. And therefore if A be Tenant for life of Land the remainder to B in taile, the reversion to B, and his Heirs expectant, and B levy a fine to C and his Heirs, and hath issue and die before all the proclamations are passed, the issue in taile being then out of the realm, the proclamations are made, and after the issue in taile cometh into the Realm and claimeth the remainder in taile upon the Land; in this case the estate taile is barred for ever. 4 Co. 3. 84, 91, 5. These Statutes doe extend to fines levied by Tenant in taile by conclusion, and the issue shall be bound by the fine of their Ancestor unto whom they are privie in estate and blood, albeit partes finis nihil habuerunt tempore finis. And therefore if the issue in taile in the life of his Ancestor when he hath onely a possibility, as if there be Grandfather, Father, and Son, and the Grandfather be Tenant in Taile, and the Father levy a fine of the Land before the Grandfather's death, and then the Grandfather dye before the Father, and after the Father dye, in this case the issue is barred by this fine. 5 Co. 3. 90. Dier 279, Plow 435. So also if the Grandfather survive the Father. Curia Trin. 21. Jac. Com. B. Godfrey & Wades case. Dyer 48. But in case of a collaterall descent, if the collaterall Ancestor die in the life-time of his Father without issue, this fine is no bar, but if he survive his Father, contra. So if Lands be given to the Grandfather and his wife in speciall taile, and the Grandfather dieth, and the Father doth Disseise the Grandmother, and doth levy a fine with proclamations, the Grandmother dieth, and then the Father dieth, in this case the son is barred. So if Lands be conveyed in taile to a woman for her Jointure within the Statute of 11 H. 7. cap. 20. and while she liveth the issue in taile doth levy a fine of the Land, by this the issues inheritable to the estate taile are barred for ever. Co. 3. 50. 51. 9. 140. So if Tenant in taile make a Feoffment or be disseised, and after levy a fine with proclamations for a stranger, hereby his issues are barred for ever. So if Tenant in Taile die and his issue before his entry (having a freehold in law only) doth levy a fine with proclamations, this shall be a bar to his issues & to his collaterall Heirs & brothers of the half blood. Pl. 434. 435 Curia. 21. Jac. Co. B. So if Tenant in taile have four Daughters and one of them levy a fine in the life of the Father, this will be a bar to her issue for the fourth part of the Land, Idem. But in these cases before and such like where the issue in taile doth levy a fine in the life time of the Tenant in Taile, the Tenant in Taile himself may after levy a fine of the Land, and thereby barr his issue, and the Conusee also to whom his issue hath levied a fine, and therefore in all these cases it is supposed that the Tenant in Taile doth dye and suffer the right to descend to his issue, Co. 3. 50. 51. 9. 140. Co. 10. 50. 9. 141. 3. 50. 51. If Lands be given by will to one when he shall come to his age of twenty four years, to hold to him and the Heirs of his body, and he after his age of twenty one years levy a fine of this Land with proclamations, this is a barr to the issue in taile.

If a Disseisor make a gift in taile, and the Donee make a Feoffment to A and after levy levy a Fine with Proclamations to B. that hath nothing in the Land, this Fine will barre the issues in taile, and they shall not avoid it by pleading that partes suas nihil habuerunt &c. but it is no barre to the disseisee, for he may avoid it by this plea when he will. And à fortiori therefore, if a Fine be levied by the tenant in taile that hath only an estate of free-hold in remainder or reversion is good: as if A. be tenant for life, the remainder to B. in taile, and B. levy a Fine, albeit this be no discontinuance, yet it is a barre to the Estate taile. But if tenant in taile have issue a son and a daughter, and the son living the tenant in taile levy a Fine and dye without issue, and then the Tenant in taile die, by this the daughter and the estate taile is not barred. Co. 3 84. Trin. 21. Jac. Co. B. Will. Godfrey versus Wades case. So if the younger son levy a Fine in the life of the father, and then the tenant in taile dye, this is no barre to the elder son. So if Lands be given to a man and the heires females of his body, and he hath a son and a daughter, and the son doth levy a Fine of the Land, this is no barre to the daughter. So if tenant in taile have a daughter, his wife being with childe of a son, and the daughter levy a Fine, and after the son is borne, this Fine shall not barre the son, for these howbeit they be privies and heires to the blood, yet are not privies and heires to the estate. 6. Albeit the estate passed by the Fine be afterwards before all the proclamations had avoided, yet the issue in taile is barred by it.

And therefore if tenant in taile discontinue in fee, and after disseise the discontinuee and levy a Fine with proclamations to a stranger, and take an estate back by Render in the same Fine, and the discontinuee before all the proclamations passe enter and claime and so avoid the Fine, yet hereby the estate taile is barred. Co. 3. 91.

And if tenant in taile infeoffe the issue in taile and after disseise him and levy a Fine, the issue enter, and after the proclamations passe, and after the issue in taile doth infeoffe the tenant in taile which levied the Fine and dyeth, it seemes this Fine shall barre the issues in taile. Per Popham & Fenner Just. M. 39. 40. Eliz. B. R. This is a barre to the estate taile and to the issues onely and is no bar to him in remainder or reversion, and therefore when the estate taile is spent, this barre is at an end. And therefore if an estate be limited to A: and B, his wife and the heires males of the body of A. the remainder to C. and A: and B. have issue, and A. dye and B. and her issue, or her issue alone levy a Fine, this will barre the issues of the issues whiles there be any, but if they faile it will not barre C. in remainder, except he suffer five years to passe and so be barred by his non claime. So if tenant for life and he that is next in the remainder in taile joyne in a Fine, this is a good barre to the issues in taile for ever as long as that estate taile shall continue, but not to him that is next in remainder, nor to any other that shall come in of any remainder in taile or in fee, nor to him in reversion. If lands be given to A. and the heires males of his body, the remainder to B. and the heires males of his body, the remainder to the right heires of A. and A: doth bargain and sell this land by deed indented and inrolled to J. S. and his heires, and after levy a Fine of it sur Conscience de droit come ceo &c. to him and his heires, by this the remainder to B. is not discontinued, but it is a barre to the estate taile by the Statutes, and causeth the estate of the bargainee to last so long as the tenant in taile hath issues of his body, but if the Fine had been before the bargain and sale it had been a discontinuance of the remainder, but in neither case a barre to him in remainder unlesse he suffer himselfe to be barred by his non-claime within five yeares after his remainder happen to come in possession: 8. If there be tenant in taile, the remainder to him in taile, and the tenant in taile levie a Fine of this Land, hereby both his estates are barred. Et sic de similibus. But all this notwithstanding, If Lands be conveyed to a woman in taile for her joynture within the statute of 11 H. 7. chap. 20: and she levie a Fine of this Land, this will not barre the issues in taile. Or if Lands be given in taile to any subject by the Kings own gift or provision, and the tenant in taile levie a Fine, this Fine shall not bind the issues in taile nor the King, but others it will barre, for these fines are not intended within, but excepted out of the Statute of 32 H. 8. but the King himselfe being tenant in taile of the gift of some of his Ancestors being subjects may levy a

Albeit the fine of the Husband and Wife together of the Wives Land, or of the Land of the Husband and Wife together, be a perpetuall bar to her and her Heirs for ever, yet if the Husband alone levie a fine with Proclamations of such Land, and then he die, in this case she is not barred of her right, but if she doe not make her claim, &c. within five years after her Husbonds death she is barred of her right for ever, notwithstanding the Statute of 34 H. 8. Dyer 72. Plow. 373. And if one feile of Land in Fee marry a Wife, and after make a Lease of this Land to A for life, she remainder to B in Fee, and B levie a fine with proclamations, and the husband die, and the Wife doe not make her claim &c. within five years after the death of her Husband; hereby she is barred of her Dower for ever notwithstanding the estate for life in A, but if the remainder of B had been put to a right at the time of the fine levied she might have avoided the fine by Plea. M. 18. fac. Co. B. in Ann Twists Case. Quod partes finis nihil habuerunt. &c. And if the Husband levy a fine of his own Land and die, and his Widow having no impediment doth not make her claim within five years after his death; hereby she is barred of her dower for ever. Dyer 224. Co. 2. 93.

If a jointure be made to a woman after the coverture, and her Husband and she levie a fine of it; hereby without question she is barred of her jointure in this Land; but it is thought that this is no bar of her dower in the residue of the Land of the Husband, and especially then when the fine is Sur consensu de droit commun, &c. Dyer 358. If Lands be given to a Man and his Wife in taile, the remainder to the right Heirs of the Husband, and the Husband alone levie a fine of this, this will not bar the wife except she suffer five years to pass after his death without making claim, &c. and therefore if the fine be to the use of the Husband and his Heirs in Fee, he may dispose it as a Fee-simple and his issue hath no remedy. *Brownl. 1. part. 139. Disseisor, &c.

If a man disseise me of the Land I have in Fee-simple, or Fee-taile, and after levie a fine of this Land with Proclamations, and I doe not make my claim, &c. within five years after the Proclamations had, hereby I and my Heirs are barred for ever of this Land. Co. 6. 105. 3. 87. Super Litt. 198. And if I being such a Tenant in Fee make a Lease for years, or be the Lord of any Copyhold estate, and my Lessee for years, or Copyholder in Fee, or for life be ousted, and I thereby disseised, and the Disseisor levie a fine, and neither I nor my Lessee for years, or Copyholder doe make any claim, &c. within the five years after the fine levied, hereby we are all barred for ever.

And if one disseise me of Land, and after make a Lease for life of it, and then levie a fine with Proclamations, and I suffer five years to pass, hereby I am barred both of the reversion and of the estate for life also.

If I Tenant for life make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Feoffee levie a fine with Proclamations, and he in reversion or remainder doe not make his claim, &c. within five years, hereby he is barred for ever. Plow. in Stowels Case.

If I pretend Right or Title to Land, and enter upon it, and put him out that is in possession, and then I levie a fine with Proclamations, with an intent to bar him, and he doth not make his claim, &c. within five years, hereby he is barred for ever, albeit he had the true Right, and I no right at all. Co. 3. 79.

If I purchase Land of H. and after perceiving my title defeasible, and that a Stranger hath the right of the Land, I doe levie a fine to, or take a fine from another with Proclamations with intent and of purpose to bar him that hath right, and he suffer five years to pass, and doth not make his claim, &c. hereby he is barred of his right for ever. Co. 3. 79. Doff. & St. 83. 155.

And in these and such like cases, there is no reliefe to be had in equity. See more in Numb. 11, 1572.

Equitie.

If there be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder in Tail, and the Tenant in Tail bargain and sell the Land by Deed indented and inrolled, and after levie a fine with Proclamations to the bargainee Sur Conuſance de droit come ceo, &c. in this case as to the Tenant in Tail and his issue this is a bar, but as to all others it is no bar, albeit they never make any claim, &c. Co. 10. 95. 9. 106. So if Tenant in Tail levie a fine of his intailed Land, this is a bar as to him and his issues, but as to all others it is no bar at all, and therefore he in remainder or reversion in their times may enter notwithstanding. So if Land be entailed to the Husband and Wife, & the Heirs of their two bodies, and the Husband alone levie a fine of this Land, this as to the Husband Tenant in Tail and his issues is a bar, but not as to the Wife, for she shall be Tenant in Tail still, and yet it seems she may not suffer a recovery of this Land afterward, Co. 9. 140. 132. So if a man attainted of Felony or Treason levie a fine of his Land, this as to the King and Lord of whom the Land is held is void, and is no bar to their advantage and title of forfeiture, but as to all others it is a good bar. So if one levie a fine of Lands in Ancient Demesne, and of other Lands together; this as to the Lands in Ancient demesne is not good, nor any bar at all, but as to the other Lands it is a good bar. 7 H. 4. 44. F. N. B. 98. Plow.

By the ancient common Law, he that had right, was bound to make claim &c. within a year and a day after the fine levied and execution thereupon, or else he was barred for ever; but this bar by non claime is now gone, and if such a fine without Proclamations be levied at this day, he that hath right may make his claim at any time to prevent the bar, and avoid the force of the fine. Co. Super Litt. 254. 162.

Parties to fines void of impediment at the time of the fine levied are barred of the Land presently, and shall have no time to avoid the same fine by entrie, claim, &c. And privies in blood, and privies in representation claiming by the same Title which their Ancestor that levied the same fine had, shall be barred by the same fine presently, and that whether they have any impediment or not. Stat. 1 R. 3. chap. 7. 4 H. 7. chap. 24.

Estrangers to fines, (being all such as are neither parties nor privies) who have right to the Land whereof the fine is levied, and have no impediment naturall or legall, shall have time to make their claim, &c. within five years after the fine levied and Proclamations had, and no longer. See the Sta. Plow. 374. Co. 9. 105. And therefore if Lessee for years, Tenant by Elegit, Statute, or a Copiholder in Fee, or for life, be ousted, and he in reversion Disseised, they shall have but one 5 years between them to make their claim, &c. and if they claim not within that time they are all barred for ever, for they have all present right and may bring their action presently: but otherwise it is where the Tenant for life, & he in reversion be disseised, for in this case he in reversion is not barred by the first 5 years after the fine levied, for in that time he can have no action, therefore he shall have time to make his claim 5 years after the death of the Tenant for life.

If a Disseisor levie a fine with Proclamations of the Land whereof the Disseisin was, the Disseisee must make his claim within the first 5 years, after the Proclamations had, and if he happen to die within the five years, his Heir shall not have five years more, but so much time more as to make up the time incurred in his fathers or other Ancestors time 5 years, and albeit he be an Infant at the time of his Ancestors death, yet he shall have no longer time. Plow. 356. 375. If a Tenant in Tail be disseised and the Disseisor levie a fine, the Tenant in Tail or his issues must make their claim within the next five years after the Proclamations passed, otherwise they be barred for ever. The like it is in the laches of him in remainder or reversion. 19 H. 8. 7. Plow. 374. Dyer 3. And if, in these and such like cases, he that hath present right and is without impediment, bring upon himself any impediment, as if being within the Realme at the time when the fine is levied, he doe afterwards goe beyond the Sea; or the like, in these cases he shall have no longer time then the first five years after the proclamations had. Co. 100.

the levying of the Fine, and having then any present interest or right shall have five years time after the infirmity removed to make their claime &c. And therefore an Infant regularly shall have time for five years after he come to his full age to make his claime &c. although he be in his mothers wombe at the time of the Fine levied. And yet if my fathers brother disseise him, and levy a Fine with proclamations, and a year after the proclamations my father dyeth, and after and within five years my uncle dyeth, in this Case I by reason of my infancy shall have only so much time to avoid the same as at the death of my father remained to come of the five years next after the proclamations, and not a new five years, because I claime by the same title that my father had. So if my father, or other ancestor be disseised and the disseisor levy a Fine with proclamations, and my father or ancestor dye within five years after the proclamations, in this case I shall not have a new five years, but only so much as remaineth of the old five years to make my claime &c. Madmen and Lunatickes (being strangers to the fine) shall have the like time to make their claim &c. as Infants have, and yet if this infirmity happen after the Fine levied, and before the last proclamations be made, these persons are not bound to the first years, but shall have five years time after they be cured of their maladies. Women Covert (estrangers to the Fine) shall have five years time after they be discoverd, to pursue the right. But if a feme sole (estranger to a Fine) have present right, and after the Fine levied she take a husband, and so five years pass after the proclamations had, in this case she is barred and shall have no further time to claime. Estrangers to Fines imprisoned at the time of the Fine levied shall have the same time and liberty Infants have; but if such imprisonment happen after the time of the Fine levied and before the last proclamation made, it seemeth they shall have five years after the enlargement. And estrangers to Fines being out of the Realme at the time of the levying thereof shall have five years time after their returne to enter or claime &c. But if they be in England at the time of levying of the Fine, and after goe beyond the Sea and suffer the five years after the proclamations to pass, in this case they shall have no longer time, except they be sent in the Kings service and by his commandement. And if the party be beyond the Sea at the time of the Fine levied, and never return but dye there, it seems in this case the Fine will not bar his heire at all. See the statutes. Plow. 359. Dier 3. Plow. 367. 377. Plow. 366. 375. Plow. 375. 376. Plow. 360. 366. 375. Plow. 366. Sr. Tho. Cottons Case. 27. Eliz.

Estrangers to fines that have divers defects or infirmities, as Infancy, Coverture, non-sanity of minde, imprisonment, absence out of the Realme, to avoid Fines shall have time for five years after the last of the infirmities removed. But if they have divers impediments, and they be all at once after the proclamations made wholly removed, and after they fall into the like againe and dye, in this case their heires shall not have a new five years, but the first five years begun in their Ancestors time immediately after the first impediments so removed shall proceed, and non-claim of their heires during all the residue of the said five years bindeth them as their said Ancestors should have been bound thereby if they had remained void of such impediments during all the said five years. Plow. 375. Dier. 133.

Estrangers to Fines that have no present but a future right, and that such as groweth wholly before the proclamations, if they be void of impediment, shall have five years time after their right, title, claime or interest first groweth, remaineth, descendeth or cometh to them after the proclamations. And therefore if a Mortgagee be disseised and the disseisor doth levy a Fine with proclamations, and the five years passe, and after the Mortgagor payeth or tendreth the money, in this case he shall have time for five years after the tender or payment of the money to make his claime &c.

So if a man levy a fine of his Land whereof his wife is dowable, she shall have five years after her husbands death to make her claime &c. and not be bound by the five years after the Fine. Plow. 373. Dier. 224. Plow. 374. So if tenant in taile levy a Fine with proclamations, and after the Five years dyeth without issue, the donor shall have five years after his death without issue to bring his Formedon Co. 78. Plow. 373. 374. So if Lessee for life levy a Fine, or make a feoffment in fee and the

Feoffee doth levy a fine; in this case he in reversion or remainder shall not be bound by the next five years after the fine levied, but he shall five years next after the death of the Tenant for life, and if he die within the five years, his Heir shall have only so much time as to make up the time before his death five years. Co 78. Plow. 373. 374. So also is the Law if Lessee for life be Disseised, and the Disseisor or a stranger levy a fine, in this case he in reversion or his Heirs shall have five years after the death of the Tenant for life and shall not be bound to the next five years after the time of the fine levied. Plow. 374. Co. 9. 105. So if Tenant in Tail in possession levy a fine and dye without issue, in this case he in the remainder shall have time for five years after the death of the Tenant in Tail without issue, and if he make not his claim, &c. in that time, he and his issues are barred for ever. The same law is for him in reversion or the Donor if there be no remainder. Plow. 374. 19 H. 8: 7. Co. 3. 87. 84. Dier 3. And if Tenant in Tail discontinue in Fee, and the discontinue levieth a fine with proclamations, and five years doe pass and the Tenant in Tail dieth, in this case his issue shall have five years after the Descender to bring his Formedon, Co. 3. 87. But if Tenant in Tail discontinue rendring rent and dye, and the issue accept the Rent (which doth bar him for his time) and then the discontinue levieth a fine and dyeth, in this case the issue of the issue shall not be barred by the five years after the fine, but shall have five years after the death of the issue, 30. El. And if one de non sane memorie, make a Feoffment, and the Feoffee levie a fine and then the Feoffor die; in this case the Heir shall have 5 years after the death of his Ancestor, and not be bound by the 5 years next after the fine levied. Plow, 374.

Strangers to fines that have future right upon any cause precedent being affected with such impediments when the right first accreweth, shall have five years after the impediment removed to make their claim, &c. And therefore Infants that are born, or in their mothers womb when such right doth happen to them, women Covert, mad men, Lunatics, prisoners beyond the Seas shall have this time. As if a man have issue a Son and a Daughter, and the Son doth purchase Lands and die, and the Daughter entreat as his Heir, and is Disseised by A who levieth a fine, and five years claim without claim, and ten years after the Father hath another Son who is Heir to his brother; he shall have in this case a new full 5 years after he come to his full age, for he is the first unto whom the right descended after the Proclamations.

5. That have future right & impediment.

But if a stranger to a fine to whom a remainder or other title first accreweth after the fine doe not pursue his right within 5 years, hereby he and his issues are barred for ever. And in like manner if the first issue in Tail to whom the Title of the Tail first accreweth neglect to make his claim &c. within the first 5 years after his Title accrewed, hereby he is bound for ever, and the whole estate Tail also. And if one abate after the death of a Tenant in Fee-simple, and make a Feoffment upon condition, and the Feoffee levie a fine, and 5 years pass without any claim made by his Heir, hereby the Heir is barred for the present, but if afterwards the condition be broken, and the Abator enter, then the Heir may have an assise of Mortdancer against the Abator or enter when he will. See the Statutes Plow. 366. 367. Dyer 3. Plow. 358.

Strangers to fines that have neither present nor future right at the time of the levying of the same fines by reason of any matter before the fines levied, whose right groweth entirely before the Proclamations or partly before and partly after, may make their claim, &c. when they please. As if a Father die seised of Land his elder Son being possessed, and the younger son entreth and is disseised, and a fine with Proclamations is levied, and then the elder Son is dearraigned, in this case it seems he is bound to no time. So if a Tenant cease one year, and then a fine with Proclamations is levied, and after the Tenant ceaseth another year, the Lord may have his Cessavit 20 years after the Proclamations. Plow in Stowels Case.

6. That have no right for any cause before the Fine.

And Strangers to fines that have severall future rights by divers Titles growing at severall times it seemeth shall have severall five years to make their claim, &c.

7. That have future rights by divers com-titles.

commencing from the several times that their Titles do first accrue unto them. As if Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Feoffee levy a Fine with Proclamations, and he in the Remainder suffer the five years to pass, in this case he is barred of his Entry upon the Alienation for the Forfeiture; but it hath been held, that if the Tenant for life die, that he shall have another five years time to bring his Formedon in the Remainder, Plow. 357. 367. 372. So if the Husband make a Feoffment of his Wives Land, to another upon Condition, which is broken, and he levieth a Fine of this Land, and the Husband hath issue by his wife, and dieth; and the first five years pass, and then his wife dieth, hereby he is barred of the Title by the Condition, but he shall have five years more to make his Claim as Heir to his Mother. But if Lands be given to H. for the life of A. the Remainder to B. for life, the Remainder to H. in Fee, and H. is disseised, and after the Disseisor levy a fine, and five years pass; in this case H. is barred both of his present and future estate, and shall have no further time to make his Claim, &c. and yet if Cestuy que vie and be in the mean Remainder die, H. shall have another five years to make his Claim to preserve his Remainder. In like manner it is if Land be given to H. for the life of A. the remainder to him for the life of B. the remainder to him for the life of C. and he is disseised, and the Disseisor levieth a Fine with Proclamations; in this case, some say H. for his present right shall have five years by the first saving of the Statute, and five years after the death of A. by the second saving of the Statute. If one disseise a Feme-sole, and after marry her, and have issue by her, and the Husband is disseised before marriage or after, and then a Fine is levied with Proclamations, and the Husband dieth first, and afterwards the Wife dieth within the five years, the issue being of full age, the five years pass, hereby he is bound as heir to his Father, but he shall have five years more after the death of his Mother to make his Claim, &c. *Quando duo jura in una personâ concurrunt, æquum est ac si essent in diversis. CHAP. LXXXVI.

1. Fine, what.

His word Fine hath divers significations: For sometimes it doth signifie Pretium, as when it is the cause of obtaining some benefit, as leave to Alien, a Writ, or the like. Sometimes it doth signifie Pacem, as Finis, quia finem litibus imponit; and in this sense it is taken when it speaks of a Fine of Lands. But sometimes it doth signifie Penam; and so it is a pecuniary punishment imposed upon some offender by a Court or Officer of Justice, for an offence done in satisfaction of the offence. It hath sometimes other senses, Co;

8. 59. Terms Ley. Crompt. Jur. 55.

2. Amercement, what.

An Amercement is a penalty or sum of money, put by a Court upon a man for some offence done by Omission or Commission: And this doth differ from a Fine only in this.

1. A Fine is commonly for some great misdemeanor, and therefore the sum imposed is commonly greater: But an Amercement is commonly for some petty fault, and therefore the sum imposed is small, and lesser then the offence doth deserve, and therefore it is called Misericordia.

2. No Court but a Court of Record can Fine; but any Court that is no Court of Record, as County Court, Hundred Court, or Court Baron, may Amerce.

Affectors.

3. A Fine is never to be affixed by Affectors, that is, mitigated by men sworn to that purpose: But most Amercements must be affixed.

4. To

4. To most Fines, especially in Courts of Record, Imprisonment is incident, but not so to an Amercement. But Imprisonment doth follow a Fine in a Court of Record, that hath power to imprison. And in that case there lieth a Writ called a Capias pro Fine to apprehend the party fined, that he may be imprisoned till he pay his Fine. F.N.B. 76. Co. 11. 42. 8. 60. upon Littl. 137. Cramp: Jur. 43. 93. 98. 100.

3. Capias pro Fine, what.

For this, take these things.

1. All persons, Male or Female, Clergy or Lay, great or small, may be fined or amerced.

4. Who may be fined or amerced, or not, and where.

2. Cities, Townships, Burroughs, and Villages, may be fined or amerced.

3. The King or Queen might not have been fined or amerced.

4. Officers of Courts for any offence done, in or out of their Court, in relation to their Offices; the proper place to fine them, is in the Court whereto they belong, if the Courts have power to fine; or else there to amerce them.

5. And if any man, Officer or other, offend in the face of any Court, he is there by that Court to be fined or amerced for it: But he may be punished for this in another Court.

6. Infants may not be fined. Co. 8. 61. Maj. 9 H. 3. 14. Co. of Copiholds 40. Infants.

For Answer to this, take these cases.

1. If any person do misdeemean himself by contemptuous words or deeds, to a Court of Record, especially in the face of the Court, he may be fined for this, if the Court have power, or else amerced, Co. 8. 61. 2 Ed. 4. 1.

2. If any Officer of a Court behave himself corruptly, or negligently, or contemptuously in his Office: for this he is to be fined or amerced according to the power of the Court. And therefore if a Sheriff refuse to execute, or return, or misreturn the Writs of the Court sent to him, or a Juror to be sworn, or the like, they may be fined or amerced, Co. 8. 59. 61. 26 Ed. 3. 75.

3. In all Actions Quare vi et contra pacem, as Rascous, Trespass, and the like, if Judgment be given against the Defendant in a Court of Record, he is to be fined. So in an Affile, if the Disseisin be found to be with force; but if it be found without force, he is to be amerced only. Co. 8. 59. 31 H. 6. 21. March. 135. pl. 210.

4. If a Plaintiff get a Judgment in a Real Action by Disceit, where the Defendant had not Summons, according to Law, he shall be fined. But in an Action Personal for Disceit between man and man, if Judgment be given against the party Defendant, he is to be only amerced, Co. 8. 59.

5. If a Defendant plead a false Deed, or deny his own Deed, and it be found against him, or he do after relings with his Plea, and confess the Deed, he is to be fined. But if it were about a Deed of his Ancestor, or he deny a Recovery or Record, to which he is a party, he shall neither be fined nor amerced, 34 H. 6. 20. 10 Aff. 41. 20. Co. 8. 60. 11 H. 4. 4. Dyer 62.

6. If a Defendant in a Replevin, claim Property falsely, and in a Proprietas pre hands, take goods against him, he shall be fined, Co. 8. 60.

7. If a Plaintiff in an Appeal of death, Robbery, Felony, or Maim, be barred, nonsute, or the Writ abate by his default, he is to be fined, Co. 8. 60. 8 H. 4. 17.

8. If in an Assize the Plaintiff be barred, or nonsute, or it pass against the Defendant, and he were party to the first Record, he shall be fined, Co. 8. 60. 15 H. 6.

9. But if he were no party to the first Record, as here where he is Tenant by Receipt, or the like, there it is otherwise, 9 H. 4. 23.

10. If there be two or more Plaintiffs, and one of them die, and the Writ abate; or if the one appear, and the other be nonsute, which in Law is the nonsute of them both in Personal Actions: In these cases, he that doth survive, or appear, shall not be fined nor amerced. So where the one Plaintiff in such an Action where Summons and Severance lieth, be nonsute, and the other sue on, he that is nonsute shall not be amerced. And so it is in all Judicial Proces where the Plaintiff is barred or nonsute, or the Writ abate: And so it is, if the Sute be discontinued; or the Court be ousted of Jurisdiction, the Plaintiff shall not be amerced, Co. 8. 61. 5. 49. 21 H. 6. 41.

10. If

10. If a Trespass be for Battery against the Husband and, Wife supposing it to be the Battery of both, and it be found to be the Wives only; yet the Plaintiff shall not be amerced, for no other Writ can be had, Co. 8. 61.

11. In all Actions which do not contain some force, or some Disceipt to the Court; if the Defendant come the first day, and render the thing demanded the first day to the Plaintiff; he shall neither be fined nor amerced, Co. 5. 49. 8. 61.

12. But in all Writs of Præcipe quod reddas, quod permittas, & quod facias, if the Plaintiff be barred, or nonsute, or the Writ abate by his default, he shall be amerced; and so it is in all Actions Personal, where it doth so pass against the Plaintiff, Co. 8. 61.

13. If in Actions that are without force or fraud, the Sute go against the Defendant, he will be amerced. And so it is where part of the thing in question is found against the Defendant; or where are more Defendants, and it is found only against one of them, it is so also, Co. 8. 61. 7 H. 6. 36. 21 H. 6. 41. 9 H. 6. 2.

14. If one sue twice for the same cause, as in a Recaption, or the like, he is to be fined, Co. 8. 60.

15. If one do, or not do any thing against an Act of Parliament, in which there is no certain penalty for the offence, the offender (this is a contempt) may be sued for it. Co. 80. 6. March. f. 135. pl. 208.

16. If a Township suffer a murderer to escape, the murder being done in the day time, it may be amerced. 3 H. 7. 1. See more to this, Mag. Chart. 26. Westm. 1. 9. Crompt. Jur. 93, 94, 97, &c. Doct. & Stud. 178. Mag. Chart. 14. Westm. 1. 6. Marlb. cap. 18.

For Answer hereunto take these things.

6. How such persons may be fined or amerced.

1. Where there is but one Defendant, he cannot be two times amerced, but where there is but one Plaintiff, and divers Defendants, the Plaintiff may be divers times amerced.

2. Where divers are to be fined or amerced, they must be fined and amerced severally, and not joyntly, unless it be in special cases; and yet an Amercement set entirely upon a City or Township, is good.

3. No man or place may be twice fined or amerced, for one and the same offence.

4. All Amercements set, must be reasonably set and according to the offence, and not excessive.

7. Moderata Misericordia.

5. If any man be unreasonably amerced, he may be relieved by a Writ of Moderata misericordia, if it be in a Court Baron or County Court; and from other Courts, he also may appeal in this case. And this matter of Reasonableness, or not Reasonableness, shall be tried by Judges; and not by a Jury. See for these things, Mag. Chart. ch. 14. 34, 35 H. 8. 36. Merton, ch. 3. Marlb. ch. 23. 24. Co. 8. 61. 11. 42, 43 Westm. 1. ch. 18. 7 H. 4. 3. see Courts.

8. Extracts or Extrails.

Extracts are Copies, or true Notes of Original writings, as of Fines, Amercements, or Penalties set down in the Records of a Court, to be levied by the Bailiff, or other Officer of every man for his offence. And herein must be expressed the names of the offender, the sum imposed, and the cause or offence it self, F. N. B. 75. Westm. 2. 8.

Sheriffs may not levy money out of the Exchequer, but by Green Wax, and must ret what they receive, or forfeit treble damage; and the cause or offence must be expressed in the Extract, 43 Ed. 3. 9. 7 H. 4. 5.

CHAP. LXXXVII.

Of Forfeiture.

IT is the effect of the transgression of some Penal Law, or of the doing of some other wrong or misdemeanor; by the doing whereof something, either Inheritances, Chattels, Goods, or a Sum of money is forfeit.

Forfeiture,
what.

And this differs from Confiscation; because that is confiscate which is disavowed by the Offender as none of his, and not claimed by another. But such as are forfeit, have a known Owner; and for something he hath done, he hath forfeited what was his. So that Forfeiture is general, and Confiscation is more particular for such things as have no Owner, and shall go to the Kings Exchequer; for confiscate goods are such as no body doth claim. As if one indict a man for stealing his own goods, and he doth openly in Court disclaim them, then the King shall have them as confiscate goods. Quod non capis Christum, capis Fiscum, Plow. 483. Stamf. 186. Co. 5. 110. upon Lit. f. 59. Fitz. Coram 371. 355. So if a woman kill her husband and flee, all her husbands goods are confiscate. So if one indict another for stealing the goods he delivered him, in this case the goods are confiscate.

Sec. 1.

All the Lands and Tenements, Goods and Chattels, Debts and Duties that a man hath in his own right, and to his own use, are subject in some cases to Forfeiture: But Offices of Skill and Diligence, the Lands and Tenements that one hath in trust, and the Goods and Chattels one hath in anothers right and to anothers use, as the Goods and Chattels of Executors, are not subject to Forfeiture: nor the Goods Churchwardens have in right of the Church. The Lands a man hath in the right of his wife are subject to Forfeiture during his and his wives life together; and the Chattels real and personal a man hath by his wife, are subject to be forfeited altogether. Also Rights and Titles to Land, and Actions in divers cases are subject to Forfeiture, Stamf. l. 3. c. 26. 4 H. 7. 11. Plow. 487. 379. 4 Ed. 3. 47. 6 H. 7. 9. Co. 3. 2. 11. 35. Also Actions of Debt and Trespas de bonis asportatis, Account, and such like Actions. But personal Actions, as for Battery, and the like, are not liable to Forfeiture. Future Interests also may be forfeited, Dyer 58. Also the Lands or Goods a man hath in Jointenancie, or in Common, are subject to Forfeiture, as well as those he hath sole, 28 Ed. 3. 92. Stamf. l. 3. c. 26.

2. What things are subject to Forfeiture,
or not.

All Estates of Inheritances that one hath alone in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, are forfeited by Treason. So also are all Estates that he hath in Jointenancie or in Common with any other. For which see Coram, and Stamf. Pleas of the Crown, at large: St. 5 Ed. 6. c. 11.

All Estates in Fee-simple are forfeited by many kinds of Felony; for which see Coram. But in all such cases the parties must be attainted. Estates in tail may be forfeited by Alienation of the woman, or the woman or her husband that hath them by the Statute of 11 H. 7. cap. 20. See Discontinuance.

If an Estate be made by the Husband to himself for life, and after to his Wife and the Heirs males of her body by him begotten, and he and his Wife levy a Fine and suffer a Recovery, yet the Issue may enter for a Forfeiture, Co. upon Lit. 365.

One may forfeit his Land by alienating it to a Religious House, or in Mortmain. See Stat. Mar. Chari. c. 36. de Religiosis, c. 1.

If a Maid above twelve years, and under sixteen years, agree to be taken away and contracted against or withour Friends, she loseth her Inheritance for her life. See Stat. 4 Ed. 5. P. & M. c. 8.

A Religious House founded by the King may forfeit their Land that the King gave them, if they do alienate it, West. 2. c. 41.

If a Woman after Rape consent; as well she as the Ravisher be disabled to have any Heritage, Dower, or Joint-Fcoffment after the death of their Husbands and Ancestors; and the next of blood shall have title to enter incontinently, St. 6. R. 2. ch. 6.

For Treason or Felony, a man shall lose to the King or Lord all his Lands, Rents, &c. whereof he hath any Estate of Inheritance in possession or in right; as Lands of which he is disseised, and all his Hereditaments from the time of the offence done. For in the case of Felony and Treason, the Offender doth forfeit not only the Land he hath at the time of the Attainder, but the Land he had at the time of the offence committed, although it be after sold away; and this whether the Attainder be by Verdict, Outlawry, or otherwise, 30 H. 6. 5. And in this case the King or Lord that hath the Escheat, shall avoid all Acts made, done or suffered by the Offender after the offence done. But for divers kinds of Felony a man shall not forfeit any Inheritance, or any thing but his Goods, or his Goods and Chattels; as for killing se defendendo, or by mischance, &c. For which see Corone.

If a Woman being Tenant in tail of the gift of her Husband or any of his Ancestors, within the Statute of 11 H. 7. accept a Fine sur connissance de Droit, &c. and grant and render back for years; it seems this is no Forfeiture within that Statute, Dyers Abridg. 38.

For Petty-Treason or Felony, a man shall not forfeit any of his Lands entailed, longer then for his own life, Stamf. 1. 3. c. 26.

If a Son be attainted of Felony in the life of his Father, and be executed, and after the Father die; these Lands are not forfeit, but the next Heir shall have them. But if the Son survive the Father, though he have a Charter of Pardon, contra. 31 Ed. 1. Discent. 17. 26. Af. 2.

If a Freeholden cease for such a time to pay his Rent and do his Services, and there is nothing for the Lord to distrain, he may forfeit his Land. See for this Cessavit. But Gavelkind-Land in Kent is not forfeited by the committing of Felony. The Father to the Borough (these.) the Son to the Plough. For Forfeiture and Confiscation for Felony, &c. See Co. 3. par. Inst. c. 103.

Señ. 2.
3. Of particular estates, and of Chattels real; and what shall be said a cause of Forfeiture thereof, or not.

In case of Treason or Felony.
In other cases:

For Answer hereunto, take these things.

1. A Forfeiture may be made by a particular Tenant two ways: Either by doing something to the hurt of the Commonwealth, as by doing Treason or Felony; or by doing something to the hurt of the Lord, or him in Reversion. And the hurt to him in Reversion may be two ways: 1. By matter of Fact. 2. By matter of Record. Also it may be by matter of Record three ways: 1. By Alienation. 2. By claiming a greater Estate then he hath, or ought to have. 3. By affirming the Reversion or Remainder to be in a stranger. Also by Alienation it may be, 1. Either when it doth divest the Estate, as by levying a Fine, or suffering a Recovery of Lands. 2. Or by not divesting, when there is a Fine levied of an Advowson in fee, which doth not divest the Remainder or Reversion. By Claim it may be also in two sorts: 1. Express, which is when the Tenant shall in a Court of Record claim the Fee; or if being Lessee for years and ousted, he bring an Affise ut de libero tenemento. 2. Implied; as if in a Writ of Right brought against him, he shall take upon him to join the Affise upon the meer right; or if Lessee for years lose in a Præcipe, and bring a Writ of Error for Error in Process.

By affirming the Reversion to be in a stranger, he may forfeit his Estate two ways. Either actively; and then, 1. By praying in aid of a stranger. 2. By attorning to a stranger by matter of Record, upon a Grant of the Reversion to him. 3. When a stranger shall bring a Writ of Entry in casu proviso, and suppose the Reversion in him, and the Tenant doth confess the Action. 4. If he plead covinously to the disherison of him in Reversion. 5. If a stranger shall bring an Action of Waste, and the Tenant shall plead no Waste done. Or secondly, It may be passively, as when the Tenant shall accept of a Fine sur cognissance de Droit, &c. from a stranger. By all these means the Tenant may forfeit his Estate, Co. upon Lit. 251. 367. Dyer 209. 324. 1 H. 7. 32. 9 H. 7. 20. Co. 3. 15. 3. 3. 1. 66. 10. 44. Flow. 35.

2. The

2. The particular Estates that may be forfeited hereby, are Estates for life, for ones own or anothers life, that one hath alone in ones own right. So Estates for life by Dower, by the Courtisie, or after possibility of Issue extinct. Also Estates a man hath jointly with his Wife, may be forfeit during their joint lives. So the Estates one hath for life in Jointenancie or in Common with another, may be forfeit: Also Estates for years by Elegit; Statute-Merchant or Staple, Co. 2. 15. 3. 3. 1. 66. Dyer 324. 362. 377.

3. All Estates that a man hath for his own or anothers life in his own right, are forfeited by Treason or Felony. So are all Estates he hath for life in the right of his Wife, during the life of the Husband and Wife together, but no longer. So also all the Estates a man hath in Jointenancie, or in common with another for life, are forfeit hereby. Also all Estates that the Offender hath for years by Statute or Elegit, and all Chattels real besides, as Wardships in capite, and the like, that the Offendor hath in his own or in his Wives right, are forfeit by Treason or Felony, Stanf. 3. 26. 6 H. 7. 12. Co. upon Lit. 42. 351.

4. In case of Felony and Treason, the Offender doth forfeit not only the particular Estates for life which he hath at the time of the Attainder, but also them he had at the time of the offence committed, albeit they be after sold away, 30 H. 6. 5.

5. Leases for years are forfeit by Outlawry or Attainder for Treason or Felony, or Premunire, or for killing ones self, or for flying when he is in question for Felony, albeit he be not guilty; or for standing out and refusing to be tried by the Country; or where a man is convicted of Felony only, and no Judgment is given. So also they are forfeit by Petit-Larceny. Also all Interests that any man hath by Wardships, of Tenants by Knights service: And those that have Estates in Lands by Extents, Statutes, or Elegit, are forfeit by the causes aforesaid. But Estates for lives are not forfeited by Outlawries, except it be in the cases of Treason or Felony. Addition to the Treatise of Just. Dodrige. f. 27.

SeB. 3.

6. Now for the further opening and illustrating of the Forfeitures by Tenants for their particulars and Estates, take these Cases following.

If Tenant for life, in Dower, by the Courtisie, or after possibility of Issue extinct, or any Lessee for years, Tenant by Statute-Merchant, Staple, or Elegit of Lands or Tenements which lie in Livery, make any good, absolute or conditional Feoffment in Fee, Gift in tail, or Lease for any other life then the Tenant for life for the life by which he holds the Estate, or levy any Fine sur conscience de ceu, &c. or suffer any Common-Recovery; or being impleaded pray in aid of a stranger; or in a Writ of Right brought against him join the Mise upon the meer Right, or admit the Reversion to be in another; or in a Quid juris clamor brought against him, claim the Fee-simple: By either of these things he doth forfeit his Estate, Co. 2. 15. 3. 3. 1. 66. 8. 144. upon Lit. 251. Dyer 324. 33. 362. 209. 377. Plow. 15.

And if there be Tenant for life of Land, the Remainder for life, the Remainder in Fee, and both the Tenants for life make a Feoffment in Fee to a stranger; this is a Forfeiture of both their Estates.

So if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, the Remainder in Tail or in Fee, and the Tenant for life doth make a Feoffment in Fee to him in the second Remainder in Tail or in Fee, this is a Forfeiture for which he in the first Remainder may enter.

So if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, the Remainder in Fee to the Tenant for life, and the Tenant for life make a Feoffment in Fee to a stranger; this is a Forfeiture, for which he in the next Remainder may enter. And if there be two Tenants for life, and one of them disseise the other, and he make a Feoffment in Fee, this is a Forfeiture of his Estate, Dyer 339. Co. 1. 141. Co. on Lit. 251. 302. Co. 3. 86.

If Lessee for life make a Feoffment to a stranger, and make a Letter of Attorney to his Lessor to give Livery of Seisin, and he give Livery of Seisin accordingly; yet it seems this is a Forfeiture. But otherwise it were, if the particular Tenant were a Lessee for years, Park. 100. Co. upon Lit. f. 52.

pass. But if the Grant be by Fine, or the Reversion be in the King, there haply it may be a Forfeiture. But if Tenant for life or years grant a Rent out of the Land to another in Fee, this is no Forfeiture, 2 H. 5. 7. Co. upon Lit. 251. 15 Ed. 4. 3. Finches 17, 113. 44 Ed. 3. 36.

So if Tenant for life levy a Fine sur Grant & Release only to the Cognisee for the life that the Convisor hath; this is no Forfeiture. So if Tenant for life or years accept of a Fine sur Cognissance de Drois come es from a stranger, this is no Forfeiture. So if he accept of a Fine so, and grant and render back to him for years only; this is no Forfeiture, 44 Ed. 3. 36. 1 H. 7. 22. Dyer 148. So if Tenant for anothers life or years of Land, by his Will devise the Land to another in Fee; this is no Forfeiture, Fitz. Devise 21. So if a Lease be made to two and the Heirs of one of them, and they two make a Feoffment to a stranger; this is no Forfeiture by the Tenant for life, but his Estate doth pass well enough, Bro. Forf. 96.

If one make a Lease for life to one, and after grant to him a Rent also for life, and he grant both in Fee; by this the Rent is not forfeit, but the Land only. So if Tenant for life enfeoff him in Remainder for life; this is no Forfeiture, but a Surrender. So if he make a Lease to him in Reversion or Remainder, for the life of him in Remainder or Reversion; this is no Forfeiture. So if Tenant for life take a Husband, and they two make a Lease to him in Reversion for the life of the Husband; this is no Forfeiture, Fitz. Dower 95. Co. upon Lit. 42. See more in Discontinuance.

If an Annuity be granted to one for life or otherwise pro consilio impendendo, and he refuse to give Counsel to the Grantor upon request; this is cause of Forfeiture of the Annuity. But not giving Counsel, unless it be in the Kings case, is no cause of Forfeiture as Refuser is, Plow. 455, 456. See Forfeiture.

All the Goods and Chattels a man hath alone, or in Jointure, or in Common with another, to his own use and in his own right, are forfeited by his committing of Treason or Felony; and so are all his Securities and Bonds, and Debts due thereby, and upon Contracts and Accounts. But causes of Action for Trespass, or the like, are not forfeit, Stamf. 188.

And in this case of Treason and Felony, in some cases a man may forfeit Goods wherein he hath no property. As for example: If I deliver to another Money, or Corn open, and not in bags, to keep, and redeliver when he shall be required; and he be attainted of Treason or Felony; this Money or Corn is forfeit. So if one steal Goods from divers persons, and is arraigned for one of these Felonies and found guilty; by this he doth forfeit all the rest. So if one steal Goods, and before he be attainted he kill himself, by this he doth forfeit not only his own Goods, but the Goods he stole; Fitz. Crimes 317. Stamf. Pleas of the Crown, 188. 44 Ed. 3. 44.

If a man suffer himself to be outlawed for Felony, or upon an Indictment for Treason or Felony he confess the Indictment or be attainted, or upon a Traverse be found guilty, or upon his Arraignment refuse to be tried by the Country, or flee for a Felony before or after Arrest, and whether he did the Felony or not, and although he be acquitted of the Felony, or suffer Exigent against him for a Felony; or being arrested for Treason or Felony escape, and will not be conveyed to Prison, but is killed in the pursuit; or will not be taken, but is killed: Then in all these cases he doth forfeit his Goods and Chattels. And though a man after a Felony done get a Pardon for it, yet his Goods are forfeit. And if a man stand mute upon his Trial, or challenge more then Four and twenty upon his Trial, or have his Clergie, and be a Clerk convict or attaint, Stamf. Pleas of the Crown, ch. 29, 30, 33, 34. Plow. 121. Relw. 68.

So that now in case of Treason and Felony, a man doth forfeit not only all his Chattels that he hath in possession, but such also as he hath but a bare right unto only, as Debts and Goods to be accounted for, or wrongfully taken; but not such as for which Damage only is to be recovered, as in Battery, and the like; such things in Action are not forfeited.

Sec. 4.

4. Of Goods and Chattels, and what shall be said a cause of Forfeiture thereof, or not; and of what Goods. In case of Treason or Felony.

But in the cases of Goods and Chattels there is no relation to the time of the offence, as there is in the case of Lands. For in that case the Lord that is to have the Land by Escheat, may avoid all Leases, Acts, Statutes and Conveyances made after the offence committed, until the time of the Attainder. But for Goods and Chattels, and Debts, the Kings Title doth look no further back then to the Goods the party hath at the time of the Verdict given, or Confession made, and in case of Outlawry, to the time of the Exigent awarded: And therefore till then the property of the Goods is not altered. And therefore it is held, that till then any sale of Chattels real or personal by the Offender is good, and he is to levy upon them. But in this case the Kings Officers do use, as soon as the Offender is apprehended, to seise and secure all his Goods and Chattels, and give him allowance out of them. Co. upon Lit. 380, 381. 29 Aff. pl. 63. 50 Aff. 5. 8 Ed. 4. 4. 7 H. 4. 47.

But by a Statute-Law, no Sheriff, Coroner, or other Officer is to seise any mans Goods for Treason or Felony, before he be attained according to Law, under pain to forfeit the double value of the Goods, Stat. 1 R. 3. ch. 3. But for killing a man that would rob him, he doth forfeit nothing. And in any case a man shall not forfeit the Goods that are another mans, and not the Offenders; nor Goods pawned or distrained, nor that one hath as Executor, nor the interest a man hath as Guardian in Socage, Plow. 487. Bro. Pledg. M. 7 fac. Co. B.

Sett. 6.
5. Who shall take advantage of a Forfeiture by Entry upon the Land, or Seizure of the Goods, or not.
In case of Treason, or Felony.

In case of Forfeiture for Treason, the Lord Protector only is to have all the benefit by Lands and Goods. But in cases of Felony, the Lord Protector is to have the Lands of the Offender for a year and day to make spoil upon them, unless the Lord redeem it. (For this see Anjour and Waste.) And after this year the Lord of whom the Land is held, is to have it. And all the Goods and Chattels forfeit in the case of Felony, the Lord Protector is to have them, unless any man have had a Grant from the King of them, or can prescribe for them; and his Prescription so ancient, that it hath been allowed in the Kings Bench, or before the Justices in Eyre, Stamf. Prer. 190. F. N. B. 144. Mag. Char. 23. And if a man have an Estate for life, and forfeit by either of these offences; this will not (as some say) escheat to the King; but it seems otherwise. Nor will this go to him that hath Bona Felonum, by those words, shall take advantage of it: And if it be a Copihold, the Lord of the Manor, not the Protector will have it. And by the Grant of Bona Felonum, this will not pass. Addition to the Treatise of Just. Doddridge. f. 27, 28. Co. 2 par. Inst. 47: Brownl. 2 par. 319.

In other cases,

In case of Alienation by a Lessee for life or years, for the most part he in the next Remainder, though he have but a Remainder for life or years, must enter; and if there be divers Remainders, every one in Remainder and in Reversion in his time may take advantage of it. As if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail to one, and the Remainder in tail to another, and Tenant for life make a Feoffment in fee, and he in the first Remainder die without issue and do not enter, then he in the next Remainder may enter for the Forfeiture. Mears Case, Pasch. 8 fac. Co. B. Ca. 1. 76. 2. 51. upon Lit. 367.

But if a Disseisor make a Lease for life, who makes a Feoffment, and the Disseesee release to the Feoffee of the Tenant for life, the Disseisor can never after enter for the Forfeiture by the Tenant for life.

If an Estate be limited to J. S. for life, the Remainder to his Heir-male and the Heir-male of such Heir-male, and J. S. make a Feoffment in fee; his Heir apparent cannot enter for this Forfeiture, for he is no Heir whiles the Father lives. So if a Tenant for life make a Feoffment to Husband and Wife, the Reversion being in the Wife, and she die without Heir, and the Land escheat; the Lord to whom it comes by the Escheat, cannot take advantage of this and avoid the Feoffment, Dyer 339.

6. Of Offices, and what shall be said the cause of Forfeiture of an Office, or not.

Offices may be forfeit divers ways. Some of them may be forfeit by not using them; some by misusing them, or the Officer by miscarrying himself in them may forfeit them: As if any man hath an Office that is appointed for Administration of Justice or publike good, and he is bound to attend it, and do not; this is a Forfeiture.

feiture. And therefore it is, that if a Clerk of the Market, Sheriff, Felizer, Exigenter, or any such like Officer of any of the Courts at Westminster do absent themselves any long time, and not attend their Offices, and do the things that belong to their charges: As if the Sheriff do not keep his Turn, the Clerk of the Market his Circuit, this is a Forfeiture.

The Officer may also forfeit his Office by his miscarriage in his Office, two ways: 1. By doing that he should not. 2. By refusing to do what he ought to do. By doing amiss, called a Misuser or Abuser. So if any one sell an Office he hath, if it be for the Administration of Justice, or concerning the Kings Treasure, Revenue, Account, Customs, Aulnage, or the like, or Clerkship in any Court of Record, as a Felizer, Exigenter, or the like; this is a Forfeiture of his Office. As if a Keeper kill his Deer, or suffer them to die by his negligence, or destroy the Trees or Covert for Deer: Or a Gaoler keep not his Prisoners in safe and freight custody, or keep them in Prison when they should go out, or the like; these are Forfeitures of their Offices. So if a Marshal suffer a voluntary or negligent Escape in one of his Prisoners.

By refusing to do that ex officio which a man is bound to do upon request, is in some Offices cause of Forfeiture. And therefore if a Steward be desired by his Master to keep Court, and he refuseth to do it, or doth it not according to the duty of his place for the good of his Master; this is a Forfeiture of the Stewardship. But if it be an Office not relating to the administration of Justice or publike good, but for the private good of some man, and where the Officers personal attendance is not absolutely necessary; there his not attendance for a time, especially in case where the Master hath no great loss by it, is no Forfeiture. And therefore if a Keeper be two or three days absent, and his Game be not killed the while, this is no Forfeiture. And if one be to keep a Court, and he is never requested to keep it, and he never keep it; this is no Forfeiture. And if an Officer do only threaten, or endeavor a Misdemeanor, but doth not act or effect it; this is no Forfeiture. And if one be bound to give Counsel for a Fee, and be never asked advice, and he never give any, he doth not forfeit his Fee.

And it seems that that which will be a cause of Forfeiture in the Master, will be a cause of Forfeiture if it be done by a Deputy. But if an Officer in Fee do grant his Office for life, and the Grantee for life doth forfeit, he shall (as it seems) forfeit his own Estate for life only, and not the Fee. CHAP. LXXXVIII.

Of Forein and Forrest, and Forcible Entry, and Forging of Deeds.

Forein or Forein.

His word is used Adjectively in our Law, and is joined with divers Substantives. As, Forein matter doth mean matter triable in another County. Forein Plea, is a Refusal of the Judge as incompetent, because the matter to be tried is out of his Precinct. Forein Answer, is such an Answer as is not triable in the County where it is made. Forein Service, is such a Service whereby a mean Lord holdeth over of another without the compass of his own Fee; or else that which a Tenant performeth either to his own Lord, or to the Lord paramount out of the Fee, or else Knights service, or Escuage uncertain. Forein Attachment, is an Attachment of Foreiners goods found within a Liberty or City, for the satisfaction of some Citizen to whom the Foreiner oweth money, *Kitch. 126. 75. Of Force, and of Forcible Entry.

Force, what.

It is an offence by which unlawful violence is used to persons or things. And it is either implied; as in every Trespass, Rescous and Disseisin, there is a Force implied in Law; or it is actual with weapons, number of persons, &c. which always carryeth some fearful shew or matter of terror with it. The actual Force also is either simple, when it is joined with no other crime, as Entry into Lands only: Or compound, when it is mixed with some other fact which of it self is criminal; as if any by force enter into anothers Possession, and kill a man, or ravish a woman there, &c.

Forcible Entry,
what.

A Forcible Entry is a violent and actual Entry into any Lands, Houses, &c. or taking of any Distress by any person weaponed, whether he offer violence, or fear of hurt to any there, or furiously drive any out of the possession thereof. And sometimes it is taken for a Writ grounded upon the Statute.

Forcible De-tainer, what.

A Forcible Detainer is a violent act of resistance by a strong hand, of men weaponed with harness, or other action of fear, in the same place or elsewhere, by which the lawful Entry of Justices or others is barred or hindered.

1. What shall be said to be a forcible Entry into, or De-tainer of lands
or not.
Infant.
Women-covert.

The Statutes of 5 R. 2. 9. 15 R. 2. 2. 8 H. 6. 9. give charge, that none shall enter into any Lands, but where Entry is given them by Law; and then in a mild and a peaceable manner: And that none shall enter into, or hold a possession of Lands with a strong hand, and with force. For the opening whereof, we must know,

1. That one or more may commit this offence.
2. An Infant or a Feme-covert by their own act may commit a forcible Entry or Detainer; but they cannot do it by Commandment, as another man may do.
3. Where divers do come in a company to do this act, and one of them only doth use the violence, they are all guilty. But herein we must take this difference: Where divers come together in one place to do an unlawful thing, and one only doth it, and the rest stand by and do nothing; in this case they are all guilty as principal doers, and the act of one shall be said to be the act of all. So that if divers come to enter into Lands where their Entry is not lawful, and all of them but one do enter and demean themselves peaceably, and he only doth enter with force, and after Entry doth hold with violence: This, albeit it be against their wills, is a forcible Entry. And so it seemeth to be, where some of them do come without an evil intent, if they come together, or if they come after, and be aiding and countenancing to the offenders. But when divers come together to do a lawful act, as to distrain for Rent due, due, or the like; and in this case some of them, without any intent before, or allowance or countenance then by the rest, especially if they discountenance it, fall to outrage, and commit this or the like offence; in this case it seems the rest are not guilty.

4. A man shall not be guilty of this offence by any counsel or command before, or agreement after, unless he be present at the act done. But for further opening hereof, take these things. 1. If a master come with his servants, his servants knowing nothing of it, and he enter with force; his servants shall not be said to be guilty. 2. If a man enter with force to the use of another person that is not present, or by commandment of another not present who agreeth to it, yet he is not punishable for this force. 3. If many come together, and some of them do only enter by force, and the rest keep it by force; they are all alike guilty both of the forcible Entry and Detainer.

5. Though the King or his Tenant could not be outed of their possession, yet this offence may be committed in this Land of the Kings, and then is punishable as in other cases.

6. Though he get no possession hereby, yet it may be this offence, and punishable.

7. This offence may be committed about a Rent, when one doth distrain with force, (be the Rent due, or not;) or when one is coming to distrain, and the Tenant doth threaten to kill or forcibly resist him, forestall the way, or rescue the Distress, or the like. So about a Common, as when one doth forcibly keep his Cattel where he hath no Common, or forcibly resist another man that hath Common.

8. The expresse Force is that which is forbidden, when it is either with multitude, (i. e.) a greater Company then such persons have usually attending on them; yet one or two, if they be armed, &c. may commit this offence. Or it is with strong hand, (that is) with apparent violence: In word, by threatening speeches, as to say, They will keep the possession, if it cost them their lives, or in spite of the other being in with him; or if he threaten to kill or hurt the body of him that is in, if he will not go out; or out, if he offer to come in; especially if this make them to go out, or keep off. Or deed, by turbulent behavior or actual violence offered to the person of another; or else that they be furnished with some weapons by them not usually borne, as Swords, Bucklers, Pikes, Javelins, Bills, Clubs, Pitchforks, Staves, Halberts, Bows and Arrows, Cross-bows, Guns, Harness, Armor, or the like; or by casting of Stones, Blocks, pouring of hot Coals, scalding Water or Lead, or with any other thing wherewith one may hurt the person of another. And therefore if any enter thus, though no man oppose them, this is a forcible Entry: much more if being entred, they there offer any violence, or fear of hurt to the person of another that is in possession with him; and most of all, if they shall furiously and forcibly expel and drive another out of the possession. For if one enter in at the door being open, peaceably, but then he forcibly puts out them that he finds in possession, this is a forcible Entry.

If a man have a Force laid in another house by the place, this may make him guilty of this offence of forcible Detainer. So if a man after his peaceable Entry get more weapons into the house then were there, or usually he doth bear; or if he make use of the weapons in the house to defend his possession. But the having of them there, if they were there before, is not a Force punishable.

9. If any Justice of Peace come to view the Force in a house, and they refuse to let him in; this of it self is a forcible Detainer in all cases, though it be but by one person, and no weapon shewed. But if a Justice of Peace come not there upon complaint and of purpose, but by accident or to other ends, and the parties refuse to let him in; this is no forcible Detainer. So neither if he refuse to open the door to his Adversary, or to any other besides the Justice of Peace.

So if he finde any multitude of persons, Arms, or the like. So if the Disseisor forestall the way of the disseised with Force, that he dare not come near, but do refuse to open the doors to the other party; this is no forcible Detainer.

And if I be in possession of a house, and another that hath more right would enter; I may keep him out with my ordinary company and weapons, but not otherwise, for fear of the guilt of a forcible Detainer. But if my estate and possession be lawful, and I and my Ancestors have peaceably enjoyed it for three years together before the Indictment brought, if so my Entry were peaceable, not forcible, and I have continued three years possession peaceably and without force, I am in possession by right, and of a lawful estate, and not by wrong: And I have continued this possession all these three years without interruption, and not discontinued, and my estate is not ended; in these cases it seems I may keep my possession with force, and this is no forcible Detainer; which by Plea to the Indictment will avoid Fine, Imprisonment, and Restitution.

But to threaten a man, That if he come to enter, he will burn his house, or spoil his goods therein: To cut trees upon the land, or carry goods out of the house after a man hath entred; the door being open, or only latched, to enter without multitude or offensive weapons. So by fair means to perswade or entice any body out of the house, or by that means to keep them out; to take a man being out of the place and imprison him, and in the mean while to send one to enter into the land or house; or to deny to go out, and by imprisonment keep him out; these things will not make a forcible Entry or Detainer. And therefore if in these cases the other side make a forcible Entry upon them, they may be put out again.

10. Though the party ousted be dead, that no restitution can be made; yet the forcible Entry shall be punished.

11. If one enter into an house or land, with an intent to cut or carry away his goods or corn, &c. or the like trespass, though he do not put him hereby out of possession; this will be a forcible Entry punishable by these Statutes, if it be with strong hand, or with multitude.

12. So if any enter peaceably, and after Entry, by force do any such act.

13. To detain a house mortgaged by force from the Mortgager; is a forcible Detainer.

14. To go over the land with force or multitude to another place or end, is not a forcible Entry: Nor is the Force that is used with the warrant, and in the maintenance of the Law, any offence within these Statutes, but lawful. So is the Force used in the apprehending of Felons by Sheriffs and other Officers, in executing Writs, and in doing their office, in keeping the Peace, in defence of my person and house, and the like.

But for the further opening hereof, these Cases must be heeded. If two or more men be in harness, having also in their hands divers weapons, and they enter into the house of another to have the possession thereof without more doing, and hereupon the other party that was in possession departeth and goeth far off; this is a forcible Entry. But if two men in that manner break in the house, the door being open, and it is not known to what intent, the Tenants being in quiet, and no violence is used to them, but they that keep the possession run away; this is a forcible Entry.

If a man have two houses near adjoining, the one by a defeasible title, the other by a good title, and he keepeth a Force in the house he hath by a good title, to keep out of the other house; this is a forcible Detainer.

If a man putteth another out of his house by Force, leaveth it, and putteth in one of his Servants in a peaceable manner, and keepeth the party put out in Prison; this is not a forcible detaining, though it be a forcible Entry.

If one sole person alone break the house of another, and enter in by the windows against the will of the Owner, and then threateneth the party, and he for fear doth forsake the house; this is a forcible Entry.

If a forcible Entry be made into the house of another, with intent to fight with the party there dwelling, and thereupon the party in possession and they that enter upon him do all depart out of the house; this is no forcible Entry. So if one enter a house to seize a Ward, and is kept out by force; this is no forcible Detainer. So if a Lessor enter with force to see if any Waste be done by the Lessee, this is no Entry by force, although he remain there a whole day and night after. So to enter a house in time of War to fortifie it against Enemies, is no forcible Entry. So if the Lord distrain for Rent where no Rent is due; and he do it with force; this is no forcible Entry. So if one break and enter the house to part an Affray there, or to apprehend a Felon, or one that hath dangerously hurt another, and is escaped and fled into the house: But if the man that is hurt be in no danger, it is otherwise. So if a Gaoler bring his Prisoners into the house, being his own house, for safe keeping, and keep a Guard about them; this is neither forcible Entry, nor forcible Detainer.

If I hear that certain Fellows will come to my house to beat, rob or kill me, and I take in Force to defend my self; this is no forcible Detainer. But if I hear they are coming to take possession, and I gather Force to keep my possession, this is a forcible Detainer.

If one enter forcibly in a house upon another, and imprison in the same house him that was in first, and himself remaineth there with force; this is a forcible Detaining.

If a man claimeth Common to Land, or a Rent out of it, and the Land is detained with force, that he cannot use his Common, or have his Rent by Distress; this is a Detainer with force. But if one have a Warren in anothers Land, and the Land is detained with force when he would use his Warren; or one doth enter into the Park of another to distrain his Game, and the Owner of the Park do keep him out by force, this is no Detainer by force.

If a man make a Lease for life, and after grant the Reversion to the same Lessee upon Condition on the part of the Lessee, which Condition is broken; and the Lessor doth enter with force to get the possession of the land; this is a forcible Entry. So if the Lessee doth alien in Fee, and thereby forfeit the land, and the Lessor die before his Entry, and then his son and heir enter upon the Lessee with force; this shall be a forcible Entry. (All these Cases are in Mr. Risdens Reading.)

The party grieved by a forcible Entry or Detainer may be relieved, and the offender punished divers ways, (amongst others) by the help of the Justices of the Peace, who may do it upon the Statute of Northampton, which is in the nature of a Commission, wherein they proceed as Ministers only; or by Indictment upon Stat. 8 H. 6. at the Quarter-Sessions, which being found there, the party shall be restored to his possession by a Writ of Restitution from the Court to the Sheriff, Dyer, 187. Crompt. 7. P. 165.

But the most speedy and common remedy is by complaint to one or more Justices of Peace, who may thereupon go to the place where the Force is; and if it be in an house, he may enter and search; and if any Force of armor or weapon be worn or borne against this Statute, and if any such offenders be found, he may commit them to Prison, and may seize and press the Armor so found with them: And he ought to record all that which he shall do in this behalf, and thereout to send some Estreat into the Exchequer, that the Commonwealth may be answered of the Armor, or the value thereof.

But here again the Justice must not make any restitution to the party outed, but must only remove the Force. And concerning the offenders so found and committed by the said Justice of Peace, it seemeth the Justice (at his discretion) may fine them; and upon payment thereof, or Sureties found for the same, the said Justice may deliver the offenders, even as in the former Statutes of 15 R. 2. & 8 H. 6. Or else the said Justice may record such Force, and commit the offenders, and after certify the Record in the Upper-Bench, or to the Justices of the Gaol-delivery, or to the General Sessions of the Peace.

3. The Remedy; and how they are to be punished that commit this offence.

Or else the ſame Juſtice or Juſtices of the Peace may proceed, otherwiſe: For every Juſtice of Peace upon complaint to him made, or upon other notice to him given of any forcible Entry into, or holding, or Detainer of poſſeſſion of any Lands, Tenements, or other Poſſeſſions; (or of any Benefices, or Offices of the Church) contrary to theſe Statutes, by the party grieved, without any examining, queſtioning, or ſtanding upon the Right or Title of either party, may and ought at convenient time (at the coſt of the party grieved) to do execution of the Statutes aforeſaid. And as to the Juſtices duty and power in relation to the Aid he may require, removing the Force, Imprifonment of the Parties, and making Record of the Force; theſe things are to be known.

1. He ought to go to the place where ſuch Force ſhall be to view.

2. He may command and take with him ſufficient Power of the County or Town by diſcretion, and the Sheriff alſo, if need be, to aid him for the better execution of his buſineſs, as well for the arreſting of ſuch Offenders, as alſo for the removing of the Force; and for the conveying of them to the next Gaol. And as to this, theſe things muſt be known.

3. If he require any Men-kind, be they Dukes, Earls, Barons, Lords, or men of lower degree, Apprentices, Servants and others, that are not about the apprehending of Felons, or ſome other publike ſervice: But Women, and Children under fourteen years old, Aliens that are not Denizens, Men that are not compotes mentis, and Priſoners are not bound. 2. Theſe he may require by word of mouth, without a Warrant in writing; but ſo can no other Officers. 3. He may arreſt or imprifon, and fine ſuch as reſuſe to aid him.

3. He ought to arreſt and remove all ſuch Offenders as at his coming he ſhall ſee or find continuing the Force, and may take away their weapons, harnels and armor, and preſently cauſe them to be preſſed, and after to be answered to the Common-wealth as forfeited, or the value thereof. And if the doors be ſhut, and they within the houſe ſhall deny the Juſtice to enter, it ſeemeth he may break open the houſe to remove the Force. But if ſuch Offenders being in the houſe at the coming of the Juſtice, ſhall make no reſiſtance, nor make ſhew of any Force, then the Juſtice cannot arreſt or remove them, except upon the enquiry a Force be found. And if the Houſe or Land which is holden with Force, ſhall extend into two Counties, and the Offenders move their Force into that part of the Houſe or Land which is in the other County, when the Juſtice doth come; it is ſaid by ſome, he cannot then remove the Force; but others hold the contrary.

4. He ought to make a Record of ſuch Force by him viewed. Wherein are theſe things to be known. 1. If the Juſtice come to remove the Force, and the Offenders eſcape before they can be arreſted, yet the Juſtice muſt record the forcible Detainer. 2. If the Juſtice be put out of Commiſſion, or made a Sheriff before he come to the place, he cannot then record it. 3. If the Juſtice record a Force, and ſend to Priſon where no Force is, the party is remedileſs. 4. If a Reſcue be made of the Priſoners committed by him, he may record this alſo: But if he record a Murther or Maſſlaughter, this is void. 5. This Record ſhall be a ſufficient conviction of the offenders, and the parties ſhall not be allowed to traaverse it. 6. And this Record (made out of Seſſions by a particular Juſtice) the ſame Juſtice may keep by him; or he may make it indented, and certiſie the one part into the Upper-Bench, or he may leave it with the Clerk of the Peace, and the other part he may keep himſelf.

Commitment.

5. He ought to commit immediately to the next Gaol all ſuch perſons as he ſhall find and ſee continuing the Force at his coming to the place; the ſaid Offenders there to remain convict by his own eye, teſtimony and Record, until they have paid a Fine to the Lord Provoſtor: For this ſight and view of the Force by the Juſtice (being a Judge of Record) maketh his Record thereof (in the judgment of the Law) as ſtrong and effectual, as if the Offenders had confeſſed the Force before him; and (touching the reſtraining of the Traverſe) more effectual then if the Force had been found by a Jury upon the evidence of others. But the Force muſt be in the preſent or view of the Juſtice of Peace, or elſe he can never record it, nor yet commit the the offenders: For upon Force found by Enquiry only, (although this Proferment of the Jury be a Conviction of the offenders), it is thought the Justice of Peace can neither fine, nor send to Gaol. But, however he is to remove the offenders that be present, that so he may restore the other, and may bind the offenders to the Good-behaviour. And if they be gone, yet he may make his Warrant to take them and send them to Gaol; until they have found Sureties for their Good-behaviour. But for the further opening of this, these things must be known.

1. The Justice of Peace may not view a Force, or fine or imprison in his own case: And yet if he come there, and they make an assault upon his person, he may send them to Gaol for this offence.

2. If one enter into a House upon another with Force, and when the Justice comes both sides are fighting for the possession; the Justice may remove the Force, but cannot give possession to the Owner of the House.

3. If he that hath entered forcibly, hath driven the Owner to one end or part only; the Justice may remove, and commit them that have so entred.

4. If there be Men in Arms in another House near, though in another County, to beat them that take possession of the House in this County; in this case it is said, the Justices may remove them.

5. If the Justices come there by accident where the Force is newly done, they cannot arrest or imprison, unless there be a forcible Detainer in the view.

6. If the offenders before Arrest escape for that time; and after the same day the Justices meet them in another place; in this case they cannot commit them to Prison.

7. If the Justices coming to the place, meet some of the offenders by the way in harness, or see some going thither in harness, to keep the place; they cannot upon this commit them to Prison.

8. If when the Justices of Peace come, the offenders escape into another County, the Justices of Peace cannot arrest them there, albeit it be upon fresh suit. And yet is said by some, that if in this case before arrest of the parties they flee, the Justices may arrest them, but not commit them to Prison. But I doubt it. And yet if both Houses be in one County, it is out of question. So if they get into a Castle in the same County, the Justices may upon fresh Suit arrest them and commit them.

9. All this is to be done there only where the party grieved (in the sense of the Statute) which is the party that is to have restitution, doth complain, tender the costs, &c. Not where any man doth complain. And for the opening hereof, take these Cases.

If a man have a Rent issuing out of the Land of another, which Land is detained with force when he would disfranchise; he that is so disturbed is not a party grieved, to be relieved by the Statute. And if a man be seised of Land to which Common is appendant, is disseised of the Common, and then aliens the Land to his Son and dieth, after which the Land out of which this Common is issuing is detained with force; in this case the Son is not a party grieved by this Statute. So if after the Fathers death a stranger doth enter by abatement into the Land, and holdeth by force; the Son is not a party grieved within the Statute. So if a man be seised of Land of which such a forcible Entry is made, and dieth before he complain; in this case his Son and Heirs cannot complain for this Entry. So if a man devise his Land by Will and dieth, and before any Entry made by the Devisees, a Force is made; the Devisees is not a party grieved. But if a man make a Lease for five years on Condition that if within the first two years the Lessee pay to him Ten pounds, he shall have the Fee, and Livery is made accordingly; in this case if any such Entry be within the five years, the Lessee is a party grieved, albeit the Condition be not performed. So if a man be possessed of a Term, and make the Heirs of J.S. his Executors and dieth, J.S. being also dead, leaving issue a Daughter, his Wife with child of another Daughter; the first enters, and then the other is born; then such Force is committed: In this case both the Daughters are parties grieved. So if one enters by Disfranchisement to the use of another, who doth after agree to it, and then a forcible Entry is made; in this case neither the the one nor the other is a party grieved. So if one enter by Disseisin to the use of an Infant, who doth agree to it, and then such a forcible Entry is made; in this case the Infant is not a party grieved. And generally the party to whom Restitution shall be made, he shall be accounted a party grieved within the meaning of this Statute. (And for this see afterwards.)

Fine.

Estreat.

Accomptant.

Enquiry.

The same Justices of Peace, or some of them that shall see the Force, (as having best knowledge of the matter, and of the quantity of the offence, and having the custody of this Record) are the proper Judges over this offence, and therefore may assess the Fine upon every such offender. But the Fine must be imposed upon every offender severally, and not upon them jointly. And the Justice ought to estreat the same Fine, and to send the Estreat into the Exchequer; and that from thence the Sheriff may be commanded to levy the said Fine to the Commonwealth's use. But upon the same Fine so assessed and estreated, it seemeth the Justice is to deliver the offender: Also upon payment of the said Fine to the Justice, or upon Sureties bound by Recognisance for the payment thereof, the Justice may deliver the offenders again out of Prison at his pleasure, by some opinions: But quære, for that the Sheriff is accomptant for all Fines. Or the Justice of Peace (by some opinions) may record such Force, and commit the offenders, and after certifie the Record to the Justices of Assize and Gaol-delivery, or else to the General Sessions of the Peace, and there the offenders may be fined: For the Statute doth not say, that the Fine shall be assessed by them that record the Force; but rather the Justices of Peace may certifie or deliver the Record by them made, and refer the Fine and further proceeding therein to the Upper-Bench; which is thought to be the safest course. Also the Justice of Peace, notwithstanding his own view of the Force, may and ought in some good Town or place near where the Force was, to enquire by a sufficient Jury of the same County to be returned by the Sheriff, as well of those which made such forcible Entry, as of those which made such forcible Detainer. Wherein these things must be observed.

1. That one Justice of Peace alone out of Sessions may make an Enquiry; whereas otherwise to hold a Sessions, there must be two at the least, and one of them must be of the Quorum.

2. This Enquiry may be made within a moneth after the time.

3. It may be made, whether the offenders be present or gone, at the coming of the Justice of Peace.

4. This Enquiry may be made, albeit the Justice go out to see the place where the Force is, and upon his view make a Record: But he must take care the Records do not differ; for if the Enquest find contrary to the Justices Record, the last Record is void.

5. One Justice may make the View, and another Justice may make the Enquiry.

6. If several Enquiries be made by several Justices upon the Force, every one of them is a good Enquiry.

7. If the Record of Inquisition say the Jury was sworn, and indeed it was not sworn, yet it is a good Enquiry.

8. If the Jury be under twelve, or any of them have been attaint of a false Oath upon a Decies tantum, or are Ambodexters, the Jury is not good, unless there be twelve of the Jury besides those men.

Warrant to the Sheriff.

9. This Enquiry must be made by men of good Estates. And therefore the Justice of Peace is to send his Warrant to the Sheriff, to command him in the behalf of the Lord Protector, to cause to come before him four and twenty sufficient and indifferent persons, near about the place where the Force is supposed to be; and every of them so returned must have Forty shillings by the year at least in Lands and Tenements. And the Sheriff is to return Issues upon every man so summoned, the first day Twenty shillings, the second day Forty shillings, and the third day Fifty shillings; and at every day after double. And upon default of appearance of the Jurors, the Justice may grant an Alias, and after that Pluries infinite, till they come. And if any Sheriff or Bailiff of Franchise that hath the Return of such Writ, shall be negligent, he shall forfeit Forty pounds. But if such Jurors have not Forty shillings Land per annum, yet their Presentment of such Force is good for the Commonwealth, so as the offenders shall fine therefore. And if the Sheriff return smaller Issues upon the Enquiries than the Statute doth appoint; yet the party indicted shall not impeach the Enquiry thereof. But these defaults in the Sheriff for not returning sufficient men, may be punished by the Justice of Peace, who may hear and determine these offences by Bill or Indictment, wherein shall go the like Process as against men indicted for Trespass.

10. It is convenient upon such Enquiry, that the Evidence be given openly to the Jury, so the intent it may appear to the Justice of Peace or Court, whether there be reasonable cause to stay Restitution, or not, after the Indictment found.

11. If upon such Enquiry, such forcible Entry, or such forcible holding or Detainer shall be found by the oaths of the Enquirers, then the said Justice of Peace shall release the Lands or Tenements so entered upon or holden, and thereof put the party in possession again, which in such sort was put or holden out. As touching which point, these things are to be known.

1. Any one or more Justices of Peace before whom the Force is found, and not any other Justice of Peace in or out of Sessions, Justices of Oyer and Terminer, or Gaol-delivery, may in person put the party put out or kept out, in possession again, or may award his or their Precept under his or their own Seal to the Sheriff to do it. And if the Justice before whom it be taken be dead, or otherwise the Record being before the Justices at their Sessions, they may award Execution by Writ, but not without a Writ, as the Justice of Peace himself that took the Inquisition may do. Also the Justices of the Upper-Bench, upon a Certificate by the Justices of Peace of the Force found before them, or upon removal of the Indictment by Certiorari, may by Warrant to the Sheriff, (not in person) award Restitution. And to do this, the Justice or Sheriff may break open any house, and take Posse Comitatus; and if the Sheriff return, He cannot do it for resistance, he will be amerced.

Restitution.

2. The Restitution must be made to him that is put out, not to his Heirs, Executor, or any other after his death; but the parties in this case may be fined and imprisoned: Co. 3 par. Inst. f 142, 143.

3. No Restitution shall be made, but where the forcible Entry or Detainer is first found by Inquisition, and that upon sufficient Indictment also. For if the Indictment or Inquisition be qualified for insufficiency, no Restitution can be had upon it. For this cause the Indictment must express: 1. A putting out, Expulsionem. 2. The quality of the thing entered into, as Messuage, Cottage, &c. Therefore they entered the Tenement; is void for incertainty. 3. A keeping out; it must say, Yet they keep out. 4. It must be with strong hand, or with multitude; except it be implied by reciting Stat. 8 H. 6. and conclude, Against the form of the Statute aforesaid, or by some other such words. And if one be restored upon an insufficient Indictment, and it be removed into the Upper-Bench, the Court will cause the party to be restored. And if upon an insufficient Indictment the Justices grant Restitution before it be done, the same Justices, or other, may grant a Superfideas to stay it.

Indictment.

4. Restitution is only where a man is put or held out of Land, or the like; not of Rent, or the like.

5. The Justice may make Restitution, notwithstanding any offer of Traverse: Yet in this case the safest way is to send the Indictment into the Upper-Bench. But in touching Restitution, Inquisition, and the three years Possession, and for the clearing of the Law touching them, these things are to be known.

1. To whom Restitution shall be made, and upon what Inquisition.
2. If it be found that J. S. was seized, until he was disseised by J. D. by force, or that J. D. entered upon him by force; in this case Restitution shall be made to J. S. So if it be found that J. S. was seized until disseised by J. D. peaceably, which J. D. holdeth with force; in this case Restitution shall be made to J. S. And if it be found that the Father die, and a stranger enter by abatement, and detaineth with force; in this case Restitution may not be made to the Sons. If it be found that the Father made made a Lease for years and die, the years expired, and before such an Entry made by the Son, such a Force is committed; in this case the Son shall not have Restitution.

If it be found that a man is seised of Land, and hath issue a Daughter and dieth, his Wife with child of a Son; the Daughter is ousted with Force, and then a Son is born; in this case the Daughter, and not the Son shall have Restitution.

If it be found that J. S. was seised until he was disseised by J. D. and that J. S. ousted J. D. with force; in this case the Restitution shall be made to J. D. and not to J. S. If it be found that J. S. was seised until J. D. ousted him with force, and also that J. D. was so seised until by J. N. disseised by force; by this Inquisition J. D. the first Disseisor will have Restitution against J. N. and thereupon J. S. shall have Restitution against J. D. and all upon the same Verdict.

If it be found by several Enquiries, that a man is ousted by force by several persons at sundry times of one and the same thing; each Inquest is good, and he may have Restitution upon any of them, but he shall have but one Restitution.

If it be found by several Enquiries, (i.) by one Inquest, that J. S. is ousted by force; and by another Inquest, that J. D. is ousted by force, and both of the same Land; in this case each of them may have Restitution.

If it be found that J. S. was seised for the life of A. and he is ousted with force by B. and that A. is now dead; in this case J. S. shall have Restitution upon this Inquisition.

If it be found that two Jointenants be ousted by force; in this case one of them may have Restitution, without the other. So if it be found that the Father was seised until he was ousted with force, and he die before Entry or Restitution, the Son shall not be restored. So of the Executors of a Lessee for years ousted before his death. If it be found there is Lessee for life, the Remainder in fee, and the Lessee for life is ousted by force; in this case he in Remainder shall not be restored.

If it be found that J. S. was seised, until by J. D. he was ousted by force, and the Enquiry doth not say, At the request of J. S. yet he shall have Restitution.

If it be found that one is ousted by force, and thereupon he is restored, and after he is ousted by force again by the same party; in this case he shall not have Restitution the second time upon the same Inquisition.

If Lessee for life upon Condition be ousted by force, and the Lessor enter for the Condition broken, and this be found; in this case the Lessee shall be restored.

If Husband and Wife before issue had are ousted with force, and then they have issue between them, and the Wife dieth, and this be found; the Husband shall have Restitution.

If it be found that the Land out of which one hath Rent or Common is detained with force, so that he cannot have his Rent or Common; in this case he cannot have Restitution. And finally it is so for the most part, that he that is the party grieved, that must complain; he is the party to whom Restitution shall be made. And as touching the three years possession, these things are to be known.

That if a Disseisor continue the possession quietly for one year, and then maketh a Feoffment, and taketh back an estate again, and then he continueth for two years more; this is not a good possession for three years within the Statute. So if Lessee for years continue in possession for two years, and then his Term expireth, and after this he holdeth for another year; this is not a good continuance in possession for three years. But if a man make a Lease at will and dieth, after whose death the Lessee doth continue in possession three years; this is a good continuance of possession within the Statute.

If a Disseisor do continue in possession two years, and then is disseised by his eldest Son; the Father dieth, and the Son continueth in possession for one year more; this is not a continuance of possession for three years, within the Proviso of the Statute. The same Law is, if the Father disseiseth his eldest Son and continueth in possession three years, and the Son after his death for one year more; this is not a continuance of possession by three years within the Statute. But if the Disseisor con-continue the possession for two years in his own life-time, and dieth seised, and his Son and Heir entred and continueth the possession for one whole year; this is a Continuance of possession within the Proviso. The same Law is, if the Disseisor continue possession for two years in the life-time of the Dissee, and one year after his death; this is a Continuance of possession for three years within the Statute.

If the Dissee make a continual Claim within three years, but make no Entry, this is not a Continuance in possession for three years within the Statute. The same Law is, if the Disseisor continue possession by two years, and his Feoffee by one year, this is a Continuance of possession for three years. If one recovereth against another in a Præcipe quod reddat by Covin, and he against whom he recovereth hath quiet possession thereof for three years; this is a possession within the Statute.

If one make a Lease to another for the life of J. S. and the Lessee doth continue the possession for two years, and then J. S. die, and the Lessee doth continue the possession one year after his death; this is no Continuance of possession within the Statute. But if he continue the possession for three years after the death of J. S. this is a good Continuance of possession. If the Disseisor make a Lease for life, the Remainder over in fee, and the Lessee holdeth for a year and dieth, after whose death he in Remainder entred and continueth the possession for two years more, this is not a Continuance of possession within the Proviso of the Statute.

In these cases a man may alleage to stay Restitution any of these things.

Causes of stay, of Restitution.

1. His quiet possession for three years: For there shall be no Restitution awarded, in case where the party indicted hath been in quiet possession by the space of three whole years together, next before the day of Indictment found, if his estate be not ended. And this the party may alleage; and upon this Restitution shall be staid by the Justice of Peace until it be tried, if the other will deny or traverse the same.

2. He may deliver to the Justice of Peace or Court a Certiorari, and this is a Superfedeas to them. And therefore if a man have committed such a Force, and be in doubt that he shall be indicted therefore before the Justices of Peace, upon the Statute of 8 H. 6. and that thereupon Restitution will be awarded against him, he may have a Certiorari out of the Upper-Bench ready; and when the Bill of Indictment is found, he may presently deliver it to the Justice of Peace, or Court; and this is a Superfedeas to them; for hereupon the Indictment shall be removed unto the Upper-Bench. And although the Indictment be found after the Test of the Certiorari, it is not material. But if a Certiorari come to remove an Indictment taken before a Justice of Peace in the Country, and the party will not sue to remove it, but doth suffer it to lie still; some think the Justice may proceed to grant Restitution. But it seems the Justices ex officio are to send the Indictment away, because they are commanded so by the Writ, and this Writ is a Superfedeas of it self. And after Restitution made by the Justice of Peace, if the other party do remove the Indictment by a Certiorari of a more eigne date, then is the Indictment, the Justices of the Upper-Bench may award Restitution back again; for upon the matter the Justice of Peace had no power to make Restitution, for that the Certiorari had relation from the date after Restitution granted from the Sessions, and delivered to the Sheriff; the other party having a Certiorari, delivereth it also to the Sheriff; after the Sessions, the Sheriff shall not surcease thereupon, for he hath no authority to allow thereof. But if the Certiorari were delivered to any Justice of Peace, he may thereupon grant a Superfedeas to the Sheriff; and if Restitution were made by the Sheriff before the said Superfedeas came to his hand, then the other party shall have Restitution back again in the Upper-Bench, upon Indictment removed thither.

Certiorari.
Superfedeas.

3. He may tender a Traverse; but some doubt whether he may be admitted to a Traverse before the same Justice of Peace. But this tender of Traverse (to an Indictment of a forcible Entry) upon St. 8. H. 6. is no Superfedeas but in discretion, so as the Justice of Peace or Court may grant or stay the Restitution at their discretion, according as the truth of the right or title shall appear to them: And so is the use of the Upper-Bench. Or else the Justices of Peace before whom the Indictment was found, may after Traverse tendered certify or deliver the Indictment into the Upper-Bench, and so refer the further proceeding thereof to the Justices of that Court.

But

But if the party indicted shall tender a Traverse presently, whereupon Restitution is stayed, and after he shall not pursue his Traverse with effect, (but discontinueth it) and after doth tender another Traverse, upon Restitution prayed, at another time, the Justice of Peace or Court shall do well to proceed to grant Restitution, notwithstanding such Traverse tendered. And it is the course in the Upper-Bench, that he that tendered the Traverse there (upon such an Indictment) shall bear all the charges of the Trial, and not the Lord Protector, nor he at whose suit the Indictment was found. And the same reason seemeth upon an Indictment traversed before the Justices of Peace.

4. He may shew Insufficiencie of the Indictment, for the causes before alledged.

5. And some have thought he may plead the Insufficiencie of any of the Jurors, for not having Forty shillings per annum. And some think that the Justices of Peace ought to stay Restitution, save only in case where three years quiet possession is alledged, or by removing the Record. The Mayors and Officers of Cities having Franchise, have like authority therein as Justices of Peace have within their County, 8 H. 9. c. 9. And if the Justices of Peace be negligent in their offices upon these Statutes, they may be punished.

Forging a Deed.

Forging of a Deed, what.

Forging of a Deed is, where a man doth make and publish any false Deed, Writing or Will, to the prejudice of another mans right, Kelv. 112. Plow. 186.

What is such a Forgery, or
not.

To forge a Will in writing, is such a Forgery, March 26. pl. 245:

If a Copiholder make and publish a Customary for a Usage, and put Seals to it to the Lords prejudice, this is a Forgery. Dyer 302. 322.

If one forge a Testament by which a Lease for years is given; this is such a Forgery.

But the making, and not publishing and using of any such Writing or Deed, is no Forgery, nor punishable at all. See what shall be such a Forgery, more in Kelv. 112. Plow. 88. Co. 4. 17. Dyer 302. 322. 288. Plow. 88.

If any one alone or with others forge any such Deed, Charter, Court-Roll, or Will in writing, with intent to trouble, defeat, or charge the Freehold or Inheritance, the Right or Title of Land of another, or publish or give in evidence any such Writing, knowing it to be false; he shall pay to the party grieved double costs and damages, be set upon the Pillory in some Market-Town or open place, and have both his ears cut off, his nostrils slit, and seared with an hot iron, forfeit the profits of his land, and be imprisoned all the days of his life.

If it be the forging of a Lease for years, of Land only (not Copihold) or of an Annuity, Obligation, Bill, Acquittance, Release, or other Discharge of any personal thing; he shall pay the party grieved double costs and damages, be set so on the Pillory, lose one of his ears, and suffer a years imprisonment without Bail. The second offence is Felony without Clergy; also the party grieved may for this Forgery have an Action of the Case at the Common-Law; St. 5 Eliz. 14.

Of a Forrest.

A Forrest is a great vast Wood or piece of ground, where wild Beasts did use to live. But more largely it is thus described: It is a certain Territory of woody ground and fruitful Pastures, priviledged for wild Beasts and Fowls of the Forrest, Chase, and Wairren to rest and abide in, in the safe protection of the King, for his Princely delight and pleasure. Which Territory of ground so priviledged, is meered and bounded with unremoveable Marks, Meers and Boundaries, either known by matter of Record, or else by Prescription. And these Forrests now are, or have been replenished with wild Beasts of Veneries or Chase, and with great Coverts of Vert for the succor of the wild Beasts to have their abode in. For the preservation and continuance whereof and the Vert, and Venison therein, there are certain particular Laws, Courts, Priviledges and Officers belonging to the same, meet for that purpose, that are only proper to a Forrest, and not to any other place. Of these there have been many in England, but most of them are gone and destroyed. See for this, and how they began, in Manwood of Forrest-Laws.

The properties of a Forrest are these.

1. None can have it but the King;
2. The Courts must be there, the Justice-seat, Eyre, or General-Sessions of the Forrest, which must be held every three years, the Swanimote thrice a year, and the Attachment-Court once every forty days.

3. The Officers must belong to it for preservation of Vert and Venison: As first, the Justices of the Forrest, sometimes called Justices in Eyre of the Forrest, who have the hearing and determining of all offences committed therein against Vert and Venison, who did judg by the Laws of the Forrest, 9 H. 3. For which see Justices, Manwood Forrest-Laws.

The Warden or Keeper of the Forrest; for which see Officers.

The next Officer is the Constable of the Forrest, (Manwood.)

The Verderers or Verdours, who are Judicial Officers of the Forrest chosen by the Kings Writ to the Sheriff, and sworn in the County-Court of the Shire, by the Freeholders there within the Forrest where they dwell, to maintain and keep the Affises of the Forrest, and also to view, receive, and inroll the Attachments and Presentments of all manner of Trespasses of the Forrest of Vert and Venison, and to oversee, correct and punish other Officers beneath them, Crompt. Jur. 164. Manwood.

The Forrester is a sworn Officer appointed by the Kings Letters-Parents to walk the Forrest early and late, to look to the Vert and Venison there, attaching and presenting all Trespassors against them within their own Bailiwick or Walk. They were called Walkers, Crompt. Jur. f. 201. Manwood.

Agistors are such as tack in and receive the money for the rack of the Cattel going in the Forrest. Manwood.

Regardors are such Officers as are to view and enquire of all offences of the Forrest as well of Vert as of Venison, and of all concealments of any offences or defaults of the Forresters, and of all other Officers of the Forrest, concerning the execution of their Office. Crompt. Jur. 153. Manwood.

Bailiffs of the Forrest and Beadles are Officers that do make all manner of garnishments of the Courts, and all manner of Proclamations as well within the Courts of the Forrest as without, and also do execute all the Process of the Forrest, and are like to the Bailiffs errant of the Sheriff within the County.

Woodmen are such as look to the Woods there, Manwood.

Woodwards are not only to see to the Woods, but to all other matters; and if any do any offence there in Vert and Venison, they are to present it to the Verderors at the next Swanimote or Attachment-Court. Manwood, and Crompt. Jur. 201.

Rangers are such as have the care of the Purliewes annexed to the Forrest, to drive back the game. Idem.

A Chace seemeth to be nothing but the ground which was a Forrest in the Kings hands, and hath lost the properties of a Forrest, or is in the hands of a Subject. And this must always be open, and not inclosed: But a Park must be always inclosed, and not lie open. And if this be inclosed, it is forfeit to, and may be seized by the King. And to recover this Chafe being denied, there lieth a Writ called

Libera Chafca habenda. See more in Franchise.
A Warren is a Franchise or privileged place of pleasure, only for those Beasts and Fowls that are Beasts and Fowls of Warren, as Hares and Conies, and Pheasants and Partridges. And some of these lie open, and some are inclosed. These were made at first by the Kings grant, and so may be now within a mans own ground, no where else; and then no man may hunt or fowl there without my licence; and if any man hunt or hawk there, he may be punished, Crompt. Jur. 148. Stat. de Malefactoribus in Parcibus, 21 Ed. 3.

Park, what.

A Park is a piece of ground inclosed and stored with wild Beasts of Chafe; or a privileged place for wild Beasts of Venerie, and for other wild Beasts that are Beasts of the Forrest and of the Chafe, the which are to be in peace there, so that no man in that place may hurt or chafe them without leave of the Owner. And this must be inclosed and may not lie open; for if it do, it is cause of Forfeiture to, and seizure by the King as a thing forfeit. Nor can the Owner have an Action against such as hunt in his Park, if it lie open. Crompt. Jur. 148. Manwood of his Forrest-Laws.

*Self. 3.
Woodgeld, what.*

There are divers Terms used in the Forrest-Laws, now to be opened.
Woodgeld seemeth to be the gathering or cutting of Wood in the Forrest, or the money paid for the same to the use of the Forresters; or an Immunity from this by the Kings grant, Crompt. Jur. 146.

Regard, what.

Regard hath two significations: The one for the Regarders office; 2. The other for the compass of ground belonging to his Office. For the first, they are before the Courts of the Forrest to make their Regard, (that is) go through all the Bailiwicks of the Forrest to see what offences be done in Vert and Venison, and take Notes thereof, and certify it to the next Court. And for the other, the Compass of his Office is all the ground which is parcel of the Forrest; for there may be Woods within the limits of the Forrest that be no parcel thereof, and those are without the Regard, Crompt. Jur. 175. Manwood.

Range, what.

A Range seemeth to be the Office of the Ranger, and the Circuit thereof. For in some Forrests there are twelve Rangers, who are only to look to the Purlicues of the same upon the Borders of the Forrests, which were certain Circuits of ground near unto the Forrests, which were made Forrest by Hen. 2. Rich. 1. or King John, and were after by Perambulations granted by Hen. 3. severed again from the same. And these were to hunt back the Deer into the Forrest, and to present all offenders within or without his Purlieu. He was made by the Kings Letters-Patents, and had a Fee out of the Exchequer, and certain Fee-Deer, Manwood.

Of Forestalling, Regrating and Ingrossing.

Forestalling,
Regrating, and Ingrossing, what.

TO buy or agree for any thing coming towards a Market or great Town, or to move the Seller to raise the price, or to dissuade him from bringing in his Commodities in those places, is Forestalling.

To buy up Commodities, as Corn, Wine, Butter, Cheese, Fish, Candles, Tallow, Sheep, Lambs, Calves, Swine, Pigs, Geese, Capons, Hens, Chickens, Pigeons, Conies, or other dead victuals whatsoever in any Fair or Market, and sell them again there, or in any other place within four miles thereof, is Regrating.

To get by buying or promise-taking, otherwise then by Devise of Land or Tythe, any Corn or Grain, or dead victuals into a mans hands, with intent to sell the same again, this is Ingrossing. And so it is, if one by himself or another directly or indirectly buy any Wheat or other Grain, with intent to sell the same in Meal, Flower, or otherwise, but by Licence of five Justices had in Sessions. But the buying of Barley and Oats without forestalling, to make Malt and Oatmeal; and such Victuallers of all sorts, as Butchers, Fishers, and the like, as buy Victuals without Forestalling, and sell it again by Retail according to their Trades; the buying of Victuals by Inholders and Victuallers, and spending it in their houses; the reserving of Rent-Corn on a Lease for Land; the buying of Victuals to victual a Ship or Fort; the buying of Seed-Corn, when one doth sell or offer to sale as much again; the transportation of Corn from one Port to another by water; the buying of Corn, Fish, Butter or Cheese by a Badger, so he sell it again within a moneth; nor the buying and selling of Cattel by Drovers licensed, and not abusing their Licence, so they sell them forty miles off, are not against the Laws, nor punishable.

He that is within two years after any such offence done, convict of it, shall suffer for the first offence Imprisonment two moneths without Bail, and the value of the things bought or had: For the second offence after he hath been once convict, Imprisonment half a year, and the double value of the things: And for the third offence, be set on the Pillory in the place where he dwells, forfeit all his goods, and be imprisoned during the Kings pleasure. See for this St. 5 & 6 E. 6. c. 6. 14. 1 Jac. 25. 21 Jac. 28. Act of Parl. 23 Oct. 1650.

If any within two years of the offence be convict for buying any Oxen, Runts, Kine, Steer, Heifers, Lambs, Sheep, Goats or Kids living, and selling them again within five weeks, he shall suffer the loss of the double value thereof, Stat. 3 Ed. 6. ch. 14.

If any buy any Hide of Beasts out of a Market or Fair, unless it be of such as killed the Beast for their own provision, he forfeits Six shillings and eight pence, St. 1 Jac. ch. 22.

If any out of London, Westminster, or Southwark buy to sell again Butter or Cheese, unless he sell it again by Retail, and then not above a Weigh of Cheese, or Barrel of Butter, he loseth the double value of the goods, 21 Jac. 22.

The getting of Oak-bark into ones hand with intent to sell the same again, is punishable also. But for this, see the Statute of 1 Jac. 22. 13 Eliz. 25. Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 90. and Brownl. 2 par. 108.

CHAP. XC.

Of Frank-law, Frank-pledg, Freehold, Frank-tenement,
Free-chappel, Fresh-suit, Friars, and Fustians.

E that loseth his Frank-law, as for Conspiracie and some offences a man shall do, doth fall into these mischiefs. Frank law.

1. He shall never be empanelled upon any Jury or Assise, or otherwise used as a Witness to testifie Truth.

2. If he have any thing to do in the Kings Courts, he may not come there in person, but must appear by Attorney.

3. His lands, goods and chattels must be seised into the Kings hands, spoiled, and his body imprisoned, 24 Ed. 3. 34.

Frankpledges are Sureties for Freemen: For heretofore every freeborn Subject at fourteen years old was to be sworne, and to fall into one Tything or other, and be bound one for another, as they all were: If any offended, he was to be brought in by the rest to answer his offence, or they were to make amends for his offence: And they did commonly engage by Ten households. See Tything-man. Frank pledges, what.

A Franktenement or Freehold is an Estate for life at least; and it is either in deed, or in Law. In deed, when one is actually seised of it: Or in Law before his Entry, when it is cast upon a man by a course of Law; as when it comes to an Heir by the death of an Ancestor, or to him in Remainder by the death of the particular Tenant. Or where one doth levy a Fine sur consauance de droit come ceo, &c. or sur consauance de droit tantum, (the which are Feoffments of Record;) in these cases the Conusee hath a Freehold in him before his Entry. Frank-tenement or Freehold, what. The kinds.

So if Tenant for life, by agreement with him in Reversion, surrender to him; by this he hath a Freehold in Law before his Entry. So where a man doth bargain and sell Land by Deed indented and inrolled, or when Uses are raised by Covenant upon good considerations; in these cases the Freehold in Law doth pass presently. But upon an Exchange or Partition, or Livery within the view, no Freehold is vested or removed until the parties enter, Finches ley 114, 115. Co. upon Lit. 266. But see more to this purpose in Estates. For this there is one special Rule here to be remembered; That a Franktenement by way of Interest-passing cannot commence in futuro: And therefore if one make a Feoffment in fee, a Lease for life of Land, or grant a Rent or Common in fee or for life, to begin at a day to come, the Estate is void. As if a man by Deed in consideration of Marriage give and grant his Land to his Son and his Heirs after his Fathers death, and Livery is not made; there passeth no Estate by this. But by way of Surrender of a Copihold, Bargain and Sale, Devise or Covenant to stand seised to Uses, such a Conveyance and Estate may be good, March 50. pl. 78. Plow. 301. Co. 8. 94. 7. 40. Dyer 96. 202. But this is sometimes holpen by a Livery of Seisin, as in 36 Eliz. Callards Case: He being on the Land with his Son, said to him, Stand forth q. s. reserving an Estate to me and my wife, I do give thee this Land. By the better opinion, this was good. See March 177. 216.

A Free-Chappel is a Chappel founded in some Parish for the service of God, by the devotion and liberality of some good man, over and above the Mother Church; unto which it was free for the Parishioners to come, or not to come; and endowed it with a maintenance from the Founder, and thereupon called free. Or (as some say) those only are Free-Chappels that are of the Kings founding, and by him exempted from the jurisdiction of the Ordinary. And the Lord Protector at this day may license a Subject to found such a Chappel, and by his Charter exempt it from the Ordinaries jurisdiction also, Regist. f. 40. 41. Free-chappel, what.

Fresh-suit is such a present and earnest following of an offender, as never ceaseth from the time of the offence committed or espied, until he be apprehended. And this may be within, or without the view. And the effect of it is this in pursuit of a Felon, that Fresh-suit, what.

that the party pursuing shall have his goods restored to him again, whereas otherwise they would be forfeit to the King. Co. 3. Highways Case. Stamf. Pl. Cor. 3. 10.

Friars.

There were of these Friars, when they were here, four principal Orders: Minor, Augustines, Preachers, and Carmelites; of which all the rest came. The Friars observant were not of any Cloister, Covent or Corporation combined together as the rest, but tied themselves to observe the Rites of their Order, and more strictly than the Conventuals did, and out of singularity of zeal did separate themselves from them, living in places and companies of their own choosing. Stat. 4 H. 4. 17. 25 H. 8. 12.

CHAP. XCI.

Of Franchises and Liberties.

Franchise, what it is.

Franchise is a Royal Privilege in the hand of a Subject; or some Benefit, Power or Freedom, that some persons and places have above others, which originally was derived from the Crown, but now at last by continuance of time is claimed and taken in some cases by Prescription. And of these Franchises there are many sorts.

The kinds. Fairs and Markets.

Some whereof do stand in having; as the goods of Felons, of Fugitives, and of outlawed persons, Waifs, Strays, Deodons, Treasure-trove, Wreck, Markets, Fairs, Warrens, Leets, Courts, and the Customs of divers Villages, Burroughs and Corporations, Conuance of Pleas, Hundreds, and the like, Dyer 44. Plow. 169. And for Fairs and Markets, see the Statutes of 2 Ed. 3. 15. 5 Ed. 3. 5. 27 H. 6. 5. 17 Ed. 4. 2. 2 & 3 P. & M. 7. 31 Eliz. 12.

Señ. 1.

Some of them do stand in doing; as to make Justices of the Peace to pardon Felonies, and the power of Corporations, and divers other places, and the like.

Some of them do consist in discharge; as to be exempt from serving in Juries, from payment of Subsidies, from the jurisdiction of other Courts, from payment of Toll, and the like.

And amongst all these some are more Royal, as the Franchises of the Principality of Wales, and Counties Palatine; also goods of Felons, of Fugitives, and of outlawed persons; power to pardon Treason or Felonies, or to make Justices pardon Felony or Treason, and the like. And these it seems are so appropriate to the places and persons, as that they are not grantable over to any other place or person. But others are less Royal, as Markets, Fairs, and such like; and these it seems are grantable over, unless they be real and annexed inseparably unto some place, St. 27 H. 8. ch. 25.

Amongst these also some are real, i. inseparably annexed to some place, as divers Customs of divers places, Burroughs and Corporations, the Jurisdiction and Privileges of the Principality of Wales and Counties Palatine, Warrens, and the like; and these be not grantable to any other place by them that do enjoy them: 1. Some are personal; and these are sometimes inseparable from the person, and not grantable to another by him; as exemption of Juries, exemption of Toll, and the like. But the most of these, as Waifs, Strays, Courts, and the like, are grantable from one to another, as other things are: For which see Grants. Some of these may be claimed by Prescription, and some not: For which see Prescription.

Goods

Goods of Felons, Fugitives, or of Outlawed persons, are the goods of one that is attached or outlawed for Felony, or outlawed otherwise, or doth lie for Felony, which by Law are forfeited for Waifs, Strays, Dependants, Treasure-trove, Wreck. (See their several Titles.)

Goods of Felons, what.

Markets and Fairs are public meetings for Trading and Traffick. For which see Stat. 2. Ed. 3. 15. 5 Ed. 3. 1.

Warren is a Franchise, or privileged place of pleasures by grant of the King, or Prescription, for the preservation of those Beasts and Fowls which are Beasts and Fowls of Warreds, as Hares, Conies, Pheasants and Partridges. And this a man may have by grant of the King, or Prescription, and it may be in a mans own ground, or another mans. And if another do chase or kill any Beasts, or Fowl of a Warren, the Owner may have an Action of Trespass against him. And this may lie open, and need not be inclosed, as a Park must. See more in Parks and Forrests, which it seems is in a manner all one with this, Cap. upon Litt. 23. b. Plow. 430. See more in Forrests.

Warren, what.

Prescription.
Trespass.

It is a privilege that some Town or place have by the Kings grant, by which they have ability to hear and determine matters and causes amongst themselves, and to call their causes out of other Courts, if they be there questioned, or impleaded, by motion to the Court, and a request of Conscience, that the matter may be heard and determined by them in their own Court. Which must be at the beginning of the Suit, for if once the Court be possessed of the Suit, it is too late to demand Conscience for that Suit. And therefore such as have this Franchise, are used to have Attornies or Bailiffs at Westminster to demand Conscience (if any Suit come into the Court there) at the very beginning. And this a man must have the Kings grant for, for he cannot prescribe for it, but yet it seems one may prescribe, tenere placita in his own Court before his Bailiff in such a place. But Conscience of Pleas lieth always in demand, and is of Record. See Stat. 6 H. 6. ch. 26. Dyer 202. 9 H. 7. 11. For Leets, view of Frankpledge, and Court-Baron, see Courts.

Conscience of Pleas, what.

Prescription.
Tenere placita.
Court-Baron.

This is a Franchise that some Hundreds and places have, that the Sheriff cannot come there to do any Execution, or execute any Writ without wrong to the Lord of the Franchise: And therefore they use to send their Warrants to the Bailiffs of those Franchises to do it. See Stat. of Lincoln. 9 Ed. 2. But if the Bailiffs of those Franchises do not their office, then the Sheriff may do it by a Non omittas. 13 Ed. 1. 39. Lit. ch. Burgage. 40 Ass. pl. 37.

Retains Breviary, or Return of Writs, what.

Non omittas.

Burroughs are ancient Villages incorporate, from whence do come Burgesses of Parliament: And these have divers Franchises, Freedoms and Exemptions that other places have not; as to hold Pleas, and to do divers other things. Amongst which Burroughs, London, Chester, Canterbury, and divers others have divers and sundry Franchises annexed to their Corporations.

Places of Priviledge.
Burroughs.

The Principality in Wales are certain Shires in Wales which did belong unto the Kings eldest son, that have certain Franchises; of which read Stat. 38 H. 8. ch. 2. 27 H. 8. 26. Cromp. Jur. f. 137, 138. Plow. 123. 20 Jac. 1. 27 Eliz. 9. 3 Eliz. 23. 34 & 35 H. 8. 36.

Stat. 2.
Principality of Wales, what.

The Counties-Palatine are four, Palatines, (i.) Lancaster, Chester, Durham, and Ely, which have special exemption and jurisdiction: For they have jurisdiction of all causes that do arise within their own limits and Counties, and the Kings Writ doth not come there; and they have the same authority in a manner that the Palace of the Kings Royal Court hath. For which see the Statute of 37 H. 8. c. 5; whereby their power is somewhat abridged. 27 H. 8. 24. 33 H. 8. 39.

Counties Palatine, what.

The Cinque-Ports are five Haven-Towns, Romney, Hythe, Dover, Hastings, Sandwich; which because they lie (being Eastward towards France) upon the Narrow-Seas, and are dangerous for an Invasion, therefore they have had antiently, and so still have allowed to them divers Franchises and Priviledges which are upon Record and well known: As to be quit of Subsidies, to be freed and exempted from the jurisdiction of any other Courts, and to have their causes heard and determined among themselves; to have a special Governor, who is called Lord Warden de Cinque-Ports, and divers other things. St. 2 H. 5. 6. Mag. char. c. 9.

Cinque-Ports, what.

Tribute or Custom, Impost, what.

Tribute, Impost, Toll and Custom, seem to be one thing; a payment from private men to public use. But Custom properly is the profit which the King maketh of Wares transported; and Impost is the Tax received by the King for the Wares that are imported from other Nations in to us at any Haven here, Stat. 31 Ed. 3.

Toll or Tonnage, what.
Turn-Toll, what.

It seems there are three kinds of Toll, Tributes or Customs paid for passage. There is Turn-Toll, which is a sum of money that is to be paid by every one that doth buy any Beasts or Cattel in any Fair or Market; which the Buyer, and not the Seller (unless it be the custom of the place) must pay: And if the custom be that one must pay for it, though he do not sell it, then it must be paid accordingly; and if he refuse to pay in, they may distrain the Beasts or Cattel, unless the party be exempted from the payment of Toll, as one may be; (Of which see after Exemption from Toll.) And this one may claim and have by the Kings grant; or by Custom or Prescription. See Toll, Chap.

Toll-travers, what.
Toll-through, what.

Toll-travers is, where one doth claim to have something for all the Beasts that are driven over his ground.

Toll-through is, where any Town doth prescribe to have somewhat for every Beast that doth go through the Town; which it seems hath been given most commonly for the repairing of some Bridge, or some High-way, Stat. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. ch. 7.

Stallage, Pickage, what.

Stallage is money paid for pitching of Stalls in Markets or Fairs; and Pickage is money paid for breaking the ground to do it. This is a kind of Toll. See Toll in Chap.

Exemption of Toll, what.
Breve essendi quietum de tollonio, what.

Exemption of Toll is, where the King hath granted to any man to be free from paying Toll. In this case if any body shall distrain him, he may have an Action of the Case; or if any one require it, he may have a Writ to the Sheriff, De essendi quietum de Tollonio. And this one may have by the Kings grant; or Prescription.

Tonnage, what.

Tonnage is a Custom or Impost for Merchandise brought or carried in Tons and such like Vessels from or to other Nations after a certain Rate in every Ton, Stat. 14 Ed. 4. ch. 3.

Some also say, it is taken sometimes for a Duty due to the Mariners for unlading their Ship arrived in any Haven after the Rate of every Ton, St. 1 Jac. 33. 3 Car. 1. Act March 11. 1650. This is always set by Parliament.

Poundage, what.

Poundage is a Subsidy granted to the King of all manner of Merchandise of every Merchant-Denizen and Alien carried out of this Realm, or brought into the same by way of Merchandise, to the value of Twelve pence in every pound, 11 Ed. 6. ch. 13. Or (as others have it) a Duty due from Mariners for unlading their Ship arrived in any Haven after the Rate of every Ton, Stat. 1 Jac. 33. Act March 11. 1650.

2. What Franchises may be claimed by Prescription, and what not.

Any man may make title to, claim, and have Treasure-trove, Waifs, Strays, Wreck, Commons de Pleas, Courts of Leets, Hundreds, &c. Infangtheef, Outfangtheef, to have a Park, Warren, Royal Fishes, Fairs, Markets, Frankfoldage, the keeping of a Gaol, and the like, by usage and prescription; and these may be gained and kept without matter of Record. But so he cannot for such Franchises as cannot be seized before the cause be of Record; as the Goods and Chattels of Traitors and Felons, Outlawed persons, Fugitives, of those that be put in Exigents, Deodands, to make a Corporation, Conservators of the Peace, or a Coroner; and these cannot be claimed by Usage in the Country without matter of Record, as without Charrer, or the like; unless it be by a mean as incident to a County-Palatine, which one may have and claim by Prescription, Co. upon Lit. f. 114.

Sec. 3.
3. When, and what Franchises shall be forfeit, and how:
By Non-user, Abuser, Refuser.

Some Franchises may be forfeited by a Non-user, some by Refuser, and most by Abuser. Of which see somewhat in Forfeiture de Offices: As if a Clerk of the Market do not use his Office, he doth forfeit it, Co. 9. 99.

If one have a Fair or a Market one day, and he keep it another; as if his Grant or Prescription be for Wednesday, and he keep it Thursday, by this he doth forfeit it, Co. 9. 50. So if a Fair or Market be granted a man for one day in the week, and and he keep it two days, 22 Aff. 34. But in this last case he forfeits only that which he hath usurped.

If one keep a Fair or Market two days, and being questioned by the King, he claimeth both days by the Kings grant, and afterwards it is found he hath but one day; by this he doth forfeit both days, St. 3 Ed. 3. c. 15. 2 H. 7. 11.

If one have Assise of Bread and Beer, and Pillory-Tumbrel, and he do not use it, he forfeits his Franchise.

A Lord of a Franchise may lose it for default in pursuit or arresting of Felons, St. 3 Ed. 1. c. 9. See Crompt. Jur. in all. Where Franchises are incident of common right, there the Forfeiture of the one is the Forfeiture of the other; as the abuse of the Court of Pipowders, is the Forfeiture of the Fair. So where they are subordinate one to the other. But where they are contradistinct Species, or by several Titles or Patents, it is otherwise. Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Court.

In some cases for the Abuser of a Franchise a man shall be fined, but shall not forfeit his Franchise. So for usurping a Franchise a man shall be fined, or for usurping more then one ought to have: But if one take less Franchises then he hath right to, this is no Forfeiture, Bra. Franch. 37.

If one have a Fair or Market-day by Grant or Prescription granted to him Wednesday, and he keep it on that day, and another also, his Market or Fair on Wednesday is not forfeit, 22 Aff. 3. 4.

If one claim one day by Patent, and another by Prescription, and the last be found against him, this is no Forfeiture of that he hath by Grant. So that not using of a Fair or Market, it seems, is no Forfeiture, C. 9. 50. 2 H. 7. 1. c. 30.

A Market or Fair is not forfeit by taking of Toll where none is due, or taking more then is due, Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. by the Court: Or by keeping it longer then the time, Stat. 1 Ed. 3. 15.

An Abbot had a Franchise of Gaol-delivery, and he kept the Prisoners too long, and would not be at charge to make deliverance, it was adjudged a cause of Forfeiture, 8 H. 4. 18.

A man had a Prison, and he kept Prisoners for Felony after they were acquitted and had paid their Fees; it was adjudged a Forfeiture of the Franchise for ever, 20 Ed. 4. 6.

If a Franchise of taking Toll be abused, as if excessive Toll be taken, it is a Forfeiture, Westm. 1: 30. So if they take for Murage more then they ought to take by their Grant, (Idem.) If the Town be the Kings, he may seize the Franchise. So if it be another Lords, and be done by his consent. If it be a Bailiff or other Officer, he shall restore as much more as was taken, and suffer forty days Imprisonment, (Idem.)

No Subject shall have power to pardon Felonies or the Accessories, or any Outlawry for such offences; nor to make any Justices of Eyre, Assise, Peace, Gaol-delivery. But other Franchises a Subject may have, such as the goods of Felons, of Fugitives, of outlawed persons, Waifs, Estrays, Deodands, Treasure-trove, Wreck, Markets, Fairs, Leets, and the like. But some of these may be had by Prescription, some must be had by Patent from the Lord Protector. See Brownlow, 2 par. 219.

Ad quod damnum, is a Writ which ought to be sued before the King grant certain Liberties, as a Market, Fair, or the like, that may be prejudicial to others; and by this it may be enquired of. Terms of the Law.

It is a Writ lying, where a Sheriff doth return upon a Writ to him directed against a person dwelling in a Franchise; That he hath sent unto the Bailiff of the Franchise that hath the Return of Writs, and he hath made him no answer, or hath not served the Writ: Then the party may have this Writ to command the Sheriff to enter upon the Liberty, and to execute the Writ himself, which otherwise he could not do without subjecting himself to an Action of the Case. And withall the Bailiff of the Franchise is to be warned; and if he come not at the Return of the Writ, then all the Writs that go forth afterwards in that Suit, shall be with a Non omittas. 13 Ed. 1. 39. St. Lincoln, 9 Ed. 2. 2 Ed. 3. 5.

4. What Franchises a Subject may have, or not, and how.

Ad quod damnum, what, Non omittas, what.

Self. 4.
Quo Warranto,
what,

It is a Writ for the King, lying where one hath no title to a Franchise, as having never any, or having forfeited what he had, to recover it into his hands. For by this Writ the party that doth take the Franchise, is required to shew by what title he doth hold it; and if he do not appear, then the King may seize the Franchise more districtionis, by the Sheriff; and then the party hath a time by a Replevin to avoid that Seizure; and if he doth it not within the time, then he doth lose the Franchise for ever. And if it be found that he do use the Franchise without the Title, then the Judgment is, he shall be ousted of it. If it be found he hath abused it, then the Judgment shall be, that he hath forfeited it. And this is to be brought before the Justices of Eyre or of Assize; and therefore the allowance of a Franchise before them bindeth the King: Otherwise upon a Suit in the Common-Pleas. See Crompt. Jur. 144, 145. Bro. Quo Warranto, 5. 7.

When Franchises shall be said to be extinct, and how.

If the King grant any Privilege, Liberty or Franchise, which be in his own hands as parcel of the Flowers of his Crown; as the Goods and Chattels of Felons, Fugitives, or outlawed persons, Waifs, Estrays, Deodands, Wrecks, and the like: If these come again to the King, they are extinct, and the King hath them in right of his Crown; and if they were appendant before, the appendantie is now gone. Contra of Fairs, Markets, Hundreds, Leets, Parks, Warrens, and the like, be they appendant to Manors or otherwise in gross, they are not extinct by unity in the Kings hand, Co. 9. 25, 26. Dyer 44. Plow. 219: 15 Ed. 4. 7.

See more of these things in Prescription, Extinguishment, Grant, Toll, Forfeiture, Priviledges.

For Liberties and Franchises in general, these things are further to be known out of the old Statutes of Mag. charta, 1. 9. 37. St. de quo Warranto, 18 Ed. 1. and 30 Ed. 1. De tallagio non concedendo. 2. The Citie of London, and other antient Cities and places are to have and enjoy their antient Liberties and Priviledges.

3. The Clergie, and all others of every rank and order, are to enjoy their Liberties, and the King was not to impeach them in any sort by Quo Warranto, or otherwise.

4. Men that claimed Franchises, were to have shewed them, and had allowance of them before the Justices of Assize, or they were to be seised.

CHAP. XCIII.

Of Gard or Ward, Gift and Grant.

SECT. 1.
Gard or Ward.

His word Gard in French signifieth a Custody. And sometimes it is applied to them that attend upon the safety of the Lord Protector. Sometimes it is applied to them that have the Education of Children under age, or of an Idiot. And sometimes also it is taken for a Writ of Ward, of which there are three sorts; A Writ of Rights of Ward, Ejectment of Ward, and Ravishment of Ward. In the second signification also it is most commonly applied to the Wardship of such an Infant, whose Ancestor held his Land by the Tenure of Capite or Knights service; and by reason of that Tenure, his Child, be it male or female, must be in the custody of his Lord during its minority.

Gardein, what.

Gardein in Chivalry, what.

And hence it is, that he that hath the protection and education of such an Infant, is called a Gardein. For a Gardein is one that hath the wardship or keeping of any person, or that which is his, or both. And of Gardeins there have been divers kinds; as Gardein in Chivalry, which was one that had the wardship and custody of an Heir, an Infant, whose Ancestor died seised of Land held of the King in capite, or of a common person by Knights service. Both which kind of Wardships are taken away by an Order of the Lords and Commons in Parliament, 24 Febr. 1645. in these words:

It is this day Ordered by the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament, That the Court of Wards and Liveries, and all Wardships, Liveries, Primer-Seisins, and Ousterlemains, and all other charges incident or arising for or by reason of Wardships, Livery, Primer-Seisin, or Ousterlemain, be from this day taken away: And that all Tenures by Homage, and all Fines, Licences, Seisures, and Pardons for Alienation, and all other charges incident thereunto be taken away: And that all Tenures by Knights service either of the King or others, or by Knights service or Socage in Capite of the King, be turned into free and common Socage.

And therefore we shall not need to say any thing to them. There are other Gardeins that do yet continue; as Gardeins in Socage, Gardeins in Nurture, Gardeins in Nature. Some make more, and distinguish Gardeins into Gardeins by Common-Law; so were Gardeins in Chivalry: By Nature, as the Father to his eldest Son: By Socage and because of Nurture, as Father or Mother, without assignation: Or appointed by Will or by Custom, as Orphans in Cities. So that some Gardeins are made by the Law, and some by the Will of the Ancestor. See for these Divisions, Co. upon Lit. 76. 88. D. & S. 149. Co. 5. 126. 6. 71.

Ward, what.
Committee of a Ward, what.

He that had a Wardship by a Tenure in capite committed to him by the King, was called the Grantee of a Ward: And if it had been committed by the King, he was called a Committee of the Ward.

SECT. 2.

The Wardship by Tenures in capite and by Knights service being gone, we shall not stay upon them to shew the office and duty of the Gardeins; nor where such Heirs of Ancestors that do hold Lands by these Tenures shall be in Ward, or not; nor where there shall be a Wardship for a third part, upon the Statutes of 32. and 34 H. 8. Nor where the Heir shall be out of Ward, or not; or of Marriage, Forfeiture, or value of Marriage: But we shall pass it over, and say no more but this, That these Tenures had many Incidents annexed to them; as Wardship of Body, Marriage, Aid, Homage, Escuage, Primer-Seisin, and drew to them the body, lands, and disposal and profit of the marriage of the Infant, which was so much as the Lord tendered in marriage: And this the Heir at his full age was to pay the Lord, or the Lord was to keep the Land for it; or he might have had a Writ called à valore maritagii. And if the Heir had married himself during his Minority, being of years of consent, without the consent of his Guardian, he had forfeited to his Gardein the double value of his Marriage. See for all this, Co 6. 70. Merton, ch. 7. Dyer 255. 2 H. 7. 9. Co. 5. 127. Westm 1. 22. Co upon Lit. 76. 81, 82, 83. Co. 2. 93. 10. 83. 11. 24. 8. 371. and many other Books.

Marriage.
Valore maritagii, what.

Forfeiture of Marriage,
what.

A Gardein in Socage, is he that hath the Wardship or Custody of an Heir an Infant, whose Ancestor died seised of Land held of the King, or any common person by Socage-tenure, or in that nature, as by Petit-Serjeanty, Copy of Court-Roll, or the like. And as to this, these things are to be known.

Gardein in Socage, what.

1. This Wardship is by reason of Tenure also, and shall go to the next of kin unto whom the heritage by his death may not descend: As if Land descend on the part of the Father, then the next of kin on the part of the Mother shall have the Wardship, and so on the other side; and not such a Kinsman as may have or hope for any benefit by his death.

The nature of this Wardship, and the power and duty of this Gardein.

2. This Wardship doth differ from the Wardship of Heirs of Capite and Knights-service land. For, 1. The Gardein in Chivalry and by Knights-service had all to his own use, and was to hold it till the Heir, if he were a Son, were one and twenty years old. But this Gardein is to hold and take all the profits of the Land till the Heir be fourteen years old only, and then he must account for and pay all the profits to the Heir. And after fourteen years of age, the Ward or his Executors or Administrators may call the Guardian to an Account, by a special Action of Account given in the Case; for which see Accounts. 2. If the Gardein in Chivalry or by Knights-service had died during the minority of the Heir, the Executors or Administrators of the Gardein must have had it as a Chattel. But in this case, not the Executor or Administrator, but the next of kin to the Heir: And if it were a Woman Covert that had it, not her Husband, as in the former case, but the next of kin to whom the heritage may not descend, shall have it. 3. A Gardein in Chivalry or Knights-service might have sold or granted away his Wardship; but this Gardein in Socage cannot grant away this Wardship to another. And if the Wife be this Gardein, and she and her Husband let the Land, and the Husband die; the Wife may enter and avoid the Lease. 4. If the Gardein in capite or Knights-service had married the Heir within age, the Gardein should have had the benefit of it. But if Gardein in Socage marry his Ward within fourteen years of age, he must account to the Heir for the Marriage also, and pay so much as any man bona fide had offered, or would have given in Marriage.

Account.

Chattel.

5. But in this they both agree; that the Gardeins duty and office is to give the Heir education, and to preserve his Inheritance and the Writings of his Land, and not to make any waste or destruction upon the Land.

6. If an Ancestor be seised of Rent-charge, Rent-service, or Common, or such things which lie not in Tenure, and die, his Heir within fourteen years old; in this case the Heir may choose his Guardian. But if he be so tender of years as not able to choose, it were fit the next of kin to whom the heritage may not descend did dispose him and it, unless the Father by will otherwise appoint it. But if there be a Gardein in Socage for other Land, it were fit he were Gardein for all. But whoever shall receive these Rents, must be accountable to the Heir in an Action of Account for them. See for all these things, 28 Ed. 1. Stat. 1. Martb. c. 17. Co. upon Lit. 87. Lk. 1. c. 4. Plow. 196. Co. upon Lit. 87. 89. And the danger of such a Guardians betraying of his Trust in the marrying of his Ward, See Infant and Marriage.

7. Guardian in Nurture, is he that is made so by Will; which is where a man holdeth goods or lands not held in capite, Knights-service, or in Socage, and giveth them to his Child; and doth by his Will appoint a Guardian to the body of his Child till such a time: And this being confirmed by the Ordinary, was wont to be admitted by our Law. And if the Father did not appoint one till his age of fourteen years, then the Ordinary did appoint one.

See 3. Tutor or Gardein in Nurture what.

8. But now the Law will do the same without the Ordinary, that then it did with the Ordinary. At fourteen years old and after, the Infant may choose his own Guardian. Also the Father by his Will may appoint what Guardian he please for his goods or lands held in Socage; but for Copihold-lands, the Custom of the place must be observed. See for these things, Co. of Copihold, fess. 22. Nay

Gardein in Nature, what.

The Gardein in nature is the Father, who is to have the Wardship of his Son and Heir apparent so long as he liveth; for during the Fathers life, the body of such Son was not to be in Ward to any other body, but in special cases. See Plow. 295. 304. F.N.B. 90. 143. 33 H. 6. 55. See Infant.

Gard by cause of Gard, what.

This is where one hath the Wardship of a Minor, because he is Gardein to his Lord, being likewise in his Minority. Old N.B. 94.

Droit de Gard, what.

Right of Gard is a personal Action, or a Writ to recover the Body or Land of an Heir that should be in Ward to him, by reason of a Tenure in capite or Knights service. It is called also (as it seems) Droit de custodia terra & hereditatis, or de communis custodia. F.N.B. 139. Old N.B. 89. And if it be for the Body, this Writ lieth for a Guardian in Socage, Merton c. 6. Co. 9. 129.

Droit de custodia terra & hereditatis; or, de communis custodia.

This is a personal Action or a Writ lying for a Gardein in Chivalry or Socage, where he is put out of the Land, and not out of the Body, for his relief hereof. F.N.B. 141.

Ejection of a Gard, or Ejectione custodia what.

This is a Writ lying where the Body is taken away, and not the Land; and by this the Gardein will recover the Body, if he be not married; and if he be, he shall recover damages. Co. upon Lit. 89. F.N.B. 139.

Revisement del Gard, what.

This is where the Heir before his age, and before he hath satisfied, the Lord doth enter upon him and put him out, being Guardian in Chivalry or by Knights service. F.N.B. 197.

Intrusion del Gard, what.

Etate probanda, was a Writ of Office to enquire again of the full age of an Heir, being found to be within age by one Officer, when he is able to prove he is of full age. F.N.B. 157.

Disparagement, what.

This was taken for a wrong done by the Guardian in Chivalry to his Ward, by marrying him or her within age of consent to any unworthy person, and make for him or her: For by this means the Guardian might have lost his Ward and all the profits of his Wardship. Merton c. 6. 7. Co. on Lit. 80.

Señ. 4.

Livery was, where the Kings Tenant in capite is dead, and his Heir is of full age at the time of his death, or he hath been in Ward, and is now become of full age: in this case he had the possession delivered unto him by a Writ out of the Kings hands, which was called a Writ of Livery. And Primer-Seisin was the right the King had to the first possession of Lands and Tenements held of him in chief, whereof his Tenant died seised, until the Heir had performed the Service due for it. These Liveries and Primer-Seisins, and all charges incident and arising thereby being taken away by the same Parliament-Order, we pass them by.

Primer-Seisin, what.

Ouster le main, did signifie a Judgment given to him that tendered a Traverse, or sued a Monstrans de droit, or a Petition. For when it did appear upon the matter discussed, that the King had no right to the Wardship he seised, then Judgment was given in Chancery, that the Kings hands should be removed; and thereupon an Amoveas manum was awarded to the Exchequer, that the Heir should have his Land again. For after the death of the Kings Tenant, the course was to enquire by office, and by Inquest of Office the death and Tenure was found, and so the King was entitled to the Wardship. And this Office found, if it had been false, might have been avoided by a Traverse, Monstrans de Droit, Petition or Pleading. Of which you may read, Stamf. prer. 73. 42. Finches ley 324. Plow. 488. and in many other places. This also by the general Order aforesaid is taken away, and therefore we pass it over. So also Licence for Alienation, Esuage, Aid, Homage, Fealty, and the rest of the things incident to this Tenure is gone.

Ouster le main, or Amoveas manum, what.

Aid, Homage.

Mesne-profits or Rates, or Issues.

Mesne-Rates, Profits or Issues of Lands, was nothing else but the Profit of Land which the King was to have for a time, until he were satisfied some duties: As when the Heir of his Tenant in capite being of full age did die before tender of his Livery, the time of his death. And so in some cases he was to be answered from the time of the Title found; as upon an Alienation in Mortmain, from the time of the Alienation as it is found by Office; and upon Letters-Patents annulled for insufficiency, from the time of the Grant, as it is found by Office. See for this, 43 Ed. 3. 11. 11 H. 4. 5. 33 Ed. 1. de Escheatoribus. 28 Ed. 3. c. 4. Dyer 308.

Diem clausit extremum is a Writ that did lie where the Kings Tenant, that held of the Crown in Capite, or by Knights Service, or in Socage died, then this Writ was directed to the Escheator to enquire of what Estate he died seised, who was his next Heir, and his Age, and the certainty of the Land, the value, and of whom it was held, and who took the profits. And this Writ was to be sued out within a year after the death of the party, and could not be had after that time, but then there must be had the Writ called a Mandamus, which is of the same nature. And in case where the Ancestor had died the Kings Ward, there must have been sued out the Writ called a Devenerunt, which is of the same nature, and differeth in circumstance onely. But all these Writs are now useless, the Tenure in Capite being taken away.

Señ. 5.
Diem clausit extremum, what.

Mandamus, what.

Devenerunt, what.

Que plura, what.

Melius Inquirendum, what.
Datum est nobis intelligi, what.

Que plura was a Writ used onely where an Office was found by a former Writ, and some of the Land was left out of the Office, then this was given to supply it. So also was the Melius Inquirendum to supply a Defect in a former Office, found by virtue of another Writ. And the Datum est nobis intelligi, was a Writ that did lie where upon a former Office the Land was found to be held of another Lord, and not of the King. And there were Records to shew they were held of the King, that it might be again enquired of. But all these Writs are laid aside at this day.

Of a Gift.

THis word importing no more, then the transferring of the 'property of a thing from one to another, is of larger extent then a Feoffment, which is always applied to an immovable thing; for this is often applied to movable things also, as Trees, Cattle, Household-stuff, &c. The property whereof is, and may be altered as well by Gift, as by Sale or Grant. And in this sense, a Gift is sometimes by the Act of the Party, as when one man doth give a thing to another. And this is, or may be either by word or by writing: And sometimes it is by Act of Law, as when a Woman is married to a Husband, or one is made Executor to another; in these cases by the marriage onely, and taking of the Executorship, the Law gives all the Goods of the Woman to the Husband, and of the Testator to his Executor. So where one doth take my Goods as a Trespasser, and I recover damages for them upon a Sute in Law; in this case the Law doth give him the property of the Goods, because he hath paid for them. But this word Gift is sometimes taken more strictly, and applied to a conveyance or passing of an Estate of Lands or Tenements to another in Tail, wherein this word Dedi is most commonly used. And then he which doth so give the Land, is called the Donor, and he to whom it is given, the Donee. And this for the most part is by Deed, though it may be otherwise. And for these Deeds of Gift of immovable or movable things; see Deed and Grant in toto, wherein all the Learning touching this matter is involved. And so we pass to a Grant.

Gift, what.

Donor, Donee.

Of a Grant.

THis word taken largely, is where any thing is granted or passed from one to another: And in this sense it doth comprehend Feoffments, Bargains, and Sales, Gifts, Leases, Charges, and the like; for he that doth give, or sell, doth grant also. And thus it is sometimes in writing, or by Deed, and sometimes it is by word without writing. But the word being taken more strictly and properly, it is the Grant, Conveyance, or Gift by writing of such an Incorporeal thing as lieth in Grant, and not in Livery, and cannot be given or granted by word onely without Deed: Or it is the Grant of such persons as cannot pass any thing from them but by Deed, as the King, Bodies Corporate, &c. And this albeit it may be made by other words, yet it is most commonly made by this word [Grant] as being most proper to this purpose. Co. super Littl. 172. 9. Finches Ley 29.

Grant, what.

Know therefore that amongst Hereditaments, some are such as are said to lie in Livery, i. such as whereof Livery of Seisin may be made, as Manors, Houses, Lands, &c. And some are such as do not lie in Livery, i. whereof no Livery of Seisin can, nor need to be made, but they pass by the Delivery of the Deed, without Grantor Grantee.

The Kinds.

any more, and of this sort are Rents, Reversions, Services, Advowsons in gross, and the like; which things cannot pass from man to man without Deed or matter of record, which is of a higher nature than a deed.

And he that makes this grant is called the Grantor, and he to whom it is made is called the Grantee, Co. super Lit. 49.

It is taken here in the largest sense, as that which doth comprehend both. And so some grants are of the land or soile it self, and some are of some profit to be taken out of or from the soile, as Rent, Common, &c. And some are of goods and Chattels, and some are of other things, as Authorities, elections, &c. And they are made sometimes by matter of Record, and sometimes by Deed or writing in the country, and sometimes by word without either. Some grants also tend to charge the grantor with something he was not charged with before, and some to pass something out of him to the Grantee, and some tend to discharge the Grantee, of something wherewith he was charged or chargeable before, and whereof he is now hereby discharged.

3. Things necessarily requisite to every good grant.

Regularly these things are requisite in every good grant or gift. 1. That there be a Grantor, Donor, &c. and that he be a person able to grant, and not disabled by any legall or naturall impediment. 2. That there be a Grantee, Donee, &c. and that he be a person capable of the thing granted, and not disabled to receive it. 3. That there be a thing granted, and that the thing be such a thing as is grantable. 4. That it be granted in that order and manner that Law requireth; as where the thing is not grantable without Deed, that it be done by Deed. And if it be by Deed, that the Deed have apt words to describe and set forth the person of the Grantor, and Grantee, and thing granted, &c. and that all necessary circumstances, as sealing, and delivery, and livery of seisin, and attornment where it is needfull, be observed. 5. That there be an agreement to, and acceptance of the grant or thing granted by him to whom it is made, and for default in either of these particulars a grant may be void: In acquirendo rerum dominio, scilicet quod donationes non valent, licet sint incepte, nisi sint perfectae. But if grants be very ancient, and the things granted have been enjoyed according to the grant ever since the making of it; in this case the grant may be good, notwithstanding some legall defect in some of these particulars. Co. 11. 73. Plow. 555. Perk. sect. 1. Bro. Grant. 89.

4. What shall be said a good and sufficient grant, gift, or sale. Or not.
1. For the manner of it. And what may be granted without Deed Or not. And how. Rents, Services &c.

Corporations, as Dean and Chapter, Major and Communalty, and such like, regularly can neither grant Lands, Goods, or chattels, but it must be by Deed. But the Grantees of such persons, and all other common persons may grant or give any thing which doth lie in livery, as Manors, Houses, Lands, and such like things in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, for years, or at will, by word without Deed. And if a Lease be made of any such thing for life or years, with a remainder over in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life, it is good, albeit the same be done by word without any Deed in writing. Perk. sect. 64. 4 H. 7. 17. Plow. 150. 16 H. 7. 3. Litt. sect. 60.

Such things as are said to lie in Grant & not in Livery, generally cannot be granted or given, had or taken without Deed unless it be in some speciall cases. And therefore Rents and services, and such like things which are in gross, and not incident to some other thing, may not be granted without a Deed. And therefore if a Rent-Charge be granted unto me for years, I may not grant this Rent over without Deed. And if there be Lord and Tenant of errable Land by fealty, and the service of yielding the tenth sheaf of Corn before it be sowed; the Lord cannot grant this service for years without Deed. But if a Rent, or any service be parcell of, or incident to a manor or any other thing which is Grantable without Deed; in this case by the grant of the principall by which this thing may pass as belonging thereunto without any Deed. Also Rents or services may be granted upon a partition by one coparcenor to another without Deed. Brownl. 1 part 40. Co. super Lit. 49. Dyer. 139. Perk. sect. 61. 60. 63. Brown. Grant 59.

Reversion or Remainder.

A reversion cannot be granted in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years without Deed, unless it be in case where it is parcell of a Manor. But a reversion may be granted upon a partition by one coparcenor to another without any Deed. And the same Law is of a remainder. And therefore if one make a Lease for life or years to one, the Remainder in fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life, to another without deed, howsoever this be a good remainder in the first creation without deed, yet this remainder cannot be granted over without deed. Perk. Sess. 61. Dier. 174. Plow. 433.

Bro. Grant. 104.

A Parsonage or Rectory, albeit it consist of nothing but Tithes, and the like, besides the Church and Church-yard, and it hath no house nor glebe belonging to it, yet may be granted without deed in fee-simple, for life, or years: and then the Tithes and offerings will passe as incident. But the Tithes alone, or a portion of Tithes, oblations, mortuaries, or obventions are not grantable by themselves without deed. And therefore a lease paroll of Tithes, albeit it be but for years, is not good. And if the Parson agree with one of his Parishioners, that he shall have his own Tithes; this is not a good grant of the Tithes, neither may it be pleaded or used so; but perhaps by way of agreement a Parishioner may retain his Tithes. And if a Lessee for years of Tithes will grant it over to another at will only, it cannot be done without deed, as was held by Baron Denham, 2 Car. at Sarum Assises. And yet it is held that a Parson may grant his Tithes from year to year to him that is to pay them without any Deed, but this is by way of retainer. But this grant or agreement must be made to and with the party himself that is to pay the Tithe, and not with another: neither can this interest bee assigned or a stranger take advantage of it, as hath been agreed in the case of Hawks and Brasfield, Pasch. 3. Jac. B. R. See Brownl. 1 part. 98: 2 part. 11. 15 H. 7. 8. 16 H. 7. 3. 19 H. 8. 12. 21 H. 6. 43. All this was agreed 36 El. B. R. 21. Jac. B. Mich. 8. Jac. Dr. Longworths case.

Advowson,
Tithes &c.

By way of Agreement Tithes may pass for years without deed, but not by way of lease without a deed, but a lease for one year may be of Tithes without a deed.

An Advowson in grosse cannot be granted without deed; yea the grantee of the grantee of an Advowson is to shew both the deeds. But an Advowson is grantable upon a partition between coparceners without deed. And an Advowson incident to a manor, or peece of Land is grantable with the manor or land without any deed. The next avoidance to a Church is not grantable without deed. Plow. 150. 9 Ed. 4. 47. 11. Ed. 3. 38. 11 H. 4. 3. Dier. 29. 10. Co. 11.

Common of Pasture, of Estovers, turbary, Fishing, &c. cannot be granted in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, or years, unlesse it be in case of partition, or of appendancy as incident to some corporall thing without deed. And therefore if a man grant by word of mouth to me Common for twenty beasts in his manor; this is not good. Neither if it be granted to me by deed, may I grant this over to another without deed.

pasture &c.

But if a man have Common of Pasture appendant or appurtenant to his Land; in this case he may grant his Land with the Common appendant by word only without any deed. Franchises, as Fairs, Markets, Courts, Warrens, and the like, or the profits thereof are not grantable without deed. But it seems a Hundred is grantable without deed, for that is liberum tenementum. The profits of a Mill, County, Ferry, Corody, or the like, are not grantable without deed. Perk. Sess. 61. 15 H. 7. 8.

Franchises, and
things.

Things in action, as a right or title of action that doth only depend in action, and things of that nature, as rights and titles of entrie to any reall or personall thing are not grantable at all, but by way of release to the tenant of the land &c. by which means it may be extinguished: but this may not be neither without deed. And therefore if a man take my goods as a trespassor, or I deliver him my goods to keep, and after I will give these goods to him; I cannot do this without deed. Brownl. 1 part. 40 6 H. 7. 9. Dier. 91. 126. Dett. & S. 16.

on, & such like
things.

An election, Condition, covenant, assent, Licence, or liberty cannot be created and annexed to an estate of inheritance or freehold without deed. Dier. 281.

A privilege to hold Land for life without impeachment of waste, is not grantable without deed. Offices for the most part are not grantable without deed. And yet some inferior offices, as Stewardships, Bailiwicks, and the like are, for such officers a Lord of a Manor may retain by word without deed. Ca. 9. 9.

Offices.

Chattels.

Most Chattels reall and personall, may be given and granted without deed. And therefore if a man by word of mouth grant, give, or sell me his Lease for years, the Wardship of body and Land, or the Wardship of Land that he hath by reason of a Tenure by Knights service, or by grant from the King, or grant or sell me the trees standing upon his ground, the Corn growing upon his Land, his horse, sword, plate, or other household-stuffe; this is a good grant or gift. But the Wardship of the body of an heir onely, cannot be granted without deed. So a next presentation cannot be granted without deed. Park. Sess. 57. 60. Bro. Dant. i. Dier. 370. 5 H. 7. 35, 36. Plow. 150.

What by the same deed.

If one grant his reversion of land to one, and by the same deed granteth a rent out of the same land to another, and delivereth the deed to both of them at one time; this is good, and shall enure first as a grant of the rent to one, and then as a grant of the reversion to the other. Plow. 540.

If one convey Land to another, and the grantee by the same deed doth grant a rent or common to the grantor out of the same land conveyed; this is as good as if it were by another deed. Dier. 6.

By what words of grant.

Dedi & Concessi be the most apt words for all kind of grants, yet it may be by other words, and the grant is good as by those words. Co. super Litt.

The best way in Grants is to grant by words of present time in the present tense as well as in the preterperfect tense. But a grant by words of the preterperfect tense only, as by Dedi & Concessi only without words of the present tense is good. 35 H. 6. 11.

2. In respect of the person of the grantor &c. and the naming of him. And who may be a grantor. And how.

Touching this part two things are requisite.

1. That the grantor be a person able.

2. That if the Grant be by Deed, that he be sufficiently described and set forth either by his proper names, or else by some other matter of distinction. Note therefore that whosoever may be a feoffor, may be a grantor. And any natural, politique, or corporate body (not prohibited by Law, as Monke, Frier, Woman covert, infant, and such like) may be a grantor, donor &c. And the grants of such persons will be good. See Feoffment Numb. 4. Park. Sess. 3.

Alien.

An Alien may, and is able to grant or give any thing that he is capable of, to have or take by grant or gift.

Person strait or outlawed.

A person attainted of treason or felony may give or grant his land; and this is good against all others besides the King, and the Lord of whom his Land is held. And he may grant or give his goods to relieve himself in prison, and this will be good against all others, and the King and Lord also. A person outlawed in a personall Action may give or grant his goods or chattels, and the gift or grant will be good against all others but the King. Park. Sess. 26.

Woman covert.

The Queen may without the agreement of the King make grants, gifts &c. of her Lands or goods, but another woman that hath a husband cannot give, or grant her Lands or goods without her husbands consent, unless it be in some speciall cases:

And albeit she doe recite by the deed that she is sole and not covert, yet this will not help. And if the case be so that by agreement between her and her husband there be a certain portion of her husbands Lands or goods allotted unto her to dispose of, and manage at her pleasure, yet she alone without her husband can make no good grant or gift of any part of these Lands or goods. But if she grant any thing by fine, and the husband doe not avoid it during the coverture; this grant will binde her after his death. And if she make a gift or grant of her husbands goods, it is thought this is not good untill her husband agree to it. Co. super Litt. 3. Park. Sess. 8. 20.

An infant cannot make any gift or grant &c. that is good but in speciall cases, for if he maketh any grant or gift that taketh effect by the delivery of the deed onely, as if he grant a rent-charge out of his land, or make a feoffment with a letter of Attorney to give livery of seisin, or give or sell his horse, and the buyer or donee take him himselfe; these are void ab initio. And if the grant, or gift take effect by the delivery of his own hand, as if he make a feoffment and give livery of seisin himselfe, himselfe, or sell a horse and deliver him with his owne hands; this is voidable by the Infant himselfe, or others that shall have his right &c. But if an Infant grant any thing by Fine; this must be avoided during his minority, or else it cannot be avoided at all. 9 H. 7. 24. 26. H. 8. 2. Perk. Sess. 12, 13, 14, 19. 7 H. 4. 5: See cha. 2. Numb. 6.

All Grants that are made by Duesse, are voidable by the parties themselves that make it, or others that have their estates &c. But if it be done by Fine, it is good and unavoidable. Perk. Sess. 16. Duesse.

All Gifts, Grants, &c. made by deed in the Country by those that are de non sane memoria are good against themselves, but voidable by those that are their heires, executors, or have their estate. But if it be by Fine, it is good and unavoidable. Co. 123. 124. See cap. 2. Number 6. Non sane memoria.

A man that is borne dumbe, or dumbe and deafe, if he have understanding, may by delivery of the Deed and making of signes make a good Grant, Gift, &c. But a man that is borne deafe, dumbe and blind cannot. Perk. Sess. 25.

A Bastard may give or grant as well as any other man, after he hath gotten a name by reputation. Perk. Sess. 26. Bastard.

A Parson may grant any thing belonging to his Parsonage for no longer time then for his owne life, and therein likewise but during his residency, albeit he have the consent of the Patron and ordinary. See Lease. Parson.

Neither the head without the members of a Corporation, nor the members without the head, as Dean without the Chapter, or Chapter without the Dean, may give or grant any of the Lands belonging to their Corporation. Perk. Sess. 31, 32, 33. Corporation.

One executor or Administrator may give or sell any of the goods of the deceased, and this is good to bind all the rest. See Executors. Executors.

What Grants Ecclesiasticall persons may make of their Ecclesiasticall Lands, husbands of the Lands of their wives, and tenants in taile of their Lands intailed, See in Lease.

The name of the persons in Grants is set downe, only to distinguish persons and to make the person intended certain: and therefore howsoever it be best and most safe to describe the person by his true and proper name of Baptisme, and also by his Surname, and if it be a Corporation, by the true name whereby the Corporation is made; yet mistakes in this case unlesse they be very grosse, will not make void the grant. Mithaming.

Nihil facit error nominis, cum de corpore constat. And therefore if one that is a Bastard hath gotten a name by reputation in the place where he doth live, or another man hath gotten another name by common esteeme then his own right name, or is usually called by another name then his true name in the place where he lives, in these cases they may grant by this name, and the grant is good. And if a man be baptized by one name, and after be confirmed by another, some have said he may grant by either of these names. See Quere. And if John at Stile grant by the name of John at Stile, this grant is good. See de similibus Co. 6. 36. 37. Perk. Sess. 23, Co. super Litt. 3. Perk. Sess. 39. Co. super Litt. 3. And these grants are good, especially when there is some other addition to make it more certain, as when a Duke, Marquess, Earle, or Bishop, grant by their names of honour or dignity, and grant without any name, or with a false name of baptisme, as when the Duke of Suffolke by the name of the Duke of Suffolke, without any more words, or by the name of William Duke of Suffolke, when his name is John, or the Bishop of Norwich grant, &c. these are good grants, because there is but one such Duke, and one such Bishop within the kingdom. See grant. Perk. Sess. 42. So if a Dean and Chapter, Mayor and Community grant by the name of their Corporation without any addition of Christian or Surname, it is good. And especially then also are these grants good, when the true name doth appear in some other part of the deed. Perk. Sess. 40. As when John at Stile reciteth by his deed that his name is John at Stile, and by the same deed doth grant by the name of Thomas at Stile, Or Alice at Stile reciting by her deed that she is a feme covert, when in truth she is sole.

But if an ordinary man grant by his Surname only without any name of baptisme, or by his name of baptisme without any Sirname at all; in these and such like cases for the most part the grant will be void for incertainty, unless there be some other matter in the deed to help it, or some matter done ex post-Facto to supply it; for in some cases where the thing granted doth lie in livery, such a mistake or incertainty in the grant may be holpen by the livery of seisin upon the deed afterwards. And so also it is in the names of Corporations: for if the variance and mistake by omission or alteration be only in some small matter so as it is literall and verball only, the grant will not be hurt by it. But if the mistake or omission be in the substance of the name; the grant may be void by it. And therefore if Decanus & Capitulum ecclesie cathed. Sancte Trin. in Caerlil. grant by the name of Decanus ecclesie cathed. Sancte Trin. in Caerlil. & totum capitulum ecclesie pradiit. this is good: Et sic de similibus for if the sense doth still remaine either expressly or by necessary implication, and the description be such as doth import a sufficient and certaine demonstration of the true name of the Corporation according to the foundation thereof, it sufficeth. But if any of the substance or essence of the name be omitted, contra. And therefore if a Corporation incorporate by the name of Prapofiti & collegii regalis coll. beate Mariae de Eaton juxta Windsor, grant by the name of Prap. & sociorum Colleg. regalis de Eaton &c. leaving out Collegium beatae Mariae; this grant is void. 3 H.6. 26. Perk. Sess. 38: 42. Co. 6. 65, 10. 122. 11. 19. Dir. 150. Co. 10. 124.

Touching this part, three things are requisite. 1. That the grantee be a person capable. 2. That he be a person in being at the time of the grant made, and not disabled by any legal impediment to take by the grant. Co. super List. 2. 3. Perk. Sess. 43. See in feoffments. cap 9. Numb. 4.

2. That if the grant be by deed, he grantee be sufficiently named, or at the least set forth and distinguished by some circumstantiall matter, and that he be so named or described, as that he may be capable by that name whereby he is set forth.

3. That he himself and not a stranger doe take by the same grant. Note therefore that all naturall and politique or corporate bodies that are not disabled by law may be grantees. And all persons that may be grantors may be grantees: And some others that cannot grant or give, yet may take or receive. And a grant made to one, two, three, or twenty such persons is good. A Grant of land or rent in possession to the right heires of I. S. I. S. being then living is void, for there is nor can be any such person in rerum natura, for no man can be an heire to another that is living. But such a grant to one in remainder is good, if so be that I. S. die before the particular estate end and before the remainder happen. So if a grant be to him or her that shall be the first child of I. S. and he have no child at the time of the grant, this is void.

So if a grant be made to the wife or child of I. S. when there is none such, it is void.

As if a grant be to I. S. and to his first borne son, or to J. S. and her that shall be his wife, and he hath at the time of the grant neither wife nor son; in these cases the grant is void as to the wife and son, and J. S. shall have all by the grant. Co. 110. Perk. Sess. 32, 54. Co. 31.

An Alien may be a grantee; but if any thing be granted unto him whereof he is incapable, as any estate of lands in fee simple, for life, or years, he cannot hold it, but the King will have it from him. Co. super List.

A person attainted of treason or felony before or after attainder may be a grantee, but he cannot hold the thing granted; for if the King or Lord will he may have it from him. So also persons outlawed in personall actions may be grantees of lands, or goods, but the King will have the profits of the Lands and property of the goods. Co. super List. Perk. Sess. 48.

A woman covert may be a grantee; but her husband may by his disagreement avoid the grant. And yet if he doe not avoid it in his life time, the grant will be good: and he that will have the grant to be void, must shew that the husband did disagree to it. Perk. Sess. 43. Co. super List.

An infant may be a grantee, for this is presumed to be for his advantage:

3. In respect of the grantee & the naming of him. And who may be a grantee &c. And how.

Alien.

Pre rogative.
Persons attaint

Woman

Infant.

And

And yet at his full age he may agree to it and perfect it, or disagree to it and avoid it without any cause shewed. Perk. sect. 4. Co. super Lit. 2.

A man de non sane memorie may be a Grantee as well as any other man, and it seems these grants cannot be afterwards avoided. But such men may not be Grantees of Offices of trust and such like things. Co. Idem.

A Bastard, persons deformed having humane shape, leapers, and such like may be Grantees of Lands or Goods, &c. as other men may be. Co. Idem.

An Hermaphrodite may be a Grantee according to the most prevailing Sex. Co. Idem.

A Clerk convict, and a man imprisoned may be a Grantee as well as any other. And so also may a villaine of the King or of a common person, but he cannot retain the thing granted, for the King or Lord may have it from him if he will.

But Monkes, Friars, and such like persons cannot be Grantees, for they are utterly disabled. Co. super Lit. 3. Perk. sect. 48. 51:

Regularly it is requisite that the Grantee be named by his names of Baptisme and Sirname, and so it is most safe; and speciall heed must be taken to the name of Baptisme, for that a man cannot have two or more names of Baptisme as he may of Surnames. Co. super Lit. 3. And yet in some cases though the name be mistaken, the grant is good. As if a grant be to I. S. and Em his wife and her name is Emelin Bro. Nofm. 9. Or a grant is made to Afred Fitzjames by the name of Esbeldred Fitzjames Bro. Confirmation. 30. Or a grant be to Robert Earle of Penbrooke where his name is Henry; or to George Bishop of Norwich where his name is Iohn; Ca. 6. 65. 27 E. 3. 85. Or a grant be to a Mayor and Communalty, or a Deane and Chapter, and Mayor or Deane is not named by his proper name, Co. super Lit. 3. Or a grant be to I. S. wife of W. S. where she is sole; all these and such like grants are good, for in this case the rule doth hold, utile per inutile non vitiatur. Dyer 119. And if one be baptized by one name, and after confirmed by another; yet a grant to him by his first is good, Co. super Lit. 3. And so also some think of a grant to him by his second name. Sed Quare of this. Also when a Bastard hath gotten a name by reputation, a grant may be made to him by that name, and it is good.

If a grant be made to W. at Stile by the name of W. at Gappe; this is a good grant notwithstanding this mistake. 9 E. 4. 43. Fitz Grant 23.

But where a grant doth intend to describe the person of the Grantee by his proper name and doth omit or mistake his Christian name or surname; in this case for the most part the grant is void unless there be some speciall matter to help it, as in the cases before. And yet if the grant doe not intend to describe the Grantee by his known name, but by some other matter, there it may be good by a certain description of the person without either surname or name of Baptism. And therefore a grant to the wife of I. S. or primogenito filio, or to the second son, or to the youngest son, or Seniori puero, or omnibus filiis, or filiabus I. S. or omnibus liberis I. S. or omnibus existibus I. S. or to the right Heirs of I. S. or to the next of blood of I. S. in these cases grants made to these persons in these words are good, for the person is certainly enough described. And if a Lease be made to I. S. for life, the remainder to him that shall come first to Pauls such a day, or to him that I. S. shall name in three daies; if in these cases any one doe come to Pauls that day, or be named by I. S. within three daies, and the particular estate doth so long continue; this is a good grant of the remainder, Id. certum est quod certum reddi potest. But if a grant be made in these words, viz.

To foure of the parishioners of Dale; or Dea & ecclesia de D. or to two of the sons of I. S. and he hath many sons; or to I. S. or W. S. in the disjunctive; these and such like Grants as these are utterly void for uncertainty.

And if a gift or grant of goods be to the parishioners of Dale in these words; it seems this is good; but if a grant or gift of Land be made to them by these words, it seems this is void. And so also it is of a grant of goods to the Churchwardens of a parish, this is held to be good: but otherwise it is of a grant of Land to them. A bastard is capable by that name whereby he is usually called, and therefore a grant to him by that name is good. And a right heire, or one that shall be the first issue of I. S. that hath no child, is capable of a remainder by that name, but of Land in possession he is not capable by that name. And a bastard is the reputed Son of I. S. may take by a grant to I. S. and his issue. A Bishop may take by the name of a Bishop without any other name. But if a grant be made to the parishioners or inhabitants of Dale, or pro his hominibus de Dale, or to the commoners of such a wist, or to the Lord and his Tenants: bond and free; these are not good grants; for albeit these persons are capable, yet are they not capable by these names.

If a Grant be to Christs Church in Oxford, this is good to the Corporation albeit the name of the Corporation be Ecclesia Christi in Universitate Oxford. Co. Super Lit. 3. Perk. fell. 34. Bro. Grant 65. Done 17. Dyw 337. Perk. fell. 35. 56. Bro. Don. 31. Grant. 172. Done 50. Fitz. Done. Perk. fell. 53. 52.

If there be two Grantees and one of them doe take by the Deed it is sufficient, but if the grant be to one that is no party to the Deed and not to the Grantee himself; in this case albeit the Grantee and he to whom the grant is made be capable and never so well described by their names yet is the grant void; for no grant can be made but to him that is party to the Deed, except it be by way of remainder.

And therefore if a man make a lease for term of life, and after the Lessor grant to a stranger that the Tenant for life shall have the Land to him and his Heirs; this Grant is void. Et sic de similibus. And yet it seems in some cases if one of the grantees be party to the Deed that another Grantee that is no party to the Deed may take with him. And therefore the case was: Roberts gave the reversion of Lands which Aenes his Wife did hold for her life to Stephan de la More, Habendum post mortem illius Agnetis in liberum maritagium cum Johanna filia ejusdem Roberti; in this case it was adjudged that albeit Jane were not named before the Habendum, yet that she should take in Tail with her Husband: *Doff. & Sind. 94. 4. In respect of matter touching the thing granted, charged, &c.

1. In respect of the nature of the thing granted. And what things are grantable over or chargeable. Or not.

1. In respect of the nature of the thing it selfe.

Rents, Services,

Touthing this point these things are requisite.

1. That the thing whereof the grant is made be grantable, and that both in respect of the nature of the thing it self, and also of his estate that doth grant it, for in some cases albeit the thing for the quality of it be grantable, yet in respect of the estate and property that the owner hath in it, it is not grantable.

2. That if it be by Deed, it be sufficiently distinguished and named.

Amongst things that are grantable some are grantable de novo and in their first creation, but not transmissible nor assignable afterwards. And some are grantable at first in their original creation, and assignable over afterwards from man to man in infinitum.

All things that may be granted by Fine and whereof a fine may be levied, may be granted over from man to man. See Fine Numb. 6. part. 3. See in exposition of the Terms of Grants Supra. cap. 5 Numb. 15. Bro. Done 10.

All the things that are before observed to be grantable by or without Deed, are grantable over from man to man. And therefore all corporal and immovable things that lie in livery, as Manors, Messuages, Cottages, Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Woods and the like are grantable in Fee-simple, for life, or years as first and assignable over again at the pleasure of the Grantee. Also trees and Emblements are grantable. And a man may grant the vesture or herbage, i. the grass of his ground and not the ground it self. And a man that is seised in Fee of a house may give or sell the timber, stone, &c. of the house, and the Donee or Grantee may take it after the death of the Donor. Also all incorporeall things that lie in Grant, as Rents, services and the like, are grantable over in Fee-simple, for life, or years, and therefore Rents or Services reserved upon any estate and Rents granted out of Lands are grantable over in infinitum. And if a man have a Rent reserved on a particular estate, he may grant over partcell of it. But a Rent or Service suspended cannot be granted. Neither can a man grant a Rent issuing out of a Rent. If a Rent be granted to me, I may grant it over to a stranger before I be seised of it; and this grant is void.

But

But an Annuity it seemes is not grantable over after the first creation, of it. And yet if an Annuity be granted to I. S. and his assignes pro consilio; it seemes this Annuity is grantable over. Advowsons are grantable in fee-simple, for life, or years, from man to man in infinitum. Also the presentation to a Church before the Church is void is grantable; but when the Church is void, that Turne is not grantable, for it is then in the nature of a thing in Action. Also Rectories, and tithes, and portions of tithes, and pensions are grantable from man to man in infinitum. Stat. 34 H. 8. cap. 7. Perk. sect. 90.

Reversions and Remainders are grantable from man to man in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life or years. And if I have a tenant for life of three houses; I may grant the reversion of two of them. And if I have the reversion of three houses and four acres of land; I may grant the reversion of two houses and of two acres of land. And if tenant in taile be of an acre of land the remainder to his right heires, he may grant over this remainder by it self; and yet it is such a thing as the tenant in taile himself may bar by a common recovery. But if a grant be of land to I. S. for years the remainder to the right heires I. D. and I. D. is living; this remainder is not grantable so long as I. D. doth live. Perk. sect. 73. 88. 87.

Commons, of pasture, of turbary of fishing, of estovers, are grantable in fee, for life or years, from man to man in infinitum. And yet if a common in gross and without number be granted to a man and his heires; it seemes this is not grantable over to another man. But if common for a certain number of beasts be so granted, it seemes the law is otherwise, and that this is grantable over in case where the first grant is to the grantee only, and not the grantee and his assignes. See Brownl. 1 part 32. 42. 43. 2 part. 226. 227. Perk. sect. 103. Per 2 Judges against one Hil. 16; Jac. B. R.

Offices are grantable at first; but the great Judiciall Offices of the Kingdome, as the Offices of the Lord Keeper, Chief Justices, or chiefe Baron, or of other of the Justices or Barons, and such like, are not grantable over to others, neither may they be Executed by deputies. But the Sheriffes office albeit it be not grantable over, yet may it be executed by deputy. Perk. sect. 101. The reversion of an office is not grantable by a Subject as it is by the King; yet a Subject may grant an office Habendum after the death of the present officer; and this is good. Per Lord Keeper & a Chief Just. M. 5, Car. in cancellaria, Co. super Litt. 233. Perk. sect. 101. The inferior offices also that are offices of trust, especially if they concern the person of the grantor, howsoever they are grantable at first, yet are they not grantable over by the officer to any other, unlesse they be granted to them and their assignes; and of this sort are the offices of Steward, Bailife, Receiver, Sewer, Chamberlaine, Carver, and the like: neither may these be executed by deputy, but where the grant is so.

Licences, and authorities are grantable at first for the lives of the parties, or for years. But the grantees of them cannot assigne them over. And therefore if power be given to me to make an award or livery of seisin, I may not grant over this power to another. And if licence be granted me to walke in another mans garden, or to goe through another mans ground; I may not give or grant this to another. 11 B. 7. 25. 13 H. 7. 13.

A bare possibility of an interest which is incertaine, is not grantable. And therefore if one have a terme of years in land, and by his will devise it to I. S. for his life; and afterwards to me for the residue of the years; or devise it to I. S. if he live so long as the terme shall last; and if he die before the Terme end, the remainder to me; in these cases so long as I. S. doth live, I cannot grant over this possibility. So if a lease be made to me and my wife for life, the remainder to the survivor of us; I may not grant this remainder over to another man. But such a possibility being coupled with some present interest is grantable over. And therefore if A. have four houses in execution upon a statute; and by course of time it will endure thirtie years; and after two of the houses are evicted by Elegit for fifteen years; in this case he that hath this execution upon the statute may assigne over his interest in these two houses; for after the execution by the Elegit is satisfied, A. shall have have the two houses againe untill he be satisfied. Co. 4. 66. 5. m. Dir. 244. C. 10. 51.

Incidents.

The Lord cannot grant the wardship of the heire of his tenant whiles the tenant is living. Perk. Sect. 10. Those things that are inseparably incident to others are not grantable without the thing to which they are so incident and belonging. And therefore a Court Baron which is evermore incident to a Manor is not grantable without the manor it self: common appendant to land is not grantable without the land it self to which it doth belong: and common of estovers appendant to a house is not grantable without the house it self to which it doth belong. 1 E. 4. 10. Perk. Sect. 104. 5 H. 7. 7.

Suspended things.

A rent, service, or other thing whiles it is wholly in suspense, is not grantable. And therefore if the Lord disseise the tenant, or the tenant enfeoffe the Lord upon condition the Lord cannot grant over the Seigniorie during this suspension. But if one have a rent in fee out of my land, and he purchase the same land for life or years; in this case it seemes the rent is grantable, even whiles the estate of the land doth continue. So if the tenant make a lease for years or life of the tenancy to the Lord; in this case the Lord may grant the Seigniorie notwithstanding. And yet if the tenant make a lease to another man for life, and the Lord grant the Seigniorie to this tenant for life in fee; in this case it seemes the grantee of the Seigniorie cannot grant it over, because it was never in esse. 16 H. 7. 4. Co. super Litt. 314. Bro. Grant. 173. Perk. Sect. 88. 89.

Franchises.

Franchises, as views of Frank pledge, Perquisites of Courts, Leets, Conuance of Pleas, Paires, Markets, goods of felons, waifes, estrayes, Hundreds, Ferries, or Passages, Warrens, and the like, are grantable over from man to man in fee, for life or years, in infinitum.

Things in action.

Things in action, and things of that nature, as causes of suit, rights and titles of entry are not grantable over to strangers but in special cases, nor in judgment assignable. Brownl. 1. part. 33. And therefore if a man have disseised me of my land or taken away my goods; I may not grant over this land or these goods untill I have seisin of them againe. Neither can I grant the Suit which the law doth give to me for my reliefe in the cases to another man. So if I make a feoffment to another man on condition that if I doe such a thing I shall have the land againe; in this case I may not before or after the time of performance of the condition, grant over the condition to another. But all these things I may release to the parties themselves, for it is a maxime in law, that every right title, or interest in presenti or in future by the joint act of all them that may claime any such right, title or interest, may be barred or extinguished: Co. 5. 24. 16. 48. Co. super Lin. 214. Dir. 244. Perk. Sect. 86. 87. 85. Bro. Dom. 37. 84. 48. C. 6. 50. And in some cases a grantee of a reversion may take advantage of a condition annexed to an estate for life or years. If a man owe me money on an obligation, or the like, I cannot grant this debt to another: but I may grant a letter of attorney to another man to sue for it and receive it; or I may grant the writing it self to another, and he may cancell it or give it to the obligor. See Condition Co. super 231. Perk. Sect. 86. A presentation to a Church after the Church is become void is not grantable, for it is in the nature of a thing in action. Dir. 283. And if a man take my goods from me, or from another man in whose hands they are, or I buy goods of another man and suffer them in his possession and a stranger taketh them from him; it seemes in these cases I may give the goods to the trespassor, because the property of them is still in me. Perk. Sect. 92. Fitz. Dene. 3. 7.

Personall things.

Trosts and confidences which are personall things for the most part, are not grantable over to others. And hence it is also that offices of trust and confidence are not grantable over but in some special cases where they are granted to a man and his assigns or where they are granted to a man and his heirs, Perk. 99. Pl. 379. And hence it is also that a Wardship by reason of a crime in socage, which by the law is given to the next of kin is not grantable over to any other person by the Guardian in Socage. Plow. 393.

Entire things.

Some things are so entire, that they cannot be severed by grant. And therefore if a man hold three acres of land of me by twelve pence rent, and I grant the services of the third Acre; this is void; and he shall have all or none, for I cannot sever the tenure: But if a man hold land of me by homage, fealty, escuage, and a certain rent in this case I may grant the rent & keep the seigniorie. Fitz. Grant. 19. 76

A villaine is grantable for life, or years; and if the villaine during the estate of the grantee purchase land in fee, the grantee shall have it for ever as a Perquisite, albeit he have but an estate for life in the villaine it selfe. Park. Sess. 94.

All chartrels real and personall regularly are grantable from man to man in infinitum, as leases for years be they present or future, wardships of tenants in Capite, or by Knights service, trees, Oxen, horses, plate, household stuffe, and the like. Also trees, grasse and corne growing and standing upon the ground, fruit upon the trees, wooll upon the sheeps back is grantable. Dier. 38. Plow. 143. 147. Park. Sess. 91. Dier. 301. Park. Sess. 90.

If a man sell me ten loads of wood in his wood to be taken by his assignment; or sell me three acres of wood towards the north side of the wood; by this grant in these words, I have such an interest as is grantable over. If I make a lease by deed of a house to another, and therein it is agreed between us, that if the rent be not paid me by such a time I shall enter into the house and take and sell the goods there as mine own to pay the rent; it seemes this is a good grant of the goods and that I may doe according to the agreement. And if one that doth hold land of the grant to me by deed indented that I shall distrain for my service in all his land, this is a good grant. Co. 3. 24. Fitz. Bar. 280.

A man may give or grant money, As if I deliver one monee on condition that if he assure me of such land he shall have it, otherwise that he shall redeliver it to me again; in this case if he make the assurance he shall have the monee, If not, I may have an accompt for it. Fitz. Grant. 61. Fitz. Dene. 11.

Such things as are fera natura, as Conies, Hares, Deere, and such like, are not grantable at all. Bro. Dene. 24.

A Parson of a church may grant his tithes for years, and yet they are not in him. Park. Sess. 90.

A man may give or grant his Deeds, & the parchment, paper and wax to another at his pleasure, and the Grantee may keep or cancel them. And therefore if a man have an obligation; he may give or grant it away and so sever the Debt and it. So Tenant in Fee-simple may give or grant away the Deeds of his Land, and the Executor in the first case, and the heir in the last case hath no remedy. But a Tenant in Tail of Land cannot give or grant any of the Deeds belonging to the Land inailed no more then the land it selfe. One may give or grant Apparell, and it is said if one make apparell for another, and put it upon him to use and wear; this is a gift or grant of the apparell it self. Co. super Litt. 23. 2. Trin. 38. El. B. R. 25 H. 8. 5. 1 H. 7. Dever case. 1 H. 4. 31. Fitz. Bar. 179.

If one grant to another all the wooll of his sheep for seven years; this is a good grant. Park. Sess. 90.

If one being a Parson give to another all the wooll he shall have for tithe the next year; this is a good grant. Fitz. Grant. 40.

If one grant to another his horse or his cow in the disjunctive; this is a good grant notwithstanding this incertainty, and the donee shall have election, and by that make the grant good. See Certainty. Bro. Dene. 19.

Any estate that a man hath in fee-simple, fee-tail, for life, or years in any Lands &c. or any rent, or profit appender out of the same is grantable from man to man in infinitum. And he that hath any such estate of any lands may charge it with any rent or profit to be taken out of it as long as the estate of the land doth last. But an estate at will is not grantable over. And if an estate be made to a man and his heires without the word Assignes, yet he may assigne it at his pleasure, for Assignes is included within Heires.

An Interesse termini, i. a lease for years to commence in future is grantable before the terme doth begin, whether it be a lease of the land it self, or any rent or other profit out of it. 23 E. 4. 37. Park. Sess. 91.

The interest or estate that a man hath by extent, is assignable from man to man at pleasure. Co. 4. 64.

The reversion upon an estate tail is grantable. And yet the tenant in tail in possession session by the suffering of a common recovery may bar him in reversion of any fruit of it. Co. 65, Gov. Cursons case Co. 1. Almonds case.

If an estate be made of land upon condition, as if A. make a feoffment to B. on condition that if A. pay twenty pound he shall have the land againe: in this case A. and B. together may at any time before the performance of the condition joine together and grant this land, or charge it with any rent &c. and this will be good, for it is a maxime in law, Fee-simple land may be charged one way or other. And in this case B. may grant over his estate as freely but it will be subject to the condition. And if B. grant a rent out of the land to a stranger, and after the condition is performed and the feoffor enter; in this case he shall avoid the rent. But in this case A. cannot grant, for he hath nothing but a possibility. If one enfeoffe divers to the use of his son and heirs upon condition and before the time of performance of the condition the father and son joine to grant or charge the land, this is a good grant or charge. Co. 1. 147. 10. 48, 49. Lit. chap. Confirmation. Co. 1. 147.

If the tenant in tail and he that is next in remainder in fee joine in the grant of a rent charge in fee, and after the tenant in tail doth die without issue; in this case this is a good grant and charge against him in remainder. And if A. doth bargain and sell land to B. by indenture and before enrolment they doe joine to grant a rent charge to C. by deed; in this case this is a good charge and grant whether there be any enrolment or not. And so if donor and donee in tail grant a rent charge out of the land, and then the donee die without issue; in this case the grant is good to bind the donor. Co. super Litt. 45. Co. 10. 48. 49.

If Land be granted to two men & to the Heirs of their two bodies begotten in this case albeit they have several inheritances after their death, yet neither of them can grant away his estate after his life, for they are divided only in supposition of law. Co. super Litt. 182.

A lease is made to the Father during his life and the lives of 2. of his sons, in this case, this lease shall continue after the death of the father, and the father may assigne away all the estate. Goldb. 387.

If one grant me a hundred Coards of wood to be taken by his Assignement, it seems before Assignement I may not grant away this wood over to another. Goldb. 184. And if the grantee dye before Assignement, the grant is void, and his executor shall not have it.

One Coparcener of a feignory may grant his part to a stranger.

If two Jointenants be of a plow land, and one of them doth grant to a stranger common of pasture for beasts without number to be taken in the same land, this is void. Perk. Sess. 73. Perk. Sess. 103.

Jointenants. If two Jointenants be of a reversion, and one of them grant the whol, this is void for a moiety. If a man grant, or charge that which is none of his, and that wherein he hath no property, it being in the grantee or a stranger; the grant is void. And therefore if a man grant a rent charge out of the Manor of Dale, or grant a reversion of land, and in truth the grantor hath nothing in the manor of Dale, or in the land, in this case the grant is void. And albeit the grantor doe afterward purchase the Manor, or the land, yet this will not make the grant good. But if the grant be by Fine, or by indenture, there in some cases it shall be good by way of Estoppel. And in this case albeit the party recite that it is his owne, yet this will not mend the cases.

Estoppel.

And therefore if a man recite that he hath a rent of ten pound a year, and then grant five pound a yeare parcell of it; in this case if he have no such rent, the grant is void. Perk. Sess. 80. Perk. Sess. 65. Dier. 11. 33.

Servant.

A Shepherd, Bailif, or Parker cannot give or grant away the goods of his master without authority. And yet it seemes the servant of a Taverner or Mercer may give or grant his Masters Wines or Wares. And if a wife give or grant the goods of her husband; this is a good gift or grant untill the husband disagree to it, and by his agreement it is made good for ever. Bra. Dona. 36.4.

Husband and Wife.

If a man have a lease for years of land, and make a lease for life of it or charge it for longer time than the lease for years doth last; in this the grant is good good for so long as the Lease for years doth last, and no longer. But if he make a Lease for life and give livery of seisin, he doth forfeit his estate. Plow. 525.

Regularly a man cannot grant, or charge that which is not in his own possession albeit he have a right to it. And therefore if a man be disseised of his Land, and before he hath entred into or recovered the land he doth grant or give the land or his right to the Land to a stranger, or grant a rent charge out of the Land to a stranger; in these cases the grants are not good. And yet such grants by fine may be good by way of Estoppel. And by a release also the right may be extinct. But if one that hath a reversion upon an estate for life, and he grant a rent issuing out of this Land; in this case the grant is good, and the charge shall fasten upon the Land after the estate of the Tenant for life is ended. And if a man grant Common, or Rent, notwithstanding that a stranger take the Rent or use the Common at the time of the Grant, yet this grant is good, for a man cannot be out of possession of these things but at his pleasure. And if a Lease for years be made to me, I may grant away my estate before my entry. And if the Lease be to begin at a day to come; I may assign over my interest before the day come, for in this case the interest is in me from the time of making of the lease. Also I may give or sell my goods that I have not in possession, and therefore if a man take my goods out of mine or another mans possession; I may afterward give or grant these goods to him or another man, and this grant or gift is good. *Perk. Sess. 92. 98. Co. super Litt. 45. Hil. 18. Jac. B. R. per. 2 Justices. Perk. Sess. 92. 93. Fitz. Domes 3. Bro. Doms 13. Dyer 90. 30. Co. 4. 62. 63. Dyer 305. 20 H. 6. 21. Perk. Sess. 59. E. Koppel.

A Lessor cannot give or grant the trees growing on the ground of his Lessee for life or years without the licence of the Lessor, except they be first cut down by the Lessee or some other, for then he may. And if there be lessee for life, and the Lessor give the trees growing on the ground, and after the Lessee for life dieth; in this case the Donee cannot take them, for that at the time of the gift a property of them was in the Lessee. But if a Tenant in Fee-simple give or grant the houses standing, or trees growing on the ground he hath in his possession; in this case the Grantee or Donee may take them after the death of the grantor, and that albeit they be not cut or taken down before his death. And yet if the Tenant in Tail give or grant the trees grown upon his intailed Land, and the Donor die before the trees be cut; in this case the Donee or Grantee cannot cut them afterwards. Howbeit if such a Tenant in Tail give or grant his emblements of Corn growing on the ground, the Donee may cut and take them after the death of the Tenant in Tail. And if the Tenant in Tail give or grant his trees, and die before they be cut, and afterwards before the issue in Tail enter into the Land the Donee or Grantee cut them and take them away, in this case the issue in Tail can bring no action of trespass against the Donee or Grantee for the trees. But perhaps if the trees be not removed off the ground, he may take them.

Emblements.

If two Coparceners be of an advowson, and the one doth present, and then he doth grant the next presentation; this is a good grant: but by this grant doth not pass the next he hath to grant, for his companion must have the next. So if one be seised in Fee of an advowson, and he hath a wife, and he grant the third presentation; this is a good grant: but it shall be taken for the third: he may grant what is the fourth, for the wife is to have the third for her dower, Dyer 35. 15 H. 7.

Presentation.

If a man have granted a thing once, he cannot afterwards grant it again: And therefore if a man give or grant me a horse first by word of mouth, & after grant him to me by Deed; this second grant is void, and therefore if there be any fault in this grant in writing, it is not materiall. And if a man grant to me common of pasture without number in his ground, and after make the like grant to another; this second grant is void as to me, albeit it be good against the Grantor. And if one grant the next presentation to a Church after the death of the present Incumbent, and after grant the same to another; or make a Lease of Land to one for ten years, and after make a Lease of the same Land to another for the same ten years; or give a horse to one, and after give the same horse to another; in all these cases the second grant is void. But if the first grant or gift be only of part of the thing granted afterwards,

3. In respect of a former grant of the same thing.

or of part of the time onely, the second grant will be good for the overplus. And therefore if one be seised of a manor and demise ten acres of the demesne to ten years, and after demise the whole Manor to another for twenty years, this is a good grant for the overplus of the Manor besides the ten acres, presently, and for the whole Manor for the last ten years.

So if the second grant be to begin after the first is determined; it is good. And if the second be such as may be satisfied and not impeach the former, both shall stand good. And therefore if one that hath an Advowson grant the next presentation to one, and after he doth grant the next Presentation to another, and doth not say [after the death of the Incumbent;] in this case the second grant is good, and the Grantee thereby shall have the second avoidance after the death of the present Incumbent. Perk. selt. Dyer 35. 378. Litt. Bro. selt. 298. Perk. selt. 101.

4. In respect of naming or description of the thing granted. Misnaming or Misrecital.

By the grant of an acre of Land or of any other thing by the name whereby it is called the reversion of that thing, if the grantor have no more but a reversion, will pass, and this mistake will not hurt. But it is not so à converso. And yet some have said, if one grant a thing in possession, by the name of the reversion of the thing, this is good to pass the possession. Quod non est lex. For if one make a lease for years, and before the Lessee enter, the Lessor grant the Land by the name of the reversion or the Land, this grant is void. If one make a Lease for life of the Demesne of a Manor rendring Rent, and after he doth grant the Manor by the name of the Manor, this is a good grant for the reversion of the Demesne as well as for the residue of the Manor. But if one grant common by the name of the reversion of the common, it seems this is not good. And yet if one have common and grant it for life, and during that estate he doth grant the Common by the name of totam illam Communiam suam, &c. some doe hold this grant to be good, See Bro. selt. 1. part 20. 42. 84. 184. Co. 4. 121. Perk. selt. 114. 116. Co. 10. 106. 107. 11. 47. Plow. 190. Co. super Litt. 46. See also Co. 2 in Lanes Case, which doth seem to warrant this opinion also. Dyer. the grant is good in a common persons case. Bro. Grant.

Any thing may be granted by the name whereby it is and hath been usually called of latter times within nine or ten years or thereabouts, albeit it be an improper name, and not the ancient name of the thing, but a name newly gotten. And so a Manor may pass by the name of a messuage or Farm, or a Farme or Manor by the name of a messuage if it be so usually called & reputed. So the great books in London called Excester and Dorset houses may be granted by those names. And if a man grant that which in deed is a pasture ground, by the name of a wood; Or grant that which in deed is a wood by the name of a pasture ground, & the things are called by those names; these are good grants of those things. And if one grant by the name of a great field that which in deed is but a little close, but it is usually called by the name of a great field, this is a good grant of this thing. So if one grant by the name of a plow land that which in truth is but an acre of Land, or grant by the name of a Manor that which is but a plow Land; these grants are good. And so as it seems, it is à converso. But if a man grant a house, or a messuage; by this grant, an acre of Land will not pass. Co. 6. 65. 45 E. 3. 6. Bro. grant. 7. Perk. selt. 116. 14 H. 8. 1. 27 H. 6. 1.

If a man make a Lease of one house to another for years, and the Lessee divide it and make two houses of it, and after the Lessor doth grant the reversion of it by the name of one house; this is a good grant to pass it. And if one Lease three houses to three severall men at severall times, and they divide them into twenty nine Tenements and households in them all; and the first Lessor doth grant them by the name of three messuages; this is a good grant to pass them all. But if he grant by the name of fifteen messuages or Tenements only; it seems this is good for no more but for fifteen of the subdivided Tenements.

If one recite that he hath a Rent charge issuing out of black acre and white acre, and then grant the same Rent, and in truth it doth issue out of black acre only; or if he do recite that it doth issue out of one acre when in truth it doth issue out out of both : in both, in these cases the grant is good notwithstanding these mistakes, Perk. sect. 72:

If one be Patron of the Church of S. Peter and Paul in D. and he grant the next Presentation of the Church of S. Peter, or of the Church of S. Paul : these are void grants to pass the Presentation, Bro. Grant 12.

If one grant a Rent out of white acre by the name of a Rent out of black acre, this grant is void as to charge white acre. Perk. sect. 79. Per Ch. Justice Huston & Telverton, Co. B. Mic. 3. Car. in the case of Edward Crew.

If one have a Manor called Steeple Lavington, and he grant it by the name of west Lavington alias Steeple Lavington by the [alias] especially if the grant say [lying in Lavington] and the Manor of Steeple Lavington doth lie in that parish, and the grantor hath no other Land there.

If one grant all his Lands which he hath in D. in this manner, [All my Lands in D. which I had of the grant of I. S.] this is a good grant of all his Lands in D. albeit he had them not of the grant of I. S. but of the grant of another. But if the words be [all my Lands which I had by the grant of I. S. in D.] in this case the grant is not good to carry any other Lands in D. but such as he had of the grant of I. S. So if one grant in this manner [all my Manor of Sale in Dale which I had by descent] and in truth he had it not by descent but by purchase; this is a good grant of the manor. So if one grant all his Lands in Dale, and say no more; this is a good grant to pass all his Lands there.

But if one grant in this manner, [all my Lands in Dale which I had by descent from my father,] and in truth I had them not by descent but by purchase, this grant is void and will not pass those Lands. So if I grant in this manner [all my Lands that I had by the attainder of I. S.] and in truth I had no Land by that means, this grant is void. And if I grant after this manner [all my Lands in B. in the tenure of D. which I had of the gift of I. S.] and in truth it doth lie in B. and is in the Tenure of D. but it was not purchased of I. S.; this is a good grant to pass the Land, Mic. 2 fac. in Brownes case agreed. Plow. 169. 395. And so was the opinion of Ch. Justice Popham 2 fac. B. R. Dyer. 87. Mic. 2 fac. Adjudge Brownes case.

If a parish lie in two Counties, viz. Berk. and Wilt., and one grant in this manner [all his close called Callis in the parish of Hurst in the county of Berk.] and in truth the close doth lie in the county of Wilt.; this is a good grant to pass the close.

But if one grant in this manner [All his houses in the parish of S. Batolphs extra Aldgate late in the tenure of R.] where in truth he hath no houses there, but he hath some houses in S. Batolphs extra Aldersgate; this is a void grant. And yet if the grant be in this manner [All that my house in the occupation of I. S. in S. Andrew parish] whereas in truth it is in the parish of K. but in the occupation of I. S. it seems this grant is good to pass the house. But if it be thus [All that my house in S. Andrew parish is Holborne in the occupation of I. S.] and in truth it is in another parish but in his occupation : this grant is not good to pass the house. Dyer 299. Co. 3. 10.

If I grant all and singular my Lands in the Tenure of I. D. which I purchased of I. N. specified in an Indenture of demise made to I. N., and I have land wherein some of these references are true and the rest false, and no land wherein they are all true; in this case nothing passeth, as if I have land in the Tenure of I. S. and purchased of I. N. but not specified in the Indenture to I. B. or if I have Land which I purchased of I. N. and specified in the Indenture to I. B. but not in the Tenure of I. D. But if I have some Land wherein this is true, and some wherein part of them are true, and part false, then doe they pass those wherein all the circumstances are true.

If one grant in this manner [my manor of Dale which appeareth by Office found to be of the value of Ten pound per Annum] and in truth in the Office it is found at twenty pound per Annum; this grant is good notwithstanding this mispension. HH. 2. fac. B. R. per Tanfield.

If one grant in this manner [all my manor of W late parcell of the possession of the Abbot of S. and late in the possession of K.] and in truth it was never in the possession of K. this grant is good notwithstanding. But if the grant be thus [omnia illa terra &c. in tenura I. S. jacen. in W. nuper prioratus de S. spectan.] and in truth the Land doth lie in S. and not in W. this is no good grant to pass the Lands in S. And if the Lands doe lie in W. but are in the Tenure of I. D. and not in the Tenure of I. S. the grant is void to pass the Lands in the occupation of I. S. Pasc. 7 Jac. 8: R. Co. 2. 32.

If one purchase Land of I. S. in T and have no other Land there, and he grant his Land in T late the Land of R. S. or late the Land of S. and mistake or omit the christian name; this grant is good, notwithstanding this mistake. And so also it is where there is a blank left for the christian name. And if in this case he grant all his Land in T and say no more, this is a good grant to pass the Land. And if one grant [all his Lands in D called N which were the Lands of I. S.] this is a good grant to pass the Lands called N though they were never the Lands of I. S. But if the grant be [of all his Lands in D which were the Lands of I. S.] by this none but those Lands that were the Lands of I. S. will pass. Dyer 376. Bro. Grant 92.

If one grant in this manner [all my meadow in D containing ten acres] whereas in truth his meadow there doth contain twenty acres, it seems this is a good grant for the whole twenty acres. So if one grant thus [All those forty seven acres of Land by the Sleight whereof fifteen lie in D, twenty in E, and twenty five in F] and in truth all of them doe lie in F and none of them in D or E: this is a good grant to cary the whole forty seven acres. Dyer 80.

If one grant twenty load of Wood and say in his grant [of which twenty load of wood he had sixteen load by the grant of his father I. S.] and in truth I. S. did not grant any wood to him at all, or did not grant unto him sixteen load only: this is a good grant of the twenty load of wood notwithstanding this false recital. Bro. Grant 69.

If one grant his Manor of D and doth not say in what Town or Towns it doth lie, this is a good grant. But it is best to say in what Towns the Manor doth lie, for if it lie in divers places (as it may) and any of the places into which it goeth be omitted and the rest are set down; no part of the Manor lying in the Town that is not expressed will pass. Br. Grant 53. 7 H. 4. 41.

If one grant a Manor and that which in truth is but one Manor by the name of the Manor of A and B; this is a good grant of the Manor. And so also it is if be two Manors, as if a man be seised of the Manors of Ryton and Condor in the county of Salop. and he grant in this manner [totum illud Manerium de Ryton & Condor cum pertinent. in Com. Salopia]; this is a good grant of both the Manors. Otherwise it is in case of the King. Co. 1. 46.

Prerogative.

If one have a farme of Land, Meadow, &c. by lease called Hodges lying within the parishes of S. Stephen and S. Peter in S. Albons, and he reciting the said lease grant to C. his terme and interest in the house, lands, &c. called Hodges in the parish of S. Peter and S. Albons; this grant is good only for so much as doth lie in the parish of S. Peter, and not for that which doth lie in S. Stephens. But if he grant the farme; and doth not say in what parish it doth lie; this is a good grant of the whole farme. As in the case before of a Manor that doth lie in divers parishes. And if in the case here the farme lie within the parish of S. Peter only; the grant is good for the whole farme. If one recite that whereas he hath such lands by forfeiture, or whereas such a one hath an estate of his Land, or whereas the grantee hath paid him ten pound or done him such service, or the like, and these things are not true, and afterwards he doth grant the Land by apt words; this mistake in these cases will not hurt the grant. But otherwise it is in case of the King in some of these cases. Curia. Co. B. Pasc. 9 Jac. Inter Plas. & Sleeps. Bro. Grant 53.

Prerogative:

If one have a Manor in which he hath Parkes and Fishponds, and he grant the Manor for life except the game and fish, and after grant the reversion of the Manor; this is a good grant of the game and fish also. Co. 1. 50.

If a grant be of [Centum libras terra, or 50 libras terra, or of Centum solidi terms it seems these are good Grants, and that hereby doth pass Land of that value, and so of more or less. Co. super Litt. 5.

If a Grant be of an Acre of Land covered with water, this is a good Grant; Co. super Litt. 4.

If a Grant be of a certain portion of Land or Tithes, or of the fourth part of Land or Tithes, and there be a sufficient certainty in the description of it, this Grant is good. And therefore if the Grant be of the fourth part of the Tithes, and of the offerings of the Church of St. Peter, this is a good Grant. Dyer 84. 34 Ed 3.

If one leased of an Advowson in Fee, grant to J. S. that as oft as the Church is void, he shall name the Clerk to the Grantor, and he shall present him to the Ordinary; this is a good Grant of the Advowson. Bro. Grants 101. 121.

A Reversion may be granted by the name of a Remainder, or a Remainder by the name of a Reversion, and such a Grant is good. As if one grant Land to J. S. the Reversion to J. D. this is a good Grant of the Remainder. Dyer 46. Plow. in Hills and Granges case.

If one make a Lease of Land to Husband and Wife for their lives, and after grant the Reversion of this by the name of the Reversion of the Land, which the Wife doth hold for life; this Grant is void. So if one grant to two for life, and after grant the Reversion of one of them, this is void. Fitz. Grant 63.

A Felling or Grist Mill may be granted by the name of a Mill only. 21 Ass. Incertainty. plow.

If one grant in this manner [All that his Messuage, &c. And all the Lands, Meadows, and Pastures thereunto belonging;] this is a good Grant, and certain enough to pass all the Lands, Meadows, and Pastures usually occupied therewith. 27 H. 6. 2. Plow. 164. Bro. Lease 35.

If the Lord grant his Manor by the name of [His Manor, with the Reversion of all his Tenants,] or by the name of [the Reversion of all his Tenants, bond and free which hold for life or years] and do not name them by their particular names; these Grants are good in these cases, and certain enough. Fitz. Grant 8. Perk. sect. 68.

If one grant Land, and say not in what Parish, or County, or Village it doth lie, yet if there be any other matter to describe it; it seems the grant is good enough, and it may be averred where it lieth. But if there be no circumstantial matter in the grant to denote and decipher out where it doth lie, it seems the Grant is void for Incertainty. And therefore if one grant his Manor of Dale, or his Lands in the occupation of J. S. or his Lands that descended to J. S. or his Lands that did belong to the Priory of S. or the like; these are good Grants and certain enough. Id. certum est quod certum reddi potest. Bro. Grant 53. Co. 9. 47.

If there be Tenant for life of three Houses and four Acres of Land, and he in Reversion, grant the Reversion of two houses and of two Acres of this Land; this is a good Grant, and hath sufficient Certainty in it. Perk. sect. 73.

If a Grant be Incertain altogether, and have not sufficient Certainty in it, and cannot be made certain by some matter Ex post facto, it is void. And therefore if there be Lord and Tenant of three Acres of Land by Fealty, and twelve pence Rent, and the Lord grant [the Services of the third Acre] to a stranger; this Grant is merely void. So if Husband and Wife hold an Acre of Land jointly of J. S. for their lives, and J. S. grant the Reversion of the Acre of Land which the Husband alone doth hold for his life; this Grant is void. So if there be Lord and three Joynntenants, and the Lord grant the Services of one of them to a stranger, this Grant is void. So if one have twenty Tenants that do pay him twelve pence a peece Rent, and he grant five shillings yearly out of these Rents, and doth not say of which Tenants, this Grant is void for Incertainty. So if Consuance of Pleas be granted, and it is not said before whom, this is utterly void. So if one have two Tenants, and doth grant the Reversion of one of them, and doth not say which, this is void for Incertainty. So if one grant Etowens to another, and say not what, nor how; this is void. So if one grant me so many of his trees, or of his horses as may be reasonably spared, this grant is void. And yet if one grant me so many of his trees as J. S. shall think fit, it seems this grant is good. And if one grant me one hundred load of Wood to be taken by the Assignment of the Grantor, or to be taken by the Assignment of J. S. these are good Grants. So if one grant me three Acres of Wood toward the North-side of the Wood; this is a good Grant, and certain enough. Perk. felf. 67. & 68, 69: 9 H.6.12. 44 Ed.3. 17. Bro. Grant 52. Dyer 91. Co.5. 24.

If one Grant to one of the Children of J. S. and J. S. hath more then one, and he doth not describe which he doth intend; this Grant is void for incertainty. Bro. Domes 31.

If one Grant to me a Rent or a Robe, twenty shillings or forty shillings, or Common of Pasture or Rent, in the Disjunctive which is at first very incertain; yet this Grant may become good; for if I make my Election, or he pay the Rent, or perform the Grant in either part, the Grant is now become good. 9 Ed.4.36. Perk. felf. 74. So if one be seised of two Acres of Land, and he doth Lease them for life, the Remainder of one of them, and doth not say of which to J. S. in this case, if J. S. make his Election which Acre he will have, the Grant of the Remainder to him will be good. Perk. felf. 76. So it is when a man hath six horses in his Stable, and he doth grant me one of his horses, but doth not say which of them; in this case I may chuse which I will have, and in these cases, when I have made my election, and not before the Grant, is good. And if in these cases the Grantee do not make his election, during his life, it seems the Grant will never be good. If one be seised of Land, and Lease it for years, rendring ten shillings rent, and after he doth grant a rent of ten shillings out of this Land to a stranger; in this case, albeit, there be some incertainty in the Grant, yet this is a good Grant of a Rent of ten shillings, but it shall be taken a Grant of a new, and not of the old Rent, and therefore shall not take effect, until the particular estate be ended. Bro. Grant 77. 249 91 Domes See more to this point in Deeds, and their Exposition, chap.5. Numb.15. and Fine chap.2. Numb.7.

5. In respect of matter in some other parts of the Grant.

1. In the Commencement of the Estate.

In some cases albeit there be in a Grant, a good Grantor, and a good Grantee, and a thing granted, and all these are duly and certainly described, yet the Grant may be void for some fault, in some other thing, touching the Grant.

1. In the Commencement of the Estate: For if a man be possessed of a Term of years, albeit it be one hundred years or upwards, and grant to another all the Residue of this term of years that shall be to come at the time of his death; this Grant is void for incertainty: And yet if a man possessed of such a term in Land, grant the Land to another, To have and to hold to him after the death of the Grantor for fifty years, or for two hundred years; these are good Grants, and in the first case the Grantee shall have fifty years, if there be so many to come of the term of one hundred years, at the death of the Grantor; and in the last case the Grantee shall have the Land for the whole one hundred years, or so many of them as are to come at the death of the Grantor. Bro. Grant 154. Co.1. 155. Plow. 520. So if one Grant any thing that doth lie in Livery or in Grant, and that is in esse at the time of the Grant in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life, and the estate is to begin at a day to come; this for the most, is void; howbeit in some cases the Livery of Seisin will help it: But a Lease for years to begin in futuro, is good enough. And if a Lease be made to one for years, or for years determinable upon lives, and after a Lease is made to another of the same thing, To have and to hold from the end of the former Lease; this is a good Lease, and the Commencement certain enough. So if a Lease be made of Land to one for life, and after the Reversion thereof, is granted to another for life, Cum post mortem vel alio modo vacare contigeris, this is good. Dyer 58. Co.5.1. Pasche, 7 Jac. Dennis case. So if a Lease be made to one for twenty years, if he live so long, and after a Lease is made to another Habendum, after the end of the Term granted to the Lessee for twenty years to be accompted from the date of the Deed last made; this is a good Grant for twenty years after the first Lease ended, and the words [to be accompted, &c.] shall be rejected. Craddock; case. Pasche, 7 Jac. Co. B. And if one grant a Rent to me Habendum, from the time of my full age for my life, and I am of full age at the time of the Grant, this Grant is good for my life. Co. 9. If a Woman-sole have a Lease for years, and take a Husband, and then he in Reversion Grant the Land to another another Habendum after the terme granted to the husband &c. where in truth it was never granted to the husband but by an Act of law, viz. the marriage, yet this is a good Lease. Plow. 192. Co. 6. 26.

2. In the limitation of the estate. For if a grant be to two & hereditus, without et, this is void for incertainty, and cannot be made good by Averment. And yet a grant to one & hereditus, is good. And if a man grant two Acres to have and to hold the one in fee-simple and the other in fee-taile, or the one in fee-simple and the other for life, and doth not set downe which in fee-simple &c. in certaine, yet this grant is good, and the grantee hath the election. And yet if one grant two acres to two men, Habendum the one to the one, and the other to the other, and say not which either of them shall have, this is void for incertainty. And if one have a reversion of land after a lease for yeares, and grant the land Habendum the reversion, or grant the reversion Habendum the land, this is good. 22 H. 6. 15. Plow. 28. Perk. Sect. 75. 77. Plow. 152. Co. 12. 107. Plow. 147.

In some cases a grant or gift may be void at least to some persons and purposes when there are none of the defects aforesaid in it, as when it is made upon a corrupt contract, or to the end to defraud creditors of their debts, or purchasers of their lands bought, or the like, whereof see before in Deed chap. 4. Numb. 5.

And in some cases albeit there be no other fault in the grant, yet it may become void for want of some other matter that ought to be done, as inrolment, livery of seisin, attornment, &c. for where these things are requisite the grant is not good untill it be had, neither for that thing which will not passe without that ceremony, nor yet for that which otherwise would pass by the deed. And therefore if a feoffment be made of a Manor to which an Advowson is appendant, and no livery is made so that the Manor doth not passe; the Advowson will not passe neither. Where a grant may be void by the refusall or waiver of the grantee, See before in Deed Numb. 6. chap. 4. 21 H. 7. 5. Co super Litts.

If one make a feoffment with warranty, and after the feoffee doth grant to the feoffor that neither he nor his heires shall vouch the warrantor or his heires upon the warranty; this is a good discharge of the benefit of voucher, and doth bar the feoffee of it. And yet he may bring a Warrantia Charta still. So if one grant to mee a rent-charge, and afterwards I grant to him that he shall not bee sued for this rent; this is a good grant to bar me of bringing an annuity for the rent. And yet I may distrain for the rent still. And so à converso if I grant to the grantor he shall not be distrained for the rent, by this I am barred of a distresse, but not of bringing an annuity for the rent. So if the Lord doth grant to his tenant holding by Knights service, that his heires shall not be in ward &c. or a man doth grant to his debtor that he will not sue him for the Debt at all, or untill such a time; or one grant to his Lessee for life or yeares, that he shall not be impeached for waste; all these are good discharges, and may be pleaded by way of bar to avoid circuity of Action. 7 H. 6. 43. 21 H. 7. 23. Perk. Sect. 69. Bro. Grant. 175. Kelw. 88.

How a grant shall be used and taken Brownlows Rep. 1 part. 32. 2 part. 57. 193.

2. In the limitation of the estate. Or in the Habendum of the Grant.

Incertainty.

6. In respect of the end or ground of the Grant.

7 In respect of omission of some ceremony &c.

5. What shall be said a good grant in the nature of a release or discharge. Or not.

All these a Lessee for life or years (be his Lease in writing, or by word) may (by the Law) cut down and take without any leave of the Lessor, in any part of the ground demised to him; wherein these things are to be known.

1. Where the Law gives him leave to take any one of these, he may take all of them. Lessees that have Estates for life or years.

2. He may take them, although there were no special Agreement, nor words in his Lease to give him liberty to take it.

3. He may (as it seems) cut it before he use it, that it may be fit for use, but not before some occasion begin to appear for the use of it.

4. If he be restrained by any special Agreement contained in his Lease, then he may not take it; for, Modus & convertitur in unum legem.

5. He may cut not more then enough, and not superfluity.

6. The stuff he doth cut and take, must be to amend and make the Hedges belonging to the things demised, to make the Corn and Hay growing upon, and coming of the same Land; the Wood for Fire to be burnt in some part of the housing, let by the same Lease; the Wood for Timber to amend part of the housing demised: For if it be bestowed in any other place, or to any other purpose, or more be cut then is reasonable, or otherwise then, as is before set down, it will be a Waste. CHAP. XCVII.

Of an Idiot, Idolatry, and Implication.

1. Idiot, what.

N Idiot or Man Non compos mentis, is one that is void of Reason and very foolish, and wanteth natural and common Understanding, as in the Cases, infra. Sometimes the word is taken for a Plea, to avoid a Deed made by such a man as is so, Terms Ley Idiot. Crompt. Jur. 114.

The kinde.

There are four sorts of Men Non compos mentis.

1. An Idiot or Natural fool so born, and he is called an Idiot à Nativitate.
2. One that is so by the Visitation of God, and he is called an Idiot Accidental.
3. One that is Lunatick by certain fits and seasons, that hath his Lucida intervalla.

4. One that hath made himself so by his own act, as a Drunkard; one that is born dumb, deaf, and blinde, is accounted as an Idiot to some purposes.

Who shall be
a one.

He is then reputed, and to be taken a Natural or Accidental Idiot or Lunatick, when he may be made to believe any thing: As that an Ass can flie, Trees walk, and Beasts and Birds speak, and the like; or that cannot number twenty pence, name his Father and Mother, nor his own age, or the like. But if he have so much knowledge, as to be able to read or learn to read by the instruction of others, or measure an Ell of Cloth, or name the days of the week, or write Letters, or make acquittances, or beget children, or the like, whereby it doth appear he hath some light of Reason; in this case, he is not to be counted an Idiot, Co. 4. 124. Co. super Litt. 247. Perk. 5: Terms Ley Idiot. Swinb. fol. 43. Broo. 443. Co. 4. 12. 128. Crompt. Jur. f. 38.

How he is to be tried.
Idiota Inqui-

This Idiot is to be tried and discovered by the Writ which is called De Idiota inquirendo, which is a Writ directed to the Escheator or Sheriff of any County, where the King when he understood there was an Idiot, so weak of understanding, that he could not govern his own Estate: That the Sheriff or Coroner therefore do call before him the Idiot, and examine him before a Jury, whether he be sufficiently able to manage and order his own estate with discretion, and accordingly to certifie, Co. 9. 31. F.N.B. 231.

He that is an Idiot à Nativitate, the King should have the custody, and Wardship of all his Land (except Copihold Lands) of whatsoever Lord the same be held, and by what means soever, as by purchase or descent, the Idiot did come by them. Also he was to have the custody and Wardship of his Body, Goods, and Chattels, and all that is his, during the life of the Idiot: And the King was to have the profits of all this to his own use, save onely that with the same, he must fine and provide for the Idiot and his family, sufficient Meat, Drink, Apparel, and other necessaries.

But the King was to have no interest in the Estate and Substance of the Idiot, but onely a Custody, and therefore he could not sell any of the Lands, or Goods, or Chattels (unless perhaps make a Lease of the Land at a yearly rent.) And if the Idiot happen to come to be of his right minde again, then the King was to deliver all that was his to him again, if not, he was to leave it to the Heirs and Executors, or Administrators of the Idiot after his death: But Rights or Titles of Entry or Action, that the Idiot had, those (it seems) the King should have no benefit by neither, could he make any use of; but for all that was in possession, he was to have as before. And if any man should have kept the Body, Lands, Goods, or Chattels, from the King, the King should have remedy to recover it. 27 Ed. 2. 9, 10. Co. 8. 170. Stamf. pr. c. 9. Co. 4. 126, 127. F. N. B. 232. 33 H. 8. 46. Dyer 25. 164. Fitz. sa Def. 37. Scire fac. 10. 1 H. 7. 24.

And for the Lands, Goods, and Chattels of Lunaticks, the King was to hold them during the time of their Lunacy: But as for this Idiot, and he that is an Idiot per Accident, or one that hath his Lucida intervalla, the King was to have their Estate and Substance, not as he had the estate of the Natural Idiot to his own use without rendering an account; but in this case he had them onely to keep for the Lunatick, and was to find him and his family with it; and when he came to be of some memory again, must render to him an account for the profits, and deliver him all the overplus of that hath been laid out for the maintenance of him, and his family, Co. 8. 170. Dyer 25. Stamf. pr. c. 9. F. N. B. 232.

If a Copiholder be an Idiot, his Copihold-estate shall be ordered by the Lord; and not by the King. Dyer 302.

It seems such an Idiot may consent to marriage, and his Issues are Legitimate. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Stiles case.

If such a one were made a Judge, all Acts that should be done by, or before him, as Judge, were good, and would binde all men. Broo. 446.

If such an Idiot do any thing by Fine or Recovery, or the like, it will binde him, and all others, as if he were another man. But the Judges, before whom such a Fine or Recovery is taken, ought not to admit it; so if he acknowledge a Recognizance, it is unavoidable. Co. 4. 127. Perk. sect. 24.

If such a person, during the time of his Idiocy or Lunacy, had committed Treason against the King, he should be punished as a Traitor. Co. 4. 124.

All Acts that the Lunatick man doth, during the time of his Lucida intervalla, though it be by Deed in the Countrey, as a Feoffment, Obligation, or the like, shall binde him and all others, that it shall concern, as any other man. So if in those times he commit any Felony, or other offence, he shall be punished as another man. Co. 4. 127.

All Acts that are done by a Drunkard that makes himself De non sane memorie, shall binde and prejudice him, as if he were not so, as Deeds, Obligations, and the like, or Bargains and Contracts, he doth make then: Also if he do then in that case, commit any Treason or Felony, his Drunkenness will not mitigate, but aggravate his offence. Co. 4. 124. Plow. 19. See Terms Law Disability 148, 149.

If he make a Bond, and must be sued upon it, and Recovery be had, and his Execution done or money paid, before the Office is found; this is unavoidable. Co. 4. 126.

If such a one as is a Natural or Accidental Idiot or a Lunatick, by the Act of God, do whiles he is so, do or commit any act of Felony; this is no Felony in him, neither shall he lose or forfeit life or goods, or any thing else, though the act be Felony by a Statute, that doth say that every one that doth so, shall be judged a Felon. Stamf. 1. 7. 3 H. 7. 1. Co. 4. 127. 21 H. 7. 31.

If such a one in that case make a Testament, it seems, it is not good. See Testament. Co. 6. 13. Dyer 203. 79.

The Acts and Deeds of such persons done, during the time they are out of their minde, are void or voidable as Acts done by Infants are. See Infant. F. N. B. 202. 7 H. 4. 5. 52. See more for both of them, Testament Numb. 4. Grant Numb. 2, 3. Fine Numb. 6, 8. Capacity; Disability throughout.

* Sect. 4.
What Acts such an Idiot may do, or
not.

Who may take advantage by their Acts, or not.
Dum non fuit compos mentis, what.

Privies in blood, as Heirs, may take advantage, and shew the Disability of their Ancestors that were Non compos mentis, and so avoid their Acts and Deeds for this cause: And for this cause they may have a Writ appointed for that end called Dum non fuit compos mentis. Also Privies in Representation, as Executors or Administrators; and therefore if he should make any Obligation, Covenant, or the like; and they be sued upon it, they may avoid it by shewing his Disability. Co. 4. 127.

If the Idiot make a Gift, Grant, a Release of his Land, before the Kings Office had been found for him, the King might avoid it at any time, during the Idiot's life. So also he might avoid Obligations, Bills, or the like. Co. 4. 126.

If he grant a Rent-charge out of his Land, and die, his Heir may avoid it, and he shall hold it discharged. Littl. 405, 406.

A man himself that is Non compos mentis, shall never for that cause avoid his own act, either by Law or in a Court of Equity; for a man shall never be received and allowed to shulk himself. Adjudged, Trin. 37 Eliz. Stroud versus Marshal, B.R. Mich. 2 Jac. Linch versus Hinde. Adjudged, Littl. 405, 406.

Privies in Estate, cannot take advantage at any such Disability; as if a Donor in Tail Non compos mentis make a Feoffment in Fee, and die without issue, be in Reversion or Remainder cannot avoid this Deed, by this Plea. So if Tenant do Non sane memoris make a Feoffment in Fee, and die without Heir, so that the Land should Escheat, the Lord cannot avoid this Feoffment for this cause. Co. 4. 127.

For the taking away of the Monuments of Superstition and Idolatry. See Act, 8 Aug. 1643. 9 May. 1644. See Pope.

Idolatry and Superstition.

Implication, what.

Implication is where the Law doth imply something that is not expressed between parties, upon their Deeds or Agreements, as sometimes, if there want words to express their minds, the Law will help it by Implication; and so one word, or thing shall be implied by another, sometimes one sentence shall be implied by another, sometimes one Estate by another: As if one Devise, that after his wife J. S. shall have his house; here the wife shall have an Estate for life by Implication. It is also in diverse other cases, as if one grant an Office, it is a Condition sacit implied by Law, That he must execute the Office, else the Grant to cease. So in every Exchange a Condition and a Warranty are sacit implied. Quod necessarii subintelliguntur unde desit. See in other Titles.

CHAP. XCVIII.

Of Imprisonment.

1. Imprisonment.

Arrest:

Imprisonment is where a Man is restrained of his usual and lawful liberty; so that he cannot go abroad at all times, and in all places with that freedom, as at other times without Bail or Mainprise: And this, whether it be in the open Field, or in the Street, or in a House, or in a Gaol, or in a Stocks, all comes to one, if it be any Restraint of Liberty, it is an Imprisonment. Terms Ley Imprisonment.

An Arrest seems to be nothing else, but the first Act of this Imprisonment, when a man is first taken and restrained from his Liberty. Terms Ley Arrest. Note that this Imprisonment will excuse a man in many Cases from prejudice, for which see Co. super Littl. 159. 260. &c.

2: What Act shall be said an Arrest or Imprisonment, or not:

If one lay hands upon a man, and hold him; keep him in a house, lock him in a room, tie him to a Tree or Post; put him in prison or Stocks, or the like; all these be Imprisonments. So if one say to another, I Arrest you in the Lord Protectors name, and lay no hands on him, it seems this is an Arrest, especially if he be a known, sworn Officer that doth so, for in this case were the Arrest good, the Party is bound to obey, and to submit to the Arrest. And so was the opinion of the Lord-Keeper, and the two Chief Justices, Mich. 5 Car. Co. 9. 66. 69.

But

But if one do only require another to stand or stay, or say he doth intend, or will arrest him, but doth not lay hands upon him, nor say he doth arrest him; this, it seems, without more, is no arrest nor imprisonment, Br. F. Imprif. 37.

In all cases where the Common-Law, or where any Statute doth give power to arrest and imprison, there it is lawful and justifiable so to do. But in that case he that doth so, must take heed that he do pursue the Statute in the manner and order of doing of it: As if a Bailiff be found in arrearages before Auditors, the Auditors may commit him to Prison; but then it must be to the next Prison, and it must be speedily,

A Forger of Deeds, or one that doth agree to any such thing, to the intent any Freehold may be recovered or charged, may be imprisoned. So if one had refused to pay his Tythes after sentence given in the Spiritual Court for them, he might be imprisoned, 27 H. 8. 1. And so in divers other cases, and for divers other causes; for which see the Statutes at large, 5 Eliz. 14.

In all cases regularly, where a man is fined by any Court that hath power to fine Fine. and imprison, there he may be imprisoned also; for Imprisonment is incident to every Fine: As if Jurors will take more then their Fees for their labors, after they have given their Verdict, of him for whom they gave it: If men will conspire to put a man in danger of his life by Indictment: If one will willingly plead a false Plea, to delay the Suit: If a Sheriff or Bailiff of a Franchise will not, or will falsly return his Writ directed to him: If a Guardian in Chivalry will take a Feoffment of his Heir within age, of his Land: If in a Quid juris clamat, or Per qua servitia the Tenant do appear, and refuse to attorn: If a Sheriff neglect or refuse to take his oath when he doth enter to his office: If a Lessee doth commit waste after a Prohibition by Estrangement: If one plead a false Deed, or deny his own Deed, and upon Trial it be found against him: If a Juror give a false Verdict: If one bring an Attaint, and it pass against the Plaintiff: If one bring an Appeal, and by his default the Will abate, or upon Trial it pass against the Plaintiff: If one that is upon Mainprise, fail to come in at his day: If one do a Trespass, Disceison, Forcible Entry, or the like; for these and many other causes a man may be imprisoned. Br. Impr. 9. 77. 101, 102. Br. Fan. Impr. 107. 10. 13. 98. Fitz. per qua servitia, 23. Dyer 168. Co. 5. 105. 32 H. 8. 54. Br. Impr. 5. 9. 14. 11. 113.

A man may be imprisoned for, or upon suspicion of Treason, Felony, or any other great offence, for the preventing of any such offence, the breach of the Peace, or the like; so for Night-walking, and the like. Vide infra, 9 Ed. 4. 26. 20 Ed. 4. 6. 11 Ed. 4. 4.

If a man be mad and furious, and like in his madness to harm; he may be bound or shut up by any man whiles he is so, to prevent mischief, Br. F. Impr. 35.

If men ride armed, or there be any Rebellion, the Sheriff, Officer, or any other assistant to them, may arrest and disarm them, and no false Imprisonment lieth, 1 H. 7. 7.

If the Imprisonment be on a false and fained Suit; as in suing Execution on a Statute when the money is paid, no false Imprisonment lieth for this, Stat. 43 Ed. 3. c. 25.

If a Constable make a Deputy, and the Deputy do execute Warrants and make Arrests, it seems this is good. Phelps and Winscombs Case, Mich. 13 Jac. B. R.

If a Hue and Cry be levied, and no cause; he that doth arrest on such a Hue and Cry is to be justified, and he that raised it shall be punished, 21 H. 7. 27.

Ordinaries might imprison Priests for Incontinencie, 3 H. 7. 1.

By and upon a Writ of Vi laica removenda, the Sheriff may arrest a Clerk resisting, &c. albeit the Writ speak of many, and those Lay-men, Adj. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R.

For Treason, Felony, or Breach of the Peace, any man may arrest without Warrant or Precept, New Terms ley Arrest. But he that doth arrest, must see a Felony be done. Secondly, that he be suspect, Idem. And that there be some cause to suspect him

3- Where an Arrest or Imprisonment shall be said to be lawful.
1. In respect of the cause of the Arrest.

*Suspicion.

him above another; as that Hue and Cry is gone forth, and doth denote such a man as he is; or that it is the common voice that he is the man, or it is such a man as he is, or that he is a Companion of Thieves, or that he hideth himself, flieth, or the like. For in these cases any man may by warrant of the Common-Law, without any Writ or Warrant from any other, and that before Presentment, Indictment, &c. arrest the party suspect; and whether the cause of suspicion be good, shall be tried by the Judges in the Action of False Imprisonment, or upon a Habeas Corpus. But it is said, that an Arrest upon a Hue and Cry is not good, unless some Felony have been committed, Co. 2 par. Inst. 2 H. 7. 15. 5 H. 7. 5. And any man so taken is to be brought to Gaol, to abide till Sessions, to be acquitted or indicted, Idem. Etc. more, Cromp. Jur. f. 16. 6. 80. a. 93. b. 97. b. 110. See more in Co. 10. 76.

A Justice of Peace may himself in his own discretion arrest a man, and compel him to find Sureties for the Peace: And if he will, he may then let him go without giving Surety, and no false Imprisonment will lie against him, Br. Tress. 177.

*In respect of
resting, and

Any man as well as a Constable or Officer, after a Felony is done, that doth suspect another, may arrest him and bring him to an Officer, or to a Justice of Peace, or to Gaol, which he will. But in this case the party must take heed of two things. 1. That there be a Felony done. 2. That he have some cause and reason to suspect that party that he doth arrest. See Causes infra. So any one that doth know such a man hath committed the Felony, may of his own head without any Warrant from a Justice or Officer, apprehend the Felon, and carry him to the Officer, Justice of Peace, or Prison. Plow. 49. 29 Ed. 3. 9. 13 H. 7. 10. 20 H. 7. 26. 5 H. 7. 6. 10 Ed. 4. 17. 14 H. 8. 16.

A Watchman may arrest Night-walkers in the night, 4 H. 7. 15: Co. 9. 68. or any suspicious persons, 5 Ed. 3. 14. 13 Ed. 1.

If there be any Breach of the Peace by fighting, or any apparent likelihood thereof, the Constables or Officers may take the parties and set them by the heels, or put them in Ward. So if they offer to assault the Officer himself. So if there be a lewd suspected Fellow in a lewd House, it seems the Officer may set him by the heels, Finches ley 336: Fitz. Bar 202. 3 H. 4. 9. 5 H. 7. 8. 13 H. 7. 10. 10 Ed. 4. 17. 12 H. 7. 18. 22 Ed. 4. 35. And if there be an Affray, any man may restrain the Assayers to keep Peace: But the Affray being past, they cannot meddle farther without authority from Officers, Co. 2 par. Inst. 52.

If any Sheriff, Bailiff, Constable, Officer, or other Minister of Justice in doing their Offices, as executing Writs, the Justice of Peace Warrants, keeping the Peace, or apprehending Felons, require others to aid them in that work; the parties so required must aid them, and then their Arrest or Imprisonment is as lawful as the Officers, Stat. 2 H. 7. c. 15. Westm. 1. c. 9. Winton 3 H. 7. 1. Co. 9. Ca. 8. 66. 5 H. 7. 15.

If one man wound another, so that it is uncertain whether he will die or live; the Officer may apprehend the party, and keep him in hold till he see whether the party be like to live or die, 10 H. 7. 26. And any other man may arrest such a man, and hold him for a reasonable time upon this account, Co. 2 Inst. 52.

Sec. 3.

If a man be outlawed for Felony, it seems any other man as well as the Sheriff or his Officers, may arrest the party without any Warrant: But if he be outlawed in an Action personal only, contra. Dyer 120.

By a Warrant from the Lord Protector, his Council, or from any the Courts or Westminster, or from a Justice of Peace, or from the Sheriff, one may lawfully arrest or imprison another: As if a Sheriff have a Writ to arrest a man, and he make a Warrant to any Bailiff of Franchise, or other sworn, known, or special Bailiff to arrest the party; this is a good authority. But therein they must take heed they do pursue their Warrant, or else the Arrest or Imprisonment may be wrongful. And this Warrant, it seems, must be in writing, unless the party to be arrested be present; or else it seems no good authority. But if the party be present, it seems such verbal authority is good enough, Co. 8. 67. 26 H. 7. 5. Co. 6. 64. Br. Tress. 339. 10 H. 7. 18.

If a Sheriff or his Bailiff arrest a man on a Capias directed to them, and there be no Original on which the Capias was grounded; yet the Arrest is lawful in them. So if a Capias come to them to take the body of a Duke, Countee, Baron, Dutcheff, a Countess or Baroneff, against whom by Law no Capias doth lie for Debt, or the like, and the Sheriff do execute it; the Arrest and Imprisonment is lawful. So if the Suit upon which the Process do come to him be never so unjust, and he arrest by vertue of the Process, his Act is lawful. Co. 8. 67. 16 H. 7. 3. Kelw. 98. 43 Ed. 3. 33.

After an Action is entred in London, a Serjeant at Mace may arrest the party with his Mace ex officio, without any Precept at all. Co. 8. 67.

Officers may arrest suspicious persons that walk by night, and carry them to a Justice, or set them in the Stocks till the morning, 5 Ed. 3. 14.

If a Commission contra legem be to J. S. to arrest J. N. and J. S. do it, the Arrest is lawful in him, and no false Imprisonment lieth, Br. Treff. 372.

If a Sheriff arrest a Duke or such like on a Capias, the Arrest is lawful. See before.

If there be two or more of one name, and the Sheriff hath Process against one of them, and there is no distinguishing addition whereby the Sheriff may know which is intended; in this case if he do mistake, yet the party arrested hath no remedy but by Indemnitate nominis. But the Sheriff or other Officer is to see at his peril, that he mistake not the party in cases of Arrest; for he is bound to take notice of him; for if he mistake him by information of another, or the like; he shall have this Action, And so was the opinion of the whole Court, Trin. 38 Elix. Cross Case, B. R.

See B. 4:
In respect of the party arrested.

If a Capias come to a Sheriff to arrest a man by a wrong name, and he do it, this Action lieth, Brownl. 2 par. 48. So if a Process come to the Sheriff to arrest J. S. and he do arrest J. N. and although the party Plaintiff do shew him a wrong man; this will not help him. And yet if there be practice between him and the party arrested, he may aver this, and that will help him, Brownl. 1 par. 211. See Br. F. Impr. 19.

If one be arrested on a Latus or quapias in the morning of the day that the Writ is returnable, it seems the Arrest is lawful, Trin. 3 Jac. per three Justices.

Of the time.

If one arrest a Minister or another on a Sabbath-day, either at the suit of the party or the Protector, it is a good Arrest. But if the Minister be arrested at his Church, enudo or redendo to or from the same, the Bailiffs for this may be bound to their good behaviour, or might have been censured in the Star-chamber, especially if it be whiles they are about Divine service, 1 R. 2. 15. 50 Ed. 3. 5. Co. 9. 66. Brags Case, Hil. 7 Jac. C. B.

If one arrest another in the night upon a Process for the Lord Protector, or a common person, the Arrest is lawful, Co. 9. 66.

If two men be fighting, and one of purpose to prevent harm put one of them up in a house, or lock him in a chamber till the heat be past; it seems this is lawful: But if they had been quarrelling only, and not fighting, contra. Br. F. Impr. 28.

Of the manner
end.

If a man take another on suspicion of Felony, or the like, and after put him in the Stocks for a while till some other course can be taken with him, it seems this is lawful and justifiable. So if he be sick, and he keep him a while for that, 5 H. 7. 4. 29 Ed. 3. 9. 9 Ed. 4. 9. 22 Ed. 4. 25. Br. F. Impr. 28.

If one arrest another on a Justice Warrant, and let him go, or he escape, and after he taketh him again upon the same Warrant, this is good enough, Br. Impr. 18. Br. Impr. 13.

If one seize the Wardship of the body of a Ward happened to him, this is justifiable, Plow. 194.

If a man be in danger to be killed by others, and one put or lock him in a house or chamber to keep him from their violence, it seems this is good and lawful; but he must not keep him there longer then is needful, Br. F. Impr. 3.

If one do keep or carry a man or woman by their own agreement, as upon a horse, in a Boat, or the like, this is justifiable also, Br. F. Impr. 18.

If one arrest a man upon a Writ in a Franchise, the Arrest is good, and this Action of False imprisonment will not lie, but an Action of the Case will. Ch. 7th. B. R.

If a man be arrested in a Church, the Arrest is good, and no False imprisonment lieth: But if Divine Service be let, the Bailiff may be punished. See before. See Co. 9. 66.

If a Prisoner escape, and the Sheriff take him in another County and arrest him there, the Arrest is lawful: See Escape, infra.

In respect of the pursuit of Authority.

If a Constable or any other take a man for Felony or Treason, or suspicion of Felony, and carry him to the Gaol presently without any further Warrant, this is justifiable, and the Gaoler must at his peril receive him. But if another man that is no Officer do so, however it be justifiable in him, yet it seems the Gaoler may choose whether he will receive him or no, without a Justice of Peace's Warrant. And yet if another man take the Felon in the manner doing his Felony, in this case it seems the Gaoler must receive him. And if the Gaoler in these cases refuse to receive him, the Officer or other may take home the Prisoner and keep him at his own house till course be taken; and all this is justifiable. Br. F. Impr. 24. 27.

If a Sheriff make a Warrant to three conjunctim & divisim to arrest one; and one or three of them do it, this is good, Ludlows Case, B. R. But if two of them do it, it seems it is not good.

If another man that is no Officer arrest a man on suspicion of Felony, and then deliver him over to an Officer, and the Officer let him go, or do not bring him to the Justice or to Gaol, yet the Arrest of the first man is lawful. Br. Impr.

If a Prisoner be by a Writ of Habeas Corpus, or the like, to be brought to Westminster into any of the Courts there, and by the way the Sheriff bring him through another County, and there he detain him; yet there his detaining of him in this case is lawful: Contra, if he did go there with a Keeper without Writ. Vide infra. Dyer 66.

If a Justice of Peace send a Warrant to an Officer to bring J. S. before him, or one of the Justices of the County, to give Sureties for the Peace; and if he refuse, then to carry him to Gaol: And the Prisoner would go to one Justice, yet the Officer may bring him to another; and if he refuse there to give Surety, the Officer may take him to Gaol upon his first Warrant without any other. And in all these cases, no Action of False imprisonment will lie against the parties that do arrest or imprison. Co. 5. 59.

If one threaten to kill another, or break the Peace, and the Officer bring him to the Justice; and if he refuse to be bound for the Peace, and the Officer carry him to Gaol, this is lawful. 35 Aff. p. 56. 54. 7. 8. 38 Ed. 3. 6.

If after a man is lawfully arrested, he be committed to a private Prison, where he should be sent to the common Prison, it seems this Action lieth. By Cook Ch. Justice.

4. Where the Arrest or Imprisonment shall be said to be unlawful, upon which False imprisonment lieth.
False imprisonment, what.
In respect of the cause.

The Law doth much favour the Liberty of men: And therefore if any man shall be restrained therein without good cause, the party so wronged may have an Action of False imprisonment, in the nature of an Action of Trespass, which lieth where a man is wrongfully imprisoned, or detained in prison contrary to order of Law. And a man is then wrongfully imprisoned, when either there is no good cause for his imprisonment, or the party that doth it hath no good authority by any Common or Statute-Law, or by any power or Warrant derived from others: Or else when being lawfully imprisoned at first, he is unlawfully detained afterwards: Or else when the authority so given is not pursued, but the party that doth arrest doth misdeemean himself therein, as in the cases following. F. N. B. in Trespass. Co. 8. 68. 67. Br. F. Imp. 1. 2. But in all such cases the party grieved may have remedy; and this may be punished divers ways besides this by False imprisonment. For, 1. He may cause the party to be indicted at the Kings suit. 2. He may have a Habeas corpus out of either Bench, Chancery or Exchequer, for Officers privileged in their own Courts, and in the Upper Bench and Chancery for any other. And upon this the Gaoler must return, By whom and for what cause he was committed: And if it appear just, he shall be be sent back; if not, he will be delivered; if it be doubtful, he will be bailed. 3. He may have a Writ De homine replegiando, or De odio & At. See Co. 2 par. Inst. 55.

For such petty offences for which a man is not fineable, he shall not be imprisoned: As if in pleading one do deny the Deed of his Ancestor, and it be found upon Trial to be his Deed: Or if one sue on an Obligation for a Debt, and yet know the Defendant hath a Release of the Debt; or if one plead a false Deed, and do after before Trial relinquish his Plea. Br. Impr. 1. 2. 7.

None may be arrested for Debt, Treasons, Detinue, or other cause of Action, but by virtue of a Precept or Commandment out of some Court. New Terms ley Arrest.

If one imprison me upon an illegal Warrant, as a binding Process from the Council of the Marches of Wales, &c. Glovc. Ass. 17 Car.

If one owe me money, or have trespassed me, and the like, and I will imprison him for it without order of Law, he may have a False imprisonment against me. So if I imprison him till he have given me a Bond, made me a Release, and the like: Terms ley F. Impr. Br. Tresp. F.N.B. 88.c.

If I suspect a man for Felony, and complain to a Constable, he cannot arrest him on my suspicion; but after I have arrested him and committed him to him, there the Constable may keep him and is bound to look to him, per Ch. Just. Bridgman & Cur. See more in Marlb. c. 23.

If one arrest another for having suspicious goods, and know of no Felony done before; or there be a Felony done, but no cause to suspect the party arrested; in these cases the party may have an Action of False imprisonment. For as a Suspicion without a Felony, so a Felony without a Suspicion, is no good cause to authorize a man to arrest. 7 H. 4. 3. 14 H. 8. 16. 27 H. 8. 23.

If there be an Order by Law made by a Corporation or Village, That every one that shall, or shall not do such a thing shall be imprisoned, and hereupon a man that breaketh this Order is imprisoned; now hereupon the may have an Action of False imprisonment: For without some special Law or Custome to enable them, they cannot make Laws of imprisonment, Co. 4. 64. 9 H. 5. 29.

If a man bind himself to pay money, and that if he pay it not, it shall be lawful for the other to imprison him, and he fail payment, and the other do imprison him; a False imprisonment lieth, 23 Ed. 3. 3.

If the Sheriff imprison upon a Justitias or Nativus habendi, this Action lieth against him, 2 H. 4. 24. See Dyer 244. Crompt. Jur. 93. 6.

If a Warrant be to a Constable to arrest a man and bring him before him at the next Sessions, and he arrest him after the Sessions and bring him to the Justice, this Writ lieth, 7. 9 Car. B. R.

If two men be quarrelling only, and one that is no Officer will go and sit them by the heels, the party may have False imprisonment against him, Br. F. Impr. 28.

If a Sheriff have a Prisoner in Execution, and do set him at liberty, or do voluntarily suffer him to escape, and afterwards without Writ do take him again in Execution, the party may have an Action of False imprisonment against the Sheriff; and though in this case the party had promised to come to Prison again by 4 day, and do not, and thereupon he arrest him; yet the Arrest is unlawful, 6 Co. 3. 44. Fide infra.

If the Sheriff or any of his Bailiffs by warrant from him shall arrest any man after the Sheriff is discharged of his office; or a Justice of Peace and one that hath Warrant from him arrest any man after his Commission is determined, and notice thereof given; such Arrests will be unlawful, and the parties may have this Action, Dyer 41.

If any Bailiff arrest without a Warrant in writing from his Master or Officer, without a Warrant in writing from the Justice, (unless it be one that is present) it seems this is unlawful, and though he get a Warrant after in writing, yet this will not help the matter, but the party may have this Action, Dyer 244. 24 H. 8. 16. Co. 9. 66. 344. 10 H. 7. 17.

In respect of the parties arresting, and in their authority.

See B. 7.

If the Sheriff arrest a man without Writ, or without a Writ sealed, or in any other manner then in his Writ, this Action lieth against the Sheriff; and the having a Writ, or having it sealed after, before the Action brought, will not help, Dyer 242. 43 Eliz. 6.

If a Constable arrest on a suspicion, and he lie, and another that is no Officer, without commands of the Constable, pursue and arrest him; this is unlawful, Br. Triss. 197.

In respect of the party arrested.

If one have a Warrant to arrest J. S. and he come to another and ask him whether his name be J. S. and he say, yes; and thereupon he say, If your name be J. S. I arrest you at the suit of W. Now this is an unlawful Arrest, for which False Imprisonment lieth, Trin. 7 Jac. B.R.

If the Sheriff either of his own head, or by the direction of the Plaintiff arrest a contrary man, the party arrested may have this Action, unless it be a man of the same name: For which see above. Kelw. 219. M. 3 Jac. Goldsmiths Case.

If a Warrant be to arrest J. the son of W. and he arrest the son of J. which indeed is the right person intended, but not the person within his Warrant; here the party arrested may have this Action, 10 Ed. 4. 11. Br. F. Impr. 38.

Of the time.

If a Sheriff or his Bailiff will arrest a man on a Writ after the day of the Return, or a Bailiff before the Test of his Warrant; the party arrested may have this Action, Dyer 242. Co. 8. 66, 67. James vers. Bone, Pas. 17 Jac. B.R.

If the Constable or Justice of Peace, after an affray is past and all is quiet, if there be no body wounded, will imprison the affrayers in the Stocks or elsewhere, it seems they may have an Action of false Imprisonment, 3 H. 7. 6. 32 H. 8.

If a Warrant be to an Officer to cause A. to find Sureties for the Peace or Good-behaviour, and A. hearing of it do voluntary go to another Justice and bind himself, and get a Superfedeas: Now if after this the Officer arrest him, the party may have a false Imprisonment, Ponton de Part. 20.

and end.

If one hold another in his arms in the street or elsewhere, and hinder him of his liberty and restrain him; he may bring his Action of false Imprisonment, if it be against the parties will, though he were never put in Prison, 43 Ed. 3. 20. 22 Ass. pl. 25.

If the Master lock a man up in a chamber, and give his Servant the key to keep, and the Servant knowing his imprisonment there to be unjust, doth notwithstanding keep the key: Now this is unjust both in Master and Servant, and an Action will lie against both: But if the Servant had not known the cause, no Action would have lien against him, 22 Ed. 4. 54.

Of the place.

If the Sheriff will arrest a man on a Writ out of the compass of his County, the party arrested may have this Action: for he may detain his Prisoner in no other County, when he is to bring him on a Writ into a Court. Whereof see before, Br. F. Impr. 37. West. 7. 2. 34.

Of the purpose of the Action
rity, as by matter ex post facto

If an Officer put a man in Prison that hath wounded another, to see whether the party will live or die, and there do detain him after he doth perceive that the fear and danger of death is past; in this case the party for this Detainer after a reasonable time, may have an Action of False Imprisonment, Br. F. Impr. 6.

If a Justice of Peace do send a general Warrant to an Officer to carry a person to Gaol, and he send down no cause why therein, and the Officer thereupon do so; it seems this Action will lie against the Justice, if not against the Officer also. But upon a general Warrant without cause to bring a person before him, if the Officer do so, it is a good Arrest enough (as it seems): however it seems the safest way to let down the cause.

If a Justice of Peace send for a man, and then presently send him to Gaol without any examination, the party may have this Action against the Justice, Mish. 8 Jac. B. R.

If the Sheriff after he hath arrested a man lawfully, when a legal Discharge is offered him, and a Superfedeas or other Writ, or the party, if it be at another mans suit, offer him a Ransome, and bid him let him go, detain him; this Detainer is a Capias de se, for which this Action lieth, 1 R. 2. 12. Fitz. 111. Bar. 253. Wubers vers. Henly, B. R. M. 13 Jac.

If the Sheriff upon a Capias make a Warrant to a Bailiff to take the party, and he pay the money to the Sheriff, and hath a Superſedeas, and doth shew it to the Bailiff, and yet he doth arrest him, or being arrested detain him under colour of ill-treatment; it seems for this False Imprisonment doth lie. Stringer vers. Stanlake, Trin. 32 Eliz. Co. R. 13 H. 7. 16. 1 H. 7. 28. 33 H. 6. 48. Et issue suit rule in la cas D. Trozman & Hues, at Gloucester Summer-Affise 6 Car. dem. Whistlock Justice. So also in the same case, if one after he hath lawfully arrested a man, do after detain him for Fees that are not due, or unlawfully arrest him again for them. See Br. F. Imp. 12. Kelm. 36. 89. So where a Keeper doth detain for undue Fees. Where a man may be imprisoned, See Merson c. 3. 6. 7. 11.

If one that is no known common sworn Bailiff arrest a man by Warrant from the Sheriff, and the party submit to the Arrest and desire sight of the Warrant, and the Bailiff will not shew it him; then may the party arrested have this Action against him; for after the time of the refusal, the Arrest is unlawful. And if the Arrest be by a Bailiff-erant and sworn, he is bound to declare the Contents only, and not to shew the Warrant it self: And if he do not so upon demand of the party arrested, i. e. shew the cause at whose suit, and for what, and in what Court; then the party arrested may have this Action against him, as against another Bailiff in the first case. But if the party arrested do not desire to see the Warrant, or know the Contents, or do not submit to the Arrest, but strive to escape; in this case the Bailiff is not bound to shew it, Co. 9. 69. 21 H. 7. 23. 14 H. 7. 9. Co. 6. 55.

If one after he have arrested a man, when he should carry him to Prison, or to a Justice, carry him to his own house, or to the Prison of another County, (unless it be in some special cases) or keep him longer at his house then is meet; in these cases the party may have this Action as for an unlawful imprisonment. So if a Justice of Peace, in stead of sending a Prisoner to Gaol where he should have his Trial, will send him to another place, or keep him at his house; the party may have this Action against the Justices, per Cook & Foster Justices, Kelm. 45. Plow. 38. Br. F. Imp. 25. 3 Ed. 4. 6. 14 H. 7. 5. Hil. 8 Jac. Br. Trist. 247.

If one be arrested by the Sheriffs or his Bailiffs, that by Law is bailable, and he under them such Bail as the Law requires, and they refuse it, or detain him longer; the party may have this Action. 23 H. 6. FNB. 152. Plow. 60. Dyer 25.

If a Sheriff or Bailiff of a Franchise arrest a man upon a Capias ad respondendum, and after they do not return the Writ, or return him with a Non est inventus: Now in this case the party may have against the Sheriff or Bailiff that arrested him, an Action of False Imprisonment, Co. 5. 90. Kelm. 81. 89. Plow. 16. 3 H. 7. 11. 21 H. 7. 12.

If a Warrant be to bring one before a Justice of Peace, if he do not put in Surety of the Peace, and he do so, and the party notwithstanding apprehend him; the party arrested may have this Action, Br. F. Imp. 17.

If a Warrant be to an Officer, to cause a man to find Sureties of the Peace or Good behaviour, and the Officer arrest him before the order is required to do it, and doth refuse, he may have False Imprisonment; for the Officer ought to do this first, 3 Ed. 4. 12.

If a Court meddle with a thing wherewith they have nothing to do; as the Court of Common-Pleas, with Pleas of the Crown; the Leet, with Actions between party and party: There in that case, if any such Court shall send out Precepts or Process to such men; in this case all the Officers or Ministers that shall execute such Process or Precepts, shall be punished in an Action of False Imprisonment. But if the Court have jurisdiction of the Cause, and have acted only in their Proceeding, contra: As where a Capias in the Common-Pleas is awarded without an Original, or a Capias against a Dove, Band, or the like; there no Action lieth against the Sheriff or other Officers for executing this Writ. And so in like manner in the Warrants of Justices of the Peace, if they do command anything in or about such matters as wherof they are Judges, or wherewith they have to do; although they mistake or mis-behave themselves in the manner of their Proceeding, yet the Officer in that case is not to be punished by False Imprisonment. As if a Justice of Peace will send a Warrant to carry carry a man to Gaol for Felony, before any Indictment be against the Felon (which it seems he cannot do) and the Officer do so, no Action of False Imprisonment will lie against the Officer. But if a Justice shall send a Warrant to an Officer to arrest one for a Debt he doth owe him, and express such a cause in the Warrant, and he do so; in this case the Action may be brought against the Justice and the Officer also. And for this cause it should seem reason that the Justice should set down his cause in his Warrant, that the Officer may judge whether it be fit to be obeyed or no, and not by a kind of necessity be brought into danger, and cannot see to prevent it. But the experience is otherwise in many places, Wolsey's Case M. 8 Jac. Ca. 10 de case de Marshalcy. Kely. 191. 14 H. 8. 16. 24 Ed. 3. 9. 7 Ed. 3. 24. *Br. See. 10.

5. Against whom the Action of False Imprisonment will lie, or not.

If one procure another to imprison me wrongfully, I may have an Action of False Imprisonment against them both, 12 H. 7. 15. Dyer 244.

If a Sheriff make a Warrant on a Cap. ad respondend. to arrest a man, and after the Sheriff do not return the Capias; here howsoever this Action lieth against the Sheriff, yet it lieth not against the Bailiff. Contra, if he be a Bailiff of a Franchise, 20 H. 7. 1. 21 H. 7. 12.

The Heir, Executor or Administrator cannot be charged for the False Imprisonment of the Ancestor or Testator. See Action personal.

If a Plaintiff will bring an unlawful Warrant, and shew the Sheriff the party, and require him to arrest him; or bring a good Warrant, and shew the Sheriff the wrong person, and require him to do it, the Action will be against them both, Br. Triff. 307. 99.

6. Gaoler, what.

It is one that hath the custody of the place and Prison wherein Prisoners are kept; and of these there be as many as Gaols and Prisons. Their duty and charge is, to look to their Prisoners that they escape not, at their peril; for they must answer for them. Also they must see that they have necessary provision: And for that the Law doth give them an Action of Debt to recover it against their Prisoner, in which Action the Prisoner shall not be suffered to wage his Law, because the Gaoler is bound to give it him. Also they are to see that such Prisoners as are in for Debt upon Executions, be kept in arcta custodia, and have not too much liberty; for by this means they will be forced the sooner to pay their Debts. The Gaoler it seems may put irons or bolts on any Prisoners legs that is committed to him, and justify it, per Just. Bridgman, Trin. 8 Car. Mich. 9 Jac. Pinchens Case. Co. 9. 87. Dyer 249. Stat. 14 Ed. 3. 10. 1 R. 2. 13. 3 H. 7. 3. 29 H. 7. 10. 1 Ed. 3. See more, Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 100.

7. Prison, what.
Prisoner, what.

A Prison is a strong place or house for the safe keeping of Debtors and Malefactors. And a Prisoner is he that is restrained of his Liberty in any Action Civil or Criminal, or upon any Commandment which may be upon matter of Record, as a Commitment in a Court; or upon matter of Fact, when it is upon an Arrest by a Sheriff, Constable, or other.

Tower, what.

It is the principal Prison of the Nation, and therefore used for the principal Court, the High Court of Parliament, from whence they do commonly commit men to the Tower: And for the principal persons, the Peers of the Land, which are always imprisoned there when they are imprisoned.

Marshalcy and Marshal, what.

It is the proper, ordinary, and immediate Prison for the Upper-Bench, for Prisoners that are committed out of, or condemned in that Court in Debts and other Civil Pleas. And the Sheriff, Gaoler, or Keeper, he is the Marshal, who is an Officer attendant on the Upper-Bench, Dyer 297. 21 Ed. 4. 71.

Fleet, what.

The Fleet is the proper, ordinary, and immediate Prison for the Common-Pleas, for the Prisoners committed thence and condemned there in any Civil Plea; the Keeper and Guardian whereof is an Officer attendant on this Court. Also this Prison doth belong to the Palace, Chancery, and Exchequer; and from thence they do usually commit to this Prison, Dyer 297. 21 Ed. 4. 71. Dyer 275.

Newgate, what.

It is the usual and proper Prison unto which Criminal offenders are sent from the Upper-Bench; and this Prison is also used for such kind of prisoners as are within the City of London, as the two Counters are used for such as are in prison for Debt there.

See

SeB. 12.
10. What shall be said an Escape of one in Execution, or
not.

No Warden of the Fleet shall suffer any prisoner in Execution, to go out of prison by Mainprise, Bail, Baston, without making gree to the party, unless by Writ or other Commandment of the Lord Protector, upon pain to lose his office, and the party to have a Writ of Debt against him, 1 R. 2. 12.

If a Sheriff or Gaoler suffer his prisoner in Execution to go abroad with his Keeper, or without his Keeper, unless it be by the License of the Lord Chief Justice, and of the party Plaintiff, or suffer him to go into another County out of his Custody, though it be with his Keeper, and with License also; this is an Escape in Law, though he come to prison again: But in London, by a special Custom, in some case, the prisoner may go abroad with his Keeper, and it is no Escape. Plow. 36. 37.

If a man be in prison on an Execution, and the Sheriff at the end of his year do not make him over by Indenture to his Successor, though he tell him of it, and he knoweth there is such a prisoner, yet the new Sheriff is not chargable with him; and therefore this is an Escape in the old Sheriff.

So if one man be in Execution for two Debts, and the Sheriff mention but one upon the Indenture; this is an Escape for the other. But if the old Sheriff die, then the new Sheriff is chargable for the prisoners he doth finde in prison, without any Indenture or other notice. Co. 3. 72. 44.

If upon a Capias ad Satisfaciendum the Sheriff return that he hath taken the Body, but hath him not in Court the day of the Return of the Writ, although he be in Gaol, yet it seems this is an Escape in Law: But the practice of this day is otherwise. Ido quere. 7 H. 4. 11. Bro. Escape 107.

If a Sheriff or Gaoler will let go his prisoner, and take a promise of him, that he will come again by such a day; this is an Escape, though the party be come again at the day. Co. 3. 44.

If the King had commanded, or if a great man should require the Sheriff or Gaoler, to discharge the prisoner, and he do so; this is an Escape. So if at any such command, he let him go at liberty for a little while; this is an Escape. Dyer 278. 297. 13 H. 4. 13.

If a Woman sole be a Keeper of a prison, and she marry with one of her prisoners; this is an Escape in Law. So if a man have a prison in Fee, and his Son and Heir be his prisoner, and he die, and the prison descend to his Son; this is an Escape in Law. Plow. 37.

If one be Arrested, and the party rescue himself by violence; or another do rescue him out of the Sheriff's hands, this is an Escape; for the Sheriff might have had Posse Comitatum to aid him; but if the Rescue had been by the Kings enemies, contra. Dyer 241. Co. 6. 54.

If the Baron and Feme be in Execution for the Debt of the Wife, and the Gaoler suffer the Wife to escape, this is an Escape which will make the Gaoler chargable for the Debt. Dr. Sutcliffe versus Sir George Reynel. Trin. 13 Jac. Bar. Set Co. 3. 43.

If the prisoner do involuntarily escape, and the Sheriff do make a hot pursuit after him, and take him, though it be in another County; this is no Escape, Bro. Escape 4.

Where there is no Imprisonment at the time of the Escape, there is no Escape, as if a prisoner Escape; and after the Sheriff take him for himself, not upon a fresh pursuit, and after in the time of another Sheriff he doth escape; this is no Escape to the Plaintiff, for he was not now in Execution for him.

So if a man be imprisoned by a Court that hath not power so to do: As if a Court Baron will grant a Capias to take a mans body in Execution; or the Court hath power, but doth not proceed legally. As if the Chancery will grant a Capias to take a mans body upon a Recognizance where no Capias doth lie, and the Sheriff do so; and after let him escape; or a Court will send a man to prison on a Judgment for the Plaintiff, without any request or desire by him; or the party that doth Arrest hath no Authority, as the Sheriff Arrest without Process, and after let the prisoner go: In all these cases there is no Escape, 14 Hen. 7. 1. Dyer 66. 106. 157. 160. Bro. Escape 3.

If a Sheriff die, and a prisoner escape before another be made Sheriff; this is no Escape to charge the precedent or subsequent Sheriff, but the party may be taken in Execution again, upon the same Execution, Co. 3. 72.

If a prisoner in Execution escape, and the Gaoler make fresh Sure, and before his retaking the party doth bring his Action against the Gaoler; in this case the Gaoler cannot retake, as for the Plaintiff to have him in Execution again, but for his own Indempnity. But if he do not bring his Action, then he may take him for the Plaintiff, Goldsb. 18c. pl. 114.

If the Sheriff, Justice of the Court, and the Plaintiff in the Sure, License a prisoner to go for a time abroad, and he do so and return at his time, this is no Escape; but it seems the Gaoler or Sheriffs consent must be in this case also, Dyer 275.

If a Sheriff or Gaoler be to bring a prisoner by Habeas Corpus, or the like, into a Court by a day, and the prisoner get away by the way, or the Keeper go out of the right way, or into another County; yet if he come by the day of the Return of the Writ in Court: these be no Escapes. Co. 3. 42. Dyer 249.

If a Plaintiff by word License a Sheriff to deliver a prisoner, and he do so; this is no Escape. 27 H. 8. 24.

If a Prison be burnt with fire, or broken by enemies of the Commonwealth, and hereby the prisoners get out; this is no Escape. Contrā, if it be broken by Rebels or Traytors. Dyer 66. Bro. Escape 10.

If a man be in Execution, and a Writ of Privilege is sent to the Sheriff from Parliament, to deliver him, and he do so, this is no Escape; but after Parliament, he may take him again, Dyer 60.

If a prisoner be took from a Gaoler, by the Lord Protectors Writ, and then by a Court committed to another, this is no Escape in the first Gaoler. Dyer 249. 152.

If one arrested on a Mesn Proces be rescued, the Sheriff shall not be punished for this; and if the party bring any Action, he may plead his Rescous, but so he cannot upon an Execution. May versus Proby, & Lumley vic' Middlesex, Adjudg. Hil. 14 Jac. B. R.

If a prisoner escape out of the Kings Bench, or Marshalsey, or the Fleet, the Keepers of those Prisons shall be charged, and the Action shall be brought against them.

Señ. 13.
11. Who shall be charged for an Escape.

If a prisoner escape out of either of the Counters in London, the Action shall be brought against the Sheriffs of London.

If a prisoner escape out of any other Gaol in the Countrey, the Action must be brought against the Sheriff of the County, Dyer 278. 296. Co. 3. 52.

If a prisoner be removed out of the Fleet, that was there upon an Execution out of the Common Pleas, and he be removed by a Corpus cum causa, and then sent to the Marshalsey for another Debt; if he escape thence, the Gardein of the Marshalsey shall be charged for the first and second Debt, and not the Gardein of the Fleet, Dyer 152.

If an escape were in the time of a Predecessor Sheriff, the Successor shall not be charged for it, but the Action shall be brought against the first Sheriff by the name of Nuper vic', Co. 3. 52.

If a Gaoler that hath the Fee of a Prison, make a Lease of it for life or years, and the Lessee suffer an Escape, the party grieved may sue him; and if he be not sufficient to answer it, he may sue the Lessor, Co. 4. 98. Dyer 278.

It is where one is kept in Prison, or restrained from his liberty, contrary to Law, or threatened to be killed, maimed, or imprisoned; if he will not do some Act, or make some Deed, which he thereupon doth; now for this cause the Deed is void. And if the party to whom it is made, make any use of it, the party that made it may plead it was done by Dureffe, and so avoid it: And yet the party so imprisoned may have his Action of false Imprisonment also, for the Imprisonment, Co. 3. 119. 2. 9. 2 Ed. 4. 19. Perk 16. 9 H. 7. 24. Terms Ley. Crompt. Jur. fol. 296.

12. Dureffe, what.

As all kinde of Especialties; as Bills, Bonds, Feoffments, Leases, Releases, Wills, and the like, may be avoided by this means; so also it seems, Recognizances made upon the Statute, 23 H. 8. 6. and Marriages may be avoided for this cause.

What Acts may be avoided by Dureffe, or not.

So also Discents hapning while a man is in prison, shall not hurt him, Dyer 143. But Records Regularly shall not be said to be so made, and therefore not avoided by such a Plea or Pretence, 16 H.7.5. 31 H.6.9.

13. What shall be said to be done by Duress, and thereby void or voidable.

To make the Case to be so, these things must be in the case.

1. There must be a Threatning, or Beating, or Imprisonment.

2. The Threatning must be of Life, Member, or Imprisonment.

3. It must be of the Life, Member, or Body of the party himself, that makes the Deed, or his Wife, or Child.

4. Upon this the Deed must be made; and if either of these be wanting, it is no Duress, Broo. Duress 76. 18. 9 H.7.24. 39 H.6.50. Brownl. 2 part. 276. As in the Examples following.

If one threaten me, unless I will make him a Bond of forty pound, and I tell him I will not, but I will make him a Bond of twenty pound, and I do so, this is by Duress. But if I say I will not do it, unless you give me five pound, and he do so, it seems this takes away the force, and yet if it move first from him, as I will give you five pound, and you shall give me a Bond of forty pound; here it shall be judged by Duress, and so void.

If four do threaten one to imprison him, if he will not seal a Deed to one of them four, and he do so for fear of this; this is void. So if one threaten, unless he will seal to four, and he do so, it is void to all four of them, Broo. Duress 1.

If one threaten or imprison a man till he swear, or promise he will seal such a Deed, and afterwards he doth it accordingly at another time, and in another place out of prison, and without threatning; yet this shall be said to be done by Duress, and therefore void, Broo. Duress 7. 11. 20. 21 Ed.4.6.

If one threaten to kill a man, unless he will make a Deed to J. S. a stranger, and he do so; this is void, as if it were to the party himself, Broo. Duress 9. 20.

If one that is in prison for another, upon a lawful cause, and I shall procure them to be used more severely in prison; by this means to compel him to make some Deed, and thereupon he do so; this shall be said per Duress and void, Broo. Duress 2. 10. Brownl. Reg. 1 part. 64.

If a man be imprisoned at my Sute, be the cause unjust, or not, and he will then make an Obligation to another; this is good, and cannot be said to be per Duress. Terms Ley.

If one threaten me to take away my Goods, burn or break my House, enter upon my Land, or to kill or wound my Father or Mother, Brother, or Sister, or Friend, or do imprison any of them; and hereupon I seal a Deed, this is good, and shall not be said per Duress, 7 Ed.4.21. 20 Ass. pl. 14. 18 H.6.21. 21 Ed.4.13. 15 H.6.17. 11 Ed.4.13. 8 H.6.8. Co. 2.9. Some affirm the contrary upon threats to Father or Child, 15 Ed.4.1.

If one distrain my Beasts, to compel me to seal a Deed, and will not deliver them, unless I do so, and threaten me, that unless I will seal the Deed, if I take my Cattle again, he will beat and kill me; this is no Duress, and therefore if I do seal upon this any Deed, the Deed is good enough, Broo. Duress 16.

If a man be arrested and imprisoned upon good cause, and being in prison make an Obligation, or other Deed to him, at whose Sute he was arrested, or to any other for his enlargement; it is good enough: As if Auditors do commit an Accomptant to prison, and then he make an Obligation to his Master for the Arrearages; or if one in prison for Felony, will grant a Reversion to one to help him out of his trouble, it is good enough, Dyer 143. Broo. Duress 17. 11. 4. 6. Mansfields case in C. B.

If A. and B. by Duress to B. seal a Deed, the Deed is good to A. that was never threatned, M. 7 Jac.

If one make an Obligation by Duress, and after being at large, take a Defenceance upon it; this makes the Obligation good, and doth estop him to say it was by Duress, 3 H.6.16. Broo. Defenceance 17.

If a stranger be imprisoned by another stranger, and kept in prison until another, as Surety for the stranger, make a Bond; this is not avoidable by this Plea, Brownl. 1 part. 64. But if a Court that had no power to imprison a man (as the High Com-Commission formerly) in things out of their power, had imprisoned a man, and took Bond of him for a Fine; this had been, and still will be void upon this account, Brownl. 2 part. 14.

It is where a man is taken and arrested for any cause whatsoever, for that he is restrained of his liberty, and for being under Arrest, doth give Bond to appear at the Assizes, Sessions, or other Court; then upon this he is bailed (i. e.) set at liberty till his day of Appearance come. And if he be not bailable, the parties that bailed him, may be punished, Terms Ley Bail. 4 Ed. 3. 2. SeB. 14. 14. Bail, what.

It is where a man is arrested in some special case, then the Judge may deliver his body to certain men to keep, to bring him at his day; and these be called Mainper-vors, who if the party appear not at the day, are to be amerced: And where a man arrested, is bailable, and cannot be bailed, he may have a Writ of Mainprise to bail him, Terms Ley Main Per-vors, F.N.B. 249. 9. Mainprise, what.

Such as are arrested on mean Proces, Writ, Bill, or Warrant, in Actions Personal, or Indictment for Trespass, are Bailable. Such as are accused of Receipt of Felons, of Commandment, or Force, or Aid, in Felony done, and a man appealed by an Approver after the death of the Approver (if he be no common Thief, or defamed) shall be let out of prison by a Surety, 33 H. 6. 10. Plow. 67. Westm. 1. 15. Daltons J. P. fol. 271. 15. Who may be bailed, or not.

Such as are brought before Justices upon a light suspicion, or upon malice, if he perceive it so, though it be an accusation of Felony, 1 R. 3. 3. 3 H. 7. 3. Westm. 1. cap. 15. 27 Ed. 1. 3. 1 Ed. 3. 8.

Such persons as are in prison or Executions, Cap. ut legat' Excommunications, Sureties of the Peace, Vagabonds, or by some special Commandment from some Justice for some special cause, Felonious burners of Houses, and the like, are not bailable, 5 Ed. 3. 8. 2 H. 5. 2. 33 H. 6. 10. See the Proces against the Bail, Brownl. Rep. 1 part. in toto, 2 part. 76.

The Defendant in an Appeal of Maim, if the Maim be hainous, nor the Principal in an Indictment, or Appeal of Felony, nor the Accessory after the Attainder of the Principal, nor any in High Treason, 6 H. 7. 11. *Westm. 1. 75. It is a Writ lying where a man is imprisoned upon a false Conspiracy, and there is no Appeal or Indictment against him, then he may have this Writ; and the Conspiracy being found, he shall be delivered upon the Bail of twelve sufficient men of the County, whether he be guilty or imprisoned of Malice, or not, Co. 9. 56. Register see for this, 2 part. of *Co. CHAP. XCIX.

Incident, Appendant, Parcel or Adjacent, Intert and Incontinency.

1. Incident,
what.
The kinds.

Incidents are such things as depend on other things more principal, to which they are in a manner accessory; and these are sometimes called Appendant, and sometimes Appurtenant; and these are of a different nature and consideration: For some of them are, as it were, Parcel of the things themselves that are the principals, as the Glass-windows, Doors, Wainscots, and other Appendix of a House to the house itself, Trees, Hedges, Ways, and Waters to the ground, in which they are. Some of them are so Incident to their principal, that they cannot be divided from it, and yet continue to be: As a Court Baron to a Manor, Court of Pipowders to a Fair, and Eskovers to a House: Charters of Land to the Land, and Common Appendant unto the Land, to which it is Appendant.

And these Incidents howsoever they are not needful to the esse, yet to the benefit of the things themselves they are needful; and therefore the Law hath such a care to preserve them: And for this cause it is, That if a Common of Eskovers do belong to a House, and after the House fall, or be gone, it shall continue to the place, where the House stood.

And these two kinds of Incidents are so inherent to the Principals, that by the Grant of the one, the other is granted, and they cannot be extinct by Release, nor saved by Exception from the other; but in special cases, though it be not named as the Glass, and the rest, by the Grant of the House, Trees by the Grant of the Ground, and the Court Baron by the Grant of a Manor, and so the rest.

And the third sort of these Incidents, are such as may or may not have Dependence on their Principals, and will stand well enough without them: As an Advowson, Villain, Leet, Warren, and the like; all which may be Appendant to a Manor by Prescription of Continuance of Usage, time out of minde; or may be, or be made in Gross, being severed from their principal; of this nature also is a Rent Incident to a Reversion, Co. super Littl. f. 93.

And these also pass by the Grant of the principal, without any other words of Cum pertinentiis: See Broo. Incidents in toto. Perk. sect. 112. Dyer 288. 14 H. 8. 25. Co. 11. 50. 8 Hen. 7. 54. Plow 3. 81. Co. 4. 38. Co. super Littl. fol. 131, 132. 143. 151, 152. See much of this in the New Book of Excessors, fol. 5.

2. What things shall be said to be Parcel of,
or Incident to other things, and go with them, or not.

All things that are annexed and fastned to the House by Nails, Skrews, or Pins, or by Mortar or Stones, though it be set there by the charge of a Lessee, as Glass, Wainscot, Tables, Shelves, Vates turneis, and the like: Also Doors, Locks, Keys, and the like, are so Incident to the House, that being once there set on by whomsoever, they cannot be ever after divided from the House, unless it be by him that hath the Inheritance, that may pull it down if he will: And therefore if any Lessee for life or years, shall set on to any House any such thing, he cannot after take it away, neither before nor after the end of his Term; much less then when they are fixed by the charge of another; and therefore these do go with the House, and the Heir hath them that hath the House, and the Executor as Chattels. See Chattels. Co. 4. 63. 21 H. 7. 26. 20 H. 7. 13.

Land, Meadow, Pasture, Wood, and divers other things are Parcel of a Manor, and Incident to it; for this word is a Compound and Collective word. So Lands, Meadows, or Pasture, may be Parcel of a Monastery, Rectory, Castle, or Honor:

So

So also Tithes, Offerings, and Glebe Land, are Parcel of Parsonage or Vicaridge, Plow. 170. 168. 15 H. 7. 8.

Fealty is Incident to Homage, and Homage and Knights Service to Eſcuage, and by Grant of Service, Eſcuage doth paſs, Co. lib. Inſt. 1 part, fol. 69.

Fealty is an Incident inſeparable to a Tenure or Reverſion, Co. ſuper Liſt. 93. 143.

So is a Diſtreſs to Homage, Fealty, and Eſcuage, Co. ſuper Liſt. 130 b. Crompt. 7th 113: 116 a.

If one grant me to put Pipes in his Ground to bring water to my houſe; now as Incident to this Grant, I may come upon the Ground to amend my Pipes when there is need. So if I have Trees growing in another mans Ground, I muſt have as Incident to it, ſo much of the Soil as to nourish the life Vegetative of the Trees, 9 Ed. 4: 35. Co. 11. 49. 5: 111. 21 H. 6. 47.

Fire-boot, Houſe-boot, Plough-boot, and Hay-boot, is Incident to every Leaſe for life or years. See Houſe-boot, 9 H. 7. 11.

A Diſtreſs is Incident to every Fine or Amercement in a Law-day. See Leet and Fine.

The Qualities of Dower, Courteſie, Diſpariſhment of Waſte, and power to ſuffer a Common Recovery, are Incident to an Eſtate-tail: See Tail, Co. 10. 30.

Rent and Services reſerved upon any particular Eſtate, are Incident to the Reverſion thereof: Alſo Fealty is Incident to Homage, and to every Tenure, Diſtreſs and Fealty is Incident to Rent-service: A Rent ſeparably Fealty inſeparably is Incident to the Reverſion, Co. ſuper Liſt. 130. And by the Grant of the Reverſion, all the Services will paſs, Co. ſuper Liſt. 137. Kelm. 136. Co. 11. 27. Co. ſuper Liſt. 152.

Incorporeal things, as Advowſons, Allains, Ways, Courts, Fiſhings, Commons, or the like, may properly be Parcel of, or at leaſt Appendant to Corporeal things, as Houſes, Lands, Manors, and the like. Et ſic contra, Plow. 170. Co. 4: 38. Co. ſuper Liſt. 122. Co. lib. Inſt. 1 part, fol. 49.

A Forreſt may be Appendant to an Honor, Land to an Office, or an Office to Land: an Advowſon, Market, Fair, or Warren, Leet, Hundred, and ſuch like, may be Appendant to a Manor. Ways, Commons, Fiſhings, and the like, may be Appurtenant to Lands, Meadows, Paſtures or Rents. A Leet may be Appendant to a Hundred. A Waif or Eſtray may be Appendant to a Leet, or to a Manor. A Villain Regardant, an Advowſon Appendant, are Incident to a Manor; and paſs without Cum pertinentiis, 11 H. 7. 16. 32 H. 6. 45. Plow. 170. 8 H. 7. 5. 4 Ed. 4. 29. 6 H. 7. 11. Co. ſuper Liſt. 367. March. 76. pl. 115.

A Reverſion Expectant on a Franck-tenement, may be Parcel or Appendant to a Franck-tenement or Inheritance in Poſſeſſion: And all theſe Appendants may be made by Preſcription of Uſage time out of minde; Co. 11. 47. Co. 6: 34. Plow. 70.

If one Leaſe a Manor, excepte an Acre; now this Acre as to the Leſſor, is no part of the Manor, but as to him that hath right by a Tide, it is Parcel; and therefore he need not make any Faſprife in his Writ, Plow. 104.

If one ſell a Manor, excepting the Woods and Underwoods, and Hedges, and Hawks bred in the Wood, the Leſſor ſhall have them, not the Leſſee. See Manor, Co. ſuper Liſt. 324. 2^o Liſt. 591. 14 H. 8. 11.

A Waif or Eſtray, is not as Parcel, nor inſeparably Incident to a Leet, nor one liberty to another, as a Leet to a Hundred, or the like, but by Common Uſage, time out of minde, they may become Appurtenant or Appendant, nor a Rent, or Homage or Fealty, 9 Ed. 4. 35. 11 H. 7. 12. Plow. 332. Co. ſuper Liſt. fol. 150.

Toll, Pickage, and Stallage, is not of Common Right, Incident to a Fair or Market, as the Court of Pipeſword is to a Fair, F. Curia, Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. But by Preſcription perhaps may become Incident.

No Corporeal things are, or can be incident to, or parcel of other things of the ſame nature and ſubſtance, as one houſe to another, or Land, Meadow, Paſture, Rent, or the like, to a Houſe or to Rent, unleſs it be in caſe where that to which it is incident, Incident, be a compounded thing, as a Manor, Farm, Castle, Honour, or the like, for to such, Land, Meadow, and Pasture, may be incident. See before: Plow. 170. 85. Bro. Incident 25.

A Leet cannot be Appendant to a Church or Chappel, nor Common of Turbary to Land, nor Common Appendant to Meadow, or Pasture, Co. 4. 38. Bank feloni. and such like Royal Franchises cannot be Appendant to any Manor or House, or the like, Co. 10. 88.

A Frank-tenement or Inheritance in Possession, cannot be Parcel and Appendant to a Reversion, Expectamina. Co. 11. 47.

Frank-tenement, for which see Grant. Fealty or Reversion is not inseparable to the Rent, neither will it pass by the Grant of it; Ch. Sup. Litt. 130. 324, 325.

One Office cannot be Appendant to another properly; but there be some great Offices that have other Offices, as incident to theirs, by common use of time out of minde, as the Chief Justices; and so now they are become Appendant; Plow. 138.

If one make a Lease of an Incorporeal thing, rendring Rent; this Rent is not incident to; neither will it pass by the Grant of the Reversion; Co. lib. 10. 1 part: fol. 47.

The Waincot doors, or any other part of a House, may be severed from a House, by him that hath the Feoffment of the House. A man may bar himself of his liberty, to himself his Pipe that hath it (as in the case above.) A man may sever his Tithes and Offerings, from his Glebe. A Lessee may bar himself of his Fire-boot, Hay-boot, and Plough-boot, by Agreement; for Moderis & contrarius vicinus &c. And a man of his power to distrain in some cases where his Distress is incident; And a man of his power to distrain in some cases, where his Distress is Incident. And the Tenant in Tail in some cases, may be barred of the Privileges and Qualities that are incident to his Estate; Bro. Incid. in 100. 7 Ed. 4. 11. Brownl. Rep. 2 part. 192, 193.

But a Court Baron cannot be severed from a Manor, nor a Manor from the Court, for they live and die together: So neither can a Court of Pipowders be severed from a Man, Common of Erovers from the House, to which it doth belong, nor Common from the Land, to which it doth append; but these Commons may by a man be extinct: See Common. Plea. 381. Co. 11. 77. 914. Doffl & Stud. 75. 26.

Homage and Fealty cannot be parted; nor Fealty from a Tenure; nor Wardship and Marriage from Esuage: But Rent may be severed from a Reversion, and so it may from Fealty; for it is but incident separable, yet it passeth by Grant of the Rent; Co. lib. 10. 1 part: fol. 47. Co. 9. 127. 3 H. 6. 5. 4 H. 7. 10.

Fees or Annuities for Offices, cannot be severed from the Offices, while the Offices continue: See for this, Plow. 381.

If one grant Wood to be burnt in such a House; this may not be granted from the House, but he that hath the House, shall have the Wood; Co. lib. 10. 1 part: fol. 47.

If the King had a Manor to which an Advowson is Appendant, and he grant the Manor, and not name the Advowson in special; now hereby the Advowson is severed, and become in Crown: So if one Lease a Manor for life, reserving one Acre Parcel of it; hereby this Acre is severed: So if one Disseise a man of an Acre Parcel of a Manor, hereby this Acre is divided till by his Entry it be united: And in all these Cases, the owner of the Manor doo after graunte the Manor or the Reversion of it, the Advowson or Part of Land doth not pass. Carol. 64. 11. 47. Dyn. 48. 11. 48. If one Disseise one of Common Appendant belonging to my Manor, and during the Disseison, I sell the Manor; now hereby the Common is extinct for ever; Co. 11. 47. 11. 48.

If a Lord will release his Services to his Tenants, hereby they are extinct.

3. Where things Incident may be severed, and how, or not.

4. Where things once Appendant, become Disappendant or Extinct.

No Corporeal thing is incident to another, or parcel of other thing, as one house to another, or Land, Meadow, Pasture, &c. incident to a House or to Land, unless in some case where it is incident to the use of the house, or to the use of the Land, or to the use of the Pasture, &c.

Of Intent.

INtent is the true meaning of men, and their minde, in their words, sayings, and doings: And this in some cases, the Law hath much regard unto, and in some not. As in Acts of Parliament, the intent and minde of the Law-makers is much regarded. In Arbitrments, the Intent and Minde of the Arbitrators; in Wills and Testaments, the Intent and Minde of the Testator; also in Deeds and Publick Instruments, in Bargains and Contracts, the Law hath much respect to the Intent of the Parties: And therefore in divers cases, if the Intent be satisfied, though the words be not, the Law is satisfied with this; As if a Feoffment be made on Condition, that the Feoffee shall make a Gift in Special Tail to the Feoffor, and his Wife by such a day, and they both, or one of them die before the day, leaving issue behinde them, and then the Feoffee make back an Estate in the first case, to the Issue, and the Heirs of the Body of the Father and Mother, and in last to the Survivor of them, without impeachment of Waste, the Remainder to the Issue in Tail; howsoever this be no performance of the words; yet because it is as near the Intent as may be, the Law doth accept of this as a good performance of the Condition. So contra when the words are fully performed, and not the Intent, the Law will not be satisfied with it: And therefore in the case above, if the Feoffee had made a Feoffment to another before, or granted a Rent-charge out of the Land, or the like; and after, before the day, make back an Estate according to the Condition; yet the Law will not allow this for a performance of the Condition, and yet he doth as much as is in the words. Littl. Condit. 82. Plow. 291. 28. See 23 H. 7. 4.

Intent, what, & Regard.

In some cases the Law doth not regard mens Intent, as when men shall do evil, when they say they intended none; or do more evil when they intend less: Here they shall be punished according to their Deed, and not according to their intent; as if one intend onely to beat a man, and therein happen to kill him. So if Mens Wills and Testaments have any thing in them contrary, and repugnant to any rule of Law, the Law will not regard it, nor labor to fulfil it.

Of Incontinency and Bastardy.

AS to the point of Incontinency, we are to know there are divers degrees thereof. First, There is Bigamy, the having of more Wives then one, wherein these things are to be known. It is Felony for any one having a Husband or Wife, and knowing him or her to be alive, to marry another Husband or Wife: Secondly, But if the Husband or Wife have been seven years together beyond Sea; or they have been seven years together one from another in any part of the Kings Dominions; the one of them then not knowing the other to be alive within this time; or they were duly divorced from the first Husband or Wife, or the first marriage be duly declared to be void, or the first marriage were made within age of consent; In all these cases it is no Felony, 1 Jac. II.

Bigamy, or Double Marriage.

And as to Adultery, these things are to be known.

Adultery.

1. It is Felony for a Woman, knowing her first Husband to be alive, or not having been three years absent, continually beyond Sea, or elsewhere continually from her, so long she nos knowing him alive within that time, or by common report reputed to be dead, to be known by a man, it is Felony in both of them.

2. It is Felony for any man to lie with a married Woman, if he know her to be so, At, 10 May, 1650.

Fornication.

3. If any others lie together, or if any one be a Bawd, or keep a Bawdy-house, the second offence in both these cases, is Felony, At, 10 May, 1650.

Bawd.

4. As to Incest, it is to be known, That it is Felony for any one to lie with his, or her Grand-father or Grand-mother, Father or Mother, Brother or Sister, Son or Daughter, or Grand-child; Father, Brother or Sister, Fathers Wife, Mothers Incest.

Buggery.
Sodomy.
Rape.

Husband, Sons Wife, Daughters Husband, Wives Mother or Daughter, Husbands Father or Son, Alt. 10 May. 1650.

5. It is Felony to commit Buggery with a Beast, or to commit Buggery, or Sodomy with a man, 25 Hen. 8. 6. 3 Eliz. 17. Co. 3 part of Inst. cap. 10.

CHAP. C.

Of Joyntenants, Parceners, and Tenants in Common.

Self. 1.
1. Joyntenants,
what.

Joyntenants are such as have, and come by Lands or Tenements, Goods, or Chattels, by one and the same joynt Means and Title, as in the cases hereafter following. As if Lands be given or granted by Fine, Recovery, &c. Deed, or without Deed, or Devised by Will to two or more, and their Heirs, or to two or more for their lives, or for other lives, or to two or more for years. (But between Baron and Feme after marriage, there is no Moyety, but each of them hath all, Co. super Littl. 187, 188.)

So if Goods, or any other Chattels, be given or granted to two or more, and they have it in Possession, or in Right; in all these cases the Donors or Grantees are Joyntenants.

So if a Contract be made to two or more, or a Recognizance or Obligation be made to two or more, the parties to whom the Contract is made, the Conseees and Obligees Obligees are Joyntenants of this Debt or Duty: And between these Joyntenants there is a twofold Privy in Estate, and in Possession, Co. super Littl. 169. Also Joyntenants may be of an Estate by wrong; but this ¶ in accrescendi inter mercatores pro beneficio commercii locum non habet: As of two Merchants for the Wares, Merchandises, Debts, or Duties, that they have as joynt Partners or Merchants. See Terms Let. Littl. fol. 62. Broo. Joyntenants 17. Plow. 10.72. Dyer 150. 305. Co. 3. 26, 29. 1. 85. Noy, chap. 6. Co. super Littl. 182.

If an Advowson be granted to B. Habendum eis & uni eorum conjunctim & divisim; it seems by this they are Joyntenants, Dyer 304.

If Lands be given to two & uni eorum diutius viventi; hereby they are Joyntenants for life, Co. 11. 4.

If Lands be given or granted to two, without limitation of any Estate; hereby they are Joyntenants for life, Co. 8. 95.

If Lands be given or granted to two or more Habendum to them successive, they are hereby Joyntenants. So if Lands be granted to two or more, and to him that shall survive, they are by this Limitation, Joyntenants. Broo. Joyntenants 33. And this is so, whether the Grant be for life or years. See Broo. Joyntenants 140. Whitlocks case, M. 3 Jac. B.R. Broo. Trespass 54.

If a Lease be made to two more for years, with a Proviso, That if they die within the Term, that the Term shall cease, hereby they are Joyntenants, Dyer 67.

If Joyntenants be ousted or disseised, and sue for and recover again, they shall be Joyntenants as they were at first, Co. super Littl. 188.

If Chattels Real or Personal be granted to a Bishop, or the like, and another, or to two Corporations, or the like; here they are Joyntenants: And it is not as in the case of Lands so granted, Co. super Littl. fol. 190.

If Lessee for years grant his Term to another, and a Woman, they are Joyntenants.

But if Goods be given to a Woman, and another, the Husband of the Woman, and the other, are Tenants in Common.

If a Lease be made to two or more, Habendum eis ad terminum vite eorum conjunctim & alterius diutius viventi, ac assignatis suis qui primus eorum discedere contingat durante vita ejus qui superstiti; hereby they are Joyntenants, Dyer 46. Co. of Copihold 142.

If an Estate be made to a Husband and Wife, and a third person, hereby they are Joyntenants, the Husband, Wife, hath a Moyety, and the other person, the other Moyety, Litt.

If Lessee for life grant to him in Reversion, and two others, for two parts in three parts, the other men are Joyntenants. Broo. Joyntenants 14.

If Lands be given to two Men or Women, or more, and the Heirs, or Heirs Males, or Heirs Females of their Bodies, or in any such like manner; hereby they are Joyntenants for their lives, and they have several Inheritances; and their Issues after shall be Tenants in Common, Co. super Littl. fol. 182, 183. Dyer 350. Littl. fol. 62, 63, 64.

If Lands be given to two or more, and the Heirs, or Heirs Males of the Body of one of them; hereby they are Joyntenants for their lives, and one hath the Inheritance, Dyer 350. Co. 3. 60.

If one make a Feoffment in Fee to the use of himself, and his wife that shall be, and after he take a wife, she shall be Joyntenant with him, Co. 1. 101.

If Joyntenants Exchange their Lands, they have in Joyntenancy for other Lands, they shall be Joyntenants of their other Land, as they were of this, unless they agree to have it in Common, Perk. 55, 56.

If two Men or more do Disseise another, now hereby they are Joyntenants of this Estate, which they have got by the Disseision, unless they made the Disseision to the use of another, or to the use of one of them, Littl. cap. Joyntenants, fol. 62.

If one Disseise to the use of two, and one agree at one time, the other at another, they are Joyntenants, Co. super Littl. 188.

2. Where a man shall be said to be a Joyntenant, or not.

If a Rent-charge of ten pound be granted to A. and B. habendum to them two, viz. to A. until he be married, and to B. until he be advanced unto a Benefice; these be Joyntenants in the mean time; and if A. die before marriage, the Rent shall survive, but if A. had married, the Rent should have ceased for a Moyety, Et sic est converso. See more there. Co. super Littl. fol. 180, 299, 300.

If a Lease be made to three joyntly in the Premises of the Deed, habendum to one for life, the Remainder to another for life, the Remainder to the third for life; hereby they are not Joyntenants, but have one in Remainder after another, Dyer 260.

If one Demise to two habendum to one for years, and to the other for life, they are no Joyntenants, Co. super Littl. 188.

If Lands be given to a Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of their Bodies, here is no Joynttenancy between them, Co. 10. 50.

If two or more Disseise another to the use of one of them, they are not Joyntenants, Littl. f. 62.

If a Lease be made to two or more. Habendum eis pro termino visa eorum esse alteri, eorum diutius viventi successive uni eorum post alterum sicut nominantur in Indentura, & non conjunctim, and Livery of Seisin be made accordingly, hereby the Lessees are not Joyntenants, but shall take one after another, vide per eos Tenants in Common: For where there is a Tenancy in Common, there is no Joynttenancy: But if an Indent be between A. of the one part, and B. of the other part; and thereby A. demise to B. C. and D. habendum to them successive, there C. and D. must take by way of Remainder, and not joyntly, Dyer 361.

If a man make a Lease for life, and after grant the Reversion to the Tenant for life, and another and their Heirs, they are not Joyntenants of the Reversion, but the one hath all for life, and the Reversion between them.

So if two be Tenants for life, and the Reversion is granted to one of them, Co. super Littl. fol. 182.

So if Lessee for life, grant his estate to him in Reversion, and a stranger.

So if a man make a Lease for life, and grant the Reversion to two in Fee, and the Lessee grant his Estate to one of them.

If Lands be given to two & heredibus, it is void, and doth limit no Estate.

If Lands be given to a man, and such a woman as shall be his wife, here is no Joynttenancy, but the man shall have the whole. But if one make a Feoffment in Fee to the use of himself, and of such wife as he shall after marry for their lives, when he takes a wife, they are Joyntenants, Co. 1. 101. Co. super Littl. fol. 188.

If Lands be demised for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. and of J. H. J. S. hath issue and dieth, and after J. H. hath issue and dieth, the issue are not Joyntenants, because the Moyeties veiled at several times, Co. super Littl. Idem.

The nature of this Tenure is, that every Joynttenant is seised of the whole thing, whether Lands or Goods, of which he is a Joynttenant, and they have it pro indiviso, and if one of them die naturally or civilly, so long as the Joynttenancy doth continue, the surviving Joynttenant shall have his part, and so he that doth live last and longest, shall have the whole, and neither of their parts shall go to their Heirs, Executors, or Administrators, as long as there be any other Joynttenant left to take it, and this is called ius accrescendi, Co. super Littl. 181. Plow. 203. Co. 6. 76. Littl. fol. 280, 281. Broo. Joynttenancy 38.

In all the cases above, if one of the Joyntenants die, his part shall go to the survivor; as if three Joyntenants be of Land in Fee, and one have issue, and die, the Land shall go to the other two survivors; and if one of them die, the last liver shall have the whole, and his Heirs for ever, Littl. fol. 62. Dyer 187. Co. 1. 76.

So if two or more have a Lease for years, or a Wardship, and one of them die, the survivor shall have the whole, and not the Executor or Administrator of the deceased Joynttenant, Littl. f. 62.

See 2.
3: Where the Survivor shall have all by right of Sur-vivorship.

So if a Recognizance, Bill, or Contract, be made to two, or more, and one die, the Survivor, not his Executors, or Administrators, shall take the benefit of it, Littl. f. 62. Broo. Joyntenants 7. 17.

So if the Obligation were to Baron and Feme, and he die, she may sue, and shall have it.

And in all these cases the Survivor may sue in his own name alone, Broo. Joyntenants 44. 6 Ed. 4. 8. 22 H. 8. 1.

If the Baron and Feme, and a third person are Joyntenants into, and the Husband sell away the whole, and die, and after his Wife die; now by Survivorship the right of Action, to recover the whole, is come to him, and it seems he shall recover the whole.

If two Joyntenants be in a Fee, and one make a Lease for years of his own part, rendring Rent, and die, the Survivor shall have the Reversion, but not the Rent, Co. super Littl. fol. 185. Dyer 187. For he comes in Paramount.

If a Feme-sole and another be Joyntenants of a Lease for years, and after she take a Husband, and die, the surviving Joyntenant shall have the whole; for the Joynture was not settled by marriage, but the Husband might have severed it, if he would in his Wives life. Plow. 4. 18. Co. super Littl. fol. 185.

If three or more Joyntenants be, and one Release to them all, it seems, that yet the Joyntenancy doth continue, and that the Survivor amongst them, shall have the whole, Broo. Joyntenants 2.

If a Feme-Covert and a stranger be Joyntenants of a Term, and the Husband have the Fee-simple, and after the wife die, the stranger shall have the whole by Survivorship, for here the Joynture was not severed. Plow. 4. 19. 30.

If two Joyntenants be, and one become in debt to the Lord Protector, and die, it seems the Survivor shall have the whole; yet see the Statute of the 13 Eliz. cap. 4.

If the Limitation be to A. and B. and the Heirs or Heirs Male of B. here if B. die, A. shall have the whole by Survivorship, and if A. die, B. hath the Fee-simple, Littl.

If two Joyntenants be of a Rent, and it be behinde for many years, and one of them die, the Survivor shall have all the Arrearages, and may bring an Action and recover them, Broo. Joyntenants 3.

So if two Joyntenants be of a Manor, and a Bailiff receive the profits for many years, and then one of them die, the Survivor alone shall have all the Arrearages, and may by Action recover them. See the Statute of Broo. Joyntenants, fol. 22.

So if a Husband and Wife lose an Advowson in a Quare impedit, by a false Oath, and the Husband die, she alone shall bring the Attaint, and not the Executors, Heir, or Administrator of the Husband, though the damages recovered against them were paid out of the Goods of the Husband. Broo. Joyntenants, fol. 7.

If Baron and Feme before marriage, be Joyntenants in Fee, and after the Husband, during Coverture alien and die; now his Wife shall have the whole by Survivorship: And if the Baron be attainted for Felony or Treason, yet the Wife shall have a Moyety at least, Termes Ley, Dyer 122.

If Lands be let to A. and B. during the life of A. If B. die, A. shall have all: But if A. dieth B. hath nothing, Co. super Littl. fol. 181. See the Womans Lawyer, fol. 151.

But otherwise it is amongst all sorts of Merchants, and of joynt Shopkeepers that joyn in Trade; in this case of the increase thereof, if one die, the other shall not have the benefit by the Survivor, see Brownlows second part, fol. 99.

Self. 3.
4. Where not,
but the Joynture is severed, and so this Quality of the Tenure gone.

If once the Joyntenancy be severed, unless it be revived again (as in some cases it may) the quality of Survivorship is gone. And therefore if once the Joyntenants make Partition amongst them; this is a Severance, and if after one of them die, his part shall go to his Heir, Executor, or Administrator, as the case is, and not to his Companions, Littl. f. 68, 69. Broo. Joyntenants 2. 8.

So if one of them give, grant, or convey away his part for all his time; this is a Severance, and will prevent Survivorship; so if he Surrender it, Daniels case, Hil. 13 Jac. B. R.

If two Infants be Joyntenants in Fee, and one of them make a Feoffment of his Moyety; this is a Severance of the Joynter, Broo. Joyntenants 13.

If two be Joyntenants for life or years, and one of them purchase the Fee, or it descend upon him; this is a perpetual Severance of the Joyntenancy, Dyer 12. Ca. 61. 3. 60.

If A. be Tenant for life, the Remainder to B. C. and D. for life, the Remainder to E. in Fee, and E. levy a Fine to A. for life, and the Remainder to B. in Fee; this is a Severance of the Joynter between B. and the rest, Ca. 3. 60.

If an Estate be to three, and the Heirs of one of them, and he that hath the Fee die, and one of the Survivors purchase the Reversion, hereby the Joyntenancy is severed.

If a Lease be made to two for their lives, and after the Lessor grant the Reversion to them two, and to the Heirs of their two Bodies; the Joynter is severed, and they are Tenants in Common, Co. super Littl. 182.

If two Joyntenants be of a Lease for one and twenty years, and the one of them letteth his part for certain years, part of the Term; the Joynture is severed, Co. super Littl. 192.

If two Joyntenants be in Fee, and one letteth his part to another for the life of the Lessor, and the other Joyntenant dieth first, here shall be no Survivorship, but it may be if the Lessor had died first, contra, Co. super Littl. 19.

If a Feme-Covert and another be jointly possessed of any Chattels Personal, the Law doth presently sever the Joynter of it, and give her part to the Husband, Contra of Chattels Real ut supra, 21 H. 7. 29. Co. super Littl. 185. 25 H. 7. 19. Plow. 4. 19.

Survivorship holdeth not for Goods amongst Merchants, Brownl. Rep. 1 part, 99.

If three Joyntenants be, and one Release to one of his Companions his part; it seems by this the Joynture is severed for that part, and the Releasee, and the other shall hold that part in Common, Broo. Joyntenants 2.

If two Joyntenants be, and one is attainted for Felony; in this case the Lord, not the Survivor, shall have this Moyety, Broo. Adjudg. 12 Car.

If two Joyntenants be of a Term, and one commit Felony by killing himself, or otherwise, or be outlawed, the Joynture is severed, for the Lord Protector shall have the Moyety by Forfeiture.

And if it be a Joyntenancy of Personal things, as Bond, Oxen, or the like; the Lord Protector will have the whole by Prerogative: So also of Chattels Real, if they be between Husband and Wife, Plow. 419. 19 Hen. 7. 47. Broo. Joyntenants 34.

If one Joyntenant lose his part, and it be recovered from him in an Action; hereby the Joyntenancy is severed, Broo. Joyntenants 9.

If a Baron, and Feme, and a third person be Joyntenants, and the Baron sell the whole; this is a Severance of the Joynture, and if he die, the Wife may sue for her Moyety, F. N. B. 193.

If one Joyntenant being ousted by his Companion, bring an Assise against him, and recover his Moyety; this is a Severance of the Joynture. Broo. Joyntenants 41.

If two Women-Coverts be Joyntenants, and their Husbands alien the whole, and each of them recover his part by a cur in vita; this is a Severance of the Joynture, Broo. Idem 43.

If a man be seised or possessed of a joynt Estate, and a Judgment is had against one, and Execution, it seems this is a Severance for so much, and so long at least as Execution is, Co. 6. 79.

If two Joyntenants be in Fee, and one make a Lease for life, and die; it seems this is a Severance of the Joynture, at least, if the other Joyntenant die; that the Lessor shall not have his part, Co. super Littl. fol. 191. But if the Tenant for life die before either of the Joyntenants, then it is in Statu quo prim. fol. 193. See Littl. fol. 68.

If a Lease be made to two for their lives, and the longer liver of them, or either of them longest living, and they make Partition and one die; the Lessor, not the Survivor, nor the Heir or Executor of the Lessee shall have his Moyety that is dead, Co. super Littl. f. 191. Broo. Joyntenants, f. 28. 30 Ass. pl. 8.

If one have a Rent issuing out of Land, and grant it to the Tenant of the Land, and another; here the Survivor shall have nothing, for the one half was extinct, Plow. 419.

If two Joyntenants be in Fee, and they both joyn in a Lease to an Abbott, and a secular Man for their lives; here the Reversion depending upon either of the Freeholds, is severed.

So if a Lease be made to two secular Men habendum the one Moyety to one, and the other to the other. Co. super Littl. fol. 131.

If two Joyntenants be in Fee for life, and one make a Lease for years of the Land, or grant Vestura terra, or Herbagium terra. to begin presently or after his death, or at any other day to come; this is a good Lease, which the Survivor cannot avoid, though the Lessee die before Entry, or do not enter till after the death of the Lessor, Co. super Littl. 184. Plow. 203. Littl. 286. Alienatio rei profectus juri accrescendi: Co. super Littl. 186. So if two Joyntenants be of a Water, and one grant the several Pischary.

Sec. 4.
§. Where the Lease, or Charge of one Joyntenant is good, and shall charge or bind the Land, or not.

If two be Joyntenants for life, and one make a Lease for years, of his part, to begin after his death, during his Companions life; this is a good Lease, Adjudged, Harbin and Bassets case, Mich. 3 Jac. B. R. Cite arere in Daniels case, Hil. 13 Jac. B. R. per Justices; and therefore a fortiori, when the Lease is to begin presently.

If two Joyntenants be for life, and one of them Lease for years, rendring Rent, and die; this is a good Lease, and the Successor shall have it subject to the same, and yet the Rent reserved thereupon, is determined, Dyer 187.

If two Joyntenants be in Fee, and one grant a Rent-charge in Fee, and after Release to the other; now in this case the Grant of the Rent is good, and the other Joyntenant shall hold the Land charged.

If a Feme-sole and J. S. be Joyntenants for life, and she marry B. and B. and his Wife Lease to C. for sixty years, rendring Rent, if the Wife and J. S. live so long, and the Wife dies: Now this Lease is good against the Survivor, but it seems the Rent is determined, Smalman versus Agtorrow, B. R.

If one Joyntenant grant a Rent-charge, Common of Pasture, Turbary, or a Corrad, or a Way out of the Land and die, the Grant is void as to charge the Land, and the Survivor shall hold it discharged; but if he survive, it is good. So if after the Charge, the Grantor release to his Companion, then he shall hold it charged, 23 H. 6. 5. Co. super Littl. f. 185. especially if he hath another Companion or Survivor living. See Littl. 289. Co. super Littl. 184.

If two Joyntenants be for life, and a Judgment is had against one of them, and he after releaseth to his Companion, and dies before Execution; now the Survivor shall hold this Land discharged of the Judgment. Contrà, if he had sued Execution in the life time of the Joyntenant, for then his Moyety, notwithstanding the Release, was subject to Execution.

So it is in the case of a Statute or Recognizance, but if he survive his Companion, the Charge is good for ever. Co. super Littl. fol. 184. See Co. 9. 79. Plow. 418.

If a Feme Covert and another be Joyntenants of a Lease for years, and the Husband Husband will grant a Rent out of the Land, and die, and the Wife die; this Grant is void, and the Survivor shall hold it discharged, Plow. 418.

If a Lease be on Condition, That if the Lessee pay to the Joyntenants ten pound at such a day, then he shall have a Term, and the Joyntenants die before the day, here it seems the Lease is not good, and the Survivor shall hold it discharged, Plow. 263. For this was no Lease, but a Communication onely, Co. super Littl. 184.

If two Joyntenants be of Land, and one of them grant Common of Pasture for Cattle in the ground, and die, this is not good; but the Survivors shall hold, if discharged, Perk. fect. 103.

If one Joyntenant in Fee-simple had been in Debt to the King, and died; after his death, no Extent should have been made upon the Lands in the hands of the Survivor, Co. super Littl. 185.

But if a Recovery be had against one Joyntenant, and he die before Execution, the Survivor cannot avoid this.

6. What Act
one Joynte-nant may do, or nor.
By himself.

A Joyntenant may by Act executed dispose his own Estate, and give, grant, or sell it to whom he will, or make any Lease of it for part of his time, to begin presently, or at a day to come after his death, or otherwise at his pleasure; but he cannot dispose his Companions part, and yet if he grant the whole, it will be good for his own part; but it will not pass his Companions, though he happen to have it before the Survivorship; neither can he devise his own part by Will, Littl. 186. Phar. 203.

And if two Joyntenants be for life, and one of them doth make a Lease for eighty years, to begin after his death, and after death; this was adjudged by all the Judges of England a good Lease against his Companion, Goldsb. 187. yl. 130.

One of the rest may sue Partition, and compel his Companions to make Partition. See Partition & its Statutes, 32 H. 8. 32. 34 H. 8. 1. Co. 6. 12. Co. super Littl. fol. 187.

If a Joyntenant make a Lease for years, though the Lessee never have possession, or it begin at a day to come, and the Joyntenant which made it, die before the day; it bindeth the Survivor: But if he had granted one, that he should have a Lease, if he pay ten pound before Midsummer next, and the Joyntenant which made it, die before the day; this will not binde the Survivor, for here no present interest did pass, and a Rent thereupon reserved shall not go to the Survivor. Co. super Littl. 318. Plow. 203. Brown.

One alone cannot present to an Advowson; but if one had done it, and the Bishop instituted, &c. it had been good, and it should not hurt his Companion for any after Presentment, Co. super Littl. f. 186.

If Lands be given to two, and the Survivor of them, neither of them alone whiles they both live, can charge or give this Remainder, Whitlock's case, Mich. 3 Jac. B. R.

If a Joyntenant in Fee, Covenant to stand seised for good considerations of his Companions part after his death, and after he die before the Covenantor, so that he hath his part by Survivorship, yet the Covenant is void, and doth not raise any use. Burtons case, Mich. 3 Jac. B. R.

With is Companion.

All the Joyntenants together may grant or charge the Land, how and in what manner they will.

They may all together by consent and agreement make Partition by Deed, and if they be Joyntenants for years, they may do it without Deed, Co. super Littl. 186. Littl. f. 65.

panion.

They may give their parts one to another by Release, and such a Release is good without any words of Heirs, Co. super Littl. fol. 194. and without Attornment, or other Ceremony, Co. super Littl. 318. And therefore if a Baron and Feme, and a third person be Joyntenants, and the third person release to the Baron and Feme; this is good, and gives all the Estate of the third person to the Husband, or he may release to the Wife alone, and then that would give all the Estate to the Wife alone: Also one of them may make the other his Bailiff of his Moyety, and have an Action of Account against him, and he may let his part to his Companion for years, or at will, Co. super Littl. fol. 185. Littl. fol. 69. Co. 6. 79. 8. 63. But they cannot make a Feoffment, or give Livery of Seisin one to another, as Tenants in Common and Parceners may; but a Tenant in Common cannot release to his Companion, but a Parcener may both Release and Infeoff, Perk. sect. 193. Co. super Littl. 200.

One Joyntenant may prejudice his Companion, as to the profits of the thing, of which they are Joyntenants; for there is a Privy in Trust between them; and therefore if one take all the profits of the Land, or all the Rent of the thing, or one get the Body of the Ward, or get the Personal thing, whatever it be, and use it, the other hath no remedy, but to do the like if he can: And in case of Executors, one of them may sell any Chattel, Real or Personal, without the rest. See Executors.

Dyer 23. vide infra, Co. 2. 68. Kelw. 22.

If two have a Seigniorship of a Knights-Service, and the Tenant is dead, his Heir within age, so that the Lord may now seise the Ward or Wave, and Distrain for the Rent: If one of the joynt Lords do Distrain for the Services, the other is barred and bound by this, 1 Ed. 3. Co. 2. 68.

Also in Personal Actions, the one may release all: As if an Obligation be made to two, one of them may release the whole, Co. 6. 25. Plow. 263. Co. 2. 68.

Also if a Recognizance be made to many, and one purchase Parcel of the Land, the Statute is extinct for all. See Statutes, Aff. 106.

So if two Joyntenants bring an Action of Waste, and one Release; this is a Bar to his Companion, Co. 2. 68.

And if one Joyntenant do waste the Land of both of them, as it seems, it shall be recovered, Kelw. 23. yet see 14 Edw. 1. Retorn del Vicomte. 9 Hen. 5. cap. 15.

If two Joyntenants be of a Term, and one have the Lease, and he give or grant it away, it seems he hath no remedy for the Deed; but this doth not hurt the Estate. By three Justices, Trin. 38 Eliz. B.R.

But one Joyntenant cannot prejudice another, as to any matter of Freehold or Inheritance; and therefore a Joyntenant in Fee, for life or years (unless he be in the Case of Executors before) cannot sell his Companions part, or evict him out of it, or charge or impeach it: So neither can he release any real or mixt Action, brought by them against another; As if they bring an Assise, or Writ of Right of Ward, for the Body of a Ward, or the like, and one Joyntenant release to the Defendant; this will not prejudice the rest, but it may give them the whole, Co. 2. 68. 30 H. 6. 45 Ed. 3. 10. Kelw. 60. Dyer 167. 179.

All such Acts as Joyntenants, are compellable to do; there, if one Joyntenant do it, and do it so as the Law will compel him; this is good, and will binde his Companions: As if a Woman have Title of Dower to the Land, and one Joyntenant will endow her, and that of a third part onely of the Land; this is good, and will binde his Companion: Or if one Joyntenant Attorn to the Grantee of the Reversion, or Services in the Countrey, this is good. As if a Lessor disseise his Lessees, and make a Feoffment, and one of them re-enter, this is an Attornment in Law, good, and shall serve for both. So if a Reversion be granted to one Joyntenant for life, and he accept the Deed, this is a good Attornment for the other in Law. So if one Lessee give Seisin of a Rent to a Lord, it is good, and will binde the rest. Co. 2. 69. 30 H. 6. 2. Littl. f. 119. 12 Aff. pl. 20.

So all things that are for their benefit, and as well for the benefit of his Companion as of himself, the Act of one shall binde the rest: As if they be to pay a Rent to the Lord, or the like. Payment by one shall serve for all; so a Claim or Entry after a Disseisin, or the like, Co. 2. 68.

If one Joyntenant will endow a Woman of a Rent, in stead of Land, or endow her of more then a third part; this will not binde his Companions. So if the Reversion of two Tenants for life, or the Rent or Seigniorship of two Joyntenants be granted by Fine there, if a Writ be brought, to require the Joyntenants to Attorn, one must not Attorn without the other, Co. 20. 67.

7. Where one Joyntenant may prejudice his Companion, or not.

8. Where an Act done by one Joyntenant shall binde his Companion, or not.

9. What Acts done by, or to one Joyntenant, shall benefit his Companion, or not.

If one Joyntenant enter or claim the Land, that he and his Companions have right to, this shall avail the rest generally, Co. super Littl. f. 252.

If two Joyntenants make a Lease for life, and the Lessee surrender to one of them; it seems this shall enure to both, in respect of their joynt Reversion, but if the Lessee grant his Estate to one of them, contra. Co. super Littl. f. 192. Perk. 615.

If one of them obtain a Seisin of Rent, this shall avail his Companion. Brou. Tender 16.

If two Joyntenants make a Lease by Poll, or Deed Poll, rendering Rent to one of them; this shall enure to both. Contra, if it be by Deed indented. See Reservation. But perhaps if one enter or claim, specially to his own use or for another, it may not avail his Companion.

10. How Acts done by, or to them, shall enure.

If two Joyntenants be of Land with Warranty, and they make Partition by Deed, the Warranty is destroyed; but if it be upon a Writ, contra. Co. super Littl. fol. 186, 187.

If a Warranty be made to them, this shall enure to them as several Warranties, Co. 5. 819.

See 8. 6.

If there be three Joyntenants, and one release to one of the other; this shall not avail the other. Co. super Littl. f. 193.

If Donee in Tail be disseised by two, and he release to one of them, this shall enure to both: But if the Kings Tenant for life had been disseised by two, and he release to one of them, he shall hold out his Companion. So if two Joyntenants make an Estate for life, and then disseise their Lessee, and he release to one of them, he shall hold out his Companion.

If Tenant for life be disseised by two, and he in Reversion, and Tenant for life joyn in a Release to one of the Disseisors, he shall hold his Companion out: But if they severally release their several Rights, it shall enure to both the Disseisors.

If two men do gain an Advowson by Usurpation, and the right Patron doth release to one of them, it shall enure to both.

If two Joyntenants be disseised by two, and one of them release to one, this shall enure to both for a Moyety.

If one be disseised by two Women, and one take a Husband, and the Disseisee release to the Husband; this shall enure to both Disseisors. See more in Release. Co. super Littl. 276.

11 What Acts done by one Joyntenant may have against a stranger.

It seems a Joyntenant can have no Real or Personal Action, concerning the Joynttenancy, but he must joyn with his Companion; and therefore if they be disseised of the Freehold, they must have an Assise against the Disseisor; if they be ousted of a Term on Ejectione firme: And if they be wronged in the Profits, as by Waste, Trespass, or Arrearages of their Bailiff that hath received their Rents or Profits, they must joyn in the Action always, unless it be in some special cases, as that Plow. 419. Co. super Littl. f. 195, 196. Littl. 311. 22 H. 6. 12. Brou. Joyntenants 36.

Against his Companion.

Yet if three Joyntenants be, and one release to one of his Companions, and after they be disseised; now for the two parts of which they be Tenants in Common, they must bring one Action, and for the third part of which, he is Tenant in Common with the other, he must bring an Action alone, Crompt. Jur. f. 49. b. Littl. f. 7c.

One Joyntenant hath no Action nor Remedy against another for the taking of the Profits, or for Waste making, or the like: And therefore if it were Wood, and one cut it down, and sell it all, and keep all the money; or if it be an Advowson, and one alone present, and in the cases before, he hath no Action at Common Law to relieve himself. See before Doff. & Stud.

So if one will not help Inclose the Grounds, or Repair the Walls or Bridges, or the like. But if one oust the other altogether, he may have an Assise, or chase the others Cattle, for the chasing he may have Trespass: And if there be Houses or Mills upon the thing, and they be in decay, the other Joynttenant may compel him by a Writ of Reparatione facienda, to joyn to repair it, or of Contributions facienda, to contribute towards it. See of Tenants in Common. F. N. B. 34. 162. 6 Hen. 7. 8. F. N. B. 127. Brou. Joyntenants 41. Dyer 923. Co. 6. 12, 13. Lib. Inst. 1 part. fol. 54.

And between thefe, there is onely a Privy of Poffeffion, and not of Eftate of Land, Littl. fol. 70. Co. 4. 628. 63. Co. super Littl. fol. 169, 198, 199.

If Land be given to a man, and two women, and the Heirs of their Bodies, here are several Inheritances, of which, the Issues are Tenants in Common, Ca. 10. 59.

If Lands be given to two men, and their wives, they are Joyntenants for life, but after the husband and wife hath one moyety in Tail, in Common with the other Baron and wife, Ibidem.

If two Parceners make a Lease, rendring Rent, they have this Rent in Common; but if they grant the Reversion, excepting the Rent, contra. for there they are Joyntenants of the Rent.

If two Joyntenants be of a Chattel Personal, and one commit Felony, the Lord Protector, and the other Joyntenants are not Tenants in Common, but the Lord Protector will have all, Plow. 322.

So if two had such a thing in Common, and one did commit a Forfeiture, the Lord Protector will have all. Ibidem.

The nature of this holding is, That howsoever they occupy in Common, and they hold pro indiviso, and neither of them doth know his own part, as in the case of Joyntenants, yet the Survivor in this case shall not have the part of him that dieth (as in the cases of Joyntenants) but it shall go to his Heir, Executor, or Administrator as the case is; and therefore such a Tenant may Grant or Charge his Land, as he may any other Land, whereof he is Sole seized; and if he will pass it to his Companion, he may make a Feoffment, and give Livery of Seisin to him as Parceners may; for it will not pass by Release, as between Joyntenants: But Actions Personal, as it seems, do survive, and the Survivor shall have the whole of them, as in the cases of Joyntenants, vide infra. And it seems in this case one of them cannot do any act to binde, or prejudice his Companion, because they have several Titles; and in this case they may also make Partition, if they will, by Agreement, Link. f. 72. Plow. 140. 10 Ed. 4. 3.

All Actions that are Real, and in respect of the Reality, the one may and must sue alone; as if they be disseised, every Tenant in Common must have a several Assise against the Disseisor. And so should it seem for mixt Actions that are most in the Realty, for the Magis dignum trahit ad se minus dignum. But in all Personal Actions, as for Trespas in breaking the Hedges, spoiling the Houses, Grass, Corn, cutting the Wood, taking Fish, or the like, there they must sue jointly, and cannot sever in the Action.

So also for Rent in a Lease, in Account against the Bailiff, and Actions mixt that are more Personal then Real, as Waste, and the like: And if one of them die, before these Actions brought, the right of the Action doth survive to the rest onely, and they alone shall have it as in the case of Joyntenants before: And if one of them sue alone for these Causes, the Defendant may plead, That he is Tenant in Common, and so avoid the Action, *Littl. fol. 70, 71. 22 Hen. 6. 12. If his Companion disseise him of his Freehold, he may have an Assise, if he Eject him of his Term, he may have an Ejectione firme, as it seems. But for any wrong in taking the whole profits from his Companion, the Law is all one in this case, as in the case of Joyntenants, which see before; for one of them cannot sue another, Co. super Littl. 199.

Against his Companion.

And yet if one Tenant in Common will break the Dove-house of another, and kill his Pigeons, and spoil his flight, or carry away all his Corn after it is sowed, it seems the other shall have Trespass against him; or break the Pales of his Companions Fold, which they have in Common, Trespass lieth; but this seems to be for the wrong done to that wherein he hath a sole property. Co. super Littl. f. 200. Westm. cap. 12. 14 Ed. 4. 8. Somersets case, *B. If two be Tenants in Common of Chattels Personal, or of Chattels Real entire; and one get all, the other hath no remedy, but to get the Possession again, if he can. In the Personality, one Tenant in Common may prejudice his Companion, as well as a Joyntenant, as in taking the profits; for which see before. As also in any Personal Action brought by them all, one may Release; but if the same be for a thing entire, and in the reality, as a Presentation to a Church, Wardship of a Body, or the like, there the Release of one doth not prejudice the rest, but doth give the rest the whole, Co. 5: 98. 45 Ed. 3. 10. Co. super Littl. 197.

Of Parceners.

Parceners, otherwise called Coparceners, are such as have equal portion in the Inheritance of the Ancestors, and this is in the nature of a Tenancy in Common, the difference see in the Englisch Lawyer, fol. 24, 25. And of these there are two sorts.

Self. 9.
1. Parceners, what.
The kinds.

One is of Parceners by Law, which is when a man dieth, seised of Land in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail; and hath no Sons, or other Heirs Male; but Daughters, Sisters, Aunts, or the like (for if he have but one Daughter, she is no Parcener) then these Daughters, or other Collateral Heirs, shall have the Lands in equality amongst them, and these are called Parceners at Common Law.

The other is, where Sons or Daughters by the Custom of the Country do challenge an equal part of their Ancestors Lands he died seised of, as the Custom of Gavel-kinde in Kent is, and these are called Parceners by Custom; and in these cases, all these Parceners are in Judgment of Law, but as one Heir. And they may if they will, hold the Land joyntly without Division, and then they shall be said to hold in Parcenary; or they may divide it, and every one hold his part to himself, and that is called a Partition, and is defined to be the dividing of Lands or Tenements, descended by Common Law or Custom, amongst Co-heirs or Parceners, whether they be Sons or Daughters, Sisters, Aunts, or otherwise of kin to the Ancestor, from whom the Land descended to them: And this may be made, and done voluntarily, or by Agreement of the parties, and without Writ, which is called a Division by the Common, or else it may be Compulsory, and by Writ, if either or any of the parties refuse, and thereby the rest or any of them, or their Heirs (if any of them be dead) that are willing, may compel the others that refuse; and this Writ is called a Partitio facienda, which is defined to be a Writ that lieth for those that hold Lands or Tenements pro indiviso, as Coparceners, and would sever to every one his part, against him or them that refuse to joyn in Partition, to compel them to it.

And such a Division as is so made by Writ, is said to be a Division by Statute Law; and this Writ also Joyntenants or Tenants in Common, may have to make a Division amongst them, if they will. See beneath; Parceners stat Hibernie. 9 H. 3. 1. Dyer 29. Co. upon Littl. fol. 164. Co. 6. 12. Dyer 265. F. N. B. 61.

And this Division after it is made, doth change the holding by Coparcenary, so that after every one shall hold his part in severalty: And yet so, as if the part of one be afterwards recovered from him by a lawful Title; in this case he may compel the rest to make a new Partition, and he shall have another part from them, and till then he may occupy in Common with them: But if he had aliened that part wholly away, whereof the Evection was, then it seems he cannot enter upon his Companions, unless he had reserved some Reversion: See for this, Co. upon Littl. fol. 164. 170.

None shall be accounted Parceners, but such as are Females and in equal distance, as Daughters, Sisters, Aunts, or the like, or the Heirs of such Females that come to Land by descent. For if any such persons purchase Lands or Tenements; in this case they are not Parceners, but Joyntenants. See more for this Co. upon Littl. 164. where it appeareth, that men may be Parceners in special cases; the Son of ones Daughters, with the Daughters of another.

The having of Land in Coparcenary, is in the nature of holding of Land in Common, for no Survivorship hath place amongst them; and either of them may by Act executed, or by his will grant, give, or charge, his own part, whether the thing be in Possession, or Reversion: And they may make a Ecoffment one to another, and give Livery one to another, Co. upon Littl. 164. Littl. fol. 64. Dyer 29. Littl. fol. 280.

And if an Advowson descend amongst them, they shall present by turn, the eldest first, and the rest after, ordine quisque suo: And if either of them disturb the other, in this case, he that is disturbed, may have a quare impedit against his Companion; but so cannot one Joyntenant or Tenant in Common against another, Littl. fol. 64. Dyer 29. Littl. fol. 280. Kelw. 1. F. N. B. 34.

So long as the Land is undivided, they have one entire Freehold in it, in respect of a stranger, but amongst themselves, to many purposes, several Freeholds. And this Unity is not severed by the death of any of them, but her issue, and the rest shall be sued joyntly, and sue so, but the issues of several Coparceners shall not joyn; and yet when they have recovered, a Writ of Partition lieth between them, and there is between them a Privy in Person, in Estate, and Possession, Co. upon Littl. fol. 164. 169. F. N. B. 62.

Parceners are compellable by the Common-Law to make Partition; and for that purpose they may sue out a Writ of Partitio facienda (see above.) And though one of them have made a Lease of his part to his Companions, yet he may have this Writ against the rest. Fitz. N. B. 62.

Also

Also Joyntenants and Tenants in Common, whether they be so, of an Estate of Inheritance in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail in their own Rights, or in the Rights of their Wives; or which hold joyntly or in Common, for Term of life, year, or years onely.

Joyntenants.
Tenants in Common.

And Joyntenants, or Tenants in Common, where one or some of them have Estate or Estates for term of life or years, with the other that have Estate or Estates of Inheritance, or Freehold, are compellable by the Writ of Partitio facienda to make Partition of the Lands, they do so hold as Coparceners are.

And in all these cases, let him that brings the Writ see that he comprehend all the Land, whereof Division is to be made in his Writ. Stat. 31 Hen. 8. chap. 1. 32 Hen. 8. chap. 23: Bro. Partition, fol. 33. Co. 6. 12. Dyer 265.

Sec. 10:

If three Parceners be of a Reversion after an Estate for life, and one of them alien his part by Fine, and after the Tenant for life die, and one of the other two enter into the whole: Now the Alienee, and the other cannot joyn, and have one Writ of Partitio facienda upon these Statutes, but they must bring several Writs.

So if in this case the two Coparceners had joyned, and brought the Writ against the Alienee upon these Statutes, the Writ would abate; yet if the Husband of one of the Sisters, or one of the Parceners her self purchase one of her fellows parts, there is a special Writ by the Common Law in this case to compel Partition, Dyer 128. 243. F.N.B. 62.

If there be two Parceners, and one of them take a Husband, and hath issue by her, and she die, and he hold himself in as Tenant by the Courtesie, they may make Partition by agreement; or if the Tenant by the Courtesie will not, the other may compel him by this Writ: But if the Parcener refuse, the Tenant by the Courtesie cannot have this Writ against the other, that doth refuse, Littl. selt. 164.

If one of the Parceners alien his part in Fee, the other Parcener may bring this Writ against the Alienee, but the Alienee cannot bring it against the Parcener, unless it be upon the Statute, as a Tenant in Common, Co. upon Littl. fol. 175.

Coparceners may make Division of their Lands they hold in Coparcenery, either during their whole, or a part of their Estate, and that they may do (as hath been shewed) either by Agreement with, or without writing, and that divers ways.

by Agreement.

1. As if they agree to divide it, and do divide it to every one his part.

2. If they chuse certain Friends to divide it, and set it out into parts; and in this case the eldest must chuse first, and so every one in his age, unless they otherwise agree.

3. If after the parts be divided, and set out, there be Lots cast, and so a choice is made by that means.

4. By casting in Land in Hochpot. See beneath, and in Littleton, and all these are good Divisions.

Hochpot.

And in all these cases the parties dividing, if they be of full age, at the time of the Partition made, be bound for them and their Heirs, though it be never so unequally made.

Infant.

But if the parties that divide, were seised of an Estate-tail, there the Division (if Tail be unequal) will onely binde them for their lives, and the issue of him that hath the lesser part, may either avoid it, or affirm it.

So if the Division were made by the Husbands of the Parceners; the Wives after their deaths, if their parts be not equal, may either avoid it, or affirm it.

So if the Parcener be within age, at the time of the Division made after she comes of full age, she may either affirm or avoid it; & if in these cases, that party that may avoid, do verbally agree to the Division, or take the profits of the part allotted t o him or

or make a Lease of it, after his time, he may avoid it; this hath affirmed the Division: But it seems in all these cases, where the Division is equal, that it is not to be avoided by any of the Parceners, or their Heirs, Co. super Littl. 174.

A Partition by Agreement, without Writing, that one shall have one part of the Land, and another another part; and that he that hath the better part, shall pay to the other Parcenter a yearly Rent, issuing out of his Land; this is a good Division; and the party to whom this Rent is given by the Agreement, may distrain in the Land of Common Right for this Rent, though there be no Deed; so a Reversion, nay Advowson, or the like, in this case may pass without Deed, Littl. sect. 251. 29 Ass. pl. 23. Plow. 134. Dyer 19.

If they agree that one of them shall have all the Lands in Severalty one year, another all another year, or in any such manner, this is a good Partition, F.N.B. 62. 11 H. 4. 3. 21 Ed. 3. 7.

If there be some Land in Fee-simple, and some Land in Fee-tail descended, and they agree one shall have the one sort of Lands, and the other the other; this is good, but this may become void by matter Ex post facto, F.N.B. 62. M. Littl. sect. 26.

If Joyntenants, or Tenants in Common of a Term of years of Land, do make Division thereof by word, without Deed, it seems it is good enough, Dyer 350.

If Joyntenants, or Tenants in Common of any Estate of Inheritance, in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or for years, by mutual agreement, by writing, make Partition, it is good, Dyer 350. Bro. Partition 38.

But if Joyntenants, or Tenants in Common of any Estate of Inheritance or Freehold, make Partition by word only; this is not good to sever the Joynture, Co. upon Littl. 165.

But Tenants in Common may by word and Livery of Seisin, make Partition well enough the same, Co. 6. 12. Dyer 350.

Se8. 11. Prochein Amy. If Partition be made by Prochein Amy of an Infant that is a Parcenter, it is not good.

If the Ancestor died seised of Land intailed, and so much in Fee-simple, and the eldest take the intailed, and the other the Fee simple, this is good for their time; but if the youngest Alien all or part, in Fee or in Tail, that he leave not a sufficient Recompence to the Issue, the Issue may avoid the Exchange, and take to half the exchanged Lands, and the other hath no remedy for his part of the Fee-simple Lands, Co. upon Littl. fol. 172.

But contra of a Lease for life or years, but if part of the Fee-Land descend, the Issue must waive the profits of that, if he will have the benefit of the other.

By Writ.

The Partition that is made upon a Writ directed to the Sheriff, to make Partition between the parties, must be by the Oath of a Jury of twelve lawful men of the Neighborhood.

For so is the Judgment upon this Sute, That the Sheriff in person shall go to the Lands, and that he by the Oaths of twelve men of his Bailiwick, shall make Partition between the parties, and that one part shall be assigned to one, and another part to another. And how the Sheriff doth do this, he must return under his Seal, and the Seal of the twelve men to the Justices, before whom the Writ is returnable. Co. upon Littl. fol. 167.

If A. and B. be Tenants in Common of a Manor, and A. purchase Land, so intermix with the Lands of the Manor, as the Jury cannot tell how to make Division of the Manor, and to distinguish it from the Land purchased: In this case A. must shew the Jury the bounds of the purchased Lands, and B. is not bound to do it, or else if the Jury have no evidence of either side, and they make Partition of the Manor, as it is commonly presumed and known to extend, it is good enough, Dyer 164.

If there be a Capital Messuage upon the Lands to be divided, the Sheriff must allot that wholly to the eldest of the Parceners, and not divide it. CONTRA TENENTUR. Co. upon Littl. 165.

For

For such Inheritances as are entire, as a Villain, Reasonable Estovers, and the like, either the eldest must have all, and the rest contribution, or else one shall have it one while, and the other another; but a Rent-charge is dividable, and the Distress also. See Co. upon Littl. fol. 164, 165. See all the Treatise in the English Lawyer, fol. 24, 25.

The Entry of the one Parcener into the Land descended; may avail, and shall be the Entry of the other, if they agree, so Littl. 160.

7. Where the Entry of one of them shall benefit the other, or not.

But if one that doth enter, do enter into all to his own use, or after his Entry make a Feoffment in Fee; this special Entry shall not benefit the other: As if a Tenant in Tail die having two Daughters, and the eldest enter into the whole, and thereof maketh a Feoffment, with Warranty; this is a Collateral Warranty, which sheweth that the Entry did not avail both, for there the Warranty must begin by Disseisin. But this Entry is onely available when the other will; and therefore if one enter, both cannot be vouched as Heirs, for that is a disadvantage; but both may have an Assise, Littl. 160. 4 H. 7. 9.

If Land descend to Parceners, and they die having Issues, and the Issues be disseised, or if the Parceners themselves were disseised; their Issues, or themselves must joyn in an Assise, against the Disseisor.

8. Where they must joyn in Action, or not.

So if they be disturbed in a Presentment to an Advowson, they must all joyn in a quare impedit.

So if they have cause to bring Waste or a Cessavit, they must joyn. See Joyntenants, and Tenants in Common.

So for Personal wrongs, they must joyn in Action; and if some of them die, the Action survives to the rest, and they shall recover all, as in Accounts, Trespass, &c. Kelw. 1. Littleton, fol. 71. Broo. Joyntnancy 51. 48. Co. upon Littl. fol. 198.

It is a mixing together of Lands in Frank-marriage, with other Lands in Fee-simple descended: As if a man be seised of thirty Acres of Land in Fee, and giveth ten of them in Frank-marriage with his Daughter, having but one Daughter more, and die seised of the other twenty Acres; now if she that is married, will have any part of the twenty Acres, she must relinquish her twenty Acres, and cast them into the other twenty Acres in Hotchpot, and thereupon an equal Division must be made of all, else her sister shall have the whole twenty Acres.

Hotchpot, what.

But if the Land given in Frank-marriage were by another Ancestor, or given in another nature, and not in the nature of Frank-marriage, then she need not put it into Hotchpot, Littl. sect. 267, 268.

Of Judgment, Judges, and Ireland,
King and Queen.Judgment,
what.

Judgment is the Sentence and Decree that a Judge doth make at the end of a Sute, which is no more but the pronouncing of what the Law doth set down, and determine in that case according to that which is alleged and proved. And this so long as it stands in force, and till it be reversed by Attaint or Writ of Error, is final and makes an end of the Sute. Finches Ley 453. Co. super Littl. 39:

As to this take these things:

Arrest of Judgment,
what.
Curia avisare
vult, what.Vacat of a Judgment, what.Judges or what Justices.Association, what.Coram non Judice, what.

1. In every Judgment there is to be a Prosecutor, a guilty person, and a Judge.
2. Some Judgments are Final, and some are not.
3. Judgments when they are ready to be given, may be staid, if there be any Error in the proceeding: For albeit a cause be so forward, that it is ready for Judgment, yet if there be any Error in the proceeding, or it standeth so in Law that Judgment ought not to be given in it, as the Judges are about to do, upon the opening of the Matter, and Motion of the other party, the Judgment may be staid. And this is called an Arrest of Judgment; and upon this is entred by the Judges, Curia avisare vult, the Court will advise.
4. Judgments duly given must continue, and the parties for whom they are given, be in peace until they be reversed by Attaint or Error.
5. The Judges that give the Judgment, and in some cases other Judges that are above them, may if there be cause, after they are given, avoid them; and this is called a Vacat.
6. A Prelate, two Earls, and two Barons, (upon complaint by Commission from the King) might have called for any Record where delay in any Court had been of entering Judgment, and they with the Lord Chancellor, Treasurer, and Justices of either Bench; and such of the Kings Council, as they had thought fit to call to them, might have given Judgment in the Cause, and that must have stood, or they might have referred it to the next Parliament.
7. The Parliament may call in question, and reverse if they see cause, the Judgments given in all other Courts. But see for these, and other things of this Subject: 4 H. 4. 23. 14 Ed. 3. Stat. 1. 5. Co. 3. 13. Dyer 268. Crompt. Jur. 18. Brownl. 98, 99, 188, &c. Dyer 249.

Of Latin and Law.

Or Latin, this onely is to be known.

1: That all Law-Books that are Printed, must be in the English Tongue, and not in Latin. Latia.

2. All the Pleadings and Proses in Sutes must be in English under pain of twenty pound. Acts, 22 Novemb. 1650. and 9 April. 1651.

Law is a Rule for the governing of a Civil Society, to give to every man that which doth belong to him. 1. Law, what.

1. Our Laws are divided into three sorts. Common Law, which is nothing else but Common Custom, and that which is commonly used through the whole Nation; and this is founded especially upon certain Principles or Maxims made out of the Law of God, and the Law of Reason.

The kinds of the Law.

Maxims of Law.

2. Statute Laws which are certain Acts and Constitutions of Parliament, that have been made in all succeeding Generations, to correct, abridg, and explain the Common Law: And all these to give right to every man, and to preserve every man from wrong.

3. The Customs of particular places, which are the Laws of the places. Doff. & Stud. l. 9. 75. Dyer 54. Co. 11. 74. Brownl. Rep. 2 part. f. 198.

4. There is also the Civil Law, Martial Law, Ecclesiastical Law, Canon Law, Law of Nations, Law-Merchant, a part of the Law of Nations, and the Law of Chivalry, or Title of Honor. And of all these Laws, our Law taketh some notice, Doff. & Stud. 6. Fitz. Gard. 118. Dyer 150. 21 H. 7. 33. F. N. B. 117. Co. 2 part. Inst. 58.

An involuntary Ignorance, as that of an Infant, or a Lunatick, will excuse them in many cases, Plow. 19.

As if such an one do such an act as would be Felony, or some other lesser offence in another; this shall be excused in them.

So if such a one neglect to claim, or enter to his Land in time, this laches or neglect shall not prejudice him.

But if any other man transgress any Law, it will not excuse him to say, That he was ignorant of the Law; this is a voluntary Ignorance, as is that also of a Drunkard; and therefore his drunkenness will not excuse him of any offence he shall commit, Co. 1. 45. Plow. 19.

If a man know that two men have pretended Title to one peece of Land, and he will say that the one hath the right, and the other hath no Title; if in truth it be otherwise, and the other hath the right, that he saith hath none; an Action of the Case for Slander of the Title will lie, and this ignorance of the Law will not excuse him, Co. 1. 177.

2. Where the Ignorance of Law, will excuse a man, or not.

So in the case of Bankrupts, if one come not in to demand his debt, he may lose it, and the ignorance of Law will not help him; Vigilantibus & non dormientibus subveniunt jura, Co. 2. 26.

3 Where the ignorance of the Fact will excuse, or not.

If a Man have made a Lease on Condition, that the Lessee shall not do some Collateral Act, as Alien without Licence, or the like, which the Lessee may do, and the Lessor never know of it, and the Lessee break the Condition, and after the Lessor accept the Rent; this shall not bar him of Entry for breach of the Condition, unless the Lessor had notice; for this ignorance of the fact here, shall help him. Co. 3. 65.

But if one be bound in an Obligation with Condition, that he or another shall do any act, as Counsel shall advise, and he tender him a Deed, that the Obligor cannot read nor understand; he must seal it presently, and may not forbear till some body read it to him, else his ignorance will not excuse him. Co. 2. 3.

If a Devise be made to one of Land, till he shall levy one hundred pound, and the Devisee do not know of the Devise, and the time doth run on; yet he shall hold it no longer then the time he might have levied so much out of it, and his ignorance of the fact here will not help him. Co. 4. 82.

If one be bound to repair Houses, and he know not of the decay, this will not excuse; but if it were to repair such Houses as another shall after assign, and he assign unknown unto him; here his ignorance will excuse, Dist. & Sind. 149. But no ignorance of Law in these points will help.

Wager of Law, what.

It is an Oath taken by some certain persons in some Courts, where one is charged with a Debt, or Detinue of Goods without Specialty, or upon some secret Agreement, where the Plaintiff cannot prove the Surmise of his Sure by any Deed, or open act (in which act the Defendant might privily discharge it) then the Defendant may if he will, wage his Law; and that is, swear that he doth not owe the money, or detain the Goods as the Plaintiff doth pretend, &c. And he is to have six, or eight, or twelve (as the Court will appoint him) more, that must swear they think that he sweareth truth, which is like the Oath made by Compurgators in the Civil Law; and this offer to wage Law, is called Wager of Law, and the doing of it, doing of Law; and this must not be without witnesses. They were used to be eleven, and himself twelve, which did countervail a Jury. He is to be sworn directly and absolutely, and the Compurgators, that they believe he doth say true.

Where it lieth, or not.

This liberty of Wager of Law, is allowed onely in cases of Secrecie, where the County cannot have notice of the thing: As in Action of Detinue, of Goods lent, or left with the Defendant, for which the Plaintiff hath no Especialty; and in Actions of Debt, upon private Contracts and Agreements, and the like; as for Money lent, Rent upon a Lease for years, of a stock of Sheep, or the like, Detinue of a Horse, or other personal thing.

But it lieth not in an Action of Debt for Rent upon a Lease for years in writing; nor in an Action of Debt for Arrearages of Account, nor in an Action of Debt upon any Bill, Bond, or other Especialty, nor in any Action of the Case, nor in Account upon Receipt by another Mans hand, not upon Contract when the party hath a Deed of the Contract, nor upon a Lease of Land, though it be stored with Beasts, Finches Ley 425. Nor in an Action of Debt brought for Wages by a Laborer, bound by Statute to serve, nor upon a Lease for years, though it were made without Deed. See for this, Co. 2. part. Inst. cap. 28. See more in the Statutes of 38 Ed 3. 5. 5 H. 4. 8.

4. Nient Lettered, or not able to read.

It is a Plea given for a Lay and unlearned Man, to avoid a Deed he hath made, when such a man is to seal a Deed, and he desire to hear him read, or to hear the Contents of the Deed; and the other party, to whom the Deed is to be sealed, do not read him, or cause him to be read, or the Contents to be shewed; or the party himself, to whom the Deed is to be sealed, or another at his request, or of his own minde, do read or declare the Contents thereof, falsely and untruly, concealing part, or reading otherwise then it is, or adding more, and thereupon the party seal it: Now if he be after sued upon this Deed, or the party make any use of it, the party that made the Deed may avoid it, by shewing the whole matter; but if it be a matter of of Record, it cannot be avoided for any such cause. So if the party do not desire to hear the Deed read, or the Contents thereof, there the not reading of it, will not make the Deed void: but in that case the misreading of it, though it be done without the parties request, will make the Deed void. But no Ignorance of the Law upon the Deed will help in this case.

Then a thing is said to be in Abeyance, when it is in no person, for that no person is capable of it for the present; but it is only in consideration of Law, and kept by Law, for one that may be capable of it: As when a Lease is made for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. which J. S. is then living; this Remainder is kept by the Law, for it is out of the Grantor, and yet cannot be in the Heirs of J. S. for he can have no Heirs while he liveth; but if he die before the Lessee for life, it will rest well enough, otherwise not; and till the death of the Tenant for life, the Remainder is said to be in Abeyance. Terms Ley. Co super Littl. 342.

The Books of Law must be turned into, and all Proces in the Courts must be in English. See for this Att. 7 Nov. 1650.

CHAP. CIII.

Of a Lease.

Lease doth properly signifie a Demise or Letting of Lands, Rent-Common, or any Hereditament unto another for a lesser time then he that doth let it, hath in it. (For when a Lessee for life or years, doth grant over all his Estate or time unto another, this is more properly called an Assignment then a Lease.) And this albeit, it may be made and done by other words, yet it is most commonly and aptly made by the words, Demise, Grant, and Let; and in this case he that letteth, is called the Lessor, and he to whom it is let, the Lessee.

1. Lease, what:

Assignment.

Lessor, Lessee.

This word also is sometimes, although improperly, applied to the Estate, i. The Title, time or interest the Lessee hath to the thing demised, and then it is rather referred to the thing taken or had, and the interest of the Taker therein; but in this place it is applied rather to the manner or means of attaining, or coming to the thing Letten.

And in this sense it is sometimes made and done by Record, as Fine, Recovery, &c. and sometimes, and most frequently, by writing, called a Lease by Indenture, albeit it may be made also by Deed Poll. And sometimes also it is (as it may be of Land, or any such like thing grantable without Deed for life, or never so many years) by word of mouth without any writing, and then it is called a Lease-Parol: And hence comes the Division of a Lease-Parol, and a Lease in writing. And all these ways it may be made either for life, i. for the life of the Lessee, or another, or both; or for years, i. for a certain number of years, as ten, an hundred, a thousand, or ten thousand years, moneths, weeks, or days, as the Lessor and Lessee do agree; and then the Estate is properly called a Term of years: For this word Term doth not only signifie the Limits and Limitation of time, but also the Estate and Interest that doth pass for that time: These Leases also for years do some of them commence in presenti, and some in futuro, at a day to come; and the Lease that is to begin in futuro, is called an Interesse termini or Future interest; or at will, i. when a Lease is made of Land to be held at the will and pleasure of the Lessor, or at the will and pleasure of the Lessor and Lessee together: And such a Lease may be made by word of mouth as well as the former. Terms Ley. Co super Littl. 43. 45. Justice Dodridge Treatise, called The Use of the Law. Broo. Leases, 60. 437. Flow. 421. 432. Dyer 125.

2. The kinds.

Term of years.

Interesse termini, or Future Interest, what.

Regularly

3 Things necessarily required in every good lease.

Regularly these things must concur to the making of every good lease. See Grant Numb. 4. Co. 6; 36. 34. 35. 1. 154. 155. Co. super Litt. 45. 46. Plow. 273. 523.
 1 As in other grants, so in this there must be a Lessor, and he must be a person able, and not restrained to make that Lease.

2 There must be a Lessee, and he must be capable of the thing demised, and not disabled to receive it.

3 There must be a thing demised, and such a thing as is demisable.

4 If the thing demised be not grantable without a Deed, or the party demising not able to grant without Deed, the lease must be made by Deed. And if so, then there must be a sufficient description and setting forth of the person of the Lessor, Lessee, and the thing leased, and all necessary circumstances, as sealing, delivery, &c. required in other grants, must be observed:

5 If it be a Lease for years it must have a certain commencement, at least then when it comes to take effect in interest or possession, and a certain determination either by an express enumeration of years, or by reference to a certainty that is express, or by reducing it to a certainty upon some contingent precedent by matter ex post-facto, and then the contingent must happen before the death of the Lessor or Lessee.

6 There must be all needfull ceremonies, as livery of seisin, attornment, and the like, in cases where they are requisite.

7 There must be an acceptance of the thing demised, and the estate by the Lessee. But whether any rent be reserved upon a Lease for life, years, or at will, or not, is not material, except only in the cases of Leases made by Tenant in Tail, husband and wife, and Ecclesiasticall persons. Of which see infra.

4 What shall be said a good and a sufficient lease for life or years. Or not.

1 In respect of the persons of the Lessor, and the Lessee, the thing leased, & the estate, property, or possession of the Lessor therein.

For the ability and capacity of the Lessors and Lessees, and what shall be said a good lease or not, in respect of the ability of the Lessor, and the capacity of the Lessee, and the description of their persons, the nature and description of the thing demised, and what mis-recital, or misnomer will hurt, or not, See Grant Numb. 4; and infra Numb. 5. 6. 7.

Leases for life, or years, or at will, may be made of any thing corporall or incorporall, that lieth in livery or grant. Also leases for years may be made of any goods or chattels. See for this Grant Numb. 4. Bro. Leases 23.

A man seised of an estate in Fee-simple in his own right of any Lands or Tenements, may by Deed or writing in the country, or without writing, by word of mouth make a lease of it for what lives or years he will. And he that is seised of an estate in Tail of any Lands or Tenements, may make any lease out of it for his own life, but not longer unless it be by fine or recovery, or it be such a lease as is warranted by the Statute of 32 H. 8. (whereof see more infra.) And he that is seised of Lands or Tenements of any estate for his own or anothers life may make what lease for years he will of it, and it will be good as long as the lease for life doth last. And he that is possessed of lands or Tenements for years, may make a lease of it for all or part of the years, and these are good Leases. The Tenant for life or years may also assigne over all their estates if they please. And if such Tenants make leases for longer time, as if Lessee for years make a lease for life; it seems by this the Land will pass for life, if the Term of years last so long. But if he give livery of seisin upon it (as he must to make the lease for life good) this is a forfeiture of the estate for years. Co. 7. 12. 1. 44. Plow. 524.

A License to a man to enjoy land for 7 years, is a lease for 7 years; and a License to sow Corne, is upon the matter a lease of the Land till the Corne be taken away: by Baron Thorpe, at Glew. Assises. 1654.

If an Infant be seised of Land in Fee-simple, and he make a Lease for years of it rendering no rent; this lease is void. But if there be a rent reserved upon the lease, then the lease is but voidable, and may by the acceptance of the rent by the Infant after his full age be made good. 9. H. 7. 24. 18. Ed. 4. 2. Plow. 545.

Jointenants, Tenants in Common, and parcenours may make leases for life or years of their own parts, and purparties at their pleasures; and these leases will binde their companions.

Forfeiture. Infant.

Acceptance.

Jointenants. Tenants in Common.

And

And one Coparcenour, or Tenant in Common may make a lease of his part to his companion if he will. Litt. cap. Tenant in common, F. N. B. 62. G.

If a Feoffment be made upon condition, and before the time of performance of the condition, the Feoffor and Feoffee doe joyn to make a lease for life or years of the Land; this is a good lease.

A man that hath an estate in land to him and his wife and his Heirs, may make what lease he will of the Land, and this will be good against all men but his wife onely, and that for her time. Bro. Leases 58.

If there be Lessor in Fee, and Lessee for ten years; in this case they two may joyn together and make a Lease for lives, or for any terme of years; and this is good. Co. 10. 49.

A Disseisee cannot make a lease of that Land whereof he is disseised untill he make his entry or recover the possession of the Land again. So neither can a woman that hath recovered the third part of her husbands Land in a writ of dower, make any Lease of it before she be in possession by execution: And yet if a Lease be made to me for years, I may make a Lease of part, or an assignement of all the term before I have made my entry into the Land demised. So if the Father die, and the Son make a lease to a stranger of the Land descended to him before his entry; this is a good lease: but if a stranger had entred and abated into the Land, and then the son had made the lease, contra, Plow, 133. Bro. Scire facias 36. Co. super Lit. 46. Plow. 137. 142.

In some cases also such persons as are not seised in Fee-simple, &c. nor able to derive such estates for life or years out of their own estates, may lawfully notwithstanding make such leases for life, &c. And this is sometimes by some speciall Act of Parliament enabling them so to doe: And hence it is also that a Tenant in Tail may make leases for three lives or twenty one years. And sometimes it is by some speciall power or authority that is given or reserved by and to the party himself that had the Fee-simple in him, or given to some other to doe it in his name, and leases thus made may be good. And therefore if any Act of Parliament enable a Tenant in Tail or a Tenant for life to make leases for three lives, or twenty one years, leases that are so made in pursuit of that authority, are good. And if a man be seised of Land in Fee, and convey it to the use of himself for life, or in Tail, with divers remainders over, with a proviso that it shall be lawfull for him or any such Tenant in Tail, to make leases for twenty one years; in this case he or they may make such leases and they will be good. But in both these cases care must be had to pursue the authority strictly: that the leases made be according to the power and direction given by the statute or proviso: for if it differ and vary ever so little from the sense and meaning of the same; the lease will not be good. And therefore in the case before of a power to make leases for twenty one years, if the party make more leases for twenty one years at one time than one, they are all void but the first, because it is against the intent of the parties, though it be not against the words. And so if the power be to make leases for three lives; he cannot by this make a lease for ninety nine years if three lives so long live. But if the power be thus provided, &c. that he may make any lease in possession or reversion; so as it doe not exceed the number of three lives or twenty one years; in this case a lease may be made for ninety nine years if three lives live so long. But where uses are raised by way of covenant, and in the deed there is a proviso that the covenantor for divers good considerations may make leases for years; in this case this power is void, and therefore no lease can be made hereupon: neither will any averment help in this case. And if a man have a letter of Attorney, or other authority to make leases for another, and doe make them accordingly; such leases are good. Co. 5. 5. Dier 357. Co. 6. 2. 8. 70. 1. 175. See in leases made by Tenant in tail infra. But herein also caution must be had of three things. 1 That the authority be good. 2 That he that is the Deputy or Attorney doe pursue the authority strictly. 3 That he doe it in the name of his master, and not in his own name. Co. 9. 76.

But if a power to make leases be raised upon a Covenant to stand seised without any transmutation of the possession, this is void in law, and not to be holpen in equity. Carls Rep. 30.

A Lease made for a Thousand days, Months, or weeks, is as good for so long as it endureth as a lease for an hundred or a thousand years. So a lease for half a year, or a whole year is good: So if a lease be made from day to day, or from week to week for four years; this is a good lease for four years, Et sic de similibus. So if one make a lease for ten years, and so from ten years to ten years, during an hundred years, or untill an hundred years are incurred; this is a good lease for an hundred years. So if one make a lease from three years to three years, during the life of I S. in this case if livery of seisin be not given, this is a good lease for six years; but if livery be given, it is a good lease for the life of I S. And if a lease be made from my death untill Anno Domini 1650; this is a good lease. Brownl. 1 part 30. Co. 6. 72. 14 H. 8. 13. Plow. 422. Plow. 272. Bro. Leases 49. Dier 24.

If I say to I S. being in my house [Here I S. I demise to you my house and Land so long as I live;] this is a good lease for life to him if livery of seisin be made. Et sic de similibus. Co. 6. 16.

If one make me a lease of Land untill an hundred pound be paid me, and make livery of seisin upon it; this is a good lease for life determinable upon the payment of the hundred pound. But if no livery be made, it is no good lease. 21. Aff. pl.

If one make a Lease to me for my life, and for four, ten, or twenty years after: this is a good lease for life first if livery of seisin be made, and then a good lease for years for so many years as are agreed upon afterwards, which my executors shall have. And if no livery of seisin be made; yet it seems it is a good lease for so many years after my death. Bro. Leases 27. 51.

If an Indenture of Lease be made between A of the one part, and B C and D of the other part, and therein A doth demise land to B To have and to hold to him for eighty years, if B shall live so long, and if he die, or alien the premises within the term, then that his estate shall cease, and then the Lessor doth grant the Land to C for so many years of the said term as shall be then to come after the death or alienation of B, if he live so long; in this case this is a good lease to B for so many years as he shall live of the eighty years, but the lease to C after is not good, for the term is ended by the death of B, but if the words of the second demise be To have and to hold during the residue of the eighty years, and not during the residue of the term; in this case the second demise is good to C also. Co. 1. 153. Dyer 253.

If one make me a Lease for sixty years if I live so long, provided that if I die within the term, that my Executors shall have it during the residue of the sixty years; in this case this is a good lease for the sixty years determinable upon my death, but not a good lease for the residue of the sixty years after my death. And yet it may amount to a good covenant for that time. Co. 1. 155. Dyer. 150. 2. 53.

If A covenant to levy a fine to B and his Heirs, provided that if he pay B and his Heirs ten pound at the end of thirteen years, that then the fine shall be to the use of A and his Heirs, and A doth covenant with B by the same Deed, that B his Heirs, Executors, and assigns, shall quietly hold the premises from Michaelmas next for thirteen years and yearly from thenceforth for ever if the ten pound be not paid according to the intent; in this case this covenant doth not make a good lease for the thirteen years, and it is but a covenant. Evans case. Trin 5. Jac. B. R.

If one make a lease for a certain number of years, and it is further agreed that upon some contingent the Lessee shall have the Fee-simple, and livery of seisin is given hereupon; in this case the lease for years doth continue good for the time agreed upon. Plow. 272. Lit. Sect.

A lease for years cannot by the agreement of the parties be made to the Heirs of the Lessee, nor intailed to the Heirs of his body. And therefore if a Lease be made to I S and his Heirs, or to I S and the Heirs male of his body, yet the executors of I S and not his Heirs shall have it, and the Executors may sell the term. Co. 2. 24. 10. 87. If two agree by word that one of them shall have such a peece of Land for twenty years; this is a good and perfect lease that is made by this agreement, albeit they doe agree to have a writing made of it afterwards, for in this case the writing is but the confirmation of it. But if the agreement be that such a writing shall be made, or that a lease shall be made of such a thing between them and put in writing, so that the agreement hath reference to the writing, and implieth an intent not to perfect perfect the agreement till the writing be made; in this case the lease is not a perfect lease until the writing be made. Per Justices Jones at the Assizes at Glouc.

Albeit the most usuall and proper making of a lease is by the words, Demise, grant, and so term let, and with an Habendum for life or years, yet a Lease may be made by other words, for whatsoever word will amount to a Grant will amount to a lease. And therefore a Lease may be made by the word, Give, Betake, or the like. The word Lacavis also is a good word. And the use in the Exchequer is to make Leases by the word Commissimus, which is a good word to make a Lease, Co. Super Litt. 5. F. N. B. 270. 2. Br. Leases. 71. And if A. doe but grant and covenant with B. that B. shall enjoy such a peece of land for 20. years; this is a good lease for twenty years. Br. Leases. 60. So if A. promise to B. to suffer him to enjoy such a peece of land for twenty years; this lease is a good lease for twenty years. Mic. 9. Jac. B. R. Curia.

So if A. license B. to enjoy such a peece of land for twenty years; this is a good lease for twenty years. 5 H. 7. 1. And therefore it is the common course, if a man make a feoffment in fee, or other estate upon condition that if such a thing be, or be not done at such a time, that the feoffor, &c. shall reenter, to the end that in this case the feoffor, &c. may have the land and continue in possession untill that time, to make a Covenant that he shall hold and take the profits of the land untill that time, and this Covenant in this case will make a good lease for that time, if the uncertainty of the time (whereunto care must be had) doe not make it void. And therefore if A. bargain and sell his land to B. on condition to reenter if he pay him an hundred pound, and B. doth covenant with A. that he will not take the profits untill default of payment, or that A. shall take the profits untill default of payment; in this case howbeit this may be a good Covenant yet it is no good Lease. And if the Mortgagee covenant with the Mortgagor that he will not take the profits of the land untill the day of payment of the mony; in this case albeit the time be certaine, yet this is no good Lease but a Covenant onely. If one give a Bond for the quiet holding of a Close for three years; it seemes this is no lease in Law. See the opinion of the Parliament for Bonds and Covenants both Stat. 14. Eliz. cap. 11. Agreed by all the Judges. 20. Jac. ut per. Just. Bridgman. And 8. Cur. B. R.

A Lease for years may begin at a day to come, as at Michaelmas next, or three or ten years after, or after the death of the Lessor, or of J. S. and it is as good as where it doth begin presently. But a lease for life of any thing whatsoever whether it lie in Livery, or in Grant, if it be in esse before, cannot begin at a day to come. And therefore if a lease be made Habendum, from Michaelmas next, or from the day of the making of it, or after the death of the lessor, or after the death of J. S. to the lessee for life, this lease is not good: but in case of a lease of land made thus, it is sometimes holpen by the livery of seisin. For which See Livery of Seisin chap. 9. Numb. 13. Co. 5. 1. super. Litt. 48. Plow. 136. 197. March. 50. Plow. 78. 177. 236. See Frank Tenement. Brownl. 1. part. 79. 80. 88.

But all leases for years whether they begin in presenti, or in futuro, must be certaine, that is, they must have a certain beginning, and certain ending, and so the continuance of the term must be certain, otherwise they are not good. And yet if the years be certain when the lease is to take effect in interest or possession, it is sufficient, for untill that time it may depend upon an uncertainty, viz. upon a possible contingent precedent before it begin in possession or interest, or upon a limitation or condition subsequent: but in case when it is to be reduced to a certainty upon a contingent precedent, the contingents must happen in the lives of the parties. And albeit there appear no certainty of years in the lease, yet if by reference to a certainty it may be made certaine it is sufficient. Id. errorum off. quod verum reddi potest.

As for examples, if A. seised of lands in fee, grant to B. that when B. shall pay to A. twenty shillings, that from thenceforth he shall hold the land for twenty one years, and after B. doth pay the twenty shillings; in this case B. shall have a good lease for twenty one years from thenceforth, and if A. grant to B. that if his tenant for life shall die, that B. shall have the land but ten years; this is a good Lease. And if one make a lease for years after the death of C. if C. die within ten years; this is a good lease if C. die within the ten years, otherwise not. But if A. be seised of land in fee, and lease it to B. for ten years, and it is agreed between them that B. shall pay to A. an hundred pound at the end of the said ten years, and that if he doe so, and shall pay the said hundred pound, and an hundred pound at the end of every ten years, that then the said B. shall have a perpetuall demise and grant of the premisses from ten years to ten years continually following extra memoriam hominum &c. in this case this, albeit it be a good lease for the first ten years, yet it is void for all the rest for incertainty. And if a lease be made to begin from the Nativity of Christ, and he doth not say which Nativity, as next &c. it is void for incertainty. And yet if a lease for years be made of land in lease for life to have and to hold from the death of the tenant for life; this is a good lease: So if it be to have and to hold from Michaelmas next after the death of the tenant for life, or from Michaelmas next after the determination of the estate of the tenant for life; these are good leases. So if there be a former lease in being for life or years, and another lease for years is made of the land to have and to hold from the end of the former estate by surrender, forfeiture, or otherwise for twenty years; or to have and to hold from the surrender, forfeiture, or other determination of the former lease if there be any, and if there be none for twenty years; these and such like leases are good, and this commencement is certain enough. And if one make a lease to begin after the death of I. S. & to continue untill Michaelmas, which shall be in Anno Domini 1650. this is a good lease. Co. sup. 5. Lit. 45. Co. 1. 1. 155. Co. super Lit. 45. Plow. 83. 124. Co. 6. 35. 1. 155. Plow. 270. Hil. 16. Jac. in the Exchequer. Plow. 191. 533. Ca. 6. 36. Plow. 523. and 17 Jac. B. R. Agree.

If a man have a lease of land for an hundred years, and he make a lease of this land to another to have and to hold to him for 40 years to begin after his death; this is a good lease for the whole forty years, if there shall be so many of the hundred years to come at the time of the death of the lessor. But if the lessor grant the land to another to have and to hold to him for and during all the residue of the term of an hundred years that shall be to come at the time of the death of the grantor; this is void for incertainty. And yet if in this case he grant withall all his estate, or all his term, or all his interest in the premisses of the deed, and then say to have and to hold the land &c. to the grantee for all the residue of the term of an hundred years that shall be to come at the time of his death, by this the whole estate and interest of the grantor into the land doth passe presently by these words in the premisses of the deed. And if in this case the lessee for an hundred years make a lease of the land to have and to hold after his death for an hundred years; this will be a good lease for as many of the first hundred years as shall be to come at the time of his death. If a lease be made to two for their lives, the remainder which shall first happen to dye for forty years; in this case this is but a possibility. And therefore neither the one nor the other, nor both together can grant away this terme of forty years; Goldb. 168. Lit. Bro. Sess. 437. Bro. Grant. 154. Co. 1. 155. Plow. 520. 521. See Exposition of Deeds.

If A. make a lease to B. for ninty years to begin after the death of A. on condition to be avoided upon the doing of divers acts by others, and afterwards makes another lease of the land Habendum after the determination or redemption of the former lease, it seems this is a good lease and certain enough. But if a lease be made to A. for eighty years if he live so long, and if he dye within the said term or alien the premisses, that then his estate shall cease, and then he doth further by the same deed grant and let the premisses for so many years as shall then remain unexpired after the death of A. or alienation to B. for the residue of the said term of eighty years, if he shall live so long; in this case, the lease to B. is void, for after the death of A. the term is at end, but if he say for the residue of the eighty years, it is otherwise; Per Justice Bridgeman. Co. 4. 152. Dier. 353.

If A. doth make a lease of land to B. for so many years as B. hath in the Manor of Dale, and B. hath then a lease for ten years of the Manor of Dale, in this case this is a good lease for ten years. But if A. make a lease of land to B. for so many years as the land B. hath in execution shall be in execution; this lease is void for incertainty. And if a lease be made during the minority of I. S. or untill I. S. shall come to the age of twenty one years, these are good leases; and if T. S. dye before he come to his full age, the lease is ended. But if a lease be made to another until a child that is now in his mother's belly shall come to the age of twenty one years, this lease is not good. And if a lease be made for so many years as T. S. shall name, in this case if T. S. dye name a certain number of years in the life time of the party lessor, this is a good lease. But if a lease be made for so many years, as the executor of the lessor, or of the lessee shall name, this lease is void. Plow. 273. 313. 322. F. N. B. 3. N. 13. H. 8. 11. Co. 6. 35.

If a man make a lease for twenty one years, if T. S. live so long, or if the coverture between T. S. and D. S. shall so long continue, or if T. S. shall continue to be Parson of Dale so long, these and such like leases are good. But if T. make a lease to B. for so many years as A. and B. or either of them shall live, not naming any certain number of years, this cannot be a good lease for years. So if the Parson of Dale make a lease of his glebe for so many years as he shall be Parson there, this is not certain neither can it be made so by any means. And yet if a Parson shall make a lease from three years to three years so long as he shall be Parson, this is a good lease for six years if he continue Parson so long, and for the residue void for incertainty. So if I make another a lease of land until he be promoted to a Benefice; this is no good lease for years, but void for incertainty. Co. super Lis. 45. Plow. 27.

If I have a rent charge of twenty pound per annum, and let it to another until he have levied an hundred pound; this is a good lease for five years. But if I have a peece of land of the value of twenty pound per annum, and I make a lease of it to another until he shall levy out of the profits thereof an hundred pound; this is no good lease for years, but void for incertainty. Co. 8. 35. 14 H. 8. 10. Plow. 274.

But her note in all these cases of incertain leases made with such limitations as aforesaid, as until such a thing be done, or so long as such a thing continue &c. that if livery of seisin be made upon them, they may be good leases for life determinable on these contingents, albeit they be no good leases for years. Plow. 27. Co. 6. 35.

Note.

And in some speciall cases a lease may be good notwithstanding some incertainty in the continuance of it, for a lease may cease for a time and revive again, as if tenant in tail make a lease for years reserving twenty shillings, and after take a wife and die without issue, in this case as to him in reversion the lease is merely void: but if he indow the wife of the tenant in tail of the land, as to the wife, it is revived again. So if tenant in taile make a lease for years rendering rent, and die without issue, his wife enceint with a son, and he in reversion enter, in this case as against him the lease is void, but after the son is born the lease is good again if it be within the Statute. So if tenant in fee-simple take a wife, and then make a lease for years and dieth, the wife is indowed; in this case she shall avoid the lease, but after her decease the lease shall be in force again. Co. super Lis. 46. 10 Ed. 3. 16.

If a lease be made for life or years to A. and after the lessor doth make a lease for years by word or in writing to B. regularly this concurrent lease to B. is a good lease at least for so many years of the second lease as shall be to come after the first lease is determined according to the agreement, as if the first lease to A. be for twenty years, and the second lease to B. be for thirty years, and both begin at one time; in this case the second lease is good for the last ten years. And yet the reversion will not passe without the attornment of the tenant, and therefore if any rent be reserved on the first lease, the second lessee shall not have it until the first lessee doth attorn. But if the second lease be for the same or for a lesser time, as if the first lease be for twenty years, and the second lease be for twenty or for ten years to begin at the same time; these second leases are for the most part void. Plow. 433. 421. 273. Co. 1. 155. Bro. Leases. 73. 10. Plow. 521. Co. 4. 38. And yet herein a difference is taken between leases made by matter of record and by writing, and leases that are made by word of mouth; for if the second lease be made by fine, deed indented, or poll, albeit it be but for the same or for a lesser time, and albeit it be a lease of the land it self, and not of the reversion, yet it will passe the rent reserved upon the first lease if the first lessee attorn, and so also it will do without attornment where attornment is not needfull. But if the second lease be made by word of mouth it is otherwise, for a reversion and a rent in this case will not passe without deed, and therefore a grant by word doth not passe them.

And if the second lease be by fine or deed, and not by word, then also it will work by way of Estoppel both against the lessor and against the lessee; so that if the first lease happen by any means, as by surrender or otherwise, to determine before it be run out, then the second lessee shall have it, and if there be any rent reserved upon the second lease, the lessee must pay it from the time of the making of the lease. Dier. 58. 356. Plow. 421. 422. Co. 1. 155. And therefore if one make a lease of land to A. for ten years, and after make a lease to B. of the same land from Michaelmas next for ten years, and before Michaelmas the first lessee doth purchase the fee simple, so that now by this means his term is drowned, in this case the second lease shall begin at Michaelmas. Dier. 131. Plow. 437. So if one make a lease to A. for twenty years, and make a lease of the land to B. for two years, rendering rent, and after A. makes a lease for the rest of his time to C. by deed, this lease if made for two years does amount to a good lease of the rent and reversion, and so is also without Argument, if there be any consideration given for it, for then it is also a good lease for all the rest of the term after the two years. Co. 4. 53. So if one make a lease to A. for twenty years, if he live so long, rendering rent, and after he doth make a lease to B. by Indenture for eighty years to begin presently, or grant the reversion to begin at a day past, or the like, in all these cases if the first lessee attorne, the rent will passe, but if not it will be a good lease for the land for so many of the years as shall bee to come after the first lease ended. But if the second lease be by paroll without a deed, the reversion as a reversion will not passe, and the grant will be void if there be nothing else, to help it. Co. 1. 155. Plow. 432. 434. Hil. 6. 7. Ar. Admde. Finch versus Vaughan. And in cases where the second lease is void, albeit the first lessee surrender his estate, or his estate end by a condition, yet the second lease is not hereby made good. Dier. 112. But if the second lease for years after another lease for life or years be made for money, so as it may be said to passe by way of bargain and sale, this may help the matter, for in this case albeit it be by word only, it may passe the reversion and the rent also; but in most cases it is good for the remainder of the term after the first lease ended. And if the second lease be to begin after the end of the former lease, in this case the former lease is no impediment at all to the validity of the latter lease, but the latter lease is good notwithstanding. Co. 2. 35. 16th. 17th. 18th. 19th. 20th. 21st. 22nd. 23rd. 24th. 25th. 26th. 27th. 28th. 29th. 30th. 31st. 32nd. 33rd. 34th. 35th. 36th. 37th. 38th. 39th. 40th. 41st. 42nd. 43rd. 44th. 45th. 46th. 47th. 48th. 49th. 50th. 51st. 52nd. 53rd. 54th. 55th. 56th. 57th. 58th. 59th. 60th. 61st. 62nd. 63rd. 64th. 65th. 66th. 67th. 68th. 69th. 70th. 71st. 72nd. 73rd. 74th. 75th. 76th. 77th. 78th. 79th. 80th. 81st. 82nd. 83rd. 84th. 85th. 86th. 87th. 88th. 89th. 90th. 91st. 92nd. 93rd. 94th. 95th. 96th. 97th. 98th. 99th. 100th.

Any person whatsoever of full age that hath any estate of inheritance in fee-tail in his own right of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, may at this day without fine or recovery make leases of such lands for lives or years, and such leases shall be good so as these conditions and incidents following be therein observed and kept. Stat. 32 H. 8. cap. 28. Co. super Litt. 44.

1. Such leases must be by deed indented, and not by deed poll or by paroll.
2. They must be made to begin from the day of the making thereof, or from the making thereof.

And therefore a lease made to begin from Michaelmas which shall be three years after for twenty one years, or a lease made to begin after the death of the tenant in tail for twenty one years is not good. Co. 5. 6. Dier. 246.

But if a lease be made for twenty years to begin at Michaelmas next, it seemes this is a good lease.

3. If there be an old lease in being of the land, the same must be surrendered, or expired and ended within a year of the time of the making of the new lease, and this surrender must be absolute, and not conditionall; also it must be real, and not illisory or in shew only. For factum non dicitur quod non perseverat. Co. 5. 2.

There must not be a double or conturrent lease in being at one time, as if a lease for years be made according to the statute, he in the reversion cannot afterwards expulse the lessee and make a lease for life or lives, or another lease for years according to the statute, nor conversa. But if a lease for years be made to one, and afterwards a lease for life is made to another, and a letter of attorney is made to give livery of seisin upon the lease for life, & before the livery made the first lease

And if upon the old lease the Rent were payable at four days in the year, and by the new lease it is reserved to be paid at one day; this is not a good lease. But if the rent upon the old lease be payable in gold, and the new rent be payable in silver; it seems the lease is not good. And if a Tenant in Tail be of a Manor that hath been usually demised for ten pound rent, and after a Tenancy exchanged, and then he doth make a lease of the Manor rendering ten pound rent by the year; in this case this is a good lease, but if the Lessor purchase a Tenancy, then it seems otherwise. *Trin. 3. Wast.

9 Such leases must not be without impeachment of waste. And therefore if Tenant in tail make a lease of his Land intailed without impeachment of waste; this lease is void. And if a lease be made for life, the remainder for life, &c. this is not a good lease: for in this case during the remainders, the Tenant for life cannot be punished for waste done. But if such a Tenant of Land make a lease of it to 13 for the lives of three others; this is a good lease, albeit it may afterwards become an occupancy. Co. 6. 37. & Miers case Adjudge.

10 Such leases must not be against any special Act of Parliament. And therefore if a woman that is Tenant in Tail of the gift of her deceased husband, or any of his Ancestors whilst she is sole, or after with another husband make any such lease warranted by this Statute; yet this lease is not good. Stat. 11 H. 7. 20. Co. 3. 31.

Acceptance.

11 They must have all due ceremonies and circumstances for the perfection of them, as other such like leases have, as livery of seisin, and the like, where they are needfull. And then only when leases have these conditions, and are made according to these provisions, are they said to be within this Statute of 31 H. 8. and such only as do bind the Tenant in Tail himself, and the issue in Tail, for otherwise it be not warranted by this Statute, albeit it will bind the Tenant in Tail himself that made it, yet it will not binde his issue, but as to him it will be void, or voidable at the least: for if Tenant in Tail of land make a lease of it for an hundred years without any rent reserved thereupon; this lease as to the issue in Tail is void: but if he make a lease of his Land for an hundred years rendering rent, and have issue and die; in this case the lease is only voidable by the issue at his pleasure, and therefore if the issue accept the rent after the death of the Tenant in Tail; by this means the lease is affirmed and become good. But howsoever the lease be made, it will not binde him that comes in of a remainder over, nor him that is the donor. And therefore if a Tenant in Tail makes a lease warranted by the Statute, and after die without issue, so that the land doth remain over to another, or revert to the donor; in these cases neither he in remainder, nor the donor shall be bound by this lease; for as to them the lease is void. And yet by a common recovery the Tenant in Tail may make leases of, or lay charges upon the land to bind the donor and him in remainder also. But otherwise it is of a fine, for if Tenant in Tail make a Lease for years by fine, this will not bar the donor, nor the remainder in any case where it is in a stranger. And yet if the remainder be in the Tenant in Tail himself, and he make a lease for years by deed according to the Statute or by fine; this lease is good and shall bind his own remainder. See more Brownl. 1 part. 139. 173. Co. 7. 7. 8. 34. Dyer 7. 8. The woman's Lawyer. 73. Plow. 435. 436.

6. What leases or other acts may be made or done by the husband with the lands he hath in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail in the right of his wife, or jointly with her. And what leases made by him of such lands are good. Or not. And how.

12 The Husband may at this day without fine or recovery make leases of the lands, tenements or hereditaments, whereof he hath any estate of inheritance in Fee simple, or Fee-tail in the right of his Wife, or jointly with his wife made before or after the coverture, so as there be in such leases observed the eleven conditions or limitations before required in the leases made by Tenant in Tail, and so that the wife doe joyn in the same deed, and be made party therunto, and doe seal and deliver the same deed her self in person. For if a man and his wife make a letter of Attorney to another to deliver the lease upon the Land; this lease is not a good lease from the wife warranted by the Statute.

13 And yet then as in other like cases of leases not warranted by this Statute, it is a good lease against the husband.

14 And when the lease is such a lease as is warranted by the Statute, it doth bind the husband and wife both, and the Heirs of the wife; but if it be an estate Tail

CHAP. CIV.

Of a Libel.

Libel, what:

The kinds of it.

He word Libel is taken two ways: Sometimes this word is used for the Declaration in a Matter in the Spiritual Court, which must be delivered unto the Defendant when he demands it. Sometimes, and so here this word Libel is taken for a Scandalous writing or doing of somewhat that tendeth to the defamation of another, it is called Famosus libellus seu infamatoria Scriptura: Sometimes it is against a private person, sometimes against a publick person, sometimes against the living, sometimes against the dead.

A Libel in writing, is when any Epigram, Rime, or other writing, is composed or published to the note, or contumely of another, by which his fame or dignity may be prejudiced; and this may be either verbis aut centilemis, as where it is maliciously repeated or sung in the presence of others; secondly, Traditione, when the Libel or any Copy of it is delivered over to another to scandalize the party, or it may be by other means. As first, by Pictures, when the party is painted in any ignominious and reproachful manner. Secondly, By Signs, when one doth make or fix a Gallows, or any other reproachful or ignominious sign at the door of the party, or elsewhere, Co. 5. 126. Crompt. Jur. 335. See Co. 3 part. Inst. cap. 76. Brownl. 2 part. 152.

The punishment of it.

Whosoever contrive, or procure to be contrived, or maliciously publish any of these Libels, knowing them to be so (which way soever it be done) against a private man, living, or dead, is a great offender; and against a Magistrate, or publick person is a greater, and shall be punished by Indictment; and in this case it will not help the Libeller, though the things be true, whereof the Libel is; for it is punishable notwithstanding.

And if one finde any such Libel against a private man, he may burn it, or deliver it to a Magistrate; if it be against a publick person, he must deliver it to a Magistrate, or else may be punished: But if one onely read a Libel, or hear it read, or laugh at it, or write a Copy of it onely, this is no such Publication as is punishable: And yet if after he hath read, or heard it, he repeat it, or read it, or part of it to others, this is punishable. Co. 5. 126. 9. 39.

Of Lieu or Place, Linen-Cloth, Lent, and League.

Lieu or Place.

As to Place, these things must be known.

1. When one thing doth come in the place of another, it shall be said to be of the same nature, as that it comes in the place of; as in case of Recovery of Recompence in Value, Exchange; and Rent to make Equality of Partition, and the like: For which see the Titles.

2. Place is considerable in pleading; for some things are said to be Local, and can be tried no where but in the County where they were done; and therefore the Action about them, must be laid there, as all real Actions about Land. And if one charge an Inn-keeper for the loss of his Goods, he must not say the Inn is in another County, then that wherein it is: But for Transient Acts, and so Actions about them, they may be said to be in any County; and therefore in these cases, though the wrong be done in one place, the Plaintiff may suppose it to be done in another, and in another County also. And the Jury are bound to finde it.

3. When the Law doth require a thing to be set down in a place certain, as in case of demand of Rent to have a Re-entry, he must in pleading, say it was done at that place.

4. When a thing is to be done upon Request, some place of the Request in pleading must be supposed to be. Co. upon Listl. 282, 283.

CHAP. CVI.

Of Lord and Tenant, Tenure, Services,
Manor and Mesn, &c.

His word Lord or Seignior, is a word of Honor with us, and used diversly. Sometimes it is attributed to a man that is noble by Birth, or Creation, who were sometimes called Lords of the Parliament. So also the Sons of a Duke, and the Sons of an Earl were called Lords.

St. 1.
Lord, what.
Seignior.
Nobility.

This word is also attributed to Men Honorable by Office, as the Lord Chief Justices, and others, and sometimes it is applied to meaner men that have Fee, and are Lords of Manors, and consequently have the Homage of Tenants that hold of them within their Manors; and the Lord and Tenant in this sense, are Relatives: And by his Tenants, and to them onely, he is called Lord, or Land-lord; and in this signification this word Lord is commonly taken. And hence it is that a Manor is called a Seigniorie or Lordship; and so he is divided into Lord above, and Lord Mesn. The Lord Mesn is he that is owner of a Manor, and by vertue thereof, hath Tenants holding of him in Fee, and by Copy of Court-Roll, and yet holdeth himself over of a Superior Lord, who is called Lord above, or Lord Paramount. Old N. B. 79.

The kindes.

Lord Mesn:

Tenant is he that holdeth any Lands or Tenements in Fee for life or years, by any kinde of Right or Tenure of another man. And very Lord, and very Tenant, be they that be immediate Lord and Tenant, the one to the other: And Tenure doth signifie the manner whereby Tenements are holden of their Lords.

Lord Paramount,
Tenant, what.
Very Lord, and very Tenant,
what.

And of Tenures were divers kindes, sometimes Spiritual, as Frank-almoign, which is now gone; and others Temporal, as Escuage, Cornage, Grand-Serjeanty, Knights-service in capite, or in chief; Knights-service or Chivalry, Castle-Gard, Soccage, Petit-Serjeanty, and others. And all these (upon the matter) are either in Chivalry or in Soccage.

Tenure, what.
The kindes.

For Escuage, and Cornage, which were Services the Kings Tenants were to do to his person, in the Wars against the Scots. Grand-Serjeanty, which was likewise a Service to be done by the Kings Tenant to the King by attendance upon his person.

Knights-Service in capite, or in chief, which was likewise a Service by which the Tenant was bound to serve the King in his Wars. And Knights-service or Chivalry, which was a Service whereby another Tenant that held of a comission person, and not of the King, was bound to go with his Lord in the Wars. And the Tenure by Castle-Gard seems to be of the same nature. But all these Tenures and Services, the Incidents to them, of Wardship, Marriage, Primer Seisins, are taken away by Order of Parliament, and turned into tenures in Soccage: For which see Title Gard.

Escuage, what.
Cornage, what.
Grand Serjeanty, what.
Knights-service in capite or in chief, what.
Knights-service or Chivalry, what.
Castle-Gard, what.

So that now there is no Tenure, but of the nature of Tenure in Soccage; and this is where a Tenant doth hold of his Lord, to pay him some Rent onely, or to do him some Husbandry-work for all manner of Services. So that to hold by Fealty onely, or by Fealty and Rent, or by Homage, Fealty, and Rent, for all manner of Services, or by Petit-Serjeanty, and Soccage in capite; and so Fee-farm, Burgage, and all other Tenures whatsoever, at this day, are but Soccage-tenure, Co. 2 part. Inst. 44. Which Tenures whatsoever, at this day, are but Soccage-tenure, (for which see Aid) and a Relief.

Soccage, what.

For

The nature of Soccage Tenure.

For these two are inseparably Incident to every Tenure; and not Liveries, Primer Seisins, Wardships, Onster le Maine, Homage, Fines, Seisures, and Pardons for Alienation, as some of the other Tenures did, but now taken away also.

And for these things, see Co. upon Littl. 74, 77, 107, 108, 93. and of Copibalds, with many other places, which we shall now pass over.

And for Soccage-tenure, see Littleton on Soccage, 40 Edw. 3. 22. Westm. 1. 35. 25 Edw. 3. 11. 13 Ed. 1. 1. Co. 7. 33. Co. upon Littl. 21. 29 H. 7. 15. See more in Gard.

Where and how a Tenant may be created, altered, or extinct; and how it shall be taken.

As concerning Tenures, these things are to be known.

1. A Tenure may be of Houses, Lands, or Tenements, and such like things, but not of Rents, Seigniories, Commons, or such like things.

2. Any man may alter his Tenure, or extinguish it by Release, or the like, but hardly can a common person create a Tenure at this day, Crompt. 74r 21. Dyer 84 27 H. 8. 9. Broo. chap. 113.

Priority and Posteriority.

3. If in case of Priority of Tenure and Posteriority, where one holdeth Land of one Lord more anciently than he doth hold his other Land of another Lord, the Tenant die, the Lord of whom the Land was held by Priority, should have had the Wardship of the Body of the Heir, because that could not be divided as the Land of either Lord might. And in case where the Priority were Incertain, that it could not be discerned, or one Tenure was as old as the other; then he that could first have seised the Body of the Heir, should have had it. And if the King had been one of the Parties, whether the holding of him were by Priority or Posteriority, he would have the Wardship of the Body from all the other Lords: But every Lord shall have the Wardship of his own Land held of him. Dyer 12. 24. *F. Non-tenure,
what.

For Non-tenure, see 25 Ed. 3. 16. 4 H. 7. 24.

Self. 3.
Services, what.
The kinds.

Service is the duty or performance, which the Tenant by reason of his Fee, oweth unto his Lord; and this is the Fruit of Tenure.

And of Services there are twelve parts, Homage, Fealty, Escuage, Knights-service, Soccage, Frank-almoign, Homage, Ancestral, Grand-Serjeanty, Petit-Serjeanty, Tenure in Burgage, in Villainage, and Rents. And there is no Tenure but hath some service incident to it: As for Aid, Relief, and such like things, they reckon these the Fruit or Improvement of, or Incidents to Services; but they are much of one nature, and may be put together, Co. upon Littl. 94. 61.

And of Services there have been these Divisions. Some were Military and Noble, as Knights-service, and the like; and some were more clownish and base, as Soccage, and the like. Some also were said to be real, as Wards, Marriages, and the like; and some again were called Personal, which were such as were to be done by mens persons, as Homage, Fealty, and the like. Some Services also were said to be for the benefit of the Lord onely, as payment of Rent, and the like; and some again were said to be pro bono publico, as the Services of War.

Those for the Lords benefit, some of them are Annual, and certain as Rent, Suite of Court, to be Butler or Baker to the Lord; or else they are once onely, and upon an Accident, as Herriot, Relief, Fealty, Amercements, Forfeitures, or the like.

Those that are pro bono publico are, First, For defence of the Realm, as Escuage, and the like, now taken away. Secondly, To make or repair a Common-Bridge, or Common High-way. Thirdly, For advancement of Religion, and Works of Piety, as to maintain a Preacher, or Ornaments of a Church. Fourthly, To do Works of Charity, as to marry a poor Virgin, or the like. Fifthly, For the advancement of Justice, as to aid a Sheriff, to keep a Record, or the like.

Services also are said to be entire, or dividable.

There are four sorts of entire Services. 1. Chattels valuable, as an Ox, Afs, or the like, or things of pleasure, as a Falcon, or the like.

2. Such as are personal, to be done by the Tenant in person to the person of the Lord, as Fealty, and the like; to be Butler, Sewer, to the Lord, and the like.

3. Such as consist of some Manual work, as to cover the Lords House, Stable, or the like.

4. To exercise some Office, as to be Steward, Bailiff, or the like, to the Lord:

Services are also yet further distinguished into Services of profit, and no fidelity; and services of fidelity, and no profit.

Some say Services are free, and they consist, first, in Render, as to pay Rent; secondly, in using, as to have Common; thirdly, in Prender, as to take Estovers in the Lords Woods; or Villain, as to scoure the Lords Ditches, or the like. And again into Corporal, either of Submission, as Homage, Fealty, &c. or of profit, and that either publick, to amend High-ways, and the like, or the private profit of the Lord. For all which see Co. of Copihold, 22. Co. 105. 6. 1. Littl. 322. Co. 10. 106, 108. or Littl. 64. 92. 22 Ed. 4. 3.

Homage is taken two ways. 1. For a Corporal service or solemnity used by the Tenant to his Lord, and to this Fealty is always incident; and the Receipt of this Service by the Lord from his Tenant, is called the Receipt of Homage. This hath not been used at all for many years, and is now gone, we shall pass it over also. You may read of it in Littl. sesh. 85, 86, &c. Homage, what.
Receipt of Homage, what.

Respite of Homage, was nothing but the forbearance or delay of the taking of it: For which, men were wont to pay a small sum of money in the Exchequer every fifth Term. This also is gone, and out of use, but you may read of it in Co. of Copihold, and Fines Law. Respite of Homage, what.

Fealty is an Oath taken at the admittance of every Tenant, to be true to the Lord, of whom he holdeth his Land. And as to this, these things are to be known. Fealty, what.

1. Although Homage were more honorable then this, yet this is more sacred then that; for this is always done with, but that was done without an Oath.

2. This is a Service that is incident to all Tenures.

3. This may be done often, and must be done by the Tenant to every Lord successively, and for every peece of Land.

4. This is to be performed by every Freeholder, except Tenants in Frank-almoign, and by all Tenants for years, and by Copiholders.

5. This may be made as well to the Lords Steward or Bailiff, as to the Lord himself; otherwise it was of Homage, in all these particulars when it was in use, it was done by none but Tenants in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, and but once; and then to the Lord himself, &c. But see for Fealty, and how it is made, Co. of Copihold, 19. Rep. 11. 17, 81. upon Littl. 71. 67. 92. F.N.B. 250.

This word Herriot is taken for the best Chattel personal, as Ox, Horse, peece of Plate, or Household-stuff that a Tenant hath at the time of his death, or time of his Alienation, which the Lord is to have. And this is either by Custom, as where by the Custom of the place, time out of minde it hath been so used at the death and Alienation of every Tenant, as it is in divers Copiholds, and other Manors by the Copiholders or other Tenants; or it is by Service, when there is no such Custom, but it is reserved by Grant; That the Tenant shall hold by the Service to pay a Herriot at the time of his death or Alienation of his Land. And this also is certain, as the best Beast, &c. or uncertain, as yielding a Herriot, &c. and say not what Co. upon Littl. 185. Sesh. 4.
Herriot or Herriot, what.
The kinds of it.

As to this, these things are to be known:

1. Albeit the Lord cannot shew the original of a Herriot-custom, yet if he can prove the payment of them, after the death or Alienation of his Tenants (as the Case is) from time to time; this is sufficient to maintain the Service.

2. If the Lord have power to chuse the best Beast, and he chuse the worst, he is concluded hereby and cannot chuse again, 16 H. 7. 5.

3. If a Woman be to pay Herriot at her death, the Lord may not seise the Husband's Goods for this, without a special Custom to warrant his so doing, M. 8 Car. 2. R.

4. This must be paid before the Mortuary, and the Lord may not by any shifting Devise of the Tenant, be defeated of it, Co. upon Littl. 185.

5. In Detinue.

Action of the Case.

5. In case of Herriot Custom, the Lord hath property in the Goods as soon as his Tenant dieth, and may take and seize it within or without his Lordship, where ever he finde it, and may have a Detinue against him that keepeth it from him, and an Action of the Case against him that doth esloyn it, Bro. 348. 8 H. 7. 10.

6. The Copiholder for life by this Service is, The Lord grants the Seignory for ninety and nine years, if the Tenant live so long, and after makes a Lease for four hundred years, the Tenant is ousted, and dieth; yet a Herriot shall be paid, and the Lessee for ninety and nine years, and not for four hundred years shall have it; March. 23. pl. 52.

Señ. 5.
Relief, what.

The kindes.

7. Some hold the Lord also may seise Herriot Service, Geld. 191. pl. 128. Relief is a certain sum of money, or other thing which the Heir of a Freeholder that is at full age, at the time of his Ancestors death, is to pay to the Lord, of whom the Land so to him comes, as Heir is held at his entrance into the Land.

And it is either Relief-service, which is a Service due from most Freehold-Tenants, to their Lords in all places; or Relief-custom, which is a Relief to be paid by the special Customs of some places, and Manors, upon the Death, or Alienation of the Tenant. And in some places it is upon the death of the Tenant only, Mag. Chart. 2. 3. 18. Co. 7. 33.

What is to be
lief, and when.

That which is to be paid, in this case, for Relief, is not certain nor alike in all places, and for all Tenures; for sometimes, and in some cases it is more, and in some cases less; neither is it paid in all places at the same time; For the common course is for the Tenure in capite, or by Knights-service, for an Earldom one hundred pound, for a Barony one hundred marks, for a whole Knights Fee one hundred shillings, and so pro rata. And the Reason hereof, see after in Knights Fee.

If the Tenure be by grand Serjeanty, the Relief is the value of the whole Land for one year; and if the Tenure be by Soccage or Petit-Serjeanty, the Relief is to be double the Rent: As if the Tenant hold by ten shillings Rent yearly, payable at certain times, he shall double this Rent, he must pay ten shillings besides his Rent presently. In some places by Custom it is half a years profit of the Land, and in some places it is a years profit of the Land. And this the Heir is to pay when his Ancestor dieth, as all the benefit the Lord then hath: And for this if it be Relief-service the Lord may distrain, but cannot have an Action of Debt: But if the Lord die, his Executors may have an Action of Debt, but may not distrain: And some have said also the Lord himself may have an Action of Debt: And for Relief-custom, according to the Custom of the place. Co. super Littl. 83. 84. 91. 162. Co. of Copihold, 3253. Co. 7. 33. Kelw. 136. Littl. 157.

Where it shall be paid, or not, and how.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. Where the Heir was within age at the death of his Ancestor, the King was to have no Relief at his full age, Mag. Chart. 3.

2. If one hold some Land of the King in capite, and some of other men by Knights-service, and the King had had the Wardship of all (as he must have had) the Heir, when he had come of age, must have paid a Relief to all the other Lords, for all the Land he held of them, Co. super Littl. 77. Broo Relief 13.

3. In case the King when the Heir is of full age, at the death of the Ancestor, or not to sue Livery, a Relief is to be paid to the King. Co. super Littl. 77.

4. The Rule generally is this, That where the Heir shall be in Ward, if he be within age, he shall pay a Relief if he be of full age, and whiles the Gardein hath the custody of the Land, the Heir is not to pay a Relief. Broo Relief, 12. 13.

5. If the Mefnalty descend to the Tenant of the Land, though the Mefnalty be at the same time extinct, yet the Tenant, for that time, must pay a Relief, 11 H. 7. 12.

6. If one hold of several common persons, by Knights-service, the Lords by Posteriority shall have no Relief, because they have the Wardship of the Land held of them, unless it be in case where there was Land held of the King, for there the King had all the Land, and then the Heir at full age did pay Relief to the other Lords, 24 Ed. 3. 24.

7. If the Tenant hold his Land by to do certain days work at Harvest, or to attend at Christmas, or the like; in these cases the Tenant is not to pay Relief; for these Rents are not to be doubled, nor are any corporal services whatsoever to be doubled, Co. upon Lit. 91.

8. If the Tenant be to pay yearly a pair of Gilt-Spurs, or Five shillings in money at Easter; in this case the Tenant may pay which of them he pleaseth for his Relief, so he pay it forthwith. But if he pay not one of them at the time appointed by Law, then the Lord may distrain for which he please, Co. upon Lit. 91.

9. If the Rent to be paid be Ten shillings every second or third year, the Relief shall be Ten shillings, and must be paid forthwith, Co. upon Lit. 91.

Knight's-Fee was taken heretofore for so much as was held a sufficient livelihood for a Knight; and is not to be reckoned according to the quantity and content of eight Hides, which is (as some would have it) eight hundred Acres of Land, nor six hundred and eighty Acres of Land (as others would have it to be) but according to the quality and value; and it was esteemed twelve times the Ploughman or Yeoman's living, which in old times was five Nobles. So that the state of a Knight was esteemed Twenty pounds by the year, be the Acres more or less: And then they esteemed Four hundred Marks by the year sufficient to maintain the state of a Baron; and Four hundred pounds, twenty Knights Fees by the year, sufficient to maintain an Earl; and now of late for the two later Dignities of Marquis and Duke thus, Eight hundred Marks for a Marquis, and Eight hundred pounds for a Duke: which were esteemed antiently to be a competent yearly Revenue for such persons. So that according to these Rates, the Reliefs of these persons is paid still for the Knights relief, and all those above him, which are the Noblemen: For the Knight payeth the fourth part of his Revenue, being five Pounds; the Baron one hundred Marks, the Earl one hundred Pounds, the Marquis two hundred Marks, and the Duke two hundred Pounds. But these Payments being a Charge incident to the Tenure in capite, we do conceive they are now gone by the general Order of Parliament. See Co. 2 par. Inst. 7, 8, 9. Mag. char. 2.

Before the Statute of 18 Ed. 1. Quia Emptores, the Grantee of Land must always have held the Land of the Grantor by such Services as he held over, if other Services had not been reserved; or otherwise the Grantor might have appointed him to hold of the next Lord. But at this day in all Feoffments to one and his Heirs, the Feoffee is to hold the Land of the chief Lord of the Fee, by the same Services that the Feoffor held before. And if the Feoffment be made of parcel of the Land, the Feoffee shall hold of the chief Lord pro particula according to the quantity of Land, and the Feoffor shall be set free for that part. And if one make a Lease for life or years, and reserve no Rent; in this case the Lessor shall have Fealty only, and no Rent, although he hold over by Rent. And Donees in tail and their Issues are to do such Services to the Lord Paramount as the Donor, if they do not make some special Reservation upon the Deed, Co. upon Lit. 23. See more after.

By what Services one shall hold, and how.

Seisin of any part of a Service, is a Seisin of all. Seisin of a superior Service, is a Seisin of all inferior Services incident thereunto. And therefore if a Tenure be by Homage, Fealty and Escuage, (which is Knights-Service, and Suit of Court;) and he get Seisin of the Fealty or Homage, this is a Seisin of all the rest. So if he had gotten Seisin of the Escuage. So Seisin of a Rent, is a Seisin of all the rest of the Services; and payment of a Penny in the name of Attornment, is a sufficient Seisin of all the Services; and Seisin of an annual Service, is a good Seisin for all casual and accidental Services, Co. 4. 8. Upon Lit. 69. 153. 159. 165. 102. 314. 315.

What shall be said a Seisin of Services, or
not.

For answer to this question, these things are to be known.

Where Services shall be multiplied by the Alienation of parcel of the Tenancie, or not, but shall be divided and apportioned.

1. All such Services as are not entire by the Statute of Westm. 3. De quia Emptores terrarum, shall be apportioned and divided secundum valorem, upon every Feoffment by the Tenant upon any part of the Land in severalty. But not so upon Alienation of a Moyletie, or a third part of it. As if one hold two Acres in Fee at Two shillings Rent, and the Tenant make a Feoffment in Fee of one Acre by name; in this case the Rent shall be divided, and the Feoffee must pay Twelve pence of this

X x x x

Rent.

Rent. But if the Feoffment were of a Moyetie of the two Acres, it were otherwise.

2. But if in these cases the Services reserved be entire, whether annual or accidental, and for a time only; in this case they shall not be divided, but they shall be multiplied, and the Feoffor shall perform the same Service he did before, and the Feoffee shall do as much more. Qua in partes dividi nequeunt, solida à singulis præstantur. As if a Tenant hold his two Acres by the Service of an Oxe or a Falcon, or Fealty, or the like, and make a Feoffment of one Acre; now in this case each of them, the Feoffor and Feoffee both, shall pay a Horse or a Falcon. For the Rule is in this, Res inter alios acta nemini nocere debent, sed prodesse possunt.

3. And yet if Land out of which Suit of Court is due, do come to divers persons by descent as Coparceners, or by purchase of the Land by Parcels, one of them alone shall do the Suit, and all the rest shall be contributory. And if one hold by the Service to be Butler, Baker, or to ride with the Lord, or to cover his house, or to be his Steward, Bailiff, or the like; in all these cases the Services shall not be multiplied, but one alone shall do them, and the rest shall be contributory, and the Lord may distrain which he will of them for it. And yet if a Harriot be to be paid, this shall be multiplied, and every one that hath any part of the Land must pay a Harriot, by what means soever he come by the Land.

4. Where Land is divided by act of Law; as if a Feoffment be of two Acres rendering an Oxe, and one is Burrough-English land, and the other Acre is other land, and this land is divided at the Feoffees death and goeth to his two sons; in this case it seems there shall be but one Oxe paid. So if a Lease were made of such Land rendering that Rent to the Lessor and his Heirs, and he die, the two Heirs in this case shall have but one Oxe. So of a Lease made by two Tenants in Common rendering such an entire Rent.

5. But in all cases where the entire Services are not valuable, as Homage, Fealty, or the like, or they be pro hand publico; there let the Land be divided by the act of the Law, or the act of the party, the Services shall be multiplied. See for all this, Co. 6. 1. 8. 105. upon Lis. 149. Co. 10. 106. 108. Lit. 222. 23 Ed. 4. 36. Wilm. 3. chap. 2.

The Lord by Release or Purchase of the Tenancie, and by other means, may alter or extinguish his Services: Also by other means this may be done. But for this see Extinguishment, sect. and Apportionment throughout.

For most of these Services, if they be denied, or not paid to the Lord, his most apt and proper remedy for them is to distrain. And for this see Distrain, chap. sect. 3. and Rent, chap. sect. And if the Lands and Tenements lie fresh for two years together, that he can have no Distrain for those two years, then he may have a Cessavit, and recover the Land it self. And in some cases the Lord may have an Action of Debt; and for this see Debt.

But for accidental Services, as Harriot, Wardship, and the like, the remedy is by Seizure. See Gard, chap. And for Harriot-Custom, the property of the Goods being in the Lord presently by the death of his Tenant, he may seize it where-ever he find it: And if it be detained, or elained and conveyed away, he may have an Action against him that doth it; (a) or he may distrain for it at his choice, (as is held of late.) But if it be in a Copihold or Customary Manor, we do not think it safe to distrain, unless the Lords have been used to restrain. And for Harriot-service, if it be certain, (i.) the best Beast, or any goods in certain; (b) it is held that the Lord may seize and take it also: But if it be uncertain, he cannot seize it, but must distrain for it; and so he may also do for Harriot-service certain, if he will, for in this case he hath election which to do. (a) So ruled by Just. Jones at Sarum Assizes, 9 Car. (b) M. 39. 40 Eliz. B.R. Goldsb. 191; pl. 128. See for all this, 21 H. 7. 13. 8 H. 7. 10. Bro. Distr. 43. Kelw. 184. D. & St. 76. Plow. 96. Co. of Copihold 51.

For a Relief the Lord may distrain, but cannot bring an Action of Debt; but his Executors may bring an Action of Debt, and cannot distrain. Co. upon Lis. 83. 84.

For Aid to make the Lords eldest son Knight, or marry the Lords daughter, it is said the Lord may distrain, or have a Writ to recover it, F.N.B. 82. Ca. upon Lit. 91. See ch. 9. sect. 1.

But for some kind of Rents the Lord may have a Writ of Debt; for which see Debt, in my First Part of The Marrow of the Law. For other Rents, and for Corporal Services, as Homage, Fealty, amending High-ways, Bridges, discharging offices to the Lord, and in other cases the proper remedy is by Distress. See chap.

Cessavit is a Writ that lieth where my very Tenant that holdeth of me by a Rent, and the Rent is behind two years, and no sufficient Distress is to be found upon the Land, then I may by this Writ recover the very Land it self. But this Writ lieth for annual Services only, and not for Homage, Fealty, or the like accidental Services; nor will it lie for a Rent-seek. And the Heir cannot have this Writ for a Cesser in the Ancestors time; nor one Lord for a Cesser in another Lords time. And therefore if the Tenant cease one year in one Lords time, and after another year in the time of another Lord to whom the Seignory is granted by the first Lord; this is dispensable. And if in this case when the Action is brought, the Tenant will come into Court and pay the Arrearages, and give Bond with Sureties duly to pay the Rent afterwards, the Lord must accept it. Also it is said, the Lord upon such a Cesser may enter, or have a Writ of Escheat. See for these things, Glouc.ch. 4. Westm. 2. 21. Co. 2. 93. Keln. 74. Plow. 132. Co. upon Lit. 154.

A Manor by some is defined to be a thing compounded of divers parts, as of a House, Land arable, Meadow, Pasture, Woods, Rents, an Advowson, Court-Baron, and the like. It is called also a Seignory or Lordship; and he that hath it, the Seignior or Lord. And of a Manor there are two principal parts; the Demesne, and the Services. By Demesne is sometimes understood all the parts of the Manor which are not in the hands of the Freeholders, whether they are in the hands of Lessees for life, years, or at will.

Manor or Seignory, what.

Demesne, what.

But most properly and usually by Demefns is understood the Lords chief Manor-place, which he and his Ancestors have time out of mind kept in their own hands and occupied; with all the Houses, Lands, Meadows and Pastures thereunto belonging, which were never in Lease; and this place or house was anciently called the Lords Mansion-house. And by Services are to be understood the Rents and Duties that Tenants are to pay and do to the Lord of the Manor for the Tenements they hold of him: And these are either certain, as Rents and the like; or casual, as Perquisites are.

Self. 10.

Freeholders.

Some say a Manor is, where Lands are holden by divers of one man by certain Services. Some define it to be, Lands in the hands of a Lord, of whom many Tenants, two at the least, do hold to do suit of Court there: And they hold, that the Land considered apart from the Service, is termed Demefns. And others define a Manor to be a Rule or Government which a man hath over such as hold Land within his Fee; and they seem to intend rather the Court-Baron which is incident to every Manor, and doth stand and fall with it. And for the support and continuance of this Court, there must be two Freeholders at the least left which do hold of the Manor: And therefore it is held, that if all the Freeholds but one do escheat, or be bought in by the Lord, the Manor, and consequently the Court-Baron is dissolved: For a Manor cannot continue without a Court-Baron, which cannot continue without Freeholders to be Judges of the Court. Yet here we do distinguish, and we must know, that in all Manors where there are Freeholders and Copiholders (as there are in many Manors) there are two Courts; the one called the Court-Baron or Court of Freeholders, wherein they are Judges, and this is to try Actions between party and party; and the other for Copiholders, called the Copiholders Court, which is for the surrendring and granting of Estates, and making of Admittances, and the like, and in this Court the Lord or his Steward is the Judge. And one of these may subsist without the other: As if the Lord sell all his Copiholds in Fee to one man; in this case the Purchaser may keep the Copiholders Court, and do all that doth belong thereunto; and the Seller may keep the Freeholders Court, and do all that doth belong thereunto: And therefore the Manor may continue, where either of these Courts do continue. Bro. Manor 3. Sait 17. Co. 4. 26. 6. 64.

The kinds.

A Lord; and a Lordship or Manor is either in gross, when it is held of the person of another, as sometimes it was of the King; or else it was because of a Manor, when it was held of the King, as of his Manor, or of his Honor of Dale. Finches 145. 34 H. 8. 49. Bro. chap. 210.

How Manors
the first.

It is supposed that Manors at the first did begin thus. The King at first granted a certain Circuit of ground to a certain great man, a Baron, or the like, for him and his Heirs to dwell upon, and to exercise some Jurisdiction within it, paying such Rent and doing such services for the same as the King thought good: And then this great man, by example and in imitation of the Kings police, parcelled out a great part of this Land to others, some to one, and some to another, and reserved such like services for war and peace from his Tenants, as he was bound to do to the King. As for example, the King granted two thousand Acres of land together to one great man to hold of his person, to do such service to him in the time of War or Peace, as to provide a Horse or Armistition, or to go with him in the War, or to be his Carver, or the like. This great man then doth grant a thousand Acres of the uttermost parts of this land, some to one to hold by one service, and some to another by another service; and some service was for the time of War, and some for the time of Peace; some to go with the Lord, some to provide horse, some to pay money, and some to plow and dress his land, some to repair his house, some to be his Butler, some to be his Bailiff, or to be his Steward, and the like; and a thousand Acres of this land he kept to himself, which the Lord did use to manure by his Tenants or Bondmen, such as they had then: And then did the Lord appoint at his Courts of his Manor, which were set up with the Manor, how his Tenants should hold their land, making an Entry thereof in the Rolls of the Court; much of which was still in the Lords power, and therefore those Tenants were called Tenants at will; and such were those who are now Copiholders, who hold to this day at the will of the Lord,

Lord, according to the Custom of the Manor. And at the Lords Courts did the Lord use to assemble his Tenants before his Steward at a time appointed; and there he swears by the Oath of his Tenants, Copiholders and Freeholders, to be informed by their Presentment, of all such Duties, Rents, Reliefs, Wardships, Forfeitures, and Profits that did happen to him; and then the Bailiff did use by Seisure, by Distress, Amercement, and the like, to do execution amongst the Tenants, and help the Lord in his duties. And in these Courts they had power also, the Tenants to sue one another under Forty Shillings, and the Freeholders were (as they still are) the Judges in this Court, called the Court-Baron, or Freeholders Court. But the Copiholders of these Manors have now gotten Freedom for their Persons, and Assurance for their Estates by the Custom of the place; they are not now under the bondage they formerly were. (See in my Book of Copiholds.)

But at this day no Subject can make such a Manor: For since the Statute of Quia Emptores terrarum, it is held that no man can well create a Tenure; and therefore it is held, the King himself cannot create a Manor at this day: For a Manor was made by continuance of time, when there was a Messuage, and the Inhabitants of it have time out of mind occupied Land, Meadow and Pasture as belonging to it, and have had such Rents and Services belonging to it; and have been used to present to the Advowson, and the like. And therefore if a man shall now give Land to divers men in Tail by the Service of Suit-Court, albeit this Service may be well raised, yet is not this a Manor. Nor can a Lord purchase other Land and lay to his Manor, though the Tenant be never so willing to it.

But the changeableness of mans estate, and mutability of time hath brought it so to pass, that these great men or their posterity have alienated these Lands and Mansions, and others that had none, have by their wealth purchased many of them; and some of them are sold to meaner men, who by their skill in Physick, Law or Merchandise, or otherwise, have gathered wealth and enabled themselves to purchase the same. And many of them for Capital offences have forfeited them into the Kings hands; and some of these remain in the Crown, others are gone to others from the Crown, Park. 114. Restru. Plow. 189. Co. of Copiholds 524 55. Bro. Tenure 103. And to this Manor do belong two principal Officers: A Steward, which the Lord may make or discharge by word or writing; and being made, his office is not to make a benefice by it to himself, but to keep the Courts, and therein to enter the Plaints, Pledges, Surrenders, Admittances, Fealties, and the like: For which see Officer, chap. 1. sect. 1. Co. 3. 61. of Copihold 123. Co. 4. 30. 9. 48. And a Bailiff, who may also be made and discharged by word without writing; and being made, he is to dispose the affairs of the Lord, to pay and receive his Rents, and give him an account for them, order the Husbandry, distrain Beasts damage-tenant, repair the Lords houses, pales or hays, and for this purpose he may cut down timber: He is also (if need be) to tack in Cattel, sell and sell saleable Underwoods, and do other things for the bettering and improvement of the Manor: But he may not set up any new house, nor old house fallen, nor make any additions or alterations, as tile a house before thatched, pale it where it was before hedged, or the like, without special commandment of his Master, but he will be a Trespassor, *Co. 4. 30. If the Demesns of a Manor be once by the act of the party severed from the Services in Fee-simple, or the Copiholds from the Manor in Fee-simple, although it be but for an instant, and that there be no Transmutation of possession, by this means the Manor is dismembred, and is but a maimed Manor. So that if one of the Courts continue, it is a Manor (as we have shewed before) but an imperfect Manor. As if one be seised of a Manor for life, the Remainder to B. and his heirs, and B. levy a Fine to D. of the Demesns, and he doth render it back to D. for forty years, and assign to B. and his heirs for ever; by this the Manor is destroyed. So if the Lord of the Manor sell away the Inheritance of all the Copiholds to several persons, hereby the Manor and Court of Copiholders is destroyed: And so it is if he sell away all the Freeholds, or all but one, hereby the Manor and Court of Freeholders is gone: And so it is, if they do all escheat into the Lords hands: And so it is if the Lord do purchase purchase into his own hands all the Freeholds, or all but one; hereby the Manor and Court of Freeholders is dissolved. But when the Alteration is by act of Law, it is otherwise: And therefore if a Manor be divided between Parceners, and one of them hath one part of the Demefns and Services, and another another part of the Demefns and Services; in this case each of them shall have a Manor and a Court. And if upon the Division of the Manor between them, one of the Parceners have all the Demefns allotted to him, and the other all the Services allotted to him, and after one of them die without issue, so that his part come to his companion; in this case it shall be said that the Manor and Courts were only suspended while they were divided; and when they come again together, the Manor is revived again.

If one that hath a Manor grant away the Moyetie of it, hereby the Manor is destroyed. By Just. Jones.

If one Manor that is held of another escheat, so that they come into one hand; in this case both of them are united and do continue, and are neither of them destroyed. But if once a Manor be destroyed by the act of the party, he can never after be revived. Fortior est dispositio legis quam hominis.

Sec. 12.
Where Land that is part of a Manor, shall be said to be divided from the Manor, and where it shall be united again, or not.

For answer to this, take these things.

1. If the Lord make a Feoffment of a Copihold by Deed, or without Deed; by this the Copihold land is absolutely severed from the Manor, and shall never be reunited again, Co. 11. 47. Dyer 281.

2. If one convey a Manor, excepting one Acre; by this, this one Acre is perpetually severed from the Manor, Co. 11. 47.

3. If a man be seised of a Manor in right of his wife, and he grant four Acres of it for life, and after the husband grant the Reversion of them to J.S. in Fee, and after the husband and wife levy a Fine to J.S. in Fee; by this the four Acres are united to the Manor, and are parcel thereof, Plow. 104. 18 Aff. pl. 3.

4. If the Lord of a Manor make a Lease for years of part of his Manor by particulars; in this case during the Term this is no part of the Manor, neither will it pass by the grant of the Manor: And albeit the Lessee do lease it back again to the wife of the Lessor, yet during this time it is not reunited. And yet the Reversion of these Lands in these cases is still parcel of the Manor, Plow. 431. Co. on Lit. 324, 325.

Of Maintenance.

IT is a taking in hand, bearing up or upholding of Quarrels and sides, to the disturbance or hinderance of Common right, Co. what. 1. Maintenance, super Lit. 368.

It is where a man doth give to another that is Plaintiff or Defendant in any Suit, or to any other in his behalf or to his use, any sum of money or other reward for to maintain his Plea or Suit, or otherwise useth perswasion or maketh labour for him, or useth means to countenance, aid or assist him, when he himself that so doth hath nothing therewith to do. And this may be either by Champerty, Conspiracy, Embrocary, Jurors in giving their Verdict, Buying of Titles, or the like: And he that so doth is a Maintainer, called also a Bearer, 26 Ed. 3. 5. Of all which see beneath the particulars.

Conspirators, Maintainers, Bearers.

And this if a man do, the party that is grieved hereby may have a Writ called A Writ of Maintenance, which is given against the Maintainer in this case; or he may follow him upon the Statutes that are made against this offence: Which see after. See for this, Gramp. Jurisd. f. 38. ab. 39. a. 50, 51. 77, 78. Westm. 1. 28. 32. 33. Ed. 1. chap. of Conspirators and of Champertors. 20 Ed. 3. c. 4. 7 R. 2. c. 15. Terms ley, 1 Ed. 1. 14.

Writ of Maintenance.

If any the Kings Counsellors or Officers, or other great men, shall by sending of Letters, Messengers, giving of Liveries, or the like means, sollicite matters, maintain or meddle with quarrels or questions that concern not them, or take parts to the hinderance and let of the Common Law and Justice, (whether it be in the Country or elsewhere:) If he be a Privy-Counsellor or other great person, he shall be punished by advice of the King and his Council: If he be an Officer or Servant of the King in the Exchequer or other Court, or any Menial Servant of his, he shall lose his Office and be imprisoned during the Kings pleasure, 21 Ed. 3. 44. 23 Ed. 3. 3. 1 R. 2. 4. 19. 10 Ed. 3. 4.

If any bind themselves by Oath, Covenant, or other alliance, That every one shall help and sustain the other falsely and maliciously to indict, or falsly to move or maintain Pleas: And also such as cause Children within age to appeal men of Person, whereby they are imprisoned and sore grieved: And such as retain men in the Country with Livery or Fees to maintain their malicious enterprises, (and this doth extend as well to the giver as the taker;) and Stewards and Bailiffs of great Lords, which by their seigniorie, office or power undertake to uphold or maintain quarrels, pleas or debates that concern not them, nor their Lords and Masters, 33 Ed. 1. 1 R. 2. 7.

Giving of Liveries, Badges, Signs and Tokens, and retaining unnecessary Servants by Great men, to maintain quarrels and suits, forbidden by divers Statutes, as 1 R. 2. 7. 7 H. 4. 14. 8 H. 8. 4. 1 H. 4. 7. 3 Ed. 4. 2. M. See Statutes of Westm. 1 Ed. 3. 14.

A Feoffment made for Maintenance shall be void, Statute R. 1. c. 10. 8 H. 6. c. 4.

Maintenance is twofold in Court, called curialis. When one is to have part of the thing, called Champerty. 2. Without having any thing, and this is general, or special. 3. When one labourerth a Juror. All this is pendens lite in the Courts of Justice; or it is curialis in the Country, by taking or keeping possessions. *1 Ed. 1. 14. 1 R. 2. 7. 7 H. 4. 14. 8 H. 8. 4. 1 H. 4. 7. 3 Ed. 4. 2. M. The kinds of

2. What shall be said to be Maintenance, and punishable. By a great man.

If any man of great authority in the County, will in the presence of a Jury and the standers by at the Trial of an Issue, say openly, That he will spend money in the Cause in question in the behalf of the Plaintiff or Defendant, or that he will give money to labour the Jury, or will speak other great and high words in favor of one of the parties; this is an unlawful maintenance, though he do spend no money, or do not labour the Jury, 22 H.6.5. 13 H.4.19.

So if any such great person, when any Issue is to be tryed, having nothing to do in the cause, shall come to the Bar with the Plaintiff or Defendant, and standeth by only; this is an unlawful Maintenance; though the Jury respect him nor, but give their Verdict the right way, 22 H.6.6.

If A. do owe to B. Twenty pounds, and B. promise to C. part of this Debt to prosecute and maintain the Suit; this is unlawful Maintenance; but this is more properly to be called and accounted Champerty, 15 H.7.2.

By a Juror.

If one of the Jurors in an Inquest will give or promise money to another of his Fellows, to give or say his Verdict for Plaintiff or Defendant; this is Maintenance, though it be according to the truth of the cause: But if one of them do persuade his Companion to pass for one side or other, as he conceiveth the truth of the cause to be, and as the Evidence doth induce; this is no Maintenance, 17 Ed.4.5. 18 Ed.4.4.

If a Juror take money to say his Verdict for the one side, See for this 34 Ed.3.8. 38 Ed.3.12.

If two be in suit and do join issue, and the Master of one of the parties to the suit, or any other deliver money of his own head to a stranger to labour the Jury to try the issue, to give Verdict for his servant or friend; this is Maintenance in the Master or friend, though he never do or say any thing to the Jury; or though he do, and the Jury pass against him, Dyer 95. 28 H.6.7. 21 H.6.15.

If one give a Juror money to appear and say his Verdict of one side, this is Maintenance, though he do never appear, or do appear and not serve, 22 H.6.6. Dyer 95.

By a Witness.

If one do threaten to beat or kill a Juror, if he do not give his Verdict on the one side; this is Maintenance, though he give his Verdict on the other side, Stat. 22 H.6.6.

If one come to a Juror of his own head, and offer to instruct him of the matter in question, this is Maintenance: But if the Juror come to the party and desire him to instruct him, contra. 22 H.6.6.

By another person.

If one will come when a Cause is in hearing, and offer himself of his own head to give Evidence for the one part or the other; this is Maintenance. But if he be sent for and required by the Court, contra. Quare of this: For I have heard Chief Justice Bridgman of Marches say, It was no fault to offer ones Evidence, Stat. 28 H.6.6.

If any person after a Suit is begun, shall encourage either of the parties, or yield either of them aid or help, as give them money, retain Counsel, or the like, unless it be in the cases hereafter following: All these, and such like Acts as these, are unlawful Maintenance and punishable. Vide plus infra. 22 H.6.6.

It may be Maintenance in a man to take parties, though he be to have no part of the thing in question, Co. sup. Lit. 365.

If any man that is not a Lawyer, and have no interest in the cause in question, will take upon him to do the part of a Counsellor, as to open the Cause, or instruct the Jury, or the like; this is Maintenance. So if a man have Land in question, and he will shew his Writing to a Nobleman or other that is no Lawyer, and he tell him his cause and title to the Land is good; this is Maintenance, 22 H.6.6. Fitz. Main. 11.

If a Solicitor retain an Attorney for his Master, and promise him payment of his Fees; this is no Maintenance, per two Justices in Hil. 16 Jac. Upper Bench. For in doubtful things, the best shall be taken: See Gramp Jurisd. 97.2.

3. What not, but is a Maintenance justifiable.

By a Lawyer or Attorney.

If any Sergeant or other Counsellor being retained for his Fee, do give his Client the best Counsel he can for defence or recovery of his right according to the course of Law, or doth enforce the Evidence of his Client at the Bar; this is no Maintenance, but that which is lawful. But if he shall pay or promise money or reward to any of the the Jury to give his Verdict for his Client, or threaten any of them to be killed, beaten, or otherwise evil intreated if they do give their Verdict against his Client, or if he do spend or offer to spend his own money in his Clients cause, this is unlawful Maintenance, 6 Ed. 4. 5. 22 H. 6. 6. 11 H. 6. 13.

If one that is retained an Attorney in any Cause, do any lawful Act touching the Suit for the benefit of his Client, as retain Counsel, bring forth Process of Capias, of Execution, or Superfedeas, or the like, procure a Jury to be impanelled and returned by the Sheriff, give in Evidence to a Jury, or request any of the Jurors to appear; this is a maintenance lawful. But if an Attorney shall give or promise money or reward of his own or of his Clients, to give his Verdict for his Client, or threaten him if he do otherwise, or defend or offer to defend his Clients cause at his own charge, or procure the Sheriff to return a Jury of his naming; every of these acts is an unlawful maintenance, Kelw. f. 15. 13 H. 4. 19. 36 H. 6. 37. 11 H. 6. 10.

If a Sheriff or Bailiff shall impanel and summon a Jury, this is no maintenance in him, but that which is justifiable: But if he shall give money or reward to a Jury, or do any such unlawful act as before, this is maintenance in him, 22 H. 6. 24. 13 H. 4. 19. By a Sheriff.

If one be like to be arrested upon a Writ, come to his Neighbour and pray him to advise him what to do, and he advise him to yield his body to the Justices, and to have a Superfedeas; this is a lawful maintenance, St. 22 H. 6. 35. 12 Ed. 4. 14. 19 Ed. 4. 3. By a Neighbour.

So if one tell his Neighbour, another doth owe him money, and ask him what he shall do, and he advise him to sue him. So if one tell his Neighbour, he must have a Suit in such a matter, and ask him what Counsellor or Attorney he were best to have, and he tell him, or go with him, or speak for him to his Counsellor or Attorney, or stand by at the hearing of his Cause, if he be not a great man; all these things one Neighbour may do for another: But if he give money or other reward to the Counsellor or Attorney, or to the Sheriff or Bailiff to arrest a man, this is maintenance, 19 Ed. 4. 37.

It is no maintenance for Jurors that are compelled to come, to give a Verdict for one side or the other: But if such a Juror shall labour the Judge after Verdict to give Judgment, this is maintenance, 18 Ed. 4. 2. 28 H. 6. 6. By a Juror.

Every one that hath Interest into any thing whereof, or concerning which any Suit is, may take part or maintain in the same Suit: As if a Tenant for life, years, or Entail of Land be impleaded for the same, he in Reversion or Remainder may maintain the Suit at his own charge: But if one that is Grantee of a Reversion or Remainder will maintain before he hath Attornment of the Tenant, this may be maintenance, Br. mains. 58. 6 H. 5. 4. 2 Plow. 52. 9 H. 6. 64. 39 H. 6. 16. By one that hath interest.

If a man have one only Daughter, and he is seised of Land, and is impleaded for it; she, or her husband (if she be married) may maintain the suit, and justify it: But if she be dead without issue begotten by her husband before the Suit begun, or the Action brought for some other thing, as upon a Covenant, Account, or the like, and they maintain, this is unlawful, 14 H. 7. 2. 6 Ed. 4. 4. 19 Ed. 4. 3.

If one seised of Land in Fee, make a Lease thereof to another for life, and after grant to a stranger, That if the said Lessee for life do die during the Lessors life, that then the stranger shall enjoy the Land for twenty years; if the Lessee for life be impleaded, the Grantee may maintain him, 9 H. 6. 64.

If one that hath the Fee-simple of Rents grant it with Warranty, and after the Grantee be impleaded for it, the Grantor in this case may maintain it, 11 H. 6. 49.

If a man hath a Rent-charge in Fee out of Lands, and another man hath in custody a Box of Writings concerning the same Rents, and after he that hath the Rent doth grant it to a stranger and his heirs, and doth grant also, that if he can recover the Writings, the other shall have them; an Attornment is made to this Grant, and the Grantor doth bring a Detinue for the Box; the Grantee in this case may lawfully maintain, 9 H. 6. 64.

If the Tenant be impleaded, the Lord may maintain in respect of his Services, A.

If A. owe to B. Twenty pounds, and C. owe to A. Twenty pounds by Obligation, gation, and A. deliver to B. the Obligation from C. in satisfaction of the Twenty pounds; in this case B. may sue C. in the name of A. on this Obligation, and retain Attornies and Council, and so may A. also; for both of them have interest in this Debr. So if one be bound to pay J.S. Twenty pounds to the use of W.S. J.S. and W.S. may both meddle in the Suit, 10 H.6.47. 15 H.7.2. 34 H.6.30.

If one deliver a Writing to one to be kept, and a stranger bring a Detinue for it, he that delivered it may maintain, 39 H.6.20.

If one of a Parish be questioned for Burial in the Church-yard, the rest of the Parishioners may maintain the Suit, 18 Ed. 4.2.

If one be bound for another's appearance, he may go into the Court and see if the same be recorded; this is justifiable. But if he do more, as retain Council or the like, this is unlawful maintenance, 18 Ed. 4.12. See more, 24 H.6.25. 14 H.6.6. See more, Bro. Chose Exult. 13. Fike Maint. 14. Bro. Maint. in toto.

By a Master.

If a mans servant be sued, and his master request a Lawyer to be of Council with his servant in the suit, or go with his servant to Council, or pay the Counsellors Fee with part of the wages of his servant, or go with his servant to the Bar when his cause is to be tryed; or if the servant be arrested in a privileged place, and he at his own charges deliver him, this is a lawful maintenance in respect of his service. But if the servant be impleaded in any real Action, or otherwise where he may appear by Attorney, and his presence is not requisite; there if the master do any such act, it is a maintenance punishable. So if the master give him money to go to Law out of his own purse, per Just. Haughton, Hil. 16 Jac. B.R. Or lay out any money for him, unless it be one of his wages due to him. And this was the opinion of Justice Bridgman and of the whole Court, 8 Car. Trin. in the Marches of Wales. 23 H.6.33. 9 H.6.64. 28 H.6.12. 19 Ed. 4.3. 41 H.7.40.

By a Servant.

The Servant in any Suit commenced by or against his Master, may at the commandment of his Master travel in the furtherance thereof, retain Council with his Masters money, instruct the Council or the Jury when the cause is tryed, or the like. But this must be such a Servant as is hired for a year or more, and retained to do all his Masters services; and not one that is hired for a day or two, or hired to go a journey, or do some special service: For if such a Servant shall so maintain his Master, or his Master him, this will be an unlawful maintenance.

So if either of them shall give or promise money or other reward to any of the Jurors to give his Verdict, or do threaten any of them to be killed, maimed, beaten, dispossessed of their Farms or Goods, or give his own money to the Sheriff to get the party arrested, this is an unlawful maintenance, 19 H.6.31. 19 Ed. 4.30. 39 Ed. 4.31. 2 Ed. 4.4. 19 Ed. 4.31.

By a Kinsman.

The Father may maintain his Son and Heir; the Son, the Father or Mother; one Brother, or one Ally or neer Kinsman another, by going to the Bar with them and standing there to comfort them, or go with them to Council, or speak to one to be of Council with them in their cause: But such a one may not retain a Counsellor of himself, or give him money of his own, or give or promise money or other reward to a Juror to give his Verdict for him; for this is an unlawful maintenance. And he that will justify by reason of any such affinity through marriage, must shew that the party by whom the affinity was, is yet living, or some issue of the body of that party; for otherwise the maintenance of such a person is unlawful: But it seems one Kinsman may not aid another in any case but in a real Action, and there where he that doth maintain hath some possibility to have the Land it self, Stat. 9 Ed. 4.32. 34 H.7.2. 20 H.6.1. 34 H.6.26. 6 Ed. 4.5. 49 Ed. 4.2. Str. 6 Ed. 3. ch. 33.

By a Gossip.

If one that is a Gossip to another do maintain him, this is lawful; for this makes a kind of affinity, 6 Ed. 4.5.

Any one may go with an outlandish man that cannot speak English, to help to make his mind known, and so instruct his Council, this is a maintenance justifiable, 15 H.7.2. 34 H.6.16.

By any other.

Any one may give a poor man that is not able to defend his Suit, money of charity to help him; and this is justifiable, 94 H.6.64.

If any give to another money to begin and prosecute a Suit, this is not maintenance: for no maintenance can be unlawful till the Suit begun, unless it be in the cases following of Champerty. But if I give any man money to follow a Suit, and I do promise him what he layeth out more I will pay him; unless this be an Attorney, in such case this is unlawful. 3 H. 6. 55. 8 H. 5. 8. 10 Ed. 4. 19.

No maintenance in any Spiritual Court is such, for which the party grieved may have the Writ of Maintenance; but it must be in the Common-Law Courts. Tisdale against Resington, Mich. 39 & 40 Eliz. Co. B. & P. 37 Eliz. Constantly & Barns Case.

Champerty is, and Champertors be they that move Pleas and Suits, or cause to be moved either by their own procurement, or by others, and sue them at their proper costs, for to have part of the Land, or part of thing in question and variance. And this is a species of Maintenance, for every Champerty is Maintenance, Co. sup. lit. f. 368. Westm. 1. ch. 25. Westm. 2. 48. 28 Ed. 1. 71. 33 Ed. 1. 3 Ed. 1. 25. 13 Ed. 1. 48.

4. Champerty,
what.
Champertors.

And in this case, and for this offence, the party grieved may have either a Writ called a Writ of Champerty, or the Writ of Maintenance to relieve himself, or he may prosecute the offence upon the Statute mentioned infra. And this Writ may be brought against the Buyer alone, or against the Seller alone; and the party grieved may have this Action against the Champertors, though he do recover, and so lose nothing by the Champerty, 30 Ass. 5. 9 H. 6. 64. 7 Ed. 4. 15.

No Officers of the King by themselves or others shall maintain Pleas, Suits or matters hanging in the Kings Court, for Lands, Tenements, or other things, for to have part or profit thereof by Covenant made between them; and he that doth shall be punished at the Kings pleasure, 3 Ed. 1. 25.

No person whatsoever shall receive any Lands or Tenements, or any thing by Gift, Purchase, or otherwise in Fee, or to Farm, so long as the thing is in question, (nor for to obtain part of the thing in Plea) or for other reward shall maintain any matter that is in suit, nor upon any such covenant or agreement shall give up his right to another: And he that doth so, the taker shall lose as much lands and goods of his, as doth amount to the value of the part that he hath purchased for such maintenance; and he shall be three years imprisoned, and further punished at the Kings pleasure. See the Exposition of this infra. Westm. 2. ch. 48. Stat. 21 Ed. 1. ch. 11. 33 Ed. 1. 28.

By this Statute, as well he that selleth or demiseth his Land for life or years, or any part thereof during the time it is in suit, shall be punished, as he that purchaseth the same, Fitz. Champert. 5.

If any person shall unlawfully maintain or procure any unlawful maintenance in any Action in any of the Kings Courts where Title of Land may be tryed, or shall unlawfully retain, for maintenance of any Suit or Plea, any persons to embrace any Jurors or Freeholders, to suborn any Witnesses by letters, rewards, promises, or by any other sinister labour or means, to the end to maintain any matter or cause, or to disturb or let Justice, or to procure or occasion any manner of perjury by false Verdict or otherwise in any such Court, shall forfeit Ten pounds, Stat. 32 H. 8. 9. Westm. 2. 28.

Justices of Assises or of either Bench may hear and determine matters of Maintenance, Conspiracie, and Champertie; and that which they cannot end, they may adjourn to the Court where they are Justices, 4 Ed. 3. 11.

If any one by Covenant or Agreement, or Writing, doth bargain to have parcel of the Land, Debt, or other thing which is in Suit, if it be recovered, to aid and maintain the party to that Suit; this is Champerty, and punishable by the Statute before-mentioned. As if I have title to land or goods, and I agree with another that if he will maintain me in the Suit for the recovery thereof, that then he shall have a moiety or a part thereof to himself. So if one owe me Twenty pounds, and I offer to a stranger part of it to recover it for me, F. N. B. 171. 15 H. 7. 2. 8 Ed. 4. 13.

It seems that the Assignment of Statutes or Bonds for money, is Maintenance or Champerty: See Co. 10. 102. in marg.

5. What shall be said to be Champerty, or
not.

If a bargain or agreement be by word, to have part of the thing in suit, to this end to maintain the suit; this is Champerty, as well as if it were by writing, 7 E. 3. 9. Fitz. Champ. 6.

If one give his Land freely without consideration, if it be hanging the Suit, as well as where he selleth it for money or other consideration, 8 E. 4. 13. See Crompt. Jurisd. 66. a. 76. Fitz. Champ. 5. 30 Aff. p. 3.

If one bargain for Land before any Suit begun for it, and after a Suit begun the party make a Conveyance of the Land according to the bargain, pendente lite, yet this is no Champerty, Fitz. Champ. 15. Plow. 465.

If one make a Feoffment of Land to his own use, during the time that a Suit is depending against him for this Land; this is no Champerty, 8 E. 4. 13.

If one give Land to his Son in Frank-marriage, or for his life, during the time that a Suit is depending against him for the same Land; this is no Champerty within the Statute of 28 E. 1. For next Friends may maintain one another by that Statute, 6 E. 1. 33. Plow. 305. Fitz. Champ. 10.

If one make a Lease for life of Lands, and after the Tenant for life is impleaded, and hanging that Plea he doth surrender to him in Reversion, this is no Champerty, Fitz. Champ. 14.

If a Judgment be had for Land, and after the Recovery, the party that hath recovered sell the Land; this is no Champerty.

So if one that hath given him Counsel in the case, do take part of the Land recovered for his Fees. But if there were any Contract or Bargain made before the Recovery depending the Suit, then it may be Champerty, Stat. 13 H. 4. ch. 19. 47 E. 3. 9.

6. Embracers, what.

Embracers are such, as when a matter is in Trial between party and party, come with the party to the Bar (having received some reward so to do) and speak in the case, or privily labour the Jury, or stand there to survey and overlook them, thereby to put them in fear or dread of the matter, or the like. And if in this case he take money, it seems a Decies tantum may be brought against him, Stat. 38 E. 3. 12. See more, Crompt. Jur. f. 32. 38. 6. 39. 28 E. 1. 11. 10. 19 H. 7. 13. Term. 19. Co. on Lit. 369.

7. Who shall be said to be an Embracer, and what Embracery, or not.

He is accounted an Embracer, who will threaten the Jury, or any of them, if they do not give their Verdict by his direction: Or if one will instruct the Jury beforehand, Co. super Lit. 369.

Also he that is Procurer of a Jury to appear, who is commonly called a Leader of Inquests. And whether the Jury pass for him, or no, or give any Verdict, or no, it is not material, for he shall be punished notwithstanding, F. N. B. 171: Co. on Lit. 369.

If one take money to embrace, and do not embrace, this is no Embracery.

If the Counsellor for his Fee speak to the Jury, and inform his Clients Evidence unto them so much as he can openly upon the Trial of the Cause, this is no Embracery: But if he otherwise labour to the Jury to give their Verdict, and receive money to that end, this is Embracery, 41 E. 3. 9. 6 E. 4. 5.

8. The punishment of it.

The party that is attainted of this offence, shall pay ten times as much as he hath received; as a Juror shall do that hath taken money to give his Verdict: which by a Decies tantum in this case, as well as in the former, may be recovered against the party. See Decies tantum, & Stat. 34 E. 3. ch. 8. 38 E. 3. 12.

If a Juror take money to give his Verdict on one side or the other, he is to be punished as a Maintainer by a Decies tantum.

So if a Juror will take money on both sides, who is called an Ambudexter; such a one shall never be put in Juries or Inquests, but be sent to Prison, and punished further at the Kings pleasure; and he may be punished by a Decies tantum, 39 Aff. p. 19. But if a Juror take money after Verdict given for the party, where there was no Covenant before, this is out of all the Statute, but he may be fined for this, 5 E. 3. 10. 44 E. 3. 39. Fitz. Decies tant. 12.

If

If any person shall bargain, buy or sell, or by any means get any pretended Rights or Titles; or takes Promise, Grant, or Covenant to have any Right or Title of any person or persons in or to any Lands or Tenements, but where such persons which shall so bargain, &c. their Ancestors, or they by whom he or they claim the same, have been in the possession of the same, or of the Reversion or Remainder thereof, or taken the Rents or profits thereof by the space of a year before the same Bargain or Covenant, he shall lose the value of the Land so held or covenanted for; and the Buyer knowing thereof, shall lose as much also. See Crompt. Jur. f. 38. a. Co. on Lit. f. 214. 369.

9. Buying of pretended Titles.

But any man that is in lawful possession may get any pretended right or title, notwithstanding this Statute, 32 H. 8. 9.

For which note: Title or Right is either merely in pretence or supposition, and nothing in truth: Or when it is good Right and Title in truth, and made pretended by the act of the party; and both these are within the Statute. Also a Right is naked without possession, when the absolute Right cometh by Release, into wrongful possession, and no third person hath either Jus proprietatis or Jus possessionis. When he hath a good Right, and a wrongful Possession, vide supra. Co. on Lit. 369.

If one make a Lease for years for a Term of years to another of Land, according to this Statute; this is as well within the Statute, as if he had made an Estate in Fee simple, Fee-tail, or for Term of life: And for making such a Lease of a pretended Title or Right, the Lessor and Lessee shall forfeit the value of the Inheritance of the Land. See a Case more in Co. super Littleton, fol. 369. Dyer 374. 74. Plow. 87.

10. What shall be said a buying of a pretended Title, or not.

So if one have a pretended Title or Right to Copihold-land, and sell it, this is without the danger of this Statute. But if one make a Lease for years to another only to try a Title, this shall not be within this Statute, Co. 4. 26.

If A. be lawful owner of Land and in possession, and B. that hath no right thereunto, granteth to, or contracteth with another for the Land; though the Grant be void, yet the Grantor and Grantee be within the danger of the Statute, if A. in this case be disseised, A. hath a good right: yet if A. being out of possession granteth to or contracteth with another for the Land, they are both within the danger of the Statute. A fortiori of a Right in Action, unless it be to a great man, &c. Co. on Lit. 269.

He that hath a good Title at the time of his Bargain or Lease, is not within this Statute, though neither he nor his Ancestors have been in possession thereof, &c: according to the Statute, by the space of a year before. And therefore if a man do enter into Lands that be holden of him for an Alienation in Mortmain, or if he recover Lands by a Real Action, he may sell the same Land, or make a Lease of it within a year after the Entry or Recovery, without any danger of this Statute, Plow. 47. Dyer 74. Co. on Lit. 369.

So if one mortgage his Land for a long time on Condition, and after he redeem it, he may sell it, though he have not been in possession a year. For by pretended Rights is not meant good and clear Rights. But where one man is in possession, and another that is out of possession doth claim them or sue for them, doth bargain, sell, or make any agreement to part from the Land, or to make any assurance thereof after he shall recover the same; this is within the danger of the Statute, whether he hath a good Title, or not. As if a Disseisor die seised, and the Disseisee enter and disseise his Heir; though he hath an ancient Right, yet because he hath unlawful possession, if he sell or contract the Land before he hath been in possession a year, he is within the danger of the Statute. But if one be disseised, and the Disseisee release to him; now he may sell it presently, and need not stay the year.

But where he that hath a pretended Right, and none in truth, gets the possession wrongfully, and then sels; this is within the Statute. But if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee by a good Title, he in Remainder may get the pretended Right.

Of Merchant and Merchandises, Trading and Traffique.

Trading and Traffique.

One that sell out of a Market-Town or Corporation in the Country, may sell by Retail (but in Grofs) any Cloth, Haberdashers wares, Grocery wares, in any such Corporation or Market-Town, or the Suburbs or Liberties thereof, but in an open Fair there, under pain to forfeit the Wares sold or offered to be sold, and Six shillings eight pence, Stat. 1. a Ph. & M. 2.

There are many other Laws concerning Trading and Traffique, to this effect.

1. None may use Trades that they have not been trained up in.
2. They in their Trades, especially if they sell any thing that is to be eaten or drunk by men, must sell true, not false and sophisticated Commodities, nor use deceit.
3. They must sell (especially Provision) at reasonable prices; and for moderate gain.
4. Bakers, Brewers, and such like Tradesmen must keep the Assise.
5. They must buy and sell by just Weights and Measures.
6. Trading with some Countries is forbidden: See for these things my Justice of Peace Book. Co. 2 par. Inst. ch. 30. Acts, Aug. 2. 1650, and 3 Octob. 1650, and 6 Novemb. 1650.

Merchants and Merchandises.

There are four sorts of Merchants, Merchant-Adventurers, Merchants-Dormants, Merchants-Travailing, and Merchants-Residents.

What Merchant-Strangers may sell and buy in this Country, and how, and what Custom they shall pay, See Stat. 9 H. 3. 30. 9 Ed. 3. 1. 25 Ed. 3. 2. 2 R. 2. 1. 1 R. 2. 7. 19 R. 2. 1. 19 H. 7. 8. 5 Eliz. 7. 1 Jac. 25. 4 H. 4. 15. 17 Ed. 4. 1. 3 H. 7. 8. 1 Eliz. 11. Co. 2 par. Inst. 58.

surance, what.

Policy of Assurance, is a course taken by those which do adventure Ware or Merchandise by Sea; whereby they being loth to hazard their whole Adventure, do give to some other a certain rate or proportion, as Ten in the Hundred, or such like, to secure the safe arrival of the Ship, and so much Wares at the place agreed upon. So that if the Ship and Wares do miscarry, the Assurer maketh good to the Venturer so much as he promiseth to secure, as Twenty, Forty, a Hundred, more or less. And if the Ship do safely arrive, he gaineth that clearly which the Venturer doth compound to pay him. And for the more even dealing between the Venturer and the Securer in this case, there is a certain Clerk or Officer ordained to set down in writing the sum of their Agreement, that they may not differ thereupon afterwards; and this Writing is called a Charter-party. If any difference be about it, the King hath been used to grant a Commission to certain men to hear and end it.

CHAP. CIX.

Of Marriage.

Marriage.

Affiance or Sponsality.Contract of Marriage.Affiance Quotuplex, and the validity and fruits thereof.Sponson, Simple:
Conditional.

Contract legal.

Sect. 1.

Marriage is the copulation of a man and a woman together, by agreement to be man and wife, by an inseparable conjunction to live together all the days of their life. And the inception of this first is, when wedlock is promised and vowed by words in the Future-tense, which is called Affiance or Sponsality; which therefore is defined to be, Futurum nuptiarum conventio & repromissio: For, the full contract of Matrimony is, when it is made by words de presenti, in a lawful consent. And so two be made man and wife before God, without lying together, and that without consent of Parents or Tutors; which is not of necessity, though it be meet and convenient to be had. But Matrimony is not accounted consummate by our Law, until it be celebrated and solemnized in facie Ecclesie. Co. super Lit. 76. a. Braet. l. 4. f. 298. Glanv. lib. 1. cap. 1. Wo. Lawyer, 117.

This Sponson or first promising is also sometimes naked, (i.) when they do promise simply and barely by their word only each to other, to contract Matrimony hereafter: And sometimes confirmed, (i.) when there is an Oath made, or somewhat taken as an earnest or pledg between them on both parts, or on the one part, to be married hereafter. And it also is either publique, and that is either by the parties by themselves present together, or by Message and Letters when they be apart, and of and to which there be some privy and witnesses: Or else it is secret, Solum cum sola, to which none are privy but themselves; which being proved well, is of the same force with the former; save only that a Promise made after to another in publique, shall be preferred and prevail against it.

This is also sometimes simple, and sometimes it is conditional. If it be conditional, it suspendeth the Promise till the Condition be performed; unless by a new agreement the Condition were discharged. But if the Condition be against the right of Matrimony, it maketh the Promise void, as, To poison the child she first conceived, &c. But though otherwise dishonest or impossible, yet if it be not against the Law of Wedlock, it is good enough. But this Affiance, be it naked or confirmed, publique or private, is not of that force as to compel the parties to marry, but is an obligation only, or being bound in a sort to marry hereafter: For after such a Promise only, the parties may marry themselves to others; and yet it seems the party that doth break his or her Promise in this case, is subject to suit and some punishment in the Spiritual Court. But a legal Contract containeth more in it, and is compulsory: And yet neither Affiance nor Contract is of the force of Marriage; for by this only without Marriage, neither husband nor wife shall have any benefit by the others death, and till then they are several persons in Law, and may enfeof one another, Perkins.

Note, that in all these Promises the Law requireth not a curious form of words; for any words whereby their Agreement may appear, will be sufficient. Wo. Lawyer, f. 51.

All persons may lawfully marry, that be not prohibited by Gods Law to marry, that is, that be not prohibited by the Levitical degrees. All Clergy-men may marry as well as others, and their children shall be legitimate, and they themselves shall have all the privileges of Marriage that other men have. Stat. sect. 6 Ed. 6. c. 12. 32 H. 8. 38. & 2 & 3 Ed. 6. c. 21. See Co. 2 par. Inst. 683.

The six Clerks of the Chancery, and other Clerks there, may marry, notwithstanding the old custom to the contrary. Also all such as exercise any Ecclesiastical jurisdiction may be married, notwithstanding their office and employment, Stat. 14 & 15 H. 8. c. 8. 37 H. 8. c. 17.

In this conjunction many things are prohibited, and divers things required, 1. In the parties themselves. 2. In the making of their agreement, Cap. 434.

In

In the parties themselves, 1. That there be no Impediments natural, or accidental; that they be not either of them within age of consent, (A.) the man under fourteen, and the woman under twelve, for then may they after when they come to this age, avoid the marriage by their disagreement, without any divorce at all, and marry others. But by the Civil Law, it seems they are deemed able to consent when they are Puberes ripe, and fit for marriage, though they are not of this age.

2. That they be of a sound and whole minde to consent; and not Insens mentis, for he that is mad, without intermission of fury, cannot marry, but he that is deaf and dumb may Contract Matrimony.

3. The persons must not be in relation one to another, Infra gradum prohibitus (that is) in respect of Consanguinity, for marriage is forbidden betwixt those that are of Kinred Lineally, (i.) Parents and Children in infam. Also betwixt those that are Kinred in the transverse or Collateral line, until the fourth degree be past, or in respect of Affinity or Alliance, and this riseth between them that are married, and the Kinred of one of them, as betwixt the Husband and the Kinred of his Wife; but this prohibiteth marriage onely to the persons contracted, &c. for the Cousins or Consanguinity to my Wife, are Affinity onely to me, and not to my Brothers or Children by: a former Wife, and so converso my Blood, to my Wife. Hence it is, that Father and Son may marry the Mother and Daughter, and that two Brethren may marry two Sisters. And after the fourth degree be past, a man may marry any of his Affinity: And those that are not within the Levitical degrees, are not forbidden, (A) therefore a man may marry the Daughter of the Sister of his first Wife.

4. The persons should be of the same Religion, for by the Laws of the Church, Marriages are not good betwixt Jews and Christians.

5. The persons must be fit for generation, and therefore those that by coldness of nature or enchantment, are impotent, are forbidden to marry.

6. The persons must be also free, and not be engaged to any other, either of them by Precontract; secondly, in the making of the Contract.

1. It must be free; and therefore if both, or either of the parties be compelled by threatnings, imprisonment, or the like, or drawn by enchantment, &c. Fraud or flattery, or other such means against their wills to agree; this will make the marriage void.

2. It must be lawful; and therefore if it be corruptly made, as when one hath adulterously polluted a Woman, If he promise her to have her when his Wife dieth, &c. See more in the Womans Lawyer.

They were then by the Laws formerly to be married by a Minister before Witnesses, according to the Substance of the Common Prayer. See.

If any Marriage had been made where any such impediment is as aforesaid; either in the persons that make it, or the manner of making it, it was to be avoided again afterwards by Divorce at the Suit of the party grieved, by sentence in the Ecclesiastical Court; for to that Court, these matters did then belong, and the Ordinary was the onely Judge to judge, discuss, and determine this question and matter of Marriage. But it was not void, until by sentence of the Spiritual Judge, it was avoided; and therefore if that had not been in the life time of the parties, the issue was inheritable, and it could never be avoided after; for a Divorce cannot be after the death of either of the parties. But now the lawfulness and unlawfulness of Contracts and Marriages, and all Exceptions against them shall be heard, and ended by the Justices of the Peace, at their General Quarter Sessions by the new Statute, 24 Aug. 1653. Also in case of a Marriage by Force or Fraud, the Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal, may give Commission to men to hear and end it. See Womans Lawyer, 10 Jan. 1650. 14, 15 H. 8. 37 H. 8. 17. & 437. Co. super Lit. 79. a. b. Bro. rit. Gard. 124: Womans Lawyer 57, 58. 32 H. 8. 38. Levis. 18. (A) Trin. 3 fac: *Rich. But now by the new Act, the Law is altered herein, and Marriages are to be made up by the Justices of Peace, and not by the Ministers.

2. What persons may marry, who not. Impediment of Marriage is lawful, what not.

3. Things required to make a good Marriage.

For the knowledge of which Law, take these things.

1. The Man married must be sixteen years old, or more, and the Woman must be fourteen years old, or more.

2. The parties must freely consent, and neither party be brought to it, by Force or Fraud; and their Parents, Gardians, and Overseers also, if they have any, and they be under one and twenty years of age, either of them must consent to it.

3. They that are to marry, must one and twenty days before the marriage, deliver to the Register of each Parish, where the parties do dwell, the Christian names and surnames of the persons to be married, with the additions of the places where they dwell, and the names of their Parents, Gardians, or Overseers, if they have any.

4. This Marriage must be published by the Register in the Churches of both places, or by some other, by his appointment and procurement, three Lords days before, at the close of the Morning Exercises, or in the next Market Town, on three Market days together, in three weeks, one after another in the Market place, between eleven and two of the clock, and then certify to a Justice of Peace of the County where one of the parties dwelt: And if any Exception be against the Marriage, this must be certified also to the Justice.

5. This Publication being thus certified by the Register of the places to a Justice of Peace; and he being satisfied of this Publication, and Consent of Parties, and their Parents, and Gardians, as before; This Justice must marry them after the Form herein set down afterwards.

The Man taking the Woman by the Hand, must say these words.

J. A. B. Do here in the presence of God, the Searcher of all Hearts, take thee

C. D. for my wedded Wife; and do also in the presence of God, and before these Witnesses, promise to be unto thee a Faithful and Loving Husband.

Then the Woman taking him by the Hand, must say thus.

J. C. D. Do here in the presence of God, the Searcher of all Hearts, take thee

A. B. for my wedded Husband; and do also in the presence of God, and before these Witnesses, promise to be unto thee a Loving, Faithful, and Obedient Wife.

And this being done, the Justice is to declare them Man and Wife; and the Substance hereof is to be observed, or otherwise the Marriage is not good.

If either of the Parties be dumb, the words may be spared; if they have no Hands; the taking of hands may be spared.

This done, he must, if the Parties desire it, give a Certificate hereof in Parchment, under his Hand and Seal, of the Marriage, Witnesses, and all the Circumstances thereof to the Parties.

He is to see the Register to make an Entry in his Registers Book of the Publication, Consent of Parties, Parents, or Gardians, and Exceptions if any be in the case. Alt. 24 Aug. 1653.

The Marriage being thus consummate, they are then reputed Man and Wife.

Husband and Wife, are a Man and a Woman coupled together by Marriage, and then is this Woman so married, said to be a Feme-Covert, which is defined to be a Woman legally married to a Husband, and married she must be; for until she be married, although she be Espoused or Contracted, yet she is not reputed a Feme-Covert. But when she is married in Facie Ecclesie, then is she reputed a Feme-Covert, though her Husband never have any Carnal knowledg of her; and hence is the word Coverture for so long, as these persons do so continue married, so long there is a Coverture between them, and the Coverture is said to continue: And whatsoever is done during the continuance of this Marriage, is said to be done during the Coverture. See the Womans Lawyer.

This Marriage of two such persons doth knit them so fast, and make such a strait fellowship between them, as that they are said to be but Una persona, una caro & sanguis unus: And hence it is, That howsoever in the obliquity of Fines, Recoveries, and Uses, there is a way, yet a man cannot by down-right Livery or Bargain, Feoffment, Gift, or Lease, pass Lands to his Wife, during the Coverture, not nor make any Covenant or Obligation to her: And if one enter into a Covenant to make his Wife a Feoffment, it is impossible; and therefore void, yet one may binde himself in an Obligation or Covenant before or after Marriage to a stranger, to let his Wife have necessaries, or so much clothes, or to pay her so much money by the year to do it, and this is good.

2. The one of them cannot sue the other, neither can the Wife sue any stranger, unless her Husband be joyned with her.

3. The Wife as she doth participate of the name of her Husband (for she changeth her name into his.) So also she doth partake of the Nature and Condition of her Husband. Hence it is, That if he be an Earl, she is a Countess; he a Knight, she a Lady: If he were an Alien, and be made Denizen, the Wife shall be so also: If a Freeman marry a Bond-woman, she shall be free, during the Coverture: And if a Lord marry his Wife, she shall be free, during the Coverture, and è converso: If a Dutchesse or Countess that is not so by birth, marry with a Gentleman or Esquire, she loseth her name and dignity, and must follow the Condition of her second Husband, Uxor censetur dignitate mariti.

4. Hence it is also, that the wife cannot be produced as a witness for, or against her Husband (b) a Writ of Conspiracy will not lie against Husband and Wife. (c) If she deliver her Husbands Goods to a stranger, Trespass doth not lie against the stranger, but some other action. (d) If T. enfeoff W. and A. his Wife, and after it is by Parliament enacted, that all estates made by T. to W. shall be void, the Feoffment shall be void, as well to the Wife as to the Husband. (e) If one purchase Lands held à capite, to him and his wife, and his Heirs without Licence, and after have a pardon of all offences, Pro quacunque alienatione sibi facta, and do not speak of his wife, yet it is a good pardon (e) if a Feoffment.

5. If a Feoffment be made of Land to them two, and a third person, they two shall have but a moiety: If to them two, and two others, they shall have but a third part; and if it be made to them two after their marriage together, there shall be no moieties between them, therefore the Husband can neither grant nor forfeit any part of it. And if the Husband alien it, she may after his death recover the whole by a Cuius in vita. If a Villain and his wife purchase Land, the Lord enter, and the Villain die, she or her Heirs shall have it. So if the wife take and convey away her Husbands Goods, this is no Felony in him. So if the Husband joynt purchaser be an Alien born, or attain in a premunire, or for Felony: *Co. on Litt. 112. 187. Plow. 294. F.N.B. 78. 27 H. 8. 27. 4 H. 7. 4. Perk. sect. 763. 764. 39 H. 6. 45. But in other cases they are considered as divers persons in Law, and so one of them may do an act to another: As first, when they do it in aufer drais, or as in the person of another. As if a Feoffment be made to one of them, and a Letter of Attorny to the other to give Livery, this the one of them may do to the other. So if the wife be an Executrix, she may pay or deliver a Legacy to her husband: So if she have power to sell Land by Will, she may sell it to her husband. Perk. sect. 189. 11 H. 7. Co. super Littl. 187. If an estate be made to the husband and wife before marriage, and after they marry, they shall have moieties between them, and one hath not all as in the cases before (see more Cases for this Infra) Co. super Littl. f. 187. 355. b.

Though by no Conveyance at the Common Law, by plain Livery or Bargain, a man could during the Coverture either in Possession, Reversion, or Remainsder, limit an Estate to his Wife; yet by over Testament one might, and still may, either by Custom or Statute devise his Land to his wife in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for term of life or years; and one may now upon the Statute of the seven and twentieth of Henry the Eighth, limit a use upon a Feoffment to, or a Covenant with others to stand seized to uses, to the use of his wife: So that now in the obliquity of Fines, Recoveries, and Uses, there is an expedite way of transporting of Inheritance between them: As a Feoffment, Fine, or Recovery may be had and suffered to the use of the Wife of the Feoffor or Conusor, and her Heirs. Also a man may make a Feoffment to a stranger on condition to reinfesoff the Wife of the Feoffor, and this is good by the Common-Law, 4 H 7: Co. super Litt. fol. 112. Perk. fess. 763.

Also he may give her any of his Goods or Chattels by his Will, for that is not to take effect untill after his death. If an other man make a Feoffment to my Wife, and a letter of Attorney to me give her seisin, I may do it, and it will be good enough. Perk. fol. 41.

6. What acts the Wife may do to her husband, where not.

If Cry q. nfe had devised that his wife should sell his Land, and made her Executrix and died, and she took another Husband, in this case she might sell the Land to her Husband. 10. H. 7. 20. Co. super Litt. f. 112.

But if a Feme Covert be seized of Land in Fee-simple, she cannot devise it to her Husband, for she is sub potestate viri, and can do nothing in her own right without him, for the Law will presume it done by Coertion of her Husband. Co. super Litt. 112.

7. How acts done to the Feme covert al. one shall enure

A Feme Covert cannot take by grant from the Husband: but she may, and that without any precedent assent or agreement of the Husband, be capable of, and take Lands or goods by the gift or grant of others; and therefore all Feoffments, Leases, Obligations, &c. made to her are good, and this is good, untill the Husband disagree to it by word or deed, or both. And if he do neither agree nor disagree in his life time, then is it unavoydable by any from or under him: But if he disagree to it, he makes it all voyd; but after he hath once agreed, he cannot by disagreement avoid it. And if an estate be made to the Wife, and the Husband do agree to it, yet the Wife or her Heirs after his death, may disagree to it, and avoid it. *Vide agreement. 21. H. 7. 20. Br. 8. How acts done to the Husband and Wife shall enure.

If a reversion be granted to a man and a woman and their Heires, and before Attornment they two enter-marry, and then attornment is made. Or if a feoffment were made to them, and after they marry, and then livery of seisin is given to them, secundum formam Chartae; In both these cases they shall take entirely, and not by moyties. But if a Feoffment were made before the Statute to the use of a man and a woman and their heires, and they entermarry, and then the Statute is made; in this case they have moyties, and the Husband may alien a moytie during the Coverture. Fitz. Discent. 52. Co. 4. 68. Plow. 483. Co. super Litt. fol. 187.

If an Estate be made to a Villayn, and his Wife being free and to their Heires, and the Lord of the Villayn enter, yet if she survive her Husband, she shall have the whole. 40 Aff. p. 7. Co. super Litt. 187.

If one make a Lease to A. and to a Husband and Wife, viz. to A; for life, to the Husband in taylor, and the Wife for years, it seemes each of them hath a third part, in respect of the severality of the estates. Co. Idem.

If a Feoffment be made to a man and a woman sole, and their Heirs with warranty, and they intermarry, and after are impleaded, and vouch and recover in value; now of this land so recovered in value, there shall be no moyties between them, because they are not now capable of moyties. Plow. 485.

If I let land to a Feme sole for her life, and she taketh a Husband, and after I confirm the state of the Husband and Wife, to have and to hold for term of their two lives, in this case the Husband doth not hold joyntly with his Wife, but holdeth in right of his Wife, for the term of her life, and after for term of his own life by way of remainder, if he survive his Wife. And if it had been made of his Estate to him alone, to have and to hold the land to him and his Heirs, this had been good: And hereby he should have had the Fee-simple after the death of his wife. But if the Confirmation had been made to the Husband and Wife to have and to hold the Land to them two, and their Heires, they are Joynt-Tenants of the Fee-simple, and the Husband is seized in the right of his wife for her life, for they cannot take by Moyties during the Coverture, Co. super Litt. 299. Fitz. Release. 45.

If a Deed be made to the Husband and Wife of land, and after his death she do accept of the state, now she is bound to perform all the inherent Covenants as much as her Husband. See Covenants 45 Ed. 3. 11. Dier. 13.

If a man letteth land to the Husband and Wife, To have and to hold the one moytie moitie to the Husband for the term of his life, and the other moitie to the Wife for the term of her life, and the Lessor confirm the estate of them both in the Land Habendum to them, and to their Heirs: by this Confirmation, as to the moitie of the Husband it enureth only to the Husband and his heirs, for the wife had nothing in that. But as to the moitie of the Wife, they are Joint-tenants, for the husband hath such an Estate of the Wifes moitie as is capable of confirmation. Co. super Litt. 399. Fitz. Confirmation. 17.

And if one disseise me, and after I take a Wife, and then after the Tenant doth make Feoffment of this Land to me and my wife, this shall enure to me only, and my wife shall have no benefit by it. Dier. 10. a.

Sett. 4.

If Lands be given to a man and his wife, Habendum, the one moitie to the Husband, and the other moitie to the Wife, in this case they shall take severally, and be seised of Moities as tenants in Common, per Knightsly (See more to this, supra.)

Howsoever it be so, That whatsoever the Husband had before coverture either in Goods or Lands, is absolutely his own, and the wife hath neither seisin nor property therein; yet all that was the Wives, by inter-marriage is now made the Husbands, & non habet uxor potestatem nisi sed vir, & res licet sit propria uxoris, vir tamen ejus custas cum sit caput mulieris. But it is the Husbands, diverso modo. For as for all the Lands and Tenements whereof she hath any Estate in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life, these he is to have during both their lives together. And some of them sometimes after for his own life, by the courtesie of England. And also all the right and Titles of Entry that she hath into any Lands, are given to the Husband, so that he may enter or claim it as the woman might. Also all her Chattels real she hath in possession, and in her own right, as wardships of Tenants in Capite, and Knights service, estates by Statute-merchant, Statute-staple, leases for years, and the like, he shall have the use and occupation of and power by act executed, to give, grant, or sell, surrender or forfeit it during his life: And if he survive his wife, he shall have them absolutely and not conditionally only as he hath them before. Also all her Chattels personall, as Horses, Sheep, Near, Corn, Wool, Money, Plate, Jewels, even to her Chamber, Bracelets and Apparell more then needfull, which she hath in her own right, property and possession, are given, with the property thereof unto him by act of Law, by the intermarriage, so that he may sell, keep, or bequeath it if he dye; and if he do not bequeath them, they shall goe to his Executors, whether he survive his wife or no, and this is to be understood not only, of that she hath at the time of the marriage, but that which shall fall to her also at any time after the marriage during the Coverture.

Also all her Choses and causes of Action for any matter before, or after the marriage are his to take, sue for, or release, when they be due at any time, during both their lives together; but if he do not dispose it, it will come to his wife again after his death: And therefore if a Legacie be given to a woman sole, and she take a Husband, untill her Husband release or receive this, if she die she may devise or dispose it; and if he dye, it will return to her, and shall not goe to his Executors, except it be received by his appointment, for then the thing in action is become in possession.

All her wardships of Socage Tenure, Heirs, and Tuitions, he shall have during the Coverture only. Plow. 204. Dyer 251.

But there is this difference between a property of personall goods, and a bare possession only: For if personall goods be bayled to a Feme sole, or if she find them, or if they come to her hands, as Executrix to a Bayliff, and taketh a Husband, this bare possession is not given to the Husband, although the action of Detinue must be brought against the Husband and the wife, *39 Ed. 3. 17. All the Goods and Chattels also the Wife hath in anwer droit, as Executrix or Admini.

But none of her dignities are given to him; for though the Husband may be enriched; yet he cannot be ennobled by his Wife: and though a man may ennoble a Wife, yet a Wife cannot dignifie a Husband: But she may lose her own dignity by taking a Husband; As in the case of the Lady Anne Powes & Marie 1. *Quando mulier nobilis nupseris ignobili, desinet esse nobilis. After the death of the wife, the Husband shall have not only all the Chattels personal of his Wife which he shall have, whether he survive her or not; but also all the Chattels reall of his wife, which then he shall have absolutely to himself as his own other Chattels reall: And if they were joyntly possessed of any Chattels reall, as where a wardship or lease for years is made to them two, after her death her Husband shall have the whole. *Co. super Litt. 351. 46. Paraphernalia
what.

This word Parapherna is used in our Law: but in the civill Law, the thing is said to be Paraphernalia, which by the Civilians is said to be something which the wife hath to her selfe besides her Dowry which her Husband gave her, the which she must have and not the Executors of the Husband. And of which the Wife may make a Will without the assent of her Husband, as being a thing in the free disposition of the wife. And this both by the Civill and the Common Law is all the necessary furniture and apparell of a womans body provided her by her Husband which may extend to many Garments of the same kinde, and is not to be restrained to one garment only, which is, that is sufficient to cover the body, and yet not to be extended to that which is above her degree, and therefore Jewells and Chains of Gold and Silver shall not be esteemed Parapherna for a Husband-mans wife: but these may be Parapherna for the Wife of a Nobleman. But what shall be allowed for Parapherna is to be decided by the Judges, and they do use to give a greater allowance where are no debts of the Husband to pay then otherwise. And Omnia hac bona mulieris, are said to be Privilegiata & de paraphernis non debet maritus intramittere in visa uxoris, neither is he to devise them at his death. And as touching these, it is out of question; that if the Husband dye, the Wife, and not the Executor nor Administrator of the Husband shall have them. And that with the consent of her Husband she may make a Testament of them and devise them. But not otherwise, as it seems by our Law, because the property and possession is in him: And yet by the Civill Law she may devise them, and make an Executor of them without the Husbonds consent. 18. For if either the wife be sued alone, or they be both sued, and one of them dye, before Judgement obtained, the suit faileth. And therefore it is that upon an Indictment against the wife alone, for a trespass, Ryoe, or the like, if she be to pay fine, forfeiture, or be imprisoned, the Husband shall not be charged with it, unless it be appointed by speciall words in a Statute, but her body must suffer, and the Fine or forfeiture shall be levied of her, if she survive her Husband, for a Husband shall never be charged, for the act or default of his wife, but when he is made party to the action and Judgement is given against him and his wife; but if the suit be by information upon a Penal Law against Husband and wife, there he may be charged, Co. 11. 61. *F.  If a man made his Wife his Executrix, and devised that she should sell his Lands, and the woman took a second Husband, and then sold the Land to him, and this was resolved to be good: So if a Feoffment be made to a Feme Covert on condition that she shall reinfcoff, and she alone reinfcoff, this is good, and neither the Husband in his life, nor the wife after his death may avoid it. *Plow. 4. 14. 34 Ed. 3. If she be an Executrix or Administratrix, she alone may receive Debts due to, or pay Debts or Legacies due from the Testator, so it be done duly, and not in prejudice of her husband; and the residue she may give for Gods sake, maugre the death of her husband; but if she deliver any goods before Debts payd, her husband may have an action of Trespass against the taker. But Quere for Legacies, for M. 19 Jac. Ca. 2. Inter Wills & Goldborow, It was held that a Feme Covert cannot deliver or assent to a Legacy without her husband. Co. 5. 27. 2. H. 7. 15. 18. A Feme Covert may by the Licence precedent, or agreement subsequent of her husband make a will, and make him Executor also, if she will, And by this means the debt due to her, and damages for goods taken away, or other wrongs done, Dans filia suis, may be recovered by him: Also she may make either a stranger, or her husband, her Executor, as to all such duties as were due to her before marriage, which were due to her in Action and not in possession; As if when she were sole, she had made a Lease for her life rendring Rent, and the Rent is in arreare, and she marieth, or she being Executrix and had many debts owing her or otherwife. And if she make a will without his leave, and make J. S. her Executor, and her husband do by word agree to it afterwards, or after J. S. have proved the will, do deliver him the goods, she devised, this makes it a good will, Bro. Testament 10. 13. H. 7. 32. Womans Lawyer f. 134. Park. fol. 97.

A wife alone may contract for her own necessary wearing Apparell, and the husband must performe it, unless it be in case where he have before forbidden the seller to deal with her, or let her have any: Also if the wife buy unnecessary Apparell, and the husband do after agree to it, this will bind him. 11 H. 6. 38. Dyer 134. Trin. 14. Jac. Banes & William Child case.

If she alone buy any thing that comes to the use of the husband, though she had no special authority for it before, if the Husband after he do heare of it, do agree to it, this will bind him. And so it seems of any thing else, for she may give, sell or charge any other husbands goods or chattels by his consent; and if she have done it without, yet if he do afterwards agree to it, this makes the contract good, whether it be to his advantage or not; but his consent will not make a Feoffment made by her of her own Land good. Olden B. 62. Dyer. 234. Fitz. Deb. 130. 163. 11 H. 6. f. 38. 17 M. 8. 24.

If the wife doe use to sell the husbands goods, and he doth allow of it, and affirm it, her sale will be good, especially if it be such things as are fit for her to sell, as Butter, Cheese, Eggs or Calves, &c. she in such case may give licence to the buyer to fetch the Calf out of the lease, and this licence may be good, God. Aff. 1854. A Feme Covert may be a Dissenser without assent of her husband, and she shall be charged with damages in an Affise. Some hold that she alone may sue in the spirituall Court with defamation, and that the husband cannot release it, nor that any prohibition lyeth against her. Sarah Edwards case. 7. Jac. B. R.

Contracte

A Feme Covert may take an Assumption from any man, for her husband, she may take an Obligation or Feesiment in her own name, and it will be good, until he disagree to it: If the husband and the wife wage their law, &c. and have day given, and the wife do not appear at the day, he shall be condemned.

A Feme Covert alone can do nothing during the Coverture, with any her lands, goods or chattels, she hath in her own right without her husband, for that she is Sub potestate viri et omnia quae sunt uxoris, sunt ipsius viri, & res licet sit propria uxoris, vir tamen ejus custodit eam, sit caput mulieris, & non habet Uxor potestatem sui, sed viri; Therefore all Feesiments, Deed, Gifts, and Grants, by her alone, are void, although she say in the Deed she is sole, and not married, and although they be executed by livery of seisin, or attornment, And although the Husband know of it. Benet lib. 2. cap. 13. Co. super Litt. 112. 14 H. 4. 29. per chap. 41.

A Devise by her of her Land by Will is void. If a Feesiment be made to her, she shall take nothing until he agree to it, and a bare Verball agreement of the Husband will avoid it. And if the husband be vagrant, have not been in the Country a great while, and she know not whether he be dead or alive, and she Rectoring that she is sole, grant a rent charge out of her Land, yet this is void, and if the Grant enter and distrain for the Rent, the Husband may have an action of Trespas against him, Dyer 354 & 34. H. 8. cap. 5. 1 H. 7. 16. Perk. fo. 2.

She cannot give or sell his goods or chattels by contract or bargain without his authority generall or speciall precedent. And if she do, it is void, neither can she give them by Will, without his agreement: precedent or subsequent. Dyer 234.

If she enter into any Bond, Statute, or Recognizance alone without her husband, they are void and will not binde him, she alone cannot release any debt due to her, as Executor or otherwise. Co. 10. 43. Kelw. 10. 16. H. 7. 5. 1 H. 3. 12. 1 H. 7. 13. Co. 3. 27. Kelw. 12. 21.

If she buy or make any contract for goods, and to pay money, without his authority, this will not binde him, albeit the things bought do come to the use of his house, unless he doe afterwards agree to it. Dyer 234. 21 H. 7. 40. 11 H. 6. 38. F. N. B. 62.

If the contract for apparrel, more then is needfull, and that is superfluous, the husband shall not be charged with it, nor bound by it. 11 H. 6. 38.

If money be paid to me upon Bill, or Bond, or Rent on a lease, and it be paid to my wife, and she accept it, this will not prejudice me if I after disagree to it. But if I once agree, the payment is good. And until I do disagree, the Law doth conclude, I do agree and allow of it, and although it be a Rent that was hers before the marriage, yet it is all one. Adjudge Sir Paul Tracy's case in 19. Jaco. B. R.

She cannot sue, nor be sued, without him, nor plead any other Plea then he doth in a suit; unless it be in some speciall case where he is dead in Law. 33. H. 6. 31. 2 H. 7. 13. Eni in vita. 3. 1. H. 4.

She cannot be Executor without her husbands agreement, nor being so made, do any Act that might be a disavow of the goods without him. Co. 3. 27. 33 H. 6. 43.

She shall never be received to disavow the suit of the husband and her self. 39. Aff. See Infant, Abilitie.

The husband and wife may joyn together, and by Fine or common Recovery (where she is excluded) make a good assurance of any Land she hath any free-hold Estate in, and barr her of her Title and right of Dower or Jointure into her present husbands Land, and so by a recovery suffered by husband and wife, in Lands, she may pass her Land. But they cannot do it by Deed indented (no although after it be enrolled) Feesiment, nor the like, unless it be by speciall custome. And where she doth joyn with him to levie a fine or suffer a recovery; she is to be examined by him that taketh the Comfiance of the fine or the Recovery, Stat. 18. Ed. 1. But if they be both within age at the time of the levying of the Fine, they may at their full age avoid it by Writ of Error. *Worseys Case, B. R. 19. Eliz. Deff. & su. fo. 175. Co. 10. 43. If they two be seised of any estate of Inheritance in Fee-simple or Fee-taile, Jointly before the Coverture or after, or if the Husband be seised of any such estate in the right of his wife, they two may make Leases for three lives or twenty one yeares to binde their issues, or heirs by the 32 H. 8 cap. 8. and this may be without Fine or recovery by a Deed in the Country (See Leases) Co. 506. 6. 37. *Co super. But though her husband joyn with her, they cannot grant that which is not grantable. As if the wife have the wardship of an Infant and of his Lands, by reason of a Tenure in Socage, and she and her husband grant it, this is void. Plow. 293.

And though her husband joyn with her, or give his consent, yet she cannot devise her land by will. Dyer 344.

If the husband and wife both joyn in a Statute Recognizance, this will not bind the Wife nor her Land. Kelw. 10.

All acts done by a Feme sole, that be countermandable, done to the disadvantage of her husband, if they be not executed before the marriage, are countermanded by the marriage, whereof see Countermand. See Fines Numb. 6: 8. Grant Numb. 2. 3.

But such acts as are done by, or to her, that are or may be for her advantage, are not countermanded by the marriage: So also such acts as are not countermandable: As if the Conusance of a Fine be by her whiles she is sole, and she marry before the recording and finishing of it, yet the Fine may go on: So if a Feme sole deliver a Deed as in Ekrow to take effect as her Deed, after certain conditions performed, and before they be performed she marry, yet the conditions may be performed, and the Deed take effect according to the intent and agreement. Dyer 246.

If a Feme sole and another have a lease for yeares in Joynttenancy, and she take a husband, yet the Joynttenancy doth continue and is not determined.

If a lease at will be made to a Feme sole, and she take a husband, this lease is not determined. Plow 418: Kelw. 61. See Countermand

In some cases, & for some causes the husband and wife must joyn in the Suit: As if any wrong be done to the person, name, or lands of the Wife, before, or during the Coverture, or if the Suit be upon any Covenant on a lease made by the husband and Wife of the Wives Lands, where the Covenant is made to them both: or if the Suit be for any Inheritance, as Lands, Commons, Advowsons, or the like, that do belong to the Wife. 9. *Ed. 4. 52. Sec. 14.
19 Where and what actions ought to be sued jointly against the husband and wife, for a thing done by them during, or before the coverture.

In some cases where there is cause of action that doth concern a Feme Covert, the Suit must be brought against the husband and the Wife, for in no case can the Wife be sued in any action without the husband, and in some cases the husband cannot be sued without the Wife, as where the suit is for the recovery of any Land whereof the Wife hath any estate of freehold : So if one deliver goods to a Feme sole who doth after marry, the husband and Wife must be both sued. If the husband do commit Waste in the Land he hath in the right of his Wife, the suit must be against them both : So if a man have cause to have an action of the Case against a man that hath land in the right of his Wife, for not reparations, whereby his Land was drowned it must be against them both : So if a Lease be made to a husband and Wife for years, rendring Rent, Devinne for the Rent, or Wast must be brought against them both. 39 Ed. 5. 17. Co. 5. 11. 62. 5. 52. 1 H. 4. 31. 3 H. 4. 1.

If a Feme-covert finde goods, and convert them to her own use, it seems the action must be brought against them, and not against the husband onely, if she slander another, or beat him, or do any Trespas, or otherwise, to him or his, the Action must be conceived against them both. Dyer 355. 9 Ed. 4. 2. 4. M. 31. 32 Eliz. Co. 11. 61. b.

But in some cases the husband must be sued alone, as if they two make an Obligation, during the Coverture, he alone must be sued upon it. Co. super Littl.

If one be Guarden in Chivalry, in the right of his wife, and a woman have cause to demand Dower out of the Land, he must sue the husband onely; so if the Wardship were granted to the husband and wife; so if a Rent be granted out of the Land a man holds in the right of his wife, to another for his life, and it be arrear, and he dies; here the Action of Debt shall be brought against the husband alone. So if a wife be Guarden in Socage of the Lands of an Infant, and take a husband, for the time before the Marriage, they must be joyned, but for the time after the Marriage, will lie against him alone. Fitz. Debt. 180. Briss. Aff. 561. Briss. 847. 930.

But an Action of Trover and Conversion of the Trover of the wife, it seems may be brought against the husband and wife, or the husband alone, Drapers case, Mich. 1 Jac. B. R.

If one have a Ward in the right of his wife, and a woman have cause to bring her Writ of Dower, she must have it against the husband onely; but if a Writ of Wardship be brought to recover a Ward, it shall be brought against them both, because of Voucher. 46 Ed. 3. 20.

And where the Action is brought against the husband and wife, she must be named Wife in the Writ: But in no case may the wife be sued alone, while the husband is living, and known to be so, unless it be in some rare case, whereof the husband for some offence is banished, &c. 42 Ed. 3. 23.

It is a Writ lying where Lands are given by a woman to a man, on condition he shall take the woman to wife by a day, and before that day he doth disable himself, or at the day he doth not take her accordingly, then the Dower may have this Writ to recover the Land again. But this is now out of use. 1 H. 4. 2 H. 4. 7. 18 Ed. 4. 4. F. N. B. 105. Co. 2. 15.

It is a Writ that lieth where a man is seised of Lands in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for term of his life in the right of his wife, and doth alien the same, and dieth: Then the wife shall have this Writ to recover the Land so aliened. And if she die before it be recovered, her heir may have a sur cui in vita. Exp. Terms of the Law p. 85.

A Feme-covert may commit a Felony, and be principal or accessory, as another may, as if she kill a man, or steal goods, or receive stolen goods without her husbands privity; and if she do so, she must answer it her self, for her husband shall suffer no Corporal punishment for her: But if a Feme-covert steal any thing by the commandment of her husband, or together with her husband she shall be quit, for it is no Felony in her. Contr. if she hold a man while her husband kill him, and if she receive Goods of her husbands stealing, though she know it, she is not accessary, for she is not bound to discover her husband. 15 Ed. 4. 1. 29 Aff. pl. 40. Stamf. 1. 1. 101.

Any act that is high Treason in an other, shall be so in her; and for this offence she is to be burned: So also for Petri. Treason for the killing of her husband, Dym 332.

If a woman do commit any misdemeanor, as Ryot, Battery, &c. for which she may be indited, and Judgment thereupon must be against her alone, therein she must answer without her husband, and the Fine put upon her, shall not be levied upon her husbands goods in those cases, but her body must answer it, and the King must stay for his Fine until she be sole: But in cases where for any misdemeanor made by any Statute, it is otherwise provided. Capit. 61. b.

It is the separation of two married persons before coupled together, by sentence of a Judge, for it is impossible that after persons are lawfully married, they may by any agreement between themselves divide and separate themselves again. Nov. Titul. of Law, Womens Lawyer f. 64.

And this is sometimes, A vinculo matrimonii (i. e.) which doth dissolve and make nullity of the marriage from the beginning, and this is when the Divorce is by reason of some essential Impediment as Causa precontractus, causa metus, causa frigidiarum

23. Divorce

vel impotentia, causa affinitatis vel consanguinitatis, and this Divorce that is of this kinde, which is perpetual, makes such a nullity of the Marriage ab initio, that he may take any other wife, or she another husband, that all the children had between them, during this marriage, are reputed Bastards, the wife shall have no Dower, the husband shall not be Tenant by the Courtesie, they may sue one another. 31 H.8. 11.

38. Co. 7. 43. 9. 141. Dyer 147. Rrw. 164. Co. super Littl. 235.

The other kinde of Divorce is a mensa & toro; and this is when the Divorce is Causa adulterii, or Causa professionis, which is onely till reconciliation be had, and doth not dissolve the Marriage, nor produce any of the effects aforesaid, so in this case the wife may be endowed, and the children inherit, notwithstanding.

Causæ thereof.

The causes of Divorce, do sometimes precede, and sometimes succeed the Marriage; precede, as in all the causes before, where there is any such impediment; as if it be so that two be married, Infra annos nubiles, for this at their full age, they may be divorced: So if either of the said parties be, improbus mentis, at the time of, and always after the marriage. 47 Ed. 3. in suis: 39 Ed. 3. 32. 19 Aff. pl. 2.

Causa consanguinitatis & affinitatis.

If two be married that be within the degrees of Consanguinity or Affinity forbidden, this is cause of Divorce: As if a Woman do marry, her Grand-father, Father, Sons son, or Brother of the whole, or of the half Blood, her Father or her Mothers Brother, her Brother or Sisters Son, Brother or Sisters Children, or a Man married the Widow of his Grand-father, Father, Son, Sons Sons the Widow of his Brother or Brothers Son, or his Brothers Sons Son, nor with the Grand-mother, Mother, Daughter, Niece, Great Aunt, or Sister of his deceased Wife. English Lawyer, f. 71. 25 H. 8. 32. Womans Lawyer.

Causa professionis.

If one be a professed Infidel, and the other a professed Christian, it seems this is cause of Divorce.

Causa frigiditatis.

If either of the parties at the time of marriage be imabilis, unable and unfit for procreation, for this cause the parties may be divorced, and their after-marriage to others, good; but it seems it must be such as was at the time of the marriage, for if it happen after marriage, it is no cause. Co. 5. 98. Dyer 179. English Lawyer. Co. 6. 66.

Causa precontractus.

If one have Contracted marriage before with another, now this is sufficient cause of Divorce of a latter marriage, with another after this Precontract. See 32 H. 8. 38. 2, 3 Ed. 6. 3.

Causa metus.

So also if a marriage be made through fear, or upon any such corrupt terms as before, this is cause of Divorce.

Causa adulterii.

Some causes also do succeed the marriage, as when it is for Adultery or Fornication, which by the Canon, is Carnal and Spiritual, for they dissolve Matrimony, when one of the parties is converted to Christian Faith, and the other being an Infidel, will not live with him, out of the Cor. 7.

14. The effect and fruit thereof.

That which a Divorce doth work, and bring forth, may be seen by that which was said before, and by these cases following.

14. The effect and fruit thereof.

If a man marry with a Woman Precontracted, and hath issue by her, this issue in Law and Truth beareth the surname of his Father: But if after they be divorced for the Precontract, there the issue hath lost his surname, and becomes a Bastard. Co. 6. 66.

15. The effect.

If a Lease be made to a man and his wife, during the Coverture between them; now if a Divorce be made between them, for any cause that doth dissolve the Marriage; in this case the Lease is determined: But if the Divorce be Causa adulterii, this doth not determine the Lease. Co. super Littl. 235.

15. Where and what things the Wife shall have again after Divorce, and what acts of the Husband shall bind the Wife after the Divorce, and where and what not.

If Land be given to a man and his Wife, and to the heirs of their two bodies, and after they are divorced, Causa precontractus, hereby their Estate of Inheritance is turned into a Joint Estate for life. Co. super Littl. 235.

If the Husband, during the Coverture, make any Discontinuance of his wifes Land, or any ways charge it by granting of Rents, Commons, &c. out of it, or entering into any Statute, or the like, and after, they be divorced, in this case she shall avoid all these Discontinuances and Charges: And to avoid the Alienations, the Writ of Cul. ante Divorcium is given her, it is to recover the Lands he held in her right.

right alone, or joyntly with him, which he aliened during the Coverture; or she may enter by the Statute of 32 H. 8. But such things as are executed, as Gifts and Sales of her Goods, Waste, Seisage of Wards, Receipts of Rents, and Presentments to Benefices, and the like, that were done during the Coverture, shall stand, and cannot be avoided. Broo. Arraignment 18. Co. 8. 75.

If Lands be given to her Husband, and her in Frank-marriage; with her marriage, and after they be divorced, now the wife shall have all the Land; and if the Husband keep it from her, she may sue him. So if Goods were given unto her, with the marriage of her Husband, and after they are divorced, she shall have all the Goods that are left, and not (bona fide) sold or spent, to her self, and may have a Detinue for to recover them, or she may sue in the Spiritual Court for them. 19 Aff. pl. 2. Dyer 13. Old N. B. 139. 6 H. 8. 7.

If the Husband during the Coverture, release a Legacy due to his Wife, and after they are divorced, it is said the Release is not good to binde the wife; but quere of this case, for I think the contrary to be Law. Torty and Stephens, B. R. 44 Eliz.

If one that is bound to a Woman by Obligation marry her, and after they be divorced, it seems her action that was suspended, is now revived. See 11 H. 7. 4. Dyer 140.

If Lands be given to the Husband and Wife, so as now they have no Moyeties, yet if they be after divorced, there shall be Moyeties again between them: And if they be Donees in Tail, and after divorced; now they have but Frank-tenant. *Bro. Of Marque, Masons, Malt, Malsters, and Marshes.

Arque, and Letters of-Marque, are authority given by the Supreme Magistrate to some persons, to right themselves upon strangers without the Limits, and reach of our Laws, by the taking of their Goods, to make amends for some wrong done by them to some of ours; for which they are destitute of Remedy in another Country. And it is so called, because the griefs whereupon these Letters are sought and granted, are commonly given about the Bounds and Limits of every Country, or because the Remedy there is most likely to be had by some sudden inrode, and hapning of such Recompence of the Injury received, as may most conveniently be lighted upon. 15 H. 6. 8. 4 H. 5. 7. Aff. 25 June, 1649.

CHAP. CXI.

Of Master and Servant, Meason or Dwelling-house.

Señ. 1.
 1. Master and Servant.

2. The kinds of Servant.

Retainer.

What Acts of the Servant shall binde the Master, or not, in matter of Contract.

After and Servant are Relatives; and a Servant in the Intendment of our Law, seems to be such a one, as by Agreement and Retainer, oweth duty and service to another; which therefore is called his Master. And amongst Servants some are ordinary, menial, and familiar, (i.) Such, as always and constantly in House, or attending on their Masters business: And these are called Menial and Familiar Servants; and these are either for a less time, As such as are hired by the year, or half a quarter of the year, or such as are for a longer time: As Apprentices which are for seven or eight, or more years. And others are extraordinary, and upon occasion onely, as Retainers, who are not dwelling with him, but bear the Masters name and Livery, Laborers, and the like; also some Servants are Universal and General. (i.) Such as are to look to all their Masters business, and to serve him in all his lawful commands, and others are special and particular. (i.) Such as are to look to some things onely, and to serve him in some special matters onely, as Bailiffs, Parkers, Stewards, Butlers, Receivers, and the like; and in all these cases the general Rule of Law is: That, according as the Agreement and Retainer is, so the Servant must do his work, and so the Master must pay his wages; and if either of them fail, they may have Reciprocal Remedy one against another. See Statutes of Laborers and Debt. 3 Eliz. 4. 26 R. 2. 4.

The Contract of the Servant in buying, will binde the Master, and make him chargeable to an Action of Debt, for the thing bought, in either of these cases.

1. Where the Servant is a known and common Bailiff to his Master, and is used to buy for him, and he doth mention his Master in the bargain, and doth buy for him, though the Master never have the thing bought.

2. Where the Master did give him a precedent authority so to do, and he do mention his Masters name in the bargain, and do buy for him, though the Master never have the thing bought, nor notice of the bargain; and any friend may be a Servant in these cases.

3. Where the thing bought, doth come to his Masters use, and he doth assent to it.

4. When he doth afterwards assent to it, though the thing bought do not come to his use; for a subsequent assent is equivalent to a precedent authority. And in these cases the Seller may have an Action of Debt against the Master: And if the Servant himself do make any special promise to pay the money, the Buyer may upon this have his Action of the Case against the Servant also. And it is held by the better opinion, That these Contracts are good, although the Servant in his Contract, do never mention the name of his Master. But generally in all other Cases, the Contract of the Servant as to the Master, is void, and will not binde him. Fitz. 302. 27 Aff. p. 15. 11 H. 6. 20. Plow. 11. F.N.B. 62. D. & Sh. 37. Dyer 234. 2 R. 2. 65. 21 H. 7. 40.

So in selling the Masters Goods or Chattels, the Contract of the Servant will binde the Master, and alter the property of the thing sold; in either of these cases,

1. When the Servant hath any precedent authority, general or special to sell it; and there it will binde the Master, though the money be not paid to the Master, or come not to his use; and though he have no notice thereof.

2. So if he have no such express charge and authority, if he be a common and known Bailly, and use to sell for his Master.

Or 3. If the Master agree to the sale and bargain after it is made, and in this case the Master may have an Action of Debt in his own name against the Buyer. Broo. Debt. Contract. 24.

If the Servant that is such a known Bailly, or hath such an Authority, Pledge, or Exchange any of his Masters Cattle for Corn, or the like, and the Corn come to his Masters use, the Master is bound by this. As a Contract made to a Wife, is good when the Husband doth agree to it, so it is of a Contract to a Servant, and it shall be said to be made to the Husband, and Master himself. In all the cases of buying by a Servant, if he promise to pay the money by a day, the Seller may have an Action upon the case, upon that promise, as well as an Action of Debt against his Master upon the Contract. See Contract.

If I be a Merchant, and have a Factor that doth use to buy one kind of Stuff for me, as Tissue, or the like, and no other; if he buy Sapp, or other Commodities for me, and assume to pay it, I may be sued upon this Contract of my Factor. Goldb. 139. pl. 46.

If one bid another deliver his Servant what he doth call for, and he will pay him, here the Master shall be chargeable for how much soever the Servant doth fetch, Co. 8. 146.

If one send his Servant to Market or Fair to buy Cattle, or other things for him, and doth not tell him of whom he shall buy it, now of whomsoever he shall buy it, the Master shall be chargeable: But perhaps, if he had bid him buy of one man, and the Servant buy of another, the Master should not have been chargeable. Doff. & St. 137.

If such a Servant as is used to buy and sell, sell his Masters Horse, or exchange his Ox for Wheat that cometh to his Masters use; this is good, and the Master may not have an Action of Trespas for it; and he shall be charged for the Corn, and the other need not shew that he had authority from his Master, Noy 110.

If one make a man his general Receiver, and he receiveth money of a Debtor of his Masters, and maketh him an Acquittance, and payeth not the money to his Master, yet this payment shall binde the Master, and discharge the Debtor; but if he make an Acquittance to him, and he pay not the money, this will not binde the Master. And yet if a man make another his general Receiver by writing, and give him power also thereby to make Acquittances, and he make an Acquittance to one of whom he receives not money; this will binde the Master, and discharge the Debtor. Doff. & St. 138. Noy 111. If one ow me money, and I send my Servant for it, and he pay it to him; this will bar me to demand it again, and discharge him of it, D. & St. 138.

If a Lord of whom Land is held, be desirous of a Seignior, and the Bailiff pay the Rent to the Heir of the Lord, without any special Commandment; this doth give the Heir Seisin of the service. Doff. & Stud. 138.

If my Servant that is no common Bailiff, will buy other mens Goods for me, or sell my Goods from me, without any authority from me so to do; this will not binde nor charge me, so as he may bring an Action against me for the Goods that are bought, or that I may not take again my Goods that are sold. Doff. & Stud. 137.

If such a Servant buy any thing for me, especially if it be things unnecessary, and these things come to the use of my House, yet I shall not be bound by, nor charged for this, unless I agree to the bargain after that it is made, and had notice of it, 11 H. 6. 20. D. & St. 137.

If a Servant that hath authority to sell his Masters Goods, do sell and warrant the Goods sold; this Warranty will not binde the Master, though the sale will. 11 Ed. 4. 7.

If a Taverners or Mercers Servant, or a Pashen, Bailiff, or Shepherd, that have the custody and power of their Masters Goods, and perhaps authority for to sell them, do give give away any of them, it seems this gift is void, and doth not binde the Master, but that he may bring an Action of Trespas against him, that shall meddle with them, under colour of such a gift. Noy 110. 21 Ed. 4. 31 Bro. Domer 36.

If one make one his general Receiver, and he by agreement betwixt the Debtor and him, take and accept a Horse, or other thing, in recompence of his Debt; this will not binde the Master, nor discharge the Debtor; and yet if in this case, the Receiver had authority from his Master, to make such a Comutation, or the Master do afterwards assent to it, by this the Master may be bound. Doll. & Stud. 138.

If my Servant go to a man that doth owe me money, and tell him, or shew him a counterfeit Letter, that I sent him to receive it, and my Debtor pay him the money, this will not bar me of my money, nor discharge him of the debt; but if the money come to my use after, and I assent unto it, contra Doll. & Stud. 138.

If there be Lord Mesn, and Tenant, and the Tenant holdeth of the Mesn, as of his Manor, and the Mesn maketh a Bailiff, and after the Tenant maketh a Feoffment, and the Feoffee tendereth notice to the Bailiff, and he accepteth and receiveth the Rent with the arrearages; this notice and acceptance will not binde the Lord, nor compell him to sue his Avowry. Doll. & Stud. 138.

In matter of Consent.

If one make a Bailiff of his Manor, and the Lord of another Manor, of whom the Manor is held, grant the Seignory to another, and the Bailiff doth after pay the Rent to the Grantee; this shall not binde the Lord, nor amount to an Attornment for the Grantee. Doll. & Stud. 138.

If the Bailiff pay more Rent then he should, and the Lord inroach by this means; this shall not binde the Master, unless the Master did give commandment to pay more Rent then was due. Doll. & Stud. 130.

Sec. 3.
Where the Master shall be charged for the Act or Offence of his Servant or Deputy, or not;
and how.

If the Servant keep his Masters fire so negligently, that the Masters house, and his Neighbors also is burnt thereby, the Master shall be charged, and answer for this negligence of his Servant; but if this negligence were abroad, out of his Masters house, contra Doll. & Stud. 137. H. 4. 19. F.N.B. 34 22 H. 6. 24.

If a common Hostlers servante rob a guest that lodgeth in the house, the Master shall be chargeable, and answer for this Felony in an Action of the Case. But if another man, no common Inn-keeper or Hostler do so, it is otherwise. See Action of the Case.

If a Servant of a Gaoler that hath a prisoner in execution for debt, suffer him to escape; the Master shall be chargeable in an Action of Debt. And if he have a Felon in his custody, and the Servant suffer a voluntary escape of him, the Master shall be fined for this, but it shall not be Felony in him, as it shall be in the Servant. Doll. & Stud. 137. Co. 9. 98.

Officers, Deputties.

If any Officers do make and appoint any Deputies in their Offices, they shall answer, and be charged for the offence of their Deputies; and their acts will be as penal to them, as if they were done by themselves: As High-Sheriffs must answer for their Under-Sheriffs, Under-Sheriffs for their Bailiffs, Gaolers for their Deputies, and so all others. Broo. Forfeiture 27. Co. 9. 98. 48. Dyer 238. Co. 4. 33. 5. 89. Br. Off. 24. But if one have an Office grantable over to an Assignee, and he assign it; in this case the Assignor shall not be charged, or prejudiced by any thing the Assignee doth. Dyer 261. 10 H. 7. 23. 18 H. 8. 5.

If a Servant, or one of a mans Family do lay or cast any thing into the High-way, that is a Nuisance, it seems the Master may be punished for it. Noy 110. So if a mans Cattle do against his will, hurt another, he must answer for them, for he must govern them. Idem. But if a Servant borrow or receive money in his Masters name, and for him, without any authority from his Master, the Master shall not answer this, nor be charged for it, though it come to his use, unless he do after agree unto it. Doll. & Stud. 137. Noy 109.

If one send his Servant with deceitful Wares to a Market or Fair, and command his Servant to sell them, but doth not say to whom; it seems no Action of the Case will lie against the Master for this; but if he bid him sell them to one man in particular, and he do so; therefor the Goods sold, the Master shall be charged in an Action of the Case, 11 Ed. 4. 6.

If my Servant drive my Cattle into another mans ground against my will, and they do Trespass there; it seems I shall not answer for this Trespass: So if my Servant set on my Dog, against my will, and kill another mans Cattle; or if he do any other Trespass by beating a man entry into his Land, taking away his Goods, or otherwise, or commit any Felony, I shall not be charged, nor answer for it, unless I be accessory thereunto. Doff & St. 137. 11 Ed. 4. 7. 9 H. 6. 53. 6 H. 6. 39. 13 H. 7. 19.

If the Servant ride his Masters horse into a Town where they have power to attach Goods upon a Plaint of Debt; and the Goods are attached as the Goods of the Servant, and forfeit for his default of Appearance, the Master shall not be prejudiced by this; but he may take his horse again, or bring an Action of Trespass for him. So if the Master send his Servant for to distrain another mans Cattle, and the Servant after he hath distrained doth kill, or otherwise abuse the Distress, the Master shall not answer, nor be charged for this. 21 H. 7. 27. D. & St. 138. No. 111.

For the Murder, Felony, Battery, or Trespass of his Servant, the Master shall not be charged. No. 109. But if I command my Servant to do a Trespass, or agree to it, I am a Trespasser also.

No act or default of the Master, to which the Servant is no way accessory or privy, shall binde or be prejudicial to the Servant, unless the Servant be accessory or assenting thereunto: as the Felonies of the Master, and the like. So if the Servant distrain Cattle, at his Masters commandment, and after the Master doth kill, or abuse the Distress; or a Bailiff of a Sheriff arrest a man by the Sheriffs Warrant, and after the Sheriff do not return the Writ. 20 H. 7. 13, 22, 23.

For Apprentices, these things are to be known.

1. That in some cases men may not take Apprentices, or but such a number, and such kinde of Apprentices. 2. A man may not exercise some Trades, till he have served seven years as an Apprentice in the Trade. 3. The differences between Masters and their Apprentices, are to be ended by the Justices of the Peace. 4. A Master cannot send his Apprentice beyond Sea, unless his Calling, to which he is Apprentice, require it. 5. In some cases Men and Women may be bound Apprentices against their will. 6. Apprentices cannot be turned over from one to another, but by Custom, as in London. But for all these, and some other things concerning them. See 5 Eliz. 4. 43 Eliz. 2. 1 Jac. 25. Co. 11. 54. *March. For Artificers, Laborers, and Servants, these things are further to be known.

1. In some cases, and in some works, Laborers, and them that are fit to labor, may be compelled to work. 2. None may beidle that have able bodies, and nothing to live by but their work. 3. In some cases men may not take Journeymen, or not so many, or not such men. 4. Servants and Laborers must take the wages assailed by the Justices, and may not take more. 5. Masters must give to their Apprentices, Laborers, and Servants, what is meet for Diet, Cloths, and Wages, and may not abuse them. And Apprentices, Laborers, and Servants, must do their duty to their Masters. 6. If any miscarriage be of either side, the Justices of the Peace may punish it. The Dwelling-house hath many privileges granted to it by Law: As first, Peace in a Writ, if it be demanded amongst other things. Secondly, It cannot be broken to make an Arrest at the Sure of a common person, but at the Sure of the King, as to arrest the owner, or another man in it, for Felony, or on a Capias writ. Mines.

For Mines, these things are to be known. First, That all Mines in any mans ground of Gold and Silver Oar, or where the Major part is Gold and Silver, are the Lord Protectors, and not the owners of the Soyl, whether they be new Mines or old. Secondly, All the Mines and Quarries of Cole, Stone, Brick, Iron, Gravel, Lime, Clay, and the like, when a Tenant for life or years, comes first to the Land are his, and he may dig on. But such a Lessee for life or years, cannot open and dig new Mines or Quarries, without special words in his Lease to warrant it. See more of these things in Waste, Trespass, Estate for years.

Monopoly, what.

A Monopoly is where the power of selling any thing, is in some one man alone; or where one doth ingross or get into his hands, such a Merchandise as none can sell them, or gain by them, but himself. And to this there are three inseparable Incidents against the publick good: First, The price of the Commodity is raised. Secondly, The Commodity is made worse. Thirdly, It tendeth to impoverish many poor Artificers and Tradesmen. And therefore the Law doth utterly distaste it. See for this 21 Jac. 3. Co. 1. 86, 87. and Co. 3 part. Instr. chap. 85.

Monopolists, Propounders, and Projectors.

All such as get such Allowance from the King, by Grant, or otherwise for the sole buying, working, or making, or using of any thing, whereby any person or body Corporate or Politick, are sought to be restrained of any Freedom or Liberty they had before, and hindered in their lawful Trade are called Monopolists, &c.

CHAP. CXIII.

Of a Mortgage, Mortmain, and Mortuary.

Mortgage or Pledge, what.

The kinds.
The nature of Mortgaged Land and Goods.

Mortgage doth signifie in our Law, a pawn of Lands or Tenements, Goods, or Cattles, laid, or bound for Money borrowed, peremptorily to be to the Creditors for ever, if the money be not paid at the day agreed upon. Of Lands thus: As if one make a Feoffment in Fee, Gift in Tail, Lease for life, or years to another (for money borrowed) on Condition, That if he repay him his money by such a day, that then he shall have his Land again. And this bindes the Land so, till that time, that neither of them can do any thing with the Land.

Land: But both of them together, may sell or charge it; and after the day past, and money not paid, the Mortgagee cannot well sell it, for the Land (especially if it be of much more value than the money) will be recovered in Chancery, upon payment of the money, Interest, and Damage: For which see my First part of the Marrow of the Law, f. 628. But for this see Condition at large in my Book of Common Assurances, chap. 6.

A Pledg of Goods is, where one doth deliver Goods to another man in assurance of another thing had from him at the same time: And this is either in Deed, where one doth actually deliver Jewel, Plate, or other Goods, to one for twenty pounds lent him; and if he do not pay the money at a day agreed upon, That he to whom they are delivered, shall have them; and if he do pay the money, that then he shall have the things pledged again. In this case if the Deliverer do pay his money at the day, he shall have his Goods again, or an Action of Detinue for them, if he refuse to deliver them: And if he do not pay the money at the day, the other may keep the Goods pledged, for ever; and yet the Quality and Condition of the Interests of these Parties doth stand thus. The Party that doth pledg them, till the time they be forfeit to the Party that hath them in pawn, according to their Agreement, hath a general Property in the things pledged: So as if they be casually lost, he must abide the loss of them; and they cannot be forfeit by the Party that hath them in pawn, nor can they be taken in Execution, or attached for his Debt: And yet the party that hath the Pledg, hath such a Special Property in it, That if the thing pawned be a Horse, Ox, or the like, he may work it, if a Cow milk it: And if it be any other thing, as Apparel, or the like, that will not grow much worse by usage, he may use it as the first owner thereof might have done: But if he shall abuse it, the party pawning it, may have an Action against him for this Abuse. And he that hath this Pledg, may assign over his Interest to another; and this Assignee shall hold it upon the same Terms the party to whom it was pledged, held it. And if the Goods be taken away from him that hath them in pawn, he may have an Action of Trespass against the Taker, and say, Quare bona sua & cepit. And if the party to whom it is pawned, die before the day of payment of the money, the Goods shall go to his Executor. And when the day is past, and the Pledg is forfeit, yet doubtless if it be much more worth than the money, the party pawning it, will have it again by a Sute in Chancery, upon payment of the Money, Use, and Damage, if he sue before it be quite sold: There is also a Pledg in Law, where the Law without any Special Agreement made, doth enable a man to keep Goods in the nature of a Distress. And so a Tailor may keep, but must not use, nor sell a Garment he hath made, till he be paid for the making of it: And so an Inn-keeper may keep, but not use his Guests Horse, till he pay him for his Meat, and if he leave him there so long, till he have eaten as much as he is worth, he may sell him, and pay himself; and so was it agreed, in Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. This word Pledg is taken also for one that is Surety for another. See for all this, 5 H. 7. 1. 22 Ed. 4. 11. *Kelw. 81. Littl. 332, 333. Co. upon Littl. 205. Co. 7. 14. DoH. & Stud. 150. Broo. Of Mortmain.

It is where one doth give Lands to, or to the use of any Religious House, or other Corporation, then it is said to be in a Mortmain, because the Services are gone, and the Corporation can yield no Services to the Lord; and therefore if any Alien to any such persons, or in any such manner without the Kings Licence, the Lord of whom the Land is held, may enter at any time, within a year after, for a Forfeiture; and if he do not, the next immediate Lord may, and so every Mesn-Lord shall have half a year; and if none enter, it shall come to the King; and of such Inheritances, wherein no Tenure can be as Villains, Rents, and the like: For these the King should have had them presently; but such Alienations may be good with the Kings Licence. *Broo. 19. *Quale Jus,
what.*

It was a Writ that did lie where an Abbot, or such like person had a Judgment to recover against one by Default, then before Judgment given, or Execution awarded, this Writ did go to the Elcheator, to inquire what right he had to recover; and if it had been found he had no right, then the Lord which should have had the Land, if it had been aliened in Mortmain, shall have had it. Terms Ley. Mortuary is a Gift left by a man at his death to his Parish Church, for the Remembrance of his Personal Tithes and Offerings, not duly paid in his life time: And this by the Executor was used to be paid next to the Herriot, and before the Debts: For anciently, if a man had three Beasts, the Lord had the first Beast, the Parson the next, in the right of his Church. But now the rate, and order of this is altered, and set down in Certain, by the Statutes of Circumspecte agatis, 13 Edw. 1. 21 H. 8. 6. Co. upon Lutl. 185. Doll. & Stud. 175. See Tithes.

of Night-walkers.

Night-walkers.

Night-walkers are suspicious persons, such as sleep by day, and walk by night; these especially, if they haunt leud Houses, or keep leud Company, or be otherwise suspicious, may be arrested by a Justice of Peace Warrant, and bound to the Good-Behavior for this, without any more matter, see 13 H. 7. 10.

CHAP. CXV.

Of N^om or Name.

Omnes quasi rei notamen, Names were invented onely to put a difference between person and person, thing and thing, and these are considerable in Law, with relation to Deeds or Writs. For by mistakes of names, sometimes Deeds may be avoided, sometimes Writs may be abated, or suits may become erroneous. And for this we are to know that our Law doth call Persons or Bodies, Natural, or Politick.

See. 1.
1. N^om or Name, what.

There are many kindes of Names, Names of Persons, or Bodies, and places, of Persons, Natural and Politick; the Politick is sole or aggregate of many: There are Names of Baptism, as John William, and Surnames, as White, Dyer, &c. Names of Mystery, or Occupation, as Baker, Mercer, Carpenter; Names of Office, as Justice of Peace, Attorney, and the like; Names of Honor, Degree, or Dignity, as Duke, Earl, Knight, Gentleman; Names of Corporation, as Major and Commonalty, and the like: And Politick Bodies, as Bishops, Deans, &c. There are names of places, as Towns, Villages, Parishes, Hamlets, and the like.

The kindes of Names, of Baptism, Surname.

A Body Politick, is a Body in Fiction of Law, that endureth in perpetual succession. And these are either sole of one person, such were a Bishop, Dean, Prebend, Archdeacon, Parson, Abbot, Prior, and the like. And these had a double capacity, to give, or take, sue, or be sued, or else they are aggregate of many, and then are called a Corporation.

2. Body Politick, what. The kindes of it.

A Corporation is an Assembly, and joyning together of many into one Fellowship, Brotherhood, and minde, whereof one is as the Head, and the rest is as the Body.

3. Corporation, what.

And these kindes of Corporations were said to be heretofore, either by the Common Law. So the Parliament onely was a Corporation. And so Church wardens also are to some purposes a Corporation, or by the Kings Authority, or mixt. Some of these again were said to be Spiritual, and some Temporal. The Spiritual were also, either of dead persons in Law, as Abbots, Convents, and the like, or they are of able persons in Law, as Dean and Chapter, Master and Fellows of Colledges, and the like. Some of them also were said to be Regular, and some Secular Corporations. Temporal are such as is a Major and Commonalty.

The kindes of it.

For Corporations, these things are to be known.

4. Corporations. Ordinances.

1. They may not make or execute any Ordinance in Diminution of the Prerogative, or of other, or against common profit, except approved by the Chancellor, Treasurer, Chief Justices, or three of them, or the Justices of Assise, under pain of forty pound. 19 H. 7. 7. 2. They may make no Ordinance to restrain Sutes in the Kings Court, under pain of forty pound, 19 H. 7. 7. Brownl. 2 part, 284. 3. They must take but two shillings and six pence for the first Entry of an Apprentice, and three shillings and four pence for his Entry of Freedom, under pain of forty pound. 22 H. 8. 4. 4. They may not by Bond or Oath, restrain any Apprentice or Journeyman from keeping shop, or take more money of them for their Freedom, then the Fee of Entry. 28 H. 8. 5. 5. Acts done by the Major part, these shall binde the rest, and no Oath taken to the contrary, shall be binding. 33 H. 3. 27.

14 H. 8. 3.

But for this matter of Corporations, see Co. on Littl. 250. 34. 11. 20. 14 H. 8. 3. And in divers other places in my Book of Common Assurances, chap. 12.

Addition is a Title given to a Man over and above his proper and Christian name and surname, shewing his Estate or Degree, Occupation, Mystery, Place, and Dwelling.

5. Addition and alias Distum, what.

1 H. 3. 5. Alias Distum is the manner of Description of a Defendant in a Writ, when he is sued upon an Especialty, where after a short Description of his Names and Additions, the Writ goeth farther, Alias Distum; and then doth after describe and set him down again by the very Names and Additions, whereby he is named and bound in the Writing. Dyer 50.

6. Indemnitate nominis, what.

This is a Writ that lieth where an Action of Debt, Covenant, or Accompt, is brought against one man, or one man hath entered into a Recognizance, or the like, and another man of the same surname is taken, and vexed in his Body, Goods, or Lands thereby; in this case, the party grieved, or his Executors, after his death, if the Goods be taken, shall be relieved by this Writ. See for it F.N.B. 167. Kilm. 39. Dyer 5. Fineux Law 474. 37 Ed. 3. 3. 9 H. 6. 4. Broml. Rep. 2 part. 270.

7. Misnomer,
what.

Misnomer is the mistake of the right name of a person, or thing: And this is sometimes in the Christian, sometimes in the surname, and sometimes it is in some other of the Additions; and where this will mar a Deed, or not? See my Book of Common Assurances, chap. 12. C. 6. 63. on List 3. Broml. Rep. 2 part. 244. 249. 48, 1 part 52. And where a Writ will abate, or not by such mistake, see C. 6. 63. And what shall be said a good name so purchase by, or not, see at large in my Book of Common Assurances, chap. 12. 11 H. 7. 28. 9 Ed. 4. 2.

8. Dignities and Nobility, and Title of Honor.

As for names of Dignity, and Titles of Honor, these things are to be known.

1. There have been, and are, where the Law doth take notice, divers Titles and Degrees of Honor and Dignities, one beneath another, As the King as Supreme (in whose room the Lord Protector now is,) the Queen, Princes, Dukes, &c. Marquesses, Earls, Viccounts, Barons, Knights, Knights of the Bath, of the Garter, &c. (which are all one with Knights Bannerets, the Templars of the Rhodes, of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, Esquires, Gentleman, who are said to be those, whom their Blood, and Race, doth make Noble, and known; and under this are comprised all above Tammens; for all Noblemen are Gentlemen, but all Gentlemen are not Noblemen-Gentlemen. Also persons were divided thus, as by the Noble, and in respect of Nobility of the Lords house of Parliament, and of the Barony of England, or one of the Commons, and in respect thereof of the Commons-house in Parliament. And there are divers Degrees of Nobility, As Dukes, Marquesses, Earls, Viccounts, and Barons, which last word did sometimes include all the rest; so of the Commons there be degrees, As Knights, Esquires, Gentleman, Citizens, Tammens, and Burghers of several degrees, but Nobility, with us is said to be from the Knight upward, and is lesser; that is, all from Barons downward, or greater from the Burghers upward.

2. Some of these Degrees, Orders, and Titles, are gone, as King, Queen, and Prince, Regent, the Order of Knights-Marshal, Templars of the Rhodes, and others. Some of them continue to this day, as Marquess, and the rest. Some of all which remain still amongst us.

Heralds.

3. These have either Arms, Ensigns, and Cognisances allowed them, and for the examination, and safe keeping of these, there are Officers called Heralds, who are of purpose to look to it, and to finde them out, and to give them to such as desire it.

4. The Kings have had in all times, the dispose of most of these Inferior Honors at their first Creation, as the Dignities of Dukes, Earls, and most of the other great Dignities: All which they did sometimes confer in Fee, sometimes in Tail, or as they pleased. Some of these are made by Patent of the King, and some by other ways and means, some of them are incident to Offices, and some not.

Degradation.

6. Some of these Creations were done with much Ceremony and Solemnity, and some with no Ceremony at all.

7. These Honors had, they that had them, might have lost and forfeited them, and they might have been degraded of them; the which also in some cases was done with much Ceremony. Cambden, Henric Anraby, Sir Thomas Smith de Republica.

8. None may assume to themselves, nor give to others any Names, or Titles of Honor, or Dignities conferred on, or given to them by the last King, since 4 Jan. 1641. Att. 4 Feb. 1651.

9. The differences about these things were wont to be decided by the Constable of England, and Earl-Marshal, by the Law of Chivalry, or Title of Honor in the Court of Chivalry. But these Officers, and this Court is now gone. 21 H. 7. 33. 37 H. 6. 16. CHAP. CXVI.

Of Notice.

Notice is the making something known, that a man was or might be ignorant of before; and this in divers cases produceth divers effects. As first, in respect of the party that doth give it, that by this means he shall have some benefit; but otherwise he should not have had; or hereby he may be freed of some charge, that otherwise he should have borne. Secondly, In respect of the party to whom the notice is to be given; in that, by these means he is made subject to some Action or charge, that otherwise he should not have been subject unto; and his estate is subject to a Forfeiture, which otherwise it had not been in danger of. Thirdly, In respect of both, in that hereby an act may be brought, that otherwise had been good, or an act may be good, that otherwise had been naught. Co upon Litt. 309.

If a Patron had resigned his Church unto the Ordinary, the Ordinary or his Successor, if he die, must give notice thereof to the Patron, else he shall never take advantage of the Lapse. If the Patron do not protest within six months. Rel. 49.

If the Ordinary had refused to institute a Clerk presented, because he was illiterate (as in that case he might) there he must have given notice thereof to the Patron, especially if the Patron had been a Lay-man, (for if he had been a Clergiman, it is some otherwise) or if he had refused him for any private cause confessed upon his examination, and not publicly, and notoriously known. In these cases he must have given notice to the Patron, or else he had taken no advantage of the Lapse. See Dyer 292. Mol. 30. 6. Br. cap. 304. 1 Hy. 9. Doct. & Stud. 13. Rel. 49. 30. Dyer 293. 246.

If the Parson be deposed, the Ordinary must have given notice hereof to the Patron, or else he had taken no advantage of the Lapse. Dyer 346.

If one that had a Benefice with Cure of eight pound, and is not qualified, had been instituted, but not inducted into another, contrary to the Statute of 2. 1 H. 8. The Ordinary must have given notice hereof to the Patron, else he had taken no advantage of the Lapse. Co. 4. 79.

If a Church had been void by Simony, the Patron must have had notice. 13 Edw. 6. See more in 31 E. 6. 6.

If a Manne be conveyed or transferred from one to another, as when an Estate that one hath in a Manor, doth cease by limitation of use, and it be limited to another, then he that is the present Lord must give notice hereof to the Copiholder, or else if the Copiholder deny his Rent upon demand to the Lord, this is no Forfeiture. So also is it, though the Manor were passed by a Deed of Bargain and Sale inrolled. Co. 8. 92. 3. 13.

If the Lessor make a Feoffment of his Land in Lease for life or years, that is, upon condition to forfeit for non-payment of Rent, and the Lessor give Livery and Seisin to the Grantee of the Reversion, so that the Lessee hath not notice of it; in this case the Grantee must give him notice of it, else he cannot enter after demand for non-payment of the Rent upon the Condition, as the Lessor might have done; and so is it, though the Grant of the Reversion had been by Deed and Bargain and Sale inrolled. Co. 9. 113. 8. 42.

If one make an Indenture to Use, provided, That if one at any time, during his life, pay to J. S. twenty pound, or tender it, at such a place, then the Use to cease, or the Estate of any raised by the said Use, shall cease; in this case, if he will pay the money according to the Condition, he must give notice thereof to J. S. else the tender at the place, is not sufficient. Co. 8. 92. Dyer 31. Co. 5. 113.

Where Notice is requisite and ought to be given. And what shall be said a sufficient Notice, or not. To the Patron by the Ordinary.

To the Tenant of the Grant of the Reversion. Forfeiture by a Copiholder.

To one upon a Condition to avoid or affirm an Estate.

If a Feoffment be made to divers Uses on Condition, That if one that hath an Estate by the same Feoffment shall do, or not do something, that then his Estate shall be void; now he must have notice of this Condition, or else the doing, or not doing of that act, is no Forfeiture of his Estate. Dyer 354. Co. 9. Francis case.

If a Lease be made on Condition to do some collateral thing, as build a House, or the like, and the Lessor sell the Reversion by bargain and sale or Feoffment; in this case the Vendee must have notice hereof for otherwise if he after the Condition broken, accept the Rent; this is no Dispensation of the Condition, or Assurance of the Estate. Co. 3. 64. 8. 91.

If one grant a Reversion, notice hereof must be given to the Tenant by the Grantee; for otherwise, if he Attorn, and have no notice of the Grant, his Attornment is void, (see Attornment.) But Notice by Law may be without Notice in Fact. Co. upon Litt. 308.

If one have any Estate, or any Lands in trust for, and in the use of another, and one is about to purchase this; in this case, it behoves him to whose use, to give notice of the use to the Purchasers, for otherwise the use may be gone: For if in that case, the party trusted, do for a good consideration sell the Land to one that hath notice of the use, then the Purchaser shall stand seised of that Land to the first use. Plow. 351.

If one bring an Action against an Executor or Administrator, and lay his Action in another County, then that wherein the Executor or Administrator doth dwell, he must give notice hereof unto him; for the Executor or Administrator, is not bound to take notice of it, unless it be in the same County, and therefore if he after that do pay away the Assets he hath to another, that hath not begun any Suite, the party hath no Remedy. After the Lessor took a secret Surrender of the first Lessee, and after that Surrender a Rent day incurred, and the Rent not paid by the second Lessee; it was adjudged, that his Estate was not void, for the other ought to have given him notice of the Surrender. Guldb. 140. pl. 49.

If a Condition be to pay money at any time, during ones life, he must give notice when he will pay it. Co. upon Litt. f. 211. So if A. be bound to B. with Condition that C. shall infeoff D. on such a day; in this case C. must give notice to D. thereof, and request him to be on the Land at the day to receive the Feoffment, and he must seek D. and give him notice. Co. upon Litt. 211.

If a man be bound by the Condition of an Obligation; or otherwise upon a penalty, upon a contingent precedent; this is to be done by the Obligee, and it lieth wholly and properly in his Conusans, and not in the knowledge of the Obligor; in this case it seems, that the Obligee must give notice of the thing done to the Obligor, or otherwise he is not to be charged to do that thing; as if he be to pay money within a week after the Obligee is married; in this case he must give him notice when he is married. But if he be bound to do such a thing by a single Obligation, Covenant, or an Assumpsit only; in that case he must take notice of it at his peril. So also where

CHAP. CXVII.

Of a Nuisance.

1. Nuisans, what.

Nuisans signifieth a thing done, whereby another man is annoyed in his Free-Lands, or Tenements, or otherwise: As when a House is built, or Wall set up, or Water stopt to the grievance of a Neighbor, by which his Frank-tenement is impaired. And this is either Common, when every man is or may be equally annoyed by it; or Special, where some one or more are, or may be more hurt by it then others, F. N. B. 193. O. N. B. 108, 109.

Sometimes also this word signifieth a Writ, which is given for Relief in these cases. See for this, 6 Rich. 2. 9. Crompt. Jur. 222. Westminster 2. 25.

2. What shall be said a Nuisans, or not.

A Nuisans may be unto a man by stopping, or annoying his Ways, Waters, Light, or Air, and that by Building, Diverting, Stopping, Digging, or the like: As if one set up or build a Wall against the Windows, and light of another mans House; or build a House, so that it over-hang his Neighbors, or make a Pig-stie, or a Chimney, or lay Dung or Carrion so near his Neighbors House, that he is annoyed by it; these, and the like Acts are Nuisances, Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad calum. Co. 9. 54. 5. 101.

The erecting of Lime-kills, and Dye-houses, may be a Nuisans to the Neighborhood.

If there be a High-way thorow a Copice, and the owner make Gates at both sides to save the young Sprigs, and a stranger travelling did unhang them, and cut them in peeces; and the owner brought Trespass, and it was adjudged justifiable, and judgment against the Defendants: James and Hayward, B. R. Quarto Chr. But it is no Nufans to a man that hath a Mill upon a Water, that another Mill is builded upon the same Water by him, unless thereby his Water be stoppt or turned, though he get away part of his Custome by that means. Broo. cap. 36.

It is no Nufans to build a new Pigeon-house, though the Neighborhood be annoyed by it.

It is no Nufans to a Neighborhood, when a Butcher, or Chandler, or Brewer, doth set up his Trade, or Houses for it, amongst them. But a Nufans may be by them, by laying of stinking heaps at the doors. Pasche, 5 Jac. B. R. But the building of a Brew-house, the keeping of a Chandler, or Butchers-shop in an inconvenient place to the offence of the Houses or Gardens of Neighbors, may be a Nufans. Trin. 13 Car. B. R.

It is no Nufans to plant Coneys, whether a man hath any Warren or not; neither is this punishable any way, but he may kill them. Adjudged Hil. 39 Eliz. C. B. Rowlethons case.

For Common Nufances that are, or may be grievous to one as well as another, as in High-ways, and the like, the most proper and apt means of Remedy, and place of Redress, are the Sessions, the Sheriffs Turns, and the Leets; for which the Cause is

If any cast any Garbage, Dung, Intrails, or any other annoyance into the Streets, Rivers, Waters, or other places within, or near any City, Burrough, or Town, the Suburbs thereof, in pain to be called by Writ before the Lord Chancellor, and to be punished at his discretion. 12 Rich. 2. 13.

But for such Nufances as are more special to one mans Freehold, more than others, the party grieved must be thus relieved; if the Way, Water-course, or Conduit, be wholly stoppt; and he whose Way, Water-course, or Conduit it is, be he a Freeholder of that thing, to which the Way, Water-course, or Conduit doth belong, he may either abate the Nufans himself, or he may have an Assise of Nufans, or a Quod Permittat against the party that doth the Nufans. And if the party to whom the Nufans is done, have onely a Lease for years of that to which the Way, Water, or Conduit doth belong, and the Way be wholly, or in part stoppt, or if he have the Freehold, and the Way or Water be stoppt in part onely; in this case the party wronged cannot have an Assise, but he must have an Action of the Case. Co. 5. 73. 33 Hen. 6. 26. Co. 9. 113. 5. 101. F. N. B. 18. 4. 42 Aff. pl. 1. 14 Hen. 8. p. ult.

And if he that doth the thing, Alien the House or thing by which the Nufance is bred to another, the party grieved shall have a Questus est nobis for his Relief.

For every special Nufans, a man hath a double Remedy, either by Action, wherein he shall recover damages, and Judgment shall be that the Nufans shall be removed, and thrown down, &c. as the cause doth require, or the party to whom it is done, or his Feoffee, or Alienee, if he sell away his Land, to which the Nufans is made, may demolish it, whether the Lands be in the hands of such Alienee, or no, and that before any prejudice to them. But if he demolish it before this Action brought, he cannot after bring an Action; and if he do hanging the Action, the other may plead it in Bar of the Action; if after pleading, it seems, he should have an Audita querela. Co. 9. 54. 5. 101. F. N. B. 185.

If the Nufans be to a Frank-tenement, the party wronged, or his Heir, or Feoffee, may have a Quod permittat against the Actor, without any notice or request before, to reform it; and against his Heir or Feoffee, after Request made to him, to reform it. F. N. B. 124. Co. 5. 101. 9. 54. Dyer 313.

If a man have a House near my House, and he suffer it so ruinous, that it is like to fall on my House; I may have a Writ De domo reparanda, and compel him to repair it by these means. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 56.

It seems generally it is where any thing is done to the Nufans of the Kings Tenants, 6. Perpetuare, or more particularly where any one doth inroach to himself, that he ought not in what.

any Jurisdiction, Land, or Franchise. Generally it is as often as any thing is done to the hurt of the Kings Tenement, the Kings Way, or of Common Waters, or of a City, &c. And most properly it is where there is a House builded or inclosed, made of any part of the Kings Demesns, or if a High-way, or a Publick Water, or Common Street, or such like Publick things be taken in to private use. So that a Perpetrator is where one inchoate, or makes that several to himself, which ought to be Common to many. Co. 1 part of Inst. fol. 277. 2 part, fol. 38.

1. That no Parish or Corporation may make Ordinances against the Publick Ordinances; Prerogative, or good.

of an Obligation and Defeasance.

An Obligation is a Deed in writing, whereby one man doth binde himself to another to pay a sum of money, or do some other thing; and he that makes this Deed, is called the Obligor, and he to whom it is made, is called the Obligee. Finches Ley 49.

And it is sometimes Simple or Single, which is when it is to pay a sum of money, or do some other thing; and when it is without any Defeasance or Condition in, or annexed to it, which also is sometimes with a penalty called a Penal Bill, and sometimes without a penalty: And this is that which is most properly called an Obligation, and sometimes also it is called a Single Bill, or Single Bond; and sometimes it is double or conditional, which is when it is attended upon, and accompanied with a Condition; and then it is said to be a Bond containing a penalty with Condition to pay money, or do or suffer some act or thing, &c. And this Condition is sometimes called a Defeasance, and then especially when it is (as sometimes it is) in another Deed or Instrument; for most commonly it is inserted into the same Deed, wherein the Obligation being the other part of it, is contained: And then also it is either subscribed under the Obligation, or included within the body of it, or indorsed upon the back of it. And quacunqve via if the Condition be performed, the penalty is saved; if not, the penalty is forfeit. Co. super Littl. 172.

An Obligation may be made upon Parchment or Paper, and in loose Parchment or Paper; or in a peece of Paper or Parchment sowed in a Book, and either way it is good. But if it be made on a Tally, peece of Wood, or any other thing but Paper or Parchment, albeit it be sealed and delivered, yet it is void. Broo. Oblig. 67. 30. Trin. 49 Eliz. B.R. And it may be made in the first, or in the third person (notwithstanding the Statute of 38 Ed. 3. 4. which doth intend onely Obligations made beyond the

Albeit the best manner and form of an Obligation, is that which is most usual; yet any words in a writing, sealed and delivered, whereby a man doth prove and declare himself to have another mans money, or to be indebted to him, will make a good Obligation; and therefore if a man by Deed say but this, *Memorandum that J. A. of B. do ow to C. of D. 20l. to be paid at Easter next: Or memorandum, that J. A. of B. have had of C. of D. 20l. of which there is 10l. behinde, [or of which I ow him 10l.] Or memorandum, that J. Or memorandum, that J. A. of B. have borrowed of C. of D. 20l. Or memorandum, that J. A. of B. do binde my self to C. of D. that he shall receive of me twenty pound: All these, and such like, are good Obligations. Dyer 21, 22, 23. Co. 9. 53. 37 H. 6. 9. 22 Ed. 4. 22. Kelm. 34. 21 Ed. 4. 39. 11 H. 7. 6. So if one say, memorandum, that J. A. of B. binde my self to C. of D. that he shall receive twenty pound by the hands of J. A. of B. ow to C. of D. twenty pound; for payment of which, I binde my self and my goods; this is a good Obligation, and will binde the person, but not his goods, Broo. Oblig. 16. So if one by Deed, Covenant or Promise to do a thing, and then useth these words, Ad quam quidem promissionem perimplendam obligo me in 20l. this is a good Obligation for twenty pound, Broo. Oblig. 52. Dyer 6. So if one binde himself thus, Memorandum, that J. A. of B. am bound to C. of D. to deliver him twenty quarters of Corn by a day, Ad quod performandum obligo me, without more words; this is a good Obligation, Broo. Oblig. 40. 79. So if one binde himself thus, Memorandum, that J. A. of B. binde my self to pay C. of D. ten pound at Easter, and if I fail to pay it then, I do grant to pay him twenty pound; this is a good Obligation for the twenty pound, if he fail to pay the ten pound: And some say he may recover both the twenty pound, and the ten pound, Foxalls case, 9 Jac. B. R. So if one binde himself thus, *Memorandum, that in consideration of a Bill of fifty pound, wherein J. S. is bound for me to I. D. for payment of twenty pound: I do binde my self in twenty pound to the said J. S. to save him harmless from all Actions of the same; this is a good Obligation, and if I. D. sue J. S. the Bill is forfeit. Or if one binde himself thus, Be it known, &c. that I A. of B. do ow unto C. of D. the sum of fourteen pound, to be paid at the Feast of, &c. together with six pounds, which I ow him upon Bills and Recognisances, subscribed with my hand; this is a good Bill, but it is good for no more but the fourteen pound, and not for the six pound; for the words do onely import the time of payment of the six pounds. If one make a writing in the form of a Statute, which the Party doth Seal, and afterwards legally deliver; but it is not sealed by the Kings and the Majors Seal, according to the Statute, albeit this be not a good Statute, yet it may be a good Obligation, Trin. 37 Eliz. B. R. Fitz Accompt 79.

If one binde himself to pay money, or do any other thing, and afterward doth adde this clause in the Deed, Et ad maiorem huius rei securitatem inveni A de B, & C de D fide jussores, quorum unusquisque obligat se in toto & in solida. And these two do also seal and deliver the Deed; it seems this is a good Obligation to binde them; albeit there be no other words in the Deed, Perk. sect. 158. Fitz Oblig. 1.

If an Obligation be made to J. D. to the use of I. S. this is a good Obligation for I. S. in Equity, and some have said he may Release it; but this is much to be doubted; for it is certain I. S. cannot sue the Obligor in his own name, but when he hath cause of Sute he may compel I. D. in Chancery to sue the Obligor, Br. Obl. 72. Cromp. 7. 63.

If A. of B. binde himself to C. of D. to pay twenty pound, and say not when; yet the Obligation is good, and the money is due presently. So if the Obligation be Solvendum nunquam, or solvendum at Doomsday, the Obligations are good; and the solvendum void, and the money is due presently. So if A. of B. binde himself to C. of D. in twenty pound, solvendum A de B [where it should be solvendum C de D,] the Obligation is good, and the solvendum void. Broo. Oblig. 14 H. 8. 18. 21 Ed. 3. 46. 4 Ed. 4. 29. If the Obligation be made thus, [Obliga me, &c.] leaving out these words following [heredes, Executores & Administratores]; this is a good Obligation, and the Executors and Administrators, but not the Heir, are bound by it. And if it be made thus, [Solvendum to the Oblige & Successoribus suis] and not Executoribus, &c. this is a good Obligation, and the Executors and Administrators, and not the Successors, except it be in case of a Corporation, shall take advantage of it. Dyer 13. Broo. Oblig. 15. 68. An Obligation may be good, albeit it contain false or incongruous Latin or English, or Latin be put for English, or contra, if the intent of the parties may sufficiently appear: And therefore if one be bound by the name of Johannes for Johannem, or one binde himself in octoginta, for octoginta libris, or in septuaginta for septuaginta libris, in viginti for viginti libris, in seventeen for seventeen pounds, in quingentus for quingentus libris, in septuaginta for septuaginta libris, in sexingentis for sexcentis libris, in quingagesimus, or quinque decies for quingaginta libris, in octoginta for octoginta libris, or in viginti for viginti libris, in viginti nobilibus for twenty nobles, or in octoginta libris for octoginta libris, or quingenta libris for quingaginta libris, or the like; these misprisions will not hurt the Obligations, for they are good notwithstanding. But if one by the Obligation binde himself in quingaginta libris, or in quingaginta libris, or in quingentis libris, or in secentis libris; these Obligations are void, for in these cases the meaning is so uncertain, that it cannot be discerned; and no Averment will serve to supply it in this case. So if an Obligation be dated 23 die Aprilis, instead of Aprilis, this is a good Obligation, and this mistake will not hurt. See Bruni. Rep. 1 part, 62. 64. 63. 122. 2 part, 208. Co. 10. 133. And if an Obligation have not date, or a false and impossible date, or have but half the date, as the year of our Lord onely; or if it want these words, In ejus rei, &c. or the like, if it be sealed and delivered, it is a good Obligation, Co. 2. 5. See Fair, Numb. 5.

A Single Obligation may be to pay money, or to do any other thing that is lawful and possible, and such Obligations are good. But if the Obligation be to binde a man to do a thing unlawful or impossible, it is void; and therefore if one binde himself in an Obligation to kill a man, burn a house, maintain a Sute, or the like, it is void. So if the Obligation be made for maintenance, or to that end, or if it be made pursuant to, and in execution of an usurious contract, or the like, it is void. So if an Obligation be made against the Statute of 23 H. 6. it is void. So if one binde himself in an Obligation, and the matter thereof is altogether uncertain, or insensible, it is void; but if there be any reasonable certainty in it, it is good enough. So if one binde himself to go to Rome in three days, under pain of twenty pound, this is void, Co. 10. 110. See Fair or Deed, Numb. 51. See more Infra.

The Condition of an Obligation may be either in the same, or in another Deed, and it may be indorsed of the back of the Obligation, subscribed under it, or contained within it; but the best way to make it, is the usual way, viz. The Condition of this Obligation is such, &c. and yet if it be otherwise, it may be good; for if an Obligation be made from A. to B. and on the back of the same, these words are indorsed [That whereas the within bounden A. is bound to B. in 20li yet B. willeth and granteth, that if A. pay to B. 10l. at Easter, that then the Obligation shall be void.] it seems this is a good Condition. So if in the close of an Obligation of 20l. these words be added, [That if A. (the Obligor) pay 10l. to B. (the Oblige) at Easter, that the Obligation shall be void,] this is a good Condition. So if an Obligation be made from A. to B. of 20l. and these words are subscribed, [Now therefore if the Obligor pay pay five pound quarterly for four years, then it is agreed that the Obligation shall be void,] this is a good Condition. So if a single Obligation be made from A. to B. of twenty pound, and after the Obligation is made, B. doth by another Deed grant, that if A. pay him ten pound at Easter, the Obligation shall be void; this is a good Condition or Defeasance: But if A. do binde himself in an Obligation to B. of twenty pound, and after B. doth binde himself in another Obligation to A. to perform the Covenants of an Indenture; and in this second Obligation, there is a Proviso that B. shall not sue upon the first Obligation till such a time; this is not a good Condition, Plow. 141. 21 H. 6. 51. Fitz. Bar 157. Broo. Obl. 89. Fitz. Bar 265. Pasche, 8 Jac. B. Simpsons case, 21 H. 6. 51. 26 H. 8. 9. A Bill was made thus, [Memorandum, That A. doth binde himself to B. twenty pound; for payment whereof I binde myself, &c. In witness, &c.] And after this, is subscribed these words, [Memorandum, That the said A. doth not compelled to pay the said twenty pound, until he recover thirty pound upon an Obligation against C. &c.] This is a good Defeasance. Brownl. 3 part, f. 98. If A. be bound to B. in twenty pound, with Condition, that if B. do not bring A. a horse before Easter, that the Obligation shall be void; this is a good Condition. And if the Obligor will have advantage of it, he must perform the thing, Et sic de similibus, 26 H. 8. 8. So if A. be bound in an Obligation to B. in twenty pound, with Condition, that if B. shall bring twenty load of Wood to the house of A. that A. shall pay him the twenty pound; or that A. shall pay him twenty pound when B. shall bring him twenty load of Wood to his house; these are good Conditions, and the thing must be done before the money is to be paid, Broo. Count. 69. If the Condition of an Obligation be, That if A. (the Obligor) do not pay to B. (the Obligee) ten pound, that the Obligation shall be void, this is a good Condition: But it shall be taken according to the words; and therefore the Obligor it not to pay it: And if he be sued, he may plead performance of the Condition in the not paying of it, Broo. Oblig. 42. If these words be omitted in the close of the Condition [That then the Obligation to be void;] the Condition is void, but it doth not hurt the Obligation, for that remains single: But if the next words, viz. [Or else shall stand in force] be omitted, the Condition is never the worse; for as the addition of them doth nothing adde to, so the omission of them doth nothing detract from the strength of the Obligation, Curia B. R. Pa. 9 Jac. Truman & Parson case.

Secondly, For matter and substance of it;

Against Law.

The Condition of an Obligation, may be to do any lawful or possible thing, as to pay money, deliver Goods or Cattle, acknowledge a Statute, enter into an Obligation, make a Release, make an Estate, surrender an Estate, make Reparations for quiet enjoying, to save harmless, to defend a Title, to perform Covenants, to abide an Award, to perform a Will, to give so much Land or Money in Legacy, to purchase Lands, to appear in a Court, to marry another, not to sue, not to meddle with an Executorship, not to revoke a Letter of Attorney, not to be Surety, not to play at Cards or Dice, or any such like thing, and such a Condition is good. So also it seems a Condition, that a man shall not sell his Goods, is good: But when the matter or thing to be done by the Condition, is unlawful or impossible, or the Condition it self is repugnant, insensible, or uncertain, the Condition is void, and in some cases the Obligation also. See West. Symb. Pasche, 8 Jac. Co. B. And herein, these differences are to be observed. 1. When the thing enjoined, or restrained to be, or not to be done by the Condition, is such a thing in his own nature, as the Commission or Omission thereof, is malum in se, there not onely the Condition, but the whole Obligation also is void ab initio: And therefore if one be bound in an Obligation with Condition that he shall kill a Man, burn a House, do any other Felony, commit any Trespass, maintain any Sute unlawfully; or (being an Officer) that he shall take Fees by Extortion, or that he (being a Sheriff, &c.) shall let a Prisoner escape, or that he shall save the Obligee harmless against an unlawful Deed, or that he shall not save his Land, or that he (being a Tradesman) shall not use his Trade, (and yet it seems a Condition, that a man shall not use his Trade in one place, or at one time, or if he do that, he shall pay so much by the year unto another, is not a Condition against Law,) or that a man (being an Officer and an Officer pro bono publico) shall not exercise his office, or the like; this Condition is void, and makes the Obligation, and so the whole Deed void. But when the thing to be, or not to be done by the Condition, is such a thing as the Omission or Commission tion thereof in its nature is not malum in se; but onely against some maxim of Law, as that a man shall make a Feoffment to his own wife, or is but malum prohibitum onely, as that a man shall erect a Cottage contrary to the Statute of 31 Eliz. or is repugnant to the state, as that a Feoffee of Land shall not alien it, or take the profits of it, or that a Tenant in Tail shall not suffer a Recovery of his Land, or the like; in these cases the Conditions onely are void, and the Obligations remain single and without a Condition. And yet perhaps, if the Obligors be sued upon these Obligations, they may have relief in Equity. See Brownl. 1 part, 63, 64, 65, 70, 71. 2 part, 281. Equity. Co. 10. 101. 11. 53. super Littl. 206. Dyer 304. Plow. 64. Fitz Oblig. 13. See Condition and Covenant. March 191. pl. 238. See Covenant, Numb. 4. 2. When the matter or thing to be done by the Condition, is such a thing as in its nature is impossible to be done at the time of the making of the Obligation, there the Obligation is good, and the Condition onely is void. And therefore if I be bound in an Obligation with Condition, that I shall stand to the Award of certain persons, &c. Provided, That the Award be made before the tenth day of May next; and provided, that I have warning fifteen days before the tenth of May, and this Obligation is made the ninth of May; this is a void Condition. And so if I be bound in an Obligation with Condition, that I will go to Rome within three days, or that I will make an Estate of White-acre in Dale worth ten pound per annum, when reverà it is worth but five pound per annum, or that I will be non-sure in such an Action, or assure such a peece of ground, when in truth there is no such Action, or peece of ground; this Condition is void, and the Obligation remains single and good. Perk. sett. 735. Co. super Littl. 107. Fitz Oblig. 17. 27 H.8. 29. 21 Ed. 4. 54. 42 Ed. 3. 6. So if the Condition be, That whereas A. had a Judgment against B. the Obligor for twenty pound, and the Obligee hath acknowledged satisfaction, if therefore the Obligor shall before such a day get a Warrant from A. whereby the Obligee may be saved harmless for the same acknowledgment; That then &c. this Condition is void, and as it seems, the Obligation also, for that it is not onely impossible, but against Law also. But when the thing to be done by the Condition, is a thing possible at the time of the making of the Obligation, and after by matter ex post facto, by the Act of God, the Act of the Law, or the Act of the Obligee, it is become impossible; in this case the Obligation and the Condition both are become void: And therefore if a man be bound with a Condition, that he shall appear the next Term in such a Court, and before the day the Obligor dieth; hereby the Obligation is saved. So if A. be bound to B. that J. S. shall marry Jane G. by such a day, and before the day, B. himself marry with Jane G. hereby the Obligation is discharged, and B. shall never take advantage of it. Hilary, 17 ac. B.R. 21 Ed. 4. 53. 3. When the Condition of an Obligation is so insensible and uncertain, that the meaning cannot be known, there the Condition onely is void, and the Obligation good: As if an Obligation be made by A. to B. with condition, that A. shall keep B. without damage against J. S. for ten pound, in which the Obligee is bound to the Obligor; this Condition is void, and the Obligation single. So if the Condition be, That A. shall pay his part of the sums of money, that shall be levied for the trying of the Customs of M. unless the word [levied] be used for taxed in that Countrey, the Condition is insensible and void. So if A. be bound to B. with Condition to save him harmless, and say not for what, or against whom; this Condition is void, and the Obligation single: But if any sense or certainty may be made of it, the Obligation and Condition shall be both good. Pasche, 9 ac. B.R. 4. When the Condition of an Obligation in the matter of it, is Repugnant to the Obligation it self, there the Condition is void, and the Obligation good: And therefore if the Condition of an Obligation be, That the Obligee shall not have benefit by the Obligation, or that he shall not sue for the money in the Obligation, or the like; this Condition is void, and the Obligation single: And yet this by a Defence made after the Obligation may be done. 7 Hen. 6. 44. 21 H. 7. 24. 30. See Defiance. 5. When the thing to be done, by the Condition is to be done beyond the Sea, it hath been held that the Condition is void, and the Obligation single, because the thing was not triable here. See the Statutes of 10 Hen. 6. 14. Not triable, 21 Ed. 4. 10.

But

But it seems the Law is otherwise now, and that the matter is triable here, and the Condition good, Trin. 7 Jac. B. R. And in all other cases where a Deed in general is void for Misnomer, Disability, or otherwise, there an Obligation is void, Fitz. Oblig. 2. 11.

All Bonds with Conditions for the enjoying of Spiritual Livings, contrary to the Statute of 13 Eliz. 10. are void by the Statute of 14 Eliz. 11.

If any Ladies or Gentlewomen be drawn by flattery, or threatening to enter into any Obligation, Simple or Conditional, to pay any money, not truly due, they may be relieved by a course in the Chancery, for which see 31 H. 6. 39.

5. When an Obligation shall be void, for that it is made to another, and not to the Sheriff, or to the Sheriff in another manner then is appointed by the Statute of 23 H. 6. 10.

No Sheriff or his Officers shall take any Obligation, by colour of their Office of any person in their Ward, but onely to themselves, and in the name of their Office, with Condition, with Sureties sufficient, that the prisoner shall appear at the day in the Writ; and all others taken in any other form shall be void. And persons that are in his Ward, by Execution, Condemnation, Capias Velagatum, Excommunication, Surety of the Peace, or some other special case, being sent for by a Justice for Felony, or the like, may not be bailed; and others that are arrested on a Capias for Debt, or an Indictment, or otherwise by Writ, Bill, or Warrant that are Mainpernable, must be bailed. 23 H. 6. 10.

For the better understanding of which Statute, these things must be observed. That such Obligations as differ and vary from the form of this Statute in words and circumstances onely are good, notwithstanding this Statute. And therefore if a Prisoner make an Obligation with a Condition to appear and answer in a Plea of Debt, and say no more, nor do set down the cause of the Debt; this is a good Obligation. Villars case, 34. 9 Jac. B. R. And if the Sheriff take an Obligation with one Surety onely, or with two Sureties that are insufficient, or with two Sureties of another County; this is a good Obligation. Co. 10. 101. So if the Debt for which the party is arrested, be three hundred pound, and the Sheriff take an Obligation of one hundred pound for his appearance; this is a good Obligation, for in these cases it is left to his discretion, and it doth concern him onely. So if the Condition of the Obligation be for appearance Mense pasche, omitting proxime futuro, yet it is a good Obligation. Villars case. So if the party be arrested by an Attachment out of the Star Chamber upon a contempt, and the Condition of the Obligation is, That if the Obligee shall appear, and then, and there shall answer a contempt by him committed against the King and his Council, this is a good Obligation. Dyer 364. And if the party that doth make the Obligation be not in the Sheriff's custody, albeit the Obligation be made in any other manner, essentially differing from the form prescribed in the Statute, if it be not against the Common Law, it is a good Obligation. And therefore, if when a Capias Velagatum be delivered to the Sheriff against a man, the Sheriff take Bond of him for his Fees, and his Travel; this Bond if it be not within this Statute, yet it is against the Common Law, and therefore void, because it is by colour of Extortion. Antlers case, Hil. 7 Jac. Co. B. But where the Obligation, whether it be single, or double, made by a prisoner, doth essentially differ by addition, alteration, or diminution from the form prescribed in the Statute, there the Condition and Obligation both are void. Co. 10. 101. And therefore if such a prisoner make an Obligation to any other besides the Sheriff, albeit he to whom it be made be called Sheriff, or if he make an Obligation to the Sheriff himself, and not by the name of his Office; or if he make an Obligation to him by the name of his Office, and doth not rightly name him, (Nowels case, Trin. 21 Jac. Curia) as if he make it to J. S. Viccomiti in Comitatu predicto, whereas it should be De Comitatu predicto: All these Obligations are void by this Statute. And if the Sheriff take an Obligation of a Prisoner for his Appearance, in case where he is not bailable by the Statute, and so let him go free; or if he take an Obligation of a Prisoner that is bailable for his Appearance, and doth insert other things into the Condition, as to pay money for Meat, Drink, or Fees, or the like; or if he deliver a man in Execution, and take Bond of him to save him harmless; or to be a true prisoner: All these and such like Obligations as these, are void by this Statute.

If a man be a prisoner in Ludgate upon a Capias utlagatum, and the Gaoler take an obligation of him with two sureties, with condition to save him harmlesse, and to discharge his fees, and to yield his body at all times upon Summons &c. this is a void obligation, as well against the sureties, as against the principall. If the under-Marshall of the Kings Bench take an obligation of one in execution and a stranger with condition to save him harmlesse of all escapes, and so suffer the prisoner to goe at large, this is a voyd obligation. If the Sheriff of Bedford having a prisoner by force of an Execution, let him goe at large, and take an obligation of him, with condition that he shall keep the Sheriff without damage against the King and the plaintiffe, and be at all times at the commandement of the Sheriff as a true Prisoner, and appear before the Iustices of the King at Westminster &c. this is a void obligation. Dier. 118, 119. Dier. 324. Plow. 61. 62.

If a man be a Prisoner to the Sheriff for suspicion of Felony, and after a writ comes to him to have all his prisoners at a certain day before the Iustices of Goale delivery of the same County, and thereupon the Prisoner doth make a single obligation to the Sheriff to appear before the Iustices the day of the writ, this is a void obligation, because it is single and not with condition. And if the Sheriff baile not one bailable by a single obligation, it seems this is a void obligation. Fitz. Oblig.

6 How a single Obligation shall be taken.

Joint and severall.

A single obligation is alwayes taken most in advantage of the obligee and against the obligor, but it is otherwise of the condition of an obligation. For this is alwayes taken most in advantage of the obligor, and against the obligee: 10 H. 7. 1. 16:
If two, three, or more bind themselves in an obligation thus, Obligamus nos, and say no more, the Obligation is and shall be taken to be joint only and not severall; but if it be thus, Obligamus nos & utrumque nostrum; or obligamus nos & unumquemque nostrum; or obligamus nos & quolibet nostrum; or obligamus nos & alterum nostrum; in all these cases the Obligation is both joint, and severall, so as in these cases the obligee may sue al the obligors together, or all of them apart at his pleasure, but it seems he may not sue some of them and spare the rest, but he must sue them al together, or all apart by severall Precipes, and in this case he may have severall Judgements and severall executions against the obligors, and take all their bodies in execution, but he shall have satisfaction but once, or from one of them only, for after he hath been satisfied by one, the rest shall be discharged. But in the first case where the obligation is joynt and not severall, the obligee must sue all the obligors together, for he cannot sue one alone with effect without the rest, unless it be in some speciall cases, as where one of the obligors alone doth seale the deed, or where all of them do seale, but one of them is an Infant, a woman covert, a monk, or the like, or where one of them is dead, for in these cases one or some of them may be charged without the rest. But otherwise the Plaintiff cannot proceed in his suit against one, or some of them without the rest, except the defendant give him advantage, for howsoever the suit be well begun, for when one or some of them alone is, or are sued, it shall not be intended that the rest are living, untill it be shewed by the other party, yet the defendant is not bound to answer, unless the rest be sued also; and therefore in this case he or they that is or are sued alone, are thus to take advantage of it. viz. to shew the matter to the Court, and to plead in abatement of the writ; for if he appear and shew it not, but plead non est factum, or the like, to the obligation, the Iury must find against him, and he will be charged with the whole debt. And so also if one appear, and the other make default and is outlawed, it seems he that doth appear must answer all. See Brownl. 1. part. 208. If an obligation be, we bind us or either of us, this is joint & severall at the Election of the obligee. Brownl. 1. part. 121. Dier. 19. 310. Co. 5. 119. 9. 53: old N. B. 62. Broo. Joynancy 4. 16. Dec. 69. Hil. 39. *Eli. If one binde himself by obligation to I. S. to pay him an 100l. when K. doth come to his house, and at Michaelmas then next following 100l. more; Michaelmas then next following shall be taken for next following the making of the obligation, and not next following the coming of K. to his house. Broo. Oblis 59.

If one bind himself to pay mony upon a single obligation, and doth not say when; in this case it must be paid presently.

If one bind himself by obligation to pay money at Michaelmas, and doth not say which Michaelmas, this shall be taken for Michaelmas next after the date of the obligation. And so also it shall be taken in the condition of an obligation. If one bind himself to pay at severall day. See Brownlows rep. 1 part. 64. 2 part. 98, 99. Dier. 128. If one bind himself to pay 20l. in the yeare of our Lord which shall be 1599 in and upon the thirteenth of October next ensuing the date of the obligation; this shall be taken to be due the 13 of October 1599. and not next after the obligation. See more infra: Agree M. 9 Jac. B: R.

7. How an Obligation with a condition, or the Condition of an Obligation shall bee taken. And how it must & ought to be performed.

The condition of an obligation when it is doubtfull, is alwaies taken most favourably for the obligor, in whose advantage it is made, and most against the obligee, yet so as an equall and reasonable construction be made according to the minds of the parties, albeit the words sound to a contrary understanding: Hill: 37 Eli: B: R: Sharpus versus Hanchington: Dier: 14: 51:

First in respect of the persons that are to doe the thing.

If something be by a condition to be done, and it is set down indefinitely, and not set down who shall do it, if the obligee hath more skill to do the thing then the obligor, it shall be done by him; otherwise it shall be done by the obligor: as if a tailor be bound to me in an obligation with condition, that if I bring him three yards of Cloth which shall be measured and shaped, and if he make me a Cloak of it &c: and it is not said by whom it shall be shaped, this must be done by the Tailor: See more in Brownlows rep. 1: part 76: and in Acts: Perk Self: 785:

Secondly in respect of the time when the thing is to be done.

If the condition of an obligation be to pay mony, or doe any other transitory act to the obligee himself, and no time is set for the doing thereof, but a place only; this regularly must be done in convenient time, and that without request: So also in case where the thing to be done is in its nature locall, but yet such a thing as may be done in the absence of the obligee, and without his concurrence, as to acknowledge satisfaction on a Judgement, make a lease for years or the like, it must be done in convenient time and that without request. So also in case where the thing to be done is locall, and the concurrence of both parties necessary thereunto, yet when it is to be done to a stranger and not to the obligee, as if the condition be that the obligor shall make a Feoffment to I. S. it must be done in convenient time without request.

But where the thing to be done is locall, and the concurrence of both parties necessary thereunto, and the act is to be done by the obligor himself, or by a stranger to the obligee himself, as where the condition is that the obligor, or a stranger, shall enfeoff the obligee; in this case the obligor, or the stranger shall have time to do it during his life, unless the obligee do hasten it by request, and if he request it sooner, then it must be done in convenient time after request made. And yet if the thing to be done, be to be done wholly by the obligor, or a stranger, and doth nothing concern the obligee, as where the condition is that the obligor shall goe to Rome, or that I. S. shall preach at Pauls Cross, or the like; in the first case it may be done at any time during the life of the obligor, and in the last case it may be done at any time during the life of I. S. and request in this case shall not hasten it. See Brownl. 1. part. 73. 74.

If one be bound to pay 10l. or to enfeoff one upon the return of I. S. from Rome, in this case if I. S. die before he return from Rome, there the obligation is saved though the 10l. be not paid. But if it be to pay 10l. or to enfeoff before Michaelmas, if the obligor dye before Michaelmas, his executors must pay the 10l. By Popham Justices, Goldb. 192:

If an obligation be with condition to grant a rent, or an annuity to the obligee during his life, to be paid at Easter, and no time is set for the doing of it; this rent must be granted before Easter next after the obligation, or else the obligation will be forfeit. And if the condition be to grant an Advowson, and no time is set for the doing thereof; It must be done before the Church become voyd, or otherwise the obligation shall be forfeit. Co. 2. 80. Super Litem. 208.

If the condition be to do a thing upon a day in the yeare, and there be two daies of that name in the yeare; in this case it seems it must be done that day that is furthest off from the time of the making of the obligation, especially if that day be the more notorious of the two daies. Dier. 77.

If the condition be to pay 10l. the eleventh of May next following, and the obligation is dated the 5 of May; in this case the money must be paid the 11 day of the same Month of May, and not of the next Month of May. Adjung. M. 20. Jac. B. R. Prescotts Case.

If one be bound upon the Feast day of St. Michael to pay money upon the Feast day of St. Michael next coming; this shall be understood the 12. month after, and not that very day so if one be bound in Lent to pay money in the 4 week of Lent next to come; this shall be paid that Lent come 12 Month. Goldsb. 137. Pl. 40.

If the condition be to permit the obligor to thresh and carry away the Corn in the Barne of the obligee from time to time and at all times convenient, in this case the obligee shall have time for any time of continuance more then two or three years &c. but otherwise perhaps if the words be [within time convenient] but he cannot take it a way on the Sabbath day or in the night, but he shall break his Bond. Goldsb. 77. pl. 81.

If the Condition be to stand to the award of I. S. and I. S. award money to be paid, but set no time for the payment of it; this must be paid in convenient time; else the obligation shall be forfeit. 22 Ed. 4. 25.

If one be bound to me in an obligation with condition, that if I enfeoffe him of White acre, he will pay me 10l; but doth not say when; this must be done as soon as I make him the Feoffment. So if one be bound to me that if the goods, I have delivered to B. shall be lost, that C. shall satisfy me for them, and doth not say when; this shall be presently after the losing. Parks. 508. 797. 799.

If the condition be to pay I. S. money when he shall come to the age of 21 years; in this case it must be paid the very day I. S. doth come to his full age, and payment after is not a sufficient performance of the condition. N. 2 Jac. B. R. Granddenes Marfess Case.

If the condition be to come at a day to such a place to do a thing, and the thing cannot be done without the concurrence of the other parties; in this case the obligor must stay for the very last instant of the day for his coming; and it seems also he must stay at the place all the day long. *39 El. If the condition be to pay a rent at Michaelmas or within 20 daies after, the obligation is not forfeit before the 20 daies be past. Adjung. 736. 39 Ell.

If one be to do a thing on a day certaine, he may doe it any part of the day whiles the light doth last. And if the Condition be to doe a thing by, or before a day, it may be done the last instant of the day before, and it is sufficient. Broo. Condition. 145.

Dier. 17. Ed. 4. 3.

If the condition of an obligation be to pay money, or doe any like transitory act to the obligee on a day certaine, but no place is set down where it shall be done; in this case it must be done to the person of the obligee wheresoever he be; and for this purpose, the obligor must at his perill seek out the obligee, if he be intra quatuor mania, otherwise the obligation is forfeit; but if the obligee be not within the Kingdom at the time when the thing is to be done, he is not bound to seek him, so neither is the obligation forfeit for not doing of the thing. So if one grant an Annuity to another, and doth not set down where it shall be paid, and gives a Bond with condition for the payment thereof; in this case it must be done to the person of the obligee where ever he be. And the like law is as it seems, where the thing to be done by the condition, is to be done by or to a stranger.

But when the thing the party is bound by the condition to do is Locall, he is not bound to goe any further, or to any other place, but to the place itselfe: And therefore if the condition be to make a Feoffment of a piece of Land, the party that is bound to doe it, is not bound to goe to any other place, but to the piece of land to doe it. And if a man make a Feoffment in Fee, or lease for life or years of land, rendering rent generally, and gives an obligation with condition for the payment of the rent, the Feoffee, or Lessee, is not bound to goe to any place from the Land to seek the Feoffor or Lessor to pay him this rent. *Perk. If the condition be, to deliver 20 quarters of Corn such a day to the obligee, and no place is set down where it shall be delivered; in this case it is sufficient, if the obligor when the Corn is ready, doe give notice thereof to the obligee, and to wish him to appoint a place whereunto the obligor may bring it, and if he refuse to appoint a place, it is at his own perill; or the obligor may bring the corn to the house of the obligee (and this is the safest way) and if the obligee refuse it, the condition is performed, and the obligation is discharged. Perk. Sess. 785.

4. In respect of the thing it self to be done To perform Covenants.

If the condition be to perform all the Covenants in an Indenture; this shall be taken as well for the covenants in Law as for the covenants in Deed. Co. 4. 80. Dier. 257.

If a lease be made of a Manor excepting a Close, and the Lessee make an obligation to the Lessor with condition, that the Lessee shall perform omnia & singula in scriptis prædictis contenta; by this the Close shall be taken to be within the condition, so that if the Lessee disturb the Lessor in the Close excepted, this shall be a breach of the Condition. Plow. 67.

To make a Feoffment, Lease &c.

If the condition be, to make a feoffment to the Obligee of Land; in this case the Feoffment may be made with, or without writing, and if it be made by writing, it may be made without any warranty or covenants, and this will be a sufficient performance of the condition: See covenant. Numb. 6.

To make a Release, or other assurance.

If the condition be, that the obligor shall make a Lease to the obligee for 20 years and it is not set down when the Lease shall begin, it shall begin presently. See more in Brownl. 1. part. 84: 94. 91: 92. Co. 6. 33.

If the condition be, that the obligor shall doe any act upon request that the Counsel of the obligee shall think reasonable, as for example, shall doe any act &c. for the releasing of an obligation, wherein the obligee is bound to the obligor, and the obligee by advice of Counsel deviseth and requesteth a release of all demands to the obligee, and to J. S. in this case the obligor may refuse to seale it, albeit it be devised by the Counsel of the obligee, because it is unreasonable, for it must be a reasonable act that the obligor by this condition is bound to doe. Dier. 218.

To pay money or acnt.

If the condition be to pay 10l. at Michaelmas next, and 10l. yearly after, until J. S. be made Knight; in this case albeit J. S. be made Knight before Michaelmas, yet the first 10l. at Michaelmas must be paid. See more in Brownlows. Rep. 1. part. 104: 103. 113. Adind. Hil 39 Eli. Co. B.

To warrant land and for quiet enjoying.

If the Condition of an obligation from A. to B. be thus; that whereas A. hath sold to B. a certain Meadow in Dale, that the said A. shall warrant the same against Lord and King and all others, if the said B. shall peaceably enjoy it to him, and his heires of the Lord of the Mannor of M. by the services due after the custom &c. in this case the substance of this being for quiet enjoying, it shall be extended that way; and albeit it be not said what he shall warrant; yet it shall be taken the Land in question, and the warranty shall be construed to last only for the life of B. and not to extend to any new titles after the Covenant, especially such as are by the act and default of the obligee himself, as if he commit a forfeiture and the Lord enter, or the like. Dier. 41: 43.

If the condition be, That the Obligor shall sufficiently prove such a thing; this shall be taken for proof by enquest, and accordingly it must be done: But if the condition be that it shall be done by such a time, or before such persons as when or where such proof cannot be had, then it is otherwise. Where the word [proof] is put generally, it shall be understood of proof by Justice; but when the parties agree upon another form of proof, that shall prevail against that which is but instruction of Law. If the condition of an Obligation be, That the Obligor shall infeoffe the Obligee and such others, as he shall name by a day; in this case the Obligee must doe the first act, viz. name the others; otherwise the Obligor doth not forfeit his Obligation by the not doing of it: But if the condition be to infeoffe me, or such others as I shall name before such a day; in this case if I do not name others, it seems he must infeoffe me before the day at his perill.

If the condition be, that the Obligor shall make such an estate of Land as I. S. shall advise, I S. must first advise, and this must be made known unto the Obligor ere he is bound to doe any thing, and if he never advise, he is never bound to doe any thing; for it is in this case, as if one be bound to stand to the award of I S. and I S. never make any, or make a void award which is all one. Co. 5. 25. 7. Ed. 4. 13. Park, Sess. 775.

If the condition be, to make such a discharge in such a court as the Obligee or his counsel shall advise; in this case the Obligee must first act, viz. advise and give notice of the advise to the Obligor before he is bound to doe the thing: But if the condition be to make such a discharge in such a Court such a day, as the Judge of that Court shall advise, in this case the Obligor must at his perill procure the Judge to advise a discharge, and it must be done that very day, or the obligation will be forfeit, Co. 5. 23.

If the condition be, to pay 10l. to the Obligee when he doth come to London; in this case, the Obligee must doe the first act, viz. make known to the Obligor when he doth first come to London; for otherwise, it seems the Obligor is not bound to pay the money. Per Just. Nichols Id. 13. *La. If the condition be, that the Obligor shall deliver 20 Clothes to the Obligee such a day, the Obligee paying for every cloth immediately after the delivery 10l. in this case the clothes must be delivered, altho the Obligor refuse to pay the money; but if [immediately after] he left out, it seems the Obligor is not bound to deliver the cloth unless the Obligee first pay the money. 21 Ed. 4. 13. per Just. Id. 13.

If the condition be, that the Obligor and his Heirs shall at any time upon request made, doe any act, &c. that the Obligee shall require, &c. and the Obligee tender a Release or other Deed to seale; in this case, if the Obligor or his heir that is to seale the Deed, be an illiterate man, he may refuse to seale it until he can get some body to read it unto him; but he may not refuse or delay to seale it until he can have a Lawyers advise upon it; but he will forfeit his Obligation; CA. 12. per Just. Dyer 337.

If the condition be, to doe any thing upon request, the Obligor untill request made is not bound to doe any thing towards it, neither can he forfeit his obligation till then.

And yet if in this case, the Obligor disable himself to doe the thing he hath undertaken to doe upon request before the request made the obligation may be forfeit without any request made. Park. Sect. 77. Co. 5. 21.

If the condition be, that the Obligor shall within a certain time surrender such land of his for an Annuity, of so much as they shall agree upon; and they agree upon 10 l. per annum; in this case the Obligor is not bound to make the surrender untill the Annuity be made and tendered unto him. 14. H. 8.

If the condition be, to deliver to the Obligee an obligation wherein the Obligee is bound &c. or to seale and deliver to the Obligee such a release of it as shall be devised by the counsell of the Obligee before Michaelmas, and the counsell doe not advise any Release before Michaelmas; in this case the Obligor is discharged of the obligation, for the Obligee is to doe the first act. *Hil. 37. If A be bound to B, in an obligation with condition that A and his wife shall levie a fine of Land to C and D and their Heirs, and at their costs and charges; this shall be construed to be at the costs of the Obligor, and not at the costs of the Confees; but if the word [and] be omitted, perhaps it may be otherwise. Trin. 4. Jac. B. R.

If the condition be thus; That if the wife die before Michaelmas without issue of her body then living, that the obligation shall bee void; in this case [then living] shall relate ad proximum antecedens, and not to the death of the wife, [and therefore] if she hath issue and die, and after before Michaelmas the issue dyeth also, the obligation is void. Dier. 17.

If the condition be, that if the Obligor shall waste the goods of the Obligee (his master) and this waste within three Moneths after due proof of it, either by confession or otherwise be notified to the Obligor, that the Obligor shall satisfy the Obligee for it, and the Obligor doe confess the waste under his hand and seale; in this case, it seems this proof though it be extrajudicialis is sufficient. Gold case M. 13. 12.

Conditions Impossible.

When the condition of an obligation is to doe two things by a day, and at the time of Making of the obligation both of them are possible, but after and before the time when the time is to be done, one of the things is become impossible by the act of God, or by the sole act and factes of the Obligee himself; in this case the Obligor is not bound to doe the other thing that is possible, but is discharged of the whole obligation. But if at the time of the making of the obligation one of the things is, and the other of the things is not possible to be done, he must perform that which is possible. And if in the first case one of the things become impossible afterwards by the act of the Obligor, or a stranger, the Obligor must see that he doe the other thing as he can. And when the condition of an obligation is to doe one single thing which afterwards before the time when it is to be done doth become impossible to be done in all or in part, the obligation is wholly discharged; and yet if it be possible to be done in any part, it shall be performed as near to the condition as may be. Co. 5. 26. super Lit. 20. Dyce 162. 15. H. 7. 2. 4. H. 7. 4.

If the condition be to doe one of two things, as to make a Feoffment to me, or pay me 10 l. in this case, if the Obligor doe either of them, it is sufficient. But if the condition be in the copulative, as to enfeoff me and pay me 10 l. in this case, the doing of one of them will not suffice, but he must doe both. 21. Ed. 3. 29.

If the condition be to pay, to A and B 10 l. a piece within a week after they come to 18 years of age; within 40 dayes after their dayes of marriage after notice given thereof, which shall first happen; in this case, this notice must goe to both the parties, so that notice must be given when they are 18 years of age; otherwise, and untill notice given, it seems the Obligor is not bound to pay the money. The

The matter of a condition of an obligation is sometimes affirmative and compulsory and doth consist of something to be done, and sometimes it is negative and restrictive and doth consist of something not to be done; the not doing in the first case, and doing in the latter case causeth the obligation to be forfeit, and the doing in the first case, and not doing in the latter, saveth the obligation.

If one be bound in an obligation to me, with condition to enfeof me of Land, and the obligor doe first make a Lease to me of it, and afterwards he doth make a Release of it to me and my heirs this is a good performance of the condition. See more in Brownlow's Rep. 1 part 62. Co. super Lis. 207. plow. 6. 7. 17 Ed. 4. 3.

If the condition be to make me a Feoffment of Land and he tender me a Feoffment, and I refuse it; by this the condition is performed. So if the condition be, to make a Feoffment to my use, and when it is made I refuse it; this is a good performance of the condition. But if a man bind himself in an obligation to me, with condition to make Feoffment to a stranger, and he tender the Feoffment to the stranger and he doth refuse it; this is no good performance of the condition, but the obligation is forfeit. If the condition be, to enfeof me and my wife, and he tender it to me, and I refuse it; it seemes; this is a good performance. Perk. Sess. 784. Fixe. Barre 82. Perk. Sess. 758. 15 Ed. 4. 5.

If one bind himself in an obligation to me, with condition to make me a Feoffment of the Mannor of Dale by a day, and he before the day, grant a rent-charge out of the same mannor to a stranger, and afterwards and before the day also, he doth make me a Feoffment of the land; this is a good performance of the condition, and the grant of the rent no breach thereof. But if the Obligor sell away part of the Mannor before, or make a Feoffment to me but of a moiety or a third part of the Mannor; this is no good performance of the condition. And if in this case, the Obligor before the day take a wife, and before the day make his Feoffment according to the condition, but the marriage doth continue untill after the day; in this case, it seems the condition is broken. 3 H. 7. 4. 4 H. 7. 4. Perk. Sess. 757.

If the condition be; that the Obligor shall enfeof me of the Mannor of Dale, and he make a Feoffment of the Mannor of Sale, and I accept thereof; it seems this is no performance of the condition, and that my acceptance in this case will not help. So if the condition be to make me a Feoffment of Land, and he give me money, a horse or the like in recompence of this, and I accept thereof; this is no good performance of the condition: And the like Law is in all cases where the condition is to doe any collaterall thing, as to account, build a house, enter into a Recognition, or the like, and the Obligor doth give, and the Obligee accept some other thing in lieu thereof: And so also it is where the condition is to make a Feoffment to a stranger, and the Obligor give, and the stranger take another thing in lieu thereof.

But if the condition be to enfeof me of land such a day, and he make, and I take the Feoffment before the day; this is a good performance of the condition. Perk. Sess. 749. 759. Dyer 1. Perk. Sess. 751. 9 H. 7. 17. 3 H. 7. 4. 27. H. 8. 10. 14. H. 8. 15. 10 H. 7. 14.

If the condition be to enfeof me or my Heirs in the disjunctive, and the Obligor enfeof me and my Heirs; this is a good performance of the condition; for it is impossible to enfeof my Heirs while I live, and when two things are to be done by a condition, whereof the one is possible at the time of making the obligation, and the other is not; in this case it is sufficient if he doe the thing which is possible. 14 H. 8. 15. Co. 5. 112.

If the condition be, to make me a Feoffment, or pay me 20l. if the Obligor doe either of them, it is sufficient.

But if the condition be to enfeof me, and pay me 20l. in this case the Obligor must doe both, or the condition will not be performed. Ex. de assibus. 21 Ed. 3. 39.

If the condition be, that the Obligor shall make me an estate of Land, and make the estate to another by my appointment; it seems this is no performance of the condition. Fitz. Barre. 55.

If the condition be, that the Obligor or his Feoffees in trust shall make an estate to the Obligee such a day, and the Feoffees doe it without the consent of the Obligor; this is no performance of the condition. See more in Brown. 1 part. 69: 75. Trin. 17. Ia. Br.

To make further assurance.

If the condition be, to make further assurance, and the Obligor make further assurance upon condition, without the agreement of the other party; this is no good performance of the condition. Pasche 8. Ia. Co. B.

To save harms.

If the condition be, to save me harmless from an Annuity wherewith my land is charged, and the Obligor doth pay the same yearly, and get me an Acquittance for the same from the party; this is a good performance of the condition. But if the condition be to discharge me of such an Annuity; in this case, payment and procuring me a Release, is no good performance of the condition. 37. H. 6. 18. Perk. Sess. 792.

To grant a rent, or to procure a rent to be granted.

If the condition be, that the Feoffees or Lessees of the Obligor of such Land which they have in trust shall grant me a rent-charge or release their right to me before such a day, and there be three Feoffees, or Lessees, and two of them only doe grant this rent, or make this Release; this is no good performance of the condition. Perk. Sess. 790. Fitz. Barre 72

If the condition be, that the Obligor shall purchase and procure to me and my heirs a rent of 5 l. per annum, and a stranger hath such a rent out of my Land, and he doth get him to release this to me; this is a good performance of the condition; And if one be bound with condition to grant me the rent and farm of such a Mill before Michaelmas, to be had and perceived untill I be paid 10 l. and before that time he lease the Mill to me at a rent, and then suffer me to detain so much of the rent; it seems this is a good performance of the condition. See more in Brownlow 1 part 75.

To deliver a horse.

If the condition be to deliver me a horse, and the Obligor tender the horse unto me, and I refuse him; hereby the condition is performed; and so in all such like cases where the Obligor is to doe any collateral thing, as stand to an award, or the like; if the Obligor offer to doe it, and the Obligee refuse, the condition is performed, and the Obligation discharged for ever. Co. super Litt. 207.

Tender and Refusal.

To pay money

If the condition be, to pay money at a day certain, and the Obligor pay a link before night, time enough for the receiver to see to number his money by day light; this is a good performance of the condition. And if the condition be to pay money by, or before a day; payment the last instant of the day before is a sufficient performance of the condition. Dyer 17. super Litt. 202. Broo. Condition 145.

If it be to pay money to a man and his wife, payment to the man is a good performance. Goldsb. 73. pl. 16.

Acceptance.

If the condition be, to pay me a sum of money at a day certaine, and the Obligor pay me less money before the day, or all the money before or at the day, or give me something else before, or at the day of payment in lieu thereof, or pay me all the money or a lesser sum at the day appointed, but in another place, and not the place mentioned in the condition, & I accept thereof; in all these cases the condition is well performed. But if a stranger to the condition doe so, and I accept thereof; this is no good performance of the condition as hath been adjudged. And if the Obligor pay less then the whole money at the day of payment, and the Obligee accept thereof; this is no good performance of the condition. And if the thing to be done be a collateral thing, as to account, or the like, and the Obligor give unto the Obligee money, or a horse in lieu thereof, and the Obligee accept it; this is no good performance of the condition. *Perk. And if the obligor pay the money to the obligee after the day of payment, this is no performance of the condition, but the obligation is forfeit, and the money paid shall goe in part towards the forfeiture. And yet in this case the Defendant at this day being sued upon this obligation, doth usually adventure to plead conditions performed, and give this speciall matter in evidence to the Jury, who for the most part doth find against the obligee. And yet if the condition be, to pay me money at a day certaine, or to pay another money at a day certaine, and the obligor pay me or the stranger at severall times before the day, and I, or the stranger accept thereof, this is a good performance of the condition. But if the obligee doe only promise to accept of a horse for his money at the time of payment, and when the time of payment comes, and tender of the horse is made to him, he doth refuse him; this tender is not a sufficient performance of the condition. *Perk. Tender and Refusall.

If the condition be, to pay money at a day and place certaine, and the obligor tender it at the time and place, and the obligee is not ready to receive it; or being ready, doth refuse to receive it; this is a good performance of the condition to save the forfeiture of the obligation. And yet if the obligor be afterwards sued for this money, he must say in his pleading, that he is still ready to pay it, and he must tender it in court. But if one be bound by a single obligation to pay money, and after at the same or some other time, he hath a defeasance from the obligee, that upon payment of a lesser summe the obligation shall be void; and the obligee refuse the money when the same is tendered at the time when by the Defeasance it is to be paid; in this case the obligor is not bound to tender the money in Court, neither hath the obligee any remedy for it. Co. super Litt. 208, 209. 27 H. 8. 10. Perk. Sect. 784.

If the condition be, to pay me money at a day and place certaine, and the obligor doth tender it to me the same day in another place, this is no performance of the condition, and therefore in that case I may refuse it. 41 Ed. 3. 25.

If the condition be, to pay money between two daies; payment of the money upon either of those daies is not a good performance of the condition, but the payment must bee between the two daies. Dier. 17.

If the condition be, to pay me money at a day certaine, and I bid the obligor pay the money to one that I doe owe so much more unto, or I bid him lay out the money for mee, or I bid him keep it for such a debt I owe unto him, and he doe so, and I accept hereof, it seems this is a good performance of the condition. Perk. Sect. 748. 27 H. 6. 6. Fitz. Bar. 43.

If the condition be, to pay me money, and I appoint another to receive it, and the obligor pay it unto him; this is a good performance of the condition.

If the condition be, that a stranger shall pay to the obligee 10l. and the obligee accept a horse for it, this is a good performance of the condition. But if the condition be that one stranger shall pay to another stranger 10l. and the one doth give, and the other take a horse in lieu of this; this is no good performance of the condition. See more of this in acceptance, Sect. 3. Co. super. Litt. 208, 209, Dier. 56.

Acceptance.

If the condition be, to pay me 20l. of lawfull English money, and the obligor pay me in Spanish or in any other money currant in this Realm, this is a good performance of the condition. But payment in farthings is no good payment. If the condition be, to pay me 20l. and the obligor pay me some of the 20l. in counterfeit pieces, which I not perceiving at the time, doe put up and accept, but after upon a review I doe perceive some of them to be naught, and thereupon I doe send it back to him again, in this case it seems the condition is well performed, and therefore the sending back of the money againe will not cause a breach afterwards. New Terms of the Law. tit. Coins. Per. Just. Bridgman and Curia in the Marches of Wales. 8. Terms of the Law. Idem.

If the condition be, that I shall stand to the award of J. S. and he doth award mee to pay 20l. to W. S. by a day, and at the day I doe tender him the 20l. but he doth refuse it; in this case I have sufficiently performed the condition, and the obligation is saved. See more in Brownlow's 3 part 48. 23 Ed. 4. 2.

FFFF

If the condition be, that I shall stand to the award of J. S. and he saith that I shall enter a Retraite in a suit depending between me and the other party, and I do not so, but am Nonsumit, or do discontinue my Suit; this is no good performance of the condition. 21 Ed. 4. 25.

To shew a Release.

If the condition be that the obligor shall come such a day to such a place and shew me a Release, and he doth come to the place the latter part of the day, and doth stay there until the light of the day be gone, ready to shew his Release, but I come not thither: this is a good performance of the condition. 21 Ed. 4. 42.

For quiet enjoyment.

If one make a lease of land to me, and bind himself in an obligation with condition to suffer me quietly to enjoy the land without the let of him or any other: in this case if he himself, nor any other by his inticement doe disturb me, the condition is performed; and if a stranger that hath title, doe enter without his procurement or occasion, this is no breach of the condition. Dier. 255. 17 Ed. 4. 3.

To appeare.

If the condition be, to appear in the Kings Bench such a day, to answer J. S. and at the day the obligor doth appeare, but the Plaintiff is essoined so that the defendant cannot answer him, or the suit is discontinued by the demise of the King before the day of appearance; in these cases the condition is performed and the obligation lived. But if the obligor in this case when he doth appeare, doth not cause his appearance to be entred of Record, the obligation is forfeit. Park. Sess. 760. 758. 2 Ed. 4. 3.

If the condition be to appear coram domino Rege, and the obligor appeare before the Kings Person; this is no performance of the condition. And if the condition be, to appear coram Justiciariis Domini Regis, and the obligor appeare before them out of Court; this is no performance of the condition. 8 H. 4. 6.

To make a Bond.

If the condition be, that a stranger shall make an obligation to the Obligee, and the stranger tender it, and the obligee refuse it; this is a good performance of the condition. But if the condition be, that the obligor shall make an obligation to a stranger, and the obligor tender it, and the stranger refuse it; this is no performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 268. 269. 10 H. 6. 16. 27. H. 8. 1.

To marry a woman.

If the condition be, that the obligor shall marry the daughter of the obligee by a day, and he doth tender himself, and she doth refuse; in this case the obligation is forfeit, notwithstanding this tender and refusal. Park. Sess. 758. 4 H. 7. 3.

To leave a Possession.

If the condition be, to deliver the key of a house, and the quiet possession to J. S. to the use of the obligee, and the obligor the house being rid, and every one out of the house, and the doot locked, doth deliver the key to J. S. it seems this is a good performance of the condition, but that J. S. or the obligee, or his deputy ought to come and receive the possession. See more in Condition at Numb. 9. and Coram. 8.

9 When a single Obligation shall be said to be broken and forfeit, or not.

If an obligation that is single, be not performed, as when it is to pay money at a day, and the money is not paid, the obligation is broken. But if a man be bound by an obligation to pay money at severall daies, the obligation is not forfeit, nor can be sued untill all the daies be past. And yet if the condition of an obligation be to pay money at severall daies, and the obligor doe fail to pay the money the first day, in this case the obligee may sue for the money due by the obligation presently. Ca. 8 153. super Litt. 292. F. N. B. 167.

If one be bound to pay money at a day certaine by a single obligation or Bill, and the obligor tender the money at the day to the obligee, so as he will give him his Bill or a Release for the money, and the obligee refuse so to doe, and thereupon he doth refuse to pay the money; in this case the obligation is not forfeit; for in this case the obligor is not bound to pay the money, unless the Obligee will give up his Bill or give him a release. But otherwise it is in case where one is bound to pay money by the Condition of an obligation; for there the obligor must pay the money at his perill, albeit the obligee refuse to deliver up the obligation or to give a release. Brook. Oblig. 62. Fair. 105. Fine. verast. 13.

10. When the condition of an obligation shall be said to be broken and the obligation forfeit, or not.

If one be bound to pay money on a single Bill at a day, and the obligor tender the money at the day to the obligee, and he refuse it; in this case, it seems he hath no remedy for his money; See quare.

In all causes when the condition is not performed or broken, the obligation is forfeit, and till then it cannot be forfeit. And therefore, if one be bound in an obligation obligation, with condition to pay me 10*l*. at Easter, before the day come, the obligation cannot be forfeit; but if it be not paid at the day, the obligation is forfeit. And yet if the obligee himself be the cause of the breach of the condition, or the thing to be done by the condition, is now become impossible by the act of God, the obligation is now become without penalty. As if in the old days I had been bound in an obligation to an Abbot, that A. should enfeoff him before Christmas, if A. enter into Religion, my Bond had been presently forfeited. But otherwise it had been if A. had been professed under the obedience of the obligee himself. See more in Brownlow's Rep. 1 part. 64. 61. Bro. Oblig. 17. 4 H. 7. 4.

To make a Feoffment.

If the condition be to make a Feoffment of land to me, such a day, and he be not upon the land ready to make the Feoffment, albeit I come not there to receive it, yet the condition is broken. Perk. Sell. 768. 769.

If the condition be that when the obligor shall come to his Aunt, he will enfeoff the obligee, or the heirs of his body, in this case he must do it as soon as he doth come to her, and the obligee shall request the Feoffment, or the obligation is forfeit. 21 Ed. 3. 29. Cook, 5. 112.

If the condition be to enfeoff me of a Manor by a day, and before the day the obligor doth make a Feoffment of it to another, hereby the condition is broken, and the obligation forfeit, and though the obligor repurchase it againe before the day, and then make the Feoffment, yet this will not cure the breach. 21 Ed. 4. 55.

If the condition be, to enfeoff B. and C. and one of them die before the time be past wherein it should be done, in this case hee must enfeoff the survivor of them, or the condition is broken. 4 H. 7. 4.

If the condition be, that if the obligor before Michaelmas make a lease to the obligee for thirty one years, if A. will assent, and if he will not assent then for twenty one years, that then &c. if A. do not assent, and the Lease for twenty one years be not made before Michaelmas, the obligation is forfeit. Dier. 347.

To make a Lease.

If the condition be that the Obligor shall make me an estate upon request, and he tender me an estate before I request it, and afterwards I doe request it, and he doth refuse it, in this case the condition is broken, and the obligation forfeit. 7 H. 6. 24.

To make an Estate.

If the condition be that the obligor shall make me a good estate of land (being Copi-hold land) and he doth surrender it absolutely, and the Homage when they present it, doe present it conditionally; this is no breach of the condition. Pafche. 8. Ca. B. Jac.

If the condition be to make a good estate of land in Fee-simple to A. (a woman) before such a time, and before such time the obligor taketh A. to wife, and the day past, and no estate is made; in this case the condition is broken, and the obligation forfeit. But if the obligation be made to the woman herselfe, then it is dispensed with by the inter-marriage. 4 H. 7. 4. Kel.

If the condition be, that the obligor and his son shall doe all such acts for the better assuring of land, as the obligee or his Counsell shall devise, and the obligee devise and tender a Release to the obligor and his son to seale, and they delay and refuse to seale it untill they can shew it to their Counsell to be advised upon it, this is a breach of the condition; but if they be illiterate and refuse to seale it untill they can get it read; this is no breach of the condition, See more in Brownlow's Rep. 1. part. 70. Ca. 1. 3. Dier. 337.

To make further assurance.

If the condition be, that the obligor shall save the obligee harmless from such a debt, for which the obligee is surety for the obligor, and the obligee cometh at the time, and to the place when and where the money, for which he is engaged, is to be paid, and finding no body ready to pay the money, he doth pay it himself to save the forfeiture of the obligation; hereby the condition to save harmless is broken, and the obligation forfeit. And therefore much more if the obligee be sued, arrested, outlawed, or taken in Execution for the debt of the principall. So also if the obligee be put in feare of arrest for the debt of the principall, and therefore dare not goe about his business, by this the condition is broken. But if the obligee be sued unjustly, either because he is sued before the money is due, or otherwise, or if the bond in which he is bound, be against law and void, and he suffer himself to be unjustly vexed thereupon

To save harmless.

If the condition be, that I shall give me licence to goe over his ground, and I do so, but another doth interrupt me; this is no breach of the condition. And yet if the condition be that I shall have licence to goe over that ground, there perhaps such an interruption may be a breach of the condition. 18 Ed. 4. 23.

If an obligation be made to me with condition to appear in such a Court such a day, and at the day he is kept in prison at my suit so as he cannot appear; in this case his not appearance is no breach of the condition; for his imprisonment shall excuse him: But if his imprisonment be for Felony, or any other such like cause of his own; contra. First Barre. 60.

To appear.

If the condition be, to appear in such a Court such a day, and before the day a Sheriff doth come to the Sheriff; yet if the Obligor do not appear, the obligation is forfeit. Dyer 35.

If the condition be, that the Obligor shall ride with I S to Dover such a day, and I S doth not go thither that day, in this case it seems the condition is broken, and that he must procure I S to go thither and ride with him at his perill. Per. 1st.

To ride to Dover.

If I make a Lease for years, and the Lessee doth enter into an obligation with condition that he shall not alien the land demised without my licence; and I die, and then he doth alien it; it seems this is a breach of the condition. Per. 1st. 21.

Not to alien.

If the condition be that I S shall serve me in all my honest and lawful commands, or that I S shall be a good and honest servant to me one year; in the first case if I command him nothing, the condition is not broken, albeit he never tender his service; but in the last case it seems he is to tender his service to me, or otherwise the condition will be broken. But if I refuse his service when it is tendered, or he die within the time, the obligation is discharged. And yet if he depart away within the time, the condition is broken. Per. 1st. 772, 6 Ed. 4. 23.

To serve.

If the condition be that A shall marry B by a day, and before the day the Obligor himself doth marry her; in this case the condition is broken. But if the Obligor marry her before the day, the obligation is discharged. Per. 1st. 79.

To marry a woman.

If the condition be, to performe the covenants and payement of a deed; and the deed doth containe a Feoffment, and this is on condition that if the Feoffor pay such a sum of money he shall reenter, and he doth not pay it in this case this nonpayment is no breach of the condition. But if A let Land by Indenture to B for years rendering rent, and B doth bind himself in an obligation with condition to performe the covenants contained in the Indenture, and the rent is unpaid; this is a breach of the condition and cause of forfeiture of the obligation. To performe covenants.

If the condition be for the safe keeping of prisoners, and one doth escape that is in execution, and in prison under colour of an excothion, or the like; but in truth and in judgement of Law is no prisoner; this escape is no breach of the condition. If the condition of an obligation consist of two parts in the disjunctive, or be to do one of two things before, or at a day certain, and both the things are possible at the time of the making of the obligation; and before the time of performance one of the things is become impossible to be done by the act of God, or by the act of the Obligor himself; in this case the obligation is discharged for ever. And therefore if the condition be, That if the Obligor shall sell away his wives Land, if then he shall die in his life time purchase to his wife and her heirs and assigns Land of as good right and value as the money by him received; or had by or upon the said sale shall amount unto, or he do and shall leave unto her the said Land Excothion by legacy or otherwise as much money as shall be by him received upon such sale. Then the Obligor doth sell his wives Land; and then his wife doth die before him so that he cannot leave her the money; in this case the obligation is discharged, and the husband is not bound to purchase Land to her and her heirs. Comdike's 167.

11. By what means and when an Obligation good in his original creation, doth or may become void, bee discharged or gone by matter ex post facto. Or not.

So if the condition be, that if I S do not prove the suggestion of a Bill depending in the Court of requests before the feast of Hilary, that then he shall pay 10*l*. etc. and I S die before the time: hereby the obligation is discharged for ever, and he is not bound to pay the 10*l*. Co. 5. 22. 15 H. 7. 21. So if the condition be that if the Obligor appear in the Kings Bench in Easter Terme, or pay 10*l*. to the Oblige at Michaelmas, and the Obligor die before Easter Terme, hereby the obligation is discharged: but if he do not appear in Easter Terme and out-live the Term, and die after, then it seems the 10*l*. must be paid at Michaelmas, for the obligation is forfeit. So if the condition be that the Obligor shall marry A before Easter, or pay 10*l*. to the Oblige at Michaelmas, and A die, or become madd before Easter, or the Oblige marry A himself, and the marriage doth continue between them untill Easter be past: in all these cases the obligation is discharged for ever. But when the thing is become impossible by the act or laches of the Obligor, the Law is otherwise: And therefore if the condition be, that A shall marry with B before Easter, or that the Obligor shall pay unto the Oblige 10*l*. at Michaelmas, and the Obligor himself marry with B, and the marriage doth continue untill after Easter; hereby the obligation is not discharged. So if the condition be to deliver up an obligation before Easter, or give a release at Michaelmas, and the Obligor doth lose the obligation, or the obligation is burnt, hereby the obligation is not discharged, for if he doth not make the release at Michaelmas, he doth forfeit the obligation. *Dyer. 262. 15 H. 7. 4. 1. H. 7. 4. 1. Agree by 1*st* in Bathurst case.*

If the condition of an obligation consist of one part only, or be to do one thing at a time certain, and that thing at the time of the obligation made is possible to be done, but afterwards and before the time when it is performed it doth become impossible by the act of God, or the act of the Oblige; in this case also the obligation is gone and discharged for ever. And therefore if the condition be to appear in person such a day in such a Court, and before the day the Obligor die, or at the day the water doth arise so high that he cannot travell to the place without perill of life, in these cases the obligation is discharged. So if the condition, that A shall marry A before Easter, and before the time A or B die, or become madd, or the Oblige marry A, and the marriage doth continue untill after the day: in all these cases the obligation is discharged. But if the thing become impossible by the act of the Obligor, contra. And therefore if the condition be, that the obligor shall appear such a day, and before, and at the day he is imprisoned through some default of his own, so that he cannot appear, this will not excuse him, no more then in case where he is so sick that he cannot appear without perill of his life. So if the condition be that A shall marry C before Easter, and the obligor himself marry her, and the marriage doth continue untill after the time: in this case the obligation is forfeit. So if the condition give the obligor time all his life time to do the thing, the obligation is not discharged by his death, but in this case he must do it during his life time at his perill. *8 Ed. 4. 21. If the condition be that the obligor shall deliver to the obligee an obligation or such a release as the counsell of the obligee shall devise before Michaelmas, and the counsell of the obligee devise no release before Michaelmas: hereby the obligation is gone for ever. *Adjudged 37. If the obligation depend upon, or be necessary to some other deed, and that Deed become void, in this case the obligation is become void also; as if the condition of the obligation be to perform the Covenants of an Indenture, and afterwards the covenants be discharged or become void: by this means the obligation is discharged and gone for ever. And if one make a lease for years rendering rent, and the Lessee enter into an obligation with condition to pay the rent to the Lessor, and after it fall out so that the Lessee is evicted out of the land by an elder title, whereby the rent in Law is gone: in this case and by this means the obligation is discharged and gone also. If an obligation be made to me, and delivered to I S to my use, and when

By a Release made from the obligee to the obligor, or to one of the obligors, if there be more then one, the obligation may be discharged. And therefore, if an obligation be made to me with condition to pay money, and I by my Deed release it, or acknowledge my self satisfied the Debt, albeit I receive none of it, or but part of it in full satisfaction of the Debt, by this the obligation is discharged for ever. *Fit. If the obligee make the obligor, or one of the obligors, or all the obligors, his Executor, or his Executors; hereby the obligation is discharged for ever. If the condition be to doe two things, or stand upon divers points; and the Obligee supposing the breach of one of them, doth sue the obligor, and the issue being joyned upon that point, it is found against the Plaintiff and he is barred; hereby the whole obligation is discharged; and so long as that Iudgement is in force, he can never sue the obligation upon any other point within the condition. Dyer 371.

Of a Defeasance.

THis in a large sence doth sometimes signifie a condition annexed to an estate, sometimes the condition of an obligation made with, & annexed to the Obligation at the time of making thereof. But it is more peculiarly & properly applyed to such conditionall Instruments as are made in Defeasance and avoidance of Statutes and Recognizances at the time of entering into the same Statutes or Recognizances, and to such conditionall Instruments as are made in Defeasance of Statutes, Obligations, and the like, after the time of the same Statutes entred into, and obligations, &c. made: And it is therefore thus defined.

A Defeasance is a condition relating to a Deed, as to an obligation, Recognizance, Statute, or the like, which being performed by the obligor or Recognisor, the Act is disabled and made void, as if it had never been done; which differeth from a condition only in this that this, is alwaies made at the same time, and annexed to, or inserted in the same Deed, but that is alwaies made in a Deed by it self, and for the most part made after the Deed whereunto it hath relation.

There

2. Where and in what cases a Defeasance may be; and what things may be defeated and avoided thereby; and where, and what not.

There is no Inheritance Executory, as Rents, Annuities, Conditions, Warranties, Covenants, and such like, but may by a Defeasance made with the mutuall consent of all those who were parties to the creation thereof at the same, or at any time after be annulled, discharged and defeated. And so is the Law of Statutes, Recognisances, Obligations, and the like; yet so, as in all these cases regularly, the Defeasance must be made eodem modo as the thing to be defeated was and is created, viz. if the one be by Deed, the other must be so also; for it is a rule, that in all cases when any Executory thing is created by a Deed, that the same thing by the consent of all persons which were parties to the creation of it, may be by their Deed defeated and annulled, and therefore that Warranties, Recognisances, Rents, Charges, Annuities, Covenants, Leases for years, Uses at Common Law, and such like, may by a Defeasance made with the mutuall consent of all those that were parties to the creation of it by Deed, be discharged and avoided. Nihil est tam conveniens naturali equitati quam quod unumquodque dissolvi eo ligamine quo ligatur. And therefore by such a Defeasance, not only the Covenant which doth create; a power of Revocation, but the power it self created, may be utterly defeated and avoided: But estates of Inheritance, and other estates in Taile or for life, executed by Livery, &c. cannot be avoided by Defeasance made after the time of their creation and first making. And yet by another Deed of Defeasance made at the same time, a Feoffment, Release, Lease for life, or other executed thing, may be avoided as well as if it were by condition within the same Deed; as if a Disseisor release to the Disseisor: this Release cannot be defeated by an Indenture of Defeasance made afterwards, but it may be defeated by an Indenture of Defeasance made at the same time. Quae in continenti sunt in esse videntur. Co. super Litt. 236. 237. 1. 111. 112. Plow. 137. 193. 21 H. 7. 23. Bro. Defeasance in toto.

3. What shall be said a good Defeasance, and what not. For the manner of it:

To make a good Defeasance, these things are requisite.

1. That the Defeasance be made eodem modo, as the thing to be defeated is created, for if the obligee by word only discharge the obligor, or grant not to sue him; this will not defeat the obligation; it must be by Deed therefore as the former was, Co. 113.

But whether the Deed of Defeasance be indented or poll is not materiall. Bro. Defeas. 12. Fitz. Bar 93.

2. That if it do recite the Statute or the obligation (as for the most part it doth) that it be done truly; for if a Defeasance be made of a Statute or an obligation which is recited to be made the 10 day of May, whereas in truth it bareth date the first day of May; this defeasance is void. Plow. 393.

3. That it be made between the same persons that were parties to the first Deed, &c. And therefore if A be bound in an obligation to B in 20l. and B make a Defeasance to C, that if C pay him 20l: the obligation made by A shall be void; this is no good Defeasance, because it is not made between the same parties: And yet if a Statute be made to the husband and Wife, and the husband alone joyn in the making of a Defeasance, this is a good Defeasance. 14. H. 8. 10. Bro. Estrangal fait. 10. Bro. rit. Defeasance 3.

4. That it be made after the making of the Recognisance, obligation, &c. and not before; for if A grant to B, that if B will be bound to him in 20l. by obligation, that the obligation shall be void, and after B doth bind himself to A in an obligation of 20l. this defeasance is not good because it is before the obligation Bro. Defeasance 5.

And yet if the date of the defeasance be before the date of the Recognisance, &c. and it be delivered after, it is good enough, Dyer 315.

For the matter of it.

5. That it be made of a thing defeasable, Plow. 137. Bro. Defeasance 1. For if a Disseisor release his right to the Terre-Tenant, and after there is a defeasance made between them, that if the Releasee shall pay 20l to the Releasee, the Release shall be void: this is a void Defeasance.

And yet a Release may be avoided by a condition or Defeasance made at the time of making of a Release as well as a Feoffment. Bro. Defeasance. 6. 9. Co. super Litt. 236.

If the Defeasance of a Recognisance, Obligation &c. be, That if the Cognisor, or Obligor, &c. pay a sum of Money, or do not disturb the Execution of the Will of J. S. or do make a Lease for years to J. S. or the like; these are good Defeasances. As if the Grantee of a Rent-charge grant to his Grantor, that if he shall pay him twenty pound such a day, the grant of the Rent shall be void. See West. Symb. Broo. Defeasance in toto. Albeit the Condition of an Obligation, that is repugnant to the Obligation it self, is void, and the Obligation single, yet it is otherwise in case of a Defeasance made after the Obligation; for this is good, notwithstanding it be repugnant. And therefore if the Oblige after the Obligation made, grant by Deed to the Obligor, that the Obligation shall be void, or that he will not sue the Obligation at all, or that he will not sue the Obligation until such a time, or that the Obligation shall be discharged; these Defeasances are good to avoid the Obligation. 20 Hen. 7. 24. 21 H. 7. 32. Fitz. Bar. 71.

If the Feoffee with Warranty grant, that neither he nor his Heirs shall take benefit of the Warranty of the Feoffor, or his Heirs; this is a good Defeasance of the Warranty; and if he grant not to vouch, this will discharge the Voucher: And if he grant not to bring a Warrantia Charta, this will bar him of that remedy. In like manner it is, if the Grantee of a Rent-charge grant to the Grantor, that he will not take any benefit by the Grant; this is a total discharge: And if he grant he will not bring an Annuity, this is a discharge of the person; and if he grant that he will not disstrain the Land for the Rent, this is a discharge of the Land. Broo. Defeasance 4. 7 H. 6. 43. 21 H. 7. 23. Park. sess. 69.

If one make a Lease for life by Deed, and after by another Deed doth grant to his Lessee, that he shall not be impeached for Waste; this is a good Discharge: And if the Lessee afterwards grant by Deed to the Lessor, that if he shall bring an Action of Waste against the Lessee, that he will not make use, nor take advantage of the Deed of Discharge; this is a good Discharge of the Discharge: Broo. Defeas. 11. Condition 120.

So that hereby it seems a Defeasance may be of a Defeasance, and one Defeasance after another, and Regularly the last shall stand. Agreement. Pasche, 8 Jac. Co. B. And therefore if a Lease for years be made on Condition to pay twenty pound at Easter, and the Lease to be void, and before Easter the Lessor and Lessee agree; that if the Lessor pay it at Easter following, the Lease shall be void, and before that time they make the like Agreement for another year; it seems these be good Defeasances, and that the last shall stand. Per Just. Bridgman.

If the Defeasance after Execution made upon a Statute be thus, That if the Conuor pay so much money, the Statute shall be void; it seems, by this the Statute and Execution thereupon, is void: Howbeit, it is best to adde these words in the Defeasance [and the Execution thereupon.] Broo. Defeas. 7.

CHAP.

CHAP. CXIX.

Of an Office.

Sec. 1.
1. Office, what.

The kinds.

His word Office hath two significations, 1. It signifieth an employment about a work; and of this in the next Chapter. But it signifieth also an Inquisition or Inquiry made on the behalf of the Lord Protector of something by vertue of his Office that doth enquire. And by Office found, is meant nothing else but such things as are found by Inquisition made; and of this there are two kinds Intitling or Instructing. That is called an Office Intitling, when it doth vest the Estate and Possession of the Land, or other thing in the Lord Protector, who had therein onely a Right or Title before that time; As where an Alien doth purchase Land, or a Body Politick or Corporation purchase in Mortmain, or of a person attaint of Felony, or the like. And such Offices as concern Fee or Frank-tenement must be found by vertue of Commission under the Great Seal, or they are not good. The other kinde of Office is, where the Land or thing is lawfully vested and settled before in the Lord Protector, but the particularity thereof doth not appear upon Record, so that it may be put in charge; and this is called an Office of Instruction, as where the Lord Protector's Tenant doth commit Felony, is attaint and dieth, or one is attainted of high Treason, in which cases he hath right to the Land without Office. And such things as these may be found by Commission under the Exchequer Seal, and it will be good enough. And the effect of this Office, that it doth put the Lord Protector into the actual possession of the thing, from the time of the finding; so that without any Entry or Seisure he shall be answered the profits from that time.

2. Inquest of
sition, what.

The Inquest of Office, is nothing else but the Inquisition, or that which is found by the Inquiry that is made by the charge and office of them that are employed thereabouts, either as General Officers, and Ex Officio, or by special Commission. For these Inquisitions were taken sometimes Virtute Brevis (that is) by vertue of certain Writs; and sometimes Virtute Commissionis, by vertue of a special Commission directed to certain men for that time and purpose onely; and sometimes they have been more general, As to inquire of all Escheats, &c. and sometimes more Special to enquire of one particular thing. But which way ever they entitle the Lord Protector, they may be used as evidence to other men. See Co. 5. 31. Stamf. Pr. chap. 20. § 2. 13 Ed. 1. 25. 33 H. 8. 20. 4 Ed. 4. 20. 3 H. 7. 7. Plow. 484. Co. 4. 58. F. N. B. 157. 170. Co. 1. 42. 11 H. 4. 5.

3. Where and of what the Lord Protector shall be in possession presently by the Office found without Entry or Seisure, or
not.

For answer to this point, these things are to be known:

1. The Lord Protector upon an Office found for him, is presently in possession, without Entry or Seisure; in cases where his Entry or Seisure is lawful, and the Possession void at the time. As if an Office finde, that the Lord Protector's Tenant hath seised, or his Tenant for life hath committed Waste; in these cases the possession will not be vested in him, because his Entry is not lawful, but he is put to sue a Scire facias. If it had been found by Office, that the King's Tenant had died seised without Heir, or his Heir within age, or he had made a Lease or Gift in Tail, and the Lease had been ended, or Donee dead without issue; in these cases the Office had put the King in Possession. But if it had found that the King's Tenant was disseised, and died without Heir; the King had not been in Possession, till the Possession and Seisin of the true Tenant be removed. So if the Office entitle the Lord Protector to a thing not Manual, (i.) of which no profit is to be taken, till it happen, as a Rent, Common, or the like, there he shall not be in possession till the day. And in all these cases the Lord Protector shall be answered the mean profits, from the time of his Title appearing of Record; As from the time of the Alienation in Mortmain, or making of void Letters Mean Profits.

Patents

Patents afterward adnulled, and the like. 14 H.7. 23. Co.4. 38. 34 H.6.5. Stamf. Prer. 54. 41 Ed.3. 11. 11 H.4.5.

2. In case of Treason, and a Forfeiture to the Lord Protector, by that means the Lord Protector shall be adjudged in actual possession of the Land, without any Office or Inquisition at all, by the Statute of 33 H.8. 26.

The Tenant for years, Copiholder, and he that hath other profit, Apprender out of Land, whose Estates are not found in the Office, which doth intitle the Lord Protector to Land by any Attainder, shall enjoy their Estates notwithstanding. 2 Ed.6.8.

Things are sometimes found untruly by Offices; and in these cases, ~~both~~ that are like to be hurt, may be hurt, may be relieved, by a Traverse, Monstrance de droit, by Petition, or by Pleading. And the Traverse of an Office is nothing else, but the setting out of ones Right by a Judicial proceeding, to the end to ~~prethrow~~ the Lord Protector's Title. For every Office is in the nature of a Declaration, in which any man may plead, and either deny, or confess and avoid, by Monstrance de droit, (1.) by shewing a Right: As for example, If the Office had found that J. S. the Kings Tenant died seised of the Land, the party grieved by this might have said that J. S. did not die seised, or otherwise confess and avoid it, and say: That he was the Kings Tenant, and J. S. did disseise him; or that J. S. had onely an Estate upon Condition, and that before his Attainder he did break the Condition, or the like: And this Plea or Allegation shall be tried by a Jury in the Upper Bench; and if it be found against the Lord Protector, the party wronged shall have Restitution and Judgment be given, that the Lord Protector's hands shall be removed from the possession. So where the Office doth finde the Lord Protector's Title by a Purchase by an Alienee, or an Alienation in Mortmain, or the like; for where the Office doth intitle the Lord Protector by matter in fait onely, and by no matter of Record, but by the Office it self, thereby matter in fait onely proved to the contrary, it may be avoided, Plow. 488. Broo. 506. 34 Ed.3. 14. 36 Ed.3. 13. 8 H.6. 16. 1 H.8. 16. 2 Ed.6. 8. Stamf. Prer. 73. 42. 9 H.6. 15. 3 H.7. 3. 4 H.7. 4. Co. on Littl. 77.

4. Traverse of an Office, what Where and how an Office may be avoided, or not. By Traverse.

For the further opening hereof, take these cases.
1. If upon this Traverse it be found against the party, he is barred for ever, and and if it be found against the Lord Protector, he is barred for he cannot Traverse it: And yet in some cases he may have a Melius Inquirendum. Co. 8. 164.

2. In all cases where the Title of the party is found by the same Office, whereby the Lord Protector is intitled; As if it be found that A. did disseise B. and then alien in Mortmain, or the like; in this case the party shall avoid the Office by a Monstrance de droit, Co. 8. 168. But if the Office intitle the Lord Protector by matter of Record, as if it finde that J. S. was attainted of Treason, and seised of Land; if this be false, the party grieved by it, may avoid it by Traverse, or by Monstrance de droit, so long as the Attainder remains in force; and is not put to it to avoid it by Petition, as he was by the Common Law, 3 H.7. 3. 4 H.7. 4. 2 Ed.6. 8. Co. on Littl. f. 77. And yet by the very Common Law, if he had matter of as high a nature; and if the Office found an Attainder and Forfeiture by Parliament, and there be another Act of Parliament, whereby the same Attainder was repealed; he might by the Common Law have pleaded this without Petition, 4 H.4. 24.

By Monstrance de Droit.

By Petition.

3. If an Office do intitle the King to Personal Goods, as if it finde that J. S. was attainted of Felony, or outlawed in Debt or Trespas, and at the same time he was possessed of a Horse, when in truth, the Horse was not his but another mans; in this case the owner of the Horse may Traverse it, and being found with him, shall have his Goods again, if the Officer have not accounted for it in the Exchequer, 4 H.4. 24. 34 H.6. 5.

For the rest of the Law, as to this Subject, see Dyer 302. Broo. cap. 118. 23 H.6. 17. 18 Elix. 12.

CHAP. CXX.

Of Officers and Offices.

SECT. 1.
1. Officer and
Office, what.

The kinds of Offices.

His word Office hath more acceptations then one in our Law, but (as it is here taken) it is that Function, by virtue whereof a man hath some Employment in the Affairs of another, whether of the Supreme Magistrate, or of a common person. And an Officer is he that is so employed.

The Office of the Supreme Magistrate now in this Common Commonwealth, is the Office of the Lord Protector, who is the Chief and Supreme Officer for the Government of the Country, and Administration of Justice amongst the people thereof, and that in general is his Office; but for his Election, Office, and Oath; see the Government, and Prerogative: And as to the Subordinate Officers under him, of these Officers, and their Offices, the old Division of them was into Ecclesiastical and Spiritual Officers; such as were Bishops, Chancellors, Delegates, and divers others, who had Offices and Employments about Spiritual Matters, now abolished; and Ministers, Church-wardens, Clerks of Parishes, and such like, which do yet continue; and into Civil Officers, and some are mixt, having some of both Powers: And these Civil Officers and Offices were again divided into such as had to do with Matters of Justice, or had to do in other matters. The first sort again into Officers and Offices, Judicial and Ministerial; Judicial (that is) such as consisted, and were employed in the Administration of Justice, Officers that had a Judicial voice in some of the Courts of Justice, as the Judges of the Court of Star-Chamber, and Court of Wards now removed (for which see Courts.) And the Judges of the one Bench, and the other Counsellors of the Council Table, the Commissioners of the Great Seal, and the Judges of all the Courts, yet continuing, and not abolished, whose Offices you may see in Courts.

And then there are Ministerial Officers of Justice; and of these the greater part do attend upon the Judicial Officers, either to prepare and make ready Matters for the Judges to determine, or else to execute what they have before determined: And such are Sheriffs, Serjeants at Law, Counsellors, Attorneys, Coroners, Keepers of Prisons, Bailiffs, Church-wardens, Treasurers of the County Stock, and many others.

And some Offices are partly Judicial and partly Ministerial; so is the Sheriff's Office, and so are some other Offices.

The Ministerial Officers do some of them belong to one Court, and some of them to another Court. The Officers that do not any thing in the Administration of Justice, are most of them such as attend upon the Lord Protector, or other great men, as Bailiffs, Purveyors, Stewards, Surveyors, Parkers, and the like: Also some Officers are County Officers, and some Parish Officers; and some Offices are more of Charge, then of Profit; and some more of Profit, then of Charge.

And as touching all sorts of Officers and Offices in the general, these things are to be known.

SECT. 2.
2. The Duty of all Officers in general.

1. Every man ought to be qualified and fitted for the Office he doth undertake; and this is especially required in Judicial Offices: And therefore if the King grant such an Office to an unskilful man, it is void. And if such an Office be granted in Reversion, it is void; for happily when it comes to be executed, the Officer may be disabled, Non compos mentis, &c.

2. Judicial Officers ought to come to their Offices freely, and not give money for them; for if they buy, they must sell them.

3. These Officers of all sorts are to attend their Offices, especially those that have to do with the Administration of Justice, they are to be industrious in execution execution of the things given them in charge, and therein to be faithful and just.

4. They are to be contented with the Wages and Fees allowed them, which in most cases are certain and known, either being set down by some Law, or usually paid. And if they take any more then this, this is an offence called Extortion, and to be severely punished. Fees.
Extortion,
what.

5. If Officers that have to do in the Ministration of Justice be corrupt, cowardly, or negligent, they are to be punished; and sometimes they forfeit their Offices by it: See for this in Forfeiture.

And for Extortion in a Sheriff, see 23 Hen. 6. 26. 1 H. 4. 11.

In a Coroner, 3 Ed. 1. 10. 1 H. 8. 7. 3 H. 7. 1.

In a Clerk of the Market, 13 R. 2. 4.

In other Officers, 3 Edw. 1. 16. 33 Hen. 8. 39. 7 Edw. 6. 1. 27 Hen. 8. 11. 26 H. 8. 3. 2 H. 4. 8. 23 H. 8. 6. 2 H. 4. 23. 19 H. 7. 8.

But for all these things, see Co. 11. 3. 90. upon Littl. 233, 234. Crompt. Jur. throughout. Sir Iho. Smith de Republica 38. 6 R. 2. 9. 8 R. 2. 4. 1 R. 1. 5. 1 Ed. 4. 1. 5. 6 Ed. 5. 16. 2 Ed. 1. 3. 3 Ed. 1. 29. Finches Law 237. Plow. 379. Dyer 205. 5 R. 2. 16. 2 H. 4. 8. 10. 23. 23 H. 8. 9. 26 H. 8. 9. 27 H. 8. 11. Westm. 2. 42, 44. 4 Edw. 3. 18. 5 Rich. 2. 9. 12, 13, 14, 15, &c. 29 Eliz. 4. 23 Eliz. 3. And in Title Forfeitures, Courts. Afts. 7 Novemb. 1650. 7 Jan. 1650.

As touching Officers in general, these things are further to be known.

1. Offices of the King are to be granted, and that freely without reward to men fit for them.

2. They that have the making of Justices of Peace, Sheriffs, Customs, and other Officers of the King, may not choofe for Favor and Reward, but upon Merit and Desert. Co. upon Littl. 234. 12 R. 2. 2.

3. If an Office, either of the Grant of the King, or a Subject, which doth concern the Administration of Justice, or the Kings Revenue, or the Commonwealth, or the Interest, Benefit, or Safety of the Subject, or the like, be granted to a man that is unexpert, and hath no skill and ability to exercise it; the Grant is meerly void, and the party incapable. Hence it is, That a Grant of any Office of Judicature to an Infant, or one not of sound mind, is void: So the Grant of the Stewardship of a Manor to such a one is void. And hence it is, That the Grant of a Reversion of such an Office, though to a man never so skilful, is void, because he may be incapable when it happens, Co. upon Littl. 3. 6. Co. 11. Heydens case. Nor can such an Office be granted in Fee, or for years, to fall to an Executor; but it must be granted at will, or for the life of the Grantee: But a Ministerial Office may be granted in Reversion: And the Grantee of an Office of Trust to an Infant, to be executed by his Deputy, happily in some cases may be good, though it be in Reversion, March. Rep. f. 39.

4. Some Offices after they are granted, are grantable and assignable to others, and some are not grantable over. And in some Offices, the Officer may make a Deputy under him, and in some Offices he may not do so.

For the clearing of this therefore take these things.

1. If an Office that is an Office of Skill, Trust, Fidelity, and Diligence, be granted to one, as the Chirographers Office, Clerk of the Crown, Clerk of the Pipe, Remembrancer, Stewardship of a Court, or Parkership, or the like, be granted to one; in this case he cannot grant it over to another. Co. 4. Mistons case. Co. 9. Sir George Reynolds case, and Countie of Salops case.

2. That between an Assignee and a Deputy, there is a great difference; For the Deputy hath no Estate, nor Interest at all in the Office, nor may he do any thing in his own name, but in the name of the Officer, and here the Officer must answer for his Deputy: And if he cause of Forfeiture, the Office will be forfeit, as by the Master. But the Assignee doth all things in his own name, hath an interest in the Office, and must answer for himself. Co. 9. 48.

*Assignee.
Deputy.*

3. It is a general Rule, That a Judicial Office cannot be granted, or exercised by Deputy;

Sec. 3:

3. Some other things to be known of all Officers in general, and of Offices in general.

Deputy; and yet, it seems, a Stewardship of a Law days, or Courts Baron, may be executed by Deputy; but a Ministerial Office may be so granted or done; and in this case the things done by the Deputy are good. And yet, it seems, in this case the Officer must answer for his Deputy. Brownl. 2 part. 334, 335. M. 13 Jac. B.R. Phelps and Winsons case.

4. It is another Rule, That such Offices as are Offices of Science, Fidelity, and Diligence, are so Personal, that in these a man can make no Assignee, or Deputy, unless the grant of the Office be made to them, and their Assigns, or be made to be exercised by them, or their Deputies, or their sufficient Deputies. And of this nature is the Office of a Steward, Parker, and such like. And yet in this case, if such an Office as a Parkership be granted to a Nobleman, or to an Infant, they shall make a Deputy. Co. 9. 48, 49. Plow. 384. 379.

5. The Office or Deputation of any Office, or any part thereof, if it concern the Administration of Justice, or the Receipt, Controlment, or payment of the Kings money, or Surety of the Kings Lands or Customs, or any Administration or necessary attendance in the Kings Custom-house, or the keeping of the Kings places of strength, or the Clerkship of any Court of Record, shall not be bargained or sold, or any reward, or agreement for reward taken for it; if he do, the seller forfeits the Office, and the buyer is disabled to enjoy: And yet all the acts he doth, whilst he is in the Office, shall be deemed good. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 16. Co. on Lit. 234. Goldsb. 180.

6. The great Officers that are made Judges, and other Officers in Courts of Justice, must substitute such under them, as be sufficient and faithful, and for whom they will answer. 2 H. 6. 10.

7. Officers being sued for any thing done about their Offices, they may plead the General Issue, and give the Special Matter in Evidence, shall have increase of Costs, must be sued in their own County, and cannot be sued elsewhere. See 21 Jac. 12. Ord. 3 March, 1654. 7 Jac. 5.

8. They must take great heed they go not beyond, or abuse their power, for their own profit or revenge, and so expose themselves to Sutes, and lose the Protection, which the Law doth give them in the Execution of their Offices.

9. That for such Offices as are of charge, and not of profit to the Officer, he that grants the Office, may at his pleasure discharge his Officer. But if there be profit to the Officer, contra, except it be granted at will. So if he have a collateral certain Fee, for one may not frustrate his own Grant. Co. upon Littl. 233. Plow. 379.

Bribery, what.

Extortion,
what.

10. If a Judicial Officer take Gifts or Rewards to pervert Justice, and doth so; this is Bribery, that upon Indictment in the Upper Bench, or before Judges of Assize, may be punished by Fine and Imprisonment. And if any Officer by colour of his Office, exacteth and forceth any man to pay any thing that is not due, or above what is due, or before the time it is due; this is Extortion. And for this he shall be punished by Fine and Imprisonment, and render double to the party grieved. Co. upon Litt. 168. 10. 100. West. 1. 29. 31 Ed. 3. 4. 1 H. 4. 11. 28 H. 6. 5. Westm. 1. 26, 27. See more in Co. 3 part. Inst. c. 68, 69. The word Extortion hath a larger sense, and is referred to all violent and injurious exactings and takings, especially by Officers, by colour, or by countenance of their Office. Plow. 64. Crompt. Just. of Peace 8.

There are some Officers of inferior Courts which we have not named; as Stewards of Law-day Courts, Hundred-Courts, and Manor-Courts or Court-Barons; Free-suitors, Homagers, Bailiffs, Reeves and Beadles. And in the Forrest-Courts divers, as Constable, Verderors, Beadles, Bailiffs-errant, and the like. For which see Forrest. And amongst these in some places there are some strange Officers, as Ale-tasters or Ale-cunners, Carvals, Port-Reeves, and others, which the Law doth scarce take notice of.

The Stewards of these inferior Courts, are in the Law-day Court the Judge and principal Officer, and in the other Courts a special Officer, who is to govern these Courts according to Law, and to record all the proceedings thereof. See Manor.

Stewards of Courts, what.

In the Hundred-Court and Court-Baron, as to the Trial of Actions, the Freeholders or Free-suitors are the Judges, and they are to order and judge matters according to Law. And in the Copiholders, or Customary Court of the Manor, the Lord or his Steward is Judge. But the Steward is to see, that all things in Surrenders, Admittances, and other passages be done according to the Custom, and that they be duly entred and recorded in the Rolls of the Court, Co. 1 par. Inst. 61. of Copihold, 123. Co. 4. 30. 9. 48. See my Court-keepers Guide, St. 1 Jac. 5.

Free-suitors,
what.

In the Copihold or Customary Court, the Jurors are called Homagers, whose work is to present and find the Custom, and all matters of fact done within the Manor in relation to the Custom.

Homagers,
what.

The Bailiff. This word is a general word, and is applied to Officers for Counties and Hundreds that belong to the County and Hundred, that serve Process, summon to Court, and execute the Warrants of the Stewards of those Courts, and of the Sheriff and other superior Officers. And it is applied to Bailiffs of Manors, who do use to dispose of the affairs of his Lord there, pay and receive his Rents, look to Forfeitures, &c. and see the Customs observed. He in some Manors is called a Reeve. See for this, Co. 4. 30. Dyer 148. 12 H. 7. 23. Bro. Bail. 31. Tresp. 288. 14 Ed. 3. 9. Stat. of Lincoln, 10 Ed. 2. See Manor.

Bailiff, what.

This word Beadle is used but of Forrests also, for an Under-Bailiff of a Manor, or Messenger of a Court, who is to execute the Attachments and other Process directed from the Lord or Steward of the Court, and to present all Pound-breaches, Waifs and Estrays.

Major of a City or Corporation.
Aldermen.

There are also in Cities and other Corporate Towns, divers Officers, as Major, Aldermen, Bailiffs, Recorder, Town-Clerk, Sword-bearer, Serjeants, Stewards, and the like. The principal Officer in most places is called the Major, and next to him in those places are the Aldermen. In other places the principal Officers are one, or more, called Bailiffs. And all these of the one sort and the other, are within their Liberties Justices of the Peace, and have within their Precincts all or much of the same power which the Justices of Peace have within their Counties.

Recorder, what.

The Recorder is he, whom the Major and other Magistrates of such Cities and places, having Jurisdiction or Court of Record within their Precinct by the Kings Grant, do associate to them for their better direction in matters of Justice, and proceedings according to Law. And in some Cities they have under him a Town-Clerk, in his absence to do all this for them. Their Stewards receive and lay out their money for the Corporation, and give account of it. And their Serjeants are to arrest men for Debts, &c.

Serjeants, what.

There are also some Officers newly appointed, and that are but for a time, that perhaps will continue but a while, the Laws by which they are made being but of short continuance; as the Commissioners and Sub-Commissioners, and Clerks of Excise; the Commissioners, Receivers, Assessors and Collectors for the Contribution, and divers others. See the Ordinances for that purpose.

Water-Bailiffs.

There are Officers also belonging to Sea-Towns and Ports; as Water-Bailiffs, to search Ships, Fish, and gather the Toll of the Wharf, Stat. 28 H. 6. ch. 5. Wharfinger, the Keeper of a Wharf. A Portgreve, being a chief Magistrate in some Town.

Stat. 13.

There are other Officers, that are some of them County-Officers; such as is the Sheriff, the Coroner, the Escheator, the Treasurers of the County, Masters of Bridewell, Gaolers, Escheators, Clerks of the Market, and such like.

And then there are some others that are Parish-Officers; such are the Church-wardens, Overseers of the Poor, Surveyors of the High-ways, Registers, Constables, Clerks, Haywards, and such like.

And there are some Officers that are for a Hundred, as High-Constables, High-Collectors, and the like. And some of these County-Officers have Courts, and some have relation to Courts, as the Sheriff, Coroner, Clerk of the Market.

Sheriff, what.

The Sheriff is a County-Officer, partly Judicial, and partly Ministerial, of great antiquity and authority; who was anciently always an Earl, and he was always chosen by the King; and made by his Letters-Patents only for one year. His charge and duty is, to look to the preservation of the Kings Peace, to see the Writs and Executions that come out of the Courts executed, to impanel Juries, to gather up the Kings debts, to look to the profits of the County, and the registering of the Acts of the County-Court, and the like; and herein his Office is Ministerial. He is also to punish the lesser criminal matters in his Leet or Turn-Court, wherein his Office is Judicial; for in the greater causes, the Justices of Assize that go about in their Circuits yearly do dispatch them. And these Officers do usually make a Deputy or Under-Sheriff, who doth execute the Office under them.

Under-Sheriff,
what.

But for all that doth concern this Office, see Statutes; 28 Ed. 1. 14. 19 Ed. 2. of Sheriffs. 1 R. 2. ch. 11. 1 H. 4. 11. 4 H. 4. 3. 12 Ed. 4. 3. 17 Ed. 4. 6. 21 Jac. 1. 13 Eliz. 21. 11 H. 7. 15. 1 Ed. 4. 2. 13 H. 6. 10. de finibus terrarum. 4 Ed. 3. 10. 21 Ed. 1. 2. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 4. 8 Eliz. 16. Feodary, what.

The Feodary was an Officer authorized by the Master of the Court of Wards and Liveries, to assist the Escheator in the finding of Offices and other things concerning the Kings Wards. This Office and Officer is now laid aside, there being no use of him.

The Escheator was an Officer of the Common-Law, that did look to the Escheats of the King within the County, and certifie them in the Exchequer: But he is now laid aside. See the Books made of this Officer and his Office.

Escheator, what.

The Clerk of the Market is an Officer (for the most part) set up in every County to look to this, That all the Measures wet and dry, (that is) Ells, Yards, Lagen, Quarts, Pottles, Gallons; and Weights, as Pound, Ounce, &c. be answerable to the example of the Standard in the Exchequer. Sometimes there hath been an Officer in the Kings house, to take care of the Standards, and to look to the examples thereof all over the Land; and so it may be done by one Officer. He is the Comptroller of the Market. Stat. 1 Ed. 4. ch. 1. 13 R. 2. 4. See more of this, Stat. 16 Car. 19.

Clerk of the Market, what.

The Coroner is an ancient Officer appointed by the Common-Law for matters of the Crown; and of these are many in one County. His work is principally to enquire of every man that is killed and doth come to an untimely death, by what means he came to his end; keep a Court, and call a Jury to consider of every circumstance, and to enquire who they were that committed the fact, and what Lands or Tenements, Goods or Chattels they had at the time of the fact committed, and to seise them to the Kings use: They are also to enquire of Treasure-trove. He is also to look to the keeping of the Peace: He is to keep the Records of the Pleas of the Crown taken before him: He is also to view the dead bodies slain, and cause the Murderer to answer for it upon the Indictment taken before him. This Officer is chosen by the Freeholders of the County at their County-Court. But for this see the Treatises of this Officers Office at large, Stamf. lib. 1. ch. 5 2. and in many other places. 1 H. 8. 7. 28 Ed. 3. 6.

Sc. 14. Coroner, what.

The Treasurers of the County-Stock for the relief of poor maimed Soldiers and Mariners, are certain Officers yearly chosen by the Justices of Peace, to have the charge of the Receipt and Disbursements of the money taxed and levied upon the whole County yearly for the relief of poor maimed Soldiers and Mariners. For this see my Book of the Offices of Constables, &c. par. 2. ch. 5.

The Treasurers of the County-Stock for the Relief of poor maimed Soldiers caused by the late Wars, and the Widows and Orphans of such as have been slain or dead in the Service, are certain Officers yearly appointed by the Justices of Peace, to have the charge of the Receipt and Disbursement of the money taxed and levied upon the whole County yearly for the Relief of poor maimed Soldiers and Mariners, and the Widows and Orphans of such as died in the Service of the Parliament. For which see the Ordinance of May 28. 1647. and Aug. 10. 1647.

The Treasurers of the County-Stock for the Relief of Prisoners in the Kings-Bench and Marshalsey, and for the Relief of Hospitals and Alms-houses within the same County, are certain Officers yearly appointed by the Justices of Peace, to have the charge of the Receipt and Disbursements of the money taxed and levied upon the whole County yearly for the Relief of the Prisoners in the Kings-Bench and Marshalsey, and for the Relief of Hospitals and Alms-houses within the same County. The Collector of the money for the Relief of the Prisoners in the Common-Gaol, is an Officer appointed by the Justices of the Peace, to have the charge of the Receipt and Disbursements of the money taxed and levied upon the whole County for the Relief of the Prisoners in the Common-Gaol. See for this my Book of Constables, &c. 2 par. ch. 7.

Governor of the House of Correction, and his Office.

The Constables are said to be Officers of the Commonwealth, appointed for the maintenance of the Peace thereof, and to be attendant to Court-Leets, Justices of Peace, and Coroners, for the Executions of their Warrants within their Precincts and Liberties. And Mr. Lambert saith, The name of a Constable in a Hundred or Franchise, doth mean that he is an Officer that did support the Kings Majesty in the main-Constables, Tythingmen, &c.

High-Constables
what.

maintenance of his Peace within the Precinct of his Hundred or Franchise. And of these Constables there are now said to be two sorts: The first sort are the High-Constables, which are for the whole Hundred, Lathe, Rape or Wapentake, the which do comprehend many Parishes, Tythings and Villages; and therefore these Officers in respect of place have a more large command then Petty-Constables have. These Officers were ordained by the Statute of Winchester, which doth appoint (amongst other things) That for the better keeping of the Peace, two Constables in every Hundred and Franchise shall make the View of Armor. And they are called High-Constables, in comparison of the Constables or Petty-Constables that be in the Towns or Parishes within their Hundreds or Franchises; whose duty is likewise to maintain the Peace within the several limits of their Towns or Parishes. And of these High-Constables there were to be, and were antiently two in every Hundred; but at this day there is but one in many Hundreds.

The other sort of Constables are the Petty-Constables or the Under-Constables, who are only for some part, as for a Town, Parish, Village, Tything or Hamlet within the Hundred; (for, every Hundred hath his High-Constable, and every several Tything within the Hundred hath the Petty-Constable, Tythingman, or the like within it.) So that the command of the Petty-Constable is only in one part of the Precinct of the High-Constable: But otherwise for his Authority, by the antient Common-Law, his Office (as far as his Precinct doth extend) is the same with the Office of the High-Constable over the whole Hundred.

The Tything-men, Borsholders, Boroughead or Headborough, Thirdborough, and Chief Pledg, or by whatsoever names they be called in any Towns, Parishes, Tythings, Boroughs, Hamlets or other places, and their Offices, are in effect in most places but one and the same; for in some Counties this Officer is called by one name, and in other Counties by another name: As in Kent he is called Borsholder, in Warwick-shire Thirdborough, and in other places he is called Constable, and in some places he is called Tythingman; for he that is called and sworn the Tythingman of any place, is (in effect) the Constable of the place: And therefore in such places for the most part there is no other Officer called or sworn by the name of a Constable. For as Petit-Constables, about the beginning of the Reign of Edward the Third, were devised in Towns and Parishes for the aid of the Constables of the Hundred; so afterwards Borsholders, and such like, were used as Petit-Constables within their own Tythings and Boroughs.

But if it be so (as in some few places) that there is one Constable for the Commonwealth, and there is also one or more Tythingmen, and the Constable doth execute all the Office, and the Tythingmen are but as Attendants on him, and seem to have but little power, or it be as in some places; the Tythingman is to do service to the Lord of the Manor rather then to the Commonwealth, and he is a Customary Tythingman chosen at the Lords Court: Or if it be so that there are two or more Tythingmen, and one of them is for the Commonwealth to execute the Office of Constable, and is always chosen at the Leet, and this Tythingman time out of mind hath been used to do nothing about the Office of the Constable, but to do other things; in these cases the Custom of the place may and must be continued, and such Tythingmen shall not be compelled to do more then by Custom they have used to do: Howbeit otherwise, and in all other places, all these Officers are comprehended within this word Constable, and all these Offices are contained within this Office. See for this at large in my Book of the Office of Constables, &c. 1 par. chap. 1.

Self. 16.
Churchwardens.

Churchwardens are Officers chosen yearly by the major part of the Parishioners according to the Custom of the place, to look to the Church and Church-yard, and things thereunto belonging. See for this at large in my Book of the Office of Constables, &c. par. 2. ch. 1.

Sidemen or Questmen.

Sidemen were those that were yearly chosen according to the Custom of the place, to assist the Churchwardens in their Presentment to the Ordinary.

Overseers of the Poor.

The Overseers of the Poor, are certain Officers appointed yearly to be joyned with and assistant to the Churchwardens of the Parish, in the oversight and ordering of the the Poor of the Parish. See this at large in my Book of Constables, &c. part 2. chap. 2.

The Supravisors of the Surveyors of the High-ways, are Officers yearly chosen by the Constables and Churchwardens of the Parish, to look to the Amendment of the High-ways within the Parish. See for this also a large Treatise in my Book of the Office of Constables, &c. par. 2. ch. 3.

The Register of a Parish, is a new Officer of a Parish chosen by the Parish, and allowed by the Justices of the Peace, for the publication of Contracts of Marriage, and for the taking and keeping of an Entry of all the Marriages, Christenings and Burials within the Parish. Act, Aug. 24. 1653. See for this in the same Book also.

The Hayward is an Officer appointed in every Town to be the common Herd of the Town, to impound the Cattel that do trespass in the Fields, to look to the Fields, to see that no Pound-breaches be made, and if any be, to present them at the Leet, and to make Replevins, &c. Kitch. f. 46.

The Parish-Clerk is a Civil Officer that is in every Parish; whose work is to keep the Church clean, look to keep the things there in safety, ring the Bells at occasion, bury the dead, and the like: And he is to be chosen and removed according to the Custom of the place, March Rep. 101.

The next and last sort of Officers are such as were the Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Officers, such as were the Ordinary, Chancellor, Register, Commissary, and the like who are now gone.

The Ordinary was an Officer instituted by the Common-Law, to have ordinary Jurisdiction in causes Ecclesiastical. His Office was partly Judicial; for he was to judge in Ecclesiastical matters about Wills, Administrations, Bastardy, Marriage, and the like: And partly Ministerial; for he was to execute the commands of the Kings Courts. See for his Office, D. & St. 28. Perk. sect. 486. Co. 2. 37. 5. 51. upon List. 96. 300: and by divers Statutes. And thus in every Diocese was the Bishop of the Diocese, and under him he had his Chancellor, St. 32 H. 8. c. 15. and his Register to enter and record all that the Chancellor did.

The Commissary was an Ecclesiastical Officer that had special Jurisdiction in some places remote in the Diocese far from the chief City, where the Chancellors principal Consistory was, where he did exercise his ordinary Jurisdiction. And he was ordained to supply the Bishops Jurisdiction and office in the out-places of the Diocese, or else in such Parishes as were peculiar to the Bishop, and exempt from the Archdeacon: For where by Composition or Prescription the Archdeacons had Jurisdiction within their Archdeaneries, as in most places they had, this Commissary was superfluous. But of this see Co. 5. in the Ecclesiastical case, f. 9.

The Official was sometimes he that the Chancellor did appoint under him: And sometimes it was taken for him that the Archdeacon did substitute in the executing of his Jurisdiction, 32 H. 8. c. 15.

The Custos of the Spiritualities, was an Officer that had the Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in any Diocese during the vacancie of the See; which did by Law belong to the Dean and Chapter.

This word did signifie any one that was deputed under one of these Ecclesiastical Judges: he was called Delegate or Surrogate.

CHAP. CXXI.

Of Pardon, Patents, Painters, Peace, Paving, and Perpetuity.

Of a Pardon.

Pardon, what.

The kinds.

His word Pardon is used in the Law, for the remitting or forgiving for a Felonious or other offence committed against the Supreme Magistrate.

It hath been divided from the ground, or the manner of it, 1. It hath been said to be, Ex gratia Regis: which is that which the Supreme Magistrate doth in some special cases, out of respect to the Person, or for some other circumstance; shew and afford out of his own Royal prerogative or power. 2. Of course: which is that the Law gives, and the King of course was to grant in case of some light offence, as Homicide casual, and the like. It is also express, or implied; which may be called, in Fact, or in Law. And it is also general, when it is of all offences or Felonies; or it is special, of some particular offence. See Stat. 13 R. 2. ch. 1. 2 R. 3. 2. Plow. 401. See Co. 3 par. Inf. cap. 105 and 101. Inst. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

Sec. 1.

What offences may be pardoned, and how, See Stat. 6 Ed. 1. 9. 1 Ed. 3. 2. 4 Ed. 3. 1. 10 Ed. 3. 1. 14 Ed. 3. 1. 27 Ed. 3. 2. 13 R. 2. 1. 5 H. 4. 2. 5 Ed. 3. 1. 27 H. 8. 1. 13 H. 8. 1. 23 H. 6. 8.

How it shall be taken.

For the Answer of this, take these Cases.

1. By the Kings Pardon of Murder, Manslaughter is pardoned.

2. By the Kings Pardon of Felony or Treason, the Lands or Goods forfeit were not restored without a special Patent of Restitution.

3. By the Kings Pardon the blood was not restored, but the further corruption of blood was prevented. So that if a man have a son, and then be attainted and after pardoned, after that he doth purchase other Lands, and then hath another son; this other son shall inherit it.

4. Where a Statute doth give part of the Penalty to the King, and part to the Prosecutor, and after the Suit begun the King had pardoned the offence; by this the Kings part was discharged, but the party might have prosecuted still for his part of the Forfeiture; but if the Release had been by the Pardon before the Suit begun, it had been otherwise.

5. If the King had pardoned the not making of a Bridge, the Bridge must be made notwithstanding; the offence past by non feasant is only pardoned.

6. If one sinne a man the first of May, and the second of May the King had given him a Pardon for all Felonies, and the third of May he had dyed of this blow; by this he had been pardoned.

7. If after a man had been attainted of Felony or Treason, the King had pardoned him all Felonies, Murthers, and Executions of them, Outlawries, Waiving, &c. and pardon and release all Forfeitures of Lands and Goods; by this his life is saved, and his Land, if no Office be found; but not the Goods without Restitution. See for these things, Addition to Inst. Doddr. Treatise, f. 88. Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 701 37 H. 6. 4. Keth. 361. Dyer 286. Bro. chap. 204. 103. 6 Ed. 4. 4. Plow. 401. March 214.

Of a Patent.

Patents are certain Writings made and published by the Lord Protector, and sealed with the Broad-Seal, giving to him something which he had not before: And by these the Kings have been used to grant such things as they have passed to their Subjects. And these are Records of a high nature; and therefore they need not Delivery, nor Livery of Seisin, or any such thing to perfect them, as the Deeds of other men do, but the thing will pass without it.

Of Peace.

Pease is a quiet and harmless carriage and behaviour towards all the people of the Nation. And Surety for the Peace, is a Recognisance taken by a Justice of Peace or other that hath authority so to do, of a man to the Lord Protector, to keep the Peace. But see for this a large Discourse in my Book of Justice of Peace, 1 part.

Peace, what.
Surety of the Peace, what.

The Good-behaviour is much of the same nature with that of the Peace, and so is the Surety for it: But that this Surety doth comprehend the Surety for the Peace, and much more; and less will break this, then will break the other. See for this also in the same Book.

Self. 1.
Good-behaviour and Surety for it, what.

For the Peace, these things are to be known.

1. That all men are required to keep it between themselves and others, and forbidden to break it.
2. They are to do what they can to keep it between others; and for this every man is as a Constable.
3. There are divers Offices appointed and impowered of purpose to look to it, and to punish the breach of it.
4. It is broken, when any thing is done contrary to that quiet, friendly and harmless behaviour required of all men; which is an offence against the Law.
5. This offence hath its degrees, and is greater or less according to circumstances. The greater are Felonies, Riots, Routs, unlawful Assemblies, Forcible Entries, pulling down of walls, houses, and the like. The circumstances are, Persons: To strike a Judge, for a Servant to strike a Master, is a great offence: For any man to strike an Officer, is a greater offence than to strike another man. So the place doth aggravate: To strike a man in a Church or Church-yard with a weapon, or to draw a weapon to that purpose, is very penal. So all fighting and quarrelling every where is punishable.

Challenge.

So to challenge another to fight with him, or to receive such a Challenge, is very penal. See my Book of Justice of Peace, ch. 36.

All these are greater Breaches of Peace. The lesser and more ordinary are, by light blows, words and gestures. And for these, if men do but speak any disgraceful or provoking words to, or of one another, or use any disgraceful or provoking gestures towards another, they may be punished by the Justices of Peace.

6. Process of the Peace and Good-behaviour, shall not issue out of the Chancery or Kings Bench, but upon Motion in open Court, and good cause shewed upon Oath, which shall be indorsed upon the back of the Writ. And if that cause be after disproved, the Judges of that Court may commit the Offender to Prison, till he pay the grieved his costs and damages, St. 21 Jac. 8. But see more of this in my Justice of Peace, and see Imprisonment: See Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 72, 73.

7. Riding armed in a terrible way, is against the Peace, and punishable, Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 72, 73.

of Perpetuity.

Perpetuity was an Entail with an Addition, a Devise taken up to make a Perpetuity: That whereas an Estate-tail by a Devise of a Common-Recovery was made barrable; to bar and prevent this, men did entail their Lands with this Condition, That none of them that had the Land by the Entail, should do any Act to put it from the next Heir; and if he did, that he should forfeit his Estate, and that the next Heir should enter upon him. But this being found of dangerous consequence, the Law hath adjudged all these Conditions against Law, and so void, and by this avoided Perpetuities. See Condition.

Of Poor people, Possession, Possibility, and Præmunire.

Poor and Beg-
gers.

Sett. 1.
Bridewel.

Or the Poor, take these things.

1. As touching such Poor as are painful, and have need of help, they are to be relieved, and the impotent Poor to be maintained.

2. The idle Poor are to be forced to work, or to be punished: And they may be sent to Bridewel, a Work-house for idle persons. As touching which, these things are to be knowne. 1. The Justices of the Peace at the Quarter-Sessions, at the charge of the County, may erect Houses of Correction to keep, set to work, and correct the poor, idle or disorderly.

2. Incorporate the same. 3. And that without Licence of the King. 4. Make and appoint Bridewels or Workhouses, the Governors thereof, and give allowance of wages to them. 5. Provide Stocks of money, and all that is necessary for this end.

6. Make what Orders they please, according to Law, for the Government of the same. 7. Thither may the Justices send, First, all such as be of any Parish, and have able bodies to work, though they do not wander, yet refuse to work at the wages taxed, or commonly given in those parts, if they have not means to live by. Secondly, Or having lawful means to live by, if they be either idle, or disorderly persons.

Thirdly, such lewd women who shall have Bastards, which may be chargeable to the Parish: But if they will discharge the Parish of the keeping of the Bastard, they cannot be punished by Bridewel. Fourthly, any man or woman able to work, that shall threaten to run away and leave their Families to the Parish; unless they give sufficient Sureties to discharge the Parish. Fifthly, And he or she that doth so run away, is to be punished as an incorrigible Rogue. 8. These the Governors of these houses may punish by putting fetters or gyves on them, or moderate whipping of them. 9. These idle and disorderly persons must be in no sort chargeable to the Country, but shall have Allowance as they deserve by their own labour. 43 Eliz. 1.

Overseers of the Poor.

3. None may beg Alms; nor may any give to them that do beg Alms.

4. To see to these things, there are special Officers called Overseers of the Poor, appointed in every Parish.

5. These Overseers may raise money on the Parish by Rates.

6. They may binde the Poor Apprentices.

7. They may set up any Trade to put the Poor to work.

Hospitals.

8. There are in some places Hospitals or publike houses erect for the Relief of Poor people. As touching which, these things are to be understood.

Any man that will, that may grant Land, may make and found, or take order to have made and founded a Corporation for a Bridewel, or the Relief of poor, needy or impotent people, by the name of the Master and Brethren, or what other names he pleaseth. 2. Then may he, being seised of Land in Fee-simple, grant so much as is above Ten, and under Two hundred pounds a year, to it by that name in Fee-simple. 3. He may do this without the Kings Licence. 4. It must be by Deed inrolled. 5. He may give any Goods or Chattels to it. 6. After this, make what Orders he pleaseth for the Government thereof. 7. See the Statutes at large.

9. And in some places there is Money given to Charitable uses, as to binde forth Apprentices; and the like.

10. If a man be become poor by reason that any rich man keeps his Estate from him, and so he becomes chargeable to the Parish; happily the Churchwardens may by a Suit in Equity force the payment of something, March 90. pl. 145.

11. For poor Soldiers, Soldiers married in the Wars, and the Wives and Children of such as were slain in the Wars, see stat. 13 Sep. 1651. and Act 8 May, 1647. 10 Aug. 1647. 30 Sep. 1651.

For all these things, you may read Statutes, 41 Eliz. 1. 3 Car. 4. 18 Eliz. 3. 35 Eliz. 7. 1 H. 3. 39 Eliz. 5. 21 Jac. 1. 43 Eliz. 4. 31 Eliz. 6. 1 Jac. 25. 3 Car. 4. 7 Jac. 3. 18 Eliz. 10. 2 H. 6. 13.

Possibility and Impossibility.

Possibility (in the Law-sense) is a thing that may, or may not be: And it is either remote, or near; or common, or extraordinary. As, that one man may die before another, is a near, common, or ordinary Possibility: But that one man shall be married to a woman, and then that she shall die, and he be married to another woman; this is a remote and extraordinary Possibility, or a Possibility upon a Possibility.

Impossibility is a thing that (by our Law) cannot be: As that a man should be Heir to another man, whilse he to whom he should be Heir is living. Or that a man should give and take by one and the same Deed, is impossible, stat. 15 H. 7. 10. 1 H. 4. 1.

Possession.

Possession or Seisin of Lands, is the actual enjoying of that which either in truth or pretence is ours. And so it is either in Deed, or in Law. In Deed, where a man hath Right or Title to Land, and he doth actually enter and put his foot upon it: Possessio, quæ pedis possessio. Or else it is in Law: which is, where Lands are descended or given to a man, and he hath not as yet actually entered into it; yet in eye of Law he is in the possession of it, because he is Tenant to every mans Action that will sue for the Land. So was it in case of the King; he was not said to be in actual possession till an Office found, F. N. B. 194. Co. upon Littleton, iii. 153. Kels. 3.

Possession or Seisin, what. The kinds.

Seizure seems to be the same with Possession; but that term is usually applied to Lands, and that to Goods and Chattels, the which a man is then said to seize when he taketh them into his hands, Co. upon Lit. 153. 118.

Seizure, what.

Esplees is (as it were) the seisin or possession of a thing, by the taking of the profit or commodity thereof. As the Esplees of a Common, is the taking of the Grass or Common by the mouths of the Beasts that common there: The Esplees of an Advowson, is the taking of the gross Tythes by the Parson presented thereunto: The Esplees of a Wood, is the selling of the Wood; the Esplees of an Orchard, the selling of the Apples and other Fruit there growing; and the Esplees of a Mill, is the taking of Toll. And this in Actions that are in the meer Right, and not meer possessory Actions, must be alleadged in pleading. But for this see Finches ley, 357. 26 H. 8. 3. 8 Ed. 3. 38.

Esplees, what.

As to Possession, in this place take these things.

1. Where there are two in possession of the same thing at one time, the Law will adudge him in possession that hath the Right.

Rules concerning Possession. Conditio possidentis.

2. If one only be in possession, and he only hath the Right, the Law will keep him there.

3. Where each party contending hath an equal Right, he that is in possession is in the best condition; but otherwise master of Right is more favoured in Law, then master of Possession.

4. Entry of Possession will make a Suspension or Extinguishment. As if the Lord purchase a Tenancy of his own held of him by Manor-service; in this case the Manor is extinguished by Entry of possession, because the Seignior and Tenancie are now in one mans possession, *Kels. 134. Bin. 158. Old N. B. 97. 14 H. 7. 3. Plow. 296. See *Bringtons case. Co. upon Lit. 368.

Præmunire,
what.

Of a Præmunire.

PRAEMUNIRE was a Writ, or the offence on which the Writ was grounded. The offence was by suing to Rome for any thing of Presentations, or in any Suits, or suing in the Spiritual Courts for such things as for which remedy was to be had in the Temporal Courts; and by this they lost their goods, and were to be imprisoned at the Kings pleasure. The punishment is to be inflicted in other cases now out of use. See Stat. 23 Ed. 3. 5. ch. 12. and divers others. Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 54.

CHAP. CXXV.

Of Presence and Absence. Prices.

Presence and Absence.

Or Presence and Absence, this only is to be known.

1. That a Gift or Grant of Land or Goods may be to a man absent, but in case where Livery of Seisin is necessary.
2. In that case the Presence of one may serve for all the rest of the Feoffees or Grantees. For these things see Co. 3. 26, 27, 29, 54. See tit. Feoffments.
3. Sometimes a Livery of Seisin, and so a Deed, is weakened by the Presence of others upon the Land. See for this, Co. 3. 23. and Feoffments, chap.
4. Sometimes the Presence of a man where an offence is done, will make a man guilty of the same offence. See Accessory, chap.
5. Sometimes the power of a superior Magistrate doth take away the power of an inferior Magistrate, Co. 9. 118.

Of Prices.

FOR Prices, these things are to be known.

1. Victuallers are to sell their Victuals at reasonable Prices, 23 Ed. 3. 6.
2. Corporations may set the Rates, 3 H. 8. 8. 12 Ed. 4. 3.
3. Justices may assesse the Price of Wines, 24 H. 8. 14. And who may sell Wines, and how, see Stat. 7 Ed. 6. 5. 5 Eliz. 5. 1 Jac. 25. 8 Eliz. 9, 10.

CHAP. CXXVI.

Of Prerogative.

Prerogative,
what.

Prerogative is (in a Legal sense) the Priviledg, Power, or Preheminence that is given to one man above another, to have or do something more then another. And this is either separable, or inseparable; certain, or casual.

Señ. 1.

Lord Protector.

This Prerogative is greater and less, according to the quality of the Persons in whose hands it is. And because the King was, as the Lord Protector now is supreme and above all others, being killed by Law, the Head of the Commonwealth, Father of the Country, Master of the whole Family of the Nation, Chief Justice of all England, and a kind of Perry-God on Earth; the Law (for the excellency of his person) did attribute to him (similarly after a kind, and by way of resemblance) divers of the Excellencies of God: as Immortality; and therefore in some sense he was said not to die, and the death of the King was called the Demise of the King: Sovereignty, Majesty, Power, Verity, Justice, and the like.

King, what.

For this purpose he is considered in a twofold capacity; the one Politick, the other Natural. In the first capacity it is, that he is said just, yet not absolute as God is, but limited; yet he was said not to die, &c. not to do injustice, that he cannot do wrong. And upon this account it is, that the Lands, Jewels and Goods he hath in this capacity as Head of the Commonwealth, and are the Lands and Goods of the Commonwealth, shall go after his death to his Successor, not to his Heir or Executor. But considered in his Natural capacity, he dieth like other men, and his Lands and Goods he hath in this capacity shall go to his Heir and Executors as the Lands and Goods of other men, and not to his Successor.

And yet these Capacities do somewhat participate one of another. And therefore all Obligations and Especialties made to him (whatsoever they be) shall go to his Heirs or Executors at his own disposing. See for these things, Stamf. Prerogative cap. 1. Co. 11. 74. 12 H. 7. 19. 10 H. 7. 18. 1 H. 7. 18. 7 Ed. 4. 17. Stat. 3 H. 7. ch. 8. 21 H. 7. 21. Co. 7. 7. 6. 27. Plow. 338. 331. and other places.

In the opening of this point, we shall first shew his Prerogative alone; and what he of himself may have and do more then any other man. These things we shall distinguish into, 1. The things he is to have and do by the ancient Common and Statute Laws of the Land. 2. The things he is to have and do by the New Act of Government. In shewing of his Power, we shall shew, 1. What he may not do. 2. What he may do. 2. Then in the second place, we shall set forth his Power as he is assisted by, and accompanied with his Parliament. 3. And then we shall speak of his Power, as it is assisted by, and joyned with his Council.

The Lord Protector alone hath very many large and great Privileges and Pre-eminencies given him (as in the place of the King) by the ancient Laws of the Nation, and by the New Act of Government, above all other men. And these are some of them more Royal, as to make Judges, confer Honors, and the like. And some are less Royal, as to grant Waifs, Strays, &c. Some of them are inseparable to his Office, and cannot be granted over and communicated to, or taken or used by others. Some of them are in matter of Profit; some in matter of Honor and State only: Some of them do consist in doing, and some in having and taking. As in the particulars that follow.

The King was, and the Lord Protector is stinted and restrained by the ancient Laws of this Nation, thus. That he cannot make or alter Laws, or change Customs: He cannot make a man inheritable to Land, that is not inheritable; change the Custom of Gavelkind, create a new Manor, change a Hariot-Custom into Money, create a Copihold-Tenure.

He may not sell, deny or delay to any man the Law as the mean, nor Justice and Right as the end. He may not therefore by his Letters forbid Judges to do right, or command them to do wrong; nor, did he, are they to obey him. Much less may he do wrong and injustice. The Rule is therefore, Nihil aliud, &c. (i) He may do nothing but what of right he may do. Potentia injuria est impotentia: It is weakness to be strong to do evil. (See the Authorities before cited)

The King could not therefore compel his people to make or yield any Gift, Loan, Benevolence, Taxe, or such like Charge, without common consent by Act of Parliament: He could not compel men to give, or lend him money, and upon refusal administer an unlawful Oath, nor constrain men to be bound to make appearance before, and give attendance upon him and his Privy-Council, nor imprison, confine, or otherwise molest them for it.

He could not without cause shewed imprison any man, or when any man was imprisoned, keep him and his Cause from his Trial at Law, and sending into the Courts of Justice being sent for by Habeas corpus, &c. or command a man to Prison against the Writs and Process of Law.

He could not in time of Peace billet or quarter Soldiers or Mariners upon men against their will in their houses, nor give Commissions to try men by Martial Law. For, all these things were declared by the whole Parliament to be against the Fundamental Laws of the Nation, 3 Car. The Petition of Rights.

K k k k k

He

The Prerogative of the Lord Protector alone.

1. What he cannot do, or have.

Sec. 2.

He may not make nor inflict Punishments or Mulcts upon any man for any thing as an offence, which the Law doth not make an offence; nor greater, or other, or otherwise than the Law appointeth.

Nor may he enter upon or take away any mans lands or goods, but in a course of Law another man may do. And therefore it is, that if Goods be pledged for Ten pounds to a man that by some offence hath forfeited it to the Lord Protector, he must pay the Ten pounds, if he will have the Pledge.

He cannot suppress lawful Trades, nor grant Monopolies, or do any such like things to grieve or prejudice his Subjects, though it be only in Recreation, if it be lawful.

Cons. 187. Flow. 487.

All these (and such like things he may not do by the antient and standing Laws of the Nation.) And now by the new Act of Government it is declared, 1. That he shall not alter, suspend, abrogate or repeal the Laws now in force. 2. That he cannot lay any Tax or Imposition of money, but by common consent in Parliament, or by the consent of his Council in one special case hereafter named. 3. He cannot enforce men by Laws and Penalties to change their Religion. 4. Nor alter or revoke any thing in the Writing of Government, Govern. Numb. 31, 36, 37, 38, 41.

What he may have, and do.

Now for the things which he by his Prerogative may have, receive and do more than ordinary men, they consist in these things following.

The Lord Protector, called by the Government, The Protector of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland and Ireland; He is the Supreme Magistrate of the three Nations; and from him as from a fountain is all Magistracie and Justice to be derived.

In the making of Officers and Courts of Justice.

He now by the Act of Government hath, as the Kings heretofore had by the Laws of the Nation, the making of all subordinate Officers and Ministers of Justice, Commissioners, Judges, Justices, Sheriffs, and the rest; save only the Chancellors, Keepers of the Great Seal, the Treasurer, Admiral, Chief Governors of Ireland and Scotland; and the Chief Justices of both the Benches, who by Art. 34. of the Government, are to be chosen by the approbation of Parliament, and in the intervals of Parliament by the approbation of the major part of the Council, to be afterwards approved by the Parliament. And if any new Courts of Justice be to be erected, he must do it, Flow. 498. Government, Numb. 3, 26. Stat. 27 H. 8. 34.

In the conferring of Honors.

All Honors likewise flow from him: And therefore if any be to be made Duke, Marquis, Earl, Viscount, Knight, or the like, he must make them such. Govern. Numb. 3, 26.

In the stile of Writs, Commissions, &c.

All the Writs, Proseses, Commissions, Patents, Grants, and other things which did use to go in the name, and under the stile of the King, and after of the Keepers of the Liberty, &c. are now to go in the name and stile of the Lord Protector: And all persons that are sued for publike offences, are to be sued, and acts of Justice to be done in his name. Govern. Art. 2. 32.

In his Revenue and Income.

There were divers Manors, Honors, Castles, Houses and Lands, Jewels and Goods antiently belonging to the Kings as Kings, annexed to the Crown; most of which are sold: But that which remaineth, he is to have. And now by the Government he is to have a constant yearly Revenue provided and settled by the Customs and such other ways as he and his Council shall agree upon; to maintain the standing Army and Navy, and to make up Two hundred thousand pounds a year to defray the other necessary Charge for Administration of Justice, and expence of the Government, Art. 27. And by the 31 Article of the Government it is declared, That all the Lands whatsoever unfold and undisposed, belonging to the Commonwealth, (except the Forests and Chafes and Lands thereto belonging, the Lands of the Rebels in Ireland, in the Counties of Dublin, Cork, Kildare and Caserlagh, and the Land forfeit in Scotland in the late Wars, and the Lands of Papists and Delinquents in England who have not compounded) that they be vested in the Lord Protector and his Successors; not to be aliened but by consent of Parliament.

In things forfeit.

He hath a Prerogative in Lands and Goods forfeited for offences done. And as to this, these things are to be known.

1. That

1. That in case of Attainder of Treason, he is to have all the Lands of the Traitor of whomsoever they be held; and his entailed, as well as his Fee-simple Land.

2. And in case of Attainder of Felony, he is to have all the Lands of the Felon that are held of the Protector himself, and all the rest of his Lands of whomsoever they be held, for one year and a day, to the end he may make a destruction upon them. And in cases of Treason and Felony both, he is to have the Forfeiture of all the Goods and Chattels of the Offender, unless some other can make a Title to them by Grant of some of the Kings, or by Custom or Prescription, (which was by Grant at first.) But for this see Forfeiture, Treason, and Felony. Co. upon Lit. 310.

3. He is to have (in rigor of Law) as forfeit by every man outlawed in any personal Action, an Appeal of Maihme, or Indictment of Treipass, all his Goods and Chattels of what nature soever for ever, and the profits of all his Land for the Offenders own life. For this see Outlawry.

4. All the Forfeitures, or parts of Forfeiture that are limited and given by any penal Law to the King, Commonwealth, Keepers of the Liberties, shall go to him, according to the limitation of the Law. See Statutes.

5. All the Fines and Amerciaments generally imposed upon Offenders in any of the Courts of Justice at Westminster, are given to him, and he shall have them, if they have not been granted away by former Kings. See Fines and Amerciaments.

6. All Issues forfeit by default of Appearance, and the like, are given to him also.

7. If Lands be given to Superstitious uses, he shall have them as forfeit. See Uses.

8. If an Alien purchase Land, the Lord Protector shall have it from him as forfeit. See Alien.

9. And all Debts due by Recognisances and the like Engagements forfeit, are his. But for all this of Forfeiture in general, see 9 Aff. 63. 25 Ed. 3. 2. 17 Ed. 2. 14. 17 H. 8. 25. 9 H. 3. 22.

10. It is by the 31. Article of the Government declared, That all Debts, Fines, Issues, Amerciaments, Penalties and Profits certain and casual, due to the Keepers of the Liberties, &c. shall be due to him to be paid in the publique Receipt; and be sued for in his name.

He is by his Prerogative to have divers other matters of profit. As,

1. The King was to have the First-fruits, (that is) the profits of one year, and the Tenth after of all the Spiritual Livings. But this it seems is now disposed to other uses. For this see Service of God, and Statutes 26 H. 8. 3. 25 H. 8. 20. 27 H. 8. 8. 32 H. 8. 23.

2. He is to have all Mines of Gold and Silver, and that are mixed with other Oar, if the Gold and Silver be of the greater value, in whose ground soever they be found, Plow. 314. Cromp. Jur. 112.

3. All Waifs, Estrays, Wreck, do originally belong to him, and he must have them, unless any Subject can shew a Grant, or a Custom or Prescription for them, Plow. 315. Stams. Prer. 40.

4. All the Lands and Goods that no man can make any property in, are his: As the Lands that are gotten by the Sea or Seavern are his, and not the mans whose Land is adjoining.

5. He is to have all the Royal Fishes, as Whales, Sturgeons, and the like; and Fowls, as Swans, and such like, by whomsoever or wheresoever they be taken.

6. The Tythes that arise in such places in Forrests as are not within any County, are his.

7. All Coin and Treasure found under, or above ground, whose Owner cannot be known, doth belong to him or his Patentee, Co. 7. 16. Plow. 315. Stams. Prer. 40.

8. By the antient Common-Law, the King might have made any Coin he had pleased current here by his Proclamation only; and the Value, Weight, Baseness and Fineness, Stamp and Print thereof were wholly at his disposal. But for other Weights and Measures, the King could not alter them by his Proclamation. And now also it seems, in the Coin he can make no alteration, because it is settled by Parliament, Act 17 July, 1696. Co. 5. 114. Plow. 316.

- In the Lands of Ideots, &c. 9. He is to have the Custody of the Body and Lands of Natural Fools and Ideots, and he is to take their Lands during their lives without doing waste, 17 Ed. 2. 9; 32 H. 8. 46. See Ideot. He also is to preserve the Lands of Lunaticks, 17 Ed. 2. 10; Co. 2 par. Inst. 14.
- In Wardships, &c. 10. The Kings formerly had the Wardships of those Heirs under age, that their Antecessors held their Lands by the Capite-Tenure; and divers profits he had by this Tenure: But all this is gone, and the Law herein now changed. See Gard. So also the Kings had formerly a Prerogative in the Temporalities of the Bishops, during the vacation: But this is also now lost and gone with the Bishops.
- In Temporalities of Bishops. 11. He is to have the Customs to be paid by Merchants for the Goods and Merchandises that are brought into, and carried out of the Land. See for this
- In Customs and Impos. Customs.
- In making of Corporations. 12. He alone by his Prerogative may make what Corporations he pleaseth, Finches ley 84.
- Franchises. 13. About Franchises, 1. He may make and grant Franchises, Fairs, Markets, and the like; and it is said he may impose a small Toll where none was before. But most of those Franchises which belong to him, he may grant over to others, as Felons goods, Waifs, Estrays, and the like. See for this, Franchises. 2. He may by a Quo War-ranto put any man to shew what Right he hath to any Franchise. 3. And it is said he alone may infringe the Liberties he himself hath granted to another, without a Non omittas, Pasche 21 Jac. by Coke and Hobard in the Exchequer.
- About Denization. 14. He alone may make of an Alien a Denizen; but he cannot Naturalize him. See Alien.
- About Entire things. 15. In case of entire things, he shall have all. If one Obligee be outlawed, the Lord Protector shall have the whole Obligation.
- In Assent to Bills in Parliament. Royal Assent. There are other Prerogatives, that are not so much in matter of profit; As, 1. The King had a Prerogative called a Royal Assent; which was to the Election of a Bishop by a Dean and Chapter, and to a Bill passed by both Houses of Parliament. All the power that the Lord Protector hath herein now, is: The Bill agreed upon in Parliament must be presented to him, and he must have twenty days time to consider it; and if in that time he do not assent to it, nor satisfy the Parliament about it, the Parliament may pass it for a Law without him. Government, Art. 26.
- In Pardons. 2. He may pardon any offence (but Treason and Murder) after, not before the offence is committed: And he may restore the Offender to his lands and goods: And he may prevent a further Corruption of Blood, but the Blood that is corrupted be cannot restore; nor can he by his Pardon prevent an Appeal, 31. 27 H. 8. 24, 35. Bro. ch. 356. March 213. Government, Art. 4.
- About making of Proclamations. 3. No public Proclamation can be made by any but by him; only in some Corporations they claim it by Custom, and it is probable it came at first by a Kings grant. See Proclamation.
- About a Protection. 4. No Protection for a Defendant can be to keep him off from a Suit, but by him, which can be but for a time, and because he is in his service, F. N. B. 28. 25 Ed. 3. 19.
- About Patents to beg. 5. He only can give Patents to beg; and without such a Patent no man can beg.
- About making Appropriations, Forfeits and Castles. 6. No Appropriation could have been made, nor Tenant in Capite have aliened, or his Wife have married without his Licence. No Forfeist could have been made but by the King. But these things are gone, or out of use. No man may build a Castle now without his leave. Charta de Forrefta, 1 Ed. 4. 1. 27 H. 8. ch. 24.
- Stat. 4. About matters of War. 7. By the antient Common-Law, the King alone commanded the Militia by Sea and Land; might have raised War against, and made Peace with any Nation, and therein might have required all men bound by their Tenure, to serve him according to their Tenure; but this Tenure is now gone. But all other men were by Law to serve the King in his Wars; only this, he could not force them to serve him at their own charge. For the rest, see War. But now by the Government, Art. 5, 6, the Lord Protector (sitting the Parliament) is to dispose and order the Militia and Forces Forces both by Sea and Land, and direct in all things concerning the holding of a good Correspondence with Foreign States, by consent of Parliament; and in the Intervals of Parliament, he is with the advice and consent of the major part of his Council to dispose and order it. And in Art. 27. it is declared, that Ten thousand Horse and Dragoons, and Twenty thousand Foot be kept and maintained in England, Scotland and Ireland, for the defence thereof, and a convenient number of Ships to guard the Seas; and that a constant Revenue for the Pay of them be settled by the Lord Protector and his Council, not to be altered but in Parliament.

8. His Person is privileged, and cannot be arrested in any case, nor his Goods taken for a Distress, Toll, Custom, or otherwise; nor can he be sued as other men are sued.

About Arrest of his person or his goods.

About a Presentment to a Church.

9. He hath a Prerogative in many things above others about a Presentment to a Church, wherein these things are to be known. 1. If he present to a Church by Lapse, and the party die before Induction, he shall present again, Co. 9. 132. 2. The Church shall not be said to be full against him till Induction, Bro. Present. 46. 3. There shall be no Lapse against him, but he may present notwithstanding, Prerog. Reg. cap. 9. 4. Double and treble Usurpations cannot hurt his Inheritance to the Presentment. And yet if a Common person usurp and present upon him, and the Clerk of the Usurper is instituted and inducted; the Lord Protector may not present till he have removed him by a Quare impedit, Co. 6. 30. 5. Plenarie is no bar to him in a Quare impedit, Co. 7. 28. See more in this, Stat. 13 Ed. 3. 1. 13 R. 2. 1. 4 H. 4. 12. 6. And now by the new Ordinance, That such as do not present to Benefices void within six months after the avoidance, to the Commissioners for Approbation, a fit person; the Lord Protector shall present for that turn, Ordin. March 20. 1653. 7. And where a Minister is put out for Scandal, &c. the Patron hath four months to present; and if he do it not in this time, it doth come to the Lord Protector by lapse, Ord. 30 Aug. 1654.

10. No Act of his shall be construed an Estoppel, to conclude and prejudice him.

About Estoppel.

11. He hath a Prerogative above others in his Possession; which doth lie in these things. 1. He cannot be put out of possession of a permanent thing, as Land, or the like. And therefore if one that had been his Ward, had made a Feoffment of his Land whereof he had the Wardship, this had not put him out of possession, nor can he be disseised of his Land. But otherwise it is of a transitory thing, as of a Ward, Advowson, or the like. 2. No Freehold or matter of Inheritance can be translated from him to another by matter in fact alone; but by matter in fact, and matter of Law together, it may be divested. 3. There can be no Discontinuance of any Land, whereof there is any Reversion or Remainder in him. See for these things, H. 7. 19. Stat. Prerog. 74. 75. Plow. 553. 32 H. 8. 36. 34 H. 8. 20. 4. The Sale of his Goods in a Market, will not take away his Property therein, Hil. 6 Jac. per Chief Justice.

About his possession and estate, and property of lands and goods.

Discontinuance.

Property.

12. No Laches nor folly shall be imputed to him, nor shall he be hurt thereby. And therefore a Fine, and no Claim in five years, or a Lapse to a Presentation of a Church cannot hurt him. And yet he shall be barred by twenty years possession upon the Statute of 21 Jac. 1 H. 7. 14. 17 Ed. 1. 8.

About Laches.

Time of Limitation.

13. He may by his Officers require things necessary for the provision of his Household and Stable, of them that have to spare, at reasonable Rates, and cannot be denied. See for this in Purveyors.

About Purveyance.

14. The Kings Palace at Westminster did extend from Charing Cross to Westminster Hall. And the same, and some other of the Kings ancient Palaces have divers Privileges annexed to them, 28 H. 8. 12.

About his Palaces at Westminster and elsewhere.

15. His Servants in Ordinary are privileged by Law from serving any such Offices as may require their attendance; as the Office of Constables, Churchwardens, and the like. But if any shall put themselves into his Office Extraordinary, of purpose to escape Offices, this will not do, Resolution of the Judges.

About his Servants.

16. He may countermand his Presentment to a Church at any time before Induction and Induction, which another may not do. Dyer 481 202.

About Countermand.

In Equality of Titles.

17. If his Title and another mans come together, he shall be preferred. And therefore if a man make a Feoffment in Fee of Land, on Condition that the Feoffee shall not commit Treason, and he doth so; the Lord Protector shall have the Land, Brownl. 1 par. 20. Goldsb. 20.

There are yet divers other things wherein the Lord Protector hath a Prerogative above other men: As,

In Exemption
from Statutes.

1. In things that do relate to the penal Laws and Statutes of the Nation. For the opening whereof, these things are to be known. First, that albeit he shall have advantage by any penal Law or Statute, as another man shall, though he be not named in the Statute; yet he shall not be bound by any Statute in the affirmative or negative, that doth restrain him, or that may be prejudicial to him in his Prerogative, as the Statutes of Limitation, Merton chap. 8. 32 H. 8. 2. 32 H. 6. 6. Westm. 2. 5. 13 Eliz. 10. Or that doth bar him of some Estate, Right, Title or Interest that he hath, unless he be particularly named in the Statute, as in Westm. 1. 35. 25 Ed. 3. 11. And yet such Statutes as are expressly, or by consequence pro bono publico, being to suppress fraud, wrong, or any wickedness, as the Statute de Donis; these do binde him, unless he be particularly excepted, Co. 11. 68. upon Lis. 43. Co. 4. 33. 5. 14. Plow. 240. 223. Crompt. Jur. 15. Secondly, He may dispense with penal Laws:

In Dispensation with Penal Laws.

And as to this, these things are to be known. 1. When there is any necessity, or reason of inconvenience to the party with whom he doth dispense, he may dispense with breach of any Statute that is penal, when the Forfeiture is popular, and given to him alone, if it be so that the thing to be dispensed with be malum prohibitum: But if the thing to be dispensed with be malum in se, or there be not some special reason for a dispensation, he cannot dispense with it: And yet this also which is malum in se, he may pardon after it is done; and therefore it is held he may license a man to coin money, but cannot license him to levy a Nuisance in the High-way, Co. 11. 86. 2 H. 7. 6. Bro. Parl. 16. 28 Ed. 3. 46. 21 Jac. 3. 11 H. 6. 7. Plow. 246. 2. If a Statute say, that the Kings Licence in that case shall be void, and the Licence have a Clause of Non obstante in it; there it is held to be good, 11 H. 7. 11. 3. But a Licence with, or without a Non obstante, to dispense with a Statute before it is made, cannot be good. And therefore it hath been held, that a Licence to carry Bell-metal notwithstanding any Statute that shall be made to the contrary, is void, 11 H. 7. 7. 23 H. 6. 18. Dyer 52. 4. He may dispense with his Chaplain while he is attending his service, Articuli Cleri, chap. 8. See for this, Co. 3 par. Inst. chap. 26.

Sec. 6.

In Suits.

2. He hath Prerogative above other men about Suits; and that either in Suits brought by him against others, or brought by others against him: As to the Suits brought by him against others, take these things. 1. He may in his Suits brought in any Court, (for he may sue where he will) amend his Declaration the same or another Term, F. N. B. 7. Crompt. Jur. 18. 2. He cannot be Non-suited in any Action, Bro. ch. 1. 8. 3. He may put in double matter, and the party must answer to it all, 6 H. 7. 5. 14. He may waive his Issue, and demur in Law; or waive a Demurrer, and plead to Issue in the same Term; but not in another Term, 7 H. 6. 84. 5. No Wager of Law can be in a Suit of his, or a Suit concerning him, as in Quo minus brought by another in the Exchequer, Co. 4. 95. 6. He may have an Action of Accompt against Executors, Plow. 321. Lis. 118. 7. His Title is always found by Office, and he is not to be put to a real Action for the Trial thereof. 8. He shall pay no Costs, nor others that sue to his use, Bro. c. 353. 9. He shall recover Costs in all Suits brought by him upon any Especialty, 33 H. 8. 39. 20 H. 6. If any man be indicted of Treason or Felony, which is always at his suit, and the party accused deny the fact, he can have no Council to plead for him: But if it be matter of Law that he hath pleaded, he shall have Council to plead for him, 1 H. 7. 3. Stauf. Perreg. 1. 101. No Plaintiff that doth sue to his use, shall pay Costs in any such Suit, 24 H. 8. 8. 19. No Juror in a Suit between him and another, may be challenged by his Adversary: But he may challenge a Juror without shewing of any cause, Fincher. 101. And for Suits brought by others against him, he hath these Preeminences above others. 1. He may not be sued as another man may be; but whoever will sue him, he must sue by Petition in the Chancery, Stat. Prer. 76. Plow. 553. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. ch. 19. 2. Nor can he be vouched on a Warranty, which is in the nature of a Suit, and yet one may have aid of him, 15 H. 7. 10. 3. Nor shall he be received, Plow. 553. 4. In cases where he is made a party to a Suit, or may be prejudiced in any Real Action, a Writ of Search lieth, which is to search in the Treasury before the Plea proceeth, if any thing may be there found to maintain his Title. But in an Ejectione firmæ or Personal Action, this may not be granted, Stat. 27 H. 8. 18. Dyer 320. Co. upon Lit. 77. See more in the next.

will

5. If a thing in Action be granted to him, he may sue for it in his own name, Dyer 232. 6. The Lord Protector hath Prerogative above other men about the means of getting and recovery of any thing that is due to him from another. And for the opening of this, these things are to be known.

Search, what.

1. All Obligations and Especialties made unto him, are in the nature of Statutes Staple, and he shall have that remedy upon them for the gaining of his Debt, as another man hath upon a Statute Staple. For which see Stat. 33 H. 8. chap. 39. 14 Eliz. 4.

About the Recovery of his Debt or Duty.

2. Though Heirs be not named in the Especialty, yet they shall be bound by it, 33 H. 8. 39.

3. All the Lands that a man hath (of what Estate soever he hath it) his Body and Goods also, shall be subject to the payment of the Debts men owe to him: And if the Debtor die, all his Lands (whether entailed or otherwise) all his Goods and Chattels shall be put in Execution to satisfy the Lord Protector's debt. And herein also he shall have Preheminence: He shall be first paid, although he do not first bring his Action against the Executors or Administrators. And thus he may recover, albeit there be no Executor or Administrator. But if there be Goods to satisfy, the Lands are not to be medled with. See for this, Stat. 33 H. 8. 39. 9 H. 3. 18. 27 Eliz. 3. 33 Eliz. 4. 14 Eliz. 4. Plow. 440. Co. 7. 19. 8. 171. 7. 20. Plow. 340. 241. 301. Co. 3. 4. 11. 203. Mag. charta, ch. 81.

4. And yet if an Executor bona fide shall sell a Lease left him, or any Issue in tail shall bona fide sell his entailed Lands; these Sales are good, and he shall not have Execution of this Land, Plow. 340. 249. Co. 11. 93.

5. And if two Jointenants be of Land, and one of them be indebted to the Lord Protector, he may not have Execution of the other Jointenants part, 40 Ass. 1. 36.

6. If there be Sureties for these Debts, they are not to be medled with where the Principals be sufficient and willing to pay, 33 H. 8. 39.

7. He shall have a Distringas, a special Writ to bring in the party.

8. And for Officers and others that take up his money, or are Accomptants to him, their persons, lands and goods of what nature soever, in their own or their Executors or Administrators, or in the hands of whomsoever, (if they have them by Covin) shall be chargeable for it. For it is a Rule, That if any Accomptant to the King be, for any money, goods or chattels come to his hands, or any such thing come of his into the hands of a Subject by matter of Record or matter in fait, that all the Land of such a Subject is chargeable for it, and the Kings Officers may seise the same into whose hands soever it is come afterwards by descent, purchase, or otherwise: And all the Land that any such Officer or Debtor hath at the time of his being Officer or in Debt, is chargeable for the Debt. But it seems no Goods are chargeable, but such as the Debtor hath at the time of the Extent and Execution. And no shifting Devise of the Accomptant in this case by purchasing Lands in other mens names, or the like fraudulent Conveyance, will prevent the Lord Protector of his full remedy against it. And if the Accomptant come not in to accompt, or withdraw himself from his Accompt, he forfeits his Office, and may be further punished. See for all this, *Stat. 7 Jac. 15. 27 Eliz. 3. 14 Eliz. 4. 7. against his Debter, supposing that hereby he is disabled to pay the Lord Protector, and in this Suit the Plaintiff hath many Priviledges that other men have not.

9. His Suits for his Debts shall be in the proper Court where they grow due, 33 H. 8. 39.

In taking Distress.

10. His Officers in distraining for him, may do that which other men may not do, as in these things, (i.) For Issues lost, they may distrain in any place, the Highway or Street, and upon the Church-land. But the Oxen of the Plough may not be taken, no, nor for the Lord Protector in any case, if there be enough besides to be had, Co. 2 par. Inst. 132.

11. For Rents due to him, he may either call for them in by Process out of the Exchequer, or recover them by Distress. Wherein these things must be known,

1. He may distrain for a Rent-seck, as well as for any other Rent. 2. He may distrain for any Rent-charge, Seck or Service out of the Land charged with it, or out of which it issueth, and out of the Seignory and Manor upon any of the Lands of the same Tenant which he hath in his own hands, and doth manure with his own Cattel. But the Cattel of his Lessee for life, years, or at will upon their Land so held, are not liable to this distress. 3. He may distrain for such a Rent in the Highway or Street. 4. It seems he may sell the Distress, if the Owner do not redeem it in the time of fifteen days. 5. But in case of Forfeiture of a Rent for not payment, there it seems the Lord Protector must make his demand as another man must do. See for all this, Co. 2 par. 132. Brownl. 1 par. 17, 18. 6. Delay of payment of the Rent to him, is very penal and dangerous. See Stat. 33 H. 8. 39. 7. The money in another Court may be arrested for his Debt, Plow. 322.

About Grants from, and to him
Infant.

4. He hath a Prerogative above all others in matters of Grants and Gifts. And that either in such as are made by him to others, or such as are made by others to him. As to the first, these things are to be known.

1. He may, though he be an Infant and under age, give or grant any thing; and Nonage in the King would not have hurt his Grant, Bro. chap. 373. 6. upon Lit. 43.

2. Nothing but things in Action, Chattels personal, and transitory things, is Felons goods and the like, will pass from him otherwise then by matter of Record, 1 H. 7. 14. Plow. 553. Dyer 232.

3. He may grant over to another a Thing in Action, a Possibility, a Condition, and such like thing not grantable by any other man, 2 H. 7. 8. See Chafe in Action.

4. He may in his Gift or Grant except and sever a thing that in its own nature is inseparable, Dyer 288.

5. His Grant shall not be construed to enure to several intents, nor to any other intent then what is expressed in the Deed; nor to enure to two intents, unless they be both expressed in the Patent, Plow. 502. Bro. Pat. 44. 37 H. 6. 20.

6. He may give or grant Fee-simple on Condition not to alien, which another cannot do, 21 H. 7. 8.

7. He may upon an Estate granted by him, reserve a Rent to a stranger, which another man cannot do, 21 H. 7. 8.

8. When it doth appear in the body of the Grant, that he is deceived either by a false Suggestion, or with a false Consideration, or in a point of Law, he may avoid his own Grant. And therefore it is held, that if he grant Land to one and his Heirs-males, that this is void; for he intends by this a Fee-tail, and this in Law is a Fee-simple, Plow. 455. Co. 11. 74. 10. 110. Goldsb. 120. 20.

9. Every Gift and Grant of his made upon the surmise of the party, shall be construed most beneficially for him, and most against the party to whom it is made, Co. 10. 110, 111. 37 H. 6. 20. and shall have a most benigne interpretation. And therefore if an Obligation be made by two jointly and severally, and he release to one of them, this will not release the other, as it will in the case of a common person. And if a Lease be made of three Acres, reserving Rent upon Condition, and the Reversion is granted away of two Acres; this, if it be in the case of a common person, is an Extinguishment of the Condition; but otherwise it is if it be by the Lord Protector, Co. 5. 112.

10. Knight

And as touching Grants made to him, these things are to be known. 1. He cannot take any Lands, though it be but for years, but by matter of Record, as Office, or the like; and so the thing will pass without Livery of Seisin: But all Gifts and Grants to him of Land in any other manner, are void. But for Obligations, Chattels personal, and Transitory things, as Catalla Felonum & Fugitivorum, Wreck, Treasure-Trove, the profits of Land, of a person outlawed in a personal Action; to these he may be entitled without Office or matter of Record, Co. 11. 77. Pl. 242. Dyer 232. 2. A Thing in Action, as a Debt, or the like, may be granted or assigned to him, and he may sue for it in his own name, Dyer 232. Stat. 7 Jac. ch. 15. But they must be such as grew due to his Debtor or Accomptant bona fide, and not otherwise.

The Power of the Lord Protector assisted and joyned with the Parliament, is in these things. 1. The supreme Legislative power is in them over England, Scotland and Ireland; and they together may make Laws: But if he agree not to their Bills in twenty days, they may pass them without him, Government Art. 2. 32. 2. He is to order and dispose the Militia during the Parliament with their consent, Government Art. 4. 3. So also is he during this time to direct all things concerning the keeping of Correspondencie with Foreign Princes and States with their consent, Government Art. 5. 4. The raising of money to bear the charges of the Forces by Sea and Land, must be by the Parliament. 5. And yet a constant yearly Revenue for the maintenance of the ordinary Forces, is to be settled by the Lord Protector and his Council. See Government Art. 27. and see Parliament.

The power of the Lord Protector assisted with his Parliament.

The Council of the Lord Protector, are such Officers as are chosen and sworne to assist him in the exercise of the chief Magistracie and Administration of the Government of the three Nations. For their Election, Number, and Oath, see Government Art. 21. 41.

Of the Council.

The Power of the Lord Protector assisted with his Council, is in these things. 1. The exercise of the chief Magistracie, and Administration of the Government of the People of England, Scotland and Ireland, is in the Lord Protector assisted with his Council, Government Art. 2. 2. The Lord Protector with advice and consent of the greater part of this Council, in the Intervals of Parliament, are to order the Militia and Forces by Sea and Land, direct in all things a Correspondencie with Foreign Princes and States; and they have the power of the Militia, and of the making of War and Peace, Government Art. 5. 3. They are to raise, settle and establish out of the Customs, and by other ways they shall think fit a yearly Revenue to be paid in to and issued out of the publique Treasury, to maintain Ten thousand Dragoons and Horse, and Twenty thousand Foot for the security of the three Nations, and for a convenient number of Ships for the guarding of the Seas, and Two hundred thousand pounds a year besides to defray the other charge for Administration of Justice, and other expences of Government; not to be altered but by the Lord Protector and the Parliament. And if any Abatement be made of these Forces, and money thereby saved, it shall be employed to publique use by consent of Parliament, when any is, or else by the Lord Protector and his Council, Government Art. 27, 28, 29. 4. He and they are to approve or disapprove of the union or severing of Churches. See Religion. 5. They also are to approve of all Grants of, and Additions to, and Substractions from Augmentations. See Religion.

Of Priviledges.

Priviledges,

Señ. 1.
The kinds.

Writ of Privi-
ledg.

Priviledges are Liberties and Franchises granted to a Person, Office, Place, Town or Manor, or which they do claim above other persons or places.

And these are either Personal, or Real. The personal Priviledge is that which is granted to any person either against, or besides the course of the Common-Law. As for example; A Parliament-man may not be arrested himself, or any of his Attendants during the time of the Parliament. An Officer attending in the Chancery, or Court of Upper-Bench, or Common-Pleas, regularly cannot be sued in any other Court, but must be sued in his own Court, and is to be exempt from certain Offices: And if he be sued elsewhere, he may remove the Suit by Writ of Priviledg, in which is included a Superfedas, and on which he may have an Attachment. So Tenants in ancient Demefne.

The Real Priviledges of Places are many: As of the Universities, as that none of them shall be called to Westminster in Suits upon any Contract. Ancient Demefn-Manors, and Townsmen and Citizens in divers ancient Towns to be exempt from Toll, and the like. Of this nature is Toll, Turn, Sake, Soke, Infangthief, Outfangthief, and Ordelf, and the like. All this began by the Kings Grant, but is now claimed by Custom and Prescription. For all which, and that which doth concern this Title, see more in Franchises, chap. and in Dyer 61. 328. 377. 9 Ed. 4. 53. 27 H.8. 20. 2 H.7. 7. Finches ley, 321. St. 5 H. 8. 6. Crompton 4. 7. 11. 14. 1948. 52. 59. 230: See Custom and Prescription.

Who are priviledged from serving Office,

For Answer to this point, these things are to be known.

1. That all men are liable to serve the Offices of Constables, Churchwardens, and the like Offices, that are not persons exempt by Law, as all Clergy-men, Peers, and some others.
2. None but Men are to serve these Offices, not Widows or Maids.
3. Clerks attending the Courts at Westminster, and whose attendance is necessary, cannot be put in such an Office wherein a personal and continual attendance is necessary, as Constable, Churchwarden, or the like: But any Office that may be executed by Deputy, they may be forced to serve.
4. Some that heretofore had a desire to exempt themselves, made themselves Servants to the King Extraordinary; but the Judges did disallow it: otherwise the Kings Servants are to be exempt.
5. Physicians and Chyrurgeons in London are not to serve these Offices, but otherwise Physicians, Lawyers, and all such men are liable to serve in these Offices in extremity; but because of their much employment otherwise, they are thought fit to be spared, March, 30. See Physician.

CHAP. CXXVIII.

Of Privies, Parties, and Estrangers; and Prohibition.

Privies, Parties and Strangers are relative terms used in reference to many cases of Law. The Parties to a Fine or Deed, are those which are named therein as Parties to it; and in relation to them, all others are said to be strangers. Privies are said to be such, as by common intendment in respect of something hath passed between them, are acquainted with a thing done, and are partakers or have interest in it. And these are opposed or related in this respect to strangers, between whom no such dealing or Conveyance hath been. And in respect of this, there is said to be a Privy between them. The which is said to be either in Deed, or in Law.

Privies and Privities are also said to be either in Estate, as where a Lease is made at will for life or years, or a Feoffment in Fee, there is a Privy between Lessor and Lessee, Feoffor and Feoffee, and his Heirs, &c. and they are called Privies. So if one make a Lease for life of Land to A. the Remainder to B. here is a Privy of Estate between A. and B. and the Lessor. So between Jointenants, and between Parceners till partition, Husband and Wife, Donor and Donee in Tail, Gardein in Chivalry and his Gard, Tenant in Dower or by the Courtesie, and the Heir, there is a Privy, and they are Privies. So if a Gift be in Tail, the Remainder in Fee; there is a Privy between the Tenant in Tail, Donor, and he in Remainder in Fee. So if one lease for years, and after the Lessee assign all of part of the Term; the Assignee and the Lessor are Privies in Estate. So if the Lessor grant over his Reversion, or the Reversion elsewher; here is a Privy between the Grantee or the Lord by Escheat, and the Lessee, Co. 4. 117. 8. 42. id. 92. upon Lit. 252.

Another kind of Privies and Privities are in Contract, which is by reason of a personal Contract; and this extendeth only to the person of the Lessor and Lessee: As where a man doth make a Lease for years, there is such a Privy between the Lessor and Lessee, Co. 3. 23.

Another kind of Privy is in Estate and Contract both; and this can be between none but Lessor and Lessee. Another kind of Privy and Privies is by Deed. And this is where a Lease is made for life, and afterwards by another Deed the Reversion is granted to a stranger in Fee; this Grantee is called a Privy by Deed, because he hath the Reversion by Deed. Another sort are Privies in Law, which is where there is Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant leaseth the Tenancie for life, and dyeth without Heir, so that the Reversion doth escheat to the Lord; in this case he is said a Privy in Law, because that he hath his Estate only by the Law, that is, by Escheat; which is an act of the Law. And he sometimes is called a Privy in Tenure, Co. 4. 27. Perk. 117. 432. And so it is if the Tenant alien in Mortmain, and the Lord enter for a Forfeiture; here is a Privy in Law. So it is, where ever there is a Lord and a Tenant that holdeth by service, Co. 8. 43.

Another sort of Privies and Privities, are Privies in Blood, which are such as are linked in Consanguinity; as Heir general, Heir special, or Heir general and special, F. N. B. 137. Dyet 3. Co. 4. 126.

Another sort of Privies are Privies in Right only: So is it where one possessed of a Term granteth his Estate upon a Condition, and maketh his Executors, and dieth; in this case they are called Privies in Right or Representation. So also Administrators are called Privies in Right or Representation. Also the Successors of every Body Politick or Corporate, are called Privies in Right, Co. 4. 127. upon Lit. 17. 214. Dyet 112.

Privies in Succession, are the Successors of a Corporation. See more for this, Co. upon Lit. 310, 311. & 316, 317, 318. Co. 6. 58. 10. 48.

There is a Privy also by Delivery. If I deliver a man Goods to carry to D. and then he steal them, this is Felony; for the Privy is gone, when the Goods come there, Stamf. pl. Cor. lib. 2. 5.

Where a Privy is necessary, and what Privy, for the maintenance of an Action of Debt, Covenant, Waste, or for Entry for a Condition broken, making good of a Surrender or of a Release, see the Titles.

Where a Privy shall be said to be gone or no, but to continue still.

For answer to this, take these Cases. 1. If Tenant in tail do make a Lease for his own life, this doth not determine the privy of Estate. But if he make a Lease for anothers life, contra, Co. 8. 75. 2. Where Tenant in tail doth become Tenant after possibility of Issue extinct; this doth not determine the privy, Co. 8. 75. 3. The death of one Jointenant doth not determine the privy that was between them and the Lord above them, Co. 8. 75. But if one Jointenant assign away all his Estate, it is otherwise. 4. If Lessee for life or years assign away all his Estate, the Privy in Estate is gone between Lessor and Lessee; and so between Jointenants, if one assign all his Estate. But if the Assignment were only of part of the Estate, or of the whole upon a Condition, and he enter for the Condition broken, it were otherwise, Co. 8. 75. 5. If there be Lessor and Lessee for years rendering Rent, and the Lessee assign away all his Interest, yet the Privy doth continue, and the Lessor may bring an Action of Debt for the Rent still. But if the Lessor grant away the Reversion, the Privy and Action are gone, Co. 8. 75. 76. 6. If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant is disseised, yet the Privy of Tenure doth remain, Co. 8. 43.

Of a Prohibition.

Señ. i. Prohibition, what.

A Prohibition is a Writ framed for the forbidding of any Court to proceed in a Cause there depending, upon suggestion that the cognition thereof belongeth not to the said Court. But the word was usually taken for the Writ which did lie for one which was sued in the Spiritual Court for a cause belonging to the Temporal Jurisdiction. And by this Writ, the Party his Counsel, the Judge and Register were forbidden to proceed any further in the Cause, Fitz. Br. 39. It was usually granted to the High-Commission, Council of the Marches of Wales, and other Courts now abolished; and therefore we shall pass them over.

The proceeding in it.

And these Writs issue out of the Chancery, Upper-Bench, or Common-Pleas, and are grantable to the Court of Requests, Admiralty, County-Court, Court-Baron, or any other inferior Courts of Record; or not of Record now remaining, in cases where they meddle with things out of their Jurisdiction, or otherwise misbehave themselves; to command the Judges, Officers and Parties to proceed no further. And if they do proceed afterwards, an Attachment doth go forth against them for their Contempt. But if it do after appeal, that the matters for which he was impleaded in those inferior Courts, are to be determined there; then the party shall have a Writ of Consultation, commanding the Judges of that inferior Court to proceed again, and the cause shall be remanded to them: And then no new Prohibition was to be had. See for all this, Co. 4. 127. 11. 16. Brownl. 2 par. 1. 2. &c. many Statutes now of little use, and there is little of this at this day. But when it was given and granted, it was given and granted where the inferior Court did meddle beyond their Jurisdiction, as where the Spiritual Court did meddle with Lay matters, and other Courts did meddle beyond their Commission and Instructions, as when the County-Court or Court sue for above Forty shillings, or for Charters, or Freehold, or for Trespas vi & armis, &c. Or else they did deny Law and Justice to the Defendants there: As when in the Court of Requests they did sue for a Debt there after the time of Limitation, or a man hath a Release, and they will not allow it, or the like, Fitz. 46. 47. F. N. B. 46. O. N. B. 31. Bro. Justices 5.

Consultation.

Where it was grantable, or not.

The Indicavit is also much of the nature of the Prohibition, and was directed to the Court Christian, now gone, F. N. B. 36.

Consultation, what.

Consultation is a Writ, whereby a Cause that was formerly removed by a Prohibition out of an inferior to a superior Court, is sent back again, F. N. B. 50. March 141.

CHAP. CXXIX.

Of Property.

Property is the Right that a man hath to any thing which no way dependeth upon another mans courtesie : And he that hath this, is called a Proprietary. 1. Property, what.

Property is either of Lands, or of Goods and Chattels. And of both these there are said to be three kinds. 1. Absolute, which is where a man hath a power to do with a thing what one will ; and he hath such a Right in it, that therein he hath no dependance on any other. 2. Qualified or limited, which is a Property to some purposes only. So the Husband Proprietary, what. The kinds. Sect. 1. Husband and Wife.

hath property in his Wives real Chattels and Debts, by the Marriage ; but in her Chattels personal he hath an absolute property. So of a Pledge, he to whom it is pledged hath but a special property in it, and the general property is in him that did pledge. So Lessee for life or years hath a qualified or special property in the Trees growing on the Land, to shroud them, and to have the fruit and shadow of them ; but he cannot cut and take them away, as the Lessor who hath the general Property of them may do by the leave of the Lessee. Pledge. Lessor and Lessee.

There is also a possessory Property of Lands, Goods and Chattels. So a man may have a Possession of Lands, to which he hath no Right at all. And such a Property only a man hath in things which are fera natura, (i.) of a wild nature, as Fish in a Pond or River ; wild Beasts, as Deer, Conies and Hares, and the like, in a Field or Park ; or Fowl, as Pheasants, Partridges, Swans, or the like, by reason of Priviledge, as because it is a Free Warren, or the like, and old Pidgeons in or about a house. And yet if any of these things be made tame, as a Hawk be reclaimed, or a Deer, Ferret, Pidgeon, Cony, Pheasant, Partridge, or other such like Creature be made tame, so long as it is tame, a man is said to have a Property in them as in his Oxen and Kine. But if once they get away and turn wild again, not having animus revertendi, (i.) a mind to return, the Property is gone. And yet it is held, that a man whiles his Hawk is in flight of a Partridge, or his Hounds in pursuit of a Hare, or a mans Deer get out of his Park, and he make fresh pursuit after him ; that in these cases he hath a kind of property in the wild creature : But if they once get away from him, every man that can may take them. Also if a man take wild Beasts or Fowl, and keep them alive in a Room, though they be not tame, yet he hath a property in them whiles they are there. So also a man hath a property in Fish in a Trunk, young Pidgeons in his House or Boxes, young Hawks in his Wood till they flie : And if any take them away, he may have an Action of Trespass, and say they were his. So he may likewise for breaking his Close, and taking away his Conies, Deer, Pheasants or Partridges out of his Warren ; but he cannot say for taking [his] Deer, &c. Fera natura.

Nor can any Felony be committed by the taking away of any of these wild things, unless they be made tame : So also Felony may be by taking away the Fish of a Pond. But in all living tame things, as in Oxen, Cows, Sheep, Hens, Ducks, Geese, Capons, Horses, Swine, Goats, and their Eggs and young ones, and the like ; and in all dead things, as Emblements, Timber, Jewels, Householdstuff, Implements, Uensils, Money, Plate, Corn, Hay, wood fell'd, wares, merchandises, Carts, Ploughs, Instruments of Malick, Sect. 2. Felony.

Coaches, and such like Moveables, a man may have an absolute and general Property.

Trespass.

Also a man may have a Property in some things of a base nature, by the taking whereof no Felony can be committed; as a Blood-hound, Mastiff, Hounds, Spaniels, and the like: And for these a man may have an Action of Trespass, and say he took his Dog. And so a man may have a Property in Swans.

Action of the Case.
Trove.

Also of things that are of a tame nature, one man may have but a possessory, and another man may have the absolute Property. As for example: If I borrow a Horse or other thing for a purpose, in this case I have a special possessory property in it to use it to that purpose for which I borrowed it; and therefore he that hath the general property of it, which is the Lender, cannot take it away against our agreement; and if he do, I may have an Action of the Case against him for it. And if I borrow a Horse to ride to Dover, and ride out of the way, the Owner cannot take him away, but may have his Action of the Case against me for it. And if one man deliver the Goods to deliver over to another, he hath the general property or ownership of them, inasmuch that they may be taken in Execution for his Debt, and he may have a Trover for them: And I have such a possessory property in them, that if they be taken from me, I may have Trover for them. And thus (as it seems) one may have a special property in a Chattel personal during one's life by agreement, as where for money I hire a man's Horse for my life. And in all these cases of a double interest or property, one of them cannot deprive the other of his interest or property without injury, Co. 7. 17. Plow. 324. 21 H. 7. 14. 7 H. 7. 18. 8. Dyer 308. Co. 11. 145. 14 H. 8. 1. Kely. 88. 118. Ca 11: 30. March 12. 11. 34. 48. 77. 110. 118. Regis. 93. 101. 22 H. 6. 59.

Sec. 3.
2. How the Property of Lands or Goods may be gained or altered, or not.

The Property of Lands may be gained many ways: For a man may get the property or ownership of Lands by Entry, by Descent, by Escheat, or by Conveyance; and by Conveyance a man may take and get a Property in Land, and attain an Estate therein in Fee simple, Fee-tail, for life or years: And so he may have it by Fine, Recovery, Deed, or last Will. And by Deed he may take by way of Feoffment, Use, Gift, Grants, &c. See the Titles. Plow. 524. Dyer 334.

The Property of Goods and Chattels may be gained or altered by Act in Law; so by Forfeiture, Executorship, Administration, and the like: Or by Act of the party; so by Gift, Feoffment, Fine, Recovery, Use, Covenant, Grant, Bargain, Sale, and Will. And for things that are wild, a man may get a possessory or qualified property in them four ways. 1. By Industry, as when he maketh them tame. 2. Or by the place, when they are in his House or Chamber-close, or as Fish in a Trunk, or the like. 3. By weakness, as young Hawks or Pigeons. 4. By the privilege of the place, as in a Warren. But for the opening hereof further, take these Cases following.

By Act of Law.

1. If a Ship be taken by Piracie, or by Letters of Mart, and be not brought infra presidia of that King, by whose Subject it was taken; in this case it is no lawful prize, and the property not altered, and therefore the sale by the Taker thereof is void. March 110. 4188.

Forfeiture:

2. An Alien-Enemy doth take my Goods in battel, and a Denizen doth take them away from him, and the Owner doth not come and demand them before the forfeiture: by this they are lost, and the property is in him that did retake them, Kely. 62. 63. 58.

Felons goods.
Waif, Estray,
&c.

3. If Goods become forfeit by Felony, or as Goods waived, an Estray or Wreck; by this the Property is altered and removed from the Owner. See Waif, Estray, Forfeiture.

Goods attached.

4. Goods are attached to bring the party in to appear, and the Defendant doth make default and not appear; by this the Goods are forfeit, and the property altered. Dyer 338. Bro. Attach. 10.

Trespassor.

5. If a Tenant hold by Custom to pay a Harriot at his death, and he die, the property is in the Lord, 8 H. 7. 20. See Harriot.

6. If one take away my Goods as a Trespassor, and I sue him for this, and recover damages for it; by this the Goods by act of Law are made his, Kely. 62. 63. 58.

7. By

7. By an Executorship or Administration, the Property of the Deceased's goods is altered and vested in the Executor or Administrator. And if an Executor pay so much money out of his own Estate as the Goods come to, by this he hath gained the Property of the Goods in his own right, which he had before but as Executor: And if he pay but in part to the worth of the Goods, for so much the Property is gone. And if two Executors be, and one of them only having Goods enough to pay the Debts, and he pay them; by this he alone hath gotten the Property thereof, Goldsb. 79. pl. 50. Kelm. 62. 13 H. 4. 2. Executor.

8. If a man marry a wife that hath personal Goods in her own right; by this the Law doth give them to him as his own Goods, 21 H. 7. 29. Husband and Wife.

9. If a Sheriff take my Goods in Execution upon a Fieri facias, yet is the Property thereof still in me until he doth make sale thereof, Dyer 98. 67. Brownlow, 1 par. 41.

10. If a man take away my Goods under pretence of Title; it hath been said, this will alter the Property thereof, Bro. Prop. 35. But I doubt of this.

11. If my Servant (I being a Mercer) take away my Goods, or my Shepherd, Butler, or other Servant take, or sell away my Goods, unless it be in case of Sale in Market overt, no Property is altered by this; for by this relation as a Servant, and his Possession, he hath by Law neither general nor special Property; and therefore I may have Trespass for his taking, and if he imbesil them, it is Felony, Goldsb. 72. pl. 18. And if a man borrow my Goods, or find my Goods, or take them from me in jest, or as a Distress, or steal them from me, and no more; by this no Property is altered, 20 H. 7. 52. Bro. Prop. 27. But by a Sale hereof afterwards in a Market overt, the Property may alter. See afterwards. Trespass. Felony.

12. One doth grant to another a hundred Cords of Wood, to be taken in such a Wood by the assignment of the Grantor; in this case before assignment nothing passeth, and therefore he cannot till then grant it away; and if he die before it be done, the Grant is void, and the Executor shall not have it, Goldsb. 184. pl. 123. So if I sell to one the best Horse in my Stable, and there be more Horses there then one; by this no Property is altered till the Vendee hath made election, Kelm. 69. 77. Election. Executor.

13. If the man that hath Goods or Chattels do give them away in his life time, this will alter the Property. See Gift. Sell. 4. By all of the party.

14. If he give away his Goods by his Will, this may alter the Property. See Testament.

15. If a man sell away his Goods by word or deed, by this the Property may be altered. For this see Bargain and Sale, and Contract. And for the further clearing of this point, take these things: That in every Sale or Contract of Goods that must alter Property, there must be these things. 1. There must be a good Consideration for the Sale, and the Contract must be perfect. And for both these points, see Contract. 2. If it be perfect and well made; and the Goods sold are the Sellers own Goods; there, wherever the Contract be made, in or out of a Market, it is good between the parties to change the Property, and to pass the thing sold to the Vendee; yea, albeit the Seller know of an Execution against him, and sell the Goods to prevent it. Addition to Just. Doddridge. f. 40. But see Collusion. And if a Sheriff sell the Goods he hath in Execution, the Sale is good and unavoidable, albeit the Judgment be afterwards reversed, Dyer 98. 67. And if one sell Corn in Sacks, the Property may be altered, though it be not delivered, 33 H. 6. 5. So it seems it is where Goods be taken on a Statute, and not delivered to the party Plaintiff. But before Sale by the Sheriff, the Property is not altered, Dyer 67. 98. But by a special Act of Parliament it is provided, That the Sale of Goods wrongfully gotten to any Broker in London, Westminster, Southwark, or within two miles of London, shall not alter the Property thereof; Stat. 1 Jac. 21. 3. The Sale of any living or dead Goods (except Horses) in a Fair or Market, on the Fair or Market-day, (be the Goods whole they will, and however come by) yea, although they were stolen, is good, and shall change the Property thereof and settle it in the Buyer. And this Sale will not only bind and conclude the parties buying and selling, but all others that have any right to the thing sold, D. & S. 328. Perk. fell. 93. But herein these Cautions must be taken in. Contract. Sheriff. Horses.

1. It must be a Sale by one that is able to sell, and one capable of buying. And therefore it is held, That a Sale there by a tender Infant that the Buyer may perceive to be within age, or a Woman covert that the Buyer knows to be so, (except it be of such things as she doth usually deal in, or by her Husbands consent;) or if a man sell to another his own Goods, these Sales are not good, 21 H. 7. 40. 23 Eliz. Gibsons Case. Co. upon Lit. 20. Perk. 713.

2. It must be a Sale, and not a free Gift without any valuable Consideration, 12 Ed. 4. 10. Co. 2 par. Inst. 713.

3. The place wherein the Sale is, must be in the Market or Fair: for a Sale out of a Market or Fair, is not good: Nay, it was held by Justice Bridgman, That a Sale in a place which in reputation is a Fair or Market, and in truth is not so, is not good. And if one the day before the Market or Fair buy stolen Goods of one, and give him Earnest, but he hath time to take or leave till the next day by Noon, and then the things are brought into the Fair or Market, and then and there they agree, the Buyer pays his money and Toll; it seems this is not good to alter Property, Co. 5. 83. Dyer 99. And therefore it seems the whole Contract must be made in the Fair or Market.

4. The Sale must be made bona fide: And therefore if there be any Covinous agreement made between me and another to sell the Goods of a third man in a Fair or Market, to the end to deprive him thereof: Or if I do sell the Goods of another man so to one that knoweth them to be his, and not my Goods; this will not alter the Property, nor conclude him, 33 H. 6. 5. Co. 3. 78. 5. 83.

5. Some have held, That the Sale must be on a Working-day, and not upon the Lords day, to alter Property. And therefore it is held in London, That a Sale any day but the Lords day, there, is good, because every day there is a Market-day. But others hold the contrary for the alteration of Property: And so it seems the Law is taken, that the Sale is good, and Property changed; but the parties may be punished for prophaning the day. Fieri non debet, sed factum valet: It ought not to be done; but being done, it is good, Stat. 12 Ed. 4. 8. Dyer 11. Co. 5. 83. Comins Case, 38 Eliz. B. R.

Sell: 5.

6. The Sale must be in open place, and in the usual and proper place of the Sale of such things. And therefore it is held, That a Sale of Goods in London in an open Shop where such things are used to be sold, as Plate in a Goldsmiths shop, Cloth in a Drapers shop, or the like; this Sale is good. But if Plate lost, or a Jewel borrowed be there sold in a Drapers or a Scriveners shop openly, or in a Goldsmiths shop or house privately behind the doors or curtains; or if Cloth be there sold in a Ware-house or Back-house, and not in the Shop; or a Horse be sold in Chap-side; that these Sales are not good to alter the Property, Co. 5. 83. Stat. 4 H. 7. 5. 1 Jac. 21. D. & S. 149. Co. 2 par. Inst. 713.

7. The Goods so sold must be the Goods of a Subject, and not the Goods of the Lord Protector; for in this case the Sale is not good, nor is the Property altered, Stat. 7 H. 7. chap. 12. Co. 2 par. 713. Plow. 243. Stat. 35 H. 6. chap. 39.

8. The Sale must be made in the day-time between Sun-rising and Sun-set. And therefore it is held, that a Sale in the night is not good, Co. 2 par. Inst. 714. Old B. Entries, 327.

Felon.

Restitution.

9. The Goods must be free at the time of the Sale. And therefore it is held, That if one steal my Goods, and after the Lord Protectors Officer seise them; and then he or another sell them in a Fair, &c. this Sale is naught: And therefore if I prosecute the Felon, and cause him to be attainted, I shall have Restitution of my Goods again, Stamf. pl. Cor. 365. Co. Inst. 2 par. 714: 21 H. 8. 11.

10. It hath been held by some, that Toll must be paid, or at least entred upon the Book after the Sale, and that otherwise the Sale is not good. But the Law is held to be otherwise; and it is held in all cases, and for all things but for Horses, the Sale is good, and Property changed without paying or entring of Toll. And so it hath been adjudged for Law upon a Sale in any Fair or Market in England, in Cumin and Bowyers Case, 38 Eliz. B. R. Co. 2 par. Inst. 714. 716, 2 & 3 P. & M. 7. 9 H. 6. 45: But

But by the Statute of 34 H. 8. 16. the Sale of Goods or Chattels stolen in any Market or Fair in the Dominion of Wales, will not change the property thereof, but the Owner upon proof thereof shall have his Goods again. But in England the Law is otherwise.

11. If the thing sold be a Horse beast that is stolen; the sale will not be good, nor property changed as to the Owner of the thing sold, unless all these things following do concur in the case.

1. It must be ridden, led, walked, driven, or kept standing by the space of one hour together at the least, between ten of the clock and sun-set.

2. This must be in an open place, and in the places wherein Horses there are commonly used to be sold, and not within any Yard, Back-side, House, or other privy or secret place.

3. All the parties to the Contract there present in the Fair, &c. must come together with the Horse to the Toll-taker or Book-keeper.

4. The Book-keeper must then write down in his Book the names, Christian and Surnames, and dwelling-places of the parties to the Contract, the colour, and one special mark at the least of the Horse.

5. If any Toll be due, it must be paid; otherwise a Penny must be paid for the Entry.

Sec. 6.

Vouchers

6. Either the Book-keeper or other Officer of the Fair or Market must take upon him the perfect knowledge of the Seller, both his names and place of dwelling, which must be entered into the Book there; or else the Seller must bring to the Book-keeper or other Officer of the Fair, one sufficient person a Voucher, that must testify that he knoweth the Seller, his true names, Myserie, and place of dwelling. And it is held, this Branch extended to all Horses, stolen or not stolen.

7. Not only the Christian name, Surname, Myserie, and place of dwelling or residence of the Seller, but also of the Voucher (if any be) must be entered in the Book.

8. The very true price bona fide given for the Horse, must also be entered in the Book. But in this case it seems there needs not any large Entry; and no more is required in the Entry, but that the Book-keeper or Voucher did know the parties, &c. For if they say they know, and do not know, yet the Sale and Entry is not good. And yet if in truth it be all false that is testified by the Voucher or the Book-keeper, in this case the Sale is void. But the Book-keepers Entry prima facie shall be presumed to be true, till the contrary be proved, that there is no such person as the Seller owned by the Book-keeper or Voucher: But being proved that none such was there at the time of the Sale, the Sale is void. And all this was agreed by the Court at Gloucester-Affise, by the Lord Chief Baron Wild, Trin. 10 Car. B.R. A. brought Trover against B. for a Horse: B. pleaded Sale and Toll paid, &c. A. replied, that there were no such Vouchers in rerum natura, (i.) in being: B. demurred, and it was adjudged for A. the Plaintiff upon a special Verdict. Stat. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. 7. 2 Ed. 3. 15. 5 Ed. 3. 3. 27 H. 6. 5. But all this notwithstanding, a man may without all this caution sell in a Fair or Market his own Horse to which no man hath any pretence of Right. See more, Stat. 31 Eliz. 12. 3 Eliz. 22. Co. upon Littleton, 714, 715.

9. There are divers other things by the Statutes required herein: As, that the Rulers of Fairs must appoint, 1. A set and fit place for the sale of Horses. 2. A sufficient Book and Book-keeper. 3. That the Book-keeper shall take his Toll, if any be due, between ten a clock and sun-set. 4. That he deliver his Book to the Ruler of the Fair. 5. That no man shall make a false Voucher, or vouch that he knoweth not to be true. 6. That no Book-keeper shall enter that as of his own knowledge, which he knoweth not to be true. 7. That the Book-keeper shall give to the Buyer requiring it, and paying two pence, a Note in writing of the Contents of the same Bargain, under the Book-keepers hand. But these extend not to the prejudice of the Sale; for albeit these be omitted, yet the Sale is good, and Property changed,

Stat. 7.

10. And if any stolen Horse be sold according to all these Conditions; yet if the Owner thereof, his Executor or Administrator, or any other by his appointment shall within six moneths of the Felony done, claim, and by two Witnesses within forty days after prove his claim, and that the Horse was his within six moneths before the claim, before a Justice of Peace in or near the place where the Horse is found, and shall pay or offer to pay so much money as the Buyer gave, or shall depose before the Justice of Peace he did give for him; the Property is saved to the Owner, and he may either take him, or bring an Action for him, Stat. 31 Eliz. 12. Co. 2 par. Inst. 715, 716, 717, 718.

11. If one sell my Goods unduly, not as before is set down, I may have them again, for the Sale will not bind me that am a stranger; but the Sale is good between the parties themselves: And the Goods being duly sold as before, will change the Property, albeit the Goods be the Goods of an Infant, Woman-covert, Ideot, in prison or beyond sea; and such as have right to them in anothers right, as an Executor or Administrator, D. & S. 39. Plow. 243. Co. 2 par. Inst. 713, 714.

12. If I promise another for good consideration to deliver him twenty Bushels of Corn by a day, by this no property hereof is altered: So if I for good cause buy twenty Bushels of Corn of a man at large, and not in Sacks, or set apart in a place certain; by this the property thereof is not altered. Otherwise it is if it be divided, and in a place certain, Kelm. 77. 69.

13. If one covenant with me, That if I pay him Ten pounds such a day, I shall have all his Goods in such a place, and I pay him the Ten pounds; this is a good Sale, and the Property is in me, 27 H. 8. 16.

But by a bare stealing or taking away of Goods, or borrowing, without a Sale in a Market or Fair, no Property is altered; and therefore the Owner may seize them where-ever he find them. See more in Chattels and Contract.

3. Where a Property is determined, or not.

If one have my Corn, and after he turn it into Malt; or my Money, and turn it into Plate, or my Plate into Money; or my Timber, and turn it into a House: In these cases I may not take the things in kind, for hereby my Property is gone. And yet if the thing remain in kind as it was, and may be known, though it be mixed with another thing, or somewhat altered; as if one take my Cloth, and make a Garment; or my Leather, and make Shoes or Boots of it; or my Iron, and make a Bar of it; or my Timber, and make a Bar of it: In these and such like cases it is said I may take my own again, 5 H. 7. 15.

Also if one take my Sow, and after she happen to have young Pigs; in this and such like cases the Property doth continue, and I may take the old and young together;

CHAP. CXXX.

Of Prophecies, Proclamation, Protection, Protest.

He Penalty of publishing any false Prophecie, to the intent to make Insurrection or Division, see St. 5 Eliz. 15. Co. 3 par. Inst. cap. 55. Prophecies.

Proclamation is a publike notice given of any thing whereof the Supreme Magistrate thinketh fit to advertise the people: As that if a man do not render himself at such a time, he shall be reputed a Rebel; or to forbid, or command such a thing. This is a piece of the Prerogative of the Lord Protector; and is in case of necessity, and for a time, of Self. 1. Proclamation.

the force of a Law, called therefore Lex temporis: And many things he may do by this alone, as change the Coin of the Nation, &c. For which see Prerogative. And none other may do this, but Corporations in some case, and where they have a Custom for it. See for this, Stat. 31 H. 8. 8. 7 R. 2. 6. 34 H. 8. 13. 18 Ed. 6. 12. Cromp. Jur. 42. Bro. Proclam. 10. See Prerogative. And yet where any Law doth enable to it, as about Fairs, or the like, there it may be done. See Fairs. This word is used for other Proclamations, or Proclamations in other cases, For which see Cromp. Jur. 14. 16. 20. 21. Stat. 3 R. 2. 3. 8 H. 6. 10. 13 H. 4. 7. 33 H. 8. 9. 5 Eliz. 9. 23 H. 6. 11. 7 H. 4. 15. 32 H. 8. 9. 2 Ed. 3. 15. 5 Ed. 3. 5. and others.

Protection is a word of divers significations: For there is a general Protection of the Lord Protector, which is extended to all Subjects, Denizens and Aliens, whose offences have not made them incapable thereof. And there is a particular Protection by Writ. And so it is of two sorts: One to give a man freedom from Suits, which lieth for a man that is to pass over the Sea in the Lord Protector's service, to quit him in the mean time from all Pleas between him and other men, except Pleas of Dower, Quod Impedit, Assise de novel Disseisin, Darrein Presentment, Attaints, and Pleas before the Justices in Eyre. The second is for the safety of a mans Person, Servant, Goods, Lands and Tenements whereof he is lawfully possessed, from violence, &c. These are now of little use. See a large Treatise of them in 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 5. 5 Ed. 3. 7. 13 R. 2. 16. 7 H. 4. 4. 1 R. 2. 8. Co upon Lis. 131. and in many other places, See for the first, Allégeance. This word also is sometimes taken for the Priviledg of a Parliament-man, and his Servants from Arrest, during the Parliament-time: For which see Priviledg. Protection.

This word Protest hath two significations in Law. The one is by way of Cautel, to call Witnesses (as it were) or openly to affirm, that he doth either not at all, or but after a sort yield his consent to an Act; as to the proceeding of a Judge in a Court wherein his Jurisdiction is doubtful; or to answer upon his Oath further then he is bound, Plow. 176. Another is by way of Complaint; to protest a mans Bill. For example: If I give money to a Merchant-man in France, and take his Bill of Exchange to be repaid in England by one to whom he assigneth me; if at my coming I find not my self satisfied to my content, but denied or delayed, then I may go in the Bourse, or some open concourse of Merchants at the Exchange or elsewhere, and protest that I am deceived by him; and thereupon if he have any Goods remaining in any mans hand in this Land, by the Law of Merchants I am to be paid out of them. Protest. what. Merchants. Bill of Exchange.

CHAP. CXXXI.

Of Purchase.

Purchase, what.

Purchase strictly taken, is the Possession that a man hath in Land or Tenements, which he hath by his own act, and not by title of descent from his Ancestor, Co. lib. Inst. f. 3. par. 1. And a Purchasor is he that comes to Land by these means. But it seems this word [Purchase] sometimes hath a larger extent, and is taken by way of opposition unto Descent; when one hath, or cometh by Land in any other nature by Limitation of Estate, then by Descent.

For Answer to this Question, take these Cases.

Self. 1.
Where an Heir shall be said to be in as a Purchasor, and not by Descent, or
not:

Infant born
after.

1. When an Estate doth originally rest in the Heir, and was never, neither might ever by any possibility be in the Ancestor; there the Heir shall be said to be in the nature and manner of a Purchasor; and he shall never be said to be in by Descent, where no Right, Title, Action, or Use doth, or might descend to him from the Ancestor. As if a woman consent to a Ravisher, and have a daughter, and she enter by the Statute for the Forfeiture; now she shall be said to be in by Purchase: And therefore a son born after shall never divest this out of the daughter, Co. 1. 93. 98. 5 Ed. 4. 6. See Infant.

2. So if a Remainder be limited to the right Heir of J. S. and he die having a Daughter; the Daughter is in nature of a Purchasor, and not by Descent; and therefore the Son born after shall never have it from her, Co. upon Littleton, f. 164.

3. So if a power of Entry for a Condition broken descend, and the Daughter enter for the breach of a Condition, and after the Son is born, the Son shall never have it; and yet here the Daughter shall be said to be in by Descent, especially in case where she doth pay the money to redeem Land conveyed away upon Condition. But if the Condition were broken in the life of the Ancestor, being to be performed by the Feoffee, &c. or it were performed by the Feoffor, and the Land descend; here the Daughter shall be in by Descent, and the Son born after shall have it, Co. 1. 99. lib. Inst. par. 1. f. 76.

4. Where by any Conveyance to the Ancestor, an Estate for years only is limited to him, the Remainder to another for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Lessee for years; there the Heirs shall be said to be in as Purchasor. So if a Remainder for life be limited to the Heir in the singular number, there the Heir shall be said to take by Purchase for life: But where the Ancestor taketh an Estate of Freehold first, contra. And whether the Remainder be raised by way of Use, or by Act executed, it is all one. See Crompt. Jurisd. in Courts of Wards, in toto. Co. 1. 104. & super Lit. 319.

5. But in case where an Heir taketh any thing which might have vested in the Ancestor, although it do vest first in the Heir, and do never vest in the Ancestor, yet the Heir shall be said to be in in nature, course and degree of Descent, and not of Purchase; though not directly and to all purposes, as to take away the Entry of one that hath right, to have his Age, or be in Ward: As if a Fine be levied to A. in Fee, and he die before Execution, here his Heir shall be in by Descent. And therefore if there be an elder Son, and he die, his Wife with child, and the second Son enter, the Child of the eldest Son, after he is born, shall oust him and have the Land. So of a Recovery. So if one have a Seigniorship by Descent, and after the Tenancie escheat, and after a Son that is next Heir is born, he shall have the Tenancie, Co. 1. 98. 106. Bro. Age 51. Co. lib. Inst. f. 22. 1 par. 37. 6.

So if two exchange Land, and the one entreth, and the other dieth before his Entry, and then his Heir entreth (as he may) he is by way of Descent; and therefore if in that case a Son be born after, he shall oust the Daughter and Heir that entred before, Perk 57.

6. So if one do covenant with me, That when J. S. shall convey to him the Manor of W. he will stand seised of the Manor of J. S. to the use of me and my Heirs, and I die, and after J. S. convey to him the Manor of W. Now in this case my Heir shall be in this Land in nature of Descent, and not by Purchase, Co. 1. 99.

7. So if a Feme consent to a Ravisher, or a Remainder be limited to right Heirs as in the cases above: If he that should first enter die before Entry, and the younger Son enter, and after the Son of the elder Son is born, that Son shall enter for Heir, he shall be said to be in in nature of a Descent, Co. 1. 99.

8. Where the Estate is made by way of Limitation in the intent of the parties, there the Grantee shall never take it by way of Purchase; but rather then so, the Grant shall be void. As if one lease for life on Condition, that if the Lessor die without Heirs, the Lessee shall have the Land to him and his Heirs, and after the Lessee dieth, and then the Lessor dieth without Heir, the Lessee's Heir shall not have it, Plow 48.3.

9. Where an Ancestor by any Gift or Conveyance taketh an Estate of Franktenement to himself, and in the same Conveyance another Estate is limited mediately, or immediately to his Heirs in Fee or in Tail; in such cases [his Heirs] are words of Limitation, and he shall be in by Descent, not by Purchase.

Who is capable of a Purchase, and to be a Purchaser, and by what names, See Disability and Grant.

CHAP. CXXXII.

Of Purveyors.

Purveyors were such Officers as did take up and make provision for the Kings Household, Horses, Wars and Castles: And as touching what whom these things are briefly to be known.

1. That these Officers may take up that Provision for the Lord Protector's House and Horses, Wars, Castles, that is needful; within and without Liberties, and no more. Stat. 27 H. 8. 24. 14 Ed. 3. 19. 9 H. 3. 19. 3 Ed. 1. 7. 14 Ed. 3. 19. 10 Ed. 3. 4.

2. They must have, and shew their Commission, Stat. 36 Ed. 3. 2. 28.

3. They must not take without agreement with the Owners, Stat. 28 Ed. 1. 2. 14 Ed. 3. 19.

4. They must do this with all indifferencie and equality upon all men, and not spare some, 3 Ed. 1. 13. 28 H. 6. 2. 36 Ed. 3. 3. But such persons as are excepted in the Statutes, 28 Ed. 3. 4. 3 Ed. 1. 14. 14 Ed. 3. 2. 1 R. 2. 3. 13 Eliz. 22. 2 & 3 P. & M. 15.

5. They must measure Corn; and accept of reasonable measure, 4 Ed. 3. 3. 25 Ed. 3. 2. 36 Ed. 3. 3. 11 H. 7. 4. 1 H. 5. 10. 11 H. 6. 8.

6. What they take, must be prized by the Constables; and four of the Town where they take up any thing, and set what price they please, 28 Ed. 3. 2. 5 Ed. 3. 2. 10 Ed. 3. 1. 25 Ed. 3. 2.

7. They must make present payment for what they take, 9 H. 3. 19. 3 Ed. 3. 7. 3 Ed. 1. 31. 11 H. 7. 4. 1 H. 5. 10. 2 H. 4. 15. 20 H. 6. 8.

8. They

8. They may not abuse any mans Goods, nor put any thing in their own purses, nor keep away their money, Stat. 3 Ed. 3. 31. 25 Ed. 3. 6. 15. 9 H. 3. 11. 3 Ed. 1. 31. 28 H. 6. 2.

9. If they take otherwise then their Commission is, it is Felony, Stat. 36 Ed. 3. 2. And how their Commissions must be, see Stat. 2 & 3 P. & M. 6.

10. If they abuse their authority, they may be resisted, Stat. 14 Ed. 3. 19. 23 H. 6. 2. Or sued by the parties grieved, 36 Ed. 3. 2.

11. They cannot take Timber growing upon the Inheritance of a Subject, without his leave, no more then the Inheritance it self, Co. 2 par. Inst. 35.

CHAP. CXXXIII.

Of Quantity, Weights and Measures.

Quantity, what.

The kinds.

Self. 1.
Virgata terra or Yard-land,
what.

Quantity is a certain measure, according to which any thing is said to be long, broad, or deep. And Measures (in consideration of Law) are either of Land, or of other things. And those things are either things which are measured by the Pint, Quart, &c. which are wet, as Oyl, Wine, and the like; or dry, as Whear, Apples, and the like: Or such as are measured by the Ell, Yard, &c.

A Yard-land (in Latine, virgata terra) is a quantity of Land called by this name; but no certain quantity: Nor is it all one in all places, (as some would have it) just twenty Acres in all Countries: For in some Countries it containeth twenty Acres, in some twenty four, in some thirty Acres, according to the estimation of the Country. And therefore it is, that a Fine de Virgata terra is void for incertainty, Co. upon Lit. 69.

Oxgang of Land
what.

An Oxgang of Land is not a certain quantity of Land, as fifteen Acres, whereof eight make a Plough-land; but it is a certain quantity of Land so called, and more or less according to the estimation of Countries, Co. upon Lit. 69.

Librata terra,
what.

Librata terra (as some say) containeth four Oxgangs, and every Oxgang thirteen Acres. Others say it is so much as is worth twenty shillings a year.

Hide of Land,
what.

A Hide of Land also is an uncertain quantity of Land by that name: Some men think it to be as much as may be plowed by one Plough in a year; others would have it a hundred Acres, and that eight Hides do make a Knights Fee. But it is to be reckoned according to the estimation of the Country.

Selson of Land,
what.

And so is a Selson of Land (in Latine, Selioterra) it sometimes signifieth an Acre, sometimes half an Acre, sometimes more, and sometimes less; and sometimes a Ridge, Crompt. Jurisd. 222. It cannot be demanded in a Fine, it is so uncertain.

Fardingdeal, or Farrandel of Land, what.
Obolata.

A Fardingdeal of Land seemeth to be the fourth part of an Acre, Crompt. Jurisd. 220.

Denariata.
Solidata.
Librata.

Furlong of
Land, what.

We read of Obolata terre, which some would have to be half an Acre. Denariata, an Acre. Solidata, twelve Acres: And Librata to be twelve score Acres, in proportion to the quantity of Money.

A Furlong of Land (called in Latine Furlingus) is a quantity of ground containing twenty, others say forty Lugs, Perches or Poles in length, and every Pole two hundred and seventeen Foot and a half; of which Furlongs, eight a mile. Others take it for the eight part of an Acre, 35 Ed. 2. 6.

A Perch is used with us for a Rod or Pole of sixteen foot and a half in length, whereof forty in length and four in breadth make an Acre of ground: But by custom of some Countries it is eighteen in some, twenty one in some, twenty four, twenty five foot in some, and in some more, in some less, Crompt. Jur. 122. Some say it is a Rod of Land; and that a Rod of Land is ten Perches, the fourth part of an Acre, Stat. 5 Eliz. 5. 31 Eliz. 7.

The Acre of Land (as some say) is so much as may be plowed in one day with one Yoke of Oxen. But the ordinary Acre is forty Perches in length, and four in breadth; and according to this Measure must he lay his four Acres, that doth erect a Cottage, Crompt. Jur. 222.

Cark of Wooll, is a quantity thereof, whereof thirty make a Sarpler, 27 H. 6. 1. It is said by some, that a Load of Wooll is eighty Tods, each Tod two Stone, each Stone fourteen Pound: And that a Sack of Wooll in common account is equal with a Load, or twenty six Stone; and that a Sarpler or Pocket of Wooll is half a Sack; and that a Pack of Wooll is a Horse load, which consisteth of seventeen Stone two pounds: For a Stone of Wooll is fourteen pounds, but in some places it is more; and a Tod of Wooll is twenty eight pound in weight, or two Stone; and that a Sack of Wooll is twenty six Stone and fourteen pounds, Stat. 11 H. 7. ch. 4. 31 Ed. 3. 8.

It is said that all our English Measures are compounded of the Penny Sterling, which weigheth thirty two Corns of Wheat of the middle sort, and that two of those Pence make an Ounce, 12 Ounces a Pound in Weight, or sixty shillings in number; and that eight pound of Wheat maketh a (Jalon, or) Gallon, as it is now called, and eight Gallons a Bushel, four Bushels a Curnock, and eight Bushels a Quarter: And that fifteen Ounces of the quantity aforesaid do make a Merchants pound, and that twelve such Pounds and a half do make a Stone, and that fourteen Stone do make a Weight; and that two Weights, or twenty eight Stone make a Sack of Wooll, which ought to weigh a Quarter of Wheat; and that twelve Sacks make a Last of Wooll: So that a Weight and a Sarpler seemeth to be all one, and that a Load and a Sack is all one. But a Last of Herring is Ten thousand; a Last of Pitch or Tar, or Ashes, is fourteen Barrels; a Last of Hides or Skins, is twelve dozen of them; a Last of Corn is ten Quarters, Stat. 31 Ed. 3. Stat. 2. ch. 21. 31 H. 8. 14. 1 Jac. 33. 14 Ed. 3. ch. 22. Flota. l. 2. c. 12. Crompt. Just. of Peace. 83.

A Kintal or Quintal is a certain measure or weight of Wood, Iron, or such like thing or merchandise, to the value of a Hundred, or something under or over, according to the divers uses of sundry Nations.

A Clove is said to be the two and thirtieth part of a Weight of Cheese, (i.) eight pound, Stat. 9 H. 6. 8. And the weight of Cheese and Butter in some Countries is three hundred weight; after an hundred and twelve pound to the Hundred, which is three hundred thirty six pounds, or an hundred thirty six pounds of Averdepois weight.

Two Pints make a Quart, two Quarts make a Pottle, two Pottles make a Gallon; eight Gallons make a Firkin, sixteen Gallons make the Kilderkin, Half-barrel, or Rundle; four Firkins make a Barrel, two Barrels make a Hoghead, two Hogheads make a Pipe, wherein is a hundred twenty six Gallons; and two Pipes, which is two hundred fifty two Gallons, make a Tun. A Tersle or Tierse is but the sixth part of a Tun, or third part of a Pipe. But Honey hath in the Kilderkin sixteen, in the Barrel thirty two Wine-gallons: And some things are otherwise measured. See the Statutes for the things in particular.

Of Pounds are made Pecks, of Pecks Bushels, of Bushels Coombs or Curnocks, and four Pecks the Bushel, four Bushels the Coomb or Curnock, eight Bushels the Quarter, which is two Curnocks; the Quarter is eight Bushels: The Weight.

The Bushel must be eight Gallons, or sixty four pounds or pints of Wheat, Stat. 1 R. 3. ch. 13. Water-measure: Sold within Ship-board, must be five pecks. The Bushel doth differ in many places. The Rents and Farms of Lords must be as they have been.

Receipt seemeth to be an Admission of a Third person to plead his right in a Cause formerly commenced between two others. As for example: If a Tenant for Term of life or years bring an Action about the Land, and in this he in Reversion doth come in Court and prayeth to be revived, to defend the Land and to plead with the Demandant; this word is applied to an Admittance of a Plea, though the Controversie be but between two only. *Bro. CHAP. CXXXIV.

Of Records.

Records are authentical and uncontrollable Writings, which are of that high and sacred nature, credit and authority in the Judgment of Law, that they or any thing contained in them cannot be apparently or directly gainsaid or denied; neither have they need of any proof, for they prove themselves, and must be tryed only by themselves, and are the best Evidences to prove any thing for others, that can be; and it is a proof before the proof of Witnesses. And though they do contain apparent falshood, and tend to the mischief and overthrow of any person, yet they are not to be denied: And therefore no Averment lieth against them, as to say they were made at any other time then they bear date. And hence it is, that if one be certified in the Exchequer to be outlawed, he may not deny it, nor hath he any remedy but to reverse it. And hence it is, that to raise or impeach them is so great an offence, as Felony. (See Crown.)

If a man have occasion to use a Record, he may have a Copy or Transcript of it, or he may have it exemplified under the Great Seal. For if a man will plead a Record in another Court then that wherein it doth remain, and it be denied, and no such Record be pleaded to it where an Action is brought upon it, or it be pleaded in bar of an Action; there he that is against the Record, may demand Oyer, that is, sight of the Record; and then the other party shall have day to bring the same into the Court. And if then he bring it nor, this shall be said to be a Failer of the Record, and Judgment shall be given against him. It must therefore be exemplified under the Great Seal, and then it must be sent into the Chancery by Certiorari, and so brought into the Court where it is denied: And an Exemplification under the Seal of the same Court wherein it is, is not sufficient, if the Record it self be denied: But if something in it only be denied, it may be good enough to give in Evidence to a Jury. And so also a true Copy of it being proved by Witnesses, is sufficient to give in Evidence to a Jury.

Of a Common-Recovery.

Sec. 1.
Common-Recovery,
what.

Recovery in general, is the obtaining of any thing unjustly taken or detained by Judgment or Trial of Law. And it is either a Common-Recovery, which is such a Recovery as is used for a Common Assurance of Land; or other Recovery, which is not used as an Assurance of Land. And the Common-Recovery that is used for the Assurance of Land, is nothing else but fictio juris, or a certain form or course set down by Law to be observed, for the better assuring of Lands and Tenements to men. And this is somewhat after the example of the Recovery upon Title, which is without consent, and contrary to the will of him against whom the same is had: For there is in this a colourable Suit, wherein there is a Demandant, which is called the Recoverer; and a Tenant, which is called the Recoveree; and one that is called to warrant upon a supposed Warranty, which is called the Vouchee, Co. on Lit. 154. 23 Eliz. ch. 3. Doff. & St. 41. W. 8. Syn. Recovery.

Recoverer,
Recoveree,
Vouchee.

2. The kinds.

The Common-Recovery is sometimes with a single Voucher, which is when the Writ is brought against him that is to pass the Land immediately, and he doth vouch over the Common Vouchee. And sometimes it is with a double Voucher, which is when the Writ is brought against another to whom he that is to pass the Land hath aliened it, and he doth vouch him that is to make the Assurance, and he doth vouch over the Common Vouchee: And this is the surest way, and the safest kinde of Recovery.

3. The manner and order of suffering a Common-Recovery.

In this formality of a Common-Recovery, the course is, That by agreement of the parties, a real Action is begun by a Writ of Entry, brought by him that is to have the Land assured against him that is to make the same Assurance, if it be with a single Voucher, or if it be with a double Voucher, against him to whom he that is to make the Assurance hath aliened the Land. And in this Suit, the Recoverer that doth bring the Action, doth surmise that the Tenant against whom the Writ is brought hath no right to the Land, but that the Recoverer hath right thereunto, and the Tenant came to it from such a stranger whom the Demandant doth name. And to this the Tenant doth appear in person, or by an Attorney, and then doth enter into defence of the Land: But in pleading doth vouch to Warranty, (i.) doth alleadg that he bought the Land of J. S. a stranger, who in the Conveyance thereof bound himself and his Heirs to warrant and make good the Title to him or them to whom it is conveyed: And thereupon he prayeth that J. S. may be called in to defend the Title; and then he is allowed by the Court to call in J. S. to say what he can for the justifying of his right to the Land before he so conveyed it: And hereupon J. S. doth appear, and make shew as if he would defend the Title, but doth pray a further day may be assigned to him to make his defence; which being granted him by the Court, at the day appointed, he by agreement, Covin, and assent of the parties doth not come in, but make default: And thereupon the Land is to be recovered by him that brought the Writ against the Tenant, and he is left for his remedy to J. S. upon his Warranty; and accordingly Judgment is given by the Court, That the Demandant or Recoverer shall recover the Land demanded against the Tenant, and that the Tenant shall recover so much Land of J. S. of his own Land in recompence for the Land recovered from him, which he ought to have warranted and defended, but suffered to be lost. And this Recovery over, is called a Recovery in Value, or pro rata: But if the Recovery be with a double Voucher, or a treble Voucher, J. S. is upon his appearance to call or vouch to warrant J. D. and to alleadg in the same manner as the Tenant doth, and to pray that J. D. may come in, and thereupon J. D. doth come in and appear, and make default. And so if there be rata*, what.

Recovery in value, or *pro

more Vouchers; and then there must be several Recoveries over in value against every one of them: But he that is the last Vouchee, is always the Common Voucher, who is one of the Cryers of the Court of Common-Pleas; a man not worth any thing, and one that hath no Land to render in value upon the supposed Warranty. And by his Devise, grounded upon the strict Principles of Law, the first Tenant doth willingly let go the Land for the assurance of the Purchaser, and yet in truth hath no recompence over, because the Vouchee hath no Land to render in value. And by this means, if one hath an Estate-tail in Lands which he is desirous to sell, or to convert into an Estate in Fee-simple, the same is commonly done: For the Tenant in Tail doth cause the Purchaser, or some friend of his, to bring a Writ of Entry against him for this Land, and he appeareth to the Writ, and in pleading saith, That the Land came to him or his Ancestors from such a man or his Ancestors, who in the Conveyance bound themselves to warrant it: And thereupon that man is called in, who doth appear and make default, and thereupon Judgment is had against him in manner as aforesaid. Or if he would have the Recovery with a double Voucher, then doth he by Fine, Feoffment, or Deed of Bargain and Sale inrolled, discontinue the Land; and then cause the Recoverer that is to have the Land, to bring his Writ of Entry against the Discontinuee, and he doth vouch the Tenant in Tail, who doth vouch over the Common Vouchee; and so it is done: And by this the Estate-tail that the Tenant in Tail hath or had, is barred and bound, for that it appeareth now he had no power to entail the Land whereunto he had no just title; and besides he shall recover a recompence in value, and this is adjudged in Law to go in succession of Estate, as the Land should have done: Which is the reason why the Recovery is a Bar to all that are in Remainder and Reversion, as well as to the Issues in Tail. Co. l. 94. 10. 43. 45. F.N.B. 1:4. Co. 9. 6.

And in the suffering of these Recoveries, the Tenants and Vouches do appear most commonly in person in Court, and so the Recovery is finished in Court presently without more doing. But sometimes they will not, or cannot appear in person; and then they do use to appear and suffer the Recovery by Attorney: And in this case there must be a Consuance for a Warrant of Attorney taken, to authorize the Attorney or Attorneys in this manner, if it be for a treble Voucher.

Warrant of Attorney.

Glouc. ff. Command A.S. and B his wife, that justly &c. they render to C. D. the Manor of N. with the appurtenances &c. which he claimeth to be his right and inheritance, and in which the same A.B. hath not ingress, unless after the Disseisin which H.H. unjustly and without Judgment made to the aforesaid C. within thirty years now last past, &c. as is said &c.

Glouc. ff. A. S. and B. put in their place W.W. and R.R. their Attornies jointly and severally against C. D. of a Plea of Land, &c.

Glouc. ff. M.M. Gent. whom A.S. and B. called to warrant, put in his place J.J. and L.L. his Attornies jointly and severally against C.D. of a Plea of Land.

Glouc. ff. G.W. Gent. whom M.M. called to warrant, put in his place R.G. and R.S. his Attornies jointly and severally against C.D. of a Plea of Land.

And in these cases to make two Attornies at the least, and to give them an authority jointly and severally, that if one of them die before the Recovery be suffered, the other may have power to do and dispatch it. And these Warrants of Attorney for the suffering of Recoveries, are to be acknowledged and certified in the same manner as the Consuances of Fines acknowledged in the Country are; save only that Recognisances for Warrants of Attorney for Recoveries may be taken by any Judge of the Court of Common-Pleas, or any Serjeant at Law, without a Dedimus potestatem: But if any others take it, they use to do it by a special Dedimus potestatem; which is to command the Commissioners therein named, to come to such persons; and to take the names of their Attorney or Attornies in the Suit, and to certify the same into the Chancery under their Seals such a day. And if there be any Woman-covert that is to make the Consuance, it seems she is to be examined as in the case of the Consuance of a Fine. And when this is done, the Recovery may be suffered by the Attornies, without the personal appearance of the parties.

Dedimus potestatem.

Examination.

And this is as good a Recovery as the other which is suffered by the persons themselves appearing in Court, but that it will require longer time for the perfection of it: For in this case there must go forth a Summons ad Warrant, which must have nine Retorns ere the Recovery can be perfected, and by that time one of the parties may be dead.

Seisinam.*

And when the Recovery is thus suffered by the parties in person, or by their Attornies, the same is to be entred by one of the Clerks of the Common-Pleas, upon the Rolls of the same Court, there to remain upon record. And herein there must go forth a Writ of Execution, called Habere facias Seisinam; which is sent to the Sheriff of the County where the Land doth lie, to put the Recoverer in possession of the Land, (except the Recovery be of a Reversion of Land after a Lease for years of it, in which case the Reversion shall be in the Recoverers by a Claim without any Writ.) And this Writ the Sheriff doth return as executed according to the Contents thereof, albeit in truth he never do any thing upon it. And after this, all the same Proceedings is to be exemplified by the Clerk of the same Court; Co. 10. 43. Co. 1. 94.

4. The use, nature, and operation of it.

*Forfeiture.
Averment.
Covin.*

A Recovery being matter of Record, is much of the nature of a Fine, and such a thing whereof the Law taketh notice: For it is now become a formal and orderly manner of Assurance of Lands, and one of the Common Assurances of the Kingdom, or a common way and means to pass Lands from one to another. And therefore if a Tenant for life suffer such a Recovery of his Land, it is a Forfeiture of his Estate; an Use may be averred upon it as well as upon a Fine, and it may be avoided for Covin as well as any kind of Conveyance else. But it is of special use, and hath a special vertue to bar and bind Estates in Tail, and all the Remainders and Reversions thereupon. And because many of the Inheritances of the Kingdom do depend upon this Assurance, and it is oft-times the greatest Assurance Purchasers have for their money, therefore it hath much favour from the Law at this day: And therefore the Law will not endure it shall be disputed against; for, Communis Error facit Jus. And hence it is that it shall not be avoided for small Errors: For it is another Rule of Law, Consensus tollit Errorem. And if a Recovery be suffered by a Tenant in Tail, hereby he hath not only discontinued, barred, and discharged the Estate-tail, and so defeated himself and his Issues the former owner of the Land, and all the Remainders and Reversions thereupon that should take place after the Estate-tail, whether they be in esse, or contingent only; but also all former Estates, Leases and Charges made by him in remainder or reversion. For as when the Estate-tail in possession is not barred by a Recovery, the Estates in reversion or remainder are not barred; for, Quod non in magis propinquo, non in magis remoto valebit: So it is et converso, where the Estate-tail in possession is barred by the Recovery, all the Remainder, and the Reversions, Conditions, Charges, Incumbrances, and Estates dependent upon it are barred also, except it be in some special cases where the Remainder or Reversion was in the King. And therefore if A. be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder to B. in Tail, the Remainder to C. in Fee; and B. or C. doth make a Lease for years of the Land, or grant a Rent-charge out of the Land, or enter into a Statute, or the like, or grant the Remainder or Reversion upon Condition, and after A. doth suffer a Common-recovery of the Land, and after dieth without issue; in this case the Recoverer shall hold the Lands discharged of all these Estates and Charges in Remainder. But otherwise it is if A. himself make a Lease, or enter into a Statute, and then suffer a Common-recovery of the Land; in this case this Recovery doth not avoid, but affirmeth the Lease or Charge: For whereas it was before voidable by the Issue in Tail, or him in Remainder or Reversion; now it is good against them all, and the Recoverer also shall hold it charged and subject to the Lease and Charge of the Tenant in Tail.

This kind of an Assurance therefore is in some respects better than a Fine: For, a Fine will bar the Heir in Tail, but not him that is in Remainder or Reversion; but a Recovery will bar them all. Co. 5. 41. 10. 37. 39. 3. 5. 6. 41. 42. D. & S. 41. 49. 50. Stat. 13 Eliz. ch. 5. 23. ch. 3. St. 7 H. 8. ch. 4. Co. 1. 62. 25. 44 Ed. 3. ch. 22.

In

In every good and binding Common-recovery, these things are requisite.

1. That there be a Demandant, a Tenant, and Vouchee, as the efficient causes thereof; for if either of these be wanting; it is not a compleat Recovery. And therefore if a Common-recovery be had against a Tenant in tail without a Voucher, this is void. And for this it is to be known, that such persons, and by such names may be Demandants, Tenants, and Vouchees in Recoveries, as may be Cognizors and Cognizees in Fines. And therefore a Recovery suffered by an Infant appearing by his Guardian, is good, and will bind him and all others. So also a Recovery had against a Woman that hath a Husband, being joyned with her Husband, will bind her and all others.

2. That there be Land demanded as the matter, and that the thing be demandable. And for this it is to be known, that of such things, and by such names as a Writ of Covenant for the levying of a Fine may be had, a Writ of Entry for the suffering of a Recovery may be had, save only it may not be of a Trench, of a standing Pool, one Load of Land, of Estovers, Homage, Fealty, Services to be done, of an Organge of Wood, of Felons Land, of a Garden, Cottage, Croft, a Yard-land, a Quar of Minerals, a Market, neither of an Upper-Cockloft. And yet of some of these also it may be by other names. Also a Recovery may be had of a Rent, Common, Advowson, Franchises, and the like, but not of an Annuity.

3. That it be had and suffered in that order and form as Law requireth, viz. That there be a Writ of Entry brought, an appearance of the Tenant in fact, a Voucher, and an appearance of the Tenant in Law, the Vouchee, Judgment and Execution, in manner as aforesaid: For if there be any substantial defect in these things, the Recovery may be thereby avoided by Writ of Error; but if it be only in form, it will not hurt.

4. That there be a lawful Tenant to the Precipe, (i.) That the Writ of Entry be brought against one that at the time of the Writ brought is Tenant of the Freehold, either by right, (i.) that hath an Estate for life, at least in the Land; or by wrong, (i.) that is a Disseisor of the Land demanded, and whereof the Recovery is had. And therefore in this case the course is, where the Land to be recovered is in possession, and a Fine and Recovery is had of it together, the Fine is sued out first; for this doth make the Cognisee Tenant of the Freehold of the Land, and the Recovery is had against him. And when the Recovery is to be had of a Reversion, and that there is an Estate for life in being of the Land whereof the Recovery is to be had, (For an Estate for years, or any such like Estate will not hinder the suffering of a Recovery) there the course is, to get a Conditional Surrender from the Tenant for life, of his Estate to him in Reversion or Remainder, to the end that he may be perfect Tenant of the Inheritance; and then the Writ of Entry may be brought, and the Recovery had against him: For if a Writ of Entry be brought against the stranger, and he vouch the Tenant in tail in possession of the Land, and so a Recovery is had; or if there be Tenant for life of Land, the Remainder or Reversion to another in tail or in fee, and a stranger doth bring a Writ of Entry against him in the Remainder or Reversion, or against a stranger who doth vouch him, and so a Recovery is had; these Recoveries are not good. And yet if the Writ be brought against the Tenant of the Land, and a stranger that hath nothing in the Land together, and so a Recovery be had; this Recovery is good enough. And if a Disseisor make a Gift in tail of the Land to another, and the Writ is brought against him, and he vouch the Disseisee, and he vouch the Common Vouchee; this is a good Recovery. Dyer 252. Co. on Lit. 46. 3. 6. Co. 316. On Lit. 46. Lit. Br. fol. 519. Plow. 514. D. & S. 49. See infra.

5. That it be in such a case as is not prohibited by some Statute-Law; for if the King give any of his own Land whereof he is seised, or cause or procure another in consideration of money or other Land, to give the Land whereof he is seised in tail to any of his Subjects or Servants, in recompence of their service, or the like, the Remainder to the King in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, such Estates in tail cannot be barred by a Common-recovery. And therefore if such a Tenant in tail shall suffer a Recovery of such Lands, it is void, and it will neither bar the Issues in Tail, nor any of them in Remainder, nor the King. 34 H. 8. 20. Co. on Lit. 371. 2. 5. 16. Co. 8. 77. 78.

Prerogative.

But if the King make such a Gift in Tail, keeping the Reversion to himself, and after doth grant the Reversion to another; in this case the Tenant in Tail may suffer a Recovery, and bar the Estate-tail, and the Reversion also. And where a Subject by the Kings provision doth make such a Gift in Tail, and then doth grant the Remainder to the King for life or years only; in this case the Estate-tail, Remainders, and Reversions also may be barred by a Common-Recovery. So in other cases where a Subject doth make a Gift in Tail, the Remainder to the King in Fee; this Estate-tail may be barred by a Common Recovery. And therefore if there be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder or Reversion in Fee to another, and he in Remainder or Reversion by Deed indented and enrolled doth bargain and sell his Remainder or Reversion in Fee to the King; or if one covenant to stand seised to divers Uses in Tail, the Remainder to the King in Fee; in these cases the Estates, and the Reversion and Remainders depending thereupon, may be barred by a Common-Recovery.

So if a man make a Gift in Tail, the Remainder in Fee, and he in the Remainder doth grant his Remainder to another for life, the Remainder in Fee to the King on Condition the Estate shall be void upon the tender of Twenty pounds; in this case the Estate-tail, and the Reversion also and Condition thereupon may be barred. So if the Duke of Lancaster had made a Gift in Tail, and the Reversion had descended to the King; this Estate-tail might have been barred by a Recovery. So if Prince Henry son of H. 7. had made a Gift in Tail, the Remainder to H. 7. in Fee, which Remainder by the death of H. 7. had descended to H. 8. in this case the Tenant in Tail might have barred the Estate-tail by a Recovery. And yet if the King had made a Gift in Tail, the Remainder in Tail, or grant the Reversion in Tail; in these cases a Common-Recovery might not have been suffered to bar the Estate-tail, Remainder, or Reversion.

And if the Husband, for the advancement of his wife in Jointure, and the preferment of the Heirs of their two bodies, make an Estate in Tail to him and his Wife, and the Heirs of their two bodies; and the Wife after her Husbonds death, alone by herself or any other Husband suffer a Common-Recovery of the Land whereof this Estate is made; this Recovery will not bar the Estate-tail, Stat. 11 H. 7. c. 10. Co. 3. 58. 61. 59. But if in this case the Recovery be suffered by the Heir in Tail, or by the Heir in Tail and his Mother together, it is a good Recovery. And therefore if A. be seised of Land in Fee, and he make a Feoffment in Fee to the intent that the Feoffee shall reconvey it to him and his wife, and the Heirs-males of his body; and this is done accordingly, and they have issue a Son, and she surrenders or make a Forfeiture; and he enter and suffer a Recovery; this is a good Recovery and Bar to the Estate-tail. Or if the Writ be brought against the Mother, and she vouch the Heir in Tail; and so a Recovery is had, this Recovery will bar the Estate-tail. And howsoever at the Common-Law, a Recovery against the Tenant for life, with a Voucher upon a lawful Warranty and a Recovery in value, was a Bar to him in Remainder or Reversion, and there was no remedy in this case; yet at this day it is otherwise, Stat. 14 Edw. 2. ch. 8. Co. 15. 62. 10. 43. 45. 3. 6.

Self. 2.

Forfeiture.

And therefore if Tenant in Tail after possibility of Issue extinct, Tenant by the Courtesie, or any other Tenant for life, do suffer their Lands to be recovered from them by Coxin and Agreement, either as immediate Tenants, or as Vouchers upon feigned Titles, without the consent and to the prejudice of him in Remainder or Reversion: such Recoveries are void, and will not bar the Remainders or Reversions, but are Forfeitures of the Estates of such Tenants for life. Inasmuch that if a Tenant for life be made Tenant in fact to the Writ, or Tenant in Law upon the Voucher, and so a Recovery be had; as if Tenant for life make a Lease for years, and the Lessor for years doth make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Feoffee doth suffer a Common-Recovery, in which the Tenant for life is vouched, and he vouch the Common Vouchee; these Recoveries will not bind the Reversions or Remainders. But there is no provision made at this day to preserve the Reversion or Remainder expectant upon an Estate-tail; nor to avoid a Recovery of a Tenant for life, where he in the next Remainder is agreeing and assenting to it.

And

And therefore if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder to A. in Tail to B. in Tail, &c. with divers Remainders over, and the Tenant for life doth suffer a Common Recovery, in which he doth vouch A. who doth vouch the Common Vouchée; in this case this is a good Recovery, and doth bar the Estate-tail, the Remainders, and Reversions also. And if one be seised of Land in Fee, and have two Sons, A. by his first wife, and B. and a Daughter by his second wife, and he devise the Land to his wife for her life, the Remainder to B. his Son in Tail, and the Reversion of the Fee descend to A. and the Writ of Entry is brought against the Tenant for life, and he vouch B. and he doth vouch the Common Vouchée, and so a Recovery is had without the consent of the Heir in Reversion, this is a good Recovery, and a Bar to all the Estates in possession, Remainder and Reversion. And if a Writ of Entry be brought against the Tenant for life, and he make default; after default, and the next in Remainder in Tail is received, or he pray in aid of him in Reversion or Remainder, and then they vouch over, and so a Recovery is had; this is a good Recovery, and a Bar to all the Estates in Remainder and Reversion. But if the Writ of Entry be brought against the Tenant for life, and him in the Remainder in Tail together, and they vouch the Common Vouchée, and so a Recovery is had; this will be no good Recovery to bar the Estate-tail. And if Spiritual persons, as Bishops, Deans, Parsons, and such like suffer a Recovery of their Ecclesiastical lands, such a Recovery is void, and will not bind the Successors.

Sed. 4.

But if it be not in some such prohibited case as before, and the Recovery be had by and between such persons, and of such things, and in such a manner as aforesaid, in such cases albeit there be in truth no Warranty made upon which the Vouchée is had, and albeit there be nothing to be recovered in value, for that the Vouchée hath no Land to recover over in recompence, and albeit that no Execution be done in the life-time of the party against whom the Recovery is had, yet is the same regularly a perpetual Bar to the parties against whom the same is had, and their Heirs, of all the Estates they have in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life in them, and against them in Remainder or Reversion, and their Remainders and Reversions that are depending upon the Estates: with this difference. The Recovery with the single Vouchée doth not bar any Estate but such as the Tenant in Tail hath, at the time of the Recovery had, in possession: So that if the Tenant in Tail be in of any other Estate, as by Disseisin, or the Conveyance of the Disseisor, or the like, this Estate is not barred. But the Recovery with the double Vouchée doth bind and bar all Interests, Estates and Titles, that the Vouchée hath at the time of the Entry into the Warranty. All which is further illustrated by the Examples following:

If the Writ of Entry be brought against the Tenant in tail, and he vouch the Common Vouchée, and so a Recovery is had; this Recovery with single Vouchée is a good Recovery, and Bar to the Estate-tail, if it be then in possession, and not put to a right, and to all the Remainders and Reversions depending thereupon.

Ca. 3. 10. 37.

So if Lands be given to A. in Tail, the Remainder to the right Heirs of B. (B. being then alive) and the Writ of Entry is brought against the Tenant in Tail, and he doth vouch over the Common Vouchée; this is a good Recovery, and a Bar to the Estate-tail, and the Remainder also. But if the Tenant in Tail be disseised, and then suffer a Recovery with a single Vouchée; or the Disseisor make a new Estate in Tail to the Tenant in Tail, and then the Tenant in Tail doth suffer a Recovery with a single Vouchée; or if the Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment in Fee of Land, and then take back a new Estate to himself from the Discontinuee in Tail or in Fee, and then doth suffer a Recovery with a single Vouchée: By this Recovery the Estate is not barred; but by a Recovery with a double Vouchée, in these cases, the Estate-tail is barred. And therefore as where the Tenant in Tail doth levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, or bargain and sell the Land by Deed indented and enrolled, and the Writ is brought against the Conuisee, Feoffee, or Bargainee, and he doth vouch the Tenant in Tail, and he doth vouch the Common Vouchée; this doth bar the Estate-tail, and the Remainders and Reversions depending thereupon.

So if in these cases the Conusee, Feoffee or Bargainee doth make a new Estate in Tail to the Conusor, Feoffor or Bargainor, or he disseise the Conusee, Feoffee, or Bargainee, and then levy a Fine, make a Feoffment or Bargain, and sell to another against whom the Writ of Entry is brought, and he vouch the Tenant in Tail, and he doth vouch the Common Vouchee; by this Recovery the first and second Estate-tail, and all the Remainders and Reversions depending thereupon are barred. So if Lands be given to J. S. and the Heirs-males of the body of his wife engendered, and he hath issue a Son, and after his wife dieth, and he discontinue and take an Estate to him and the Heirs-females of the body of his second wife, and after discontinue again, and after take an Estate to him and the Heirs-females of his own body, and after discontinue again, and the Writ of Entry is brought against the last Discontinuee, and he doth vouch the Tenant in Tail, who doth enter into the Warranty generally, and voucheth the Common Vouchee; this is a good Recovery, and Bar to all the Estates in Tail, and to all the Remainders and Reversions also. And if A. before the Statute of Uses, had been Tenant in Tail, and had made a Feoffment in Fee to B. and he and B. had after made a Feoffment to C. to the use of A. and his wife, and the Heirs of their two bodies, and then she had died, and after A. had entered upon C. the Feoffee, and made a Feoffment to W. in Fee, against whom J. S. had brought a Writ of Entry, and he had vouched A. the Tenant in Tail; this had been a good Recovery, and a Bar to all the Estates. And if Lands be given to husband and wife, and the heirs of the body of the husband, with Remainders over to strangers, and the husband alone doth discontinue; the whole Land by Fine, Feoffment, or Bargain and sale, by Deed indented and enrolled, and the Writ of Entry is brought against the Discontinuee, and he doth vouch the husband alone without the wife, and the husband doth vouch the Common Vouchee, and so a Recovery is had; this is a good Recovery for the whole Land, and a Bar to all the Estates in Tail and Remainder, and Reversion, but not to the Estate of the wife for her life after the husband's death. But if Lands be given to the husband and wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, with Remainders over to strangers, and the husband alone discontinue, and the Recovery is suffered as in the last case; it seems this is no Bar to the Estates in Tail or Remainder, or Reversion for any part of the Land.

And if Lands be given as before unto husband and wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, and the Writ of Entry is brought against them both, and they vouch the Common Vouchee; or the husband alone doth discontinue, and he vouch the husband and wife both, and they enter into the Warranty, and vouch the Common Vouchee, and so the Recovery is had; these are good Recoveries for the whole, and a Bar to all the Estates in Tail, and to the Estate of the Woman, and to all other Estates. And where Lands are given to a man and his wife, and the heirs of the body of the wife, or to the wife and the heirs of her body, and the Writ of Entry is brought against the husband and wife, and they vouch the Common Vouchee; these are good Recoveries, and will bar the husbands and wives, and the Estates in Tail, Remainder and Reversion.

And where a man hath Land in which his wife hath a Jointure, or to which she will have title of Dower after his death; if the Writ of Entry in this case be brought against them both, and they vouch the Common Vouchee, and so a Recovery is had; this Recovery will bar them both; but the husband alone, without her, cannot bar her of any such Estate by a Recovery, for she may falsifie and avoid it after his death. And if Lands be given to husband and wife, and the heirs of the body of the husband, and the Writ of Entry be brought against the husband alone, and he vouch the Common Vouchee, and so a Recovery is had with a single Voucher; this is no good Recovery for any part of the Land, nor Bar to any of the Estates, albeit the husband do survive the wife.

And

And yet if the Lands be given to two others, and the Heirs of the Body of one of them, the Remainder over to a stranger, and the Writ of Entry is brought against one of them; and he vouch the common Vouchee, and so a Recovery is had; this is a good Recovery, and a Bar to all the Estates for the one half of the Land.

If Land be given to A. in Tail, the Remainder to B. in Tail, the Remainder to C. in Tail, the Remainder to D. in Fee, and A. doth make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Writ of Entry is brought against the Feoffee, and he doth vouch B. (being him in the second Remainder in Tail) to Warranty, and he doth vouch the common Vouchee; this is a good Recovery, and a Bar to the second Estate-tail; and all the Remainders and Reversions depending thereupon; and yet it is no Bar of the first Estate-tail which A. hath.

If the Writ of Entry be brought against a Mortgagee, and he doth vouch the common Vouchee, and so a Recovery is had; this is no good Recovery to Bar, or bind the Mortgagor, but that he may enter upon the Condition broken. Curia, Mich. 18 Jac. B.R. So was it held by most of the Judges in the case between Pell and Brown.

So if one give Lands to B. and his Heirs, so long as C. shall have Heirs of his Body, and B. doth suffer a common Recovery, and vouch the common Vouchee; this is no good Recovery to Bar the Donor of the possibility: For in both these cases, he that is to be barred, hath no Remainder or Reversion, but an interest or possibility which cannot receive a recompence in value.

But if in these cases the Mortgagee vouch to Warranty the Mortgagor, or B. the Donee vouch the Donor, and so they Vouch over the common Vouchee, and so the Recovery is had; these will be good Recoveries to Bar both them, and their Heirs for ever.

And if one have an Estate in Fee-simple, determinable on a Limitation, or a Condition, As if Lands be given to A. and his Heirs, until B. pay him one hundred pound, and then that it shall remain to B. and his Heirs; and A. in this case doth suffer a common Recovery, and vouch the common Vouchee. It seems this is no Bar to B. and his Heirs, but that upon payment of the one hundred pound, he shall have the Land.

So if one by his Will Devise his Land thus, I give unto A. my Son, and his Heirs for ever, my Land in W. paying twenty pound to B. when A. shall come to one and twenty years of age, and then to A. and his Heirs for ever; and if A. shall die without Heirs of his Body, C. being then living, that then C. shall have it to him, and his Heirs for ever; and A. pay the twenty pound to B. at his full age, and then suffer a Recovery of the Land; this is no Bar to C. of his Estate. Co. 3. 5.

But here it must be noted, that in the cases before where it is said, That a Recovery is void, it is meant as to the Heirs, and them in Reversion, and Remainders; for as to the parties themselves, that do suffer the Recovery, the same is for the most part good, and bindeth them by way of Estoppel and Conclusion.

And it must be noted also, That a stranger that hath right to the Land at the time of the Recovery suffered, is not barred at all by the Recovery, or by his Laches of Non-claim, &c. as in the case of a Fine. See Brownl. 1 part, 36. 193. 2 part. 171.

The Recoverors in common Recoveries, their Heirs and Assigns, shall have the like Remedy against Lessees for lives and years of the Land recovered, their Executors or Assigns, by Distress, Avowry, Action of Debt, for the Rents and Services reserved upon their Leases, that shall be due after the same Recoveries had; and also like Actions of Waste done after the Recovery had; and like Remedy upon a disturbance in a Presentation to an Advowson, and in like manner and form, as the Lessor should, or might have had, if the same Recoveries had never been had, albeit the same Lessees do never Attorn to the same Recoverors. And if a man make a Lease for years to begin at Michaelmas, reserving Rent, and before Michaelmas he suffer a Recovery; in this case the Recoveror shall distrain for this Rent, which the Lessor before the Recovery, could not distrain for: But if the Recovery had not been had, he might have distrained. 7 H.8:4. Dyer 31. Co. on Littl. 104.

1. Sec. 6.

A Recovery may be defeated, frustrated, and avoided (which is called the falsifying of a Recovery) in part, or in all, for many causes; as for that, there is some gross and substantial Error in the manner of the proceedings. But the Recovery is not avoidable for False or Incongruous Latin, Rasure, Interlining, Misentring of any Warrant of Attorney, Misreturning or not Return of the Sheriff, or other want of Form in Words, and not in Matter of Substance, because it is done by the consent of the Parties. Or it may be avoided, for that he against whom the Writ of Entry is brought, is not Tenant of the Freehold, by right or wrong, at the time of the Writ brought. As when the Writ is brought against a stranger that hath nothing in the Land, and he doth vouch the Tenant in Tail in Possession of the Land. Or a Recovery may be avoided, for that he that hath the Estate, and the Right, is neither Party nor Privy to the Recovery. As when the Writ of Entry is brought against the Disseisor, and he vouch a stranger that hath nothing in the Land: Or a Recovery is had against the Husband alone of the Land, whereunto his Wife hath Title of Dower: Or a Recovery may be avoided, for that another hath some Estate, in the thing whereof the Recovery is had at the time of the Recovery suffered. As when there is a Recovery had of Land, whereof there is a Lease or Estate for years, by Statute, Elegit, or the like: Or it may be avoided, for that the Recovery is had by Coven, as when it is suffered by Tenant for life, to disinherit him in Reversion; or when it is gotten by some undue practise and sinister dealing, for in this case it is sometimes made void by a Vacat or Sentence of a Court.

And where a Recovery is avoidable or reversible, for any of these, or such other like causes, it must be avoided by him, whom it doth concern, that is barred and bound by the same Recovery that should have had the Land, if the same Recovery had not been, and not by any other whom it doth not concern. As if an Erroneous Recovery be suffered by Tenant in Tail; in this case his Issues, or if they fail, the next in Remainder or Reversion, shall defeat it:

So also if the Land be recovered against a stranger, the Tenant in Tail shall avoid it; and if, the Land be recovered against a Disseisor, the Disseisee shall avoid it: And if the Land be recovered against him in Reversion or Remainder, the Tenant for years, by Statute or Elegit, shall avoid it: But in these last cases, they shall falsify and avoid it, during their particular Estates onely.

So also the Wife shall falsify the Recovery suffered by her Husband alone, as to her Title of Dower onely, and no longer, or further. And he in the Reversion or Remainder, shall falsify and avoid the Recovery suffered by the Tenant for life, either in the life time of the Tenant, or afterwards. But neither he in Reversion or Remainder, or any one, by or under him, or any other, can falsify a Recovery suffered by the Tenant in Tail in Possession, except it be for some such causes as before. And the Recoveror himself cannot falsify a Recovery. So neither can a Guardian, or a Tenant of a Manor. As if one hold Land of a Manor, and a stranger recover the Manor by a feigned Title; a Tenant of the Manor cannot falsify this Recovery.

And in all these cases, where a Recovery is avoidable, and a man hath power given to falsify: He must do the same by Writ of Error sometimes, as in the case of Erroneous proceedings; and sometimes by pleading and the setting forth of the Special Matter, as in the case where Tenant is not Tenant of the Freehold, or when the Recovery is had by Coven; against the Tenant for life, or the like; and sometimes by the shewing and setting forth of the Practise to the Court, and a Motion made, that a Vacat may be had upon the Judgment for the causes alleaged. 33 Eliz. 3. CHAP. CXXXVI.

Of Relation.

It is filio juris to make a nullity of a thing from the beginning, for a certain intent which had essence; or more plainly, A fiction of Law, whereby something is for Special Purpose, deemed never to have been, which in truth was; or as others define it, It is a Term of Law where in consideration of Law, two times, or other things are so considered, as if they were all one; and the thing subsequent is said to take his effect at the time preceding. As if one deliver a writing, to be delivered to one upon payment of money: Now when the money is paid, this Delivery shall relate unto the first Delivery, and be of force from that time.

And this the Law doth most commonly make to help Acts in Law, and not the Acts of the Parties, and propter necessitatem ut res magis valeat quam pereat, (that is) for necessity to make the thing to take effect; and therefore it shall never work to any other collateral intent, but shall be restrained onely to the same thing, and to the same intent, and between the same parties onely, and shall not be strained to a third person, that is not party, nor privy to prejudice him; neither shall it make that tortious, that was lawful before; nec operatur alicui damnum, (that is) nor shall it enure to hurt any body: As in the cases beneath, Co. 1. 99. 7. 39. Plow. 488.

Relations are allowed in cases of Conditions, Judgments, Executions, and Actions, in cases of Offices, in cases of Inrollments, in cases of Acts of Parliament, in cases of Administration, Probate of Wills, in cases of Agreement, in cases of Forfeitures, in cases of Indentures, to guide a precedent Assurance: For which see the Titles, 10 H. 6. 6. Dyer 136: But it seems in cases of Attornment it doth not allow a Relation; and therefore if one Reversion be granted to two men, by two several Deeds: And he that hath the last grant get Attornment first, and after the other get Attornment also, the second Grantee that got the Attornment first shall have the Reversion. Co. 1. 99. 7. 39. 5. 16. Co. 2. 73, 78. 3. 83. 9. 9, 13. Littl. 552.

2. Where Relations are allowed, or not.

A Judgment against an Heir upon the Obligation of his Ancestor, shall have Relation to the time of the Writ first purchased, and from that time it will avoid all Alienations made by the Heir. See Judgment. Where a Judgment against any man doth binde his Lands he hath in Fee simple, and Execution shall relate for them to the time of the Judgment put for Goods and Chattels, contra.

Sec. 2.
3. Where Relation shall be of matter of Record, and how of a Judgment. Of an Office.

If an Office had intituled the King, by reason of a Seigniorie, it shall relate to the time of the Ancestors death, to this special intent, to give the King the Meffn profits of the Land: And if it intitule him ratione prioris relli, &c. by reason of his first Right or Title, it shall relate to the time of the Right or Title accrued, as to the time of the Condition broken, or Alienation in Mortmain, to give the King the Meffn profits. But where he was intituled to Land jure protectionis sue Regie, (that is) by his Regal Protection; as in case of an Idiot, a nativitate, or nomine destructionis, (that is) in the name of a Distress: As where his Tenant did alien, or his Widow marry without Licence, so where he was intituled by an Attainder of Felony. In these cases the Office shall have Relation, as to avoid all Alienations, and mean In- tumbances to the time of the Nativity of the Idiot, Alienation, or Marriage of his Tenant, and Felony committed, but as to the mean profits to the time of the Office found onely. And therefore if the Husband and Wife be Joyntenants of a Lease, and the Husband kill himself, and this was after found by Office; this shall relate to the time of the murder, and so intitule the King to the whole, Co. 8. 170. 4. 126: Stamf. pl. cap. 13. Kelm. 71. Plow. 486. Co. 9. 131.

Of an Inroll-ment of a Deed of Bargain and Sale.

The Inrollment of a Deed of Bargain and Sale, when it is done within the six moneths, shall to most purposes relate to the time of the Delivery, or of the Date of the Deed. And it is given as a Rule, that it shall have relation to the time of the Delivery of the Deed, viz. To avoid all mean Estates and Charges made to a stranger by the Bargainor after the Delivery of the Deed before the Inrollment, but not to divest any estate lawfully settled in the interim in the Bargainee himself: And therefore if one bargain and sell his Land by Deed indented to one, and after before the Deed is inrolled, he enter into a Statute, or grant a Rent charge out of this Land, or make a Lease of the Land to another, and then the Deed is inrolled within the time; in this case the Relation shall avoid all the mean Charges and Estates: And if A. bargain and sell his Land by Deed indented to B. and afterwards doth sell the same Land by Deed indented to C. and the Deed made to C. is first inrolled, and then the Deed made to B. is inrolled also within the six moneths; in this case B. shall have the Land, and the Relation of his Inrollment shall make the Inrollment of the other Deed void. So if A. levy a Fine of the Land to C. yet B. shall have the Land. But if the first Deed made to B. be not inrolled within the six moneths, and the Deed to C. be inrolled within the six moneths, contra, Dyer 218. Curia, Mich. 3 Jac. B. R.

If A. bargain and sell Land to B. and after levy a Fine to B. of the same Land, and after within six moneths the Deed is inrolled; in this case B. shall take by the Fine, and not by the bargain and Sale. Co. 4. 71.

If one Joyntenant alien all his Lands in Dale to A. and before the Inrollment, the other Joyntenant die, and after the Deed is inrolled; in this case but a Moyety, and not the whole Land doth pass. Bro. Fait Inroll. 9.

If A. bargain and sell his Land to B. and after this A. doth become a Bankrupt, and the Commissioners sell the Land to C. and after the Deed is inrolled within six moneths; in this case B. and not C. the Purchaser shall have the Land. So held 4 Car. B. R.

Sett. 3. If A. bargain and sell his Land held in Capite to B. in Fee, and B. dieth before Inrollment, and then the Deed is inrolled; in this case the Heir of B. shall be in Ward for the Land. And so was it held by all the Justices in Sir Walter Earls case, Pasche, 15 Jac. Curia, Ward. And yet in this case the Wife of the Bargainee shall not have Dower, as was held by Anderson Chief Justice, and Justice Walmesley. 3 Jac. Co. B. And again in Sir Robert Barkers case, 6 Jac. And if one bargain and sell his Land to J. S. and after this the Rent incur; and then the Deed is inrolled; the Bargainee, and not the Bargainor, shall have the Rent. Per Curiam B. R. Hill. 11 Car.

Dower.

Rent.

If A. bargain and sell his Land to B. in Fee, and then marry C. and die, and C. is endowed, and after the Deed is inrolled; in this case the Dower of the Woman shall be taken away by Relation, as was held in Baron Frevils case. 22 Eliz. Co. B.

Release.

If A. bargain and sell Land to B. and C. in Fee, and B. release to C. before the Inrollment; this Release is void. 3 Jac. Co. B.

If A. Disseisor, bargain and sell the Land disseised to B. in Fee, and the Disseisee doth release to the Bargainor, and after the Deed is inrolled; in this case this Release shall avail B. So held in Mockers case. 10 Eliz.

If A. bargain and sell his Land to B. and B. before Inrollment doth bargain and sell the Land to C. the first Deed is inrolled, and then the second is inrolled; in this case the last bargain and sale is void, and shall not be made good by Relation, as was held by the Court in Sir Robert Barkers case. 6 Jac.

Condition.

If a Lease be made, rendring Rent on condition to re-enter for not payment, and the Lessor bargain and sell the Reversion by Deed indented; and after the Deed made the Rent is arrear, and then the Deed is inrolled; in this case it shall not relate to give re-entry for the Condition broken. So was it held in Sir Christopher Hattons case.

Lease.

If A. bargain and sell Land to B. in Tail, and B. before Inrollment of the Deed, doth make a Lease according to the Statute of 32 H. 8. and after the Deed is inrolled; this is a good Lease. So hath it been adjudged.

If A. acknowledge a Statute to B. and B. extend it, and after it, and before a Statute Liberate, A. become Bankrupt, and the Commissioners sell the Land, and after the Liberate is had; in this case the Liberate shall relate to the extent, and avoid the sale by the Commissioners. B. R. 4 Car.

If a Feme-sole deliver a Deed as an Escrow, to be afterwards delivered as her Deed, and before this delivery as her Deed, she die, or take a Husband; yet if this Deed be after delivered it shall be good by Relation, and said to take effect as ab initio, (i.) From the beginning. Co. 3. 35. Plow. 344. And for the Relation of a Deed made by a Woman-sole, or Infant, see Deed. Yet where an Obligation is delivered as an Escrow, and the Oblige before the second Delivery, release the debt or duty, this were no bar of the Debt, for to this collateral purpose, it shall not relate. So if an Infant or a Feme-covert deliver a Deed as an Escrow, and before the second Delivery she become Sole, or he become of Age; this Deed shall not be made good by Relation. Perk. Sett. 139. Co. 3. 35. Goldsb. 163.

Seff. 4.
4. Where a Relation shall be of Matter of Deed, or not.

So if a Disfeisor make a Lease for years, and deliver it as an Escrow to another, and command him to enter into the Land, and deliver it as his Deed to the Lessee; here it shall be said to take effect by the second Delivery, and shall not relate; for then the Lease would be void. So if a Feoffee on condition grant a Rent-charge out of the Land, and the Grantee bring an Annuity; this is a good Annuity between them two, but shall not relate to prejudice the Feoffor, if he re-enter on this condition. Co. 3. 35. & Co. 3. 29.

If one make a Feoffment of a Manor by Deed, or without Deed, and a long time after Livery, the Tenants do attorn to the Grantee: Now by this the Attornment shall relate to pass the Manor ab initio; but not to charge the Tenants for the Arrearages in the mean time. So if one Infeoff an Infant or Feme-covert, and after give, grant, or devise the Land, or any thing out of it, and after the Infant or Woman disagree to it; this shall relate to this purpose, to discharge the Husband or Infant from damages for the time; but not to make the Void Gift or Grant good. So if a Disfeisor make a Feoffment to A. and B. by Deed, and give Livery to A. in the name of both, and A. dies, and B. disagrees; this shall relate to charge him of the mean profits, but to no other purposes. Co. 3. 29. Co. upon Littl. 310.

5. Where a Relation shall be of other things.

When the Wife is indowed by the Heir of her Husband, she shall be in immediately from the Husband; and therefore if the Husband were a Disfeisor, and the Heir in by descent, yet the Disfeisor may enter upon the Wife: for things relating to a time long before, be as if they were done at that time. *36 H. 6. 7. CHAP. CXXXVII.

Of a Release.

1. Release,
what.

Releffor, Re-
lessee.

Release is the giving or discharging of the Right or Action which a man hath or may have, or claim against another man, or that which is his: Or it is the conveyance of a mans Interest or Right which he hath unto a thing, to another that hath the Possession thereof, or some Estate therein. And this albeit, it may be made by other words, as Dedi, Concessi, or Renunciassse, or such like; yet it is most commonly and properly made by these words, Remississe, Relaxasse, & quietum clammisse, all which are much to one purpose. He that makes the Release is sometimes called the Releffor, and he to whom it is made, the Relessee. Terms Ley. West. Symb. lib. 2. sect. 466.

2. The kinds.

There are two kinds of Releases like unto those of Confirmation, viz. A Release Express, or in Deed, and that is a purposed Release, when the Act done, or Deed made, is intended a Release: And this is always done by writing; and then it is defined by some to be an Instrument, whereby Estates, Rights, Titles, Actions, and other things be sometimes extinguished, sometimes transferred, sometimes abridged, and sometimes enlarged, which is after this manner. Noverint, &c. me A. de B. remississe, relaxasse & omnino de me [vel pro me] & hered meis quietum clammisse C. de D. totum jus, titulum & clameumque habui, habeo vel quovismodo in futuro habere potero de & in uno mesuagio cum pertin' in F. &c. And a Release implied, or in Law, and that is when the Law by Intendment and Construction, and by way of consequent doth make a Release of an Act done to another purpose: And this is sometimes by writing, and sometimes without writing. These Releases also are sometimes of a bare and naked right, and sometimes of a right accompanied with some Estate or Interest; and sometimes they are of Actions real, or in Lands or Tenements, and sometimes of Actions personal, of, or in Goods or Chattels, and sometimes of Actions mixt, partly in the Realty, and partly in the Personalty. Co. super Littl. 264, 265.

3. The nature
of it in general.

A Release is much of the nature of a Confirmation, for in most things they agree and produce the like effects: This therefore is said sometimes to enure by way of mitter le estate, that is, by way of giving or transferring or enlargment of an Estate or Interest, and so doth give some new Interest or Estate to him to whom it is made: And sometimes it is said to enure by way of mitter le droit onely, that is, by way of giving, transferring, and discharging of a right Title or Entry unto him, to whom it is made: And so it doth sometimes perfect an Estate that was imperfect and defeasible before, and enure by way of Entry and Feoffment: And sometimes also it doth enure to make a Conditional estate absolute: And sometimes also it doth work and enure by way of extinguishment or discharge: And then also sometimes it doth enure by way of discharge or extinguishment, as against all persons, and so as that whereof all persons may take advantage: And sometimes it doth enure onely as a Discharge against some persons onely, and as to or against other persons by way of Mitter le droit: And some of these in Deed enure by way of Extinguishment, for that he to whom the Release is made, cannot have the thing released: And some of them have some quality of such Releases, and are said to enure by way of Extinguishment, but in truth do not, for that he to whom the Release is made, may receive and take the thing released. And in some cases also a Release like a Confirmation, doth enure by way of Abridgment. But a man cannot Bar himself hereby of a Right that shall come to him hereafter; and therefore it is held, that these words used in Releases, [Qua quovismodo in futuro habere potero] are to no purpose. Co. super Littl. 193. 273, 277. Co. l. 147. Littl. sect. 6. 459. 465. 466. 446.

Lands,

Lands, Tenements and hereditaments themselves may be given and transferred by way of release, and all rights and titles to lands may be given, barred and discharged, by release, and so also may rights and titles to goods and chattells. Also all actions real, personall and mixt, may be given, discharged or extinct by release; for howsoever rights and titles of entry cannot be granted by act of the party, nor any action may be granted from one man to another by act of the Law or the party, yet all these may be released to the terre-tenant, And a right to a freehold or Inheritance, seigniorie or rent in presenti or futuro may be released five manner of waies, and the first three waies without any privity at all. 1. To the Tenant of the free hold in deed or in Law. 2. To him in the remainder 3. To him in reversion. The other two waies in respect of privity without any estate or right, as by demandant to vouchee, Donor to Donee after the Donee hath discontinued. Brownl. 1 part 110. 116. 149. Co. 10. 48 Super Litt. 268: 269. 266.

4. What things may be released Or not. And how.

Also conditions annexed to estates, powers of revocation of Uses, Warranties, Covenants, Tenures, Services, Rents, Commons, and other profits to be taken out of Lands may be discharged, extinguished and determined by release to the Tenant of the land, &c. Bro Release in toto.

Also possibilities of Land &c. if they be neer and common possibilities albeit they be not grantable over to another person, yet may they be released to him that hath the present estate of the land. And therefore if a man possessed of a terme devise it to A for life, the remainder to B and his Heirs males during the terme; in this case albeit B may not grant his interest over yet he may release it to A. and if A devise to B twenty pound when he comes to the age of twenty four years, and die; in this case B after he is of the age of twenty one years may release this legacy. So a covenant to doe a future act may be released before it be broken.

And it seems also the donee of a Statute or recognisance may release to a feoffee of part of the Land, and so barr himself of Execution of that Land.

And if I grant to I S that if he doe such a thing he shall have an annuity of twenty pound for his life; in this case it seems I S may release this before the condition be performed. And if I make a Feoffment to I S to divers uses with power to revoke it; I may release this power to one that hath an estate of freehold in possession, reversion or remainder in the Land. And yet if I make a Feoffment to I S with proviso that if B revoke, that the uses shall cease; in this case B cannot release this power.

And a remote possibility that is altogether incertaine cannot be released. And therefore if the sonn of the Disseisee release to the disseisor in the life time of his father; this release is void. And so if the donee of a Statute release his right to the land of the donor before execution; this release is void. And so if a plaintiff release to a Bail in the Kings Bench before Judgement given, this release is void. Co. 10. 47. 51. 52. 5. 70. 71. Super Litt. 265. Lit. Sect. 446. Co. 1. 111. 111. Dir. 57. Co. 1. 113. 174.

So if one promise to pay me ten pound upon the surrender of my Land to him, and that if he shall sell it for above fifty pound that then he shall pay me tenn pound more, and I release this to him before he do sell it and before I do surrender, in this case this doth not releas the second promise because it is not releasable. Adjudged Trin. 14. Jac. B. R.

Also Debts, Legacies, and other duties may be released and discharged thereby before or after they become due. And therefore a rent or annuity may be released before the day of payment.

And so also may a debt due by obligation: Judgements, Executions, Recognisances and the like, by apt words be discharged by release. See infra

If the charge or duty grow by record, the discharge and release thereof must be by record also. And if it grow by writing, the discharge and release must be by writing also. Nihil est magis rationi consentaneum quam eodem modo quodque dissolvere quo constatum est. And therefore a duty growing by a verball agreement may in some cases be released by word without writing.

5. How and after what manner these things may be released.

But

Condition.
Defeasance.

But regularly lands and Tenements cannot be given, nor rights and titles to lands, and actions be discharged by release without a Deed in writing.

A release that doth enure by way of mitter le estat, mitter le droit, or extinguishment, may be made upon condition or with a defeasance, so as the condition or defeasance be contained in the release or delivered at the same time with it, for no defeasance made after can avoid the force of a release made before. Co. super Litt. 274. Perk. Sell. 718. Lit. 467. Co. 1. 111. 21. H. 7. 24.

And yet a release may be delivered as an escrow, and so the force of it may be suspended for a time.

But a release of a condition may not be made upon a condition.

Nor may a release of a chattell be upon a condition subsequent, but it may be upon a condition precedent.

And therefore if a man release a debt to another upon condition that the releasor may have such a debt owing from a third person to the releasee; this is a good condition. Currin. B. R. Hill. 9 Car. Barkley & Perkes case.

A release of all actions may be made untill a time past, as untill the first of May last, or untill the day of the date of the release; and this will discharge all actions till then and none after. Dier 307. 21 H. 7. 24. Co. super Litt. 274. Sell. 467.

But a release cannot be made of a right or action for a part of an estate, or for a time only, as for one year, or untill Michaelmas next, or the like: for a release of such a thing for one day or for one hour is a release of it for ever.

And yet a man may release his right in a part of the land. And therefore if a man be disseised of two acres, he may release his right in one of them and enter into the other acre.

Also a release in the nature of an acquittance may be of part of a debt.

And therefore if one be bound in an obligation of four hundred pound to pay two hundred pound at Michaelmas, and at Christmas after the Obligee by his Deed releaseth three hundred ninety pound parcell of the said four hundred pound; this is a good release for so much and no more. Adjudged Barkley & Perkes case. Hil. 9 Car. B. R.

In every good release in Deed, howsoever it enure, these things are requisite.

1 That there be a good Releasor, and a good Releasee, and a thing to be released.

2 That the deed be well sealed, delivered &c. And if it tend and enure by way of enlargement of estate, then these things are further required to make the release good.

1 He that doth make the release must have such an estate in himself as out of which such an estate may be derived and granted to the Releasee as is intended by the Release, as if he have the reversion in Fee of Lands, he may release to a Tenant for years and thereby encrease his estate to an estate for life or in tail, or he may pass his whole Fee-simple by the release. Dyer. 251:

But if there be Lessee for years rendering rent, and the reversion is granted for life the remainder over in Fee, and the Grantee of the reversion release all his right to him in remainder, and then he in the remainder grant the Reversion, and the Tenant for life release to the Grantee also; in this case it seems both these releases are void and cannot enure as releases, howbeit it may be if they have words of surrender in them they may enure as surrenders. Per Justice Jones. 5 Car. Dividem:

So if there be Lessee for years, the remainder in Tail, the remainder in Fee, and the Lessee for years being a woman doth marry with him in the remainder in Fee, and he in remainder in Tail release to him in remainder in Fee; this is a void release. Adjudged Trin. 5. Jac. B. R. Butlers case.

So if Tenant for life release to him in remainder in Fee or in Tail; it seems this is void and cannot enure as a release

So if there be Tenant for life, the remainder in Tail, the remainder in Fee, and he in remainder in Fee release to the Tenant for life; this will not increase his estate.

And if the Tenant in Tail in this case release to the Tenant for life, his estate shall be no longer increased hereby then for the life of the Tenant in Tail. Lit. Sell. 598. Plow. 556. Co. super Litt. 345.

6 What releases may be made of lands or Tenements. And what shall be said a good release in deed Or not. And by what words it may be made.
1. When it doth enure by way of enlargement or passing of an estate.
1. In respect of the estate of the releasor. Surrender.

2. He to whom the release is made must have some estate in possession in deed or in law, or in reversion in deed, in his own or another's right of the lands whereof the release is made to be as a foundation for the release to stand upon; for a release which must enure to enlarge an estate cannot work without a possession joined with an estate. And therefore the lessee must be lessee for life, years, or tenant by statute Merchant, Staple, Elegit, or as guardian in chivalry that doth hold the land over for the value, or at least he must be tenant at will: And therefore if a man let his land to another for term of years to begin presently, and after the lessor or his heir doth release to the lessee (after his entry and being in possession) all his right in the land; this is good to enlarge the estate according to the time set down in the release. But if the release be before the term begin, or after the term begin and before the lessee have entered; (howsoever if any rent be reserved on the lease it may enure and be good to extinguish that rent) yet it is not good to enlarge the estate. And yet if a tenant for 20 years in possession make a lease to B. for 10 years, and B. enter and he in the reversion release to the first lessee for years; this is a good release to enlarge the estate.

2. In respect of the estate of him to whom the release is made.

So if a man make a lease for years the remainder for life or years, and the first lessee doth enter; in this case a release to him in remainder is good to enlarge the estate.

So if I grant the reversion of my tenant for life to another for life, and after release to him and his heirs; this is a good release to enlarge the estate. Co. super Litt. 270. 273. 265. Litt. Sett. 459. Plow. 423. Dier. 4. 15 H. 7. 14.

So if a man make a lease for life or years to a feme sole, and she take a husband; and he in the reversion release to the husband and his heirs; this is a good release to enlarge the estate according to the words of the release. But if the case be so that a man had an estate in possession of land, and he be now out of the possession of it, and have but a right only to it; or if he have a possession only and no estate; or if he have neither estate nor possession; in these cases a release made to such a one will not avail to enlarge his estate. Co. super Litt. 273.

And therefore if a man make a lease for life the remainder for life, and the first lessee dieth, and the lessor release to him in remainder for life, before his entry; this is a good release to enlarge his estate, for he hath an estate of freehold in law capable of enlargement by release before entry. But if there be lessee for life, the remainder for life, the remainder in tail, the remainder in fee, and the lessee for life is disseised and during the possession of the disseisor he that hath right doth release to one of them in the remainder, this is void. So if lands be given in tail or leased for life, and the donee or lessee is disseised, and during the possession of the disseisor the donor or lessor doth release all his right to the donee or lessee, this is void and will not enlarge his estate, howbeit if there be any rent reserved on the estate it will extinguish the rent.

So if the tenant by the curtesie grant over his estate, and after he in reversion doth release to the tenant by the curtesie; in this case his release is void and will not enlarge his estate.

So if an Infant make a lease for life, and the lessee granteth the estate over with warranty, and the Infant at full age doth bring a Dum fuit infra aetatem, and the tenant doth vouch the grantor, who doth enter into the warranty, and the demandant being the Infant doth release to him and his heirs, this will not enlarge his estate, for in truth he had no estate before, and that which is not cannot be enlarged.

And if lessee for life or years, release to him in remainder or reversion, this cannot be good as a release, howbeit if there be apt words it may amount to a Surrender.

And if a man have only an occupation of land as tenant at sufferance, as when a lessee for years doth hold over his terme, or the like; no release to him can work any enlargement of estate, for albeit he have a possession yet hath he no estate, and besides in this case there is no privity: which is the third thing required in these releases, Co. super Litt. 270. Litt. Sett. 451. Litt. Sett. 455, 456. Co. super Litt. 273. Dier. 251. Co. super Litt. 271. Litt. Sett. 461.

3. In respect of privy.

For as in all these releases that enure by way of increase or passing an estate, there must be some estate in the releffor and the releffee, so there must be some privy in estate between them at the time of the release made, for an estate without privy is not sufficient. And therefore it must be, between donor and donee, lessor and lessee, and the like, as in the cases before, between him in reversion and the lessee for life or years, tenant by statute Merchant or Staple, or by Elegit or Gardian in Chivalry that keepeth the land for the value. And if tenant for life lease for years, and he in the reversion and the tenant for life doe joine together and release to the lessee for years; this is a good release to enlarge the estate. So if he in reversion release to the husband that hath an estate in the right of his wife only for life or years, this is a good release. So if lessee for years make a lease of the land but for part of the terme, the privy continueth still, and therefore a release to him is good to enlarge the estate.

But if he assigne over all the terme then the privy is gone, and therefore a release made to him afterwards is void. And then a release made to the assignee of the terme is good to enlarge the estate. And if a disseisor make a lease for life or years, and after he and the disseisor joine together to make a release to the lessee for life or years this is a good release to enlarge the estate. But if the disseisor in this case make a lease for life or years, and the disseisee or he that hath right release to the tenant for life or years; in this case the release is void for want of privy. And if there be lessee for years the remainder for life, and he in reversion release to the lessee for years or him in remainder for life and his heirs all his right; this is a good release to work an enlargement of estate. So if one make a lease for life, and grant the reversion for life, and then the lessor doth release to the grantee of the reversion and his heirs; this is a good release to enlarge the estate of the grantee, and here is privy enough.

If A. be tenant for life, the remainder to B. in tail. the remainder to C. for life, the remainder to A. in fee, and A. die, and his heir doth release all his right to B. being in possession; this is a good release and gives the Fee-simple. See Brownl. 1 part. 207. Co. super Litt. 269. Litt. Sect. 461. Plow. 341. Co. super Litt. 273. Dier. 4. C. 3. 22. Plow. 540. 14 H. 7. 4. Litt. Sect. 518. Co. super Litt. 273. Bro. Release. 71.

But if A. make a lease to B. for life, and the lessee maketh a lease for years, and after A. in the life time of the tenant for life maketh a release to the lessee for years, this release is void and will not enlarge his estate for want of privy.

So if a man make a lease for twenty years, and the lessee make a lease for ten years, and the first lessor doth release to the second lessee and his heirs; this release is void.

So also if the donee in taile make a lease for his own life, and the donor release to the lessee and his heirs; this release is void.

So also if the donee in taile make a lease for his own life, and after the donor release to the donee and his heirs; it seems this is not a good release.

Also one Jointenant or coparcener may release to another and thereby transerre all his Estate and give the whole interest unto his companion; and this is a good release to pass all his or her part of the land.

And if there be three Jointenants in fee and they make a lease for life, and after two of them release all their right in the land to the third; this is a good release.

So if one make a lease for life to another, and after grant the reversion to seven, and the tenant for life doth attorn, and after four of the seven release all their right to the other three, and after one of the three release to the other two; these are good releases.

So if a lease for years be made to two, to begin at a day to come, a release by one of them to the other is good to give all the terme and all the land to the releffee.

But it seems one tenant in common cannot release to another tenant in common. Co. super Litt. 273. Litt. Sect. 516. Bro. Release. 77. Perk. Sect. 84. 10 Ed. 4. 3.

The

The fourth thing that is required in such a release is sufficient words in law not only to make a release, (which is required in all releases) but also to raise and create a new estate. For this therefore know that all releases (of what kind soever) are commonly made by these words, Remisisse, Relaxasse, & quietum clamasse, as being the most ancient and significant words for this purpose. And amongst these the word Release is the most effectually word, as that which doth include the other two, and as that which is the proper and peculiar word for this kind of conveyance. But there are other words also by which a release may be made, as Renunciare, Acquietare, &c.

And therefore it is held that if one have common in anothers land, and he by deed release it to him thus: Renuncio Communiam meam &c. this is a good release. And if the lessor doe but grant to his lessee for life that he shall be discharged of the rent, this is a good-release of the rent. And it is a rule, That by what words a debt or duty may be created, by words of a contrary signification it may be released. And therefore if one doe acknowledge himself to be satisfied and discharged a debt, this is a good release of the debt. And for words to raise the estate it is usuall and most safe to specify in the deed what estate he to whom the release is made shall have; and in most cases this is needfull: for it is generally true, that when a release doth enure by way of enlargement of estate no inheritance in fee simple or fee taile can pass without apt words of inheritance. And therefore if I make a lease of land to another for his life, and after I release to him all my right without more saying in the release; hereby his estate is not enlarged. But if I release to him and his heirs; by this he hath a fee simple. And if I release to him and the heirs of his body; by this he hath an estate taile. But where a release worketh by way of mittere le estate there in some cases there needs not any words of inheritance, as in cases where releases are made between jointenants or coparceners, as where a joint estate is made to the husband and wife and a third person and their heirs, and the third person doth release all his rights to the husband alone, or to the wife alone. So, if there be three jointenants, and one of them doth release to one of the other two, in all these and such like cases there needs not any limitation of the estate, for the release is good without it. Co. super. Litt. 273. 264. 301. 9 H. 6. 35. Dier. 116 Litt. Sect. 544 Co. super. Litt. 264. Dier. 307. Co. 9. 52. Co. super. Litt. 273. Litt. Sect. 465. 468, 469.

In every good release in deed that doth tend and enure to give discharge or extinguish any right or title of lands it is also further requisite, Litt. Sect. 466. Co. super. Litt. 265. Co. 5. 70. 71. 1. 112. 8. 151.

1. That he that doth make it hath at the time of the release made some right or title to release.

As where one doth disseise me of land, and I release to him all my right in the land this is a good release. So if one disseise my tenant for life, and I (being the next in remainder or reversion in fee) do release to him that did make the disseisin; this is a good release. So if the husband make a lease for life, and then take a wife and dieth, and the wife release her dower to him in reversion; this is a good release. And so also if after the marriage a man make a lease for life the remainder in fee, and she release all her right to him in remainder in fee, or to him in reversion; this is a good release and will bar her for ever.

And therefore if the Releasee have only a possibility of a right, or a right happen to come to him after the release, this is not sufficient to make the release good. And therefore if the father be disseised, and the son before the fathers death release all his right to the disseisor, and after the father dieth, so that the right doth descend; this is no good release to bar the Releasee of his right. So if there be Grandfather, father and son, and the father disseise the Grandfather, and make a feoffment, and the son release in the lifetime of his father, and after the father and grandfather die; this release in this case will not bar him. So if a lease be made for life, the remainder to the right heirs of J. S. and the lessee is disseised, and the eldest son of J. S. living, his father doth release to the disseisor; this release is void. So if the comftee of a statute &c. doe release to the comfutor all his right in the land; this is void, and he may sue execution after notwithstanding. Litt. Sect. 446. Co. 10. 47. 42. super. Litt. 265. Co. 10. 57. Co. 5. 70.

4. In respect of the words whereby it is made.

2. When it doth enure by way of passing & extinguishment of a right or title only.

3. In respect of the estate of the releasor.

Or if the Releffor have only a power, this is not sufficient to make the release good.

And therefore if a man by his will devise that his executors shall sell his land, and dieth, and the executors release all their right and title in the land to the heir, this release is void. Litt. Sect. 446. Co. 10. 47. 42. super Litt. 265. Co. 10. 57. Co. 5. 70. Co. super Litt. 265.

2. In respect of the estate of him to whom the release is made.

2. In all cases of a release of a base right of a Freehold in lands or tenements, he to whom the release is made must at the time of the making thereof in any case have the Freehold in deed or in law in possession or some state in remainder or reversion in deed (and not in right only) in fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life of the lands whereof the release is made; for rights of entry, and actions, and the like, are not to be transferred to strangers, but are thus to be released, and such releases are good. As if the disseisee release to the disseisor himself who hath the freehold in deed, or to the heir of the disseisor before his entry, who hath the freehold in law, or to the lessee for life of the disseisor, these releases are good. So if a disseisor make a lease to A, and his heirs during the life of B, and A die, and the disseisee release to his heir before his entry, this is a good release. So if a Fine sur consauance de droit consau &c. or sur consauance de droit only (which is a feoffment on record) be levied, or if tenant for life by agreement of him in the reversion surrender to him in the reversion, or if a man doe bargain and sell his land by deed indented and inrolled, or uses are raised by covenant on good considerations; in all these cases the consue him in reversion, bargainee, and cistuy qui use, have a freehold in law in them before entry.

And therefore a release to them (of the right of the land by him that hath it) is good and will bar the Releffor. But otherwise it is in cases of Exchange, Partition, or upon Livery within the view; for in these cases no release is good until an actual entry made, for till then they have neither freehold in right nor law. So if a disseisor make a gift in tail, or lease for life or years of the land, and keep the reversion, and then the disseisee or his heir release to the disseisor all his right, this is a good release to bar his right for ever. So if the heir of the disseisor be disseised, and the first disseisee doe after release to him all his right; this is a good release to bar him. So if a donee in tail discontinue in fee, and the donor release to the discontinuee and die; this is a good release against the donor. So if the donee in tail be disseised, and after the donor release to the donee all his right; this is good, but in this case nothing of the reversion will pass by the release, for the donee had then nothing but a right.

Extinguishment.

But if any rent be reserved on the estate tail, the rent is gone by the release. So if a lease be made to one for life rendering rent, and the lessee is disseised, and the lessor release to the lessee and his heirs all his right; in this case albeit the rent be extinct, yet nothing of the right of the reversion doth pass. And yet if a woman that hath right of dower release to the guardian in Chivalry: this is a good release, and her right or title of dower is gone. But if a disseisor make a lease for years, and the disseisee release to the lessee for years; this release is void because he hath no freehold. But if he make a lease for life, and the disseisee release to the lessee for life, this is a good release.

So also a release to the disseisor after the lease for years made is good: And if lessee for years be ousted, and he in the reversion disseised, and the disseisor make a lease for years, and the first lessee release to him, this is a good release. Also in some cases a release made to one that hath neither freehold indeed, nor freehold in law, is good when he hath an estate in reversion or remainder, as in the case before, where a release is made by the disseisee to the disseisor after he hath made an estate for life. So if the demandant in a real action release to the tenant that comes in by receipt upon a prayer of aid or voucher upon a warranty; this is good. And yet if it be before the receipt, or entry into the warranty, or it be by any other besides the demandant, it is void: So if the tenant in a real action alien hanging the precipue quod reddat against him, and after alienation the plaintiff release all his right in the land to him, this is a good release. So if a disseisor make a lease for life, the remainder remainder to another for life, the remainder to a third in taile, the remainder to a fourth in fee, and the disseisee release to either of them in remainder; this is a good release. But if in this case tenant for life be disseised, and after he that hath right (the possession being in the disseisor) doth release to either of them in remainder; this is a void release. Brownlows. 2 part. 254. But in all the cases of a release of a bare right to him that hath an estate of a freehold in deed or in law, generally there needs no privity to make the release good: as in the case before of a release made to the tenant for life of the disseisor, and them that follow. For if tenant for life make a lease to another for life of the lessee, the remainder over in fee, and the first lessor release all his right to him to whom the tenant made the lease for life; this is a good release and a perpetuall bar, albeit the release be not to him and his heirs. And so it is in case of a reversion. Co. super Litt. 267. Co. super Litt. 266 275. Litt. Sect. 448 1 H. 6. 4. Dier. 302. Litt. Sect. 449. Co. super Litt. 266: Litt. Sect. 455, 456, Co. super Litt. 265. Litt. Sect. 448, 449 450. 451. Co. 8. 151. Co. super. Litt. 275. Litt. Sect. 470. 471. Co. 10. 48.

3. In respect of privity.

If lessee for years be ousted, and he in the reversion disseised, and the disseisor make a lease for years, and the lessee that is ousted doth release to the lessee of the disseisor; this is a good release. And yet if the disseisee doe release to the lessee for years of the disseisor; this is void.

If lessee for a thousand years be ousted by the lessor, and he make a lease for two years, and the lessee for a thousand years release unto him; this is a good release. But if a lessor disseise his lessee for life, and make a lease for a thousand years, and the lessee for life release to this lessee of a thousand years; this release is void.

If one be disseised, and after another doth disseise him, and the disseisee release to the last disseisor; this is a good release. So if A. disseise B. who infeoffeth C. with warranty, who infeoffeth D. with warranty, and E. disseiseth D. to whom B. the first disseisee releaseth; this is a good release, and doth defeat all the mean estates and warranties. So if my disseisor lease for life, and the lessee for life alien in fee, and I release to the alienee all my right, &c. this is a good release and will bar me of my entry: but if my entry be gone, as if I lease for life, and my lessee be disseised and that disseisor is disseised, and I release to the second disseisor; in this case the first disseisor may enter upon the second. So if my disseisor in the case aforesaid make a lease for life, and the lessee for life maketh a feoffment to two, and I release to one of the feoffees; this is a good release and will bar me and my disseisor also. So if tenant for life let the land to another for the life of the lessee, the remainder to another in fee, and the lessor release to his tenant for life; this is a good release. Co. super Litt. 277. Litt. Sect. 473. 470, 471. 478.

If one that hath a son within age be disseised and die, and the disseisor die seised, and the land descend to his heir, and a stranger abate, to whom the son when he comes of age doth release; this is a good release. So if one be disseised by an infant which doth alien in fee, and the alienee die seised, and his heir entreat, the disseisor being within age, and the disseisee release to the heir of the alienee; this is a good release. But where an inheritance or an estate for life is released to one that is but tenant for years, the release is not good without privity. And therefore if tenant for life or in fee release to the lessee for years of his disseisor; this is not good. But the release of a term of years to the lessee for years of him that doth eject him is good enough without privity, as in the case before. 9 H. 6. 43. Co. 10. 48.

But here note that in cases of a void release of a right to an inheritance or freehold where there is a warranty contained in the deed, the warranty may be good, and be used by way of rebutter, albeit the release be void. As if the son of the disseisee release with warranty in the life time of his father, or there be grandfather, father and son, and the father disseise the grandfather, and make a lease with warranty and die, in both these cases albeit the son be not barred by the release, yet he is barred by the warranty. Co. super. Litt. 265.

Warranty.

4. Such words as will make a good release in the cases of releases that enure by way of enlargement of estate, will make a good release in these cases. And note that the kinde of release is good without any limitation or specifying of the estate, for

for by a release of all a mans right without saying To have and to hold to him and his Heirs, &c. in all the cases before, he that makes the release is barred of his right for ever, for if I be seised of an estate in Fee by wrong, and he that hath right release to me all his right, albeit it be but for one houre, yet this is a good release for ever. Co. super Litt. sect. 467.

7. What Releases may be made of other things. And what shall be said a good Release in Deed of such things. Or not. And by what words. Of a seigniorie, Rent-service, common, or the like.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Lord release to the Tenant all his right that he hath in the Seigniorie, or all his right that he hath in the Land, &c. this is a good release to extinguish the seigniorie. And in this case there need no words of inheritance or limitation, for by release of all the right in the seigniorie; the same is extinct for ever, without saying [to him and his heirs]. And yet in this case the Lord may by apt words release his Seigniorie to the Tenant only in Tail, or for life, and it shall be good so long.

But if a Lord grant to his Tenant that he shall doe his suit to another Manor of the Lords, or that the Tenant shall give him yearly twelve pence for his suit; this grant will not extinguish and determine the services or Tenure. Lit. sect. 480. Co. super Lit. 280. 305. Perk. sect. 70.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant be disseised, and after the Lord release all his right, &c. to the Tenant; by this release the service or seigniorie is extinct, for albeit a right regularly cannot be released to him that hath but a bare right, yet a seigniorie may be released and extinct to him that hath but a bare right in the Land.

But if the Tenant make a Feoffment in Fee, and then the Lord release all his right, &c. to the Tenant; this is not good to extinguish the seigniorie or services, but it will discharge all the arrearages. Lit. sect. 457. Co. 10. 48. super Lit. 268.

If a rent-charge, common of pasture, or any other profit appender be issuing out of my Land, and he that hath it doth release it to me; this is a good release and will extinguish it. But if I be disseised of the Land; and have but a right at the time of the release made: the release is not good, as it is in the case of a rent-service and a seigniorie.

But if lands be given to me in Tail, or for life rendring rent, and I be disseised, and after the Donor release to me all his right in the Land; this is a good release and shall extinguish the rent. So if in this case where I am Tenant in Tail, and I make a Feoffment in Fee rendring rent, and after I release to the Feoffee: this is a good release and hereby the rent is extinct. And if two coparceners be of a rent, and one of them take the Terre. Tenant to husband, and after either of them release; these releases will be good. Lit. sect. 480. 536. 537. Co. super Lit. 305. Lit. sect. 455. 456. Co. super Lit. 273.

If one disseise me of land, and then grant a rent charge out of the Land, and I reciting the same grant release to the Grantee; this release it seems is good, and will bar me so as after my reentry I shall not be able to avoid it. Lit. sect. 527. Co. super Lit. 300.

Of an Advowson, &c.

If two have the grant of the next advowson or avoidance of a Church; before it be void one of them may release to the other, but afterwards they cannot. Co. super Lit. 270.

Of a Condition.

If A make a Feoffment in Fee, gift in Tail, lease for life or years to B on condition that upon such a contingent it shall be void; in this case A may before the condition broken release all his right in the Land, or release the condition to B; and this will be good to make the estate absolute and to discharge the condition. So if a Feoffee on condition make a gift in Tail or lease for life, and after the Feoffor release to the Donee or Lessee; this is a good release to discharge the condition. So if a copyholder surrender to the use of another on condition, and this is presented to be without condition, and after the surrendror doth release to him to whose use the surrender was made all his right, &c. this is a good release and doth extinguish the condition.

But if a Disseisor make a Feoffment on condition, and the Disseisee release to the Feoffee on condition; howsoever this doth bar the right of the Disseisee, yet it doth not discharge the condition. Co. 1. 112. Perk. sect. 823. 764.

Where

Where a power or authority is such that doth respect the benefit of the releffor, as in the usuall cases of power of revocation of uses, when the Feoffor, &c. hath power to alter, change, determine or revoke the uses being intended for his benefit, and he release to any one that hath a freehold in possession, reversion, or remainder, by the former limitation: this is a good release and doth extinguish the power, and make the estates that were before defeasible absolute, and it doth seclude him from any power of alteration or revocation. But if the power be collaterall, or the use of a stranger, and nothing to the benefit of him that makes the release: as if A make a Feoffment to B to divers uses; provided that B shall revoke the uses, and B release to any one of them that hath a use, this doth not extinguish the power, as in case where the power is given to A, and A doth release it. Co. 1. 112. 113. 173. 174.

Of a power of revocation.

If a Feoffment be made with warranty, and the Feoffee release the warranty; Of a warranty this doth extinct it. And so it is of other warranties. But if Tenant in Tail release the warranty annexed to his estate Tail, this doth not extinguish this warranty.

Any man may release any debt or duty due to himself. Also a man may discharge or release any thing due, or any wrong done to his wife before or after the marriage. And therefore if a Trespass were done, or a promise were made to my wife before the marriage; I may at any time during the marriage release this. So if any wrong be done, or obligation, statute, or promise made to her alone; or to her and me together at any time during the marriage; I alone may release and discharge this.

Of debts and other duties personall. In respect of the persons. Husband and wife.

And if my wife be an Executrix to any other man, I may release any debt or duty due to the testator. See Brownlow's 1. part 15. 19. Bro. Release 88. 21 H. 7. 29. Co. 5. 27.

And if a Legacy be given to a woman sole to be paid at Michaelmas next, and I marry with her, and I release the legacy before the day: it seems by this the legacy is gone. Per. ch. Justice B. R. Mich. 17. 74.

An Infant Executor may release a debt duly paid unto him of the testators debt. Co. 5. 27.

Infant.

But if he release that which he doth not receive, it is a void release. And regularly the release of an infant is void.

An Executor before probate of the Will may release a debt or duty due to the testator; and this release is good to bar him. Co. 5. 27. 9. 39.

a In respect of the time.

A future or contingent promise may be released and discharged before the contingent happen. A debt on an obligation, or rent may also be released before the day of payment as well as after, but not by the same words. And therefore if one promise to IS that upon the surrender of I S he will pay him an hundred and ten pound, and after the promise, and before the surrender he release this debt; this doth discharge the Debt. But if the promise be that if the surrenderee shall sell the land, and shall have five hundred pound, that then he shall pay to the surrendror an hundred pound more, and the surrendror before sale release this sum; this is no discharge of it; And yet a release of the promise is a discharge of it. And if A promise to me that if I S doe not pay to me an hundred pound 1 Octobris, that he doth owe me, that A will pay me the hundred pound, 10 Novembris, and I 10 Septembris release to him this debt, or all actions and demands; in this case this release is not good to discharge this promise. But by a release of the promise, the same is discharged. Trin. 14. Jac. in Eltons case, Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. Briscoe versus Heirs.

If a man release to another all actions, and doe not say further which he hath against him; this is as good a release as if these words were inserted. Quod necessario sub intelligitur non deest. Bro. Release 19.

Of actions.

And all these releases must be made by apt words, and such as law shall judge sufficient for that purpose. Co. 9. 53.

And in all cases care must be had there be no mistake, for mistakes will make releases and confirmations void as well as other grants

And

And therefore if A make a release to B in this manner: Noveris, &c. me A de Bre-misse &c. B omnes actiones quas idem B habet versus, A, whereas it should be quas idem A habet versus B; this release is void. See more in Brownlows Rep. 2 part. 215. Bro. Release 36. 58.

If there be Lord and Tenant. and the Lord purchase the Tenancy; by this means the services are released and extinct in Law.

And if the Lord disseise his Tenant, and make a Feoffment in Fee by deed or without deed; this is a release in Law of the seigniorie. Co. super Litt. 264.

If a disseise disseise the heir of the disseisor, and make a Feoffment with or without a deed; this is a release in fee in Law of the right.

And if he make a lease for life, this is a release in Law of the right so long as the lease doth last. Co. idem.

Of a right of

Executor.

If a creditor, as an Obligee, or the like, make a debtor, as the Obligor, &c., his Executor; by this means the action is released by act of Law, and yet the duty remains still, for the Executor may retain so much of the goods of the Testator. And if the creditor be a woman, and she marry with the debtor; by this the debt is released in Law. And if there be two Obligees or debtors, and one of them being a woman, is married to the Obligor; this is a release in Law of the debt, albeit the Creditor be an Infant. See more in Brownlows Rep. 1 part 64. 73. Co. super Litt. 264. 8 E. 4. 3. 21 E. 4. 2.

But if there be a woman Executrix to the debtor, and she take the debtor to husband; this is no release in Law. M. 30. & 31. El. B. R. Adjudged.

And if an Obligor be made Administrator of the goods and chattels of the Obligee; this is no release in Law. Co. 8. 136.

Where divers joyn in any suit or action to recover any personall thing of which they are to have the joynt benefit or interest when the law doth not compell them to joyn, there the release of one of them shall bar all the rest. And therefore if two men joyn in an action of Debt, Trespass, or the like, and one of them alone doth release to the defendant; this is a bar to the other plaintiffs also. So if a statute or an Obligation be made to two or more, and one of them release it to the Consulor or Obligor, this is a discharge of the whole duty, and a bar to the rest, so that they can make no use of the Statute or Obligation. But if divers be charged in any action and they for the discharge of themselves only joyn in a Suit or action, where also they can doe no otherwise being compelled by law to joyn: in this case the release of one of them shall not hurt the others. And therefore if divers joyn in a writ of Error, Attaint, or Audita querela, and one of them release to the defendant in the writ, this will not bar the rest of their remedy, but they may goe on in their suit notwithstanding. Co. 6. 25. 5. 22. Bro. Release 84. 94. stat. 23 H. 8. ch. 3.

If there be two or more Executors and one of them alone release a debt or duty to the testator before judgement had in a Suit had by all the Executors against the Debtor, this will bar all the rest. But otherwise it seems it is after judgement had. 16. H. 7. 4.

If a writ of ward be brought by two, and one of them release, this shall not bar his companion, but shall enure to his benefit, for hereby he shall have the whole ward. Co. super Litt. 205.

A release made to the Tenant in Tail, or for life of the right to the land, shall avail and enure to him that hath a reversion or remainder in deed. And so é converso. A release made to him that hath a remainder or reversion will avail and enure to the benefit of him that hath the estate tail for life, or years precedent. As if a Disseisor make a lease for life, and the Disseisee release to the Tenant for life, this shall enure to the Disseisor. So if he or a Tenant for life make a lease for life, the remainder for life, the remainder in Tail, the remainder in Fee, and the Disseisee or first Lessor doth release all his right to any one of them in remainder, this shall enure unto, and benefit all the rest. And if the husband make a lease of his wives Land to one for life, the remainder to another in Fee, and the wife after his death doth release all her right in the land to him in remainder: this shall enure to the Lessee for life. Lit. Sect. 452 470. Co. super Litt. 275. 290. 267. 268. Co. 8. 151.

If a disseisor make a lease for life, and the disseisee release all his right to the tenant for life; this shall enure to the benefit of the disseisor. But if the disseisee release no more to the tenant for life but all actions; this release will not benefit him in remainder or reversion after the death of the tenant for life. Co. super. Litt.

If a disseisor make a feoffment to two in fee, and the disseisee release to one of the feoffees, this shall enure to both. Litt. Sect. 472.

If tenant in tail be disseised by two, and he release to one of them; this shall enure to both.

But if the Kings tenant be disseised by two, and he release to one of them; this shall not enure to the other. So if two jointenants make a lease for life, and then disseise the tenant for life, and he release to one of them; in this case his companion shall have no benefit by it. Co. super. Litt. 276.

If tenant in fee simple be disseised by two, or two doe abate or intrude, and he doth release to one of them; the other shall have no benefit by this. But if tenant for life doe after a disseisin done to him release to one of the disseisors; this shall enure to both. Litt. Sect. 472, 522.

And if two disseisors be, and they make a lease for life or years, & after the disseisee doth release to one of the disseisors, this shall enure to them both, and to the benefit of the lessee for life also. Co. super. Litt. 276.

And if lessee for years be ousted, and he in reversion disseised; and the lessee release to the disseisor; the term of years is hereby extinct, and the disseisee may take advantage of it and enter presently.

But if two jointenants in fee be disseised by two disseisors, and one of the disseisees release to one of the disseisors all his right; this shall enure to the other, for this extendeth but to a moiety.

If a release be made by a woman of her dower to the guardian in Chivalry, this shall enure to the heir, and he may take advantage of it. Co. super. Litt. 266.

If tenant for life be disseised by two, and he in the reversion and the tenant for life join in a release to one of the disseisors; this shall not enure to the other. But if they doe severally release their severall rights, their severall releases shall enure to both the disseisors. Co. super. Litt. 276.

If mortgagee upon condition after the condition broken be disseised by two, and the mortgagor that hath the title of entry doth release to the one disseisor; this shall enure to both.

And like law is for an entry for mortmain, or a consent to ravishment Co. idem. &c.

If there be Lord and two jointenants, and the Lord release to one of them; this shall avail his companion. Co. super. Litt. 269.

If tenant in fee-simple make a feoffment in fee, and after the Lord release to the feoffor, this shall not enure to the feoffee to extinguish the seignior. But if he release to the feoffee, this shall enure to the feoffor to extinguish the seignior.

If there be lord and tenant, and the tenant make a lease for life, the remainder in fee, and the Lord release to the tenant for life; the rent is hereby wholly extinguished, and he in remainder shall take advantage of it; as when the heir of a disseisor is disseised, and the disseisor makes a lease for life, the remainder in fee, and the first disseisee doth release to the tenant for life; this shall enure by way of extinguishment to him in remainder, viz. to the lessee for life first, and after to him in remainder. Co. super. Litt. 279.

If two tenants in common of land grant a rent of forty shillings out of it, and the grantee release to one of them; this shall not enure to the other. But if one be tenant for life of lands the reversion in fee to another, and they join in the grant of a rent out of the lands, and the grantee release either to the tenant for life, or to him in reversion; this shall enure to the other and extinct the whole rent. Co. super. Litt.

If two men gain an advowson by usurpation, and the right Patron release to one of them; this release shall enure to them both. Co. super. Litt. 276.

If two be bound jointly and severally in any obligation, or other especialty, and the obligee, &c. release to one of them; this shall enure to discharge the other also if it be a good release as to him that makes it.

But otherwise it is in case of a release made by the King. Co. 5. 59. super. Litt. 232. Litt. Seff. 376.

Prerogative.

And if two do a trespass to another together, and he to whom it is made doth release it to one of them; this shall enure to discharge the other.

To husband & wife.

If husband and wife, and I. S. purchase to them and the heirs of the husband, and after I. S. release all his right in the land to the husband; the wife shall have no benefit by this, but it shall enure to the husband alone. Dier. 319. Co. super. Litt. 273 276. 14 H. 8. 6.

And if there be two women joint disseisefesses, and the one take a husband, and the disseisee release to the other; in this case the husband and wife shall take no benefit by this.

And if the disseisee release to the husband; this shall enure to him and his wife and the other woman.

And if one that hath a rent out of my wives land release it to me and my heirs; this shall enure by way of extinguishment, and my wife will have advantage of it. And yet if the words be [grant and release] the rent to the husband and his heirs; in this case the husband may take as a grant if he will.

Note.

But here note in all these cases of releases, when one man will take advantage of a release made to another, he must have the release to shew and plead. Co. super. Litt. 231.

If I be disseised, and I release to the disseisor all actions I have or may have against him; this is but personall, and shall not be expounded to bar my heir after my death of his remedy, neither will it bar me of my remedy against his heir after his death. Co. 10. 51. 22 H. 6. 1.

So if I deliver goods to another, and afterwards I release to him all actions, and then he die; by this I am not barred so, but I may sue his executors.

See more in Confirmation, chap. 18. Numb. 7.

2. In respect of the thing released.
Of all actions.

A release of all actions without any more words, is better then a release of all actions real only, or a release of all actions personall onely, for by a release of actions, or a release of all manner of actions, without more words, are released and discharged all real, personall, and mixt actions then depending, and all causes of suit for any real or personall thing: as Appeals for the death of an ancestor, conspiracies, suits by Scire facias to have execution of a Judgement, detinue for charters; Co. 8. 153. 5. 28. 70. Kelm. 113, Co. super. Litt. 286. 290. 292. 289. Litt. seff. 492, 505, 506. 512, 513. Broo. stat. 39.

And if two conspire to indite me, and I release to them all actions, and after they goe on with their conspiracy; by this release I am barred to doe any thing against them.

By this release also of all actions, a debt due to be paid upon a statute or an obligation at a day to come, albeit the release be before the day is discharged, and by this also the statute it self if it be at any time before execution is discharged.

And if one be to pay forty pound at four days, and some of the days are past, and some to come, and the debtee make such a release, by this the whole debt is discharged. See more Brownlow. 1. part. 84. 80.

Also in a Scire facias upon a Fine or a Judgement, this release is a good plea in bar.

But this release of all actions will not discharge Executions, or bar a man of taking out of Executions, except it be where it most be done by Scire facias. Neither will it discharge or bar a man of suits by Audita Querela, or writ of Error to reverse an erroneous judgement; neither will it discharge covenants before they be broken, nor will it discharge any thing for which the releffor had no cause of action at the time of the release made, as if a woman have title gick of dower; and doe release all actions to him that hath the reversion of the land after an estate for life; or a man is by an award to pay me ten pound at a day to come, and before the time I make such a release; or I make a lease-rendering rent, or an annuity is granted to me, and before the rent-day, I make the lessee or the grantor such a release; in these cases, and by a release in these words without more the dower debt, rent, or annuity, is not discharged.

If being made before the day of payment of an Annuity to the grantee of an Annuity, it will discharge the Arrearages before accrued, but not the payments after. 4 Ed. 4. 400. for a release is not avoidable to any right or Action but what a man hath at the time of the release, Goldsb. 163. And therefore it is there held by Gawdy and Popple Justices. That where an Obligation is delivered as an Escrow, and the obligee release to the obligor all actions, and after the obligation is delivered as his deed; this release will not discharge it. 5 H. 7. 27.

And if a man have two remedies or means to come by land; as action and entry, or by goods; as action and seizure, or the like; in this case by a release of all actions he doth not barr himself of the other remedy. Et sic è converso. Litt. Sess. 496.

And if a man doth covenant to build an house, or make an estate, and before the covenant broken the covenantee doth release unto him all actions; by this the covenant is self is not discharged. And yet after the covenant is broken, this release will discharge the action of covenant given upon that breach. Co. super. Litt. 291.

By a release of all a mans right into any lands or tenements without more words is released and discharged all manner of rights of action and entry the releffor hath to, in or against the land, for there is ius recuperandi, prosequendi, invrandi, habendi, retinendi, percipiendi, possidendi, and all these rights, whether they accrue by line, testament, descent, or otherwise, are extinct and discharged; so that if the lessee have gotten into the land of the releffor by wrong, by this release the wrong is discharged, and the releffor is in the land by good title. C. 8. 251. Plow. 484. 6 H. 7. 2. Co. 3. 29. 6. 1. super. Litt. 345.

Also by this release are discharged and released all titles of dower, and titles of entry upon a condition or alienation in mortmain.

And if a woman have title of dower after an estate for life, and make such a release to him in reversion, this doth barr her. By such a release also from the Lord to the tenant the services are extinct.

But this release will not bar a man of a possibility of a right that he hath at the time of the release, or of a right that shall descend to him afterwards. And therefore if the possessor of a statute before Execution release all his right into the land to the terretenant; or the heir of the disseisee in the life-time of his father doe release to the disseisor all his right; these releases doe not bar them. Nor will this release bar a man of an Assisa Quarela, and such like things. And yet if the tenant in a real action after the demandant hath recovered the land, release to him all his right in the land; this doth bar him of a writ of Error for any error in the proceeding in that suit. Co. 10. 47. super. Litt. 289.

And if these be Lord and tenant by fealty and rent, and the Lord by his deed reciting the tenure doth release all his right in the land saving his said rent; by this release the right of the seignory, save only of the seignory of the rent and fealty, is extinct.

And if the Lord release to his tenant all his right to the land and seignory, salvo sibi dominio suo, &c. hereby the services only, not the tenure is extinct. Co. super. Litt. 150. Dier. 157.

And if one have a rent-charge out of my land, and make such a release of all his right to the land to me that am the terretenant without excepting of the rent; hereby the rent is extinct and gone for ever. Perk Sess. 644.

By a release of all a mans title into lands or tenements, without more words is released and discharged as much as is released by the release of all a mans right; and both these releases have the like operation, for howsoever title strictly and properly

Of entry or right of entry, By a release of all entries or rights of entry a man hath into lands, without more words a man is barred of all right or power of entry into those lands upon any right whatsoever.

And if a man have no other means to come by the land but by an entry, and he hath released that by these words, he is barred for ever. But if one have a double remedy, viz. a right of entry, and an action to recover his right by, and then release all entries, by this he is not barred of his action. Co. 8. 151.

Of actions real. By a release of all actions real without more words, are discharged all real and mixt actions then depending, and all causes of real and mixt actions not depending.

And therefore all causes of suing of assises, writs of entry; Quare Impedit, actions of assise, and the like, which the party hath at the time of the release made, are hereby discharged. But this release will not bar him that doth make it of any cause of action that shall arise and accrue afterwards. Neither will it bar him of an appeal of death or robbery, writ of Error, or any such like thing. Nor of anything which a release of all actions will not bar. And yet when land is to be restored or recovered by judgement in a writ of Error, this release is a bar to the writ of Error. So if a judgement be given upon a false verdict in a real action, a release of all actions real is a bar in an attaint. See more. 1. part. 65. Litt. Sect. 493. 495. Co. 8. 151. Litt. Sect. 315. 500. Co. super. Litt. 288, 289.

Of actions personal. By a release of all actions personal without more words are discharged all personal actions then depending, and all causes of personal actions wherein a personal thing only is to be recovered, and therefore hereby are discharged all causes of suing out of actions of debt, trespass, detinue, or the like. Also all mixt actions, as actions of waste, Quare Impedit, an assise of novel disseisin, writ of annuity, appeal of maim, and the like. Bro. Release: 47. Co. super. Litt. 285. 9 H. 6. 57. Litt. Sect. 302.

And if debt, &c. or damages be recovered in a personal action by false verdict, & the defendant bringeth a writ of attaint, or if a writ of Audita Querela be brought by the defendant in the former action to discharge him of execution; by this release the defendant in both cases is barred of his suit. Co. super. Litt. 289.

Also when by a writ of Error the plaintiff shall recover, or be restored to any personal thing only, as debt, damage, or the like: as if the plaintiff in a personal action recover any debt, &c. or damages, and be outlawed after judgement; in this case in a writ of Error brought by the defendant upon the principal judgement, this release will bar him.

But where by a writ of Error the plaintiff shall not be restored to any personal or real thing, this release is no bar: as if a man be outlawed in an action personal by process upon the originall, and bring a writ of Error, and then release; this is no barre to him: Co. super. Litt. 288. Litt. Sect. 303.

If a man by wrong take or find my goods, or they be delivered to him, and I release to him all actions personal; notwithstanding this release, I may in this case take my goods again, albeit I be barred of my action by this release.

Neither is this release a bar in an appeal of robbery or death.

Neither will it bar in any case where a release of all actions will not bar.

Neither is it any bar to an action of debt brought for an annuity granted for a term of years for any arrearages that shall grow due after the release.

Nor for any rent or sum of nomine pene, when the release is before the same day, or nomine pene happen.

Neither is it a bar in such real actions wherein damages are recoverable only by the statute, and not by the common law, as in a writ of Dower, entry, disseisin

if the body of a man be in Execution, and the plaintiff make him such a release; make such a release to his Tenant; by this it seems the arrearages are released. Co.

By a release of all errors, and writs of errors, and writs of error, and that before they be brought, are extinct and discharged. Co. 2. 16. Lit. Se ff. 503. Of Errors,

And if a man be outlawed in a personall action by process upon original, and make such a release; this will bar him. Of Warranties.

By a release of all Warranties or Covenants real, all Warranties then made and being, are for ever discharged. Litt. Sess. 148.

By

Of Legacies.

By a release of all legacies without more words, a man doth bar himself of all the legacies given him in presenti or futuro, so that if he be to have a legacy at 24 years old, and at 21 years of age he release to the Executor all legacies or this legacy in particular; this is a bar to him of this legacy for ever. Co. 10. 51. Dyer 56. Co. super Lit. 76.

Of Rent.

And yet a release of all demands in this case is no discharge of this legacy.
By a release of Rent the Rent is extinct and discharged whether the day of payment be come or not. But a Release of all actions will not discharge a Rent before the day of payment come. Co. super Lit. 292.

Of promises.

By a Release of all promises or Assumpsits without more words a man may bar himself of a contingent or future thing that by other words could not be released, as if a man promise to me that if I do not pay me one hundred pound the tenth of March next, that he will pay it me the twentieth of that month, and before the time I release to him all actions and demands; this will not discharge the promise. But if I release to him all promises, this will bar mee. Et sic de similibus. Adjudged Hil. 16. Jac. B. R. Briscoe vers. Heires. Co. 10. 51.

Of Judgements.

By a Release of all Judgements without more words he that maketh it is barred of the effect, of any Judgement he hath against the Releasee, for if Execution be not taken out he is now barred of it.

Of Executions

And if the Releasee, or his land, &c. be in Execution he and it shall be discharged thereof by Audita querela.

And by a Release of all Executions without more words, a man is barred of taking or having out of any Execution upon any Judgement either before Scirefaciam or after.

Audita querela.

But if after Execution be made by Capias ad Stat. Elegit, or fieri faciam the plaintiff Release to the defendant all Executions, he cannot plead such a Release but he must have an Audita querela, and that he may have to discharge him of Execution. Lit. Sect. 907. Co. 8. 151. super Lit. 290.

Of Appeals.

By a Release of all appeals, are discharged all appeals of Felony, of Death, of Robbery, of Rape, of Burning, of Larceny depending, and all causes not yet moved also. Co. super Lit. 287. 288.

Of Advantages.

By this Release of all advantages, it seems actions of Debt upon account are discharged. Co. 8. 150.

Of Conspiracies.

By a Release of all conspiracies, all conspiracies past are discharged, and such also as are only begun and shall be prosecuted and perfected after the Release, are likewise hereby discharged. Kelm. 113.

Of forgeries.

By a Release of all forgeries before publication the forgery is discharged, but not the publication, and therefore the Releasee may take his remedy for that notwithstanding. Co. 10. 48.

Of demands or Claims.

A Release of all demands is the best Release of all, and this word is the most effectual word of all, and doth indeed include and comprehend within it most of all the Releases before. Co. super Lit. 291 Co. 8. 54. Lit. sect. 501. 509. 510.

By a release of all demands without more words are Released all rights and Titles to Land, Warranties, conditions annexed to estates before they be broken or performed, and after they be broken.

Also by this release are released and discharged all Statutes, Obligations, Contracts, Recognisances, Covenants, Rents, Commons, and the like.

Also all manner of actions real and personal, Appeals, Debts, Duties.

Also all manner of Judgements, Executions. Also all Annuities, and Arrarages of Annuities and Rents. And therefore if a man have a Title of entry by force of a condition, &c. or a right of entry into any Lands; by such a release the right and Title is gone. And if a man have a rent-service, rent-charge, Effovers, or other profit to be taken out of the Land; by such a release to the Tenant of the Land it is discharged and extinct. See more Brownl. 1 pars. 80. 64. 65, 115. 116. 186.

And therefore if a Termor for years grant the Land by indenture to A rendring rent, and at the end of the first yeare he release to the Grantee all demands; the rent is hereby extinct during all the time. Adjudged B. R. pas. 17. Jac. Wottons case.

A release of all demands will discharge a rent due. Goldsb. 168. a debt upon an Award to be paid at a day to come being made before the day. But if it be a duty that rests merely in possibility and contingencie, as if one be bound that if A deliver to him at a day Hay he will pay money; this cannot be released by this before the day, so a nomine pene waiting upon a rent, untill the rent be behind, so to pay 10l upon the birth of a child, or the like. Brownlows 1 part 1 c. 9. 115. And a release of all claimes it seems is much of the same nature.

But by a release of all demands or of all claimes is not released any such thing as wherof a release cannot be made, as a meer possibility, or the like. Co. 5. 70.

Neither will this release discharge a covenant or promise that is future and contingent before it be in being. Nor a covenant before it is broken: and therefore if the Lessee of a house covenant to leave it as well in the end of his terme as it was in the beginning of his terme, and before the end of the terme the lessor release to the Lessee all demands; this is no bar to an action brought for a breach of the covenant afterwards. Hil. 4. Jac. B. R. Hancocks case Adjudged.

And if a man in consideration of a sum of money given to him by a woman sole assent to her that if she marry one M that he will pay to her after the death of M one hundred pound by the year if she survive him, and she marry him, and the husband release all demands and then die; this is no bar to the duty.

So if one promise a woman that if she will marry him that he will leave her worth one hundred pound if she doe survive him, and before the marriage she release to him all actions and demands; this doth not discharge the promise. Hil. 6. Jac. B. R. Belcher & Hudsons case.

And note that all these words are of the same force when they are joyned with other words as when they are alone. Note.

If two Tenants in Common of land grant a rent-charge of forty shillings out of it to one in Fee, and the Grantee release to one of them; this shall extinguish but twenty shillings, for that the grant in judgement of law is severall. Co. super Litt. 267.

If one have severall causes of action against two, and make a joynt release to them; this shall be taken to be a release of all joynt and severall causes of action 19 H. 6. 4.

So if an Exetutor have some cause of action for himself, and some for his Testator, and he release all actions, indefinitely; this release doth discharge both sorts of actions. Bro. Release 31. 29.

If the Tenancy be given to the Lord and a stranger, and to the heires of the stranger, and the Lord release to his companion all his right in the Land; this shall enure not only to pass his estate in the Tenancy-but also to extinguish his right in the Seigniorie. Co. super Litt. 280.

If there be Lord and Tenant of two acres, and the Lord release all his right in one of them to the Tenant; hereby the services are extinct for both. Park, Stat. 71. Bro. Release 85. 9 E. 3.

So if one have a rent-charge out of twenty acres, and release all his right in one acre; hereby all the rent is extinct.

And yet if A lease white acre to B for life rendering rent, and afterwards doth release part of the rent; this is good only for such part.

If I be seised of Land in Fee and I make a Lease of it to one for life, and after I release all my right in the Land for the life of the Tenant for life, so as neither I nor my Heirs shall have claim or challenge any thing or right in that Land for the life of the Tenant for life; by this release nothing is extinct or discharged but the causes of action of wast that were then, and not any cause that shall happen afterwards. Bro. Release 65.

If a Statute be entered into the twentieth of Aprill, and the Conusee by a release dated the nineteenth of Aprill (meaning to except the Statute) doth release all debts and demands till the making of the release; by this release the Statute is discharged. 3 In respect of the time or estate.

A release of a right, or an action cannot be for a time but it will be for ever.

And therefore if a release be made to any one that hath a Fee-simple by wrong by him that hath the right for one houre, one yeare, for life, or yeares; this is a good release for ever Litt. Sect. 467. 470. Co. super Litt. 273. 264. 280. Kelwarth 88. Co. super Litt 9.

And if the Disfeisee release all his right in the land to the Disfeisor without naming his Heires or setting down any time how long the releesee shall have the land or the right of the Disfeisee therein; this is a good release for ever, and doth make the estate of the disfeisor good for ever, and to doth make a good estate in Fee-simple without these words [his Heirs, &c.] And if the Disfeisor or his Heire make a gift in Tail, or a lease for life, and the Disfeisee release all his right to the Donee or Lessee for life, To have and to hold for life only; this is a good release of his right for ever.

But if the Disfeisee do Disfeise the Heire of the Disfeisor, and make a lease for life (which is a release in Law ;) by this the right is released during that time only.

So if one Jointenant or parcener release to the other all his right in the Land, without the words [heires] or any more word; this release doth give to his companion his whole interest for ever.

And when the Lord, or Grantee of a rent release to the Tenant, or terre-tenant generally; by these releases a Fee-simple is transferred without any words of heires, &c. And yet the Lord may release his Seigniorie to his Tenant, to hold to him in Taile or for life, and this shall be taken and enjoyed accordingly. But if the Lord doth release the Seigniorie to his Tenant without any words of heires put in the Deed, the same is extinct.

And if I let land to a man for terme of yeares and after I release to him all my right which I have in the Land, without using any other words in the Deed; or release to him, To have and to hold for his life; in both these cases he hath an estate for his life only. Litt. Sects. 545. 546. 565. Plow. 556. Dier 263.

And if I lease land to a man for his own life, and after release to him To have and to hold for his own life; hereby he hath but an estate for his own life.

But if I make a lease to him for anothers life; and after release to him Habendum to him for his own life, by this he hath an estate for his own life.

But if I be seised of land in Fee-simple and let it to another for life or yeares, and then release all my right to him To have and to hold to him and his heirs, hereby he hath the Fee-simple.

And if I release all my right to him To have and to hold to him and the heires of his body, hereby he hath an estate Tail.

And if one be seised in Fee of a rent service or charge, and grant it first for life, and then release it to the Grantee To hold to him and his heirs, or to him and the heires of his body: this shall enure to an enlargement according to the agreement: Litt. Sect. 549.

But if one grant a rent-charge out of his land de novo, and after release to the Grantee all his right in the rent, To have and to hold to him in Fee-simple or Fee-tail: this doth not enlarge the estate.

And

And if Tenant in Tail, or for life make a Lease for years, and after by Deed doth Release all his right to the Lessee for years in possession, to hold to him and his Heirs for ever; this will not make the Estate of the Lessee good for longer time, then the life of the Releffor. Littl. Sess. 606. 610. 24 Eliz. 3. 28.

If one make a Lease for ten years, the Remainder for twenty years to another, and he in Remainder, Release all his right to the Lessee for ten years; in this case the Releffor hath an Estate for thirty years, and no less; for one Lease for years cannot drown in another. Co. super Littl. 273.

If I let Land to a Woman sole for her life, or for years, and she take a Husband, and after I Release to them two to hold for their lives; this shall enure no further then the intent, and in the first case he shall hold joyntly with his Wife, but in her right, whiles she doth live, and after for his own life, if he survive, and in the last case they shall have the Freehold joyntly. Littl. Sess. 526. Co. super Littl. fol. 299. 300.

If there be Lord and Tenant by Fealty and Rent, and the Lord granteth the Seigniority for years, and the Tenant attorneth, and the Lord Release his Seigniority to the Tenant for years, and to the Tenant of the Land generally; by this the Seigniority is extinct for ever, and the Estate of the Lessee also: But if the Release be to them and their Heirs; then the Lessee shall have the Inheritance of the one Moyety, and the other is extinct. Co. super Littl. 280.

It is a discharge in writing of a sum of money, or other duty which ought to be paid or done; As if one be bound to pay money on an Obligation, or Rent reserved upon a Lease, or the like, and the party to whom the money or duty should be paid or done upon the Receipt thereof, or upon some other Agreement between them, maketh a writing under his hand, witnessing that he is paid or otherwise contented, and therefore doth acquit and discharge him of the same. The which is such a discharge, and Bar in the Law, that he cannot demand and recover the same again contrary thereunto, if the acquittance be shewed. Terms Ley.

The Obligor is not bound to pay money upon a single Bond, unless the Obligee will make to him an Acquittance or Release; nor is he bound to pay it before he hath the Acquittance: And in this case the Obligor may compel the Obligee to make him an Acquittance. And so also it is in case of a Statute Merchant, one is not bound to pay the money thereupon, before he hath the Acquittance or Release of the Plaintiff. But otherwise it is in case of an Obligation with a Condition; for there a man may aver payment. 22 Ed. 4. 6. 41 Ed. 3. 25. 1 H. 7. 15. 22 Ed. 4. 6. Broo. Debi. 43. Oblig. 10.

CHAP. CXXXVIII.

Of a Remitter.

Sett. 1.
1. Remitter,
what.

Remitter is where a man is come to two Titles in Lands or Tenements, and his latter is defective, and not so good as the former; or when a Mans Entry is taken away by Discent or Discontinuance, and he hath the Frank-tenement cast upon him by a new Title; in this case he shall be, or at least may be (if he will) restored to his first Title, and then he shall be said to be in by that Title, and that shall be said to him a Remitter.

Election.

It is thus defined by some. Remitter is an operation of Law upon the meeting of an ancient Right, redmediable; and a latter state in one person where there is no folly in him, whereby the ancient Right is restored, and set up again, and the new defeasible Estate vanished away. Quod primum est verum, Co. upon Litt. 347, 348. As if a man be disseised, and the Disseisor makes a Feoffment to the Disseisee; in this case the Disseisee may (if he will) be remitted to his elder Title, or he may chuse: For in some cases where it is not to the prejudice of a stranger, he that hath the Titles, may chuse whether he will hold by the former, or the latter Title; and if he enter generally, where he hath two Titles, the Law will judge him in of his elder Title, until he have done some act to declare his Election. So that there are two things requisite in a Remitter; first, Ancient Right; secondly, A new Possession: And the reason of it, is the Ancient Right, which is, first, most sure; secondly, most worthy: And for the Possession, it ought to be where the party gets the Possession, and not by an act wherein is folly. Thirdly, the efficient cause is an act in Law: And for the ancient Right, it must be a Right not a Title, and it must be a Right of Entry, and in that case, however he come to the Possession, he shall be remitted, unless it be by Estoppel; and this Remitter by Right of Entry, is not waivable. Crompt. Jur. 120. Litt. chap Remitter. F.N.B. 149. Dyer 68.

Sett. 2.
2. In what case a Remitter shall be.
Election.

- For Answer hereunto, these things are to be known:
1. In all cases, when a man hath a lawful Right of Entry into Land, and the Possession be cast upon him by Act of Law, volens volens, he must be remitted; but if it come by his own act, it is in his Election, whether he will be remitted, or not: As if after he have one Title, he take any estate by any other way and means, then by Fine or Deed indented, (whereby he may be estopped) he shall be remitted. Broo. cap. 252.
 2. If one Lease for life to one, and he alien in Fee, and the Alienee make an Estate to the Lessor; in this case the Lessor is remitted. Litt. Sett. 694. 695.
 3. If Lands be given to a Tenant in Tail, the Remainder to another in Tail, the Remainder to another in Fee; and the Husband of the Wife discontinue, and the Husband and the Wife take back a new estate to them for their lives; this is a Remitter to them, and all them in the Remainder. Litt. Sett. 673.
 4. If an Estate be made to the Husband in Tail, the Remainder to his Wife for life, the Remainder to B. C. D in Fee: And after another Estate is executed to the Husband and Wife for life, the Remainder to another, and she enter generally after the Husbonds death, she shall be judged in, as in her Remitter, without special Claim made; for that is her best Estate. By three Judges. Where the party that is to be remitted, hath a Right of Entry, howsoever he come to the Possession, unless it be by Estoppel, he shall be remitted. By Justice Dodridge. 16 Jac. B. R.
 5. If a Tenant in Tail discontinue the Tail, and after disseise his Discontinuee, and die seised; the Issue in Tail that comes in now by discent, shall be remitted, and the Title of the Discontinuee is utterly defeated, though the Issue be an Infant, or Feme.

6. If a Tenant in Tail discontinue in Fee, and then take back an Estate in Fee, and after devise the Land by will, and the Devisee wave the Devise; in this case the Issue shall be remitted, contra, if he had not waved it. Dyer 121. Kelw. 4.

7. If Lands be intailed to a man and his wife, and the Heirs of their two Bodies engendred, and they have a daughter, and the wife die, and the husband marry another, and have another daughter by her, and discontinue the Tail; and after doth disseise the Discontinuee, and die seised, and the Land descend to the daughters; the eldest is remitted for one moyety, but the youngest is not for the other moyety. Littl. sect. 661.

8. If a Tenant in Tail infeoff his Heir Apparent in the Tail, and another, the Issue is remitted for the one moyety, but not the other for the other moyety. Litt. sect. 663.

9. If a Tenant in Tail infeoff his Issue in Tail, and another of the Intail Land, and Livery of Seisin is made to the other, according to the Deed, and the son not knowing of it, doth not agree to the Feoffment, and after the other die, and the son never meddle with the profits of the Land, during his Fathers life, and then the Father die; now the son is remitted. Littl. sect. 684. If a Tenant in Tail infeoff his Issue, being within age, and his wife in Fee, and dieth; this is a Remitter to the Issue presently by the death of the Tenant in Tail. Co. super Littl. 351.

10. If the Husband alien the Lands he hath in the right of his wife, and after take back an Estate again to them for their lives, or otherwise; now in this case, if the wife do survive the Husband, she shall be remitted; and that though this second Estate to the husband and wife be by Fine: But if the wife die first, the Heir of the wife shall not be remitted, if the second Estate were a Fee-simple. Littl. sect. 666, 667.

11. If the husband discontinue his wifes Land, and the Discontinuee is disseised, and the Disseisor doth make a Feoffment in Fee or Lease for life to the wife; in this case she shall be remitted; but if it were by Covin between the Disseisor and the wife, contra: Co. 3. 78. Littl. sect. 678. If the Tenant in Tail discontinue the Tail, and have issue a daughter of full age; and she take a Husband, and the Discontinuee makes a Release of it to the Baron and wife, for their lives; this is a Remitter to her, and she is in of the Estate-tail. Littl. 671.

12. If Lands be given to a man and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies, and after the husband alien the Land in Fee; and take back an estate to him and his wife for their lives; in this case they shall be both remitted. Littl. sect. 671.

13. If the Husband discontinue his wifes Land, and take back an Estate to him and his wife, and a third person; this is a Remitter for their Wives moyety, not for the other. Littl. sect. 676. And if the Husband in this case take back an Estate to him, and his wife, during the life of the Husband; this is a Remitter to his wife presently. Littl. sect. 676.

14. If one disseise me, and after make a Feoffment to me with Warranty, now I may be remitted, if I will, or I may make use of the Feoffment, with Warranty at my Election. 11 H.7. 20.

15. If a Disseisor make a Lease for years or life, or any other Estate to the Disseisee by Deed, or without Deed; this is a Remitter, contra, if it were by Fine. Litt. sect. 693. 12 H.7. 20.

S. the Dissee shall be remitted; for when two Titles meet, the best shall be preferred: 11 Ed. 4. 1. Littl. sect. 685.
- To an Infant.* 18. If one discontinue the Land of an Infant, and after one disseise the Discontinuee, and infeoff the Infant, the Infant shall be remitted; but if there were any Covin between the Infant and Disseisor, contra. Co. 3. 78.

20. If two Joyntenants be, one of full age, and the other within age, and they be disseised, and the Disseisor die seised, and his Heir enter (the other Joyntenant still within age) and the Heir of the Disseisor make a Lease to them; this is a Remitter for the moyety of him within age, but for the other moyety, contra. Littl. sect. 696.
- To a Parson of a Church.* 21. If I be seised of an Advowson in gross, and an usurpation be had against me, and at the next avoidance I usurp again; in this case I shall be remitted.
3. In what case no Remitter shall be.
- No Remitter shall be in these cases.
- First, When the party doth come to the second Title, by Act of Parliament.
- Secondly, When he comes to it by Fine or other Record.
- Thirdly, When there is not both an Action and a Right, with a descent come to the party to be remitted; for if the Right and the Possession of the Land be in several persons, and he that hath the Right, hath one against whom to bring his action, there shall be no Remitter.
- Fourthly, When the party comes to the last Title by his own wrong.
- Fifthly, When a man hath but a Title of Entry onely, as for Mortmain, Elchen, Condition broken, or the like. Co. upon Littl. 348.
- Sixthly, When two Rights onely descend, there must be an Ancient Right, and a new Estate; for one Right cannot work a Remitter to another Right.
- Seventhly, No Remitter shall be to a Right remediless; for the which, one can have no Action. Dyer 54. Co. 3. 3. Plow. 207. Kelw. 44. Littl. sect. 347.
- Señ. 5.* For the illustrating of which, take these cases.
- To a Tenant in Tail, or his Issue.* 1. If a Tenant in Tail infeoff the Issue in Tail, after he is of full age, and die, the Issue shall not be remitted to his elder Title. Littl. sect. 664.
2. If a Tenant in Tail since the Statute of Uses, make a Feoffment in Fee to the use of the Issue in Tail, and die; in this case the Issue shall not be remitted, but in this case, if any Entry be given to the Issue by Law, he may take it. But if the Issue in this case waive the Possession, and bring a Formedon in the Descender, and recover against the Feoffees, he shall be remitted. Broo. Remitter 149. Plow. 114: Dyer 23:
3. If a Tenant in Tail suffer a Common Recovery, and after disseise the Recoveror, and die; his Issue shall not be remitted, though the Recovery be erroneous, as long as it stands in force, and is not reversed; for neither an Action without a Right, nor a Right without an Action can make a Remitter. Co. upon Littl. 349.
4. If the Issue in Tail disseise the Discontinuee of his Father, and then infeoff his Father, and he die, and the Land descend to him; in this case he shall not be remitted. Perk. sect. 397.
5. If a Tenant in Tail have Issue two sons of full age, and he Lease the Land intailed to his elder son for life, the Remainder to his younger son for life; this is no Remitter to the eldest; but if he die without Issue of his body, this is a Remitter to the youngest. Littl. sect. 682.
6. If the Tenant in Tail, and his Issue, disseise the Discontinuee of the Tenant in Tail, Tail, and the Tenant in Tail die, whereby the Lands descend to the Issue; now though he shall be remitted against all strangers, yet not against the Discontinuee.

11 Ed. 4. 2.

7. If the Husband and Wife alien the Land of the Wife by Fine, and after take back any Estate to them again; in this case the Wife shall not be remitted.

To a Wife that hath a Husband:

8. If the Husband discontinue the Tenements of his Wife, and take back an Estate to him for term of his life, the Remainder to his Wife, during the Husband's life; this is no Remitter, but after if she survive him, it is a Remitter, Littl. sect. 680.

9. If the Husband make a Feoffment in Fee of the Land, he hath in the right of his Wife, and then take back an Estate in Fee to him, and his Wife, and she die, and he over-live her; now her heir shall not be remitted.

10. If the younger Brother disseise the elder, and the elder bring an Assise, and is barred, and after the younger die without Issue, and the Land descend to the elder; in this case the elder is not remitted. Dyer 5.

To the Dissei-
see, or his Heir.

11. A man shall never be remitted to an Advowson Appendant, though he have right, till he have recontinued the Manor, to which it is Appendant. So if one purchase an Advowson in Fee, and suffer usurpation, and six moneths, and it be after cast upon him, by descent or other Act in Law, he shall not be remitted. So if the Usurper grant the Advowson, to the Purchaser and his Heirs, and he dieth, his Heir is not remitted. If a Tenant in Tail of a Manor, to which an Advowson is Appendant, make a Discontinuance, the Discontinuee granteth the Advowson to Tenant in Tail, and his Heirs, the Tenant in Tail dieth, the Issue is not remitted: But contra, if one be remitted to the principal, he shall be remitted to the Accessary, though severed by the Discontinuee. Co. upon Littl. 349.

4. For the thing, to which a man is to be remitted.

If the Feoffee of the Tenant in Tail charge the Land, or make Leases, or the like, and after the Issue is remitted; these charges and acts of the Feoffee, are avoided; so in all like cases. Littl. sect. 659.

5. What Acts shall be avoided by the Remitter, or not.

If the Tenant in Tail infeoff his Issue in Tail, within age, and after being of full age, and then charge the Land, and after the Tenant in Tail die; now the Issue being remitted, the charge is avoided: Littl. sect. 660.

If the Husband discontinue the Wives Land, and the Discontinuee make an Estate to the Husband and Wife, on Condition, and after the Husband die, and the Wife is remitted, here the Condition is avoided. Littl. sect. 660.

CHAP. CXXXIX.

Of Remover of Records, Causes, and Persons, out of one County into another.

Señ. 1.
1. Remover.

Remover is where a Sute or Cause is removed out of one Court into another; and for this purpose there are divers Writs and Means. Some of these are to remove the Cause onely, and some of them are to remove the Person and his Cause both. Co. 11. 41. Some of the first sort are to remove Causes out of Courts of Record, and some to remove Causes out of Courts that are not Courts of Record. Corpus cum Causa, Habeas Corpus, is to remove the person, being a prisoner about the Cause, and his Cause; the Habeas Corpus, also Writs of Privilege, Prohibition, Cerciorari, Recordary, and others, are to remove the Causes onely. Writs of Error and Attaint also do remove Sutes. 21 Jac. chap. 23.

2. Recordo & processu mittendis, what.
Corpus cum causa, what.

There is an old Writ called Recordo & processu mittendis, by which this was done.

Corpus cum causa, is a Writ issuing out of the Chancery, to remove both the Body and the Record, touching the Cause of any man lying in Execution, upon a Judgment for Debt into the Upper Bench, &c. there to lie until he have satisfied the Judgment. F.N.B. 251. Dyer 61.

3. Habeas Corpus, what.

Habeas Corpus, is a Writ lying where a man is indicted of Trespass before Justices of Peace, or in a Court of any Franchise, and upon his apprehension being laid in prison for the same, he may have out of the Upper Bench, thereby to remove himself thither at his own costs, and to answer the cause there, &c. And the order in this cause is first to procure a Cerciorari out of the Chancery, directed to the Justices for the removing of the Indictment into the Upper Bench, and upon that to procure this Writ to the Sheriff, for the causing of his Body to be brought at a day. F.N.B. 250.

Cerciorari.

This Writ is used also for the removing of other Causes in other cases, from one Court to another: F.N.B. 7. 250. 78. 110. Crompt. Jur. 46.

Señ. 2.
4. Cerciorari, what.

A Cerciorari, is a Writ that lieth where one is impleaded in a base or inferior Court, that is a Court of Record, and one of the parties contending, supposing he may not have Justice there upon a Bill in Chancery, comprising some matter of Conscience, as that he hath not had, or is not like to have Justice there, he shall have this Writ to remove the Record into the Chancery, that the cause may be there determined. And if he do not prove the matter of his Bill, there the other party shall have a Writ of Procedendo to send back the Record thither again, there to be ended.

Procedendo.

And by this other Records, as Indictments, Recognisances, and the like, may be removed, and sent up; and the course is to send the Record first into the Chancery, and not first to certify it into the Upper Bench or Common Pleas, but out of the Chancery, to send it thither by a Mittimus, which is the sending of a Record into another Court. And a Writ of Error is a Cerciorari in it self. 2 H. 5. 2. F.N.B. 242. 11 Ed. 4. 11.

Mittimus.

This lieth in many other cases. March. 196. pl. 241.

The Remanding of a Cause, is the sending it back into the same Court, out of which, it was called and sent for.

Señ. 3.
5. Procedendo, what.
Procedendo is a Writ whereby a Plea or Cause, formerly called from a base or inferior Court to the Chancery, Upper Bench, or Common Pleas, by Writ of Privilege or or Cerciorari, is released and sent down again into the same Court, to be proceeded in there, after it appeareth, That the Defendant hath no cause of Privilege, or that the matter comprised in the Bill, is not well proved. Co. 6 63. 21 R 2. 11.

Now as touching all these things, the removing of Persons and Causes; these things are to be known.

1. The Judges of the Upper Bench, may send prisoners from thence in the Country to be tried, if they please. 6 H. 8. 6.

2. No Habeas Corpus or Cerciorari, is to be granted to remove any prisoner out of any Gaol, or to remove any Recognisance, except the Writ be signed by the Chief Justice, or in his absence by one of the other Judges own hands, under pain of five pound forfeit by him that makes the Writ: But the Writ is good (as it seems) and to be obeyed, though his name be not to it. 1, 2 Phil. & Ma. 13.

3. No Writ to remove a Sute begun in an Inferior Court of Record is to be obeyed, unless it be delivered to the Steward of the same Court, before Issue or Demurrer joyned, so as the Issue or Demurrer were not joyned within six weeks, next after the Arrest, or Appearance of the Defendant. 21 Jac. 23.

4. No Writ to remove a Cause, is to be received and allowed, unless it be delivered to the Judge of the Cause, before the Jury hath appeared, and one of them sworn to try the cause; for then it is too late. 43 Eliz. 5.

5. No Writ to remove any Cause out of an Inferior Court of Record shall be allowed, if the cause be not five pound, or above, and do not concern Freehold, or Inheritance, Title of Land, Lease, or Rent, where an Utter Barester of three years standing, is Steward or Assistant to him. 21 Jac. 23.

6. But if there be a Fore gn, or other Plea pleaded, that is not tryable there, then it is removable. Idem.

7. Writs of Error and Attaint are allowable, as formerly. Idem.

8. A Sluce being once remanded by Procedendo, shall never after be removed again. Idem.

9. No Cerciorari to remove any Indictment of Riot, Forcible Entry, Assault and Battery, is to be allowed, unless it be delivered at the Quarter Sessions in open Court: And that the parties indicted, do there put in Bond of ten pound to the prosecutor, to pay him such Costs and Damages as the Justices of Peace shall set down. 21 Jac. 8.

10. No Writ of Cerciorari shall be allowed to remove any Information or Indictment against any man, or proceedings for any thing within the new Ordinance for High-ways, made March. 1654.

11. No Cerciorari or Habeas Corpus, shall be allowed to remove any Indictment for any offence about Corn, Wine, Beer, Ale, Fish, Flesh, Salt, Butter, Cheese, or other dead victual whatsoever. Aff. 23 October, 1650.

12. No Cerciorari shall be allowed to remove an Indictment for making, or taking of Challenges. Ord. 29 June. 1654.

13. Cercioraries shall not be allowed to remove Bills of Indictment of Riot, Forcible Entry, or of Assault and Battery, unless the party indicted will become bound with sufficient Sureties, such as the Justices of Peace in Sessions shall like of, to pay to the Prosecutor within a moneth after Conviction, such Costs and Damages as the Justices shall assess. 21 Jac. 8. But other Indictments may be removed without this Caution.

14. Two men and their wives were indicted for a Forcible Entry, who brought a Cerciorari, and some of them refused to be bound according to the Statute of 21 Jac. yet the Cause is to be removed, March. f. 27. pl. 63.

15. If the Sureties tendred, be worth ten pound a peece, the Justices must accept them for the ten pound Bond, upon the Statute of 21 Jac. the same.

16. After tender of sufficient Sureties, according to the Statute, all the proceedings of the Justices, are Coram non iudice, (i. e.) as before no Judge. March 27.

17. Upon a Cerciorari to remove an Indictment against a man, he is to be bound to prosecute with effect (that is) to traverse the Indictment, or quash it for defect. And if he do appear, an Attachment shall go out against him. March 76. pl. 118.

of

Of a Recordary, &c.

6. Recordary,
what.

Suitors.

7. Pone, what.

Tolt, what.

Self. 4.
8. Accedat ad
Curiam, what.

A Recordary is a Writ issuing out of the Upper Bench or Common Pleas to the Sheriff, to command him to send a Plaintiff that is before him, without Writ in his County Court, into that Court, from whence the Recordary is, to the end, that the cause may be there determined: And this the Sheriff is to send up and certify under his own, and the Seals of four of the Suitors that are Judges of the same Court. And he is withal to warn the other party to be in the Court there at a time certain.

And a Pone doth nothing differ from this, but that it is to remove a Sute that is there before the Sheriff, by Writ and not by Plaintiff: And if this be sued out by the Plaintiff in the first Sute, it may be had without shewing any cause at all for it: But if it be sued out by the Defendant, he must shew cause for it. As if it be to remove a Plea in a Replevin by Plaintiff, to shew that the Defendant doth avow for Damage-feasant, that the Plaintiff doth justify for Common of Pasture, which is a Plea touching Freehold, and therefore should not be without Writ. F. N. B. 119. 47. 70. 18. 71. 3 Hen. 6. 30. 12 Edw. 4. 11. 21 Jac. 23. 13 Edw. 1. 3. 43 Eliz. 5.

A Tolt is a Writ whereby a cause depending in a Court-Baron, is removed into the County-Court.

Accedat ad curiam is a Writ issuing out of the Upper Bench or Common Pleas, directed to the Sheriff, to command him to go to such a Court of such a Lord or Franchise, as County-Court or Court-Baron; or other Court that is not a Court of Record.

Where a Plaintiff is sued for taking of Beasts as a Distress, or some false Judgment, is supposed to be given in a Sute there; and that there he do make Record of the same Sute, in the presence of the Suitors of the same Court, and four Knights of the County; and the same certify into the Court, from whence the Writ came, at the day limited in the Writ. But this cannot be had of either side, without shewing of some cause.

And the causes for which these Sutes are used to be removed, are because they question Freehold there, or some thing is pleaded that is Foreign, and not triable in the Court.

And the Recordary, Pone, and this Writ, are to no other purpose but to remove a Sute into a Superior Court, and are in the nature of a Cessumari. And upon the Removal, the Sute is at an end in the Inferior Court: And if the other party, or any of the Judges, or other Officers of the Court, do proceed after the Removal of the cause, the party that removed the Sute, may have an Attachment against them: And after it is once sent away, it can never be sent back again, but must be tried there. CHAP. CXL.

Of a Rent.

Rent is a Sum of money, or other Consideration, issuing yearly out of Lands or manual Tenements. Redditus à redendo, quia retroit; vel à reddere, i. retro dari. This differeth essentially from an Annuity: For a Rent doth always issue out of Lands or Tenements, and the Land also is the debtor. Otherwise it is of an Annuity, which is chargeable upon the person of a man only, and he alone is the Debtor for this. Co. super Lit. 141, 142; Plow. 132, 138, 139. And of Rents there are said to be three kinds.

1. Rent-service; which is, where a man doth hold his land of his Lord by Fealty and certain Rent, or to render and yield Hens, Capons, Roses, Spurs, Bows, Arrows, Horses, Wheat, or the like; or to perform any office, or yield any attendance, or the like: And to this Rent, Distress is incident of common right. The kind of it.

2. Rent-charge; which is where an Estate is made of Lands or Tenements to another in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years, rendering a Sum of money or other thing to be paid yearly to him that made it and his Heirs; and there is a Clause in the Deed, That if the Rent be behind, it shall be lawful for the Feoffor, Lessor or Donor to distrain for it upon the Land. Or where one doth grant a Rent out of his Lands or Tenements to another in Fee for life or years, with such a power to distrain for the Rent if it be behind: And to this no Distress is incident of common right, but by the agreement of the parties the Land is charged with the Distress; and hence it is called a Rent-charge.

3. Rent-seck is where a Rent is reserved or granted (as in the case before) without any clause of Distress, or power to distrain: And this is called Redditus siccu, dry Rent; because he that is to have it, till he hath gotten Seisin of it, hath no remedy to recover it, if it be denied to him; and then he hath no other remedy but an Assize for the recovery of it: Terms of the Law, Rent. Co. super Lit. 142. Lit. c. 131. Fines ley, 155. D. & S. c. 30. And regularly a man cannot have, or challenge, or make a title to any kind of Rent, unless it be a Rent-service, or a Rent charge in the case of Prescription, or for equality of Partition, unless he have a Deed to shew for it. Co. 63. Lit. 40. Co. super Lit. 142, 146. Title to it.

If one be seised of Land in Fee, and make a Gift of it in tail, or make a Gift in tail to one, the Remainder in tail to another, or a Lease for life or for years, keeping the Reversion in him, without any Clause in the Deed enabling him to distrain for it; this is a Rent-service still. But if the Reversion be gone, it doth continue no longer a Rent-service, for there can be no Rent-service but where there is a Reversion, Lit. 214, 215, 218, 229. Plow. 132, 142. Co. on Lit. 162. And therefore if one by Deed indented make a Feoffment in fee to one, or a Gift in tail, or a Lease for life or years to one, with the Remainder over to another in Fee, and reserve a Rent upon any such Estate without any clause of Distress for not payment; this is a Rent-seck, not a Rent-service. So if one seised in Fee of Land by Deed-poll or Indenture, grant a Rent issuing out of his Land, without any clause of Distress for not payment; this is a Rent-seck. Lit. sect. 214, 215, 217. Co. 638. sup. Lit. 150, 151. If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Lord grant the Rent (except Fealty, which is incident to every Rent-service) this is a Rent-seck, Perk. sect. 113. So if one hold his Land by Homage, Fealty, and other Services, yielding a Rent, and the Lord grant away the Rent reserving the Services, or grant the Services saving the Rent; in these cases the Rent is a Rent-seck, Lit. sect. 216, 227. Co. sup. Lit. 151. If one lease Land to another for life rendering Rent, and after he in Reversion grant away this Rent to another; this during the life is a Rent-seck, Lit. sect. 218. If one devise a Rent by Will in Fee-simple, Fee-tail for life or for years, without any clause of Distress, this is a Rent-seck; but if it be with a clause of Distress, it is a Rent-charge, Co. 636. Dyer 348. a. What kind of Rent it is. Rent service.

If

If one make a Feoffment in Fee, Gift in Tail, Lease for life or years of Land to one; or a Gift in Tail, Lease for life or years, with the Remainder over to another in Fee, and upon any such Estate reserve a Rent, and in the Deed there is a power to distrain in the Feoffor, Donor, or Lessor, if the Rent be behind; this is a Rent-charge, Co. super Lit. 143. Plow. 131. Lit. fect. 217.

So if one by Indenture or Deed-poll grant a yearly Rent to be issuing out of his Lands to another in Fee-simple, Fee-tail for life or years, with such a power in the Deed, 13 Ed. 4. 6. 5 H. 6. 6. Lit. fect. 218.

So if the Tenant of a Land chargeable with a Rent-secck, grant a power to distrain upon the Land for the Rent to him that hath it; this is now become a Rent-charge, Dyer 348.

So if one Coparcener upon a partition to make an equality, agree that the other shall have a Rent out of his part of the Land; this is a Rent-charge for which the other may distrain, though there be no Deed for the Rent, nor clause of Distress in a Deed, 15 H. 5. 5.

If one by Will in writing devise a Rent out of his Land, with a clause of Distress; this is a Rent-charge, Co. 5. 18.

If the Tenant of the Land grant a Distress to him that only hath a Rent-secck, this now is become a Rent-charge, Co. 5. 118. Dyer 328. Co. super Lit. 13.

Rent-secck.

If one by Deed indented make a Gift in Tail, or Lease for life or years, with a Remainder over in Fee, or a Feoffment in Fee, and reserve a Rent upon any such Estate, without any clause of Distress for non-payment; this is a Rent-secck. Lit. fect. 216. 217. 218.

So if one seised in Fee of Land by Deed-poll or Indenture, grant a Rent issuing out of his Land, without any clause of Distress in the Deed; this is a Rent-secck. Co. 6. 4. 8. Co. super Lit. 150.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Lord grant the Rent, (except the Fealty which is incident to every Rent-service) this is Rent-secck. Perk. fect. 113.

If one hold his Land by Homage, Fealty, and other services, yielding a Rent, and the Lord grant away the Rent reserving the Services; this is a Rent-secck. Co. super Lit. 151. Lit. fect. 226. 227.

If one devise a Rent by Will in Fee, Fee-tail, for life or years, without any clause of Distress; this is a Rent-secck. Co. 6. 46.

If a Lord have two Daughters and dieth, and upon partition one hath the Rent, the other the Fealty; this is Rent-secck. Co. super Lit. 150. Dyer 384.

If one lease Land to another for life rendring Rent, and after he in Reversion grant away this Rent to another, during the Reversion, this is a Rent-secck. Lit. fect. 228. So if he grant the Services, saving the Rent. Co. super Lit. 151.

For Answer to this, take these Cases.

3 What shall be said a good Rent by Grant or Reservation, or not: And how taken.

In respect of the thing out of which it doth issue.

1. If a Lease be made of a Manor, Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Mill, or the like, rendring a Rent, or a Rent be granted issuing out of such things; this is a good Rent: for these things are chargeable with a Rent. So if one be seised of a Reversion or Remainder of Land after an Estate for life, years, or in tail, and grant or reserve a Rent-charge out of it; this is a good Grant and Reservation, and the Land shall be charged when it comes in possession. Co. 7. 27. Plow. 157. 100. Co. 4. 49. Plow. 198. Co. super Lit. 144.

2. If one that hath but a Lease for years of Land, lease the Land rendring Rent, or grant a Rent out of the Land; this Grant or Reservation is good during the Term: And if he had granted for a longer time, yet it is good for the time of the Lease. But if one be possessed of a Term of White-acre, and seised in Fee of Black-acre, and grant a Rent out of both these Acres for life; the Rent shall issue out of Black-acre only. Co. 2. 36. 14 H. 7. 2. Co. 7. 25.

3. If one make a Lease for years of Land, and after grant a Rent-charge out of the said Land; this is a good Rent: And if the Lessee surrender, the Rent shall begin presently. So if one grant a Reversion or Remainder rendring a Rent, it is good. Co. super Lit. 47. Plow. 198.

4. If

4. If one make a Lease of the Vesture or Herbage of his Land, reserving a Rent; this is a good Rent. Co. 7. 38.

5. If one grant a Mefnalty reserving a Rent, it is good; for the Tenancie may eschear, and then the Donee may distrain for all the Arrearages, 1 H. 4. 1.

6. A Rent issuing out of a Rectory, is good.

7. But if one grant a Rent out of anothers Land, this is void as to charge the Land; and though he after purchase the same Land, yet this will not make the Land chargeable, but it will be a good Annuity to the person. Brownlow, 1 par. 30.

If one grant or reserve any Rent out of a thing that is not manorable, or that is Hereditamentum incorporatum, it is void. And therefore if one grant or reserve a Rent out of a Fair, Market, Tythes, or Hundred, Offices, Corrody, Grinding at a Mill, Liberties, Priviledges, Pischary, Common, Advowson, or the next Avoidance of a Church, or the right of Land only, or the like; such Grants and Reservations are void.

So if one grant a Rent issuing out of another Rent, or reserve a Rent upon the Grant of another Rent; such Grants or Reservations are void. So if one recite that he hath a Rent, and grant it over, reserving a Rent out of it, this is void. But yet these Grants of Rent may be good to charge the person in an Annuity. And yet if one have a Rent-service, he may grant it, or part of it away; and if the Tenant attorn, this is a good Grant: But if it were a Rent-charge, it seems contrary. See for this, Co. super Lit. 142, 144. Co. 7. 27. Plow. 132. Co. 10. 60. 93. Co. 1. 59. Kelw. 161. 3 H. 6. 20.

8. If one be disseised, and after grant a Rent out of the Land, this is void: But if it be by Fine or Indenture, it may be good by way of Estoppel. Co. 2. 53.

9. No Rent granted out of, or reserved upon any incorporeal thing, as Commons, Offices, and the things before named, is good: And yet in case of the King, such a Grant or Reservation may be good; for it is a rule, That a Rent must always be reserved out of such a thing whereunto the Lessor may resort for Distress. And yet in the case of a common person also, if a Lease for years be made of any such incorporeal thing rendring a Rent, the Reservation may be good by way of Contract to give an Action. But in case of a Lease for life of such thing, it is void to all purposes. Co. super Lit. 47.

One may have or grant a Rent by Fine, or Fine and Render. See Fine. Br. Ref. 2. Co. 2. 72. St. 27 H. 8. c. 10.

The Tenant by Grant may give the Lord power to distrain for his Rent or Services in any other place, as well as that which is held of him. 9 H. 6. 9.

If one grant Twenty shillings Annui redditus de 7. S. Annuatim percipit. it seems this is a good Grant to charge both the Person and Land. Kelw. ibid.

If one grant a Rent, percipiendum apud Manerium de S. it seems this is a good Grant to charge the Person and Land. 41 Ed. 2. 15.

If one say, Obligo me 7. S. & heredibus suis in annuali redditu de decem lib: quem percipio de Manerio meo de S. & oblige Manerium predictum ad distringendum; it seems this is a good Rent-charge, to charge both person and Land. 46 Ed. 3. 48.

So if one grant Rent extra White-acre, or de White-acre, or percipiendum in vel ad White-acre; all Grants of Rent made with these or such like words, may be good: See 46 Ed. 3. 48. 22 Aff. 66. 21 H. 7. 4. 41 Aff. pl. 3.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent, and it say not to whom; yet this is a good Reservation. See more infra in Reserv. 27 H. 8. 19.

One may reserve a Rent upon a Bargain and Sale, and this will be good by the Saving in the Statute of Uses. Adjudged, Wykes Case, M. 40 Eliz. B. R. Dyer 45. A Rent-charge may be claimed and had against another by Prescription; That a man and his Ancestors, whose Heir he is, time out of of minde have been seised of it, and used to distrain from it, when it hath been arrear. And thus a man may make a good Title to this Rent without Deed. But one cannot prescribe in him, and those whose Estate he hath; for that he cannot have their Estate but by Writing. Co. super Lit. f. 144. Lit. 46. Co. 6. 63.

If one grant a Rent-charge out of his Land, Provided that the Grant shall not extend to charge the person of the Grantor in an Annuity; this is a good Rent-charge, but the person of the Grantor shall not be charged in an Annuity. And yet if such a Grant were of Rent out of his Land without clause of Distress with such a Proviso, this Proviso were void, unless the Grantor do give the Grantee Seisin of the Rent at the time of the Grant. Co. 6. 58. Co. super Lit. f. 146: Co. 7: 23.

If one grant a Rent out of his Coffers, or out of all his Lands in general, with a clause in the Deed, That if the Rent be not paid, the Grantee shall distrain for it in the Manor of S. this is a good Rent to charge both the person and Manor of S. but not any other Lands.

So if one possessed of Black-acre for years, and seised of White-acre in Fee, grant a Rent out of both for life, with a clause of Distress in both; the Rent doth issue out of White-acre only: But yet both the person and the two Acres are to be charged for the Rent. And so in all like cases.

But if one grant a Rent for life out of his Term, the Land is charged during the Term, if the Grantee live so long. Stat. 26 H. 8. chap. 5. Co. 7: 23. Co. super Lit. f. 146.

If one grant to another, that he shall distrain for a Rent of Forty shillings a year in his Manor of S. if it be not paid him yearly at Michaelmas; this is a good Rent-charge to charge the Manor, but not the person of the Grantor. Plow. 139. Co. 7: 24. Lit. 219, 220.

If the Father be seised of Land, and he and his eldest Son join in a Lease for years to begin after the Fathers death, and say, Rendering Rent to the Heir of the Father; this were a good Reservation: But if the Reservation be to the Son by name, it is void, for he is but as a stranger. Adjdg. Trin. 12 Jac. B. R. Oms and Frith.

One may grant a Rent by Will, and a clause of Distress also by the Will; and this is good. Co. 8. 84. Dyer 348.

As if one by Will devise Ten pounds to be paid out of his Land quarterly at the most usual Feasts, and for non-payment to distrain, and the Distress to keep till payment of Arrearages; this is a good Rent by Will, for life of the Devisee. Co. super Lit. 144.

One may reserve a Rent upon a Deed of Bargain and Sale. Co. super Lit. f. 144.

If one seised of Land in Fee, bindeth his Goods and Chattels to the payment of a yearly Rent; or, Obligo Manerium meum de C. & omnia bona in dicto Manerio existent. A. de B. in annuo redditu de vigint. sol. ad distringendum per Ballivum Dom. Regis pro redditu predicto: These be good Grants of Rent to charge the Land. Co. super Lit. 147:

If one grant a Rent of Forty shillings out of his Manor of D. and grant over by the same or another Deed, That if the Rent be behind, the Grantee shall distrain in the Manor of S. the Rent doth issue out of one Manor; but this is a good Grant to charge both Manors with the Rent. Co. super Lit. 147. 7: 23.

Sec. 3:

If a man be seised of twenty Acres of Land, and grant a Rent of twenty pounds percipiendum de qualibet acra terra mea; this is a good Grant, and several out of every Acre; so that in all it is twenty pounds a year. 21 H. 6. 10. Co. super Lit. f. 147.

If one by Deed grant a Rent-charge to a man out of his Land for life, and granteth further by the same Deed, that he had his Heirs may distrain in the Land for the same Rent; this is a good new Grant of a new Rent in Fee-simple. Co. super Lit. 147. 148.

Upon

Upon a Release that doth enure to create or enlarge an Estate, or by way of Mitter le State, a Rent may be reserved; but not upon a Release that works by way of Mitter le Droit, or by way of Extinguishment. Co. super Littleton, f. 193.

If a Company in London grant an Annuity out of their cleer gain; that Annuity is good, and those words void. Trin. 17 Jac. Co. B.

If one grant a Rent-charge without the words, [For me and my heirs] this is good to charge both the person and Land during the Grantors life; but after it will charge the Land only. Dyer 344.

If one by his Will dated the nineteenth day of October, devise to J. S. a yearly Rent of Ten pounds to be issuing out of his Land, with clause of Distress, and doth not say when it shall be paid, or what day; yet this is a good Rent, and shall be paid that time twelvemonth the nineteenth of October. Co. 6. 56.

A Rent may be granted upon Condition, and it may be granted for life, years, or in Tail or in Fee, or for life and years with Remainder over; and these manner of Grants of Rents are good. Plow. 30. See Remainder.

A Rent may be had or reserved without Deed for of partition, or upon a Lease for life or years, or Gift in tail, or to a woman out of the Land for which she is endowed: But a Rent for inequality of Exchange cannot be without Deed. Co. super Lit. 169.

A Rent de novo cannot be granted without Deed; and if it be, it is void: But one may have a Rent by Prescription, (vide supra.) Doll. & Stu. vide Faits. Bro. Reservat. 18.

If one seised of a Rent in Fee, grant it after the death of J. S. it seems this is a void Grant. 8 H. 7. 3.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent to a stranger, this Reservation is void. Br. Refer: 15. 22. Plow. 155.

So if it be rendring a Rent to the Lessor, and another that is a stranger; it is void as to the stranger, unless the stranger be party to the Deed. Trin. 12 Jac. Co. B. Co. super Lit. 113.

So if a Father and eldest Son join in a Lease, rendring Rent to the Son after the death of the Father; this is void as to the Son. Trin. 12 Jac. Co. B. Oats Case.

If Lands be given in Frankmarriage, reserving a Rent; the Reservation is void till the fourth degree past, and afterwards good. 26 Aff. 66.

If the Estate be void on which the Reservation is made, the Reservation is void also, 14 Jac. B. R.

A Rent cannot be reserved on a Parol-Fooffment; but on a Fooffment by Deed-poll it may. 14 Car. B. R.

For Answer to this, how a Reservation shall be expounded, take these Cases: How it shall be taken.

1. If a Rent be reserved on a Lease, and it is not said how long it shall continue, or to whom it shall go; in this case it shall continue as long as the Estate doth continue, and shall go to the Heir, or him that hath the Reversion. Dyer 45. Kilm. 88.

2. If one by Deed indented demise to A. for life, with divers Remainders over, Reddend. inde to the Lessor and his Heirs a Rent; this Rent shall extend to all the Estates, if he in Remainder after the Estate for life will agree to it. Co. 5. 111. 10. 107.

3. If one lease for a year with these words, [And if the parties shall agree for a new Lease for longer time then for three years, yielding during the Term aforesaid] in this case the Reservation shall extend as well to the first year, as to the three last years. Co. 10. 106. 107. 5. 111. Brownlow, Rep. 2 par. 30. See more in Chap.

If one lease for life or years, and the Lessee do covenant to pay Ten pounds by the year Rent, and so it is set down in the Deed, not in the nature of a Reservation, with with rendring, yielding or paying such a sum, or any such like words; this is not a Rent, but a Sum of money in gross, for which the party cannot have the same remedy as he may for a Rent, but an Action of Debt or Covenant. Dyer 361. Plow. 133. Browning and Bestons Case.

4. What payment shall be said to be a sum in gross, and not a Rent.
If one seised of Lands, and possessed of divers Implements and Chattels, make a Lease for years of it, and the Lessee covenant and grant that he will pay during the Term an hundred pounds at such days; this is no Rent, nor in the nature of a Rent, but a Sum of money in gross. Dyer 276.

If one grant to do a thing, & toties quoties defectum fuerit, he shall forfeit Ten pounds; this is no Rent, but a Sum in gross, for which Debt only lieth, Dyer 24.

5. What payment shall be said an Annuity, and not a Rent.
An Annuity is a yearly sum of money, or other thing to be had from the person of the Grantor. Sometimes this word also is taken for the Writ of Annuity, which is provided for the recovery of this yearly payment, if it be behind. And to this a man may make to himself a Title by Prescription or Grant. And this by Grant a man may have in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years, to be received of the person of the Grantor, or of him and his heirs. And by this the Grantee or his heirs, or either of their Grantees may take advantage. Lit. f. 41. Plow. 13. 27. Co. Super Lit.

f. 144.

Sec. 4. If one grant a Rent, Annuity, or Sum of money out of his Coffers, or out of his Land, and say not what Land, nor where; this is an Annuity, not a Rent. Lit. f. 48.

If one grant a Rent-charge out of anothers Land; this shall be an Annuity, and shall charge the person of the Grantor. Co. 6. 58.

If one grant a Rent out of such a thing as is not chargeable with a Rent; there this shall be an Annuity to charge the person. Co. 6. 58. 10. 93.

If the King had given a Sum of money to one newly dignified, or another man grant an Annuity pro consilio impenso & impendendo, or for exercising an Office: And so in all such like cases where no Land is chargeable with the sum or payment, and the sum be yearly, it shall be reputed an Annuity.

A Company in London granted an Annuity of Twenty pounds per annum, and to give Counsel, out of their cleer gains in the Trade; this is a good Annuity, and those last words are void. Co. B. Smiths Case, 17 Jac.

A Rent-charge also is sometimes converted into an Annuity; and for this see Suspension.

6. The Remedy for Recovery of an Annuity.
As no Freehold is chargeable with an Annuity, so no Distress can be taken for it, neither can the party have any remedy for the recovery of it but a Writ of Annuity, in which he shall recover all the arrearages behind of the Annuity; and when once he hath a Judgment upon this Writ, so long as this is of force, he shall never have any other Writ of Annuity, nor new Action against the party, but a Scire facias out of that Judgment. But after an Annuity is determined, the party unto whom any Arrearages be behind, may bring an Action of Debt for them.

But for such a Rent as may be granted without Deed, a Writ of Annuity doth not lie, though it be granted by Deed. And for a Writ granted for owelty of partition, no Writ of Annuity doth lie. And where a Rent is apportioned by Act in Law, this Writ of Annuity faileth. Co. 7. 9. F. N. B. 152. Dyer 26. 373. Co. 6. 45. upon Lit. pl. 144. 145. 150.

7. The Remedy for Recovery of a Rent.
If one be once seised, and hath a Freehold of any Rent, and be after disseised of it, he may have an Assize to recover it. And note that the Disseison of a Rent is, when the party is disturbed in the means of Recovery of his Rent, which for a Rent-charge may be by five causes or means. As,

1. By Rescue, which is when the party hath distrained one, and the Distress is rescued, or being upon the Land to distrain, cannot be suffered. Lit. f. 236. 237. 240. 239. Br. Disseis. 69.

2. Replevin, which is where an Action of Replevin is brought upon the Distress taken.

3. Denier,

3. Denier, which is the denying or not payment of the Rent on the Land when it is required.

4. Inclosure, which is when the party doth come to the place whence the Rent doth issue, or where he hath power to distrain, and it is inclosed by walls or the like, that he cannot come at it: But if the place were not newly, but anciently inclosed, then it were no Disseisor.

5. Forestalling; which is when the party is going to distrain for the Rent, and the Tenant hearing of it doth forestall the way with force and arms, or threaten to kill or wound, so that he dare not go to distrain.

And for a Rent-service this may be by three causes, as by Rescous, Replevin, and Inclosure. And for a Rent-seck by three causes, Denying, Inclosing, and Forestalling. But this Assise lieth not until an Actual Seisin of the Rent, Co. super Lit. 153. 160, 161. 99 Ed. 3. 15.

In an Assise for the Rent, the Plaintiff shall recover the Rent and Damages: But in a Rescous he shall recover the Damages only, and the thing distrained shall be taken again as a Distress.

For an Annual Rent due from a Freeholder, the Lord may distrain; but he cannot have Debt for Rent or Corporal service as long as the same doth continue, but after it is ended he may. Co. of Copiholds, 50.

If a Lessee for twenty years of Land, grant it to a stranger for part of the years rendring Rent; in this case the Grantor may distrain, or have an Action of Debt for the Rent. Park. fell. 693. Co. 1. 97.

If one were never seised of a Rent-charge, and distrain, and a Rescous is made, he cannot have an Assise, but must have a Rescous. Co. 1. 97.

In case where one may distrain for a Rent, he may not distrain in any other place but such out of which the Rent doth issue, unless it be where the Distress is given in another place (as above) but in any other part of the Land where he will be may distrain. See Distress. Br. Rent, 2. Lit. 48. Plow. 239.

If one at Michaelmas make a Lease for years, rendring Rent at Michaelmas or ten days after; the Lessor may bring an Action of Debt for the last years Rent, and suppose it to be due at Michaelmas. Barwick's Case, Tr. 9 Jac.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent, on Condition of Re-entry for non-payment, and the Lessor re-enter for non-payment, yet he may bring an Action of Debt for the Rent. So it seems where a Re-entry is given, and the Lessor hath made a legal demand, though he received the Rent after, yet he may re-enter notwithstanding. Kelw. 153. 112.

Recoverors upon Common-recoveries shall have the same remedy for their Rents by Distress, or an Action of Debt against Lessees for years before Attornment, as the Recoverees had. St. 7 H. 8. 4. 21 H. 8. 15. Co. super Lit. 104. See more, Co. super Lit. 323. & Debt.

For every Rent-charge, if it be unpaid, the party to whom it is due hath this remedy: Either he may distrain upon the Land charged with it, or he may bring an Annuity against the Grantor at his election; unless it be in case where by the original agreement one of these remedies are debarred, as the case above; Grant of Rent-charge. Proviso it shall not charge the person, &c.

3. The remedy for Recovery of a Rent-charge.

But where the party hath this double means of remedy, he may not make use of both: For if once he bring a Writ of Annuity (in case where the person is chargeable, and the Writ doth well lie) and declare; by this the Land is discharged for ever. And if he once distrain and avow for the Rent in a Court of Record; by this the person of the Grantor is discharged for ever, Co. super Lit. 143. So if the Grantee bring an Assise and make his plaint; but the purchase of the Writ of Annuity or Assise doth not determine his Election, Dyer 344. Lit. fell. 219. Co. 724. Plow. 13. 5 H. 7 33. Dyer 362. F. N. B. 152.

If a Rent-charge be granted with a Proviso it shall not charge the person of the Grantor, and after the Rent is determined, and there are arrears behind; in this case notwithstanding the Proviso, the party may have an Action of Debt for the arrears, Co. 739. Dyer 217.

And

And though a Deed that is with a clause of Distress for Rent, do grant further that he shall keep the Goods distrained against Gages and Pledges, yet they are subject to Replevin, Co. super Lis. 145. 282. For else by a new invention all Replevins shall be taken away.

If one have a Rent-charge for years, and the Term expire; in this case he may not distrain for the Rent, by the opinion of Justice Crook & Barclay. Pasch. 10 Car. Crawley contra. But he must have an Action of Debt, as he must whiles the Lease doth continue.

But in all cases where the Land charged is discharged by the act of the party, as purchase of part, or the like, the Grantee cannot have an Annuity; but if it be determined by the act of God, or Law, there he shall have an Annuity, as of a Rent granted for anothers life. Co. upon Lis. 148.

If one be seised of Land for the life of J. S. grant a Rent out of it for twenty one years, and J. S. die; in this case the Rent shall continue for the years, but the Land is discharged. Co. super Lis. 148.

Of recovery of Rent-service.

For a Rent-service reserved on a Lease for years, if it be unpaid, the party to whom it is due may either distrain for it, or else he may bring an Action of Debt and recover it. Lit. sect. 213. 331. But for Rent-service in other cases, it seems he hath no means of Recovery of it, but by Distress and Assise. (See supra, & Distress.) Perk. sect. 693. So upon a Gift in tail or Lease for life. Littleton, sect. 213.

If one that hath but a Lease for years, make a Lease of the Land for part of the time, rendring the Rent, and the Rent is behind, the Lessor may have an Action of Debt for this Rent; by which it seems this Rent is a Rent-service. Plow. 521; 9 H. 5. 8.

Executors.

Executors shall have the like remedy for Rent-charge and Rent-service due to their Testator, as their Testator had, and they may distrain for the arrearages due in their Testators time: And so also shall the Tenant of the Land, whether he be Heir or Feoffee to him that should have paid it, Heir or Feoffee of the Heir or Feoffee, & sic in infinitum; Issues in tail, or he to whose use, or any other that come into the Land from or under him that should have paid it. As for example, if one make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and the Rent be arrear, and the Lessor make his Executor and die, and the Land descend to his heir; the Executor may bring an Action of Debt for this Rent. Co. super Lis. 162. St. 32 H. 8. c. 37. Ch. 40. 50. Dyer 373.

So if one grant a Rent for life out of his Land, and the Rent is arrear in divers Feoffees time of the Land one after another, and the Grantee die, his Executors may bring an Action of Debt against every one of the Feoffees, and recover the arrearages of him for his own time. Qui sentit commodum, sentire debet & onus. But if a Tenant in tail make a Feoffment, and the Discontinuee charge the Land, and after enfeof the Issue in tail and die; the Issue is remitted to his first Estate, and shall not be charged with this Rent.

So if one have a Rent-charge or Rent-service for life or in fee, and it be arrear, and after he grant away the Rent to another, and the Tenant attorn, and then he die; his Executor shall never recover these arrearages by this Statute, but they are lost. Co. 7. 37.

If one have such a Rent for the life of J. S. and J. S. die, yet the party may have his remedy against the Occupier of the Land by Distress. As if one devise a Rent out of the Land by Will, with clause of Distress to B. for the life of C. and the Heir to whom the Land charged doth descend doth lease it to D. the Remainder to E. in Fee, and the Rent is behind in the life of D. and D. die, and after C. die; Now in this case the Lands in the hands of him in Remainder shall be charged with these Arrearages, and the party may distrain for them. Stat. 32 H. 8. ch. 37. Co. 6. 118.

Husband and Wife.

If any such Rents be arrear to Femer-sole that after marry, or Femer-covert during the Coverture; the Husband, his Executors or Administrators shall have the same remedy for it the Wife had by Action of Debt or Distress. As if a Femer-sole sole have a Rent-charge granted to her for life, and the Rent be behind, and after she take a Husband, and the Rent be behind again, and she die; the Husband may recover both these Rents by this Statute. See the Statute at large, and Co. super Lit. f. 162. Co. 4. 50. F.N.B. 121.

Corporal services, as Work-days, and Nomine pœna, and the like, are not within this Statute; but all others are. Co. super Lit. f. 162.

In these three special Cases, one may distrain for a Rent-seck.

1. Where a Woman hath it for part of her Dower, in favorem dotis;
2. When the King is to have it by his Prerogative.
3. When a Parcener is to have it for equality of partition.

Of Recovery of a Rent-
seck,

But in all other cases there is no remedy for a Rent-seck, but by an Assise; and that a man cannot have neither, until he have got Seison of the Rent, (See Seison) after this manner as followeth. See also some cases before, where one may distrain. Co. super Litt. f. 147. Kelw. 104. Co. 7. 28. Litt. f. 235. Co. 6. 56. 58.

After this Rent is due, and Seison had thereof, he must demand it at the last part of the day of payment: But if no Tender be made of it at the day of payment, though no Demand be then made, then the party may at any time after the day come on the Land, and demand the Rent; and if the Tenant or some other for him be not there ready to pay it, this is a Denial in Law, upon which he may have an Assise, and therein he shall recover the Rent, Arrearages, and Costs and Damages.

Se. 8. Demand.

But if there were a Tender by the Tenant on the very day, the last moment thereof (as it must) and no man ready to receive it; in this case he hath no such remedy, unless he can after meet with the Tenant upon some part of the Land, and there demand it.

And therefore then in that case, the best way is to be on the Land the next day of payment, and there demand the Rent and Arrearages thereof the last part of the day: And if no body tender it, this is a Denial upon which he may have an Assise. See more in Demand. Lit. 235. Co. 7. 28. Lit. 233. Co. super Lit. f. 153.

And here note that a man may have such a Condition, or Conditional Clause Note. in the Deed, that by it the Lessor upon Non-payment of the Rent may enter and keep the Land as a Pledg till the Rent be paid. For which see Co. sup. Lit. 202, 203. But not that he shall hold the Distress against Gages and Pledges, Co. sup. Lit. 283. if it be a Distress for Rent. Lit. sect. 327. Plow. 524.

It is the calling upon any man for any thing that is due; and this sometimes is called Request.

8. Demand or Request, what.
Where it is needful,

Demand for Rent must be made, though the Tenant or any for him be not there to pay it: Co. super Lit. 153.

In most cases when a man will enter into Land upon a Condition for Non-payment of Rent, or will have a Penalty or Nomine pœna of a greater Sum for Non-payment of a less; he must first make a Demand or Request for it, and that in that manner for time, place and order, as is set down here; else his Entry is unlawful, and he shall not have the Nomine pœna, and that though there be no words in the Deed between them that it shall be first demanded, and though no man be upon the Land to pay it or tender it.

To have a Re-entry, or Nomine pœna.

But perhaps if the words of the Condition be, That he shall enter, or the Estate shall cease without Demand; there Demand may not be necessary. 2 H. 7. 14. Br. Tend. 41.

As if one lease for life, Lease, Tail, or in Fee, rendring Rent at Michaelmas, Provided that if it be behind and unpaid after the day, the Lessor, Feoffor, or Donor shall re-enter: In this case he must demand it first.

So if there be a Covenant or Condition, that if the Rent be not paid the day, the Lessee shall forfeit Twenty shillings Nomine pena, or in any such like manner; he must demand it ere this Forfeiture shall be lost. Co. super Lit. 153. 201, 202. Co. 432. Noy 97. Dyer 329. 13. 79. 51. Plow. 172. 70. Co. 6. 56. Perk. sess. 836. Co. 10. 129. 14 Ed. 4. 4.

If a Lease be made of Land in Bucks, rendring Rent at the Exchange in London on Condition to re-enter; here Demand must be made before Re entry. Adjudy Trin. 37 Eliz. B.R.

If Lessee be bound by Obligation to pay the Rent reserved, it must be demanded. Resolv. B.R. Hobard Rep. 12.

To have a Distress or an Affise:

If one devise Land to one by Will, and a Rent to another issuing out of it; and that if the Rent shall be arrear, the Devisee of the Rent after demand shall distrain; it seems in this case he cannot distrain till he have demanded it. B. R. Symonds Case, Hil. 4. Jac. And so in like case, Co. upon Littleton, 144. 202. mutatis mutandis.

So if a Rent be reserved by Deed, and that if the Rent be behind and lawfully demanded at the house, that the Lessor shall distrain; he cannot distrain till demand, March 147. unto 218.

One must demand a Rent-seck and Arrearages after it is due, before he can have an Affise for it. And this Demand must be made also upon the Land in some overt place, the last day of payment.

But for a Demand to enable one to distrain, that must be made, if the agreement be so, before Distress. Co. super Lit. 202.

Sess. 7.
To have another Debt or Duty.

An Annuity (it seems) must be demanded, before any can recover any Damages for withholding it: And if one be bound to another he shall quietly enjoy an Annuity, it seems this Obligation is not forfeit, till he hath demanded the Annuity.

But of a Sum of money one is bound to pay by Covenant or Obligation yearly, contra.

So if one be bound to pay money on a single Obligation, or by a Contract, and no day is set forth; the party may choose whether he will pay till Request or Demand be made for it by Suit or otherwise; and if he do not demand it otherwise before he sue for it, he shall recover no Damages notwithstanding, but his bare money.

But if there be an Obligation of a greater Sum, with Condition to pay a Lessee, or one be bound in another Obligation, contra. To pay the money in that Obligation, it is otherwise; Bro. Tender, 22. Condition, 153. 173. 16 H. 7. 14. 14 H. 8. 19.

So if one be bound to pay money on an Award, Brownl. 1 par. 46. 49. 23. 53. 56. 65.

If one be bound to pay Twenty pounds by a Bill upon Demand, or to do any other duty, if it be by Especialty, there needs no Request to be made or laid in the Declaration for the duty: But if it be without Especialty, there it must be made and set forth in the Court for the duty, especially if it be in case of Collateral Assumpsit; as if one promise to pay Ten pounds Rent to another at a years end, being demanded, if it be not paid before. Pasch. 17 Ja. B.R. Bassports Case.

If one say to another, Lend J. S. Ten pounds, and if he pay you not by the years end, then that he will pay it upon request; in this case a Request is necessary, and it must be after the year. Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Basspoles Case, Hill and Wades Case, 16 Jac. B. R.

And

And in all cases where Demand makes the duty, or is parcel of the duty; there it is necessary, otherwise not.

If one devise Lands by his Will to another, on Condition he shall pay Twenty pounds a year out of it at two Feasts to J. S. in this case neither J. S. nor the heir of the Devisor need to Demand the Rent. But the Devisee of the Land at his peril must pay it to save the Condition, and that without Request. Dyer 348. 74.

9. Where Demand is not necessary of a Rent.

But if one devise a Rent by Will; and willet that if default of payment be, the Executor or Devisee shall have the Land; in this case the Devisee of the Rent must demand Rent before any Forfeiture shall be of the Land. Dyer 348.

If a Rent be granted with Condition, and that if it be arrear, that the Grantee may distrain; here the Grantee need not demand it before he distrain, but may distrain the first day after it is due. Plow. 70.

If the King be to enter or have a Nomine pena for Non-payment of Rent, he is not bound to demand it, but his Patentee must demand it as another man. Kelsw. 153. Co. 7. 28.

If one be bound by Obligation or Covenant to pay the Rent reserved on such a Lease; in this case to make a Forfeiture of the Obligation, or Breach of the Covenant, there needs no Demand. But if it were to perform the Covenant, contra, there it must be demanded. Brownlow, 2 par. 176. Stat. 22 H. 6. ch. 57. Bro. Tind. 20.

If one be bound to pay Twenty pounds by a Bill upon Demand, an actual Demand in this case is not necessary. Adjdg. Hil. 39 Eliz. 11 H. 4. 18. In other cases.

If one deliver Goods to deliver back again upon Request; here needs no actual Request before a Suit. So in a Detinue.

But if one be bound to deliver Goods upon Request, an actual Request must be made before a Suit can be had. Brownl. 1 par. 10.

Where Demand is requisite for to gain a Re-entry into Land, or a Nomine pena, there it must be made in the place subscribed, here the last day given to the Lessee for the payment of his Rent, and the last part of the day, so long time before the Sun-set as wherein the money to be paid and received may be conveniently told and numbred by day-light, or before Sun-set. And when the Lessee hath two times given to him for payment, as when the Lease is rendring Rent at Michaelmas, or within twelve days after, or in like manner; here demand must be made the last part of the first day, (i) Michaelmas day, and the last part of the last of the twelve days.

10. When and how Demand must be made. The Time.

But if the longer time had been put into the Condition only, as rendring Rent at Michaelmas, Provided that if it be behind twelve days after, the Lessor shall re-enter; in this case he need not demand it at Michaelmas, but the last part of the twelve days only, and that is sufficient; and when he doth come to demand, it is good to continue his Demand till night, and the Lessor is not bound to make any other Demand at any other time, neither is a Demand any other time good. Co. super Lit. f. 102. Sec. 8.

If one have a Rent-seck to be paid at a day arrear, he need not demand it with the Arrearages, the last part of the day when it ought to be paid; but he may demand it at any time afterwards. Co. super Lisleston, fol. 154. Co. 7. 28.

If one be to demand a Rent only before he distrain, he is not bound to that point of time as before, but there he may demand it at any time after the day of payment of it. Co. super Lit. f. 144. 153. Co. 7. 28.

But a Demand to enable a Distress only, may be at any time after the day, and it is good enough. Mich. 40, 41 Eliz. between Stanley and Read. Co. 7. 28.

The Place.

It must be made the time aforesaid upon some part of the Land whence the Rent doth issue, and upon that part that is most eminent and notorious: As a Capital Messuage and great Porch in that house, and at the Fore-door, and not at the Back-door; and though the Fore-door be open, yet the Lessor or Feoffor need not go in, though he see the Lessee or Feoffee within to tender it; but if he do it at the Fore-door, it is sufficient: And if there be no House, some Gate or stile upon some High-way going through the Lands charged. And if there be two places of payment, as if it be, [Yielding and paying the Rent at such a Stile, or in the Dwelling-house, or the like] there Demand must be made at both places, for the Lessee hath election to pay it at either. So if it be, [Yielding or paying at or in a place], the Demand must be made at and in the place.

And if the Rent be to be paid at any place out of the Land charged with it, then the Demand must be made at that place, and need not to be made upon the Land charged, and there in the most notorious place. Co. super Lis. 201. Case 326, 46. Dyer 329, 73, 130, 5. Plow. 172, 30. Park 836. 2 H. 7, 14. Co. 10, 129. Ca. 7, 28. Lit. sect. 341. Co. 4, 72.

If no other place be appointed, the Demand shall be made upon the Land always by the Lessor, or his sufficient Attorney. Noy 98. Brownl. 1 par. 138.

If the King make a Lease rendring Rent at the Receipt of the Exchequer, and he grant the Reversion, his Patentee must demand it upon the Land, and need not demand it at the Exchequer. But if no place were mentioned in the Kings case, the party is bound to pay it at the Kings Receipt. Co. super Lis. 201.

A. mortgaged Land to B. on Condition, that if he pay B. money, he shall re-enter: After, before the day of payment, A. is attainted; in this case B. is to demand the money at the Exchequer, and not upon the Land, nor is the King bound to tender it. Goldsb. 137. pl. 41.

And the Lessor is not bound to make any Demand at any other place; neither is a Demand at any other place good. Co. super Lis. 153.

But if there be a House and Land, a Demand at the House is needful to have a Reentry on a Condition; but a Demand on the Land to have an Assise, is good enough for a Rent-seck. Co. super Lis. 153.

If the Feoffment were of a Wood only, there Demand must be made at the Gate, or in the High-way that leads through it; and if one place be as notorious as the other, the Feoffor may demand it at either: And therefore in that case it is good for the Feoffee to tender it at both, for else it will not avail if the Lessor be not there. Co. super Lis. 202.

The manner of doing it.

The Lessor himself, or some body for him, must come upon the place at the time when the Demand must be made; (as is shewed you before) and there he must make an actual or verbal Demand of the Rent; and it is good to set forth how much it is, and to shew his readiness there to receive it; in this manner: Here I demand of J.S. Twenty pounds due to me at the Feast of &c. for a Messuage &c. which he holdeth of me in Lease by Indenture, &c. And there let him remain until it be dark, that he cannot see to tell the money. And all this must be before substantial Witnesses. And if it be to be paid on the Land, it seems the Lessor must do the first act, (i.) demand it, before the other is bound to pay it; and the other is not bound to tender till he demand it. But if it were paid at a place out of the Land, then the Lessee is bound to do the first act, (i.) tender it at his peril. But it is safe for both to do their parts. Abundans cautela non nocet. Dyer 329. 130. 79. 51. Plow. 70.

As for an Example to all this: If one make a Lease of a House, divers Lands and Woods to another for years, rendring an Hundred pounds Rent at Michaelmas, Provided that if the Rent be behind ten days after Michaelmas, the Lessor shall re-enter, or the Lessee shall forfeit Ten pounds Nomine pena: In this case if the Lessor will take advantage of this Forfeiture of Land or Money, he or some body for him must come the last part of the last of the ten days, (time enough before Sun-set to tell an Hundred pounds) to the same House, and there demand the Rent, and continue there till Sun-set; and if at that time the Rent be not tendered by the Lessee, or some body for him, or if it be denied, this is a Disseison of the Rent for which he may have an Assise; and for this also the Lessor may re-enter, and recover the Nomine pena. See the Books above. Bro. Disseis. 69.

If a Feoffment be with Condition to re-lease the Feoffor, and no time set, so that he hath time for life, if request hasten it not: If the Feoffor or any other party make request, it must be to the Feoffee, that he will be at a certain time on the Land, and make the Seate. Co. super Lit. 219. Sed. 9.

Every good Demand and Request for Rent, must be made as before; and if it fail in any of those circumstances, it is not good. But if the Lessor and Lessee agree and be contented to have it otherwise, there it may be good enough: For, Modus conveniens vincunt legem; & volenti non fit injuria. Co. 7. 23. Co. 3. 40. Dyer 78. 11. What shall be said a good Demand, or not.

If one lease for years rendring Rent, on Condition that if it be arrear forty days after the day, the Lessor and his Heir shall re-enter; and the Lessor demand it, and after die; this is a good Demand to give Re-entry to his Heir: But if the Lessor die after the day, and then the Heir demand it, this is not a good Demand to give a Re-entry. 13 H. 4. 17. D. & S. 35.

A Demand of more then the Rent is, is a good Demand notwithstanding for the Rent to gain a Re-entry, or Nomine pena.

If two make a Lease rendring Rent, on Condition that if it be behind and unpaid by them, they shall re-enter, and one of them die, and the Survivor demand it, it is a good Demand. So if the Lease were made to two, and one of them die, and the Rent is demanded of the Survivor of them. Dr. 107. 4. Ed. 3. 16. See Tender infra, for more.

If a Rent-lease be to be paid at Easter, and the day be past, and the Rent not paid nor demanded at the day, and he demand it after the day, this is not a good demand, unless he meet with the Tenant upon some part of the Land, and there demand it. See Co. 10. 129. Co. 7. 18.

If the Lessor demand the Rent before he die, his Heir may enter. Noy 97. See for Demand of Rent, Goldsb. 129. pl. 25; 124. pl. 9.

It is a careful Offer of a thing that ought to be paid or done, at the time and place it ought to be paid and done. And this word, as it is applied to Rent, seems to be a Relative to Demand, and both of them to look one to another: For in most cases, then and there a man is bound to tender a thing to another, where and when that other is bound to demand; and there and then that other may and must demand, where he hath liberty to tender. And the Law will not make the Lessor to attend then or there to demand, where and when it doth not enjoin the Lessee to tender: Neither shall the Lessee have liberty to tender any where or time, but when or where the Lessor is bound to wait to demand it: And therefore most of the Questions for Tender, are answered in Demand. Br. Tend. 23. Co. super Lit. 211. 12. Tender or payment, what.

See Obligation. And note, that in all cases where Tender is requisite, and it be made legally, though the party refuse, yet it shall give him as much advantage as if the other had accepted it; and the other in most cases is without remedy for his money. And in case of Tender of money, Tender in purses or bags, without shewing or telling of it, is sufficient. Co. super Lit. 107. 206. 209. Noy 94, 95.

In all cases where by Demand of the Rent the Lessor &c. must name a Re-entry, or Nomine pena, there the Lessee &c. by Tender of the Rent must save the Forfeiture; and Tender is necessary therefore. 2 H. 7. 6. 13. Where it is necessary, and not.

But the King, if he be to pay a Rent, is not bound to tender it.

If one tender Rent at the day, and be after sued for it, he need not tender it again in Court. Br. Tend. 6.

and his heir twenty shillings, &c. and if he fail, that the Feoffor shall re-enter; this is no Rent, and therefore here needs no Demand, but the other is bound to pay it at his peril. Co. super Lit. f. 213.

If the Lessee &c. will tender to save the penalty or Forfeiture of Land or money, he must do in that manner for time and place, as the Lessor must demand it; and he need not do it at any other time, in any other place, or in any other manner. Plow. 172. Dyer 109. Plow. 70. Dyer 79. 6 H. 7. 2. Lit. 341. (See the particulars above.) As if a Lease be made rendring Rent at Michaelmas, and the Lessee bind himself by a collateral Covenant or Obligation to pay it at the day; here he must tender it at the very day to save the Covenant or Obligation. Bro. Tend. 41.

Scilicet. 10.

Note for the time of payment of Rent there are four times. 1. Voluntary, but not satisfactory, and yet good to some purpose: As if a Lessee, Donee, &c. pay the Rent before the day; this is good to give Seison for to enable him that hath the Rent to bring an Assise. The second time is voluntary and satisfactory in some cases: As if it be paid the morning of the last day, and the Lessor die before the end of the day; this is good against the Heirs and Executors, but not against the King, if he were to have it. The third is the legal and absolute satisfactory time, which is a convenient time before the last instant of the last day; and then it must be paid or rendred. The fourth is satisfactory, but not voluntary, but coercive when it is done by Suit. Co. 10. 127. Lit. f. 127. Plow. 172.

If the Lease be rendring Rent at Michaelmas, or twelve days after, or in that manner, he may tender it the last part of either of the days, and good: And if he tender it the first, and the Lessor be not there, and he tender it not the last day, and then the Lessor demand it, he cannot re-enter. Co. 10. 129. & Curia, B. Rom. 100.

For the place.

If the Lessee will make a Tender of his Rent; it must be done and made in the most notorious place of the Land, unless the Rent be to be paid at a place out of the Land, then there it must be tendered. See in Demand. Plow. 711. Lit. f. 341. Co. 471. Bro. Tend. 23. Co. super Lit. f. 105. 201.

If the King lease Land rendring Rent at the Receipt of Exchequer, and after grant the Réversion to a Subject: Now after this Grant, Tender of the Rent upon the most notorious place of the Land is sufficient. Ro. 4. 72.

If there be a time and place certain set down for the tender of a sum in gross upon a Condition, the tender must be there and then, and neither of the parties are bound to any other place. Co. super Lit. 211, 112.

If one will tender money due on a Condition, (which is not Rent) it must be to the person of the party wheresoever he is. Co. super Lit. 210.

If Land be mortgaged for money; at the day the Heir, Executor, Administrator, Ordinary, Gardein in Socage or Chivalry, or any one, if the Heir be an Infant, may tender the money. Co. super Lit. 206, 207.

If Land be mortgaged, and a Condition is to pay money on a day; it seems the Tender must be (as in the cases of Rent before) a convenient time before Sun-set: But if the Feoffor tender it to the person of the Mortgagee at any time of the day of payment, it is sufficient. Co. super Lit. 206. 208.

15. What shall be said a good Tender or payment, or not; and how it shall be taken.

That is a good Tender, that is made with all the circumstance and regard of time and place, as before. If a Rent be to be paid at one of two days, the Lessee hath election which of them; and if he pay it either of the days, it is sufficient, as in the cases in the last Division. So if it be in one of two places, as rendring Rent in the Church of A. or in the Church of B. Tender in either of them is sufficient; but Demand must be made in both places. So if a Rent be to be paid at or in any place, Tender in either is sufficient. Co. super Lit. 202.

When a Rent is to be paid to Jointenants or Coparceners, (it seems) Tender to one of them is good and sufficient. So also Tender by one Jointenant (it seems) is good for all the rest. Bro. Tend. 16. 19.

If a Lessor distrain for Rent, and the Lessee tender him all the Arrearages, and the the Lessor refuse, he cannot distrain after; for this is a good Tender to bar him in Avowry, and it seems he can have no remedy for his Rent after. So if two days Rent be behind, and he tender him one days Rent, this is good for one day: Contra where he tender him but part of a days Rent only. Stat. 7 H. 4. chap. 18. Bro. Tender 2.

Tender of money in Farthings is no good payment in Curia Manches, nor &c. Sometimes payment, or Tender and acceptance of one thing for another, or of a in another place, is good for . See Acceptance and Condition.

If the Feoffee cometh to the Feoffor to any place upon any part of the ground the day of payment, and offer the Rent, albeit it be not the most notorious place, nor at the last instant of the day, yet the Feoffor is bound to receive it, or else shall he not take any advantage by Demand. Co. upon Lit. f. 202.

If Rent be payable at Michaelmas, on Condition that if he pay not in a week, &c. Here if the Feoffee meet the Feoffor on the Land within that week, and tender it, it seems good. Co. upon Lit. f. 202.

But a Tender out of the Land to the person of the Lessor, when the Rent is to be paid upon the Land, is not good. So a Tender after the days of payment be past, is not good. So a Tender in a Wood or other secret corner, where there be more notorious places amongst the Lands out of which the Rent doth issue, is not good: But if the Lessor will accept it at any other place before the last day of payment, it seems then it is good enough.

So Tender in word only, or a Talk of Rent, when he doth not shew it, is not good; for he must prove he had, and tendered so much money as the Rent is.

A Tender of a Sum in gross on a Condition, is not good on the Land, unless the party be there to receive it. Bro. Tend. 11. Perk. sect. 83. 22 H. 6. 65. Perk. sect. 837, 838. Co. super Lit. 210.

If a Feoffment be on Condition that the Feoffor shall pay to the Feoffee twenty pounds, and set no time, and the Feoffor die: Now his Heir, Executor or Administrator cannot tender the money: for Tender by them is not good to perform the Condition. Co. super Lit. 207, 208.

If one owe me ten pounds by Obligation, and ten pounds otherwise, and he pay me ten pounds generally, it shall be intended the ten pounds upon the Obligation, Brownl. 2 par. 108.

Payment of money to the Wife due to the Husband, is not a good payment, Co. 7. 28.

See much of this Question in Conditions, What is a good performance, and what not, in fol. See Goldsb. 129. pl. 25. 124. pl. 9.

If there be Lessee for life, or for years determinable upon life, and this Lessee make a Lease for years, reserving Rent to be paid at the four Quarter-Feasts, and the life die, so that the primitive estate end before the Quarter-day; now by this the Rent of this Quarter is gone, Co. 10. 127. Se. 11. 16. Where a Rent shall be said to be gone or not.

If all the Land be evicted before the last day of payment by one that hath an eigne title, the whole Rent is gone. Contra, if it be but part of the Land; for then the Rent shall be apportioned. See Apportionment. Co. 10. 127. Plow. 71. 134. As if there were a Judgment against the Lessor before the Lease, and after the Lease an Elegit is sued forth, and the Lessee evicted; and this Plea will bar the Rent. Days Case, Trin. 37. Eliz.

If a Rent be granted to one in Fee, or to a Corporation, and the Grantee die without Heir, or the Corporation be dissolved; it seems in this case the Rent is determined. See more in Co. 3. 17. 27 H. 8. 10.

If there be Lessee for life rendering Rent, and the Lessor grant and confirm the Land to the Lessee and his heirs; by this the Rent is determined. Co. super Lit. 278. 301. 307. 308.

If Lessee for life make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and after surrender; now he hath no remedy for his Rent. Justice Bridge.

If a Disfeisor charge the Land, and after the Disfeisee recover the Land in an Assise, the Rent is determined: But if one that hath Land rightfully charge the Land, and another that hath none recover it in a fained Action, contra. See Brownlows Rep. 2 par. 76.

If one make a Lease at Will rendring Rent, and after the Lessor determine the Will; now the Rent is determined also.

If two Jointenants be, and one of them grant a Rent-charge and die; now the Rent is determined, and the Survivor shall hold it discharged: But if the Survivor had accepted a Release of the Right of his Companion, contra. See more in Extinguishment. See Perk. fect. 392, 393, &c. Co. 6. 16.

If a Rent or an Annuity be granted in respect of an Office, and the Office be determined, the Rent shall determine also: Plow. 381.

If a Disfeisor grant a Rent-charge out of the Land, and after accepteth a Release of the Disfeisee; the Rent is not gone, no more then a Condition added to an Estate made by the Disfeisor, to whom the Disfeisee releaseth: But if the Disfeisee enter and make a Feoffment, contra. Co. super Lit. 277.

If one make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and after grant this Rent to J. S. and the Tenant attorn, and after the Lessee for years surrender; yet the Rent doth continue, and it seems he may have an Action of Debt to recover it: So if Lessee for years grant a Rent-charge, and after surrender his Estate, yet the Rent is not determined. Co. 8. 144. 20 Ed. 4. 13. Plow. 198.

If a Tenant in tail grant a Rent-charge out of his Land, and after suffer a Common-Recovery; this doth not avoid, but affirm and make good the Charge. See Womans Lawyer, f. 169. Co. 2.

If A. lease Copihold and Freehold Terre and License, rendring Rent, this is an entire Rent; and if he in Reversion grant the Reversion of both, that which doth pass by Surrender shall relate to make the entire Recovery to pass, and the Rents shall continue entire. Capels Case. See Extinguishment.

17. Who shall have a Rent, and the Arrears of it.

The Rent in most cases doth follow the Reversion, if there be any, as the Accellary doth the Principal. Co. 3. 55. Lit. fect. 390. Dyer 5.

If one seised in Fee of Land make a Lease of it rendring Rent, and say not to whom, and it be behind, the Executors shall have the Arrearages, but for the time to come it shall go with the Reversion. So if the Reservation had been to the Lessor, then the Executors should have had the Arrearages after his death, the Heir the Rent to come.

So if a Husband possessed of a Term of Land in the right of his Wife, lease part of the Land rendring Rent, and die; the Wife shall not have this Rent, but the Executor of the Husband. 26 H. 8. 7.

If one seised of Land in Fee, lease it for years, rendring Rent to him and his heirs at Michaelmas, or within twenty days after, and after Michaelmas before the twenty days ended the Lessor die or grant away the Reversion, and the Tenant attorn; in the first case the Heir, not the Executor shall have the Rent; in the last the Grantee shall have it. Dyer 287. 204. Co. 10.

If one seised in Fee of a House make a Lease thereof, and of certain Implements therein for years, rendring Rent to him, his Heirs and Assigns, and the Lessor die; now this Rent shall go to the Heir during the Lease, and not to the Executor. But if the Lessee had covenanted to pay so much money by the year to the Lessor, his Heirs and Assigns; in this case the Executors, not the Heir should have had this Sum during the Lease. Dyer 361. 275.

If a man seised of a Term for twenty years in the right of his wife, lease the same for ten years to a stranger rendring Rent, and the Rent is arrear, and the husband die; it seems the wife shall have this Rent, not the Executor. But the contrary adjudged, B.R. inter Bloxton & Heath. Perk. fect. 834.

If

If a woman and her second husband lease the Land she was endowed of by her first husband, rendering Rent, and the Rent be arrear, and she die; the second husband, not the heirs of the first husband shall have these Arrearages. See more for this in Chastols. Bro. Rent 10.

If one seised of Land ex parte matris, make a Feoffment in Fee rendering Rent to him and his heirs; this Rent shall go to the heirs ex parte matris: But if it had been a Lease for life, or Gift in tail, contra; there the Rent had gone to the heirs ex parte matris.

If A. Lessee for years die, and make B. his Executor, and B. lease part of the Term to C. rendering Rent, and die intestate, and D. gets Administration; D. shall not have the Rent, as it seems, because he comes in Paramount.

A. Tenant in tail discontinues to B. B. lease it to C. for years rendering Rent, Arrearages of Rent incur; A. dies, his Issue doth recover against B. in a Formedon, yet the Lessee shall pay the Arrearages to B. for B. shall pay Damages. Justice Houghton, Hil. 18 Jac. B. R. See more in Baron and Feme.

It is that Rent or Service which the Grantor in any Grant tieth the Grantee to perform to him, or the Lord Paramount; for which see Fais. And this is considerable at Common-Law, or by Custom of Manors; for which see Co. 10. 128. 11. 18. Plow. 134.

The word Render also is used in Fines, when the Fine is double, and containeth a Grant or Render back again of some Rent, Common, or other thing out of the Land it self to the Cognizor. Also there be certain things that lie in Prender, which may be taken by the Lord or his Officer when they chance, without any offer made by the Tenant; as the Ward of Lands, the Body of the Heir, and the like. And other things that lie in Render must be delivered or answered, as Rent, Reliefs, Herriots, and the like. And if a man make a Gift in tail without any Reservation, the Law makes a Reservation of the same Services to the Donor, by which he doth hold, Co. super Lis. f. 143. And upon a Lease for life or years, there the Law reserveth Fealty only, Perk. sect. 696.

If a Lease be made rendering Rent, without any more saying how long it shall continue, or to whom the Rent shall go; in this case the Rent shall continue as long as the Estate, and shall go to the Heir or him that hath the Reversion, Dyer 451. Kelw. 88:

If one by Deed indented demise to A. for life, with divers Remainders over, Reddend. inde to the Lessor and his heirs a Rent; this Reservation shall extend to all the Estate, if he in Remainder agree to it after the Estate for life. Co. 10. 107. Bro. Reserv. 7.

If one lease for a year, with these words, [And if the parties shall agree for a new Lease for longer time then for three years, Reddend. durante Termino praedicto;] this Reservation shall extend to the first year, as well as to the three last Co. 11. 106.

It is a greater Sum of money, or Penalty appointed to be paid in default of payment of a lesser, or of doing some other thing.

Note, that for the Arrearages of a Nomine pana there is no remedy given by the Statute of 32 H. 8. 37. and yet the same as an Incident to the Rent shall descend to the Heir: For the Grantee himself during his life, and his Executors or Administrators after his death may have an Action of Debt for it. Co. super Lis. 162.

It is the keeping back and stopping of something which is due, to satisfy another duty to the party which is to pay the first. As for example, where I have a Rent-charge issuing out of Land, and I disseise the Tenant of the Land, and recover the Land and Twenty pounds Damages against me; now I may recoup and keep back out of that Damages as much of the Rent as is due to me in the title: Or if there were a Rent-charge issuing out of the Land to another, and I had paid it, I shall be allowed it. *Co. 6. 31. Arrearages

what.

Arrearages are Duties behind and unpaid after the days and times in which they are due, as Rent or other thing reserved. And for these, if a man have any due to him of a Rent-service or a Rent-charge, and after he accept the Rent at one of the days whereon it ought to be paid, and give an Acquittance for it; by this he is barred of all the Arrearages, though the Acceptance and Release were made by the Husband, and the Rent were due to the Wife whiles she was sole: And no proof shall be admitted to the contrary. Plow. 133. Co. 3. 65: Dyer 171. Co. super Lit. 373.

Denier, what.
Note.

Denier is properly the denying of a thing due where it is required; and every Non-payment of a Rent upon demand, is a Denial in Law. And note that where-soever there is a lawful Demand of a Rent, and the same is not paid, whether the Tenant be present or absent, there is a Denial in Law, albeit there be no words of Denial. And where there is no Demand made, there is no Denial. Noy 34. Co. 8. 146. Co. super Lit. 153.

CHAP. CXLI.

Of Rescous, Reseifer, Restitution, and Retorn.

Sec. 1.
Rescous, what.

Rescous doth signifie an act of Resistance against lawful Authority. And it is either of a Distress, for which see in Chap. Or it is of the person of a man, and that is in divers cases: As where a Bailiff or other Officer doth arrest a man upon a Writ, and he himself doth violently get away, or some others do violently take him away and procure his escape from the Arrest; in this case when the Sheriff hath returned this Rescue, as he must upon the Fine.

Writ when the Retorn thereof is called for, then the parties that made the Rescue must answer to it; and if it be found against them, they will be fined for it, or the party grieved by it may have a Writ of Rescous against them.

Felony.

Or it is where an offender after Arrest is rescued by others. In this case if the Arrest be for Treason, the Rescue is Treason; if for Felony, the Rescue is Felony, and the Rescuer a Felon. And if the Sheriff arrest a man by a Capias for Felony, and he be rescued, it is Felony, although the party be innocent. And yet if the Sheriff or any other man arrest a man without authority of Law, in this case he may rescue himself, or another man may rescue him, and this is no offence. Co. super Lit. 161. F.N.B. 101.

Resumption,
what.

Reseifer was the taking again of Land into the Kings hand, whereof a general Livery or Ousterlemain was formerly sued amiss, and not according to Law. And Resumption was the taking again into the Kings hands such Lands, as before upon a false suggestion or other error he had delivered to the Heir, or granted to any man by his Letters-Patents.

Restitution,
what.

Restitution is the yielding up again of any thing unlawfully taken from another: And it is used for the putting of him in possession of Land, that is put out by a Forcible Entry: For which see Forcible Entry. It is also taken for a Writ by which the Goods of a man stollen from him are restored, upon the Statute of 21 H. 8. 1. And as to the Restitution of Goods, these things must be known.

Felon.

1. Where a man doth make fresh suit after the Felon, and overtake him with his Goods, then he may take them again. Or if he do not so, yet if he prosecute the Felon, and cause him to be indicted and found guilty, though he be not executed, cuted; in these cases he may have this Writ of Restitution from the Judge. But otherwise it is if the Thief be outlawed for the Felony, and where he is condemned or outlawed for another Felony, and where the Goods are come to the Crown as forfeit; for here the Owner is without remedy, Crompt. Jur. 98. Co. 3 par. Inst. 242, 243. Stat. 31 Eliz. ch. 11. 21 H. 8. 11. Addition to Just. Dodd. f. 41.

2. There was a Restitution to Bishops and Spiritual persons, of the Temporalities belonging to their Bishopricks and Spiritual Livings, now out of use. See Regist. 294.

3. If upon an Erroneous Judgment, and a Fieri facias, a mans Goods be sold, or a Term is sold, the Owner cannot have it again, but he shall be restored to the money made of it. But upon an Elegit, if a Term be extended and delivered to the Plaintiff, he shall be restored to the Term it self.

4. If one Lease or Goods be sold by the Sheriff upon a special Cap. utlagatum, and it be reversed for Error; in this case he shall be restored to the thing in kinde, Co. 8. 142, 143 6. 74, 75.

5. If a stolen Horse be well sold in a Fair, the right Owner or his Executors, if they come within six moneths after the stealing at the Parish or Corporation where he shall find him, and make proof by two sufficient Witnesses to the next Justice of Peace or Head-Officer of the Corporation, that the Horse was his, and repay the Buyer so much as he upon his own oath before such Justice will say he gave for him, he shall have him again. Stat. 31 Eliz. 12. See Co. 3. par. Inst. c. 108.

This word Retorn is taken three ways. Sometimes it is applied to the Case of a Replevin, where it is called a Retorno habendo. See it in Chap. Sometimes it is applied to the days of Apparence in every Term: And in this sense, Hilary-Term hath four; Easter-Term, five; Trinity-Term, four; and Michaelmas-Term, six Retorns. But it is taken in a third sense, and applied to Officers, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, and the like: And so it is nothing else but a Certificate made by an Officer to the Court from whence a Writ or a Warrant doth come, of what he hath done touching the serving of the same Writ or Warrant, Westm. 2. ch. 39. And as to it in this sense, these things are to be known.

1. The Writs that are to do things in Franchises, are to be directed to the Sheriff, and he must send to the Bailiff of the Franchise, who must make his Retorn to the Sheriff, and the Sheriff must retorn to the Court from whence the Writ came, 7 Ed. 4. 14. 12 Ed. 4. 15.

2. Most Original and Judicial Proceſs must be retorned into the Courts from whence they came, after they be executed. But for this see Co. 5. 90. 2 H. 6. 7. and see in Execution.

3. If the Officer do refuse or delay to make Retorn where it is necessary, in some cases the Court will fine him, and in some cases amerce him or set issues upon him, and in some cases send out Proceſs of Contempt against him to compel him to make his Retorn. Contempt.

4. And in all cases where Officers do make a Retorn, they must be sure to make a true, and see they do not make a false Retorn; for so the party hurt thereby may have an Action of the Case against him; for which see Action of the Case.

5. Also in their Retorns they must take care, especially in such Retorns as do stand for a kind of Declaration, and for an Accuſation, as in the Retorn of Rescous, and the like, they must be sure to make their Retorn certain and perfect, and they must put their names to them when they have done, Co. 11. 40. 4. 67. Plow. 63. 117. 129: Kelw. 165. Bro. Proceſs 14. 62. 64. 127, 128.

See for Retorn of Sheriffs and Bailiffs, Stat. Westm. 2. 39. 12 Ed. 2. 5. 2 Ed. 3. 5.

CHAP. CXLII.

Of a Reversion and Remainder.

Sec. 1.
1. Reversion,
what.

Reversion signifieth in our Law, a Possibility reserved to a mans self and his heirs to have again Lands or Tenements made conditionally over to others; upon the defect or failing of such Condition. Or as others define it, It is a certain Estate remaining in the Lessor or Donor, after the particular Estate conveyed or granted to another by Lease for years, life, or Gift in tail.

And the difference between a Remainder and a Reversion, is, That a Remainder is general, and may be to any man else as well as to him that doth grant or convey the Land, &c. for life or otherwise: A Reversion is to himself from whom the Conveyance of the Land &c. proceeded, and is commonly perpetual as to him and his heirs also; Also a Remainder is appointed over at the same time, but the Reversion is not so, Cal. lib. Inst. f. 22. 1 par. 142. Ney. 39.

2. The nature of it.

Aid.

Attornment.
Extinguishment

And this is of that nature, as it will be more easily transferred from one to another than an Estate in possession: And though the particular Estate, and this Estate in Reversion be divers and distinct, and therefore the Tenant may pray in aid of him in Reversion, yet they have relation one to other. And therefore if there be Lessee for life or years, and he in Reversion disseise his Lessee for life, or oust his Lessee for years of his Term, and make a Feoffment, and the Lessee enter on the Feoffee claiming his Estate only; this is a good Attornment. And if they come both together, the one will extinguish the other; and he that hath a Reversion cannot be ousted of it, unless the Tenant be ousted of his Estate and Possession also. As if one seised of a Manor, make a Gift in tail of part of it rendring Rent, and the Owner is disseised, and the Tenant in tail attorn to the Disseisee; yet the Disseisee shall have the Rent of the Tenant in tail, Co. 7. 97. Plow. 162.

If Tenant for life and he in Reversion join in a Lease for life, or Gift in tail by Deed, reserving a Rent; this shall endure to the Tenant for life only during his life, and after to him in Reversion, Co. upon Lit. f. 214.

3. What shall be said a good Reversion, and how.

If one seised in Fee, give to the use of himself for life, or the use of another for life, and after to the use of another in tail, and after to the use of the right heirs of the Donor; here the Donor hath a good Fee-simple expectant upon an Estate-tail as a Reversion, and not as a Remainder. So where no Estate for life is limited to the Father; for there the Law maketh an Estate for life, and the Heirs take by descent, Co. 2. 90. Dyer 7. Co. upon Lit. 21.

If one have a Lease of Land for twenty years, and he lease for two years rendring Rent, and after grant all his Estate and Term to another, and the Lessee for two years attorn; this is a good Grant of the Term, and the Grantee hath it by way of Reversion, Co. 4. 52.

Sec. 2.

But if one make a Feoffment in Fee upon Condition or Limitation, reserving the Reversion; this is no good Reversion, for all the Estate is gone by the Feoffment, and and a Reversion or Remainder, cannot be Expectant upon an Inheritance in Fee-simple, absolute or determinable. Co. 10. 95.

If a Reversion be granted of a Judicial Office, it is a void Grant, Officia Judicia Office non conceduntur antequam, vacent. Co. 11. 4.

All Partentees and Grantees of Reversion, shall have advantage of every Condition, Covenant, and Agreement, against Tenants for life or years, which have their Leases by Indentures.

So also the Lessees against the Grantees of Reversion. See Condition, Covenants. Co. 3. 62. 5. 56. 112. & 8. 95.

If the particular Tenant do commit Waste, he in Reversion may have an Action of Waste. See Waste, and 32 H. 8. 34. Plow. 175. Dyer 61. 131. 309. Wastm. 2. cap. 4. 5.

A Copiholder for life cannot by any Forfeiture destroy the Estate of him in Reversion. 39 H. 6.

Remainder (Quasi terra remanens.) it is a power or hope that one hath to enjoy Lands, Tenements, or Rents, after the Estate of another expired; or the residue of an Estate appointed over at the same time: As if one give or grant Lands or Tenements to one for life or years, the Remainder to another in Fee, Tail, life or years; and in this case the Remainder, and the particular Estate, do make (as it were) but one Estate, and therefore the Remainder is called the Residue of the Estate; and for this cause it is that that which is done by, or to one of them in many cases shall binde and advantage the other, as an Attornment or Release made to one of them, shall advantage the other. And this doth differ from a Reversion, for the Remainder is always a succeeding Estate, appointed and limited over the time, the precedent Estate was made, and the Reversion is an Estate left in the Giver, after the particular Estate for years, life, or intail, made by him. See more in Crompt. Jurisd. cap. 11. 62.

A Remainder is, and may be created sometimes by Fine, Deed, or other Conveyance, and sometimes by Will; or it may be without Deed by a Livery of Seison: And the most apt and proper word to create an Estate by way of Remainder, is the word Remainder it self; As a Lease to one for life or years, the Remainder, or [and that it shall remain to] another, and the like: But an Estate by way of Remainder may be made and limited by other words. And therefore it is agreed for Law, That if a Lease for years or life be made to B. the Reverter to C. or [and that after his death, the Lands Redibunt at C.] or [and after to C.] or [and after that the Land shall go to C.] or [and that the Land shall descend to C.] or [provided on condition, That if such a thing happen, C. shall have it,] or any other such like words. All these are good Remainders. See more in Broo. Domes & Remainder. Plow. 134. 9 Hen. 8. 2. Co. 3. 20. Plow. 159. 170. 542.

To make a good Remainder by the Rules of Law, these things are requisite.

1. There must be a particular Estate Precedent, as an Estate for life or years, or a Frank-tenement descendible, or special occupancy; and that must be created at the same time when the Remainder is made, as a foundation to support the Remainder, for neither without such a particular Estate: Nor yet upon a Fee-simple, Conditional, or limited, can a Remainder depend.

2. This particular Estate must continue until the Remainder happen, for if it do determine before the Remainder, it is void.

3. There must be a remnant of Estate in the Lessor, to grant more then the particular estate.

4. The Remedy of him in Reversion against him that hath the particular Estate for any wrong done to him, concerning the Land, Condition, Covenants, Waste.

5. Where the Tenant may hurt the Reversion, or not.

6. Remainder, what.

Attornment, Release.

7. How, and by what words a Remainder is and may be made.

8. What shall be said a good Remainder in his Original Creation, or not.

4. The

4. The Remainder must pass out of the Lessor or Donor presently, to him in Remainder, or else it must be put in custody of Law, and in Abeyance, else it is not good.

Señ. 4.

5. The Remainder must vest in Estate, either presently, during the particular Estate, or eo instanti when the particular Estate doth determine, and not before nor after; for if the particular Estate be ended, before it happen, the Remainder is void, or if it happen before the particular Estate be ended, the Remainder is void.

6. There must be a person capable at the time of the Creation of the Estate, or at least by common and ordinary possibility, one that may be capable by that time the Remainder happen.

7. If the Remainder be to come, and upon a possibility, it must be such a possibility as is near common and ordinary, as death, death without issue, Coverture, or the like; and not remote, as Entry into Religion, or the like, for then it is void. See the cases below, Plow. 136. Co. 10. 97. 320. Plow. 34, 35. 21 Hen. 7. 12. Co. 3. 20. Littl. 162. Co. 1. 66. Perk. 12. Dier 140. 18 Hen. 8. 4. Plow. 155.

In respect of the manner of Limitation.
By Deed.

If a Lease be made by Deed for life or years, the Remainder over, and Livery of Seisin be given, it seems this is a good Remainder, Quere. For it seems experience is otherwise. See the Addition to Justice Dodridge, f. 31.

So also is a Gift in Tail, with a Remainder over in Fee. Co. upon Littl. 143. Littl. sect. 60. 21 H. 6. 1.

If a Lease be made for life, with Condition, That if the Lessee for life die, that it shall remain over; this is a good Remainder. Plow. 25. 27 H. 8. 24.

If a Lease be made for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs, or primo genito filio de 7. S. this is a good Remainder. Co. 2. 51.

If a Lease be made for life, and after the Lessor confirm by his Deed, the Estate of the Tenant for Term of life, the Remainder over to another in Fee; this is a good Remainder. Co. upon Littl. 317.

If a Lease be made to 7. S. for life, provided, That if he marry the daughter of the Lessor, he shall have the Fee; this is a good Remainder, and the Fee will increase. Plow. 25.

If a Lease be made to A. for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of A. and the Heirs of that right Heir; this is a good Remainder, but A. may Bar his Heir of it. Co. 1. 66. Dyer 309.

Señ. 5.

If a Lease be made for life, the Remainder to 7. S. in Tail, and if 7. S. die without issue, or marry the Remainder to 7. B. this Remainder upon this Contingent to 7. B. is good. Dyer 304. Co. 2. 50.

If a Lease be made to 7. S. for life, and after the death of 7. D. the Remainder to another, this is a good Remainder, and will vest well enough, if 7. D. die, during the life of 7. S.

So if a Lease be made to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for life, and if B. die before A. then to remain to C. for life, this is a good Remainder, and will vest well enough if A. survive C.

So if one have a son of nine years of age, and make a Lease till his son come of full years, and after that it shall remain to another in Fee, if he live to his full age; this will be a good Remainder not else. Co. 3. 20.

If a Feoffment be to the use of an eldest son for sixty years, the Remainder to a younger son for life, the Remainder to the Heirs Males of the eldest; it seems this is a good Remainder. Trin. 7 Jac. By the Justices.

If a Lease be made of a House for life, the Remainder to W. for life; Si ipse inhabitaret super prædict' domum; and if W. happen to die before the first Tenant, then it shall remain to K. for life, this is a good Remainder. Plow. fol. 4.

If Lands be given to A. and B. so long as they live jointly together, the Remainder to the right Heirs of him that dieth first, this is a good Remainder. Co. on Littl. 378.

If one by Will devise his Land to A. B. for eight years, and after that the same shall remain to his Executors, until his son shall come of age of one and twenty years; and then that it shall remain to him and his Heirs for ever; this is a good Remainder to the son and his Heirs, but if it were by Deed, contra. Co. 3. 20. By Will.

If one devise to J. S. the Remainder to one in ventre sauncere; it seems this is a good Remainder. Chief Justice. Mich. 13 Jac. B. R. John Simpsons case.

If one by Deed, inrolled and indented, bargain and sell to one for life, the Remainder to another in Fee; this is a good Remainder by this means. Co. By Bargain and Sale.

1. 45.

If a Rent that is in esse, be granted with a Remainder over, this is a good Remainder. Plow. 35. In respect of the thing granted.

And so it seems of a Rent newly created, granted to one for life, the Remainder to another; if there be a clause for the Grantee to distrain for his life, and after for him in Remainder for his time. So if one that hath a Rent-charge in Fee, grant it for life to the Tenant of the Land in Fee with a Remainder over; this is a good Remainder. Finches Ley. 133.

If an Estate be made to J. S. and his Heirs, during the life of W. this is a good Estate precedent, on which to limit a Remainder; and therefore a Remainder limited upon this Estate, is good, as upon a Lease for life or years; for this in effect, is but a Lease for life. In respect of the precedent Estate.

So if two Joyntenants be, and one make a Lease for life, the Remainder to his Companion, it is a good Remainder. Co. upon Littl. fol. 191, 208. Durels case, Hil. 1 Jac.

And if I give a Remainder after my death, it is void. March. 51.

But if a Lease be by Deed for life or years to a Monk, with a Remainder over, the Remainder is void: But such a Remainder made by a Will, is good enough. Broo. Grant 133. For lack of a particular Estate.

If a Lease be by Deed for life, the Remainder to another, and the Lessee for life wave his Estate; now this Remainder is void: But if the Creation of the Estates were by Will, contra. Co. 1. 101. 37 H. 6 36. See 6.

If one by Deed convey Land in Fee-simple to one on Condition, That if he do not such a thing, or if such a thing happen, that the Land shall remain to other, this is a void Remainder. Co. 10. 97. Co. 3. 20. Plow. 34.

But if this were by Will, perhaps it might be a good Remainder for one Fee-simple cannot depend upon another. Co. lib. Instit. 1 part, fol. 18. Broo. Donee, fol. 45.

If one by Deed convey Land to one and his Heirs, so long as J. S. hath Heirs of his Body, and after that it shall remain to W. this Remainder is void: But perhaps if this were by Will, it might be good; but otherwise a Remainder will not depend upon a Fee-simple determinable. Co. 10. 97. Plow. 35.

If he in Reversion confirm to the Tenant for life, with a Remainder over, or the Heir endow his Mother with a Remainder over; these Remainders are void, for the particular Estate was not made at the same time: But if the Lease had been pur autre vie, and the confirmation for his own life, with a Remainder over, it had been good. Co. 3. 20. 1. 175. Doct. & Stud. fol. 20.

If one Lease for life, and that upon such a Contingent the Estate shall cease, and then after that it shall remain to another; this Remainder is void. Co. 3. 20. 21 H. 7. 21. Plow. 25. 155. For lack of continuance of particular Estate.

If one Lease for life, and that two days after the death of the Tenant for life, it shall remain over to another; this is a void Remainder. 21 H. 7. 22.

If a Lessor disseise his Tenant for life, and after make a new Lease to him for life, with a Remainder over, this Remainder is void, because the Lessee for life, is re-mitted, to his first Estate, and the last estate for life is gone. Plow. 25. Littl. Sect. Remitter. Remitter.

If one Lease to A. for one and twenty years, if B. live so long, and after the death death of B. that this shall remain over in Fee. So if a Lease be made for years, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. In these cases, if this be by Deed, the Remainders are void. Co. 3. 10.

So if one having issue a son not of age, makes a Lease till his son shall come to his full age, and after he shall so do, that it shall go to another in Fee, it seems this is void. Idem.

Sett. 7.
For want of a Remainder of Estate.

If a Tenant in Tail, Possession or Remainder, grant all his Estate to J. S. the Remainder to J. D. This Remainder is void, for he had nothing more in him to grant. So if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, and he in Remainder grant all his Estate and Right to one Habund. during the life of the first Tenant, and after to the use of the King; this is a void Remainder. Co. 2. 52. Co. 2. 50.

For that it doth not vest in time convenient.

If a Lease be made to two, the Remainder in Fee to one, after the death of the first, this is a void Remainder. Plow. 24. 18 H. 8. 4.

If a Lease be for life, the Remainder for life, and that after the death of the first Tenant for life, yet shall remain to a stranger in Fee; this second Remainder is void. Plow. 24.

If A. Lease to B. for the life of B. and after the death of A. to B. and his Heirs; if A. survive B. this Remainder is void. Co. 10. 85.

For that he in Remainder is not capable.

If a Lease be for years, or life, the Remainder to a Monk, or other dead person in Law; this Remainder is void, though he became after deraigned, and so is made capable, and this be before the Remainder happen. Co. 2. 50. Broo. Domer. fol. 37.

If a Lease be made to J. S. for life, the Remainder to the eldest Issue-male of B. and the Heirs-males of his Body, B. hath issue a Bastard son, this Remainder is not good to him; but after he hath been born a while, that by reputation he hath gotten the name of a son, a Remainder may be good to him so made as before. So if one make a Lease for life to R. the Remainder to the eldest Issue-male of R. to be begotten of the body of J. S. whether the same be legitimate or illegitimate, and they have issue a Bastard; this Bastard shall not have this Remainder. So a Remainder limited to the first reputed son, or Bastard, is not good in the case of Blodwell and Edwards. Hil. 38 Eliz. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 3.

If a Lease be made for life or years, the Remainder to the son of J. S. and he have no such son at that time, though he happen after to have such a son, yet this Remainder is void. Co. 2. 50. Dier 340. 10 Ed. 3. 46.

So if it be a Lease for years or life, the Remainder to a Corporation, and there is none of that name.

So if it be a Lease for life or years, the Remainder to such a one as the particular Tenant shall name, though he do after name one, yet the Remainder is void. Broo. Domer 37. Co. 2. 51. 9 H. 6. 24.

Sett. 8.

If a Lease be for life or years, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. and there is no such J. S. then in being; this is a void Remainder, though after such a one happen to be born, and to have an Heir, and J. S. die before the Remainder happen. So if there were such an J. S. if he were living. Co. 1. 58. 2 Hen. 7. 13. Co. upon Listl. 217.

If A. have issue a son and daughter, and a Lease for life be made, the Remainder to the Heirs Females of the body of A. dieth, the Heir Female in this case shall take nothing, for she is not Heir. See the English Lawyer, 14, 15. Co. upon Listl. fol. 2.

For lack of Certainty.

If a Lease be made to one, until he shall enter into Religion, the Remainder to H. this is a void Remainder. Co. 1. 51.

Also the cases in the last Division answer to this. See them there, and see more in Plowden, Colthirst's case.

If a Lease be made to A. for life, the Remainder to B. in Tail, the Remainder to C. in forma prædicta; this Remainder to C. is void: But if it had been to C. in eadem forma, it had been good. 14 Hen. 4. cap. 15. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 25.

If

If one give Lands to one in Tail, on Condition, that if he alien in Fee, that then his Estate shall cease, and the Lands shall remain to another; this is a void Remainder: And yet if one make a Lease for life to A. B. and C. And if B. survive C. then the Remainder to B. and his Heirs; this is a good Remainder on this Contingent. Littl. sect. 721. Co. upon Littl. 377.

For that it doth not pass out of the Grantor.

If a Lease be made for years, the Remainder to the right Heirs of J. S. (which J. S. is then living) this Remainder is void; but a Lease for life with such a Remainder over, is good. Plow. 83. Co. 1. 132, 136.

If one seised in Fee make a Lease for life, the Remainder to himself in tail; this is a void Remainder. Co. 3. 20. Broo. Refr. 14. So if one make a Gift in Tail or Lease for life, the Remainder to his own right Heirs; this Remainder is void, Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 23.

If a Lease be made to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for life, provided, That if the Lessor shall have any son, during his life, that shall live till his age of five years; that then the Estate limited to B. shall cease, and that it shall remain to another; this second Remainder upon a Contingent, is void: For a Remainder must come at first by Livery, and cannot commence after upon a Contingent. 36 Eliz. Co. B.

If an Estate be made at Will, with a Remainder over; this is not a good Remainder, for this Estate will not support a Remainder. Co. 8. 75.

If one have issue two sons A. and B. and dieth. B. hath two sons C. and D. and dieth. C. the eldest son hath Issue, and dieth, a Lease is made for life to A. the Remainder to the next of blood in Fee; now by this D. shall take, and not the issue of C. So if a Lease be made to a son, the Remainder to the next of Blood; it seems the Father, and not the Uncle, shall take by this. So if a man hath two sons, and the eldest have a son and die, and a Remainder is limited to the next of his Blood, the youngest shall take it. Co. lib. Inst. 1 part, fol. 10, 13.

Sect. 9.
Who shall take a Remainder:
The next of Blood.

If an Estate be to A. for life, the Remainder to the right heirs of A. or the right heirs of B. or the right heir, and heir of such right heir, or the like, and A. make a Feoffment in Fee: Now by this, the Remainder is destroyed for ever, and can never be revived. But if the Tenant for life had been disseised onely, and so died, the Remainder might have continued and vested well enough. Co. 1. 60. 136.

9. Where a Remainder shall be destroyed, and how.

If Lands be given or granted for life, the Remainder to the right heirs of W. and W. is attainted of Treason or Felony; now the heir shall never have this Remainder. But if the Limitation had been to the Heirs Males of W. contra. Co. 10. 102. fol. 2. Broo. cap. 302.

If a Disseisor make a Lease for life with a Remainder over, and after the Disseisee enter; now the Remainder is destroyed and gone for ever. Littl. sect. 521. Broo. cap. 302.

CHAP. CXLIII.

Of Rogues, Ryot, Rout, and unlawful Assembly.

SECT. I.
Rogues, what.

Or Rogues, these things are to be known.

1. That all persons above seven years old that go about begging or wandring idly, under any pretence whatsoever, are to be accounted Rogues : But none under seven years old, are to be reckoned Rogues.
2. All idle persons that go about, using unlawful arts, as Juglers, Fortune-tellers, &c. are accounted Rogues.
3. All Proctors, Patent gatherers, Collectors for Gaols, Prisons, or Hospitals, are so to be accounted ; but not Patent gatherers for fire.
4. All Fencers, Bear-wards, Common Players of Interludes, and Minstrels, that wander about, are so to be esteemed.
5. All Pedlers, Tinkers, Petty-Chapmen, and Glafs-men, wandring about, are so to be accounted.
6. All wandring persons, and common Laborers, being able to work, that loyter and refuse to work for reasonable wages, not having whereon to live.
7. Such as having License to beg in their own parish, beg elsewhere.
8. Those who wander in the habit of Egyptians, not being Felons, are also accounted Rogues. And Egyptians are a counterfeit kinde of Rogues, that being English or Welsh-people, accompany themselves together, disguising themselves in strange Robes, blacking their faces and bodies, and framing to themselves a strange Language, wander up and down, and under pretence of telling of Fortunes, curing diseases, and such like abuse the ignorant common people, by stealing all that is not to hot and to heavy for their carriage.
9. Soldiers and Marriners that beg (not being Felons) and especially where they counterfeit a Certificate of their Commanders, are such also.
10. And so are all these that follow. Persons that go to, or from Bath, and do not pursue their License.
11. A Rogue whipped that doth beg again, or not pursue the direction of his Testimonial.
12. He that doth go with a general Passport, and not from Parish to Parish.
13. He that goeth with his Passport by himself, without a guide : Nay, it is held, that all Passports are void, and that none can go with a Pass, but he will be a Rogue.
14. Servants that go out of their Parish without a Testimonial, or with a forged Testimonial.
15. Such as do run away, or threaten to run away from their charges, and to leave them to the Parish.
16. A Soldier or Mariner that hath a Pension, and shall beg or counterfeit a Certificate.
17. Those that are sick of the Plague, and wilfully go abroad in company contrary to the command of Officers ; all these are held to be Rogues. And if it be a Woman that hath a Husband, she may be a Rogue, as well as a Man : But if the Parents be not Rogues, the Children cannot be so, unless they beg, and become so.

What shall be done with them.

They that are such persons, are thus to be dealt with.

1. They are to be whipped openly, till their bodies be bloody.

2. They must have a Pass or Testimonial under the Hand and Seal of one Justice of Peace, or under the Hands and Seals of the Minister, Constable, and one of the Parish beside, appointing whither he shall go, which way, and in what time.

3. With this Pass he is to be carried and conveyed from Parish to Parish, by the Officers thereof, the next way to the Parish where he was born, if it may be known by by his confession, or otherwise; if not, then to the Parish where he last dwelt by the space of one year; or if neither can be known, then through the Parish, through which he last pass, without punishment: And the Officer of that Parish is to carry him to the House of Correction, or Common Gaol, where he is to be till he be placed, if able, in service, if otherwise, in an Alms-house. See 5 Eliz. 4. 42 Eliz. 2. 7 Jac. 4. 39 Eliz. 4. 27. 1 Jac. 7. 12 R. 2. 8. 23 Ed. 3. 7. 22 H. 8. 12. 1 Ed. 6. 2, 3. 3, 4 Ed. 3. 16. 33 Eliz. 7.

Resolution of the Judges upon the Statutes, upon which these things are to be known.

1. Generally the Wife and Children must go and be passed, with the Husband and Parents: And if a Wife become vagrant, she is to be sent to her Husband.

2. None may be forced to turn Rogue, so as to be sent, &c.

3. None but a Rogue is thus to be used; for if a Servant be out of his time, idle, or go into another Parish, and is there idle, he is not so to be handled, so neither is a traveller or passenger.

4. The child of a Woman, hanged for Felony, is to be sent to the place of its birth, and if that cannot be known, to the place where she was taken.

5. He that doth run or threaten to run from his charge, &c. He that being allowed by the Overseers to beg, doth exceed his License: Such as are infected with the Plague, and go abroad, and able idle persons that be poor, and refuse to work: All these upon their delivery, are not to be sent to their place of birth, but to their place of dwelling, if they have any, if not, where they last dwelt for a year. And the loyterer that will not work for the wages assessed, may be sent to the House of Correction.

6. He that is found in the privy search, may be punished by the Justice of Peace, or sent to the House of Correction, there to be set a work.

7. He is not to be relieved; for if any Officer do give him money, or an Ale-house-keeper lodge him, he forfeits ten shillings.

8. He that doth any thing in hinderance of the Execution of the Statute of 31 E. 3. 4. loseth five pound, and is to be bound to the Good-behavior.

He that doth appear to be dangerous to the people, that doth offer violence, or use any threatening speeches towards them, or will not leave his Roguish life, but being punished and sent home, doth rogue again; or when that doth affirm, he was born in such a place, or last dwelt a year in such a Town, and when he is come thither, it appears to be false; or such a one as is able to labor, and he doth threaten to run away, and leave his charge to the Parish, or doth so: All these are to be reputed Incorrigible Rogues, and are to be brought by the Constable to the next Justice, who may secure them. And two Justices may send them to Gaol, or the House of Correction, till the Quarter Sessions, and then they are to be branded on the left Shoulder with an hot Iron, &c. and from the Sessions to be sent to the place of their last habitation. 1 Jac. 7. 25. And he that falsifieth his birth, is to be sent away by the two next Justices to the Gaol or Bridewel. See more of this in my Justice of Peace.

Incorrigible Rogue, what.

What is to be
them.

Of a Ryot, Rout, and unlawful Assembly.

For the better understanding of the Law in this, these things are to be known.

1. That an unlawful Assembly, is where three or more do meet to do an unlawful act against the Peace, as to beat down a Pale, Ditch, House, or the like, or to do a lawful thing in an unlawful way or manner, as to distrain for his Rent with force and violence; but they do nothing. A Rout is when they go forward (after they are thus met) in a turbulent way to effect, but do not finish it. A Ryot is when they do not onely begin, and go on, but finish their work: So that in these offences there must be these things concurrant.

Unlawful Assembly, what.

Rout, what.

Ryot, what.

First, There must be three or more persons in the work, and this may be made up of Women and Children of any discretion: But this offence may be committed, though some of the company stand by, and do nothing; for if they stand by and countenance it, it is as bad, as if they did it: But if they come by chance, and intend nothing, contra.

What shall be said to be a Ryot, Rout, or Unlawful assembly, or not.

Xxxxx 2

Secondly,

Secondly, Their Assembly that they go with, or their intent must be evil, to do some hurt to men, or that which is theirs (which in some cases will be presumed,) as if the Lord with two or more persons, enter on his Copiholder with force, and cut and take his Corn, because he doth not pay him his Fine; this is a Ryot, and yet this Entry lawful: So if a man make resistance against the Sheriff, or any other in their doing of Justice. So if two or three make a forcible Entry; and this may be punished both ways. Meetings and Assemblies of any persons upon matches made for Cock-fighting, are unlawful Assemblies, and (it seems) may now be punished as a Ryot. Ord 31 March, 1654. And so (as it seems) are Meetings to set up May-Poles, especially when it is done with Guns and Drums. Ord. April, 1644. If many come together unarmed, they know not why themselves; this is no offence punishable, unless it can be known, they came to some evil intent, or they do miscarry themselves in some evil act.

If one ride or go abroad with his Servants armed, and in harness, and do no more; this is an Unlawful Assembly if not a Ryot: But if he intending a Ryot by an Entry in to Land, or the like, go with his ordinary servants, who know nothing, and they do enter, this is not a Ryot in the servants, if it be any in the Master. To go in a Privy Coat of Mail, is not this offence: And albeit one be threatened, and in danger of his life, and to defend himself he gathers aforce, and they ride about armed; this is a Ryot, yet if they did abide in his house, happily it may be justified. But if a man do onely go abroad with his household servants, which he hath commonly in his Family, though they be more then his ability to keep; this is no offence, and if they hap to make an affray, or do any unlawful thing; this will not amount to this offence, except it can appear they had an intent before to do it, but an affray onely.

The Watch in London on Midsummer night, Assemblies for merry Meetings onely; wherein there is no breach of the Peace, nor terror to the People, are not taken to be this offence: But take heed they be not such Meetings, as are forbidden, as May-Pole Meetings, Cock-fighting Matches, or at prohibited times, as upon the Lords day; for this may make it questionable. But if there happen to be an affray at such Meetings, it is not interpreted to be this offence: But the coming to such a Meeting with such an intent, or the taking of sides and parties at such a time, and in such a case especially, if after their parting they meet again, may amount to this offence.

If a Jury come to try an issue, and they happen to fall out and fight; this is not this offence, but an affray. The Sheriff, and other Officers of Justice, in going about with Troops and Arms, do not commit this offence.

Thirdly, The manner of their motion and action, (if the matter be good) must be bad, as when it is turbulent; so that by their coming together, they breed some apparent disturbance, either by word, gesture, or action; so that peaceable men are feared, or light men imboldened; for as a man may do an unlawful thing, so as it may not be a Ryot; so he may do a lawful thing, so as to make it a Ryot: And therefore if a convenient number onely, with convenient Tools, onely meet together to abate a Common Nufance; as where a man hath erected a Wearton, a Common River, where the people pass with their Boats, and they come to the place, and make a Trench in his ground that did it, the better to do it; this is no offence. But if in doing this, they come weaponed, or in the night, or use threatening speeches, that they will do it, if they die for it, or the like; this may make it a Ryot. So if I claim a peece of Timber, and another hath better right to it then I have, and I take a convenient number of persons, and peaceably remove it; this is no Ryot.

Fourthly, If a man hath Title to Corn, and he come with a great number to cut it with Sickles; this is no Ryot. But if he have no Title, it is otherwise. Hugh Rep 438.

Safe Conduct, Sequestration, Serjeant at Arms, Sea, Scold, and Cucking-Stool.

Safe Conduct is a Security given by the Lord Protector under the Broad-Seal to a stranger, for his quiet coming in, and passing out of the Realm. See 15 H.6.3. 18 H.6.8. 20 H.6.1. 13. 1 H.6.4. 9 H.3.20. 25 Ed.3.2. and others.

Safe Conduct,
what.

Sequestration is the separating of a thing in Controversie, from the possession of both those that contend for it; and it is either voluntary, which is that which is used and done by the consent of both parties, or necessary; which is that which the Judge of his Authority doth, whether the parties will or not. This word also was used for the act of the ordinary disposing the Goods and Chattels of one deceased, whose Estate no man will meddle with; as also the gathering of the Fruits of a Benefice, void to the use of the next Incumbent. Dyer 232, 252, 160, 271. 28 H. 8. 11. And those that do thus gather the things contended for, are called Sequestrators, and these have no interest; for they can bring no Action of Trespas. Stapletons case. Hil. 14 Jac. B. R.

Sequestro Habendo was a Judicial Writ, for the dissolving of a Sequestration made by the Bishop, at the Kings Commandment of the Fruits of a Benefice, thereby to compel the person to appear at the Sute of another (which is a course to be taken against a Parson, if he appear not to a Sute) and the Parson upon his Appearance, may have this Writ for the Release of the Sequestration. Regist. Judicial, fol. 36.

Sequestro Habendo, what.

The Commissioners for Approbation of Ministers may sequester the Profits of a Church-living, while it is in Sute, and supply the place therewith. See Ordinance, 20 March, 1653. So may the Commissioners of the Counties, for the casting out of Scandalous Ministers, or School-Masters, they may sequester the Profits of the Church. See Religion.

A Scold is a troublesome and angry Woman, who by her brauling and wrangling amongst her Neighbors, doth break the Publick Peace, and begot, cherish, and increase Publick Discord.

She is to be presented for it, by, and punished in the Leet, in the Cucking-stool, The punishment. Ducking-stool, or Tumbrel, an Engine appointed for that purpose, which is in the fashion of a Chair: And herein she is to sit, and to be let down in the water, overhead and ears, three or four times, so that no part of her shall be above water, diving or ducking down (though against their wills, as Ducks use to do under the water. Kitch Court-Leet. 13.

CHAP. CXLV.
Of Seals of the Lord Protector, Seizure of Goods, Sewers, and Seavorn.

Seiz. 1.
Seals, what.

The Lord Protector hath four Seals, which he doth use in his Gifts and Grants, and publick and private Acts.

The first is the Grand Seal, which is the chief; and of which, the Lord Chancellor, or Keeper, or Commissioners for the time being, have the Custody: And by this onely, the Lord Protector doth, and may Seal Writs, and grant or give away any Office, Manors, Lands, or Tenements; for by the Common Law, no Grant of any Land by the King, was available or pleadable, but under the Great Seal of England, of which onely, all the Courts are to take notice: And therefore though this Seal be chargeable, because every thing doth pass the Privy Signet, and Privy Seal, before it come to this, yet it is the safest and surest way to have any thing from the Lord Protector, under this Seal.

The second is the Privy or Petit Seal, and by this he doth, and may give Fees, grant Prohibitions against a man, that he shall not go out of the Realm, present to a Church, make an Attorney, discharge debts, or the like: But he cannot give or grant away Lands by this onely, nor Seal Writs with this.

The third is the Privy Signet, and by this also he may prohibit a man to go out of the Realm, present to a Church, or the like; but by this he cannot dispose his Treasure, or discharge debts, or the like.

The fourth is the Exchequer Seal, and by this the King did use to grant small matters, as Cottages, and the like, or to make a Lease of greater things for three lives onely; and the Law doth allow of such grants, because else no man would take them, the charge of the Grand Seal is so great: And how the Clerks that have the Custody of the Seals, must use them, and what Fees they must take for the same. See 28 Ed. 1. 5. Co. 2. 17. Bro. 310. Co. 111. 90. F.N.B. 20. 85. March. 55. p. 185. 4 H. 7. 14. 11 R. 2. 10. Art. super. ch. 9. Co. 2. 17. 27 H. 8. 11. 27. 1. 2 Ph. & An. 1.

For the Parliament Seal, see Act, 22 Jan. 1650.

For Sealing, and the Seals of other Mens Deeds, see Deed.

For Seavorn, see 34, 35 H. 8. 9.

As to the Seising of the Goods of a Delinquent, these things are to be known.

Seizure of Goods for offences.

1. No Goods can be taken, and seised to the use of the Lord Protector, before the same are forfeit.

2. The same cannot be Inventoried, and the Town charged therewith, before the owner be indicted of Record.

3. So there are two manner of Seisures, one verbal without taking, removing, or carrying away, onely to make an Inventory, and charge the Town. And the other an actual Seizure, and taking away the same.

4. Before Indictment, neither may be; and after Indictment, the first Seizure onely, and not the latter, may be made by any Officer of the King. Co. 3 part, Inst. cap. 103. See Crown, sect. 15.

Sewers

Sewar or Sewer hath two significations with us.

First, It did note him that came in before the Meat to the King, or great Mens Tables, and did place the Dishes. The other sense is, That it meaneth the Passages, Gutters, or Rivers, that carry Water into the Sea.

Commissioners for Sewers,
what.

And the Commissioners of Sewers, are those that are authorized under the Great Seal to over-look these, and to see Drains, and Ditches, well kept and maintained in the Marish, and Fen Countries, for the better conveyance of the Water into the Sea, and the preserving of the Grasse for the Food of Cattle.

And for these things, see 25 H. 8. 10. 13 Eliz. 9. 1 Mar. 11. 3 Ed. 6. 8. 7 Jac. 20. 6 H. 6. 5. 8 H. 6. 3. 18 H. 6. 10. 23 H. 6. 9. 12 Ed. 4. 6. 4 H. 7. 1. 6 H. 8. 10. 23 H. 8. 5. 3 Jac. 18. 14. And Mr. Robert Callis Reading.

CHAP. CXLVI.

Of the Service of God or Religion.

As touching the Service of God, or Religion, and the Laws of the Nation now in force, and of use relating therunto, these things are to be known.

Self. 1.
1. The great regard the Law hath of Religion.

1. That the Christian Religion contained in the Scriptures, is held forth and commended, as the Profession of these Nations; yet so, as no man is to be compelled to it by Penalties, or otherwise, then by the endeavor of sound Doctrine, and the examples of good Conversation, and by the encouragement of painful, and able Teachers for instructing of the people, and confutation of Error, and Heresie. Government, Art. 35, 36, 37.

2. That such as profess Faith in God by Jesus Christ, though differing in judgment from the Doctrine, Discipline, or Worship, publicly held forth, shall not be restrained, but protected in the Profession of the Faith, and Exercise of their Religion; so that they abuse not this liberty to the civil Injury of others, and to the actual Disturbance of the Publick Peace on their parts: Provided, That this liberty be not extended to Popery or Prelacy; nor to such as under the Profession of Christ, hold forth and practise licentiousness. Government, Art. 36, 37, 38.

3. That the Law hath a special regard of it, and therefore it holdeth forth these Religious Principles.

First, That Religion and Justice are the main Pillars of the Commonwealth.

Secondly, And that that is the best reason that makes for Religion. Co. 5. 14.

The main things the Law doth take care of, in order to the Advancement and Preservation of Religion, are Religious times or days; Religious things, as the holy Scriptures, holy Ordinances, or Worship, and an orderly performance of them; Religious places, and Religious Orders of Men, and Officers; such as are the Ministers of the Gospel, and as to them, their due qualification, election, disposal, and reward.

As touching Religious times, these things are to be known.

1. That by our Law, there is no day now ordinarily to be kept holy, but the Lords day. Act, 27 Sept. 1650. The Common and Statute Laws also, do highly advance the Authority, and severely injoin the Sanctification, and forbid all manner of profanation of this day. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 3. Plow. 265. Co. 9. 66. And therefore all works (but works of Piety, Charity, and other works of necessity) are forbidden on this day. And for this cause it is, That if any part of the proceedings of a Sute in a Court of Justice be entred and recorded, as done this day, it makes it all void; and all serving Warrants or Proces on this day, but in special cases, is void; and it is a rule, Dies dominicus non est juridicus. And if a Keepers Deer be stoln out of his Park, whiles he is at Church serving God (though this in another case be a forfeiture of his Office) yet in this case, and at this time, it is not at all penal to him. 5 Ed. 3. 27.

2. But this notwithstanding it is lawful, to pursue and arrest Felons, such as break the Peace, suppress uproars, quench fire in houses, visit sick people, and the like. Co. 5. 83. Plow. 265. See more of this in my Office of the Justice of Peace, Chapter of the Lords day.

3. But as to the other Holy days called Feast days, they are now totally abrogated, and at an end. Act, 27 Sept. 1650. But the fifth day of November, we are to meet once to thank God for our deliverance from the Gun-powder Treason. 3 Jac. 1.

As

3 Holy Scriptures;

As touching the holy Scriptures, these things are to be known:

1. The Maximes of the Law, concerning them, which are these.

First, That they are of Sovereign Authority. 34 H. 6. 40.

Secondly, That the Gospel of Jesus Christ is of infallible truth.

Thirdly, That any Statute, Prescription, Custom, or Canon against it, is void, and not to be admitted.

2. Blasphemy and Heresie.

Fourthly, To maintain and publish, by Preaching, Printing, Writing, or Teaching any thing contrary to them; As in the first place, That there is no God, that he is not present in all places, that he doth not know, and fore-know all things, that he is not Almighty, that he is not perfectly holy, that he is not eternal, or that either of the three persons of the Godhead is not God, or that these three are not one eternal God, or that Christ the Son, is not equal with the Father, or shall divide the Manhood of Christ, or that the Godhead, and Manhood of Christ, are several Natures, or deny that the Manhood of Christ, is without sin, or that Christ, died, rose again, or did not ascend into Heaven bodily, or that his death is not meritorious to Believers, the Resurrection, or day of Judgment, or that the Scriptures are not the Word of God, or that Christ is not the Son of God, and shall be obstinate herein, it is Felony. And in the second place, if any man affirm, as before, That all shall be saved, that man hath free-will, that God may be worshipped by Images, Purgatory, or that the Soul dieth, or sleepeth after death, that the Revelations or Workings of the Spirit, are a Rule of Faith, though against the Word, that Man is not to believe above Reason, that the Moral Law is at an end, that a Christian need not pray nor repent, that Baptizing of Infants is void and unlawful, or deny the Lords day, or Sacraments, or the Ministers and Magistrates office, or are re-baptised, and be obstinate herein, is to be imprisoned, till he give Sureties not to do so again. And in the third place, If any seriously maintain (he being not distracted) by Word or Writing, any Creature to be God, or to be equal with God in his Attributes, or that God dwells in the Creature, or shall deny the Holiness and Righteousness of God, or say, That wicked persons, wickedness, or wicked acts of Swearing, Drunkenness, or Leudness, are not unholy against Gods Word, or are approved by him, or that such things, or such persons therein, are like God, or shall say, That these acts of denying or blaspheming God, or the holiness or righteousness of God, or that the acts of cursing God, or swearing profanely or falsely by the Name of God, or the acts of Lying, Stealing, Coufening and Defrauding others, Sodomy, Drunkenness, Filthy, and Lascivious speaking, are not things in themselves shameful, wicked, and abominable in any person whatsoever to be practised, or shall affirm, That the acts of Adultery, Drunkenness, and the like open wickedness are in their own nature, as holy and righteous, as Prayer, Preaching, or giving thanks to God, or shall maintain, That whatever wickedness is acted by them, may be done without sin, or that such acts are acted by God, or the Majesty of God, or Eternity that is in them, that Heaven and Happiness is in the acting of these things, or that such men as act them, are most like to God or Eternity, which do commit the greatest sins with least remorse, or sense, or that there is no such thing really and truly, as sin, unrighteousness, or unholiness, but as a man or woman judgeth thereof, or that there is neither Heaven nor Hell, Salvation or Damnation, or that these are one and the same thing, &c. For the first offence herein, he is to be imprisoned in the Gaol, or Bridewel, three moneths without Bail; for the second offence, to be banished; and if he return, to suffer as a Felon. Ord. 2 May, 1648. 9 August, 1650. But now we must examine, how the punishment of men upon these, will stand with the Articles of the Government, which willet that men be, not punished for their opinions, that hold the Head-Faith in God by Jesus Christ and do not injury, nor make disturbance, nor hold forth, nor practise Popery, nor Licentiousness: It seems then necessary here to distinguish amongst these Opinions, and to make these onely punishable by these Acts and Ordinances, which deny the Godhead in his Essence, or Attributes, or Christ in his Nature, or Offices; of which sort, are most of the first, and last rank; and all those that tend to Licentiousness, as all those of the last rank. And those those that are Popish, as Freewill, Purgatory, Images, and the like; such as are against the Scripture, as that Revelations, and workings of the Spirit, are the Rule of Faith, though against the Word of God, and such like. And those that are against Magistracy and Ministry altogether; and such like, which are against Peace, and tend to Licentiousness; that these onely are to be punished, and that the lesser, and not dangerous opinions, denying Presbytery, Baptising of Infants, and affirming, That men must be re-baptised, and the like; that these are not punishable now by these Laws. Quere therefore well of this.

As touching the External worship of God, by preaching and hearing Gods Word, Prayer to, and praising of God, and the Administration of the Sacraments; these things are to be known.

5. The Preaching and Hearing of Gods Word. Prayer to, and praising of God, and Administration of the Sacraments.

1. The Law requireth that these things are to be done.

2. That they be solemnly, constantly, unanimously, purely, reverently, and devoutly done; and performed, both by the Minister and the people. See 5, 6 Ed. 6. 1.

3. 1 Eliz. 2. 23 Eliz. 1. 13 Eliz. 1. But most lively and excellently in the Preamble of the Statute of 5, 6 Ed. 6. 3. 1 Ed. 6. 1. 2, 3 Ed. 6. 1.

3. But men are not by Law bound now to, but forbidden the use of the Book of Common Prayer, nor are men now bound in the Worship of God, to the Superstitious rights thereby enjoined, and formerly used, as the Cross in Baptism, kneeling at the Lords Supper, and bowing at the name of Jesus; but these are sent after the abominable Males, to the place from whence they came. Att. 27 Sept. 1650. Ordinance, 3 Jan. 1644. Ord. 23 August, 1645.

6. Common Prayer Book.

But the External Form and Order, now by the Law set forth, and commended to the Nation for the doing of these Services of God, is the Directory; for this by a Law is to be put in execution for publick worship in all places. Ordinance, 23 Aug. 1645.

7. Directory.

And as to these things, this is here to be known:

1. He that useth, the Common Prayer-Book in publick or private, forfeits for the first offence five pound, for the second offence ten pound, for the third offence imprisonment for a year without Bail.

2. He that doth not use the Directory, or by writing, or otherwise doth deprave it, shall be fined by the Judges at their discretion, not under five pound, nor above fifty pound.

This Law seems now to be altered by the Government: Art. 36, 37, 38. And that no man now is to be molested about Forms of Religion; and that this is the sense of the present Authority, appears by the Ordinance for ejecting of Scandalous Ministers. 29 Aug. 1654.

As touching Religious places, such as are Churches and Chappels, which are greater and lesser Meeting-places of Parishes onely, these things are to be known.

8. Churches.

1. That the Law doth not own them, as places capable of Holiness by any Consecration, but as convenient places for the meeting of the people, and doth therefore take care for the keeping of them repaired. For which see my Book of the Office of Church-wardens, and Att. 9 Feb. 1647.

2. The Law doth take order for keeping of the Congregations there about Gods Worship in Peace, without disturbance; and therefore any disturbance done there, is very penal. 2, 3 Ed. 6. 1. 1 Eliz. 2. 1 Mary 3. And all fighting, quarrelling, or striking there, or in the Church-yard, is to be severely punished. 5, 6 Ed. 6. chap. 4.

3. For the better securing hereof, the Church-yard is also to be defended in peace. Church-yard. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 4. It is therefore Ordered, That if any do maliciously strike another, or draw his Weapon of purpose to strike another in any Church, or Church-yard, he is to have one of his Ears cut off. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 4.

4. But the Parishioners are not now bound as heretofore, to come to their own Assemblies, or Parish, or to any Parish Church to serve God; but so as they serve him, they may joyn themselves unto what Assembly, and in what place they please. Att. 27 Sept. 1650.

Going to Church.

Abbeys, Monasteries, Chantries.

9. Religious Persons, or Clergy.

5. As for other places called heretofore Religious Houses, such as were Abbeyes, Priorities, Monasteries, Chantries, being places of Superstitious Chanting or Singing, and such like Houses, they are abolished, and gone, and Conventual Cathedral Churches; for Bishops, Deans, and such like, are going after them, but it is Parish Churches and Chappels the Law takes care of. See Free Chappel.

As touching Religious Persons, that is Ministers, and Preachers of the Gospel; sometimes called in our Law by the name of Religious Men; sometimes by the name of Clergy-men, sometimes Ecclesiastical Persons, sometimes Spiritual Persons, sometimes (but improperly the Church) the Church, and sometimes Parsons, Curates, and Vicars.

As to these and the Law concerning them, in order to the preservation of Religion; these things are to be known.

Sec. 3.

1. That they are to be well qualified for, and orderly called and admitted into the office, and then being called to any People or Parish, their duty is to look to, and watch for the Souls of these people, to dispence the Bread of Life by Preaching, to pray for the people, to use, and shew Charity toward the poor, and Hospitality towards all. And that this may be the better done, the Law doth require they should be resident, and will not allow them to be absent from their charges, but by some special Dispensation: And for this, they are to have the Profits of the Church and Church-hay, the Glebe-land, and the Tithes of all the yearly increase within the Parish; also the Oblations, Obventions, and Mortuaries, usually paid in the place; and all Encouragements: And that the present maintenance by Tithes, be not taken away, nor impeached, until a better provision can be made. Government, Art. 35. And in respect of their continual attendance upon their sacred Function, they are freed from all personal charges that may hinder them in their Calling; for such shall not be chosen, Bailiffs, Beadles, Reeves, or other such like Officers, nor be compelled to come to the Sheriffs Leet; and they may have an Action of Trespass for any Trespass in the Trees, or Grass of the Glebe, or Church-hay. They may make any Lease of their Tithes, or their Glebe, during the time they are Parsons, but they can do no Act to bar their Successors now, unless it be within the Statutes of Ecclesiastical persons: For they have not the meet Right of the Land in them, in Right of their Churches, but the Fee-simple is in Abeyance; and therefore they cannot discontinue, but every Act they do will be avoided, when they cease to be Incumbents, except such as be done by consent of Patron and Ordinary, which will binde for ever, if none of the Statutes touching Ecclesiastical persons hinder.

But for the particular opening of these things, and the setting forth the Law herein, as it stands at this day, we shall speak something to these two things.

First, What he is to be, and do.

Secondly, What he is to have and receive.

Qualifications of Ministers.

For the first of these. 1. The Law requires that such as enter into the Office of a Preacher of the Gospel, be duly qualified; that he be unblameable in conversation, sound in opinion, able to teach; and for this, the Bishop was carefully to examine him, and by information from others, to satisfy himself herein: And now there are called Commissioners specially appointed to try, examine, and admit such as are presented to any place.

And as touching them, and this thing, know these things.

Institution and Induction.

1. That none can come into any Benefice, or Lecture now, but he must pass through this Examination, and have their Approbation under the Seal of their Office.

2. This being done, it will be as much, and as good, as Institution and Induction.

3. These Commissioners before they Approve any, must have a Certificate under the hands of three persons, at least; whereof one a Minister of known Godliness and Integrity of the holy and good conversation of the Man.

Augmentation.

4. All persons that will receive any Augmentation, by Parliament Provision, must be thus approved and allowed. Ord. 28 March, 1653.

2. He ought to be admitted and allowed. He was therefore to be called, approved, and allowed by a Bishop, or by one of the Universities; and without this, no man was to have taken upon him the Office. 13 Eliz. 12. 31 Eliz. 26.

3. And

3. And he that is to come to a Benefice at this day, must have some kinde of Presentation. Presentation to it, such as the time doth yield, -if it be from the Lord Protector, or the Keepers of the Great Seal, by the Great Seal, from any other he must have a Gift or Collation.

But here by the way for a third thing, it must be noted, That the Presentation or Collation must be free, and the Incumbent must come in without corruption: And it is therefore provided by the 13 Eliz. 12. That if any sell any Spiritual Living; as if a Patron take money or other Reward, to present his Clerk or a Clergyman to any Parsonage, or Vicarage, or take upon him the Parson or Vicar, or promise for any Reward, to resign again upon request all such Presentations, and the Institutions and Inductions thereupon gotten, by this means are void; and the party giving and taking, do each of them forfeit the double value of the Church for one year; and the party that doth give, is hereby made incapable of that Church for ever. 31 Eliz. 6.

Wherein these things are further to be known.

1. That if a man give the reward himself, he is said to be Simoniacus, but if it be given by another without his Privy, he is said to be Simoniace promotor, and in both cases it is alike dangerous and penal. Co. on Littl. 120. 10. Simony.

2. A. (the Church being void) Contracts Simoniacally with the Patron to have the Presentation, and upon this corrupt Agreement he presents R. a man ignorant of this Agreement; in this case he was removed. Calveris case in the Exchequer. Brownl. Rep. 2 part, 164.

3. This Law of Simony doth hold as well where the Patron that doth present is an usurper, as otherwise; but in this case the Rightful Patron, and not the Lord Protector, shall have the next Presentation, but otherwise it is where the Rightful Patron doth make such a corrupt Contract. Co. upon Littl. 120. For in this case, albeit he that comes in upon this corrupt Contract, be admitted, and die in the Parsonage, yet the Lord Protector hath not lost his turn, but shall present; but if he had resigned, or made Cession, and then another had been presented, and then the first Clerk had died, then the Lord Protector had lost his Presentment. Brownl. Rep. 1 part, 164. 32. 4.

4. But to sell or buy for ones self, or for some other, the next avoidance of a Benefice for Reward, it seems is not Simony. M. 8 Jac. B.R. And yet see Winchcombs case, 14 Jac. C.B. The case was A. a Clerk, when the Church was full, agreed with the Patron to give him ninety eight pounds when the Church should become void, the then Incumbent being a very old and sickly man; and agreed that the Patron should grant the Avoidance to a Friend of the Clerks, who did present him; this was held a Simonical Contract. See this in Brownl. Rep. 1 part, 7.

A Contract by one with the Patrons Brother (the Church being then full) that if he could procure three Grants of the next Avoidance to be surrendered, and the Patron to present him, when it became void, he would make him a Lease of Parcel of the Tithes of the Rectory, and he during the life of the Incumbent got the Grants to be surrendered, and all the rest was done, and it was agreed to be void.

5. And in this case the Church will be void without Deprivation or Sentence Declaratory. March 84 pl. 139.

6. An Incumbent presented by Simony, cannot sue a Parishioner for Tithes. March. 84 pl. 139. Co. 3 part, Inst. 71.

But the Law at this day doth not require, that he should reade and subscribe the Articles of Religion, nor take the Oath of Supremacy, nor observe any of the Orders, Forms, or Ceremonies contained in the Book of Common Prayer, or in the Canons, nor that he should be instituted, and inducted into a Benefice, when he is to receive it, but it is sufficient that the same be given to, or conferred upon him. And now by the new Ordinance, 20 March. 1653. it is declared, That all those that come into any Benefice, according to the Rules thereof, shall be as fully intitled to the same, as if they had been instituted, and inducted into it. And by another new Ordinance, 30 August. 1654. it is provided, That where one was formerly evicted or sequestred, and yet he keeps in the place, and none was put in by the 30 of August. 1654. The Patron may present within four moneths after the 28 of August. 1654. to the Commissioners for Approbation, and they may admit him. And in places of all such Ministers, as the Commissioners of the Counties shall eject for Scandal, &c. The Patron must present within four moneths after the ejection, to the Commissioners for Approbation. And if he that is ejected die, or resign, these Commissioners for Approbation, may give the Minister Admission; and this is as good as Institution and Induction, in all these cases.

11. Non-Residence, what it is.

Plurality, what.

Session, what.

Chaplain, who.

Where a Minister may be Non-Resident, and have Plurality of Livings, or not.

20. Being in the Office, and a Charge in his Hands, he ought then to be resident, and abiding amongst his people, and there to watch over, and look to their Souls, and there to be an example of Piety, Sobriety, Honesty, Charity, and Hospitality to them; and it is forbidden him to be non-resident. And therefore Plurality (that is) that such a man should have two or more Spiritual Livings, or Promotions, is generally forbidden to such a man; and the consequence of it, is this. That by the taking of the second, the first doth become void, and he loseth the first by Session: And this is against the ancient Common Law it self; and it is now forbidden by divers Statutes, except onely in some special cases, to some great mens Chaplains (that is) such Ministers as depend upon them for the Service of God in their Houses, where commonly they have a Chappel. But if any such person having a Benefice (be it Parsonage or Vicarage) shall not be Resident upon it, but wilfully absent himself by the space of one moneth for a time, or two moneths; at several times in one year, he loseth ten pound by the Statute of 21 H 8. 13. And no Dispensation will serve in this case: But such persons as were in the Kings service beyond the Sea, during that time onely. Schollars under forty years old, studying at the University, that have Office, or do Exercise there, and are in the University; and present at their House Exercises, and such as did, Exercises themselves, the Chaplains of the King, and divers other great persons might have been Non-resident, so long as they were attending upon such great men in their Houses; so such as are imprisoned, or sick, or attending upon, and by order of any Court, are excused of their Residence. And if there be a Parsonage House, some hold that he must be Resident upon it; but if not, he may reside elsewhere in the place. Co. 4. 79. 118. 9. F. N. B. 34. Articuli Cler. 8, 9. 14 H 8. 17. Co. 6. 21. 28 H 8. 23. 16 H 8. 14. 25 H 8. 16. 33 H 8. 28.

If any man that hath a Benefice, with cure of Souls, of the yearly value of eight pound, or above, do accept of, and shall be duly put into another Benefice with cure of Souls, and be in possession thereof; the first shall be adjudged void, and the Patron may present again, and no Dispensation can be in this case.

2. He is amongst his people, to teach nothing but sound doctrine, and purely to administer the holy Sacraments, he is to take care of the holy Worship of God: For this see Co. 11. 70. 6. 21. 13 Eliz. 12. 2, 3 Ed. 6. 1. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 6.

3. He is to Preach once on the fifth of November. 3 Jac. 1.

Common Prayer.
Ceremonies.

4. But he is not bound now to, but forbidden the use of the Common Prayer-Book; nor is he bound now to any Ceremonies therein, nor any thing enjoyned concerning the same, or by the Bishops Canons, or touching the reading of the Articles of Religion, or the Statute of 5, 6 Ed. 6. to perswade men to come to their Parish Church; for these Laws are abrogated. Ordinance, 5 March, 1653. Act, 27 Sept. 1650. Ord. 3 Jan. 1644.

12. Dilapidations.

5. He is to take care to keep up, and maintain in good repair the Houses, and Buildings standing upon, and belonging to his Benefice. For if there be any Dilapidations (that is) wilful, or negligent ruine, or decay therein, the Executors, or Administrators of the persons, in whose time the same was done or suffered, must make amends to him that doth succeed in the same Spiritual Living: And he might have sued for the same in the Spiritual Court. And if the offender in this case had made a Deed of Gift, to defeat the Successor of the effect of his Sute, it had been void.

void. 13 Eliz. 10. The Spi ritual Court being now gone, we know not what remedy may be had in this case, unless the Chancery will give relief herein: But by the new Ordinance, 29 August. 1654.

The Ministers put into places in the room of others, put out for scandal, &c. are to look to the repair of the Houses, and be forced by Justices of the Peace thereto. Also the Sequestrators, while they have it in their hands, must repair out of the profits.

He is to take care to discharge the first-fruits, and tenths, that the charge thereof be not left upon his Successor.

The first-fruits are the profits of every Spiritual Living for one year. And this had now been given to the Lord Protector; the ordering of which, is in the Exchequer: For every one that is chosen, appointed, and presented to any Parsonage, or Vicarage, which doth exceed the value of eight Marks, must before he intermeddle with the profits thereof, pay unto or agree, and give security for to the Lord Protector, or such as he doth appoint to take the same, the first-fruits of their Spiritual Promotion, under pain to forfeit the double value thereof: And if the Benefice be under eight Marks in value, then he is to give security to pay the same first-fruits three years after his Induction thereunto. 27 Hen 8. 7. 2, 3 Edw 6. 20. 7 Edw 6. 4. 1 Eliz. 4. 34. 35 H 8. 17. 26 H 8. 45. March. 5. 10. 1 Eliz 4. But it seems all this now is set apart for the maintenance of the Ministry. See At, 8 June. 1649.

13. First-fruits and Annates, what.

6. So also he is to discharge the Tenths; the Tenths are a yearly portion of tribute, to the value of the tenth part of all the profits appertaining to a Spiritual Living; and this is now reduced to a certainty and known. And this every Parson and Vicar must have paid before the first of April, yearly, to the use of the Lord Protector. It was wont to be paid to the Bishop, and by him into the Exchequer, but now it is paid immediately into the Exchequer; and by that Court the same is forced in. 26 H 8. 3. 32 H 8. 45. March. 5. 1 Eliz 4. But this also, it seems, is now employed as the first-fruits are. At, 8 June, 1649. and Ord. 2 September, 1654.

14. Tenths, what.

7. He may not meddle with any Temporal Jurisdiction, or Authority to the Exercise, whereof he is disabled. 16, 17 Car. 17. And he is forbidden the taking of Farms, or taking of Parsonages or Vicarages, and the involving of himself in secular affairs. See for this, 21 H 8. 13. Dyer 358.

8. He is forbidden by Law to make a destruction upon the Benefice, or to lessen the Revenue, and therefore he can lay no charge, nor make any Estate upon any part of it, for longer time, than his own life, except onely of such Lands as have been usually let, which he may let for three lives, or one and twenty years. 13 Eliz. 1. 14 Eliz. 11. 18 Eliz. 10. And no Lease he can make of such a Benefice with Cure, is good longer then he is ordinarily Resident, and serving the Cure there without absence, above fourscore days in one year. 13 Eliz. 20. 18 Eliz. 10. 14 Eliz. 11. And yet he that is allowed to have two Benefices, may let one of them to his Curate that shall serve that Cure. But that Lease will be good onely, so long as the Curate shall be Resident there, without forty days absence in one year. 13 Eliz. 20. 18 Eliz. 10. 4 Eliz. 11.

9. He is as another man to pay his share of Rates to the Poor, Church, and Highways.

Rates.

And now for the second thing, what these persons are to have and receive, these things are to be known.

They have to their persons divers privileges above other men: For first, such a man cannot be arrested upon a Statute-merchant, or Staple, and if he be, he may have a Writ called Quod Clericus captus & deliberetur; nor may he be arrested for any cause but Felony, whilest he is bona fide in the doing of his Office, and about his Divine Function: And if therefore he be taken out of the Pulpit, whilest he is Preaching or Praying, some have said, That for this he may have an Action of False imprisonment, against them that do it: But whether it be so, or no, this is certain, That for this, the persons that do it, may be indicted and fined. And for arresting arresting a Minister in the going to, or coming from Church, about the Service of God, the Bailiffs and those that have any hand in it, may be bound to the Good-behavior. But if the Minister shall keep himself in the Church, of purpose to prevent such Arrests, this privilege will not hold. Regist. Orig. 147. 50 Edw. 3. 5. 1 R.2. 15.

Quod Clerici non elegantur in officio, what.

2. He is to be freed, and exempt from, and not bound to serve in any office that may dislurb, or distract him in his calling: And therefore he is not bound to serve the office of Constable, Tithingman, Bailiff, Beadle, Church-warden, Overseer of the Poor, or the like office. Albeit he hath secular Lands, besides his Spiritual Promotion, and in respect thereof chargeable, if he were another man; yet he is exempt for this also. And if any such office be put upon him, he may be relieved by a Writ called Quod Clerici non elegantur in officio, &c. And by this Writ he may be discharged. F.N.B. 177.

3. He is not bound to appear, or do service in a Leet, or Law day, as other men are, Marib cap. 10. And to discharge them if they were, they had a Writ to relieve them F.N.B. 160.

4. They ought not in person to serve in the Wars; also they ought to be quit, and discharged of Tolls, and Customs, Average, Pontage, Paviage, and the like, for their Ecclesiastical Goods: And if they had been molested therefore, they might have had Remedy by a Writ, provided for the purpose. But this and many others, are gone and lost. Co. 2 part, Inst. 4. 121.

Self. 6:

*Quod persona nec Prebendarii
distringantur,
&c. what.*

5. And as they have privileges for their persons, so for their possessions of Lands and Goods; therefore it is provided, That no Distress be taken in the Ancient Fees, or Lands belonging to the Church; as in the Glebe of a Parson, or the like, that their Goods be not distrained for a fifteenth, due from the whole Parish, if they be, he may be relieved by a Writ called Quod persona nec Prebendarii distringantur, &c. That neither themselves, nor their Farmers, or Tenants, were to be forced by Purveyors for the Kings use. See for this 9 Ed.2. 9. F.N.B. 173, 176. Crompt. Jur. 38.

6. They are to have a competency of maintenance: And for this, the Law gives them these things.

First, They are to have the Houses belonging to the Minister, the Glebe, the Tithes, the Profits of the Churchyard, the Oblations, Obventions, and Mortuaries thereunto belonging: But for all this see my Book of Tithes, and the Profits sequestered and received, during the Vacation, are to be paid unto the Parson succeeding, save onely the charge of taking in, &c. And for serving the Cure in that time. 21 H.8. 11.

*Emblements;
Will.
Leases.*

Secondly. They are to have the Corn growing upon the Glebe when they die, and may by their Will give it to whom they will. Idem.

Thirdly, They may make any Lease of, or charge upon their Benefice, for their own lives, and Leases for three lives, and one and twenty years of the Land that hath been usually so let. 13 Eliz. 10.

14. Augmentations.

Fourthly, There are now divers Additional helps for their maintenance by way of Augmentation.

As touching which, these things are to be known.

1. There is a great Revenue given, to be employed to this purpose, and Commissioners specially appointed to take and receive accompt thereof, and to look to the improvement thereof. See the Acts and Ordinances, 8 June, 1649. 5 April, 1650. 2 Sept. 1654.

2. These Laws judg an hundred pound a year competent for Ministers, save onely in Towns, and Cities.

3. These Commissioners are to overlook all the Augmentations, and by, and with the Approbation of the Lord Protector, and his Council, they may make, adde to, and take from what they please.

16. Union and Division of Parishes and Churches.

4. For their help of maintenance, they may divide or unite Churches.

As touching which, take these things.

1. The Commissioners may procure from the Chancery, the Return of all the former former Commissions executed, and have new Commissions where they please, for the discovery of the value of Parsonages and Vicarages, with, or without Cure of Souls, the Incumbents, Scituation of the Churches, &c.

2. When they are informed of the case, by and with the Approbation of the Lord Protector and his Council, out of Parliament time, they may unite two, or more Churches together; and all the profits thereof, if one of them be not maintained at the charge of the Parishioners, and appoint which Church shall be the Meeting-place, and then they must be taxed altogether to repair, but other taxes shall go as before; have their Church-wardens as formerly, the Patrons shall present by turn, as the Commissioners shall set down.

3. In this case, where they see good, they may pull down one of the Churches, and keep the materials for publick use.

4. They may also, by and with the Approbation aforesaid, sever and divide Parishes, and fix the maintenance out of the profits of the Church where they think fit. See the Ordinances at large for these things.

5. And now in the last place, if being in this office he be found insufficient, or ill-affected, or be scandalous there for his life or doctrine, he is to be ejected by the Ordinance. 29 Aug. 1654.

16. Scandalous and ill affected Ministers and School-Masters.

And for this, these things are to be known.

1. There are Commissioners of every County to put in execution this Ordinance.

2. Any five of these Commissioners may Convent before them, any scandalous, ignorant, negligent, insufficient, and disaffected Minister, Preacher, School-master, and examine witnesses against, and put him out of his place, if they finde him guilty of matter of scandal, or ill-affection to the Government, in any of the particulars here mentioned.

3. The things for which he is to be put out, are;

First, If he hath been formerly ejected or sequestred, and yet keeps in his place.

Secondly, If he hath held and maintained any of the blasphemous Opinions of the third and last rank before-named, at Self. 1. Or have held, taught, and maintained the Popes Supremacy, Transubstantiation, Purgatory, Worshipping of Images, That the consecrated Host, Crucifixes, or Images, are to be worshipped; that Salvation may be merited by Works, or be found guilty of profane Swearing or Cursing. Perjury or Subornation of Perjury, Adultery, Fornication, Drunkenness, common haunting of Taverns or Ale-houses, frequent Quarrelling or Fighting, frequent playing at Cards or Dice, profaning of the Sabbath-day, or allow the same in their Families, or countenance it in their Parishes, or Schollars, or have publicly and frequently read, and used the Book of Common Prayer, since 1 Jan. 1653. Or have been publicly profane Scoffers at, or Revilers of the strict Profession, and Professors of Religion, or Godliness, or do encourage or countenance by word, or practise Whiscon-Ales, Wakes, Morrice-Dances, May-poles, Stage-plays, or such like Licentious practises, or have by Writing, Preaching, or otherwise declared their disaffection to the present Government, or are negligent, non-resident, and careless of Praying, Preaching, &c. or of their Schollars, if they are School-masters, having no good excuse for it.

Thirdly, If he be put out for insufficiency, it must be with consent, declared of five Ministers also.

Fourthly, Where they put out a School-master, they may put in another, as long as he lives, as oft as the place shall be void.

Fifthly, They may sequester the Profits of the Livings, out of which they put out any Minister in the hands of some of the Parish, to provide for the place, repair the houses, and to keep for the next Incumbent.

Sixthly, If the party put out, be gone, they may allow his Wife and Children a fifth part, and force payment thereof by Sequestration.

Seventhly, None may keep School in the place where he was put out, under pain of ten shillings a day. See the Ordinance of the second of September, 1654. at large.

And now, as touching all the rest of the rabble of the Men, and Orders formerly called Religious, of the Regular and Secular Clergy, such as were the Abbots, Priors, Monks, Fryers, Canons, Nuns, Arch-Bishops, Bishops, Deans, Arch-Deacons, Prebends, and the like: These are abolished, and gone, and not owned by our Law at this day. Ord. 9 Octob. 1646.

We are silent therefore about Metropolitans, Bishops, Suffragans, and say nothing of Conge de Eslier, Consecration, Regio Assensu, and such like abolished things. See Name.

The Convocation-house was the House wherein the whole Clergy did assemble to consult of Matters Ecclesiastical, in time of Parliament: It did consist of two Houses, an upper house, where the Arch-Bishops and Bishops alone did sit, and a lower house, where all the rest of the Clergy did sit: And the lower house was made of Clergy-men, chosen for Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, and for the Common Clergy of every Diocese, which were called Proctors of the Clergy, like to the Members of the House of Commons: And in both these Houses they had one they called a Prolocutor, like to the Speaker in the Parliament. But these things are now gone, and abolished; and yet it seems the Provincial or Sinodial Canons and Constitutions formerly made by the Clergy, in the Convocation-house, or in their other Convocations, that are not contrary to the Royal Prerogative, or the Laws and Customs of the Realm, are still in force, if there were any way to put them in execution, as there is not; for the Bishops and their Courts are gone, and therefore the Canons can be of no force at this day. 25 Hen. 8. 19. 27 Hen. 8. 15. 3 Edw. 6. cap. 17.

As to Discipline by Church-censures; this is now left to the Regular, and orderly Churches to be used and ordered amongst themselves in Christ, and his Gospels way.

But for National Discipline by way of Excommunication, Suspension, and the like, there can be none such used in these days, Bishops being gone; for there is no Law, nor way for it.

CHAP. CXLVII:

Of Shoo-makers, Tanners, Curriers, and Skinners.

None may use the Trade of Tanner, the same time, and so long as he doth use the Trade of a Butcher, under pain to forfeit six shillings and eight pence, for every day he shall use both these occupations together. 1 Jac. 22.

Sec. 1.
Shoo-makers,
Tanners, Curriers.

None may use the Trade of Tanning of Leather, or make gain thereby, but such as have been brought up as Apprentices, or hired servants in the Trade seven years, except the Wife and Sons of a Tanner, as hath been brought up and used in the Trade four years; or the son or daughter of a Tanner, or him that shall marry such a Wife, or daughter, to whom a Tan-house and Fats are left, upon pain to forfeit all the Leather that such a person shall Tan.

Idem.

No person shall use the Trade of Tanning of Leather, so long as he doth use the Trade of a Shoo-maker, Currier, Butcher, or any other Artificer, using, cutting, or working of Leather, under pain to loose all the Hides, or Skins, they shall work, during that time. Nor the Mystery of Currier, so long as he shall use the Trade of a Tanner, Cord-wayner, Shoo-maker, Butcher, or other Artificer, that useth cutting of Leather, under pain of six shillings and eight pence for every Skin or Hide, he shall curry, during that time.

No persons may buy or bespeak any rough Hide, or Calves Skin in the Hair, to Tan the same; but Tanners and such as do Tan the same, under pain to forfeit them, or the value thereof.

No Tanner or other may forestal any Hides, coming towards any Fair or Market, nor shall buy any Hide in any place, but in an open Fair or Market, unless it be of one that killed the Beast, for the provision of his own house, under pain of six shillings and eight pence, for every Hide so bought.

Forestalling.

None may buy or sell any Tanned Leather, not wrought and converted into made Wares, but onely such as will work and convert the same Leather into made Wares, under pain of forfeiture of the Leather.

All Artificers that do use to convert Tanned Leather into made Wares, may buy for that purpose all kinde of Tanned Leather at Laaden-hall, in London, every Monday, the same being daily searched and sealed.

Sadlers and Girdlers may sell their Necks and Shreds of Tanned Leather red.

Sadlers, Girdlers.

No person using the Trade of Tanning of Leather, shall suffer any Hide or Skin to lie in the Limes, till the same be over-limed: Nor shall put any Hides or Skins into any Tan-Fats, before the Lime be well and perfectly soaked and wrought out of them: Nor shall use any thing, or stuff in or about the workmanship or Tanning of Leather, but onely Ash-bark, Oak-bark, Tapwort, Mauk, Meal, Lime, Culver-dung, or Hen-dung: Nor shall suffer it to hang wet in the Frost, till it be frozen: Nor shall dry or parch the same with the heat of the fire, or the Summer Sun: Nor shall Tan any Hide that is rotten by long lying: Nor shall suffer the Hides for Sole-Leather to lie in the Woozes less time then nine moneths: Nor shall negligently work the Hides in the Woozes: Nor shall put to sale any Hide that shall not be wrought, as aforesaid, under pain to forfeit the just value thereof.

No Tanner must raise with any mixtures, any Hide to be employed, to back, bend Leather, Clouting Leather, or any other Sole-Leather, unless the same be for largeness and growth, fit for that use, upon pain of forfeiture thereof.

No person may sell any kinde of Tanned-Leather red, and unwrought, but in open Fair or Markets, in the places therefore commonly accustomed, unless the same were first lawfully searched, and sealed in some open Fair or Market, or place appointed

pointed for that purpose; nor shall offer any Tanned Leather red, and unwrought before the same be searched and sealed, under pain to forfeit for the same for every Hide six shillings and eight pence, and for every dozen of Calves skins, or Sheep skins, three shillings and four pence, and the same Hides.

If any man offer to put to sale his Leather before it be sufficiently Tanned, and dried, he shall lose so much of the same Leather, and of every Hide, as shall be so untanned or undried, to be judged and cut off from the rest, by the direction and discretion of the Triers.

Tanners.

Tanners must not set their Fats in Tan hills or other places where the Woozes, or Leather that shall be put to Tan in the same, may take any unkinde beasts, or may put any Leather into any hot or warm Woozes, or shall Tan any Hide, Calve-skin, or Sheep-skin, with any hot or warm Woozes, under pain to forfeit ten pound, and stand on the Pillory three Market days for every offence.

Curriers.

No person in any Market or Corporate Town, shall curry any Leather in any Shoo-makers or other house, besides his own; nor shall curry any Leather, except it be well and perfectly Tanned; nor curry any Hide or Skin, being not well dried after his wet season; in which wet season he shall not use any stale Urine, or other deceitful mixture to hurt the same; nor shall curry any Leather fit for utter Sole-Leather, with any other stuff, but hard Tallow, and with enough of that; nor shall curry any Leather meet for over Leather and inner Soles, but with good stuff, fresh, and not salt; nor shall burn or scald any Hide or Leather in the currying; nor shave any Leather to thin; nor shall gash or hurt any Leather in the shaving, or otherwise, but shall work it sufficiently in all points, under pain to forfeit for every offence, (unless it be in gashing or hurting by shaving) six shillings and eight pence; and for such offence double so much as the Hide or Skin is impaired thereby.

Shoo-maker.

No Shoo-maker or other, living in London, or within three miles of it, that doth use wet curried Leather, shall put it to be curried to any but to one that is free of the Company of Curriers in London, under pain to forfeit the Leather, or value thereof. And no person within that circuit, may use any Leather in made Wares, but such as have been searched and sealed by the Warden of the same Company, under pain to forfeit for every Hide or Skin six shillings and eight pence, besides the Leather it self.

Curriers.

No Currier must refuse to curry any Leather brought to him by any one that is a cutter of Leather, with sufficient stuff to liquor the same, but shall well and sufficiently dispatch the same within three days, at the most, under pain to forfeit ten shillings for every Hide or pece of Leather, not so done.

The Wardens of the Company must search all the Leather brought to any of the Company to be curried, and after it is curried well, within one day seal it.

Shoo-maker.

No Cordwainer or Shoo-maker, shall make any Boots, Shooes, Buskins, Startups, Slippers, or Pantofles, of English Leather wet curried (other then Deer-skins, Calves-skin, or Goat-skins, dressed like unto Spanish Leather) but of Leather, well and truly tanned and curried as before, or well tanned onely, and well and substantially sewed with good thred, well twisted and made, and waxed with Wax well Rozoned, and the stiches hard drawn with Hand-Leathers, without mixing the Over-Leathers; nor shall put into any of their Ware they make, any Leather made of a Sheep-skin, Bull-hide, or Horse-hide; nor into the upper Leather of any Shooes, Startups, Slippers, or Pantofles, or into the nether part of any Boots (unless it be in the inner part of the Shoo) any part of any Hide, from which the Sole-Leather is cut, called the Wombs, Necks, Shank, Flank, Pole or Cheek; nor shall put in the upper Sole any other Leather, then the best of the Ox or Steer-hide; nor into the inner Sole, any other Leather then the Wombs, Neck, Pole, or Cheek; nor in the Tresswels of the double soled Shooes, other then the Flanks of the Hides aforesaid; nor shall make or put to sale in any year, between the last of September, and the twentieth of April, any Ware to be worn above four years of age, wherein is any dry English Leather (other then Calves-skins, or Goat-skins) to be dressed like unto Spanish Leather, under pain to forfeit for every offence the said Wares, or the value thereof.

Searchers.

The Masters and Wardens of the Company of Shoo-makers, Curriers, &c. in London, must search all the Wares in London, and three miles about four times in every year, year, in the houses of all such kinde of Artificers, and those they finde insufficient, they may seise and take away: And the Major and Aldermen of London, must every year appoint honest Freemen of the same Company to be Sealers of Leathers, who must seal what upon search they finde to be sufficient; but Sheep skins are not to be sealed. Also Majors, Bailiffs, and other Head-officers in all Cities, Boroughs, and Market Towns, and Lords of Liberties, Fairs and Markets, out of the Circuit of London, and three miles about it, yearly appoint and swear two or more sufficient men of the place, to view, search, and seal with a seal for the purpose, the Leather of that place, under pain of forty pound: And they must view and seal what they finde sufficient; and if they finde any Leather bought or sold, which shall be otherwise tanned, or curried, then is before appointed; or any Ware otherwise made, then is before prescribed, they may seise and keep the same, until it be tried by the Triers.

In London, the Major after any Leather or Wares seised, and notice given to him, must appoint six Triers, who upon their Oath, must try whether the Leather or Ware is serviceable, or not. And in other places, such as appoint sealers, shall presently after notice to them given, of any Leather or Wares seised, appoint and swear six Triers, to try the Leather or Wares seised, whether they be serviceable or not; and if not, they be to forfeit five pound. All red tanned Leather (except Sheep skin Leather) to be sold in London, must first be brought into Leaden-hall, and searched, sealed and registred, before it be brought into house: And none must be sold within London, or three miles, before this be done: And no such Wares must be sold there, but in open Shop, common Fair or Market. All Justices of Gaol-delivery of the Peace, Majors, &c. Stewards of Leets, may hear and determine all those offences.

No tanned Leather shall be sold by weight, under pain of forfeiture of it. See 1 Jac. 22. 4 Jac. 6. As for the Statutes of 5, 6 Ed. 6. 15. concerning the ingrossing and transporting of Leather, and some other things therein assmed, we conceive the same to be repealed by 1 Jac. 22. 4 Jac. 6. and therefore not abridged.

CHAP. CXLIX.

Of a Statute.

1. Statute,
what.

Statute is a Bond or Obligation of Record: But this word is sometimes used in another sense, viz. For a Decree made in Parliament called an Act of Parliament. Terms Ley. Stat. de Mercatoribus, Alton Burnel. 11 Ed. 1.

2. The kinds.
Statute Merchant, what.

And of these Obligations, there are three kinds: First, A Statute Merchant; secondly, A Statute Staple; thirdly, A Recognisance. The Statute Merchant is a Bond acknowledged before one of the Clerks of the Statute Merchant and Major, and chief Warden of the City of London, or two Merchants of the said City, for that purposed assigned, or before the Major, chief Warden or Master of other Cities, as Tork, Brisfow, or the like; or the Bailiff of any Burrough or Village, or other sufficient men for that purpose, appointed and authorized, sealed with the seal of the Debtor or Recognisor, and of the King, which is of two peeces; the greater whereof is kept by the Major or chief Warden, and the lesser by the said Clerk. And this albeit at first it was ordained and used for Merchants onely, yet at this day, it is and may be used and given by any others, and is become one of the Common Assurances of the Kingdom.

Statute Staple,
what.

The Staple, doth signifie this or that Town or City, whether the Merchants by common Order and Commandment, do carry their Commodities, as Wool, and the like, to utter by the great. And the Statute Staple is either properly or improperly so called: That which is properly so called, is defined to be a Bond of Record, acknowledged before the Major of the Staple, in the presence of one or two Constables of the same Staple, and is sealed with the Seal of the Staple, and sometimes also with the Seal of the party, the which it seems is not necessary. And this is founded upon the 27 Ed. 3. 9. and was invented, and is used onely for Merchants and Merchandises of the same Staple; this is of the same nature the Statute Merchant is. That which is improperly so called, is also called a Recognisance, which is also a Bond of Record, testifying, That the Recognisor doth ow to the Recognisee a sum of money: And of these there are divers kinds; for there is one Recognisance founded upon the Statute of 23 H. 8. 6. And this is always to be acknowledged before the Chief Justice of the Kings Bench, or of the Common Pleas, in the Term time, or in their absence out of Term, before the Major of the Staple at Westminster, and the Recorder of the City of London, for the time being. And it is to be sealed with the Seal of the Conusor, and with the Seal of the King, appointed for that purpose, and with the Seal of the Chief Justice, Major, and Recorder, before whom it is acknowledged; and they before whom it is taken, do subscribe their names to it: And this was ordained, and may be, and is used by Merchants, or any other whomsoever for payment of debts, or assurance of other things; and this also is of the same nature the Statute Merchant is: And both this, and the two former, are much of the nature of Judgments had upon Sutes in the Courts of Kings Bench and Common Pleas, and therefore they are called Pocket Judgments. 27 Ed. 3. Stat. 2. cap. 1, 2, 3. 27 Ed. 3. 9. 22 H. 8. 6. Co. super Litt. 289. 15 H. 7. 16. Co. 8. 153.

Recognisance,
what.

Pocket Judgments.

There

There are also divers other kinds of Recognisances, that are taken by and acknowledged before the Lord Keeper, Master of the Wards, Master of the Rolls, Master of the Chancery, Justices of the one Bench, or of the other, (some of which are called Bails) Barons of the Exchequer, Judges in their Circuits, Justices of the Peace, Sheriffs, and others; some whereof are by the Common Law, and some by certain Statutes. And amongst these, some are without Seal, and recorded onely, and some are sealed and recorded also; and some of them are in a sum certain, as the Recognisances taken in the Common Pleas for Bail are, and some of them are incertain, as those Recognisances that are taken for Bail in the Kings Bench, which are after this manner, Si judicium redditum, &c. tunc volo & concedo, That the debt recovered against the Defendant, shall be levied of my Goods and Chattels, &c. And these also are much of the nature of the former kinde of Recognisances; and all Obligations made to the King, are of the same nature, and have the force of a Recognisance. See 33 H. 8. 23. 39. 3 H. 7. 1. 10 H. 6. 1. Dyer 315. 307. F. N. B. 251. fol. 132. cap. 133. a. 68. a.

Bail.

Prerogative.

Statutes and Recognisances are sometimes single, without any Defeasance, and sometimes they are double, i. e. with a Defeasance or Condition, upon the performance whereof, the same are to be avoided.

The Debtor, or he that doth enter into the Statute or Recognisance, is called the Recognisor or Conusor, and the Debtee, or he to whom it is made, is called the Recognisee or Conusee.

Conusor, Conusee.

To make a good Statute or Obligation of Record, the form prescribed must be pursued.

1. In respect of the persons before whom; and therefore, the Statute Merchant or Staple, or the Recognisance founded upon the Statute of 23 H. 8. may not be acknowledged before any others, besides the persons appointed by the Statutes: Neither may any other Recognisance be acknowledged before any, but such as either have power Ex Officio, and by their Offices to take them, or have special Commission so to do; and therefore a Recognisance taken by a Constable, is void. If a Recognisance be made to the Lord Keeper, and two others, and it be acknowledged before himself, this is void as to him. Dyer 35: Littl. Broo. sect. 484. 511. F. N. B. 267 a. Dyer 220.

3. What shall be said a good Statute or Recognisance, and what not. First, In respect of the persons before whom it is acknowledged.

2. In respect of the manner of making and acknowledging of it; and therefore if the substantial forms, appointed by the Statutes, be not observed, it will be void. If therefore a Statute Merchant be not sealed with the Seal of the Debtor, and there be not a Seal of two peeces annexed to it, this is no good Statute, neither can it take effect as a Statute; howbeit in this case, if it be delivered by the party, it may take effect as an Obligation: But if the variance from the Statutes, be onely in some circumstance, this will not hurt a Statute or a Recognisance. And therefore it is held, That albeit there be no time set for the payment of the money in the Statute, yet the Statute is good, for then it is due presently. And albeit the Statute be written with anothers hand, and not with the hand of the Clerk of the Statutes, or the like; yet is the Statute good enough. And if a Statute Staple be not sealed with the Seal of the party that doth acknowledge it, yet it seems it is good enough, for the Statute doth not require it; but a Recognisance within the Statute of 23 Hen. 8. cannot be good, except the Seal of the party be to it, for so are the words of the Statute. Hollingsworth versus Ascugh. Pasche, 35 Eliz. Co. B. Adjudg. Perk 3. Justices, Co. B. Trin. 22 Jac.

Secondly, In respect of the manner of making it.

Obligation.

If a Recognisance or a Statute be to pay money at several days, it is good enough, and if the Conusor fail one day, Execution may be sued of the whole Statute. Co. 8. 153.

Every Statute Staple or Merchant, not brought to the Clerk of the Recognisances within four moneths next after the acknowledging, to enter a true Copy thereof, shall be void, against all persons, their Heirs, Successors, Executors, Administrators and Assigns onely, which for good consideration shall after the acknowledging of the same Statute, purchase the Land, or any part liable thereunto, or any Rent, Lease, or profit out of it. 27 Eliz. 4.

Extent, what.

The proceedings upon a Statute or Recognisance, to have the Fruit and effect thereof, is not like to the proceedings in other cases of Sutes upon Obligations, and the like, to reduce them to Judgment, but as they are in their own nature much like to the nature of a Judgment, so is the Proceeding and Execution thereupon, much like to the Proceeding and Execution upon a Judgment: And therefore the Conusee may, if he please, bring an Action of Debt upon a Statute, and waive all other Proceeding, or otherwise, if he like not this course, he [or if he be dead, his Executor or Administrator, and if his Executor be dead, the Executor of his Executor] may assoon as the same is forfeit, have present Execution of it after this manner: He must bring his Statute to the Major and Clerk, or other Officer, before whom it was acknowledged, and there if they finde the Record of it, and the day to be past for the payment of the money, they are to apprehend and imprison the body of the Conusor, if he be a Lay person, and can be found within their jurisdiction; and if he cannot be found there, they are to certifie the Record into the Chancery, which also if they refuse to do, they may be compelled unto by a Certiorare: And if that Certificate be faulty, or Execution be not done upon it; by reason of the death of the Conusee, or otherwise, the Conusee or his Executor or Administrator, may have another Certificate: And thereupon, in case of the Sistrate Merchant, he shall have a Writ of Capias out of the Chancery, directed to the Sheriff of the County where the Conusor lives, to apprehend and imprison him (if he be not a Clergiman) and this is to be returned in the Common Pleas, or Kings Bench. And when the Conusor is taken, he shall have time for a quarter of a year to make his agreement with the Conusee, and to sell his Lands or Goods to satisfie the Conusee: And for that purpose, he may sell his Lands or Goods, albeit he be in prison; and his sale is good and lawful: And if in that time, he do not satisfie the Conusee, or if upon the Capias, the Sheriff return a Non est inventus, then by another Writ [or by divers Writs, if the Lands or Goods lie in divers Counties] called an Extendi facias. And in the case of a Statute Staple, presently after the Certificate into the Chancery, the Conusee shall have a Writ to take his body, and extend his Lands and Goods returnable in Chancery; and this Writ is a Commission directed to the Sheriff of the County, where the Lands and Goods lie for the valuing of the same, whereby all the Lands, Goods, and Chattels of the Conusor shall be apprised and valued at a reasonable rate by a Jury of sworn men, charged by the Sheriff for that purpose; which Inquisition so taken, is to be returned by the Sheriff; and thereupon the Lands, Goods, and Chattels are to be taken into the Sheriffs hands, and by him to be delivered to the Conusee (which the Sheriff may do if he will, without any Writ) to hold unto the Conusee, until he be satisfied his debt and damages. And if the Sheriff refuse so to do, the Conusee shall have a Writ out of the Chancery, called a Liberate, to compel him to deliver to the Conusee the Lands, Goods, and Chattels, so found by Inquisition, and taken into his hands upon the Extent, which the Sheriff need not to return. [Fitz. Accompt. 97. Execution in toto. Broo. Statute in toto. Stat. Alton Burnel de Mercatoribus. 27 Ed. 3. 9. F. N. B. 130, 131, 132. Dyer 180. 15 H. 7. 15. Co. 4. 67. 7 Hen. 7. 12. Kitch. 116.] Or the Conusee may enter upon the Land himself, and take the Goods out of the Sheriffs hands; and this act of the Sheriff and Jury, upon this Writ, is called an Extent: And if the Jurors or Appraisors upon the Extendi facias, over-value the Lands or Goods in favor to the Debtor, the Conusee hath no remedy but by motion in that Court where the Writ is returnable at the Return day, or at least the same Term wherein the Writ is returnable, to desire that the Appraisors may take the Lands or Goods at the Rate they have valued them, in the same manner as the Conusee is to have them. But if the Conusee accept of the Lands and Goods from the Sheriff, or suffer the Term to pass, wherein the Writ is returnable, he is too late, and hath no Remedy at all. And if the Appraisors do undervalue the Lands or Goods, in favor to the Debtee, it seems the Conusor hath no Remedy at all, for he may at any time pay all or the residue of the debt and damages unlevied, and have his Land again if he please. And in case case where the Inquisition or Extent taken and made, is insufficient, as if part of the Land onely be extended in the name of all the Lands, or it is found the Conusor died seised of Land, and it is not said of what estate, or the like, the Conusee shall have a new Extent, and this is called a Re-extent; and this he may have, albeit the Lands or Goods be delivered to the Conusee by a Liberate, if the Conusee have not entred upon, and accepted it, but if he once accept it, he can never after have a Re-extent. And when the Conusee is in possession of Lands by such an Extent as before, then is he Tenant by Statute; and after the Conusee is once settled in peace in the Lands extended, he shall hold it until he be satisfied his debt, and his reasonable costs and damages for travel, sute, delay, and expence. But it seems the time shall not run out, nor be said to begin until the Entry of the Conusee into the Land; for if the Land be extended, and remain seven years without a Liberate made, yet he may have a Liberate at the end of the seven years: And as soon as the Conusee shall be satisfied his debt and damage by the Goods and Chattels of the Conusor, and by the ordinary and certain, or extraordinary and casual profits of the Land, the Conusor shall have his Land again: And for that purpose, if the Conusee refuse to give him an account, and to yield up his Land to him the Conusor, howbeit he may not enter, yet may compel the Conusee thereunto by a Writ called a Venire facias ad computandum, in the nature of a Scire facias, by which the Conusor shall call the Conusee, his Executors or Administrators to account; and if upon the account, it shall appear he is satisfied, the Conusor shall have his Land again; and if it appear he is over-satisfied, he shall answer the overplus to the Conusor. But the Conusor may not enter upon the Conusee until he hath brought this Writ, and made it thereupon to appear that the Conusee is satisfied: And if in case the Conusee be dead, his Executor or Administrator, may have Execution of the Statute, without any Scire facias upon the shewing of the Statute, and the Testament in Chancery: And if the Sheriff return that the Conusor is dead, the Execution shall be made of his Lands onely in the hands of his Heir, or the Purchaser; but if the Heir be under age, the Execution cannot be done until he be of full age: And if the Conusor die in prison, the Execution shall be of his Lands, Goods, and Chattels; and if the Gaoler that hath him in prison suffer him to escape, he must answer the debt: And if it fall out that the Conusee, his Executors or Administrator be ousted, or disturbed of his Execution by the Conusor himself, or any other during the time of the Extent, he may relieve himself against the disturber by Assise, or other Action, as another in the like case may do: And if he be rightfully ousted or disturbed by one that hath better right, as by one that hath a former Statute, or the like, or by the Act of God, as by Fire, Water, or the like; in these cases the Conusee shall hold the Land over after the time of his Extent, until he be satisfied. But when it is through his own neglect onely, that he is unsatisfied, as where the Lands are delivered to him by the Liberate, and he after his Entry into them, make a Conditional Surrender of them: As if Lands of the value of ten pound by the year, be delivered to him in Execution for forty pound, and he within four years make a Conditional Surrender of them to the Conusor, and after he enter for the Condition broken; in this case he shall not hold the Land over the four years, for he must take the profits upon his Extent presently. The proceeding in Execution of the Statute Staple, and the Recognisance founded upon the Statute of the 23 of Henry the Eighth, is after the same manner throughout, as the proceeding in Execution of the Statute Marchant is, with these differences onely. (Adjudge Butler versus Wallis, Pasche, 38 Eliz. B.R.) That upon the Execution of the Statute Marchant, there doth issue forth a Capias against the body, before any Execution be to be made of the Lands, or Goods, and Chattels, and the Lands and Goods cannot be extended until a quarter of a year be past after the body is taken, or the Sheriff have returned a Non est inventus; but upon the Execution of the Statute Staple, and the Recognisance, the Body, Goods, and Lands, may be taken together at the first; this therefore is a more speedy Remedy then the former. Also upon a Statute Marchant, one may have an Action of Debt, but otherwise upon a Statute Staple, and the Capias upon the Statute Merchant may be retornable in the Kings Bench, or Common Pleas, but the

The proceeding upon the other sort of Recognisances, are after another manner; for upon Recognisances at the Common Law, if the money be not paid at the day, the Conusee his Executor or Administrator, is to bring a Scire Facias against the Conusor, or if he be dead, against his Heirs when they be of full age; or if the Lands the Conusor had at the time of entering into the Recognisance, be sold against the Purchasers of these Lands, which the Conusor had at any time after the Recognisance entered into, to warn them to come into that Court whence the Scire facias cometh, and to shew cause why Execution should not be done upon the said Recognisance: And if the party or parties cannot be found to be warned, or being warned, do not appear at the time, or appearing, shew no cause why the debt should not be levied, then the Conusee shall have Execution of a Moyety of his Lands by Elegit; or if the Conusor be living, of all his Goods by Levari or Fieri facias at his Election, but he cannot have Execution of his body, unless he bring an Action of Debt upon the Recognisance, or it be by course of the Court, as it is in the Kings Bench upon a Bail, in which case a Capias doth lie. Dyer 360. 315. West 2. 18. *Broo. 5. What things are subject and liable to Execution upon a Statute or Recognisance; and when, and how, and what not.

When a man doth enter into a Statute or Recognisance, the Land of the Conusor is not the Debtor, but the body; and the Land is liable only in respect that it was in the hands of the Conusor, at the time of acknowledging of the Statute, or after; and the Land is not charged with the Debt, but chargably only at the Election of the Conusee; but the person is charged, and the Land is chargable in respect of the person, and not the person in respect of the Land. And therefore albeit the Conusor alien his Land to another, yet he remains Debtor still, and his body and his Goods shall be taken in Execution; and yet when Execution is sued upon the Land, the Land is charged and become Debtor also. Plow. 72. Co. 10. 30, 31. Broo. St. Marchant.

First, In respect of the nature and quality of the things themselves.

The body of the Conusor himself, but not the body of his Heir, Executor, or Administrator, is liable to Execution, and may be taken, albeit there be Lands, Goods, and Chattels to satisfy the Debt; and all the Demefn and Copehold Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, Corporael and Incorporeal of the Conusor, that are grantable over, as his Manors, Messuages, Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Woods, Rents, Commons, Tithes, Advowsons, and the like: Also all his Goods and Chattels, as Leases for years, Wardships, Emblements, Cattle, Household-stuff, and the like, are liable to Execution upon a Statute. Stat. de Mercatoribus. Co. 3. 12. Plow. 72. Co. 2. 59. Littl. Sess. 358. Dyer 205. Broo. Stat. Marchant 44. Dyer 7. Co. super Littl. 374. And therefore if a man make a Lease for life, or years, and after enter into a Statute, or Recognisance; this Reversion cum accideris shall be subject to Execution, and the Conusor cannot (as it seems) by any sale thereof prevent it; and yet the contrary hath been held for Law. Littl. Broo. Sess. 227. Dyer 373. And if one make a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for life, reserving a Rent; this Rent is extendable, and the Conusee may distrain for it. Doll. & Stud. 33. Broo. Stat. Marchant 44. Dyer 205. So if the Lessee for life, make a Lease for years rendering a Rent, and then the Lessee for life enter into a Statute; this Rent is subject to Execution, and it seems the Conusee may bring an Action of Debt against the Lessee for years for it. Harringtons case. Pasche, 9 Jac. B. R. And albeit the Rent become extinct by the purchase of the Conusor or otherwise, yet as to the Conusee it shall be said to be in esse and subject to Execution still. And therefore if a Rent be granted unto me for my life, after the death of my Wife, and after I do acknowledge a Statute, and then my Wife die, and then I Release the Rent to the Terre-tenant; this Rent shall be liable to Execution, Co. 7. 38. But Annuities, Offices in Trust, Seignories in Franck-almoign, Homage, Fealty, Rights, Things in Action, and such like things are not liable to Execution upon Statutes or Recognisances.

infeants: Also a remainder in Tail, or in Fee after an Estate Tail in possession, is not liable to execution in these cases, except it happen to come into the possession of the Conusor. Goldb. 120 pl. 5. Dyer 7. Co. super Litt. 374. Doff. & St. 53. Co. 2. 59. 1. 2.

The Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments that are Copilhold, albeit the Conusor have the Fee-simple of them, yet are subject to execution, only for the life of the Conusor; but his demesne Lands wherein he hath an estate in Fee simple, are liable to Execution for ever if need require. Ancient demesne land is liable to Execution yet see that Copilhold land not liable by *Brownl. Rep. 1 part 34, Stat. de Mercatoribus Dyer 199. Plow. 82. Co. 7. 39. 3. 12. Bro. Recognisante 7. Second, in respect of the estate, property and possession of the conusor in the things.

The Lands the Conusor hath in jointenancy with another, are subject to execution during the life of the Conusor and no longer; for after his death the surviving jointenancy shall have all; but if the Conusor survive his companion, then all the Land shall be subject to execution: and the Lands the Conusor hath as Tenant in Tail, are liable to execution only during the life of him being the Tenant in Tail; for afterwards they shall go to his issue in Tail.

And yet if the Tenant in Tail after he hath entred into a Statute, suffer a recovery of the Land intailed, in this case the Land shall be subject to execution as if it were Fee simple Land.

And the Lands the Conusor hath in the right of his Wife, shall be charged and subject to execution only during the lives of the Husband and Wife together, and no longer.

If a Feoffment be made in condition to make an estate to another by a day of the same Land, and before the day the Feoffee enter into a Statute or a Recognisance; this Land shall be subject unto execution untill the Feoffor reenter, for the breach of the condition. Littl. Sect. 338.

If one be seised of Land, and then enter into a Statute; this Land shall not be subject to execution: and yet if the Conusor do after recover the Land by entry or action, it shall be lyable to Execution. Co. 2. 59.

The goods and Chattels whereof the Conusor is solely possessed, and possessed in his own right; and the Goods and Chattels of which he is jointly possessed with another; and the Goods and Chattels he hath in the right of his Wife, are liable to execution.

But the Goods or Chattels that he or his Wife hath as Executor or Executrix to another or as pledged only, it seems are not subject to Execution. And if the Conusor deliver goods to another to deliver over to L. S. these goods before they be delivered over are liable to execution.

And if he have leases for years in the right of his Wife, and die before Execution be done, it seems these leases are liable to execution. See quare.

But if the Conusor have goods in his Custody of another man, or have goods he hath distrained in the nature of a distress, these are not liable to Execution. Stat. de Mercatoribus. Co. 3. 11. 12. Plow. 334. Co. 8. 17. 13. 90. Dyer 67.

All the Lands, Tenements and Hereditaments which the Conusor had at the time of the Statute or Recognisance entred into, or at any time after, into whose hands by what means soever the same are beside and come at the time of Execution, are subject and liable to the Execution. But the Lands the Conusor had and did put away before the time of the Statute or Recognisance entred into are not liable to Execution. And all the Goods and Chattels the Conusor hath and are found in his hands at the time when the Execution is to be made by the Extendi facias, are liable to the Execution. But the Goods and Chattels he had and did put away before the time of Execution done, are not liable to the Execution. Stat. de Mercatoribus.

3. In respect of the time.

And in all these things before subject to Execution, the Conusor may take all or part at his pleasure. And therefore if the Conusor have sold his Lands to divers persons, or have sold some of his Lands to divers persons, or to one man, and keep the rest in his hands, or it descend to his Heir; the Conusee may sue Execution upon the lands in either of their hands at his election; so that if the Cognisor alter the Statute entered into and before execution purchase part of the land of the Cognisor, he may notwithstanding have execution, upon the residue in the hands of the Conusor, or in the hands of his heir; and yet so that in some of these cases his execution may be afterwards avoided, and he compelled to sue execution againe. See Brownlow 1 part. 38. 2 part. 97. Broo. Stat. 10. 48. 25. Plow. 72. See infra.

The Conusee upon other Recognizances shall have the same things in execution, as a man shall have after a judgment in a Suite in the Kings Bench or Common-Pleas by Fieri facias, or Levari facias, all his goods and chattels, and by Elegit the moiety of his lands, and all his chattels besides the Cartel of his plough and implements of husbandry. But in these cases he cannot take the body of the Conusor in execution; unless it be upon a new Suite, or in case of bail, in the Kings-Bench. Westm. 2. chap. 18. Plow. 72. Co. 3. 12. Dier. 306. Kelw. 100.

Howsoever by the Common-Law after a full and perfect execution had by extent returned and of record, there shall never be any reextent, yet by a speciall Act of Parliament is provided, that if after lands, &c. be had in execution upon a just or lawfull title, wherewith all the said lands, &c. were liable tied or bound at such time as they were delivered or taken in execution, they shall be taken or recovered away from him before he hath received his full debt and damages, in this case after a Scire facias had against the Conusor his heirs, executors, administrators, or purchasers, he (or his executors or administrators if he be dead) shall have a new execution to levie the residue of the debt and damages then unsatisfied. 31 H. 8. 5. Wherein these things are to be observed.

1. In case where the Conusee is unlawfully and wrongfully disturbed either by the Conusor or by a stranger in the taking of the profits of the land delivered to him in execution, there he may and must bring his action and recover damages, and these damages shall go toward his satisfaction; for in this case and for this disturbance, he shall not hold the land a day the longer. And where he is hindered by his own neglect or act in the taking of the profits of the land, as where his debt is 40l. and he hath 10l. 5 year delivered to him by which he may satisfy himself in four years, and within the time he make a conditionall surrender to the Conusor, and enter for the condition broken, in this case he shall not hold the land over, neither shall he have any Reextent.

And where the let or disturbance is such, as wherein the Conusee hath remedy given him by the Common-Law to hold the land over after the disturbance removed, in this case he shall have no new execution nor Reextent within this Statute; for where the Conusee hath remedy in presenti for part, or in future for all or part, this Statute extendeth not to it. And therefore where the Conusee is hindered in the taking of the profits of land by the Act of God, as by fire, overflowing of water or the like; or by the act of the party Conusor, or any by or under him, as when one is bound to A. in a Statute of 100l. and after to B. in a Statute of 200l. and B. extendeth the land first, and then A. extendeth the land and taketh it away from B. or when the Guardian in Chivalry doth put out the Conusor by reason of the Wardship of the heire of the Conusor, or the Wife of the Conusor doth claime her dower and put out the Conusee, or one disseise his lessee for life, or out his lessee for years, and then acknowledge a Statute, and after execution is sued against him, and then the land is delivered to the conusee, and after the lessee for life or years doth reenter; in all these cases, because by the Common-Law, the Conusee may hold over the land after the time given him by the extent, and after the impediments removed, untill he be satisfied his debt and damages, therefore, he shall have no aid of this Statute by Reextent; for he is then only to be relieved by this Statute when as he is evicted and distressed, and is wholly and clearly without any remedy at the Common-Law. Co. 4. 66. 82. Plow. 61. 15. H. 7. 15. Co. super Litt. 299. Kitch. 116.

levied the whole debt and damages] if he hath assigned severall parcels to severall assignes, yet all they shall have the land but untill the whole debt be paid.

3. Where the words be [for the which the said lands, &c. were delivered in execution] If A. disseisor convey the lands to the King who granteth the same over to A. and his heirs to hold by fealty and 20l. rent, and after granteth the Seigniorie, to B. B. acknowledgeth a Statute, and execution is sued of the Seigniorie, A. dieth without heire, and the Conusee entreth and is evicted by the disseisor; in this case he shall have the aid of this Statute; but the Perquisite of a Villain being evicted is out of the Statute.

4. Where the words be [delivered and taken in execution] yet if after the Liberate the Conusee enter (as he may) so as the land is never delivered, yet it is within the remedy of this Statute.

5. Albeit the Statute speake only of the recoveror, obligee, &c. and not of their executors, administrators, or assignes, yet the Statute shall extend to them.

6. Where the Statute speakes of a Scire facias out of the same Court, &c. if the record be removed into another Court and there affirmed, he may have a Scire facias out of that Court.

7. Where the Statute gives a Scire facias against such person and persons, &c. that were parties to the first execution, their heirs executors or assignes, &c. this must not be taken so generally as the letter is; for if the first execution were had against a purchaser, &c. so as nothing in his hands were liable but the land recovered, if this land be evicted from the tenant by execution, no Scire facias shall goe against him, his executors, &c. but if he hath other lands subject to execution, then a Scire facias lieth against him or his assignes, but not against his executor; neither in that case can he have a Scire facias upon this Statute against the first debtor or recognisor, but if there be severall assignes of several parcels of lands subject to the execution, one Scire facias will lie against all the assignes. See more in Brownl. 2. parts 122.

A Statute or recognisance and the execution thereupon may be discharged divers waies, as by defeasance, release, payment of the money, debt, and damages, or the residue thereof unlevied, delivery up of the Statute, Spurchase of part of the land by the cognisee, or the like.

And therefore if there be a defeasance to the Statute or recognisance, and it be to pay money at a day, or to performe some other thing, and the money be paid, or the thing done accordingly, this is a discharge of the Statute. And therefore if such a Statute or recognisance be afterwards sued against the Conusor, he may be relieved by an Audita Querela. And if A. bind himself to B. by a Statute of 20l. and B. sue execution, and the lands of A. are delivered to him in execution untill he levy the money, and after B. doth make a defeasance to A. by Indenture, that if A. pay 10l. by a day certaine, that then the Statute or Recognisance shall be void; if this be done accordingly, the Statute and the execution thereupon is defeated and discharged. D. 297. 315. Co. 6. 13. 20 Aff. pl. 7. See Defeasance. And if the Cognisee before execution or after, release to the Cognisor the Statute or recognisance, or the debt; this is a perpetual discharge of the Statute and the execution thereupon: But if the Conusee before execution release to the Conusor all his right in or to the land; this will not discharge the whole execution; for if he may not sue execution of the land afterwards (as it seems he may this notwithstanding) yet he may sue execution of his body and goods.

But such a release after execution made of the land, will no doubt discharge the land.

And yet if a Conusee release all his right in the land to the Feoffee of the Cognisor of a parcel of the land, it seems this will discharge the land of execution, albeit it be before the execution sued that this release is made.

And so it is said it was resolved Mich. 26. 27. Eliz. Co. super Litt. 76. 10. 47. 50. 51. super. Litt. 265. Broo. St. Mar. chant. 25. See Release.

Terre-Tenant by way of discharge of the Debt or Land ; it seems this is a good release and discharge of it in Law. And if the Cognisee purchase any part of the Land of the Cognisor after the Statute or Recognisance entred into ; this is no discharge of the Statute or the Recognisance, but the Cognisee may have Execution notwithstanding of the Lands that are left in the hands of the Cognisor, or of his body, or goods, or all. But if the Cognisee purchase parcell of the Lands, and a stranger another parcell ; in this case the Lands that are purchased by the stranger shall be discharged of Execution. And if the Cognisee after Execution sued, purchase any part of the Land, or the Fee-simple of all or part of it doth descend to him ; by this the whole Execution is discharged. And if the Cognisee purchase all the Lands of the Cognisor ; by this the Execution as to the Land is suspended, but this is no discharge as to the body and goods of the Conusor, for they are subject to Execution still. And if the Conusee reinfesoff the Conusor again, the Execution may be revived again against the Lands of the Conusor, so that they will be subject to Execution again, whether they do continue in his hands or be sold away to others.

So also if the Conusee enfeoff a stranger after he doth purchase the Land, and the stranger doth enfeoff the Conusor ; in this case also the Execution is revived, and the Lands shal now be subject thereunto as they were before, Barrow & Graies case 38. *Eliz. 8. Where the Conusor, or his Heir, or an alienee, or purchasor shall have contribution upon a Statute or Recognisance, or not.

If the Conusor after he hath entred into a Statute or Recognisance, doth convey away his Land to divers persons, and then the Conusee sue Execution of the Statute upon the Lands of one or some of them, and not of all ; in this case he or they whose Lands is, or are taken in Execution, may by an Andia querela or Scire Facias, have contribution from the rest, wherein these differences must be observed : That one Purchasor shall have Contribution from another : And therefore if the Conusor sell some Lands to I. S. and other Lands to I. D., and the Conusee sue Execution only of the Lands of I. S. I. S. shall have contribution against I. D. And the Feoffee of the Purchasor, the Feoffee of the Heir of the Conusor, the Feoffee of the Feoffee, and another Feoffee shall have contribution of the Heir of the Conusor : But the Conusor himself shall not have Contribution from a Purchasor ; and therefore, if he sell part of his Lands, and keep part in his hands, and the Conusee sue Execution only of the Lands in the hands of the Conusor or his Heirs ; in this case, neither he nor his Heirs shall have any contribution from the Purchasors ; and one Heire shall have contribution from another. And therefore, if one be seised of two Acres, the one in Burrow English ; the other of other Land, and he enter into a Statute and die, and he hath but two Daughters, and the Execution is sued upon the land of one of them ; he shall have contribution from the other. So also it seems the Law is, if the Heir sell the Land to divers, and one of the Purchasors appear to the scire facias, and the Iudgement is given against him, and he afterwards sell the Land, his Vendee shall have no contribution : And in all these cases where it is said the one Purchasor shall have contribution, it is not intended that the rest shall give or allow him any thing by way of contribution, but that the party whose Lands are extended, may by Andia Querela or scire facias, faciam, as the case requireth, defeat the Execution, and thereby shall be restored to all the mean profits, and force the Conusee to sue his Execution upon all the Land, that the Land of every one of the Terre-tenants may be equally extended. See more in my Book of Common Assurances.

Of a Statute Law.

Statute is taken sometimes for an Obligation of Record; ^{Self. 1.} but here it is taken for a Decree, or Act of Parlia- ^{1. Statute, what.} ment, made by the Lord Protector, and Parliament of the Nation, (which is the Representative, and Body of the same) for the Government thereof; and these Laws are over, and besides the Universal or Common Law of the Nation.

And so a Statute is either general, and publick, or parti- ^{The kindes.} cular and private. Those that are general also, are either such as concern all the Subjects of this Realmlike, as the Statutes of Champerty, Maintenance, the Statutes of 13 Eliz. 10. 18 Eliz. 11. 1 Ed. 6. 14. Magna Charta 25. Westm. 12. 25, 18, 41. 23 H. 8. de Attaints 4 H. 7. 17. and divers others, or such as concern all the Species of one General of Men, or things onely; as all the Spiritual Tye, or all Officers. Westm. 1. 26. All Trades and Mysteries, or all Lords, or the like. Marl. 3. And so it is where the Matter is Special, so that under it be nothing but Individuals; yet if it be General, as to the persons, it is a General Law. Co. 4. 76.

Those Statutes that are particular, or private, are either such as are general in a particular; as which concern all Sheriffs, or all Bishops, or all Deans, or all Clouthiers, or all Colledges in the Universities, or the like: 18 Eliz. 6. 23 H. 6. 18. So when the Law, as to the persons, is general, but the matter it doth concern, is Individual or singular. Co. 4. 26.

Also some Statutes are Affirmative, and some Negative; and some bring in a new Law, and some do onely declare the old. Co. 4. 76.

This word is taken for the first part of an Act or Statute, which is as a Key to ^{Preamble, what.} open the minde of the Makers, and to shew what mischiefs they intend to remedy that make the Statute; and some Statutes have these, and some are without them.

An Action upon a Statute, called an Action Popular, is an Action which is given ^{2. See Action, and the duty of Informers upon such Statutes. See 18 Eliz. 5. 21 Jac. 4. 13 Eliz. 5. and Informers.

If one hath any occasion, or cause to make use of a Statute that is general in any Court, he need not to plead it, and set it forth at large, but onely that part, or so much as doth concern him, and will serve his turn, or the substance of it. ^{3. Where a Statute must be pleaded, or not.}

And if one will charge another with the breach of any such Statute, there need no more be said, but encounter tiel Statute, &c. For the Judges in their giving of Judgments, are bound to take notice of the said Statutes: But if the Statute be special, or particular, or private, thereif any man will have benefit by, or make use of him, or will charge another upon him, he must plead, and shew the Statute at large; for otherwise the Judges in their Judgments, are not bound to take notice of them.

What shall be

Statute, or
not.

All Statutes that agree with the Statutes of Heaven, and Ordinances of God, though they cross, and utterly overthrow any of the former Statutes or Laws of the Nation, are good : But if they be expressly repugnant to the Laws of God, as that no man shall help or comfort them that be in distress ; they are not good, but utterly unlawful ; but it must be made by all the Parliament. See Crompt. Jur. 190. 34 H.6.40.

General Rules for the Exposition of Statutes.

The Exposition of Statutes belongs onely to the Judges, and Justices of Courts, and they are to be guided by these general rules: March 90. pl. 148.

1. They must mark the Coherence, and take all the parts together, and then expound them, as neer to the intent and minde of the Makers, as possible they can conceive, and not stick too much in the words ; for, Qui haret in litera, haret in cortice, & notitia Ramorum Statuti, non in Sermonis foliis, sed in rationis radice posita est. Co. 10. 100. And therefore if the Law be, that whosoever shall kill a man, shall be hanged ; if a Mad-man do so, or one in Execution of Justice do so, this Law must not be extended to him : But yet the words are to be regarded also ; and therefore it is a rule, That à verbis legis non est recedendum & maledicta est expositio qua corrumpit viscera textus. Plow. 18. 396. Co. 10. 100.

2. Where an Act Affirmative, and that is the Introduction of a new Law, doth give power, or Interest to a person certain, or a thing is to be done before a person certain, in that case Inclusio unius est exclusio alterius : But if it be the Declaration of an old Law, contra, unless there be a Negative clause annexed. Co. 11. Dr. Fosters case: An Affirmative Subsequent Law will not repeal, or abrogate an Act Affirmative Precedent, unless it be contrary to it in Matter ; nor alter the Common Law before, neither will such an Act take away Customs. Also, if the Statute be Negative, and but the Declaration of an ancient Common Law, and in Affirmance thereof, this will not alter a Custom. Co. on Littl. f. 115. but otherwise the rule is, The latter Laws do abrogate the former Laws.

3. One part of a Statute must expound another ; and this is one of the best means to finde the sence. Co. on Littl. 381.

4. There must be an Equity in expounding all Laws, and this doth sometimes extend the sence beyond the words, and sometimes it doth abridge the sence, and make it narrower, and less then the words. Plow. 465.

5. When the words of a Statute are special, but the reason is general, the Statute is generally to be understood. Co. 10. in Rensfages case.

6. That which is generally spoken, must be generally understood ; for he that speaketh all, leaveth out nothing. Idem.

7. Such an Exposition must be made, as to suppress the mischief, and advance the remedy intended. Co. on Littl. 381.

8. The words must always be taken in a lawful, rightful sence. Idem.

9. Every Act made against an Injury or Grievance, doth expressly or implicitly give to the party wronged, a Remedy. Co. 2 part, Inst. 55.

Where-ever a Statute doth forbid any thing to a man, the party grieved may not onely have this Action upon the Statute for his private relief, but also the offender shall be for his contempt punished at the Kings Sute, by Fine and Imprisonment. Co. 2 part, Inst. 131. 163.

CHAP. CLI.

Of Sute, Substance, and Circumstance.

His word is sometimes taken for a Sute in Law, which is nothing but an Action. See Action.

SeB. 1:
Sute, what?

Also sometimes it is taken for the following of one in chase, as Feesh-sute. See Escape.

The kinder!

Also sometimes it is taken for the Attendance, which a Tenant or other doth owe to the Court of his Lord. And so it is taken here, and then it is either Real or Royal, which is the service that men owe to the Sheriff's Turn or Leet, or other Law-days, unto which, when are bound to come, to hear, and learn the Law by which they are to be governed; and it is called Royal, because of their Allegiance which men are sworn to there; and therein their Oath is, That they shall be loyal Subjects to the King.

Sute at a Law day,

And this service is not to be done in respect of the Land that he holdeth within the County or place where the Leet is, but by reason of his person and abode there, and ought to be done twice a year; and for default hereof, he is to be amerced, and not distrained.

Amerced,

Sute Covenant is, where one is bound and hath undertaken by Covenant to do Sute to the Court of another.

Sute Custom is, where by the Custom of the place, the Tenant or other is to do Sute to the Court of the Lord.

Sute Service is the Sute that one is bound to yield to his Lord's Court, or the Sheriff's County Court, or some Hundred, from three weeks to three weeks; and this is not to be done, in respect of a man's person or abode in the place, wherein the Court is; but in respect of a man's Land which he holdeth of the Manor, or within the County or Hundred, where the Court is. And for default of this, a man shall be distrained and not amerced: And if a man refuse to do his Sute he oweth to such a County Court, or Court Baron, he may be compelled to it by Writ called Seffa ad Curiam. And if a Tenure be to come to a Leet or Hundred to do some special Service, as to be Cryer, &c. it is a good Service, but not a Sute Service. Bro. Sute 17. F.N.B. 158.

Seffa ad Curiam, what.

And in this case of Sute Service, which is to be done in respect of the Land, if the Land come to diverse Parceners, the eldest of them must do all the Sute; and for that purpose, if he or she refuse, may be compelled by a Writ called Seffa facienda per illum qui habet initiam partem: But in this case the eldest shall have Contribution of the rest; and if the eldest do make all the Sute, and the rest will not contribute, he may have a Writ of Contributions facienda against them, and compel them to it.

Who shall do the Sute.

Seffa per illum

Contributions
facienda, what.

So in all other like cases, where there be many Feoffees, the Lord shall have but one Sute, and the rest shall contribute. F. N. B. 116. Marib. chap. 9.

But if one have Land in divers Hundreds, he can do no Sute, but where he doth dwell; and if he be distrained to do Service elsewhere, he may discharge it by a Writ. Fitz. 16.

None shall be distrained to do Sute of Court, unless he be specially bound to it by his Charter of Feoffment, except such as they, or their Ancestors were wont to do it: Forty years before the making of this Statute, where then they were infeofed by Deed or without Deed.

If a man live within one Hundred, and hold Land of 7: 5. as of his Hundred of W. which is another Hundred, and of another man, yet he must do Sute in the Hundred where he dwells, by reason of his personal residence, and so to the County Court. Mish. 9 Car. Sir Pierrey Harbert's case in the Exchequer. See the old Statute of Marib. 9.

CHAP. CLII.

Of Subsidy and Superfedeas.

Self. 1.
Subsidy, what.

Subsidy was a Tax or Tribute, assessed by Parliament, and granted by the Commons to be levied of every Subject according to the value of his Lands or Goods, after the rate of four shillings in the pound for Land, and two shillings eight pence for Goods, as was most commonly used, and the manner of Assessing every Mans Lands or Goods, was this

First, There did issue a Commission out of the Chancery, to Men of Honor or Worship, in every County, by virtue whereof, To call unto them the Head-Constables or Bailiffs of every Hundred, and by them the Constable, and three or four of the substantiallest Householdiers in every Town, within their Hundred, at a certain day: Which men so called, or as many of them, as the Commissioners thought good to use, did rate the Inhabitants of their own Town, in such reasonable manner as they thought meet, yet by the discretion of the said Commissioners, and then every man after his value set down, must at their time, pay to the Collectors appointed, after the rate aforesaid.

Tonnage and Poundage.

For the Subsidy of Tonnage and Poundage, see Customs and Franchises, and the Act, 11 March, 1650.

Tax and Tallage,
what.

Tax and Tallage was a Dixme Quinzime, or other Subsidy granted to the King by Parliament.

Quinzime,
what.

Quinzime was called a Fifteen, and it was a payment granted by the Parliament to the King, and by him laid upon the Subjects; which was rated after the Fifteenth part of Mens, Lands, or Goods in the Country; and after the tenth part of Mens Lands in Cities and Burroughs. 7 H. 7. 5. Broo. 242. Co. 2 part, Inst. fol. 77.

Tenth.

So that this doth differ from a Subsidy, for that is uncertain as mens Estates be, because it doth light on the person; this is certain, because it doth light on the Towns, Parishes, and Villages in general; and it is so called, because it amounted to one Fifteenth part of that the Town was valued at heretofore; and every Town, City, and Village, greater or less, do or may know by the Exchequer Roll, what their Fifteen doth amount unto: And this was to be levied of Mens Lands, or Goods, as the Custom and use of the place was. Dyer 143.

Dixmes, what.

Dixmes was a Tribute laid on the Spirituality, and granted to the King by Parliament, as the Quinzime was upon the Laity. Broo. 342.

Impositions of Benevolence.
Pole money,
Ship-money.

All Exactions and Impositions of money upon the people, without their consent in Parliament, by way of Benevolence.

Poll-money, Ship-money, and the like, declared to be unlawful, and taken away. See 25 Edw. 1. De tallagio non concedendo tem' Ed. 1. 1 Ed. 3. Stat. 2. cap. 6. 11 Rich. 2. 9. 9 H. 4. 7. 1 R. 3. 2. 19 H. 7. 8. 16, 17 Car. 14. 3 Car. 1. 1.

See the new Government. Numb. 30.

No Imposition of money may be but in Parliament, see Customs. Co. 2 part, Inst. cap. 30. Petition of Right, B. Car.

Superfedeas,
what.

Superfedeas is a Writ that lieth in divers cases, and implies a Command or Request to forbear or stay the doing of that, which in appearance of Law were to be done, were it not for the cause, whereupon the Writ is granted. As for example.

A man is to have Surety of the Peace against him, of whom he will swear, that he is afraid, and the Justice required hereunto, cannot deny him; yet if the party be formerly bound to the Peace, either in the Chancery, or elsewhere; this Writ of Superfedeas lieth to stay the Justice from binding the same party to the Peace, which otherwise he might not deny. F. N. B. 236. Poulton de Pace 26.

Where a man doth bring a Writ of Error to Reverse a Judgment, he may have a Superfedeas to stay Execution upon the Judgment; but if the Judgment were for Debt on an Obligation, single or double, or upon a Contract, he must first enter into a Recognizance to prosecute with effect, according to the Statute of 3 Jac. 8. Plow. 49: 5 H. 7. 22. Dyer 284. 193: 81.

If one be sued, and a Capias or Exigent be awarded against a man, in the Term he may have a Superfedeas out of the same Court, whence the Capias did issue, or out of the Term, from the Chancery; that the Sheriff shall take Surety of him and let him go, or that he shall not arrest him, if he be not arrested. F. N. B. 137.

So if one be indicted before the Justices of the Peace, and a Capias is out, he may by this Writ command the Sheriff to take Sureties for his appearance, and not to arrest him, or if he have to let him go.

If the Sheriff in his County Court will proceed in such Causes, as wherein he is not to meddle, the party grieved may have a Superfedeas and stay him, and so in divers other cases. F. N. B. 236, 237.

But in Attaint, he shall not have a Superfedeas to stay Execution; nor in case, where a Sheriff or Gaoler doth set at liberty one that is in his custody upon an Execution, and after doth take him again: For in this case he must have an Audita Querela. See Audita Querela. Crompt. Jurisd. 52, 59. 64. 24. 91. 98: 113.

All Writs of Superfedeas shall be void, granted for Peace or Good-behavior in the Kings Bench or Chancery, unless such Proces be granted upon motion in open Court, and good cause shewed upon Oath, and the same indorsed upon the Writ, and upon sufficient Sureties, and unless the Prosecution against the party for the Peace or Good-behavior, be bona fide. And here false Sureties for the gaining of such Writs shall be punished. 21 Jac. 8.

Where it lieth, or not, and how.

1. Surrender, what.

Surrendror, Surrendree.

2. The kinds.

CHAP. CLIII.

Of a Surrender and Tenants.

Surrender properly taken, is the yielding or delivering up of Lands or Tenements, and the Estate a man hath therein, unto another that hath a higher and greater Estate in the same Lands or Tenements: But it is sometimes improperly applied to other things. He that doth Surrender, is called the Surrendror, and he to whom it is made, is called the Surrendree. Co. super Little 337.

And there be three kinds of Surrender. 1. A Surrender properly taken at the Common-Law. 2. A Surrender by Custom of Lands holden by Custom, or Customary Estates, whereof we speak not here. 3. A Surrender improperly taken, as of a Deed, or Grant of a Rent-charge, of a Patent, and of Lands in Fee-simple to the King.

The Surrender properly taken, is of two sorts. 1. Express, or in Deed, which is when it is done by apt words, and the Express Agreement of the parties. 2. In Law or implied, which is when it is wrought by consequent and operation of Law, or when the Law doth interpret or enure something done to another intent to make a Surrender of it. And in the first case it is sometimes by word onely, and sometimes by writing; and when it is by writing, it is said to be an Instrument testifying by apt words, That the particular Tenant of the Lands or Tenements for life or years doth consent and agree that he which hath the next and immediate remainder or reversion thereof shall also have the particular estate of the same in possession, and that he yeeldeth the same unto him.

3. The effect of it.

Extinguishment.

Covenant.

The Fruit and effect of a surrender is, that it doth pass the estate of the surrendror to the surrendree, and that hereupon the estate of the surrendror is drowned and extinct in the estate of the surrendree, And yet not so but that to some purposes it shall bee said to have continuance still. And therefore if tenant for life grant a rent-charge and after doth surrender his land; in this case the rent-charge shall continue notwithstanding the surrender. So if lessee for life make a lease for years rendring rent, and the lessee for life surrender his estate; in this case albeit the primitive estate for life be yeilded up, yet the derivative estate for years shall continue notwithstanding, but the surrendree shall not have the rent reserved upon the lease for years. So if lessee for life or years break a covenant with his lessor, and after surrender his estate to him, his breach of covenant is not hereby salved, for the lessor may have an action of covenant still notwithstanding the surrender. And if one seised of land grant a rent out of it in fee, and this rent is extended on a statute, or granted for less time to another and then the grantee doth surrender the deed of the grant of the rent to the tenant of the land; in this case the rent shall continue as to him that hath execution and the grantee. And if one make a lease for years rendring rent, and the lessee surrender his estate to the lessor; hereby the rent is extinct: but if the lessor grant the rent to a stranger before the surrender contra. And if one lease for years, and the lessee let parcel of his term to his lessor rendring rent, and after the lessee surrender his whole estate; in this case it seems the rent is determined. Co. super Litt. 338. Co. 1.96. Bro. surrender. 47. Perk. Sett. 591. Co. 8. 145. 7. 39. Bro. Sur. 42.

4. What shall be said a surrender in law of lands. And by what means an estate shall be surrendered in law. Or not By acceptance and taking of a new estate.

If lessee for life or years take a new lease of him in reversion of the same thing in particular contained in the former lease for life or years; this is a surrender in law of the first lease. As if lessee for his own or anothers life in possession or reversion take a new lease for years; or a lessee for forty years take a new lease for fifty years; the first lease in both these cases is surrendered.

And this rule holdeth, albeit the second lease be for a less time then the first, as if lessee for life accept a lease for years, or lessee for twenty years, accept a Lease for two years. And albeit the second lease be voidable, as being made upon condition, as if lessee for twenty years take a new lease for 20 years upon condition that if such a thing happen the second lease shall be void, and the thing doe after happen; in this case both these leases are become void. As where the lessor doth grant the reversion to the lessee upon condition, and after the condition is broken.

Or if the second lease be made by tenant in tail, or the like: as if a man make a lease for years of land, and then make a Feoffment to another of the land, and then take back an estate to him and his wife of the land, and then make a new lease to the lessee for ten years; this is a surrender in law of the first lease. But if the second lease be meerly void, then it is otherwise. And therefore if the lessor doe by words of covenant only promise to his lessee that he shall have a new lease, and doe never actually make him; this is no surrender in law. And this rule as it seems holdeth also, albeit the second lease be to the lessee and a stranger, or to the lessee and his wife: and albeit the second lease be by word only, and the first lease be by deed, if so be that the thing granted by the lease be such a thing as may pass by word without writing; and albeit the second lease be in another right, as if the husband have a lease for years in the right of his wife and then take a new lease to himself in his own name: and albeit the first lease be to begin presently, and the second be to begin at a day to come, or à covenant; and albeit there be a mean estate between, as if land be let to A. for years, and after let to B. for years, to begin after the first term, and the assignee of A. doth take a new lease. So if one demise land for ten years to one, and after demise it for ten years to another, to begin at Michaelmas, and after the first lessee accept a new lease. For in all these cases there is a surrender in law of the first leases. 14 H. 8. 15. Plow. 194. Dier. 28. Co. 10. 67. Perk. Sett. 617. Co. 5. 11. Fitz. Surrender. 3. Co. super Litt. 218. 37 H. 6. 17. Dier. 140, 141. Dier. 272. Dier. 178. 177. Co. 5. 54. 55. Kelw. 70. Dier. 140. 141. 1. Dier. 178. Pasc. 40. El. Co. super. Lit. 338. Co. 6. 69. 10. 53. 67. 5. 11. Dier. 280. Dier. 93. 112. And

And if there be two lessees for life, or years, and one of them take a new lease for years, this is a surrender of his moiety; whereby it doth appear that a surrender in law may be made of some estates which cannot be surrendered by a surrender in fait; for fortior est dispositio legis quam hominis. And hence it is that a corporation aggregate may make a surrender in law without deed, although it cannot make an express surrender without deed. But if the lessee doe only licence the lessor to make a feoffment and to give livery of seisin: or do give livery of seisin for him as his Attorney: or doe licence him to enter into the land and no more, neither of these things shall be said to be a surrender in law. So if the second lease be made of another, and not of the same thing whereof the first lease is made, as where the first lease is of the land, and the second is made of a rent or other profit to be taken out of the land, or the first is of a Manor, and the second of the Bayliwick or Stewardship of the Manor, or the first is of a Park, and the second is of the Keepership of the Park; in these cases there is no surrender of the first lease. Also if the second lease be not a good lease, perhaps it shall not be construed a surrender. See Co. 2. Lanes Case. 17. Dier. 46. Co. 2. 60: Co. 6. 69. 10. 67. Perk. Sect. 608. Bro. Surrender. 48. Trin. 5. Jac. Ca. 6. 69. Adjudged.

And if lessee for 20 years make a lease for 10 years and he after take a lease for 5 years; this is not properly a surrender, but it maketh void the first lease as it enureth by way of dissolution of Contract.

But if the first lease be of the land it self, and the second lease is of the vesture of the same land, this is held to be a surrender of the first lease. So if the second lease be not to begin untill the first lease end, the taking of this second lease is no surrender of the first lease. So it hath been said if one make a lease of black acre in Dale, and the lessee accept a second lease of all the lands of the lessor in Dale in generall words, and the lessor that doth make the lease have divers other lands there besides this acre, that this is no surrender of the first lease. Sed quere of this, for others do much doubt it.

So if one enter into land, and make a lease for the trial of the title only, and after the lessor (he and the lessee being both out of possession) make another lease of the same thing to the lessee; it seems this is no surrender of the first lease: but if the lessor enter before he make the lease contra. Trin. 5. Jac. Sir Jo. Chamberlains case. See Dier. 100. Co. 5. 11. Per. Curiam. B. R. 9. Jac.

To make a good surrender in deed of lands, and to make them to pass by such a surrender, these things are first of all required.

That the surrendror be a person able to grant and make, and the surrendree a person capable and able to take and receive a surrender, and that they both have such estates as are capable of a surrender. And for this purpose.

1. That the surrendror have an estate in possession of the thing surrendered at the time of the surrender made, and not a bare right thereunto only.

2. That the surrender be to him that hath the next immediate estate in remainder or reversion, and that there be no intervenient estate coming between.

3. That there be a privity of estate between the surrendror and the surrendree.

4. That the surrendree have a higher and greater estate in the thing surrendered, then the surrendror hath, so that the estate of the surrendror may be drowned therein.

5. That he have the estate in his own right, and not in the right of his wife &c.

6. And that he be sole seised of this estate in remainder or reversion, and not in jointenancy.

7. Some make a seventh and that is that he that doth surrender be in possession of the thing surrendered. And therefore hold that the surrender of land made in London of land in Essex of the land when the surrendror is out of the possession is void. Goldsb. 47. Pl. 3.

As for examples, infants, women covert, mad and lunatick men, and all such like persons, as are disabled to grant, are disabled to make a surrender, and none but such as may grant their land may surrender their land. See Perk. in his chap. of surrender in toto. Bro. Surrender in toto. Fitz. Surrender in toto. Co. super. Litt. 338. A Corporation aggregate of many cannot make an express surrender without a deed, but it may make such a surrender by deed. And such persons as are disabled to take by a grant are disabled to take by a surrender, and such as may be grantees, may be surrendrees; and therefore a surrender made to an infant is good. If the husband have a lease or estate for years in the right of his wife, he alone, or he and his wife together may surrender this; but if the husband have an estate for life in the right of his wife, being tenant in dower or otherwise, and he alone, or he and she together surrender this; this surrender is good only during the life of the husband, except it be made by fine. Co. 10. 67. Perk. Sect. 613. 612. Bro. surrender. 44. 21 H. 7. 25. One executor may surrender an estate or lease for years which the executors have in the right of their testator. If there be two tenants in common, and one of them have the particular estate, and the other the fee-simple; as where an estate is limited to two and the heirs of one of them, and he that hath the estate for life doth alien his part to a stranger; in this case the alienee may surrender to the other jointenant. So if there be three jointenants for life, and the fee-simple is limited to the heirs of one of them; and one of the jointenants for life doth release to the other, and he to whom this release is made doth surrender to him that hath the fee-simple; this is a good surrender of a third part. But otherwise one jointenant cannot surrender to another jointenant, albeit he be tenant for life which doth make; and the tenant in fee-simple, that doth take the surrender. Perk. Sect. 586, 587. Fitz. sur. 2. A lessee for life or years, may surrender to him that is next in remainder in fee-simple, or fee-tail, or to him in reversion in fee, and this is a good surrender, and a surrender as it seems may be made to the grantee of the reversion before attornment; so as attornment be afterwards made. Perk. Sect. 584. Co. super. Litt. 338. Per. Sect. 600. Bro. sur. 4. And in case of the surrender of an estate for life there needs no livery of seisin as in case of the grant of an estate for life. Dier. 251. 358. 280. A lessee for years of a term to begin at a day to come cannot surrender it by an actual surrender before the day the term begin, as he may by a surrender in law. Perk. Sect. 601, 602. 4 H. 7. 10. Co. 6. 69. If lessee for life be disseised, or lessee for years be ousted, and before his entry or the getting of the possession again, he surrender his estate to him in reversion; this surrender is void. So if a woman that hath title of dower surrender it to him in reversion before she hath recovered it; this surrender is void. And yet if lessee for years after his term is begun and before his entry, when no body doth keep from him the profits, doe surrender his estate; it seems this is a good surrender; but if another enter before him, and keep him out, it seems otherwise. Perk. Sect. 600, 601, 602, 603. If there be lessee for years, the remainder for life, the remainder or reversion in fee, and the lessee for years be ousted, and he that ousted him die seised, and then the lessee for years enter, and then the tenant for life surrender to him in remainder or reversion in fee; this is not a good surrender, for there is in this case but a bare right of remainder for life and in fee; but if the lessee for years had not been ousted, it had been a good surrender. If there be lessee for years, the remainder for life, the remainder in fee; the lessee for years may surrender to the lessee for life, and so may the tenant for life to him in remainder or reversion in fee, but if there be tenant for life, the remainder for life, the remainder in fee; in this case the second tenant for life cannot surrender to him in remainder in fee. Perk. Sect. 605. Dier. 251. If a lease be made for life or years to A. the remainder for life to B. the remainder in fee tail to C. and the first tenant for life or years doth surrender to C. or to the lessor, B. being the next in remainder for life being then living; this is not a good surrender, neither can it take effect as a surrender in respect of the intervenient estate. And so some say the law is if the middle remainder be but for years only; as if a lease be made for years, the remainder for years, and the first termor surrender his interest to the lessor; this is no good surrender. Sed quere. Perk. Sect. 588. For it should seem that a future interest will no more hinder an actual surrender of the first lessee, then a surrender in law. And so also it seems the law is for a concurrent lease, which for the latter part of it is in the nature of a future interest. Dier. 112. Plow. 190. Dier. 93. Plow. 432, 433.

But

But if in this case it fall out the middle remainder be void; as where a lease is made to A. for life, or years the remainder to a monk (who is a person incapable) for life or years, the remainder to I. S. in fee; in this case A. the first tenant may surrender to him in remainder in fee, and the surrender is good. If lessee for 20. years make a lease for 5. years, and the lessee for 5. years enter, and after the lessee for 20. years surrender to him in reversion or remainder; this is a good surrender. So also if the two lessees join in the surrender. So also if the first lessee surrender first, and the lessee for 5. years surrender after. But if the lessee for five years surrender to him in the reversion or the remainder before the surrender of the lessee for 20. years; this cannot take effect as a surrender for two causes. Perk. Sect. 604. 14 H. 7. 3. Plow. 541. Bro. Sur. 16.

1. Because there is a remnant of the term as an intervenient estate to hinder the drowning of the term.

2. Because there wants a privity between the lessee for five years, and him in reversion.

If tenant in fee-simple surrender to the Lord Paramount of whom the land is held; this can never take effect as a surrender, unless it be in a speciall case where the Lord hath cause to have a Cessavit. So if tenant in tail surrender to him in remainder or reversion in fee-simple; this cannot take effect as a surrender. So if lessee for life surrender to him in remainder for years: or tenant for the life of B. surrender to him that hath an estate for the life of C. these are void surrenders; for the estates of them to whom they are made, are not capable of such surrenders, for they are not greater then the estates of the surrendrors, and therefore not able to drown the estates surrendred. And yet if lessee for the life of another, or for his own life surrender his estate to him in remainder that is tenant for his own life, this is a good surrender, for an estate, for a mans own life is greater in judgement of law then an estate for another mans life. And hence it is that if a lease bee made to two for their lives, the remainder to a third person for his own life, and one of the first tenants for life surrender his estate unto him in remainder for life; this is a good surrender for a moiety.

If lessee for life or years surrender to him in remainder or reversion that hath no good estate in the remainder or reversion, as where the remainder or reversion is granted by word only, or being granted by deed there is no attornment of the tenant to the grant, or the like; this surrender is not good. And yet if tenant in taile make a lease for life whereby he gaineth a new reversion (but defeasible) and the tenant for life doth surrender to the tenant in tail, this shall be a good surrender. So if a woman inheriatrix have a husband, and they have issue a son, and the husband dieth, and she take another husband, and he letteth the land for life, and the wife dieth, and the tenant for life doth surrender his estate to the second husband, this is a good surrender to most purposes. Bro. sur. 9. Fitz. sur. 10. Perk. Sect. 590. Perk. Sect. 589. Co. super. Litt. 42. 3. 61. Perk. Sect. 590. Co. 2. 46. Co. super. Litt. 338.

If a feme sole be seised of land in fee, and she make a lease thereof to a stranger for life, and then take a husband, and the lessee surrender to the husband, this is no good surrender, neither can it enure so, because he to whom it is made hath not the reversion in his own but in his wives right. Perk. Sect. 612.

It is further also required in every good surrender, that if it be made by word and without deed, that then it be made in the same County where the land to be surrendred doth lie, but by writing a man may make a surrender of lands that doe lie in any other County, and in what place so ever it doth lie. And a surrender may be by word or writing of lands lying within the same County in any place out of the land. And therefore if tenant for life surrender to him in reversion in any place out of the land within the same County, and the surrendree agree to it, the freehold is in him presently. Bro. sur. 2. 8. Fitz. Partition. 5. Perk. Sect. 583.

3. That it be made of such things, of which a surrender may be made. For surrenders may not be made of estates in fee-simple, or fee-taile, nor yet of rights or titles onely of estates for life or years, nor yet of part of an estate for life or years, as if a man have a lease for ten years, he cannot surrender the last seven years, and keep to himself

2. In respect of the place where it is made. And where the surrender of land in one County may be good for the lands that doe lie in another country. Or not.
3. In respect of the matter or thing. And of what things a surrender may be made. Or not.

himself the three years. But otherwise one may surrender any kinde of estate for life as by dower, by the curtesie, or as tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct, or for years, or years determinable upon lives, and that of any mesuages, houses, lands, commons, rents or the like, that are grantable from one to another, and such surrenders are good. See Brownlows Rep. 1. part. 40. 41. 2. part. 155. Bro. surrend. in toto: Per. chap. Sur. in toto. Co. 5. 11 super. Litt. 338.

4. In respect of the manner. And how and by what words a surrender may be made. And where it may be made without deed, and upon condition. Or nor.

4. That there be words, or words and deeds sufficient to make the mind of the surrendror to appear that he is willing and desirous to part with & yield up the thing surrendered into the hands of the surrendree. And herein it is to be known that albeit the words surrender, Give or yeeld up, be the most significant and proper words whereby to make a surrender, yet any other words, especially if it be in the surrender of a lease for years that, do testifie and declare the will and assent of him that is the particular tenant, that he in the remainder or reversion shall have the estate of the tenant, be sufficient to pass the estate by way of surrender. And therefore if lessee for life or years doe by word or writing say, that he will hold the land no longer, and wish him in reversion or remainder therefore to enter. Or that it is his desire that he shall enter into the land, and have it and his estate therein: Or that he is content that he shall have his estate, or have his lease; such, or any such like declaration as this made to him in reversion or remainder, will be a good surrender. Perk. Sett. 607 608, 609. Dier. 251. Bro. sur. 1. 35. 37. 17. 21 H. 7. 7. So if lessee for years deliver his Indenture to a stranger, to deliver it and all his estate up to him in reversion, and doe appoint the stranger to deliver and surrender it to him in reversion, and he doe so, and he in reversion accept thereof, this is a good surrender; but otherwise it is of an estate for life.

So if the particular Tenant doe by the words Give, Grant or Confirm, pass his estate to him in reversion, and he doe enter and agree to it; this is a good surrender.

And by all these surrenders the estates will pass by way of surrender, except it be in some speciall cases where the intent of the parties doth plainly appear to be that the estate shall not pass by way of surrender. See Brownl. 1. part. 208. Hil. 37 E. 6. R. Sleigh and Batemans case. But if a lessee for life or years doe only goe from the house or land; and carry away his goods and cattell, and so waive the possession for a time, either because the lessor shall not distrain them for rent behind, or the like, and thereupon the lessor doth enter and enjoy it; this is no surrender, neither is this a good yeelding up of his estate. And in such a manner and by such words as before, any thing that may be granted by word without writing, may be surrendered by word without writing, so as it be made within the same County where the thing surrendered doth lie.

And this holdeth true albeit the estate to bee surrendered were created by deed.

But such things, as commons, rents, advowsons, reversions, remainders, and the like, that cannot bee granted without deed cannot be surrendered without deed. And therefore if a lease be made for life, the remainder for life by word of mouth without any writing; he in the remainder for life cannot surrender his remainder for life without deed.

So where one hath a rent, advowson or the like, as Tenant in Dower, or by the courtesie; this cannot be surrendered without Deed. And in case where there is any speciall matter to be contained in the surrender, as reservation of rent, condition, or the like, there for the most part it must be by deed; or it will not be good. And therefore if tenant for life declare himself by word of mouth to be contented and agreed that he in the reversion shall have the land and his estate therein; rendring ten shillings a years Rent: or yaying such a summe of money, or upon condition that if he survive the lessor he shall have it again &c. this is no good surrender. Perk. Sett. 581, 582: 583. Fitz. Sur. 1. Co. super Litt. 338: Dier. 251. Bro. Sur. 16. And a surrender may be made also upon a condition precedent or subsequent, as if it be with reservation of rent that if it be not paid it shall be void; but if it be an estate for life that is so surrendered, it seems it must be made by writing indented, and so likewise it should seem the law is of the surrender of a lease for years upon a condition, or however it is most safe so to doe. Perk. Sect. 607, 608. 609, Dier. 251. Bro. sur. 1. 35. 37. 17. 21 H. 7. 7. Hil. 37 El. B. R. Sleight and Batemans case. Perk. Sect. 581, 582, 583. Fitz. sur. 1. Co. super Litt. 338 Dier 251. Bro. sur. 16. Perk. Se. 624. 623. Co. sup. Lit. 218.

5. That the surrendree doe agree to, and accept of it, for untill then the surrender is not perfect, but if the surrendree doe once agree to it, he cannot after disagree, for his first agreement doth perfect the surrender. But the actual entry of the surrendree into the land is not necessary. And therefore if tenant for life or years surrender to him in reversion out of the land, and he agree to it, he hath the land in him presently. And yet he may not bring any action of Trespass against any man for any Trespass done upon the land untill he have made his entry: Perk. Sect. 608. Litt. Bro. 163. March. Rep. 5.

5. In respect of the agreement of him to whom the surrender is made And what agreement is necessary. Agreement. Trespass.

If I make a lease to I. S. for so many years as I. D. shall name, I. S. cannot surrender this before I. D. name the time. Goldsb. 168. by Judge Popham.

But here note, that in the cases before where things may not pass by way of surrender, either because of an intervenient estate, or the like, if there be sufficient words in the deed, it may avail to other purposes, and may enure and pass the thing by way of grant; but then if it be an estate for life that is intended to be surrendered, there must be livery of seisin made upon the deed. And wherefore if there be lessee for years, the remainder for life or years, the remainder in fee, and the lessee for years in possession doth surrender and grant all his estate to him in remainder in fee; howsoever this deed cannot enure as a surrender, yet it shall enure as a good grant of the estate of the lessee for years unto him in remainder in fee. Perk. Sect. 588, 589.

A surrender in generall shall be taken most strongly against the surrendror, and most beneficially for the surrendree. And therefore if I hold of the lease of A. one acre for life, and another acre for years, and I surrender to A. all my lands, or all my lands I hold of his lease; by this surrender both the acres are surrendered. But if the surrender be of all the lands I have or hold for life, or of all the lands I have or hold for years of the lease of A. contra. And if I hold one acre for life of the lease of the father of I. S. and I hold another acre for life or years of the lease of I. S. himself, and I surrender to I. S. all the land I hold of his lease; by this the land that I had by the lease of his father doth not pass. A surrender to one jointenant shall be construed to enure to them all. But if tenant for life or years grant his estate to one of the jointenants in reversion, it seems this shall not enure as a surrender to them all, but as a grant to him alone. Perk. Sect. 610. 611. Perk. Sect. 615. Bro. Sur. 54.

6. How a surrender shall be construed and taken.

If the lessor make, and the lessee take a new lease upon condition, this surrender in law is absolute, and albeit the condition be broken, yet the first lease is gone. But if the lessee surrender or grant his estate to the lessor upon condition; this condition if it be broken may revert the estate. Co. super Litt. 218.

See more in the next question, and in Exposition of Deeds.

If any kind of tenant for life of land infeoff him in remainder or reversion of the land, or grant his estate to him in remainder or reversion; this shall enure as a surrender. And if lessee for years before his term doe begin, make a feoffment to him in reversion or remainder, or grant his estate to him; this shall enure as a surrender. And if lessee for life grant his estate to him in reversion, the remainder in fee to another; this shall enure as a surrender, and this remainder is void. But if such a tenant for life make a lease to him in remainder or reversion for the terme of the life of him in remainder or reversion; this shall not enure as a surrender because it doth not give the whole estate, but it shall enure by way of grant. So if lessee for life make a lease to him in remainder in tail for term of the life of him in remainder; this shall not enure as a surrender, but as a grant, and shall end with the life of the grantee. If lessee for forty years make a lease for thirty seven years on condition, & after grant his estate to him in reversion, and the second lessee attorn; this shall enure as a surrender. If there be tenant for life, the remainder in tail to a stranger, and the remainder in tail to another stranger, the remainder in fee to the tenant for life, and the tenant for life doth make a feoffment to the first tenant in tail, this shall enure as a surrender of the estate for life and as a grant of the reversion in fee also. If tenant for life being a woman take a husband

7. Where a feoffment, lease, grant, or other act made, or done by the tenant for life or years, shall be a surrender or not. And how it shall enure or be construed and taken.

Husband, and then her Husband and she by Deed indented make a lease to him in reversion for the life of the Husband; this shall not enure as a surrender, but as a grant. If there be Tenant for his own life, the remainder to I S for his life, and the first Tenant for life surrender to him in remainder for the life of him in remainder; it seems this shall enure as a surrender, and is no forfeiture; but if he grant it to him for the life of a stranger, and make livery of seisin, this is a forfeiture. If Lessee for life, the Reversion being in jointenants, grant the Land to one or all of the jointenants for twenty years; this shall not enure as a surrender, but as a grant, for there remains an interest in the Lessee still as a mean estate. If Lessee for years make him in Reversion or Remainder his Executor; this shall not enure as a surrender, albeit it doe give him the whole estate. If Land be given to the Husband and Wife, the Remainder to I, S, and the Husband discontinue in Fee, and take back an estate to him and his Wife, the Remainder to W N, and die, and the Wife claim in by the second estate, and surrender to W N; this shall not enure as a surrender, but as a grant: *Bro. sur. 3. 5. 2. When it is done or made to him and a stranger.

Forfeiture.

If Lessee for life or years grant his estate to him in Remainder or Reversion and a stranger; this shall enure as a surrender of the one half to him in Reversion and as a grant of the other moiety to the stranger. And yet it is said, that if Lessee for life of Land grant his estate to him in the Reversion and two others, that hereby they have a joint estate, and the survivor shall have the whole. If Lessee for life make a lease for his own life to the Lessor, the Remainder to the Lessor and a stranger in Fee; this shall enure as a surrender of the one moiety, and a forfeiture of the other moiety. If Tenant for life surrender to the Husband of a woman Tenant in Tail or in Fee; this shall enure as a grant, not as a surrender. And so also it seems is the Law when the surrender is to the Husband and Wife. And if B be Tenant for life, the remainder to C in Tail, the remainder to D in Tail, and B infeoff C and S his Wife in Fee; this shall not enure as a surrender, but it is a forfeiture: so that if C die without issue D may enter. If there be Lessee for life, the reversion to two Coparcenours, and one of them take a Husband, and the Lessee doth grant his estate to her and her Husband; this shall not enure as a surrender, but as a grant. And yet if Tenant for life doe grant his estate to the Husband and Wife, she having the reversion if she be an infant and within age at this time: it seems this shall enure as a surrender, not as a grant, *Bro. surrender 11. 3. When it is done with him in reversion or remainder.

If Tenant for life, or years, and he in Reversion or Remainder by word without Deed join in a Feoffment; it shall be said the surrender of the estate for life or years to him in the reversion, and the Feoffment of him in reversion.

But if he in reversion infeoff the Tenant for life without any Deed; this shall enure first as a surrender of the Lease for life, and then as a Feoffment, See more in Deed Numb. and see Brownl. 2 part 75. 156. Plow. 140. Dier 358.

8. Where a Deed or Rent may be surrendered. And how such a surrender shall enure or be taken.

If I have a rent in Fee, for life, or years, issuing out of another mans Manor, or other lands, I may surrender it, for if I deliver the Deed of the grant of the rent to be cancelled unto any one that hath any estate of the Manor or Land in Fee-simple, for life, or years, in possession or remainder, either solely by himself, or jointly with others, this is a good surrender, and hereby the rent is extinct and gone.

But one that is Tenant in Tail of a Rent cannot surrender it, neither will the delivering up of the Deed in this case determine the rent.

And if one be seised of Land out of which a rent is issuing in Fee, and is disseised, and during the disseisin the grantee of the rent surrender his rent, and give up his Deed; it seems this doth not extinguish the rent, yet hath the Grantee no remedy for his rent when he hath delivered up his Deed. And yet if one be seised of Land in Fee, out of which a rent is issuing in Fee, and he die without Heir, so that the Land Escheat, and before the Lord enter upon his Escheat, he that hath the Rent doth surrender the Deed of the Rent to to the Lord ; it seems this is a good Surrender to extinguish the Rent. And if the Grantee of a Rent-charge in Fee, grant the same to him in Fee, that is seised of the Land in Fee ; this shall enure to extinguish the Rent, but if he grant it to one that hath onely an Estate for life, contra. 14 H.7.2. Perk. Sess. 585, 590, 591, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 606.

Of Tenants.

FOR all sorts of Tenants holding Estates, these things are to be known.

1. The Tenant in Fee-simple of Land hath the most absolute Estate ; and for him and his Estate, these things are to be known. Tenant in Fee-simple.

First, He may dispose this Land or Estate by Act executed, or his last Will at his pleasure, or he may charge it at his pleasure.

Secondly, He may make what waste and destruction he will upon his Land.

Thirdly, His Wife shall have Dower of a thirds of it, her Husband shall be Tenant by the courtesie of it that hath it.

Fourthly, He may notwithstanding forfeit it by committing Treason or Felony.

Fifthly, It will be liable to the Debts, the which he doth by Deed, engage his Heir to pay. See Estates.

2. The like may be said of a Tenant in Tail, save onely in the Case of Forfeiture by committing of Felony : And if he will dispose of, or charge his Land for longer time then his own life, he must do it by Fine or Recovery, otherwise by Deed he cannot do it. Tenant in Tail.

3. But a Tenant in Tail after possibility of Issue Extinct, hath but an Estate for life : And this although, as to the quality of it, it hath more Privileges then other Estates for life, for this Tenant is not punishable for Waste ; yet not as to the quantity : Therefore if this Tenant make an Estate in Fee simple, Fee-tail, or for any other life then his own of his Land, he doth forfeit it no more then any other Tenant that holdeth for his own life, as Tenant in Dower, by the Courtesie, or for his own, or for anothers life. Tenant in Tail after possibility of Issue Extinct. Tenant by the Courtesie, in Dower, for his own, or for anothers life.

As touching all which Estates, these things are to be known.

1. That none of these, but the first, can commit Waste, onely they may take and shall have reasonable Estovers of Fire-boot, Plough-boot, Houf-boot, Hay-boot, &c.

2. They cannot charge, or grant it, but for their own lives, and if they do so they will forfeit their Estates.

3. If they grant their Estates to another for their lives, or hold for anothers life, and they die that hold the Land, so there will be an Occupancy, if it be not carefully prevented.

4. There shall be no Tenancy in Dower, or by the Courtesie under such a Tenant.

5. They cannot make it liable to their Debts, but for their own time.

6. It is forfeitable for Treason or Felony : But it shall not be forfeit by an Out-lawry, as a Lease for years shall be.

7. The like is for a Lease for years ; wherein these things are to be known.

1. That a Lease for years shall go to an Executor or Administrator as a Chattle, which a Lease for life cannot do. Tenant for years.

2. The Tenant may grant or charge it, during the Lease onely, and if the Tenant make a Feoffment, Gift in Tail, or Lease for life of the Land, he forfeits it.

3. He may not do Waste.

4. If the Tenant be out-lawed, though but in a Personal Action, he doth forfeit it.

5. The Tenant at Will, and at Sufferance, is the lowest and least Estate of all ; this cannot be granted, nor charged, nor enjoyed but at pleasure.

See for these things in Estates.

Of the Term-time, and Tame Beasts.

Term, what.

Vacation.

His word Term is sometimes taken for the bounds and limits of time, as a Lease for Term of life, or for Term of years; or else for the time, when the Courts at Westminster, are all open to hear all Complaints for Wrongs, and to seek Right by course of Law: To which, in this respect, is opposed the rest of the year called Vacations. And of these Terms, are four in the year; but for them and their Returns. See Return. 32 H.8.21. Mart ch. 12. And the new Statute of 16, 17 Car.6. By which, Michaelmas Term is to begin at Tres Michael, for the keeping of Essoyns, Profers, Returns, and other Ceremonies heretofore used, and the said Term shall be four days after, unless it hapen a Sunday, then it is to be the next day. And in this Term shall be but six Returns, viz. Tres Michael. Mens. Michael. Craft. Anim. Craft. Mar. Oß. Martin. and Quind. Martin.

Self: 1.
Temps or Time.
Instance.

For Time, these things are to be known.

1. The Law doth divide and appty Instance (a thing not dividable by Logicians) to several purposes, as if they were several times. And herein are two Rules or Fictions of Law. First, Priority of time is imagined in things done together. Secondly, In things done in an instant, a Priority is supposed also. Hence it is, that he that kildeth himself, is adjudged a Felon, albeit he be not a Felon, till he have done it, and then he is not in being. Plow. 110. 540. 11 H.7.12. 7 H.4.16.

2. In divers cases the Law doth restrain and limit men to a time, for the having or taking of some benefit, preventing some loss, or doing of some thing, and herein the time is reasonable, and according to the nature of the thing. As for the bringing of Actions, in divers Cases there are divers Times; for which see 21 Jac. 16. and in Actions. So upon Penal Laws, the Sute must be according to the time set by the Law; for which see Action Popular. For the preventing of a Mans Bar to his Right in Land, by a Fine upon the Statute, he must enter or claim within five years; for which see Fine. To prevent the loss of his Goods, as a Waiff, Estray, or Wreck, he must put in his Claim within a year. To prevent the Bar of a Fine at Common Law, or a Recovery in a Writ of Right, he must make his Claim within a year and a day: And if Goods be lost in War, and recovered from the enemy, the owner must claim them before the Sun-set, or else the taker shall have them. Co. upon Littl. 254. 125. 136. 7 Ed.4.14. Plow. 272. 16. And he that brings a Writ of Right, he must allege himself or his Ancestors, to have been seised of the Land, demanded within such a time. Westm. 138. Co. upon Littl. 114. 115.

3. The Lord Protector by his Prerogative, is to have the Lands of Felons, that Escheat to other Lords, he is to have them first of all for a year and a day, and no longer to make spoil thereof, by Rasing, Earing, Cutting, and Subverting, Houses, Trees, Meadows, &c. But this is to be understood when a Tenant in Fee-simple is attainted, for where a Tenant in Tail, or Tenant for life, is attainted of Felony, there the Lord Protector will have the profits of the Land, during the life of the Tenant in Tail, or of the Tenant for life. Co. 2 part, Inst. 37.

CHAP. CLV.

Of a Testament.

Testament is the full and compleat declaration of a mans mind or last will of that he would have to be done after his death : It is in Latin Testamentum, i. Testatis mentis, the witness of a mans mind ; and to devise by Testament, is to speak by a mans Will what his mind is to have done after his death : And this is sometimes called a Will, or last Will ; for these words are Synonima, and are as it seems promiscuously used in our Law : yet most properly, a Will is of Land, and a Testament requires Executors. Howsoever by the Civil Law, it is then only said to be a Testament when there is an Executor made and named in it ; and when there is none but a Codicill only ; for a Codicill is the same that a Testament is, but that it is without an Executor ; and a man can make but one Testament that shall take effect, but he may make as many Codicills as he Will. And by the Common Law where Lands or Tenements are devised in writing, albeit there be no Executor named, yet there is properly called a last Will, and where it doth concerne Chattels only, a Testament. He that doth make the Testament is called the Testator ; and when a man dieth without Will, he is said to die intestate. Terms of the Law, Bro. sett. 360. Co. super Lit. 111. Swinb. of Wills 24.

what.

Testator.
Intestate:

Of Testaments there be two sorts, namely a Testament in writing or a written Testament, which is, where the minde of the Testator in his life time, by himself or some other, by his appointment, is put in writing. And a Testament by word or without writing, which is, where a man is sick, and for fear least death or want of memory, or speech, should surprize him, that he should be prevented if he stayed the writing of his Testament, desireth his neighbours and friends to bear witness of his last Will, and then declareth the same presently by words before them ; And this is called a Nuncupative, or Nuncupatorie Testament : And this being after his death proved by Witnesses, and put in writing by the Ordinary, is of as great force for any other thing but Land, as when at the first in the life of the Testator it is put in writing. A Codicill also is in writing, or by word as a Testament is : The Civilians have other divisions of Wills and Testaments, as solemn and unsolemn, privileged and unprivileged, whereof the Common Law maketh no mention. Perk. sett. 476. Co. super Lit. 111.

The kinds.

Nuncupative.

The parts of every compleat Testament whereof it doth consist, are two.

1. The making of Devise, or giving of Legacies. 2. The making and Ordination of an Executor ; for a Testament can be no more without, then a Codicill can be with an Executor. Terms of the Law, tit. Devise. Co. super Litt. 111. Swinb. lib. 1. c. 7.

Devise or Legacy, what.

A Devise or Legacy is where a man in his Testament doth give any thing to another ; the first of these Terms is properly applied to the gift of Lands, and the last to the gift of goods or chattels : and therefore a Devise strictly is said to be where a man in his Testament doth give his lands to another after his decease ; and a Legacy is said to be where a man in his Testament doth give any chattell to another to have after the death of the Testator ; but the word is promiscuously applied to the one and to the other. And he that gives by such a Will is called the Devisor, and he to whom the thing is given, the Devisee or Legatee.

Devisor, Devisee, or Le-gatee.

And a devise is sometimes simple and without condition, as where I give my land to another and his heires, or I give 20l. to another, without more words. And sometimes it is with a condition, which is when there is a quality added to the devise or legacy, whereby the effect of it suspended or hindered, and it is thereby made to depend on some future event.

my land if he pay 20l. to my Daughter, or so as he pay 20l. to my Daughter, or paying 20l. to my Daughter, or I give one 20l. if he marry my Daughter, or when he shall marry my Daughter, or I give my Wife 20l. a year whiles she shall live unmarried, or I give to him, or to whomsoever shall marry my Daughter 20l. or the like; in all these cases the devise is conditionall. The first kind of devise is called by the Civilians a simple assignation, and the latter a conditionall assignation. Dyer 317. 74. Co. super Lis. 217. Swinb. 132. 134. 136.

Executor
what.

Ordinary.

Administrator

Quintuplex.

Represent the person of the Testator.

An Executor in a large sense is taken for any one that is appointed to have the disposition and ordering of the goods and chattels of a man that is dead. And so there are three kinds of Executors: the first is a lege constitutus, who is therefore called legitimus, and such a one is the Ordinary of the Dioceses who hath ordinary Jurisdiction in matters Ecclesiasticall: the second is a Testatore constitutus, who is therefore called Testamentarius, and he is strictly and properly called an Executor, and is defined to be one appointed by a mans last Will and Testament to have the disposing and administration of all or part of a mans goods and chattels, and to perform a mans last Will and Testament according to the contents thereof: the third is ab Episcopo constitutus who is therefore said to be Datus. And such a one is an Administrator, who is defined to be one that hath the goods and chattels of a man dying intestate committed to his charge by the Ordinary for want of an Executor. And his power, benefit and charge is in all things equal to the power, benefit, and charge of an Executor. New Terms of the Law. Co. 8. 135, Plow. 288. Co. super Litt. 209: Co. 9. 40.

The Executor and Administrator also is sometimes universall or totall, i. one that hath the power and disposition of the whole personall estate committed to him. And sometimes he is particular or partiall, i. one that hath the power and disposition of some part of the estate, or of all the estate for a time only committed to him. And sometimes he is absolute, i. such a one that hath an absolute power of the estate, as Executor or Administrator, and sometimes he is conditionall, i. one that hath a limited and conditionall power of the estate only. And in both cases he shall be charged and chargeable for so much as is committed to him as the Testator or intestate himselfe: for this cause the Executor is said to represent the person of the Testator; for as to the estate committed to his trust he may charge others, and be charged himself, sue and be sued, as the Testator himself might. And the estate be hath by his Executorship is said to be in him to the use of the Testator and in his right: and that he doth in the disposition of his estate is said to be in the right and to the use of the Testator also; And the Administrator hath the same power and property over and in the goods and chattels, the same remedy by Suit, and so far forth shall be charged as the Executor; for they differ not in nature, but in name only. And yet the Administrator is but the Ordinaries deputy, and he may revoke the Administration, or call the Administrator to an account. Dyer 4. Bro. Executor 135. Co. 6. 19. Co. super Lis. 209; Stat. 31 Ed. 3. c. 11: Co. 9. 40. 8. 135.

3. The nature and effect of a Testament, and of a Co-
dicill.

A Testament is of that nature that it doth much differ from other acts and deeds that men doe and execute in their life times: for albeit it be made, sealed and published in never so solemn a manner, yet it hath no life nor vertue in it untill the Testators death; for it is a Maxime in Law, Omne Testamentum morte consummatum est, Et voluntas ambulatoria usque ad extremum vita exisum; it is therefore resembled untill death to the interlocutory sentence, and after death to the definitive sentence of a Judge. And hence it is said, Sed legum servanda fides, suprema voluntas. Quod mandat fierique jubet parere necesse est. Swinb. 12, Dyer 143: Co. super Lis. 112. Litt. sect. 168. Co. 4. 61. And for this cause a man may alter, or make void his will at his pleasure, and he may make as many new Wills and Testaments as he will, and there is no means under the Sun to barr a man of this liberty, Litt. Bro. Sect. 300. And the latter Testament doth always revoke and overthrow the former; but otherwise it is of a Codicill; Litt. Sect. 168. Perk. sect. 478. For a man may make as many of these as he will, and make no Testament at all; Swinb. 13. 14. or if he make a Testament he may afterwards make as many Codicils as he will, and one of them will not overthrow the other; for in the first case they must all be annexed to the letters of Administration, and the Administrator must perform them, and in the latter case they must be all annexed to the Testament, and the Executor must take care to perform them. Bro. Testament 20.

the

A Testament therefore is said to have three degrees.

1. An Inception, which is the making of it.

2. A Progression, which is the publication of it.

3. A Consummation, which is the death of the Testator, Plow. 343: 344:

In grants therefore, the first is of greatest force, but in Testaments the last is of greatest force.

But when a Testament is perfect by the death of the party, it doth as effectually give and transfer estates and alter the property of lands and goods, as acts executed by deed in the life time of the parties. Co super Litt. 1. for hereby descents of lands are prevented, and a man may make estates in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years, of Lands, Tenements, Rents, Reversions, or services as effectually as by Deed; and these estates also will be good without any Livery of Seisin, or Attournement. And hereby also Rents, and power to distraine for them may be reserved: conditions created and annexed to estates, or things devised. Lit. Sess. 167. 168.

And therefore they that take by devises of Lands, are said to take in the nature of purchasers. Perk. Sect. 505. And if therefore a Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment to the use of himself in Fee, and after devise the same land to his Wife in Fee, and die; the son is not remitted, though the Father die seised: for the devise doth prevent the descent. Dyer 221:

To the making of every good Testament, these things are requisite. Co. 6. 3.

1. That the Testator be a person able to make a Testament, and not disabled for any speciall cause, either in respect of his person, mind or condition, or in respect of the thing whereof the Testament is to be made. And for this it must be known.

That a Woman that hath a Husband, cannot make a Testament of her Land or Goods, except it be in some speciall cases; for of her Lands she can make no Testament with, or without her Husbonds consent (Stat. 32. & 34 H. 8. c. 5. Co. 4. 51. Bro. Testament 13) of the Goods and Chattels she hath as Executrix to any other, she may make an Executor without her Husbonds consent; for if she do not so, the Administration of them must be granted to the next of kin to the deceased Testator, and shall not go to the Husband, (12 H. 7. 14. Perk. Sess. 501: Fitz. Executor 40.) but of them she can make no devise with or without her Husbonds leave, for they are not devisable; and if she do devise them, the devise is void. And of the things due to the wife whereof she was not possessed during the marriage, as things in action and the like, it seemes she may make her Testament, at least she may make her Husband Executor; of her Paraphernalia. Plow. 526. Fitz. Executor 109. viz. her necessary wearing apparell, being that which is fit for one of her rank: some say she may make a Testament without her Husbonds leave, others doubt of this, howbeit all agree that she and not his Executor shall have this after her Husbonds death, and that the Husband cannot give it away from her. And of the goods and chattels her Husband hath, either by her or otherwise, she may not make a Testament without the licence and consent of her Husband first had so to do. But with his leave and consent she may make a Testament of his goods, and make him her Executor if she will. 12 H. 7. 24. 18 Ed. 4. 11. Perk. Sect. 501. Fitz. Executor 5. 28. 109. Bro. Testament 11.

And it is said also, that if she do make a Testament of his Goods (in truth without his leave and consent) and he after her death suffer the Will to be proved, and deliver the goods accordingly; in this case the Testament is good.

And yet if the Husband give his Wife leave to make a Testament of his goods, and she do so, he may revoke the same at any time in her life time, or after her death before the Will be proved.

But a Woman after contract with any man, may before the marriage make a Testament as well as any other, and is not at all disabled hereby.

4. What shall be said a good and a sufficient Testament Or not.

First, in respect of the person that doth make it, and the thing whereof it is made. And what Persons may make a Testament, And of what things, or not And how. A Feme Covert.

An Infant.

An Infant untill he be of the age of 21 years can make no Testament of his lands by the Statutes of 32 & 34 H. 8. But by speciall custome in some places where land is devisable by custome he may devise it sooner. And of his goods and chattels, if he be a boy, he may make a Testament at fourteen years of age and not before; and if a Maid, at twelve years of age and not before; and then they may do it without, and against the consent of their Tutor, Father, or Guardian, Stat. 32 Ed. 34. H. 8. cap. 5. Perk. Sect. 503. 504. Br. Customs 50. Swinb. 37, 38. And yet some say an Infant cannot make a Testament of his goods and chattels untill he be eighteen years of age. Co. super Lis. 89. A mad or lunatick person during the time of his insanity of mind cannot make a Testament of Lands or goods; but such a one as hath his lucida intervalla, cleer or calm intermissions, may during the time of such quietness and freedom of mind make his Testament, and it will be good. So also an Idiote i. such a one as cannot number twenty, or tell what age he is, or the like, cannot make a Testament, or dispose of his lands or goods; and albeit he doe make a wise, reasonable, and sensible Testament, yet is the Testament void. Perk. Sect. 503, 504. 24. Swinb. 37. 40 Swinb. 39. 40 Swinb. 42. But such a one as is of a meane understanding only, that hath grossum caput, and is of the middle sort between a wise man and a fool, is not prohibited to make a Testament. So also an old man that by reason of his great age is childish againe, or so forgetfull that he doth forget his own name, cannot make a Testament; for a Testament made by such a one is void. So also it seemes a drunken man, that is so excessively drunk, that he is deprived of the use of reason and understanding, during that time, may not make a Testament, for it is requisite when the Testator doth make his Will, that he be of sound and perfect memory, i. e. that he have a reasonable memory and understanding to dispose of his estate with reason, Co. 6. 23. Hill. 3 Car. per the Lord Keeper in the Chancery.

A Lunaticks person.

An Idiot.

An old man.

A deafe and dumb man.

An alien.

A Traitor.

A Felon.

A Felo de se.
An outlawed person.

A Corporation.

A Villaine?

A man that is both deafe and dumb, and that is so by nature, cannot make a Testament. But a man that is so by accident, may by writing or signes make a Testament. And so may a man that is deafe or dumb by nature or accident. And so also may a man that is blind. Swinb. 53. An alien born cannot make a Testament of Lands or goods. A man that is entred into Religion, cannot make a Testament. Curia. B. R. 7 Jac. A Traitor attainted from the time of the Treason committed can make no Testament of his Lands or Goods; for they are all forfeit to the King; but after the time he hath a pardon from the King for his offence, he may make a Testament of his Lands or Goods as another man. A man that is attainted or convict of Felony cannot make a Testament of his Lands or Goods, for they are forfeit; but if a man be only indicted, and die before attainder, his Testament is good for his Lands and goods both. And if he be indicted and will not answer upon his arraignment, but standeth mute, &c. in this case his Lands are not forfeit, and therefore it seemes he may make a Testament of them. And if a man kill himself, his Testament as to his Goods and Chattels is void, but as to his Lands is good, Stat. 5. & 6. Ed. 6. c. 11. Swinb. 54 Prerogativa Regis. Plow. 258. 259. Plow. 261.

A man that is outlawed in a personall action cannot make a Testament of his Goods and Chattels so long as the outlawry doth continue in force; but of his Lands he may make a Testament. The head, or any of the members of a corporation may not make a Testament of his Lands or Goods they have in Common, for they shall goe in succession. A Villaine cannot make a Testament of his Lands or Goods after the Lord hath seised them. But here note, that howsoever the Testaments of Traitors, Aliens, Felons, Out-lawed persons, and Villaines, be void as to the King, or Lord that hath right to the Lands or Goods by forfeiture or otherwise, yet it seems the Testament is good against the Testator himself, and all others but such persons only. And here note further also. By the Civill Law also the Testaments of divers others, as Excommunicate persons, Hereticks, Usurers, Incestuous persons, Sodomites, Libellers, and the like, are void. But by our law, the Testaments of such persons, at least as to their lands, are good by the Statutes that do enable men to devise their lands. Fitz. Dec. 16. Fitz. Testaments 1. Swinb. 155, &c. 32. & 34 H. 8. Perk. Sect. 490.

But all other persons whatsoever, Male or Female, old or young, lay or spiritual, Rich or Poor) at any time before their death whilst they are able to speak so distinctly, or write so plainly as another may understand them; and understand that they understand themselves, may make Testaments of their Lands, Goods, and Chattels, and that albeit they have sworn to the contrary: and none are restrained of this liberty, but such as are before named. See more infra to this matter, and Capacities, testificandi in bevelde ad discedendū wā. l. c. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

The second thing required to the making of a good Testament is, that he that doth make it have at the time of the making of it, animus testandi, a mind so disposed, a firme resolution and advised determination to make a Testament; otherwise the Testament will be void; for it is the mind and the words of the Testator that doth give life to the Testament; for if a man rashly, unadvisedly, incidently, jestingly, or boastingly, and not seriously write or say that such a one shall be his Executor, or have all his goods, or that he will give to such a one such a thing; this is no Testament, nor to be regarded. And the mind of the Testator herein is to be discovered by circumstances; for if at the time he be sick, or see himself seriously to make his Testament, or require witnesses to be witnesses of it, it shall be deemed in earnest; but if it be by way of discourse only, or of something he would do hereafter, or the like, it shall be taken for nothing; See more infra at Numb. 7. 1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

Secondly, in respect of the mind of him that doth make it.

The third thing required in a good Testament, is, that the mind of the Testator in the making of it be free, and not moved by fear, fraud, or flattery; for when a Testator is moved to make his Testament by fear, or circumvented by fraud, or overcome by some immoderate flattery; the same is void, or at least voidable by exception. And therefore if a man by occasion of some present fear, or violence, or threatening of future evils do at the same time, or afterwards by the same motive make a Testament: this Testament is void, not only as to him that put him so in fear, but as to all others; albeit the Testator confirm it with an oath. But if the cause of fear be some vain matter, or being weighed is removed, and the Testator doth afterwards when the fear is past, confirm the Testament; in this case perhaps the Testament may be good. And if a man by occasion of some fraud or deceit be moved to make a Testament, if the deceit be such as may move a prudent man or woman, and if it be evil also, the Testament is void, or voidable at the least; but if the deceit be light and small, or if it be to a good end, as where a man is about to give all his estate to some lewd person from his wife and children, and they persuade the Testator that the lewd fellow is dead, or the like, and thereby procure him to give his estate to them; this is a good Testament. And one may by honest intercessions & modest persuasions procure another to make himself or a stranger Executor to him, or the like, and this will not hurt the Testament. Also a man may use fair and flattering speeches to move the Testator to make his Testament, and to give his estate unto himself, or some friend of his, except it be in case where the flatterer doth first beate or threaten him, or put him in fear, or to his flattery joineth fraud and deceit, or the Testator is a person of weak judgement, or under the danger or government of the flatterer, as when the Physician shall persuade his Patient under his hands to make his Testament, and give his estate to himself; or the wife attending on her Husband in his sickness shall neglect him, and continually provoke him to give her all, or where the persuader is importunate and will have no denial, or when there is another Testament made before; for in all these cases the Testament will be in danger to be avoided. And if I be much privie to another mans mind, and he tell me often in his health how he doth intend to settle his estate, and he being sick, I doe of mine own head draw a will according to his mind, before declared to me, and bring it to him, and ask him whether this shall be his will or no, and he doth consider of it, and then deliver him back to me, and say yea; this is a good Testament: But if otherwise, some friends of a sick man of their own heads, shall make a Will and bring it to a man in extremity of sickness, and read it to him, and ask him whether this shall be his Will, and he say yea, yea: Or if a man be in great extremity of sickness; and read it to him, and ask him whether this shall be his Will, and and he say yea or nay. Or if a man be in great extremity, and his friends prohibit much, and so wrest words from him, especially if it be in advantage of them, or some friends of theirs; in these cases the Testaments are very suspicious. But as touching these two last things, Quære how they shall avayle in the Wills of Lands which are not regulated so much by the Civill Law.

Thirdly, in respect of the occasion or motive of it.

Fourthly, in respect of the manner, and form of the disposition. First, naming of an Executor

The fourth thing required in the making of a good Testament, is, that that form and order that the Law prescribeth be observed in the disposition. Symb. 112. Bro. Test. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

And therefore, that there be an Executor named in all Testaments of Goods and Chattels, and that that Executor named be capable of the Executorship; for this is said to be the head and foundation of the Testament; for if there be never so many Legacies given, and no Executor made, this disposition is but a Codicill, and cannot properly be called a Testament; for in this case the party dead, is said to die intestate and the Administration of his goods must be granted to the Widow or next of kin; whereas on the other side, if an Executor be appointed, albeit there be no Legacy given, yet this disposition is, and is properly said, to be a Testament.

Secondly, if it be of Lands, it must be in writing.

If the Testament be of Lands or Tenements, it must be in writing, and it must be committed to writing at the time of the making thereof: And it is not sufficient, that it be put in writing after the death of the Testator, being first made by word of mouth only, for then it is but Nuncupative still.

But if the Testament be first made by word of mouth, and be afterwards written, and then brought to the Testator, and he approve it for his Testament: Or if the Testator, when he doth declare his mind, doth appoint that the same shall be written, and thereupon the same is written accordingly in the life time of the Testator; these are good Testaments of Land, and as good as if they be written, at the first. Stat. 32. & 34 H. 8. Perk. fol. 476. 477. Dier 72. Plow. 345. Co. 4. 60. Dier 53.

If therefore one be very sick, and another come to him, and ask him whether his wife shall have his Land, and he say yea, and a Clerk being present doth put this in writing without any precedent commandement or subsequent allowance of the sick man; this is no good Testament of the Land.

So if one declare his whole mind before Witnesses, and send for a Notary to write it, and die before he come, and he write it after his death; this is no good Testament for his Lands, but a good Nuncupative Will for his Goods and Chattels, except he declare his mind to be that it shall not be his will unless it be put in, writing, for then perhaps it may not be a good wil for his goods and chattels.

So if he that doth write the will cannot hear the party speak, and another that stands by the sick man doth tell him what he doth say; in this case if there be none others present to prove that he reported the very words of the sick man; this will be no good Testament of the Land.

But if a Notary take direction from the sick man for his VWill, and after goe away and write it, and then doth bring it again and read it to the Testator and he approve it: Or if it be written from his mouth by the Notary according to his mind; and his mind were to have it written, albeit it be not shewed or read to him afterwards; these are good Testaments.

So if the Notary doe only take certaine rude notes or directions from the sick man which he doth agree unto, and they be afterwards written faire in his life time, and not shewed to him againe, or not written faire untill after his death; these are good Testaments of Lands.

If a sick man bid the Notary make a Testament of his Lands, but doth not tell him how, and the Notary make a devise of it after his own minde; this is no good Testament; and yet if it be after read unto, and approved by the Testator, it may be good.

And so if a Testament be found written in the Testators house, and not known by whom, and it be read unto, and approved by the Testator; this is now a good Testament in writing for Lands and goods. Adjudged Trin. 20. 7. as.

3. Uses of lands before the Statute of uses, might, and lands and tenements devisable by Custome, and goods and chattels may be disposed by word without writing, and such Testaments of such things so made are good. 4. It is not material in what matter or stuff, whether in paper or parchment, nor in what language, whether in Latin, French, or any other tongue, nor in what hand, or letters, whether in Secretary hand, Roman hand, or Court hand, or in any other hand a Testament be written, so it be fair and legible, that it may be read and understood: Neither is it material whether the same be written at large, or by notes, or characters usual or unusual, as xx^s for twenty shillings, or when the figure (2) is used in stead of the letter A, if it be usual in the Testators writing, or the like; for the Testament is good notwithstanding. So also if some words be omitted, or sentences improper used, when the intent and meaning is apparent, as where a man saith [I make my wife of this my last Will and Testament] leaving out the word [Executrix] yet the Testament is good, and this shall be understood: But if it be so done as it cannot be read, or by reading the minde of the Testator cannot be known, then is the Testament voyd and of no force. In like manner as a Nuncupative Will is, when the words spoken, are so ambiguous, obscure, and uncertain, that thereby the meaning of the Testator cannot be known nor understood. Swinb. part. 4. Sect. 25, 26.

5. Where writing is needfull (as in the case of disposition of land it is) there sealing of the Testament, or subscribing of the Testators name is not necessary. And therefore if a man by himself or another, do make a Testament of his land, and do not put his Seal or name to it, if he agree to it, this is a sufficient Testament. Perk. 476, 477. March. Rep. f. 206. pl. 245.

6. If whiles the Testator is making his Will, and whiles he intendeth to proceed further at that time either by adding, diminishing, or altering, he be suddenly stricken with sickness or insanity of minde whereby he cannot proceed, but gives it over in the midst, and so he dye; it seems in this case the whole Will is voyd, Swinb. 6. Lit. Broo. Sect. 300. Swinb. part. 7. Sect. 10. Coov. 3. 31. And yet if a man begin his Will, and make perfect Devise to one, and then of himself give over untill another time: or if a man make a perfect Devise to one, and then dye before he can make any Devise to any others, it seems these are good Testaments for as much as is done. And therefore it is said if one command another to make his Will, and by it to devise White Acre to IS and his heirs, and Black Acre to IN and his heirs, and he write the Devise to IS and his heirs, and the Testator dye before he can write the Devise to IN and his heirs; this is a good Devise to IS, but a voyd Devise to IN and his heirs. But if a man bid the Notary write a Devise of his land to IS upon condition, and the Notary write the Devise to IS, but the Testator dyeth before he can write the condition; in this case the whole Devise is voyd, Brownlows Rep. 1. part. 44. But a man may, if he please, make a Testament of part of his goods, and dye intestate for the rest, and that disposition he doth make is good for so much, Swinb. 188.

7. The last thing required to the perfection of a Testament, is, that it be proved; for if it be never so well made, and be in truth the Testament of the Testator, yet if it cannot be by proof made to appear so, it is but a voyd Testament, and of no force at all. And therefore herein these things are to be known:

1. That a Nuncupative Testament must be proved by two Witnesses at the least, and those must be such as are without exception, Swinb. part. 7. Sect. 13. part. 4. Sect. 25.

2. A written Testament when it is written with the Testators own hand, doth prove and approve it self, and therefore needs not the help of Witnesses to prove it. And for this cause, if a mans Testament be found written fair and perfect with his own hand after his death, albeit it be not subscribed with his name, sealed with his Seal, or have any Witnesses to it; if it be known or can be proved to be his hand, it is held to be a good Testament and a sufficient proof of it self; but if it be sealed with the Seal, and subscribed by the name of the Testator, and can be proved by Witnesses, it is the more authentique. And when it is found Thirdly, uses and lands by custome, and chattels devisable without writing.

Fourthly, the matter or hand wherein it is written.

Fifthly, sealing and subscribing the Testators name not needfull.

Sixthly, interruption in the making of the Will.

Seventhly, in respect of the proof of it, and what shall be said a sufficient proof of a Testament, or not.

amongst the choyce evidences of the Testator, or fast locked up in a safe place, it is the more esteemed; for if it be written in another hand, and the Testators hand and Seal, or one of them not to it, albeit it be found in such a place as before, yet some proof will be expected of it further by Witnesses in that case. And if a writing be found under the Testators own hand, yet if it be but a scribbled writing, written Copie-wise, with a great distance between every line without any date, in strange characters, with many interlinings, and lying amongst his voyd papers, or the like; this will not be esteemed a sufficient Testament, nor a good proof of it; but it shall be accounted rather a draught or image of the Testators Will for a direction to him after to make his Will by: And yet if it can be proved that the Testator did declare himself that this should be his Will; this will be a good Testament, and a good proof of it.

3. If it be proved the Testator said his Testament was in such a Schedule in the hands of IS, and IS produce a writing deposing it to be the same; it seems this is a sufficient proof: but if he say withall, it is written with his own hand, then it seems some other proof, as by comparing hands, or the like, that it is his hand, wherein it is written, will be expected.

4. If the Witnesses will prove the writing produced to be the last Will of the Testator, or that he said it was, or it should be his last Will, or that it is the same writing that was shewed unto them, and whereunto they are Witnesses, albeit they never heard it read, or set their hands to it, it is a sufficient proof. And a Will may be proved by Witnesses for Goods though it be not to be shewed: but if any tampering were with the Witnesses, it will be dangerous. 5. All persons, male and female, rich and poor, are esteemed competent Witnesses to prove a Will, save onely such as are infamous, as perjured persons, and the like; and such as want understanding and judgement, as children, infants, and the like; and such as are presumed to bear affection, as kindred, tenants, servants, and the like, Swinb. part. 4. Sect. 21. A Legatee is reputed a competent Witness to prove any other part of the Will but his own Legacy, or to prove any thing against himself touching his own Legacy, but not otherwise. And therefore, where there be but two Witnesses of a Will, wherein either of them hath somewhat bequeathed unto himself, this Will cannot be sufficiently proved for those Legacies; but for the rest of the Will it may be sufficiently proved.

6. Where there is no question nor opposition moved or had about, or against a Testament, there the Oath of the Executor alone is esteemed a sufficient proof of it, and in that case regularly no other proof is required. And where more proof is necessary, as in the cases before, it is in the discretion of the Ordinary, what proof to admit and allow: And those Witnesses for number, nature, and quality; or that other proof that he doth deem and accept for sufficient, is sufficient; and the Testament so proved by such Witnesses, or other proof, is sufficiently proved. And of this question, see more infra, at unmb. 7.

5. Where, and how a Testament good in his beginning, may become voyd by matter ex post facto, or not.

By Countermand or Revocation.

A Testament sufficient and good in his creation and beginning, may afterwards become voyd by divers means; as 1. By Countermand or Revocation, and this is sometimes by the party himself that made it, and sometimes it is by another: And sometimes it is exprels, and sometimes it is implied; for it is a Rule, That any act or thing done, or words spoken by the Testator after the Testament made, that doth alter or cross all or part of his Testament made before, is a Revocation of it, or of that part thereof that is so crossed and altered, Co. 4. 61. Litt. Sect. 168. Plow. 344, 341. Swinb. part. 7. Sect. 14, 15. Perk. Sect. 473. Co. 3. 36. 8. 82, 83. And therefore if a Feme Covert make a Testament, and after take a husband, by this the Testament is revoked. And if a man make a Testament of land, and after make a Feoffment of the same land, which Feoffment is not good for some defect in the Livery of Seisin or otherwise, so that the Feoffer dyeth seized of the land notwithstanding; hereby the Testament as to this land is revoked. If seized of land, deviseth it by VVill to I. D. and after makes a Feoffment of this land; and when he comes to seal it, he saith, will not this hurt my VVill? to which was answered, no: then said he, I will seal it, and so he did, and a Letter of of Attorney to make Livery, which was made in part of the land; in this case it was agreed to be no Revocation of the VWill for the residue wherein no Livery was made, Goldf. 33. pl. 7. If one had made a VWill in writing, and after say of it, it shall not be his VWill, this is a Revocation: But if one hath made a VWill, and another comes to him, and sayes, have you made your VWill? and he saith, no; and he saith, will you make your VWill? and he saith, no; yet this is no Revocation, Adjudge. Goldf. 33. pl. 7. So if a man make a latter Testament, and therein by expresse words doth revoke the former Testament; or if a man by any writing, or by word of mouth (for one may by word of mouth revoke a Will in writing, albeit it be of land, Dyer 310. 34. Eliz. B. R. Burton's Case. Goldf. 33. pl. 7.) do expressly revoke a former Testament that he hath made, and make no new Testament (for so a man may do and dye intestate, if he will:) or if a man make a latter Testament, and make no mention of the former Testament; all these are Countermands of the former Testament. And the latter Testament doth alwayes revoke the former; and that albeit the Executor of the latter do refuse the Executorship, or dye during the life of the Testator, or after his death; and albeit the King be made Executor of the former; and albeit the former be a written, and the latter but a Nuncupative Testament; and this holdeth true in a Testament of lands, as well as in a Testament of Goods and Chattels; but otherwise it is à converso; for however a man may by word avoyd a VWill made in writing that is good, yet a man cannot by word make good and affirm a VWill made in writing that is voyd: And therefore if a man devise his land in writing to I. S. and his heirs; and I. S. dye before the Devisor; and after the Devisor say by word, That the heirs of I. S. shall have the land, as I. S. should have had if he had lived; this verbal declaration will not affirm the disposition. Also, the latter Testament doth infringe the former; albeit there be no mention made in the latter of revoking of the former; and albeit there be twenty VWitnesses of the former, and but two or none of the latter; and albeit in the former, the Executor be appointed simply, and without condition; and in the latter, he be appointed conditionally, and the same condition be also broken, so that the condition be of something then to come at the time when the condition was made: but if the Executor of the latter Testament be made upon some condition then present or past, the condition not existing; the former Testament is not revoked; and albeit the former Testament be made irrevocable, i. e. that the Testator say, I make this my last VWill and Testament irrevocable; and albeit the Testator hath sworn not to revoke the former, the Oath being also revoked together with the Testament; and albeit the Testator enter into an Obligation, with condition not to revoke it, but then in this case he doth forfeit his Obligation. But the latter Testament doth not revoke the former in these cases following, i. e. when the latter is imperfect in respect of VWill, i. e. when the Testator dyeth whiles he is making of it, and before he can finish it, or when it is vehemently suspected that the Testator was compelled to make the latter by fear or violence, or induced to make it by fraud and deceit, or when the former was made by the Testator whiles he was in his good and perfect minde and memory, and the latter is made by him when he is inopmentis, or when the latter is made by the perswasion and for the benefit of certain persons, when the Testator is in extremity of sickness, unless it appear plainly to be the expresse Will of the Testator to revoke the former, or unles the Testator himself did dictate the latter, or in case the latter be in favour of the children of the Testator, or others who are to have the Administration of his goods if he dye intestate. 2. When the Testator doth make two Testaments, a former and a latter, both being written, and afterwards lying sick upon his death-bed, they are both presented unto him, and he is desired to deliver to one of the standers by, which of them he will have to stand for his last Will, and he deliver the former. 3. When the latter doth agree in all points with the former, for then both of them are as one in divers writings. 4. When in the latter Testament there is no Executor named, for then it is but a Codicil or

addition to the former. 5. When the latter is made upon some sudden discontent against the Executor of the former Testament, and afterwards he and the Executor are reconciled again; in these and such like cases, the latter Testament is no Revocation of the former. If the husband license his wife to make a Testament, and after her death he forbid the Probate, this is a Countermand of the Testament, Lit. Broo. 55. But note here, that Revocations in general are not favoured in Law, and therefore he that will avoyd a sonner Will by Revocation, must see he prove it well. 2. A good Testament may become voyd by cancelling or other destruction of it, as where the Testator himself, or some other by his commandment, doth cut, or tear it in peices, deface it, or cast it into the fire; by this means the Testament is made voyd, except it be in case where the Testator doth it unadvisedly, or it be done by some other without his consent, or by some casualty, or when he doth willingly pull away the Seals, and then he doth afterwards seal it again; or where the whole Testament is not cancelled or defaced, but some or the chief part thereof, as the naming of the Executor, or the like; for it is good still for the residue; or where there be several papers, or writings, of one, ten, or each of them, containing the whole Testament, the cancelling or defacing of some of them doth not hurt the Testament, unless it can be proved that the Testators minde was to avoyd it all, or where the Testament is lost in the life time of the Testator, or after; for in this case so much as can be proved by Witnesses is still in force, Swinh. lib. 7. part. Sect. 16.

Thirdly, by alteration of the estate of the Testator.

3. A good Testament may become voyd by alteration of the estate of the Testator; as when a man after the time of making the Testament, and before his death is convicted or condemned of some great crime, for the which the Law depriveth him of the making of a Testament, as Treason, Felony, or the like. And yet if the crime be pardoned and purged before his death, the Testament may be good enough. And if a man of sane and perfect memory make his Testament, and after become inco's memis, as every man for the most part is before his death, this doth not hurt the Testament. Swinh. part. 7. Sect. 17. Coe. 4. 62.

Fourthly, by
alter it.

4. A good Testament may become voyd by an intention onely to alter it when the Testator is hindered in his intention that it cannot take effect: And therefore if when the Testator intendeth to alter his Testament, or to make a new one, he be by fear or fraud forbidden or letten, that he dare not or cannot alter it, or the Notary or Witnesses dare not, or may not be suffered to come to him; as when a wife or some other that is to have a benefit by the former Will, under pretence that she hath a charge from the Physician that none shall come at him, or under pretence that he is asleep, or the like, will not suffer any body to come at him; or when the Notary and Witnesses are all present, and they make such a noyse or quarrelling, that they hinder the effect of his intent; or when the Testator is kept from doing it by importunate requests, and flattering perswasions; in all these cases, and by these means the former Testament may become voyd, Swinh. part. 7. Sect. 18. But if it appear the Testator hath no purpose to alter the Testament when he is let, as aforesaid; the fear is a vain fear, the Testator is prohibited at another time, and not the time when he doth intend to alter the Testament, but he hath sundry opportunities after that time to do it, and doth it not, or he is drawn onely by the fair speeches of a wife or friend, or by the weeping, or other trouble arising from the grief of the Legatary or Executor for the Testators sickness, onely he is disturbed; in these cases perhaps it may not be voyd. And where it is voyd by the prohibition of a Legatary onely, it is voyd for so much as doth concern him onely, and not for the rest of the Testament.

Fifthly, by making another of the same date.

5. A good Testament may become voyd by making another of the same date; for if two Testaments be found after the death of the Testator, and it cannot be discerned or proved which was made former or latter; the one of them doth overthrow the other, and both of them are become voyd; except they be both to the same purpose, or one of them be made in favour to wife and children, children, &c. and the other to strangers. Swinb. part. 7. sect. 11. Perk. Sect. 479. And yet in the first case also the Testator by declaration of his minde, which of them he will have to take effect, may make either of them good.

6. A good Testament may be made void by the declaration of the Testators minde, as if a man have two Testaments lying by him, the one made after the other, and they are both shewed or delivered to the Testator when he lyeth sick, and he by word or signe declare that he will have the former to stand; this declaration doth revoke the latter, and affirm the former. And where a man would revoke a Will for any of these causes, he must presently after the death of the Testator put in a Caveat or exception in that Court where the Will is to be proved, and thereupon proceed to question it; or by a prohibition in some cases he may stay the Probate in the Spirituall Court. See more infra at Numb. 12.

Sixthly, by the declaration of the Testator.

If a woman covert without the leave of her husband make a Testament of her husbands goods, and the husband doth after her death connive at the Probate, and deliver the goods accordingly, hereby the Testament of the wife is become good; but if an Infant or mad man make a Testament in the time of his Infancy or madness, and after the Infant or mad man become of full age, or sober, before his death; it seemes these Testaments are void. Perk. Sect. 301. Coe. 1. 99. 2. 55. And yet if the Infant at his full age, or the mad man when he is sober make a publication of this Testament, it may perhaps be good.

If a man make a former and a latter Will, and by this latter the former is revoked, and after the Testator declare himself that the former shall stand, by this the former that was void before, is now become good again. Perk. Sect. 479. Coe. 4. 61. Plow. 344. And yet if a man make a Will that is void, and it be proved after his death; this Probate will not make it good, but it doth remain void as it was before.

6. Where a Testament void or voidable in his Inception, may become good by some matter or accident ex post facto. And where not.

If a Feme sole make a Will, and then take a husband whereby the Will is countermanded, and so become void; if her husband die, so that she become sole again: this accident will not make the Will good again, but it doth remaine void still; but perhaps by a new publication after she doth become sole, it may become good again. See more infra at Numb. 11.

To the making of a good and sufficient Devise, these things are requisite.

What shall be said a good and sufficient Devise or Legacy, or not.

1. That there be a deviser, and he be a person able to devise, and that both in respect of the condition of his own person and of the thing whereof the Devise is made. See before at Numb. 4.

2. That there be a Devisee, and that he be a Person capable and able to receive the thing devised, either at the time when the Devise is made, or at least when the Devise is to take effect.

3. That the Devisor have at the time of the devise made animus testandi, i. e. a mind to make a devise.

4. That the Will of the Devisor be free, and not drawn or coerced by fraud, flattery, fear, or the like.

5. That the Devise be made in due manner and forme.

6. That the thing devised be a thing devisable.

7. That it be devised upon lawfull termes and conditions.

8. That there be words sufficient to make his mind known.

9. That it be proved after the death of the Devisor. Perk. Sect. 406. See before at Numb. 4. and after at Numb. 17.

First, in respect of matter touching the Devisor, and who may be a Devisor.

10. And if it be a Devise of land, it is further required that the Devisor be solely seised of the land, and not jointly seised with another; and that he be seised of an estate in Fee-simple; and that the Devise be in writing. And for the first of these it is to be known, that whosoever may make a Testament, may make a devise of the same thing of which he may make a Testament. Et sic e converso. And whosoever is disabled to make a Testament, is disabled to devise by such a Testament. And therefore Infants may not devise their lands untill they be 21 years of age, nor their goods and chattels untill they be 14 years of age (or as some say untill they be 18 years of age.) Women that have husbands, cannot devise their lands to their

Secondly, in respect of the matter touching the Devisee, And who may be a Devisee. And by what name, their lands to their own husbands, or others, either by or without their husbands consent, albeit there be a custom to enable them thereunto; but all such devises are void. Co. super Litt. 112. 4. 61. Bras. Devise 32. And Spirituall persons, as Archbishops, Bishops, Deanes, Archdeacons, Prebends, Parsons, Vicars, or any member of a Corporation may not devise the Lands or Goods they have in the right of their Churches and Corporations. Perk. Sett. 496. And for the second thing, this is to be known.

1. That regularly whosoever may be a Grantee, may be a Devisee or Legatee. Perk. Sett. 503. 510. Swinb. 222. See infra at Numb. 18. And therefore a Devise made to any person or persons, male or female, children or strangers, bondmen or Freemen, Laymen or Clerks, Debtors or Creditors, Infants or men of full age, women sole or covert, Colledges, Universities, Corporations, or the like, are good. But it is said, that if any Legacy be given to an Heretick, Apostate, Traitor, Felon, Excommunicate person, Out-lawed person, Bastard, unlawfull Colledge, Libeller, Sodomite, Usurer, Recusant convict, it is void by the Civill Law, except it be in some speciall cases. And yet it seems a Devise of lands to any such person is good within the Statute of Villis. Dyer 303. 304. B. R. Curia. Mic. 3 Ja. A Devise to an Infant in the womb of its mother, at the time of the death of the Testator is void. New Termes of the Law tit. Devise. See infra Numb. 11. And yet if a man devise to such an Infant, and he happen to be born before the death of the Testator, it seems in this case the Devise is good; for it is a rule. That the Devisee must be capable of the thing devised at the time of the death of the Devisor; if it be then to take effect in possession, or if it be a remainder, he must be capable of it at the time when the remainder shall happen, or otherwise the Devise is void. f. 9 Ja. B. R. And a man may devise his lands, goods, or chattels, to his own wife, as well as to any other. M. 19 Ja. Curia. B. R. Crumpe versus Rodie.

Incertaincy.

Averment.

2. But he that may be thus a Devisee, and is capable of a thing devised, must be certainly named and described; for if a Devise be to a person altogether incertaine, the Devise is altogether void. And therefore if I give my land to my best friend, or to my best friends, these are void Devises. Cor. 6. 68. If one have two sonns of one name called J. S. and he devise to his son J. S. without any distinction; it seems this Devise is void for incertaincy; but in this case perhaps an averment which son is meant, may help. Swinb. 293, 294, 295, 296. So if one give to J. S. 20 l. and there be two or more of that name; this Devise is void, except it may be proved by so thing which of them he meant. So if one say in his Testament I give to one of the world 20 l. this Devise is void for incertaincy. So if one give him 20 l. whose name is written in a Schedule in the custody of such a man; and in truth there is no such Schedule in the custody of such a man to be found; or if there be no name written therein; it seems these Legacies are void for incertaincy. So if a man give a Legacy to a man incertaine, and no such man is to be found, and the meaning of the Testator cannot be known; this Devise is void. And yet if a man by his Will say thus, I devise to him that shall marry my daughter; this is a good Devise; and he that doth marry my daughter in my life-time, or after my death shall have it. And if a man devise any thing ad pias causas, as to the Church, or to the Poore, not expressing what Church or Poor; this perhaps may be a good Devise. So if a man gives 20 l. to his kindred; it is said this is a Good Devise, and that a reasonable exposition shall be made of it as near the intent of the Testator as may be, viz. that those in the next degree shall have it first, and then those in the next degree to that shall have it afterwards; and if it be a Devise to the kindred of another man, that they shall have it equally. See quare of this Devise, for it seems altogether uncertain.) So if a man give to J. S. or J. D. 20 l. this is held to be a good Devise, albeit it be somewhat incertain, and the disjunctive shall be taken for a copulative; and so J. S. and J. D. shall take both by this Devise; but if in this case one of them be nearer of kin than the other, then it is said, he shall have it for his life, and the other afterwards. Swinb. part. 7. Sett. 9. And if one devise 20 l. to A. or B. which of them J. S. will appoint; this is a good Devise, and he that J. S. shall appoint shall have it.

And

And if one devise to J. S. and his children; this is a good Devise and certain enough, and hereby he and his children shall take the thing devised together. Plow. 345. Coe. 1. 105. 155. Perk. sect. 508.

3. And as the person to whom the Devise is made, must be capable, and certainly described and named, so must he be capable by that name by which the Devise is made to him, or otherwise the Devise is void, and therefore if a Devise be to the heirs of J. S. J. S. being living; this Devise is void. And yet if lands or Goods be devised to the Executors of J. S. and J. S. die before the Testator, and make Executors; this is a good Devise to the Executors. And if a man devise his land to J. S. for life, the remainder to the next of kin, [or next of blood] of J. S., this is a good Devise of the remainder. Fitz. Devise 27. Plow. 523. Perk. sect. 509, 510 Broo. Corporation. 55. And if a man devise goods to the Parishioners of the Parish of S., to the use of the Church; this is a good Devise, and the Churchwardens may recover it. And if a man devise Ecclesia sancta Andrea de Holborne; it seems this is a good Devise to the Parson of that Church. And if a man devise to the City of London, University of Oxford, or to Queens Colledge in Oxford, these are good Devises. But if one devise to the Commonalty of a Guild that is not incorporate, as to two of the middle men of the Guild of the Fraternity of Whiteacres in London, or the like; this devise is void.

4. And if the person be capable, well named, and capable by that name, if his name be truly set down, yet if his name be not so, but mistaken, the Devise is void. And therefore if one intending to give 20 l. to J. S. devise to J. N. 20 l. this devise is void, both to J. S. and J. N. except the person be certainly denoted and described by some other circumstance, as to J. N. the son of J. S. my Landlord, or the like. Dyer. 4. Perk. sect. 505. Swinb. 289, 290. So if one devise to the Abbot of S. Peter, when the foundation is the Abbot of S. Paul; this Devise is void. And if one devise to a Corporation, and there be none of that name at the time of the Devise, nor during the life of the Testator, this Devise is void, and so also it seems the Law is, if there be a Colledge made after of that name. But if one devise a thing to the wife of J. S. and before the Devisor die, J. S. dye, and she take another husband, and is called by another name; yet this Devise is good. Plow. 344. So if one give a Legacy to J. S. Dean of Pauls, and the Chapter there and their Successors, and after before the death of the Devisor J. S. die, and another is made Dean; yet this Devise is good notwithstanding this mistake. For the third and fourth thing required in a good Devise, see before at Numb. 4. Part. 2. 3. Broun. 1. part 13.

And for the fifth thing; it is to be known,

1. That lands and tenements devisable by custome, may be devised by a Nuncupative Will without any writing for any time whatsoever, as Uses at the Common-Law that are now withing the Statute might have been. Coe. super Litt. 111. Plow. 345. Swinb. part 1. sect. 12. Also those Uses that remaine at the Common-Law, and are not within the Statute, may be devised by word without any writing. But no estate can be made of lands by Devise upon the Statute, except the Devise be in writing; and so a man may devise his land, albeit he make no Executor; for an Executor hath nothing to do with the Free-hold of land. Also Goods and Chattells, leases for years of Lands, Wards, Villaines, and the like may be devised by word without any writing at all. Plow. 345. Swinb. part. 1. Sect. 12. Dyer 140. And yet it seems questionable whether a Lease for years of a Rent, Common, or such like thing, be devisable by word without writing.

2. The forme of words in a Devise is not at all regarded; and therefore if one say, I give, institute, desire, appoint, or will, that J. S. shall have my land, or that J. S. shall have 20 l. or let J. S. have my land or 20 l. all these Devises are as good as if he say, I devise to J. S. my land or 20 l. Swinb. part. 4. sect. 4. Plow. 23. Littl. Broo. sect. 316. Dyer 23. And therefore if one at this day since the Statute of Uses devise that his Feoffees of the land shall be seized of the land to the use of J. S. and his heirs, or to the use of J. S. and the heirs of his body; or if such a man devise that his Feoffees shall make an estate of the land to J. S. and Fifthly, in respect of matter touching the manner and forme of the Devise. And how a Devise may be made.

and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body; this is a good Devise of the land in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail. And if a man make a Feoffment of his land to the use of his last Will, and then devise that his Feoffees shall be seized to the use of J. S.; this is a good Devise of the land per intentionem Pasche. 9. Jac. Newmans case. And if I devise that J. S. shall have, hold, and occupy my land for his life; this is a good Devise of the land for his life. Plow. 546. Coo. 4. 66. 8. 95. If a man have a Lease for years for land, and he devise his Lease, or his Terme, or his Ferme, or the profits or occupation of the land; by either of these Devises his whole lease and all his interest in the land is given as well as by any other forme of words Dyer 122. 33. 128. Coo. 1. 83. 6. 42. Dyer 4. 33.

3. A man may devise lands, tenements, or hereditaments in possession in Fee, for life or years; or he may devise it in reversion, viz. to one for life, the remainder to another in Fee, or in tail, or in any other sort, as a man may grant it by his Deed, and such Devises are good. But if the Fee-simple of land be devised to one, the remainder cannot be devised to another, albeit the first Devise be but conditionall. And therefore if land be devised to J. S. and his heirs and if he dye without heirs, that it shall remain to J. N. & his heirs; this is a void remainder to J. N. So if a man devise his land to J. S. in Fee, ita quod solvat J. N. 20 l. and if he faile, that it shall remain to J. N. and his heirs, this remainder to J. N. is void; for if J. S. faile of payment, J. N. shall not enter and have the land, but the heir of the Devisor. And yet perhaps a rent may be devised after this manner. Howbeit if another man have a Rent-charge of 20 l. a year, issuing out of my land for 20. years; and he devise this unto me untill I have levied 100 l. by way of retainer, to J. S.; this remainder is not good. Dyer 139. 140.

Condition.

4. A Devise may be of Lands, Goods, or Chattels simply and absolutely or conditionally; the simple Devise also may be in presenti, or in futuro. And therefore as a Devise to one and his heirs in presenti, is good, so a Devise to one and his heirs after the death of J. S. is good. Plow. 523. Perk. sect. 163. See Condition Coo. 8. 95. If I devise land to J. S. and his heirs on condition, as so as, ita quod, he pay 10 l. to W. S. or paying to W. S. 10 l. or ad solvendum 10 l. to J. S.; the Devise in all these cases is a good conditionall Devise; and if the condition be not performed or broken, the estate is ended, and the heir may take advantage of it. And therefore if lands be so given to the heir, the condition is idle, because none can enter but him. And if I devise that, if J. S. pay my Executors 20 l. that he shall have White acre to him and his heirs for ever, or for life &c. this is a good Devise, and after the contingent shall take effect accordingly, and in this case and in such like the heir of the Devisor must keep the land untill till the contingent do happen. In like manner as if it be a chattell, the Executor shall keep the thing untill the condition be performed, and after a condition broken he shall take advantage of it.

Limitation.

5. A Devise may be also with a limitation, as in the cases before; and as, where one gives land to another, and his heirs so long as J. S. shall have heirs of his body; or where one doth devise his land to A his son and his heirs for ever, paying to B his brother 20 l. when he shall come of age, and then that he shall enter and have it to him and his heirs, and if he die without heirs of his body, the said B. then living then that B. and his heirs shall have it in the same manner: And these and such like Devises are good.

6. A man that is seised of land in Fee, may devise that his Executors shall sell it; or may devise it to his Executors to sell, or Devise it to his Executors, and that they shall sell it; and these Devises are good. Coo. super Littl. 112. 113. 236.

Clause of Distresse.
Warrantie.

7. A Devise may be of a rent, or of land reserving a rent, with clause of Distresse. Dyer 348. 100. 8. 84. 85. broken 2. part 190. As if a man Devise land to J. S. paying 10 l. by the year to his wife, and if it be unpaid, that she shall distraint for it; this is a good Devise: But a Warranty cannot be made by a Will. Coo. super Littl. 386. And yet if a man devise land to another for life, or in Tail reserving a rent; in this case the heirs of the Devisor shall be bound to the Warranty ranty in Law, and the Devisee shall take advantage of it,

8. A man may devise his land to one, and devise a rent out of the same land to another, and these Devises are good. So a man may devise his land to one in Fee, and after devise the same land to another for life or years; and these are good Devises, and may stand together. Plow. 523. 540. Dyer 357. Co. 8. 94. 83. So also if a man in the fore-part of his Will by generall words, devise all his lands to one in Fee, and in the latter part of his Will, devise some speciall part of it to another in Fee; these Devises are good and shall stand together, as for example, if one have a Farm, and in the first part of his VWill, give this Farm to one, and in the latter part of his VWill give one Close (a part of this Farm to another) or a man devise all his land in B (which is in the County of Glouc.) to A his daughter, and the latter part of his Will devisech all his land in the County of Glouc. in the possession of J. S. to his son, and part of the land in B. is in the possession of J. S. and in Gloucestersh. these are good Devises & shall stand together. But otherwise, it is when the generall clause doth come last, as where one doth give his land to A his daughter and in the latter part of his Will, doth give all his land in Hartfordshire in the possession of J. S. to W. and the land given to A. is in Hartfordshire, and in the possession of J. S. in this case the Devises will not stand together, for the first Devise is void 38. Eliz. Co. B. Agreed divers times: and so also it is where both the Devises are particular, as, where first in a mans VWill, he doth give VWhite Acre to A and his heirs, and after in his VWill he doth give VWhite Acre to B and his heirs; in this case the first Devise to A is void. And yet in this last case, some have held the Devises shall be good, and that A and B shall be Joint-tenants ideo Quare, Dyer in his Lecture, 1. & per Inst. Dodr. If one devise all his land to J. S. and his heirs excepting 20 l. for seven years, which he willeth shall be employed for his children; this is a good Devise of this sum of 20 l. a year. Trin. 9. Ja. B. R.

9. And a man may devise his land for so many years as J. S. shall name, and after, appoint that his son shall have it during the minority of his son, and both these Devises may stand together: And therefore, if A be possessed of the Mannor of D for years, and he devisech all his Term to his eldest son if he live so long, and if he die before he have any issue of his body, then to his younger son in the same manner, but withall, he doth appoint that his wife shall have the occupation of the land untill his eldest son be 21 years of age; these Devises shall stand together, and the wife shall enjoy the Mannour, for that time by this Devise. Plow. 523. 546.

10. A man may devise a term of years by way of remainder; as for example, A man that is possessed of a term of years of land, may devise it to J. S. for life, the remainder to J. D. or to J. S. for life, and that it shall after remain to J. D. or to J. S. for so many years as he shall live, and after to J. D. or in any such like manner, these are good Devises both to the first, and to him in remainder also by way of Executory Devise, though not by way of remainder, and in this case the first Devisee cannot hinder the second Devisee of the remnant of the terme. Co. 8. 95. Plow. 519. 546. 516. 539. Dyer 277. But a man cannot by Deed in Grant his life time grant his term in this manner. Nor if a man be possessed of a term can he entail it by his Will: And therefore, if a man possessed of his term of years of land Devise his term or his land to J. S. and his heirs, or to J. S. and the heirs of his body, or to J. S. and his issues, the remainder to J. D. this remainder is void; and it is a good devise of the whole term to J. S. and his Executors. Co. 10. 87. 47. Pasche. 17. Jac. B. R. Child. versus Baily. Also a Chattell personall may (as it seems) be devised to one for life, and afterwards to another, but yet so as the one must have the property only, and the first but the occupation only, as if one devise that J. D. shall have the occupation of his plate for his life, and after that it shall remain to J. S. this is a good Devise of the plate to J. S. 37 H. 6. 30 Little. Broo. sect. 388. 314. 209. But if the thing it self be devised to the first of them; then the Devise to the second is void, for the gift of a chattell personall for one hour is the gift of it for ever. And so it did seem in the Lady Daves Case. Hill. 9. Car. B. R.

11. A Legacy of Goods or Chattels may be given to, or untill a certain time, or from or after a time certain or incertain; as for five years, or from, or untill the marriage of A or the like; and these Dispositions are good. Swinb. part. 4. sect. 17.

12. A man may devise his land for so many years as J. S. shall name, and if J. S. do name a certain number of years in the life-time of the Devisor, this will be a good Devise. But if one devise his land for so many years, as his Executor shall name, it seems this Devise is not good. Plow. 524. 6. As touching the sixth thing required in a good Devise, these things are to be known.

Sixthly, in respect of matter touching the thing devised, and what may be devised, and by what name.

Devise of land and re-nements.

1. That Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments for the nature and quality of them are devisable as well as other things. Dyer. 371. Coe: 8. 83. 6. 16. super Littl. 111. Perk. sect. 496. 500. 497. 538. Littl. sect. 167. Dyer 155. old N. B. And therefore by the custome of some places, lands in possession, reversion, or remainder are devisable in Fee for life, or years; and a man that hath a Lease for years of land, may devise the land at his pleasure during his term. But by the ancient Common-Law in favour to heirs, the lands that a man had in Fee-simple were not devisable by Testament, except only in some speciall places by the custome of the place, as Gavelkind-lands in Kent, and lands within certain Borough-Townes, as London, Oxford, &c. and by the custome of those places such lands are devisable: And in some places the custome is, that they may devise their purchased lands only; and in other places, that they may devise their lands descended also: And in some places the custome is that they may devise for life only, and in other places, that they may devise in Fee-simple and Fee-tail also. And in all these places where such customes are, they may devise their lands now as they might have done before the Statute; for the Statute hath not destroyed their custome. And therefore at this day they that have such lands in such places, have their election either to devise according to the power the custome doth give them, or according to the power the Statute doth give them, and in the first case the Devise is good against the heir for the whole; and in the last case, it is good against him for two parts in three only. Also by the Common-Law, the Uses of lands were devisable, as Goods, and Chattels were at the pleasure of him that had them. Perk. sect. 496. 528. 538. But otherwise, and in other cases, lands and tenements, might not be devised and disposed by Will, untill 32 H. 8. at which time the owners of lands, tenements, rents, &c. were by Act of Parliament enabled to devise and dispose their lands as followeth: He that hath any land in possession, reversion, or remainder by Socage Tenure, and hath no land held in Capite, or by Knights Service, may devise all his land, or any rent, Common, or other profit appender out of it to any person in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years, at his pleasure. Stat. 32 H. 8. c. 1. 34 H. 8. c. 5. He that hath any such land held of the King in Capite by Knights Service, or by Knights Service and not in Chief, or held of any common person by Knights Service, may devise two parts thereof in three, to be divided, or any rent &c. out of those two parts at his pleasure, and no more; for the third part must descend to the heir and come to satisfy the Lord his duties; and therefore the Devise of the whole land in this case is void for the third part. He that hath any such land held by Knights Service in Capite, and other lands held by Socage Tenure may devise two parts of the whole, and no more, or any rent &c. out of it at his pleasure. He that doth hold land of the King by Knights Service only, and not in Capite; or of a meane Lord by Knights Service, and hath also other lands held by Socage Tenure, may devise two parts in three of all the land held by Knights Service or any rent &c. out of it, and all his Socage-land at his pleasure. So that now by these Statutes, a man that hath lands in Fee-simple, may devise them in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years absolutely, or conditionally at his pleasure. And therefore if one devise his land to one for life, the remainder in Fee, or Fee-tail to another; or devise his land to B. the remainder to the next heir male of B. and the heirs males of the body of such heir male or the like; these are good Devises. But for the more full understanding of these things, it is to be known in the next place.

2. That this Statute doth not enable men to devise land that are disabled by Law

Law in respect of their persons or minds, as Infants, women Covert, men, de non sana memory, or the like; nor such as are disabled in respect either of the nature of their land, as Copi-holders (for Copi-hold-land is not devisable) or of the estate they have in the land, as Tenants in Taile, or per aversuram; or Joynt-tenants; for these can no more devise the land they do so hold, than they could before the Statute. But such as are seised of land in Common, or Coparcenary, may devise their land as well as those that are sole seised. See the Statute Co. super Littl. 111. Perk. sect. 544. Littl. sect. 287. Dyer, 210. old; N. B. 89. Perk. sect. 500, 539, 540. 446, 497, 498. And if two be Joint-tenants for life; the Fee-simple to one of them; he that hath the Fee-simple, may devise his Fee-simple after the death of his companion. Neither doth this Statute enable those that are seised of lands in Fee, in the right of their houses and Churches to devise the same lands: And therefore, Bishops, Deans, Parsons, Vicars, Masters of Hospitals, or the like, can no more devise the lands belonging to their Bishopricks &c. than they could before the Statute, but the lands they are seised of in their own right, they may devise like other men.

3. Hereditaments that are not of any yearly value, are some of them devisable, and some not; for if the King grant to one and his heirs bona & catalla felonum & fugitivorum vel ut lagatorum, Fines, and Amercements within such a Mannour or Village; in this case, the owner can neither devise these things to another, as part of the two parts; nor leave them to descend for a third part. Co. 10. 81. 3. 32. super Littl. 111. And yet if one have a Mannour unto which a Leet, Waife, Estray, or the like is appendant or appurtenant; thereby the Devise of the Mannour with the appurtenances, these things may passe as incident to the Mannour: But if a man have a Hundred, with the goods of Felons, Out-laws, Fines, Amercements, Retorna brevium, and other such casual Hereditaments within the same Hundred, and these have been usually let to Farm for a rent; in this case, these things may be devised or left to descend for a third part.

4. Such uncertain Franchises as before that are Hereditaments of no yearly value, albeit they are not devisable, yet may restrain the devise of a mans lands and tenements, and make it void for a third part, if they be held in Capite; for if it is not requisite, that the thing held by the Tenure in Capite be devisable; and such things as may not be left to descend to the Lord for a third part, and to satisfy him, his duties, may notwithstanding be devisable, or restrain the Devise of other lands and tenements, and make it void for a third part. And therefore, a Reversion upon an estate taile, which is dry and fruitless, if it be holden of the King by Knights Service in Capite will hinder the Devise of the third part of a mans lands and tenements: Also an estate taile of lands held in Capite may restrain the Devise of a third part of other lands. And therefore, if such lands be conveyed to one and the heirs of his body, the remainder to another, and he have other lands in Socage; if he have any issue, he can devise but two parts of his Socage land. And where the Statute speaks of a remainder, it is to be intended of such a remainder, only, as may draw Ward and Marriage by the Common-Law, and this is that remainder only, that doth hinder a Devise.

And therefore if A be seised of lands in Socage Tenure; and B be seised of lands in Fee, held in Capite by Knights Service; and B make a Lease for life or gift in Taile to C, the remainder to A in Taile or in Fee; in this case, A, during the estate for life or in Taile, may devise all his Socage-land, notwithstanding this remainder. But if a man make a Lease for life or years, and after grant the reversion for life, or in Taile, the remainder in Fee, and after the Grantee for life dyeth, or Donce in Taile dyeth without issue, in this case, this remainder which now is in point of reversion, will restrain the Devise of other lands, and make it void for a third part. Co. 10. 81, 82. super Littl. 111. Co. 3. 35. 30. 34.

5. In all cases where a man is restrained to devise any part of his lands held in Socage, he must have lands held in Capite at the same time, and therefore the time of having of lands to devise, and holding of other lands in Capite, and disposing of the lands to be devised, must concur. And therefore, if a man be seised of an Acre of land in Fee, held of the King in Chief by Knights Service, and of other two Acres in Fee held in Socage, and enfeoff his younger son of the Acre held in Capite, and of one of the other Acres, or convey it to the use of his wife, or for the payment of his debts, &c. and after purchase land held in Socage; in this case, he may devise all the new purchased land held in Socage without restraint. Coo. 10. 81. 11. 24. 3. 30. 34. 35. super Littl. 111. Dyer 158. So if a man be seised of lands held by Knights service in Capite in possession, reversion, or remainder, and of lands held in Socage, and by his Will in writing, doth devise all the said lands, and after the land held in Capite is recovered from him, or aliened by him bona fide; in these cases the Devise is good for all the land held in Socage: And hence it is, That if the King grant land to one in Fee Farm to hold in Socage at a rent, and after grant this rent to another and his heirs, to hold in Capite, and the Grantee of the rent doth grant it to him that hath the land; in this case, because the rent is extinct, and he cannot be said to hold lands in Capite, this shall not restrain the Devise of any of his lands.

And yet if a man hold some lands by Knights Service in Capite, and other lands in Socage, and be disseised of the lands held in Capite; he cannot devise all his Socage land, but the Devise will be void for a third part, for he is said to have that land still, whereof he hath the right. And albeit the Statute say [that he that hath lands held of the King in Capite, and other lands in Socage, may give two parts for the advancement of his wife, payment of his debts, preferment of his children] whereby he is restrained to devise any more. And therefore, if by act, executed in his life time, he convey two parts to any such uses or intents, he cannot devise any more by his Will, but the residue must descend, yet this also is to be intended of the land he hath at the same time. For if a man be seised of land held in Socage of the yearly value of 20 l. per annum, and he hath not any land held in Capite by Knights Service, and he make his Will in writing, and by it, devise his Socage land to one in Fee, and then purchase land of the value of 20 s. per annum held in Capite, and die; this will make the Devise void for a part of the land that is held in Socage: But if a man seised of land in Fee of Socage Tenure, assure it to the use of his wife for her Jointure, and after purchase lands held in Capite by Knights Service; he may devise two parts in three of all this Capite land, and the King shall not have any thing out of, or for the Socage land: If a man seised of lands, part of which are held in Capite, and part in Socage make a Feoffment of the lands held in Capite, (being two parts in three of the whole) to the use of him and his wife for life, with divers remainders over; in this case, he may not devise any of the Socage land. And if a man have no Socage land but Capite land, and convey it away in Fee-simple, keeping no Reversion to any such use, and after purchase Socage land; he may devise all the Socage land newly purchased. Coo. 34. 11. 24.

6. As the Testator enabled to devise by this Statute without restraint, is, and must be one that hath the land he doth devise at the time of the Devise made, and no other land then to be an impediment to his Devise, so he must have a sole estate as well in the land he doth leave to descend to the heir, as in the land he doth Devise: And therefore, if lands held in Capite be conveyed to a man and his wife, and the heirs of their two bodies; and this man hath other lands whereof he is sole seised held of the King in Capite by Knights Service; in this case he may not devise two parts of the whole, supposing this may suffice for the Kings third part, for he may devise but two parts of the residue; i. e. of that whereof he is sole seised, either at the time of making of the Will, or at the least at the time of the death of the Testator. Coo. 3. 32.

7. The estate of the land that is held, must continue after the death of the Tenant

Tenant, otherwise it will be no restraint; Co. 10. 84. And therefore, if a Tenant in Tail be to him and the heirs males of his body, the remainder in Fee to another of Lands held by Knights Service in Capite; and he is seized of other lands in Socage in Fee, and by his Will in writing devise all the Socage land, and dye without issue male; in this case, the Devise is good for all the Socage land. And so also it is, where the estate the Ancestor had of the land held is defeated by condition. 8. That which a man cannot dispose by any act in his life time, shall not be taken for any such Mannours, &c. whereof a man may devise two parts by authority of this Statute at his death: And therefore in the case of an undivided estate of lands between husband and wife, where the husband can make no disposition for longer time than during the Coverture; these lands are not to be esteemed such as are to be accounted amongst the lands; whereof two parts in three are devisable, Co. 3. 32. 9. The Tenure by Knights Service must continue after the death of the Devisor, otherwise the land so held will be no restraint. And therefore if the King grant land to one and his heirs, to hold during his life by Knights Service in Capite, and after in Socage, or to hold during his life in Socage, and after by Knights Service; in these cases, the Grantee may devise all his land; notwithstanding the Tenure of this land, Co. 10. 84. 3. 34. 10. The King or other Lord must have a full and clear yearly value of the third part left to descend to him, and the value is to be esteemed as it is, and doth happen to be at the time of the death of the Testator; for the King or other Lord must have the like and equal benefit for his third part, as the Devisee hath for the two parts, without diminution or subtraction; when therefore a man will have his Devise good for the residue, he must take care that the third part be so left; for if the third part be not valuable, or be charged with any rent; &c. or be upon any uncertainty; as if it be upon a possibility only, as where a man and his wife be seized of a joynt estate Tail made during the Coverture, and he Devise other lands to her on condition, that she shall wave her estate made during the Coverture, and so intend that that part of his land shall be left for the Kings part, this Devise will not be good for the residue; and albeit the wife do wave the estate after the husbands death, yet this will not help the matter, or make the Devise good for that part for which it was voyd before: But it is not material by what Tenure the third part descending be held: For it is holden by the better opinion, That if a man be seized of 20 l. land held of the King in Capite, and 10 l. land held of a Subject by Socage, and he devise all the Capite land to a stranger; that this is a good Devise for the whole, and that the King shall be satisfied by the Socage land. And if be of the value of the third part, albeit it be but of an estate Tail whereof the Ancestor was seized, or it be new purchased land, yet it is sufficient: And therefore if some lands be given to a man and the heirs of his body of the value of 10 l. per annum, and he be seized of other lands in Fee-simple to the value of 20 l. per annum, and all or part of these are held in Capite by Knights Service; in this case he may devise the lands in Fee-simple; and leave the entailed land to descend for a 3d part: And if a man be seized of such land, and convey it to the uses within the Statute, or any of them, and after purchase new land, and leave that to descend, this is sufficient; Co. 3. 32. 31. super Litt. 111. 10. 84. 11. The third part that is left to descend to satisfy the King or other Lord, must descend immediately, and he must not stay for it. And therefore, if a man be seized of three Acres of land held by Knights Service in Capite, and make a Lease of one Acre for life, and after devise the other two Acres; this Devise is not good for the whole two Acres; but for two parts in three thereof onely; and albeit the Tenant for life dye afterwards, yet this will not help the matter. But if the Devisor leave a full third part immediately to descend in Fee-simple or in Fee-tail, he may devise the other two parts at his pleasure. And if he do not leave a third part to the full, it must be made up and supplied out of the other two parts, which in case of the King is done by Commission out of the Court of Wards, and in case of a Subject by Commission out of the Chancery, Co. 3. 34. 12. As the third part left to descend, must be of as good value as either of the other two parts is at the time of the death of the Testator, or otherwise the Devise of all the residue will not be good, so must it be taken out of the lands of the Testator indifferently: And therefore, if a man be seized in Fee of land held in Chief by Knights Service, and make a Feoffment of the one half of it to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of one he doth intend to marry, and after to the use of another in remainder, or to any other such like uses within the Statute, and after he doth marry the same woman, and after he deviseth the other moiety to his wife, children, or any other; in this case, albeit the wives estate have precedency, yet the King shall have his third part out of both the moities equally. So if one be seized of Gavel-kind land held in Capite, and his son being dead, devise part of it to one of his grand-children, and part of it to another, and part to a third Tail; in this case, the Kings third part shall come out of all the three parts equally, and accordingly the Devise will be voyd for so much to every one of them, Coe. super Litt. 111. 9. 133. 3. 32. 30. So if one hold three several Mannours of three several Lords, he cannot devise two of these Mannours, leaving a third to descend, but he may devise two parts of every of the third Mannours, and a third part of each Mannour must descend to each Lord, for there must be an equality in these things. For further illustration of which things, the examples following are to be heeded. W. B. being seized of the Mannour of Thoby in Capite, and of lands in Fobbing held in Socage in Fee, and he and his wife being seized of the Mannour of Hinton held in Capite to them and the heirs of their two bodies begotten by an estate made to them during the Coverture for the joynture of the wife, the reversion to W. in Fee, and Thoby doth amount to the value of two parts, and Hinton and Fobbing to a third part, and W. B. by his Will in writing doth devise Thoby to his wife for life, upon condition that she shall not take her former Joynture, with divers remainders over, and dye, and she refused her former Joynture in Hinton; in this case it was adjudged, that the Devise was not good, for the whole Mannour of Thoby, and that the Mannour of Hinton was not a sufficient third part to descend, Coe. 3. Butler and Bakers Case. L. L. being seized of the Mannour of Affaland, Heanton, Riketon, Pengelly, Willeworthy, and Trivesquite (the last onely held in Capite) in Fee, and having issue Thomas his eldest son, William, Humphrey, and Richard, younger sons, which Richard had issue Leonard, makes a Feoffment of these Mannours to, divers uses, viz. of the Mannours of R. P. W. and A. to the use of the Feoffor, for life, and after to the use of such person as he should appoint by his last Will, and after to the use of W. his second sonne in Taile, and after to his other sonnes in Tail, and after to the use of the Feoffor and his wife in Taile, and after to the use of the Feoffor and his heirs for ever, Coe. 10. 78. Leonard Lovells Case. Coe. 11. 24. And of the Mannour of H. to such like uses, and of the Mannour of T. also to such like uses, and the same uses were with power of Revocation: And after the Feoffor purchased eight Acres of other land held in Socage, and after did revoke the uses of the Mannours of R. P. W. and A. and after devised some of the said Mannours (excepting some peices) and the said eight Acres of land to his eldest son and the heirs male of his body for 500 years on certain conditions, and if he dye without issue, that it shall go to William, &c. and afterwards he dyed seized of the said eight Acres of land, and the lands devised by the Will at the time of the death of the Testator were of the yearly value of 24 l. 14 s. 10 d. per annuum, & non ultra, and the lands whereof the Feoffment was made, and not revoked, were at the time of the death of the Testator of the value of 55 l. 6 s. 8 d. in this case, it was adjudged that the Devise of the eight Acres newly purchased was voyd, at least for a third part, and restrained by the reversion in Fee expectant upon the estate Tail made to the younger son of the Mannour held in Capite. And it was resolved, That if a man be seized of three Acres of equal yearly value, one of them held of the King by Knights Service in Capite; and have issue two sons, and give the Acre so held; and another of the Acres to his younger son, whereby he hath so executed his power by the Statute, that he cannot devise by his Will any part of the third Acre; and after he purchase three Acres of equal value held in Socage; that in this case, because he hath the reversion in Fee

Fee upon the estate Tail made to the younger son, he can devise no more but two parts of the said land so newly purchased. But if the reversion be gone before the purchase, he may devise the whole; but if a man be seized of lands in Fee, part of which are held of the King in Capite by Knights Service, and he convey two parts of it unto any of his sons, or to the use of his wife for life, or in Tail; in this case, albeit he may not devise any part of the residue, yet he may by his Will devise the reversion of the two parts. And in case, where he hath not conveyed the full two parts, he may devise so much as to make up that he hath conveyed full two parts: And it was further resolved in the same Leonard Loves case, That whereas the Statute saith, All persons, &c. having, &c. of any Mannours, &c. in possession, reversion, or remainder, &c. and the Feoffor L. L. in the case before had a remainder in Tail expectant upon the estates in Tail limited to the sons; that this remainder was not within the Statute, nor would have restrained the Devise, but for the reversion in Fee afterwards, Coo. 6. 16. super Litt. 111. A. B. being seized in Fee of the Mannour of Gracedin held in Capite, and of the value of 30 l. per an. and of the Mannour of Normanton held in Capite, of the value of 18 l. per an. in consideration of a marriage with M. did covenant to stand seized of the Mannour of G. to the use of himself and the heirs males of his body on the body of the said M. and after to the use of W. B. his brother, and the heirs males of his body, and after to the use of another brother in Tail, and after to the use of his own right heirs; and of the Mannour of N. to the use of himself and M. he is to marry, and the heirs of his body, and after the remainders as before of the other Mannour, and after the marriage is had, and A. B. doth purchase other lands held in Socage of the value of 3 l. per annum, and then devised the same new purchased lands; in this case, it was adjudged that the Devise was voyd for a third part of the Socage land, in respect of the reversion dependant upon the estate Tail, and yet that it was a good Devise for two parts of the new purchased land, albeit he had executed his power, and given more than two parts to the use of his wife, Coo. 11. 23. Henry Harpur's Case. And in these cases where a man hath land held in Capite, and other land, and he convey the land held in Capite to any of the Uses within the Statute, as to his younger children or the like, or convey it with power of revocation only, so that he hath power of the land still, and after he purchase land held in Socage; in this case it seems he may devise all the land newly purchased, as if the land were conveyed without any such power of revocation, Coo. 10. 83. A. being seized of land in Fee held of the King in Capite, made a Feoffment of two parts of it to the use of his wife, for her life, for her Joynture, and after made a Feoffment of the third part to the use of such person and persons, and of such estate and estates as he shall limit and appoint by his last Will and Testament in writing, and afterwards he did by his last Will in writing devise this third part to one in Fee; in this case it was resolved that the Devise was good for the whole third part, Coo. 6. 17. Sir Edwards Case. And yet if a man make a Feoffment in Fee of land held in Capite to the use of his last Will, albeit the Devise of the Land be with reference to the Feoffment, yet it is voyd for a third part. E. B. being seized of six Mannours, the one in Fee, and the rest in Tail, with the reversion expectant to him and his heirs, and hath issue T. B. divers of which Mannours are held of the King in Capite by Knights Service, and every of them of equal yearly value, by his last Will in writing did devise all the said Mannours to divers persons and their heirs for payment of his debts, and advancement of his children, and then died, and the estate in Tail that descended to his issue was more than a third part of all; in this case it was resolved that the Devise was good for two parts of the reversions, and for the entire Mannour in Possession, and not voyd for a third part of the Mannour in Possession, and for all the reversions in Fee, Coo. 10. 81. Tr. 34. Eliz. Bedinfield's Case. A man being seized in fee of Gavelkind land in Kent, part whereof is held of the King in Capite, and part of Common persons in Socage, hath issue A. who hath issue B. C. and D. and A. devise some of these lands to B. and some to C. and some to D. his Grandchildren in Tail; in this case the Devise is voyd for a third part of the whole.

as well for the land held in Socage as the land held in Capite, Coq. Rep. Stamf. Per. 8. And yet if in this case no Will be made, the King shall have but a third part of that which doth descend to the eldest son, the heir at the Common Law, and not the third part of that which doth descend to the younger sons by custom. And if lands devisable by custome come into the Kings hands, and he grant them to hold of him in Capite, and the Patentee devise them to the use of his wife, children, or for payment of his debts, &c. in this case the Devise is voyd for a third part: And here note, that in all the cases before, where a man is restrained to devise a third part of his land, if he devise the whole, the Devise is good notwithstanding for so much as he hath power to devise. See more, Brownl. 2. part. 105, 106, 107. And enquire what alteration is made in the Law in these Cases by the order of Parliament, whereby these Tenures and the Incidents thereof are taken away. And as touching the thing devised, it is further to be known, 13. That a man must have right to, and possession of the land he deviseth, or else the Devise is not good. And therefore if a Disseisor devise the land he hath gotten by Disseisin, this Devise as to the Disseeisee is voyd, Plow. 485. And if a man be disseised of his land, so that he hath nothing but a right thereof left, and then he devise this right, or devise the land, this Devise is voyd. And if one contract for land, and pay his money for it, but hath no assurance of the land, and he devise this land to another, this cannot be a good Devise of the land, but perhaps the Devisee may in a Court of equity compell him that hath received the money to assure and settle the land according to the Devise. Nevils Case. And if one devise another mans land, this Devise is voyd; but if he after the Devise made purchase this land, now is the Devise good, Plow. 144. Fitz. Devise 7. If a man bargain and sell land to me on condition to re-enter, if he pay me 10 l. and I covenant that I will not take the profits untill default of payment, and he make a Lease of six years of it to another, and after break the condition; in this case I may devise this land, and the Devise will be good, Adjudged Powlsley and Blakemans Case. 14. A Seignior, Rent, or the like thing is devisable as land is, and will pass without the Attornment of the Tenant, Perk. Sect. 538. Litt. Sect. 585, 586. Dyer 253. 140. 5. 52. F.N.B. 121. Coq. super Litt. 111. 8. 83. 3. 33. Brownl. 1. part. 75, 76. The like Law is of a reversion also. And a man may devise a Rent de novo issuing out of land, or a Rent issuing out of land that is in esse before. And therefore if a man make a Lease for life or years, rendering Rent, the Lessor may devise this Rent. So if a Rent be granted to one and his heirs, the Grantee may devise this Rent. So a man that is seized of land in Fee, may devise any Rent out of it at his pleasure. And therefore if a man that holdeth his land by Knights Service in Chief, by his Will devise any Rent Common, or other profit out of it; this Devise is good, and that albeit the Rent or Profit doth amount to the value of the whole land; as if one have three Acres of land worth 3 s. by the year, and he devise 3 s. Rent out of it; this is a good Devise of the whole Rent; but in this case the Rent shall issue out of two parts of the land, and a third part shall be free and not charged with it, but he may charge 2 parts in 3 parts of such land at his pleasure. And so also it is if a man have lands holden by Knights Service, and not in Capite, and other lands in Socage, he may charge two parts of the Knights Service land, and all his Socage land at his pleasure. And if a man have lands held in Socage, and no lands held in Capite, or by Knights Service, he may devise what Rent he will out of it. But a man cannot devise a Rent Common, or any such like thing out of another mans land that is none of his own, nor out of that he hath not. And therefore if one devise 10 l. out of his Mannour of Dale, when in truth he hath no such Mannour, this Devise is voyd. If a Rent be granted to me for the life of I. S. it seems I may not devise this Rent, but that the Terre-tenant shall hold it as an Occupant, Dyer. 253. 15. Where a man is seized of a house in Fee, and may devise the house it self, there it seems he may devise the doors, windows, wainscot, or the like Incidents of the house. And where a man may devise the land it self, it seems he may devise the trees or grasse growing upon the land, Quando licet id quod majus videtur & licere id quod minus. But where the land it self is not devisable, there such things incident or annexed to, or growing, or being upon it, are not devisable. And therefore the Tenant in Tail for life or years of land, may not devise the houses or windows, doors, or wainscot of houses, or trees or grass being or growing thereupon, but this Devise is voyd, Coo. 4. 63. Perk. Sect. 512, 518. Coo. 11. Rich. Liffords Case. Kely 88. 16. Where a Devise of a man hath a Use that is not executed by the Statute of Uses, but remains at the Common Law, he may devise it as he may any other thing Perk. Sect. 510. Dyer. And therefore if one be possessed of a Term of years, and grant it over to another to the use of the Grantor, he may dispose this use by his Will, for it is in the nature of a Chattel. But if a man have such a use in joynt-tenancy, he cannot devise it, See Uses: 17. All manner of Goods and Chattels real and personal may be devised by Testament. And therefore Leases for years of lands, Grants for years of Rent, Common, or the like, Wardships of the bodies and lands of heirs of Tenants by tenure in Capite, and by Knights Service, Cattel, as Oxen, Sheep, Horses, &c. Gold, Silver, Money, Plate, Household-stuff, as Beds, Pots, Pans, Platters, &c. Corn, Wool, and Implements of Husbandry may be devised by Will; and not onely those a man hath at the time of the Devise, but those a man is to have or may have afterwards. And therefore it is held, a man may give his corn that shall grow in such a ground the next year after his death, or the wool or lambs his flock of sheep shall yield the next year after his death; and that these Devises are good; but if in this case there shall be no such corn growing in that ground, or any lambs or wool arising out of his flock that year, the Legacy is fruitless. And yet if the Testator devise to J.S. 20 quarters of corn, or 20 lambs, and both will that the same shall be paid out of his corn that shall grow, or out of his flock the next year, and there be not so much corn, or not so many lambs, or not any at all growing or arising, yet this is a good Devise, and the things must be paid. In like manner, if a man give to J.S. a horse, or a yoke of oxen, in this case, albeit the Testator have neither horse nor yoke of oxen, yet the Devise is good, and must be performed, Swinb. part. 3. Sect. 5. Perk. Sect. 511. 525. 18. Things in action, as debts, and the like, albeit they be not grantable by deed in the life time of the party, yet are they devisable by Will. And therefore if the Testator doth by his Will give any debt due to him, or an obligation, or on a contract, or the like; this Devise is good. And the thing devised may be had thus; the Testator may if he will make the Legatary Executor as to that debt, or if he do not, the Legatary may sue the Executor in the Spiritual Court, or in some Court of equity, and thereby compell the Executor either to recover it himself, and so to pay it to the Legatary, or to give the Legatary power to sue for and recover it himself in the Executors name. But if it be such a cause of action as is altogether uncertain, as where a man may have an action against another for taking away his goods, or to compell him to make an account, or the like; this is such a cause of action as is not devisable. And yet possibilities and uncertainties are in divers cases devisable, Perk. Sect. 527. Litt. Bro. Sect. 437. Dyer 272. Plow. 520. And therefore if one have money to be paid him on a Mortgage, he may devise this money when it comes; as if I enfeoff a stranger of land, upon condition that if he do not pay me 20 l. such a day, that I may re-ent, in this case I may devise this 20 l. if it be paid, and the Devise is good, albeit it be made before the day of payment come. And if a man be possessed of a Term of years, and devise all the residue of that Term of years that shall be to come at the time of his death; this Devise is good, and yet such a Grant by deed is voyd, Childs Case, 17. Ja. B. R. But a meer possibility, and a thing altogether uncertain, is no more devisable by will, than it is grantable by deed, Perk. Sect. 520, 521, &c. See in Grants. 19. Emblements, i. e. the corn that is sown and growing upon a mans ground at the time of his death, and which himself should have reaped if he had lived to the harvest (as in most cases he shall where he doth sow it) are devisable. And therefore if a man have land in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years, and sow it with corn; he may devise the corn at his death to whom he please; and yet if the Lessee for years sow his land so little while before his Term expire that it cannot be ripe before the end of the Term, and he dye, it seems he cannot devise this corn, for if he had lived he could not have reaped it after the end of the Term.

20. Ob-

Devise of Obligations.
Counterpanes of Leases, &c.

20. Obligations, Counterpanes of Leases, and such like things also are devisable; but in this case the Devisee cannot sue upon the Obligation in his own name, nor enter for the condition broken upon the Lease, if there be cause, but he may cancel, give, sell, or deliver up the Obligation or Counterpane to the Obligor, or Lessee, Perk. Sess. 527. And finally, whatsoever shall come to the Executor after the death of the Testator in the right of his Executorship, may be devised by the last Will and Testament of the Testator. See infra in numb.

Devise of the things a man hath in Joyn-ture with another.

21. The Goods and Chattels that a man hath joynly with another are not devisable. And therefore if there be two Joynt-tenants of Goods or Chattels, as where such things are given to two, or two do buy such things together, and one of them devise his part of the things to a stranger, this Devise is voyd. Inasmuch, that if in this case the Testator make the other Joynt-tenant his Executor, the Will as to this is voyd, and he shall not be charged as Executor for those Goods, but he shall have them altogether by right of survivorship, Perk. Sess. 526. Litt. Sess. 287. Dolt. & St. 167.

Devise of the things a man hath in anothers right.

22. The Goods and Chattels that a man hath in anothers right are not devisable; and therefore an Executor or Administrator cannot devise the Goods and Chattels he hath as Executor or Administrator, for such the Devise is voyd, Plow. 525. Broo. Administrator 7. Fitz. Adm. 3. Howbeit the Executor may appoint an Executor of the Goods of the first Testator, which the Administrator cannot do; and of the profits that do arise by the Goods and Chattels the Executor or Administrator hath during the time of his Administration, he may make disposition. The Goods and Chattels belonging to Colledges and Hospitals may not be devised by the Testaments of the Masters or Governours thereof, nor the Goods and Chattels belonging to other Corporations by the Mayors, Bayliffs, or Heads thereof. And the Goods & Chattels that Churchwardens have in the right of the Church are not devisable, Dolt. & St. lib. 2. c. 39. Perk. Sess. 496, 498, 499. All the Chattels real that a man hath in the right of his wife by her means, and all the Obligations that are made to her alone before, or during the time of the Coverture, and the Chattels real or personal that his wife hath as Executrix to any other, are not devisable by the Testament of the husband. But all the Chattels personal that a man hath by his wife which she hath in her own right, and the debts due upon Obligations made to the husband and wife both during the Coverture, are devisable by the Testament of the husband, Perk. Sess. 560. Dolt. & St. c. 7.

Husband and wife.

Devise of things that are incident and annexed to some other thing.

23. Such things as are annexed and incident to a Free-hold or inheritance, so that it cannot be severed from it by him that hath the property of them, as wain-scot, and glasse to houses, and the like, are not devisable; but in such cases where the thing it self to which it is annexed is devisable, Perk. Sess. 526. Relw. 88. See before.

Devise of things that are not the Devisors, or belong not unto his Executor.

24. The Goods and Chattels that are another mans, are not devisable, and therefore if a man give another mans horse, it is a voyd Devise. So if one devise the things that by special custome of some places, as the heir loomes do belong to the heir, this Devise is voyd, for it is not devisable from him, Plow. Granthams Case. Coe. super Litt. 185. Coe. super Litt. 308.

Devise of a Presentation to a Church.

25. If a Bishop have a Ward belonging to his Bishoprick fallen, he may devise it; but if a Church of his become voyd in his life time, he cannot devise the Presentation. If a Parson of a Church have the Advowson in Fee, and he devise that his Executors two or three of them shall present at the next avoydance, this is a good Devise, Trin. 13. Ja. Curia. B. R.

Mistake or errour in the thing devised.

26. All these things before that are devisable, when they are devised must be named, and devised either by their proper name, or otherwise described by some other matter whereby the minde of the Testator may be known and discerned; for if he erre and mistake in the name or substance of the thing devised, or it be so uncertainly devised and described that it cannot be perceived what he intendeth, the Devise is voyd, Swiub. part. 7. c. 5. Plow. 525. Perk. Sess. 500. Brownl. 1. part. 132. And therefore if one devise a peice of ground by the name of a Messuage, except it be so called, the Devise is voyd; and yet by the Devise of the use, profit, or occupation of land, the land it self is well devised; and by the Devise

wife of land it self, the reversion thereof may be devised. But if one intending to devise a horse, doth devise an ox; or meaning to give gold, doth give apparel; these Legacies are voyd, unless his meaning may appear by some circumstance to be otherwise; as if a man have but one horse, and he be called Arundell, and he devise his horse Bucephall; this Legacy is good enough. And if a man give all his money in such a Chest, when in truth there is no money in that Chest; or give to another the 10 l. which I. S. doth owe him, when in truth I. S. doth not owe any such money; this Devise is voyd. And yet if the Devise be thus, viz. I give to A. B. 10 l. and I will that the same be paid of the money I have in such a Chest, or of the money which such a man doth owe me; in this case the Devise is good, albeit there be not any money in the Chest, or owing. And if one give 10 l. remaining in such a Chest, whereas in truth there is but 5 l. in the Chest, in this case the Legacy is good for the 5 l. But error and mistake in the quantity and quality of the thing devised, when the same for the substance of it is certain, doth not hurt: And therefore, if the Testator meaning to give the fourth part of his goods, give the one half, or meaning to give but 50 l. give 100 l. or converso, meaning to give a greater, doth give a less quantity or sum; in these cases, the Legacy is good, and the Legatary shall have as much as the Testator did mean. If a man give his white horse, when in truth he hath but one horse, and that is black; this is a good Devise of this horse: And if the thing devised be under such general words, that the minde of the Testator cannot be known by it, the Devise is voyd; and therefore, if the Testator say, I do bequeath something, or I bequeath a substance, or I bequeath a body, or I bequeath, or the like; these Devises are voyd for uncertainty: So if he say, I do give lands, or I do give goods; these Devises are voyd: And yet if the Testator give a horse, an ox, a gold chain, or the like indefinitely; in these cases, the Devise is good, albeit he have no such thing. But if one devise thus, I give lead, money, wheat, oil, or the like; and say, not how much, or what quantity; this Legacy is voyd for uncertainty, or at least the Executor may deliver what quantity thereof he will, and this shall satisfy the Legacy, Swinb. part. 7. cap. 10.

Uncertainty in the thing devised.

7. As touching the terms of a Devise, it must be known, That if one devise any thing to wicked ends, or upon wicked conditions, as to the end that the Devisee shall kill a man, or because he hath killed a man, or the like; these Devises are voyd in like manner, as it is when the cause or motive is false, as because one is my Cofin, or hath lent me money, I devise to him 20 l. and he is not my Cofin, or did not lend me money; these Devises are voyd, Swinb. 289. And as touching the rest of the properties of a good Devise, see them before in the properties of a good Testament, Coo. 3. 36. And here by the way, be advised if thou hast land to fettle, rather to do it by act executed by advice of learned Counsel in thy life and health-time, and therein adde such conditions and provisos of revocation, and otherwise as thou wilt; or if thou wilt do it by Will, then do it in thy perfect memory, and by learned advice: Let the Will be indented, and of two parts, and leave one part with a friend, that it be not suppressed after thy death; Let there be credible Witnesses to the publication thereof, and let their names be subscribed to it: Let the whole Will be written with one hand, and in one peice of paper or parchment for fear of alteration, addition, or diminution: Let the hand and seal of the Devisor be set to it: And if it be in several parts, let his hand and seal, and the hands of the Witnesses be to every part: If there be any raising or interlining, let there be a Memorandum of it. And if thou make any revocation of thy Will, do it by good advice, and by writing;

Seventhly, in respect of the tenures and conditions, causes and ends of the Devise.

A Caveat for making of Testaments.

Vox audita perit, Litera scripta manet.

The general rules for the Exposition of Wills, are these, That they must have a favourable and benign interpretation, and as near to the minde and intent of the Testator as may be; and yet so withall, as his intent may stand with the rules of Law, and be not repugnant thereunto, Plow. 540. Coo. super Litt. 323. It is said to be therefore a Maxim of Law, Quod ultima voluntas testatoris perimplenda est secundum veram intentionem suam, according to these Verses:

8. The Exposition of Testaments and Devises, and how they shall be construed and taken. Devises of Land.

First, in respect of the person that is to take by the Devise; and what, when, and how he shall so take by the Devise.

Grant.

*Sed legum servanda fides, suprema voluntas.
Quod mandat fierique subest parere necesse est.*

If a Devise be made of land to I. S. and the heirs males of his body; by this Devise the sons and not the daughters of I. S. shall have the land. And if a Devise be made of land to I. S. and the heirs Females of his body; by this Devise the daughters and not the sons of I. S. shall have the land. And yet it hath been said in these cases, that if in the first case the Devisee hath issue a daughter, who hath issue a son; or in the last case, hath issue a son, who hath issue a daughter, that this son and daughter shall take by this Devise in these cases; but it seems the Law is otherwise, Terms of the Law, 1st. Devise, Coo. super Litt. 25. Plow. 414.

If a Devise be made of land to I. S. and his heirs males, by this Devise I. S. hath an estate Tail; but otherwise it is of such a limitation by Deed; for if one by Deed give land to another and his heirs males, by this the Donee hath a Fee-simple, and his heirs general shall have it, 27. H. 8. 17.

If a Devise be of land to I. S. and to the eldest heirs females of his body; by this Devise all his daughters, and not one of them onely shall take it: So if one devise Gavelkind-land to a man and his eldest heirs; this doth not alter the custom, but by this all the sons shall take, Coo. super Litt. 27.

If a man devise his land to his wife for life, the remainder to his son and the heirs males of his body engendred, and for default of such issue the remainder to his next heir male, and the heirs males of the body of that heir male, and after his son dye without issue (his wife living) and the Devisor hath issue a daughter, who hath issue a son; in this case and by this Devise it seems the daughter and not her son shall have the land, and that in Fee-simple, Fitz. Devise 2.

If a man devise his land to his wife for life, and after to his own right heirs males, and he hath issue three daughters, and after his death one of them hath a son; in this case, and by this Devise the next collateral heir male of the Devisor, and not the son of the daughter shall have the land, Trin. 9. Jac. Adjudged Curteis Case.

If a man have issue two sons and a daughter, and devise his land to his wife for ten years, the remainder to his younger son and his heirs, and if either of the said two sons dye without issue of their bodies, the remainder to the daughter and her heirs, and the younger son dye in the life time of the father, and after the father dye; in this case, and by this Devise the daughter hath a good remainder, but it seems the elder son hath first an estate Tail by the intent of the Devisor, Dyer 122.

If a man devise some land to A his eldest daughter and her heirs, & if she dye without issue, to T his youngest daughter and her heirs, and if she dye within 16 years, that A shall have her part to her and her heirs, and if A marry such an one, that T shall have her part to her and her heirs; and if T dye having no issue, that all her part shall go to M and E his Nieces; and if A dye without issue, that T shall have her part to her and her heirs, and T after the 16 years doth dye without issue; in this case the Nieces M and E, and not A shall have her part that is dead, Dyer 330.

If land be devised to A for life, the remainder to a Monk for life, the remainder to I. S. in Fee; by this Devise he in the remainder in Fee shall take presently after the first estate for life ended; and if the Devise be to a Monk for life, the remainder to I. S. in Fee; by this I. S. shall take presently, Park. Sett. 566, 567.

If a man devise his land to a woman and her brother, and the heirs of either of their two bodies, and for default of issue of the said woman and her brother, the remainder to the right heirs of the Devisor; and after the death of the Devisor the brother dyeth without issue, and the sister hath issue and dyeth; in this case, and by this Devise, her issue shall have a moiety, and no more of the land, Dyer 326.

If one devise two parts of his Land to his four younger sons in Tail; and that if the Infant in the wombe of his wife be a son, and that he shall have the fifth part as co-heir with the four, and if his five sons dye without issue, that the two parts shall revert, and then the Devisor dyeth, and after a son is borne, and after he and three of the other sons die; in this case and by this Devise, the Infant shall not take any thing, because he is incapable, and the two parts shall not revert to the heire untill the five sons be dead without issue Dyer 304.

If one devise the Mannor of Dale to the eldest sonne of J. S. in Fee, and the Mannor of Sale to J. D. for life, the remainder to such of the children of J. S. as shall be then living, and shall have the Mannor of Dale, and the eldest son of J. S. after the Testators death doth sell the Mannor of Dale, and after J. D. dyeth; in this case and by this Devise none of the children of J. S. shall have the Mannor of Dale, but it shall goe to the heirs of the Devise. Adjudged. Co. B. M. 36. 37. Eliz. Browns case.

If one devise his land to the children of J. S. by this devise, the children that J. S. hath at the time of the Devise, or at the most, the Children that J. S. hath at the time of the death of the Testator, and not any of them that shall be borne after his death, shall take.

If one have two daughters by divers women, and devise a moiety of his land to his wife for seven years, and that the elder daughter shall enter into the other moiety at her day of marriage, and if his wife be with child of a daughter, that then she shall have an equall portion with the other sister, and the Devisor dyeth, and the wife doth enter and hath not a daughter, and then the elder daughter doth take a husband, and enters upon a moiety, the younger daughter dies without issue, and the seven years expire; in this case and by this devise, the collaterall heir of the younger daughter shall have the moiety of the whole; and not the moiety of a moiety only, and that by descent. Dyer 342.

If a man have issue B. C. and D. sons, and he devise his land to D. his son, the remainder proximo de sanguine, or to the next of blood of the Testator; in this case and by this Devise B. shall take after the death of D. as the next of blood. In like manner, if the Testator have four daughters, and he devise his land to the youngest in Taile, the remainder to the next of blood; by this Devise the eldest daughter and not all the rest shall have the land: And if the Testator have issue B. his elder son and C. his younger son, and B. have issue D. his his son, and B. is attainted and dyeth, and the Testator deviseth his land to J. S. for life, the remainder to the next of blood of the Testator; by this Devise D. and not C. shall have the land. Curia B. R. Mich. 20 Jac.

If a man have issue B. and C. sons, and E. a daughter, and devise his land to C. for life, and after that it shall remain to the next of blood to his children, to the next heirs of the blood of his children, and C. dyeth, and B. dyeth without issue, and D. hath issue a daughter; in this case, and by this Devise, the heirs of A. shall not take, but the next of blood to the children of A. which is the daughter of D. and his children themselves are excluded, and if the sons have any issues living, they shall take with her by this Devise. Broo. Descent. Pl. 19. 8. Aff. Pl. 6.

If the Testator have issue by A. his first wife, three daughters, Joane, Elizabeth and Anne; and by B. his second wife, Alice and Elizabeth; and by C. his third wife, William a son; and three daughters, Mary, Katherine and Johan; and he devise his land to Johan his youngest daughter for life, paying 13 s. 4 d. to the son, and after her death to the son and the heirs of his body, and after his death without issue to Elizabeth the daughter of the second wife, and Mary the daughter of the third wife for their lives; the remainder (in Latin) to the next of the blood of the Devisor for ever; and the elder Joan hath issue J. P. and dyeth, the son dyeth without issue; the younger Joan hath issue and dyeth, Elizabeth of the first wife hath issue and dyeth; Anne dyeth having issue, Alice dyeth without issue, Mary and Elizabeth born of the second wife die without issue, Katherine dyeth without issue; in this case and by this Devise the son and heir of the elder daughter after the death of the son without issue, and of Elizabeth and Mary, and not all or any of the children or their children shall have the land, because proximo in Latin doth devore a person certain; and there be expresse Devises to others: But if in this case the remainder be limited in generall to the next of blood without any other other matter, all the daughters perhaps may have it as Joint-tenants. Adjudged M. 26 Jac. petin. versus Pearse. B. R.

If a man have two sons and a daughter which hath two daughters, and he devise his land to a stranger for life, the remainder to his second son for life, the remainder in Fee to the next of blood to his son; in this case, if the eldest son die without issue, the daughter and her daughters shall have the land. Fitz. Devise 9. Perk. sect. 508.

Secondly, in respect of the thing devised.

Whatsoever will passe by any words in a Deed, will pass by the same words in a Will, and more also; for a Will is always more favourably interpreted than a Deed; See in the Exposition of Deeds supra.

And therefore if a man devise the profits, use, or occupation of land, by this Devise the land it self is devised. Coo. 8. 94. Plow. 525.

If a man devise the profits of his land, this is a Devise of the land it self. Brownlows 80. 1. part.

If a man devise thus, I give all my lands to J. S. or I give all my tenements to J. S. or I give all my lands and tenements to J. S. by this Devise is given, and J. S. shall have not only all the lands whereof the Devisor is sole seised, but also all the lands whereof he is seised in common or co-partinery with another, and not only the lands he hath in possession, but also the lands he hath in reversion of any estate in Fee-simple; but by this Devise regularly, Leases for years of lands will passe. Mervils case. Fitz. Devise 4. Brod. Dont. 41.

If a man devise thus, I give all my land in possession only; by this Devise there is given the lands he hath in possession only, and none of the lands he hath in reversion. Plow. 66.

If a man be seised of land in Fee-simple in Dale, and devise thus, I give all my lands in Dale to J. S.; and after the Will made and published, he doth purchase other lands in Dale, and dyeth; in this case and by this devise J. S. shall not have the new purchased lands. Plow. 343, 344. old N. B. 89. Fitz. Devise 17. and in this case it hath been held further, That if the Testator do by word of mouth after the purchase of the same lands declare himself to be minded that J. S. shall have the same new purchased lands also by this Devise, that notwithstanding J. S. shall not have them by this Devise. And yet it hath been adjudged, That if in this case one come to the Devisor to buy his new purchased land, and he say nay, but J. S. shall have it as the rest, that this is a new publication of the Will, and that J. S. by this devise shall have these new purchased lands; for a new publication of the Will in these cases will make the land to pass. Trin. 37 Eliz. B. R. Breckford versus Parincote. But if a man devise the Mannor of Dale, and at the time of the devise he hath it not, or devise his lands in Dale, and at the time of the devise he hath no lands there, and afterwards he doth purchase the Mannor of Dale, or lands in Dale; by this devise, and in this case, the Mannor and the new purchased lands will pass; for in this case it shall be intended he meant to purchase it. And yet the Statute enabling a man to devise lands saith, Any person having, &c. Coo. 3. 30. See before.

If one have an ancient Tenement, and lands belonging to it, and then purchase more lands, and occupy them altogether with the Tenement many years, and being all thus in his occupation, he doth make a devise after this manner, I give my Tenement in Dale, and all my lands belonging to it now in my occupation, to J. S. by this devise J. S. shall have the ancient land only, and none of the new purchased land; but if there be no ancient land belonging to the Tenement, but new purchased land only, there perhaps it may be otherwise; for in this case the words cannot else be satisfied. As in case where a man hath some lands in Fee-simple, and other lands for years only in Dale, and he devise all his lands and Tenements in Dale; by this devise the lands he hath for years doth not pass; but if he have no other lands in Dale; but these lands, in this case perhaps this land will pass. Lofis versus Baker. Hill. 20 Ja. B. R.

If one have a moiety of lands in Essex, and a moiety of lands in Kent, and he devise thus, I give my moieties, and all my other lands in Kent to J. S. it seems by this devise the moieties in both Counties do pass, and that J. S. shall have both the moieties. In Mervils case. If

If a man be seised in Fee, in possession of the moitie of a Farm called the Farm of C. and of the reversion in Fee of the other moitie, expectant on a lease made to A. and B. for their lives, and he make his Will thus, I will that my wife shall have all my living which I now occupy, untill my son come to 21. years of age, and then I will have her have the thirds of all my living, and that my son shall have all my Farm of C. to him and his heirs; by this devise if A. and B. dye before the heire be 21. years of age, the wife shall have the thirds of the whole Farm, and not of the moitie in possession onely. Plich. 20. Ja. Adjudged Scattergood. case.

If a man be seised of land in a Village, and in two Hamlets of the same Village, and he devise all his lands in that Village, and in one of the Hamlets; by this devise none of his land in the other Hamlet doth pass. Dyer 261.

If a man make his Will the first day of May, and thereby give the Mannor of Dale to one in Fee, and the tenth of May one of the Tenancies escheat, and the 20. of May the Devisor dyeth; in this case and by this devise, it seems the Devisee shall have the Tenancie that doth escheat. Plow. 343.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. and his heirs, or to J. S. in Fee, or to J. S. in Fee-simple, or to J. S. for ever, or to J. S. Habendum sibi & suis, or to J. S. and his Assignes for ever; or thus, I give my land to J. S. to give, sell, or do therewith at his pleasure; by all these, and such like devises, a Fee-simple estate is made of the thing devised, and J. S. shall have the same to him and his heirs for ever. Littl. Broo. sect. 133. Perk. sect. 1. 6. Littl. sect. 586. Kelw. 43. Coe. super Littl. 19. 20 H. 6. 35. Littl. Broo. sect. 432. 19 H. 8. 10.

3. In respect of the estate and time that is devised. Fee-simple.

But if land be granted by Deed after this manner, J. S. by this grant in all these cases, except only in the first case, hath only an estate for life. And if a man devise his land to J. S. and say not how long, nor for what time, by this devise J. S. hath an estate for life only in the land. Fitz. Devise 111. See Gouldsb. 183.

Devise of land let for 99. years thus: I give to J. S. my house with all the lands 99. years: and J. S. shall have all my inheritance, if the Law will allow it; this doth give the inheritance to J. S. Hobb. Rep. ib. 7. And if I give to my right heirs males and posterity of my posterity of my name part and part like, this is a Fee-simple. Brownlows 129. 1. part. See Brownlows 129. 1. part 147. 169. 2 part. 272. 277.

If a man devise his land to J. S. and his Assignes, without saying [for ever] it is said by some, that by this devise J. S. hath onely an estate for life. Coe. super Littl. 9. Perk. sect. 57. 239. New Terms of the Law tit. Devise. But the contrary is affirmed elsewhere, and that it is a Fee-simple Tr. in 2. C. B. R. reply & Daniels case.

If one devise his land to his wife, to dispose thereof at her will and pleasure, and to give it to one of her sons; in this case, and by this devise, she hath a Fee-simple; but it is qualified, for she must convey it to one of her children, and cannot convey it to another. Coe. 6. 16. Dyer 126.

If one devise his land to J. S. paying 10 l. and use no other words, by this devise the Devisee hath the Fee-simple of the land, albeit the 10 l. be not the hundredth part of the worth of the land. And yet if one devise his land to J. S. for his life, paying 10 l. by this devise J. S. shall have an estate for life only. Adjudge Hill. 36 Eliz. Coe. B.

If one devise land of the value of 50 l. per annum to J. S. for life, the remainder to J. D. paying 40 l. to W. by this devise J. D. shall have the Fee-simple of the remainder upon condition.

If one have two sons, and he devise his land first to his wife and then he saith thus: In like manner, I will that my son A. shall have it after my wives death; and if my wife dye before my son B. then that my son A. shall pay to B. 3 l. by the year during the life of B. and also 20 l. to W. S. by this devise A. shall have the Fee-simple of this land. Hill. 17 Jac. B. R. adjudged Spicers case.

If one devise his land thus, I will my land to my son W. for his life, and after his death to my son T. and if my son W. purchase land as good as that land for my son son T. then that my son W. shall sell the land devised to my son T. as his own, and I will that my son W. shall pay to his sisters 10 l. by 20. s. a year; in this case, and by this devise W. hath a Fee-simple; for power to sell given by implication an estate in Fee-simple, and it is paying also; Sec. Curia M. 18. Jac. B. R. Green versus Dewell.

If one devise land to his wife and her heirs, and if the heir put her out that she shall have other land; by this devise she hath the Fee-simple of the first land, and is not abridged by the latter words. Pasch. 14 Jac. B. R. Curia.

If one devise his land thus, I give White Acre to my eldest son and his heirs, for his part: Item, Black Acre to my youngest son for his part; by this devise the younger son shall have the Fee-simple of Black Acre: So, if I give White Acre to J. S. Item, Black Acre to J. S. and his heirs; by this devise J. S. shall have the Fee-simple of White Acre also. Thin. 30. Eliz.

If one give land to his wife for life, the remainder to his son and the heirs males of his body, and for want of such issue the remainder to the next heir male of the Donor and the heirs males of his body; it seems by this devise, that the next heir male of the son hath a Fee-simple. Perk. sect. 365.

Fee-tail.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. and to his, or [to the] heirs males, or heirs females of his body, [or of his body begotten] or to J. S. and his issues male, or his issues female; or to J. S. and the heirs males of his body begotten on M. or to J. S. and E. his wife, and the heirs males, or heirs females of their two bodies begotten; or to J. S. and his heirs, if he shall have any heirs of his body, else that the land shall revert; or to J. S. and his heirs, if he have any issue of his body; or to J. S. and the right heirs males of his body; or to J. S. and his heirs, provided that if he dye without heirs of his body, that the land shall revert; by all these and such like devises an estate tail is made of the thing devised, and J. S. the Devisee shall have the same accordingly. See Brownlows Rep. 1. part. 45. 2. part. 75.

Deed.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. & semini suo; by this devise J. S. hath an estate tail: But if he say, I give my land in Dale to J. S. & sanguini suo; it is said by this devise J. S. hath the Fee-simple of the land. If one devise his land to J. S. & exilibus, vel prolibus de corpore suo; by this devise of J. S. have no children at the time, it seems he hath an estate tail; but by such a limitation by deed is made only an estate for life. If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. for life, the remainder to J. D. and E. his wife and their children; or to J. D. and E. his wife and their men children; or to J. D. and E. his wife and their issues; by these devises, if the husband and wife have no children at the time of the devise, is created an estate tail; and if they have any children at the time of the devise, then hereby is created an estate for all their lives only in jointenancie. And if land be devised to A. for life, the remainder to B. and the heirs of this body, the remainder to J. S. and his wife, and after to their children; by this devise J. S. and his wife have estates for their lives only, and their children after them estates for their lives jointly: And albeit they have no children at the time, yet every child they shall have after, may take by way of remainder. And so also it seems is the law upon such a limitation by Deed. Coo. super Littl. 9. Broo. tit. tail 21. Coo. super Littl. 20. 6. 16.

If one devise his land to his wife for life, the remainder to his son, and if the son dye without issue not having a son, that then it shall remain over; this is a good estate tail. Brownl. 2. part. 270.

Deed.

If lands be devised to J. S. and his heirs males, or his heirs females, without saying [of his body;] by this devise J. S. hath an estate tail. But if such a limitation be by deed, it is a Fee-simple. Littl. sect. 1. H. 6. 25. 27. 9. H. 8. 27.

If one have two sons, and devise White Acre to his eldest son and his heirs, and Black acre to his youngest son and his heirs, and if either of them dye without issue, then that the other shall be his heir; by this devise either of them hath an estate tail, and no Fee-simple. Hill. 22. Jac. B. R. Daniels case.

If one have land in Kent in W. S. and T. and have one male-child and a daughter, daughter, and his brother hath three children, B, C, and D, and he devise his land thus; Item, I give my land in Kent to my male child and his heirs, and if he dye without heirs of his body, that the land in W. shall go to B. and his heirs, Item, I will my land in S. to C. and his heirs, and my land in T. to D. and his heirs; in this case, and by this devise, the male child of the Devisor hath an estate taile in all the lands, and after his death without heirs it shall remain according to the Will; So that if one devise his land to his eldest son and his heirs, and if he dye without heirs of his body, that it shall remain to his youngest son and his heirs; by this devise, the eldest son hath an estate taile, and the youngest son the Fee-simple. Adjudge M. 9. Jac. Willups case.

If one devise his land to his son W, and if he marry and have any issue male begotten of the body of his wife, then that issue to have it; and if he have no issue male, then to others in remainder; by this devise, it seems W. hath an estate taile to him and the issues male begotten on the body of his wife. Coo. 9. 127.

If one devise White Acre to J. S. and the heirs of his body, and then after faith thus, and I will that J. D. shall have Black Acre in the same manner that J. S. hath White Acre; by this devise J. D. hath an estate tail in Black Acre as J. S. hath in White Acre. Perk. sect. 561. 20 H. 6. 36. Et sic de similibus. And if one devise White Acre to J. S. and then say, Item, Black Acre to J. S. and the heirs of his body; by this devise he hath an estate taile in both Acres. Tr. 30 Eliz.

If one devise his land to his wife for years, the remainder to his younger son and his heirs, and if either of his two sons dye without issue, &c. that it shall remain to his daughter and her heirs, and the younger son dye in the life time of the Father, and after the Father dyeth; it seemeth by this devise the elder son shall have the land in taile. Dyer. 122.

If one devise his land to his wife for life, and after to his son, and if his son dye without issue, having no son [or having no male] then that it shall go to another; by this devise the son hath an Estate taile to him and the heirs males of his body. Adjudge. Tri. 7. Jac. Coo. B. Robinsons case.

If lands be given to a man and woman unmarried and the heirs of their two bodies, or to the husband of A, and wife of B, and the heirs of their two bodies; by these Devises are made estates in Taile. Coo. super Littl. 20. 26. Plow. 33.

If a man devise White Acre to his three brothers, and Black acre to C. his brother, so as he pay 10 l. to J. S. and otherwise that it shall remain to the house, provided that the same lands be not sold, but go unto the next of name and blood that are males, if it may be; it seems that by this devise C. hath an estate tail in black acre, and that if he die without issue, it shall go to the three other brothers and their heirs males in taile one after another: and that white acre also is so entailed in every of their parts. For the words [shall remain to the house] shall be construed to the most worthy of the Family, and the words [that are males] shall be construed in the future tense. Dyer 33.

If land be devised to J. S. and the heirs of his body, and that if he dye, that it shall remain to J. D. by this Devise J. S. hath an estate Taile, and the latter words do not qualify the former, but J. D. must attend his death without heirs of his body before he shall have the land. Adjudge. 14. Eliz. Coo. B. & Trin. 9. Jac. B. R.

If land be devised to J. S. and the heirs males of his body, and if it happen that he dye without heir of his body, that it shall go to H. and his heirs; by this Devise J. S. hath an estate to him and the heirs males of his body, and the subsequent words do not alter nor enlarge the estate. Dyer 171.

If land be devised to J. S. and E. his wife, and to the heirs of the body of the Survivor of them; by this Devise the Survivor shall have a generall estate Taile. Coo. super Littl. 26.

If land be devised to J. S. and the heirs he shall have by A. his wife; by this Deed. Devise J. S. hath a Fee-Taile, and not a Fee-simple as he hath in case of such a limitation by deed. Coo. super Littl. 26.

If land be devised to J. S. and to the heirs of the body of such a woman; by this Devise J. S. hath an estate Taile, and begotten shall be intended begotten by him. Coo. super Littl. 26.

If one devise land to his son and his heirs, and that if his son dye within the age of 21 years or without issue, that the land shall remain over: and the son dyeth within age having issue; in this case and by this Devise the son hath an estate Taile, and [or] in this place shall be taken for [and] Adjdg. M. 37.38. Elin. Sale ver. sus erard.

Deed.

If land be devised to a man and his wife, and to one heir of their body, and the heir of the body of that heir; by this Devise an estate Taile is made in a Will as well as in a Deed. Coo. super Littl. 22.

If a man devise his land thus, I give White acre to A. my son and his heirs, Black acre to B. my son and his heirs, and Green acre to C. my son and his heirs, provided that if all my said sons die without issue of their bodies, that then all my said lands shall goe to M. my wife and her heirs; by this Devise they have all of their estates in Taile of their land, and as it seems crosse remainders to either of them of the land of each other. M. 18. Jac. B. R. Gilberts case.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. and if he die without issue male of his body, then that it shall remain over to J. D. by this Devise J. S. hath an estate Taile. Coo. 9. 128.

If a man hath issue three sons, and devise his land thus, viz. one part to two of his sons in Taile, and another part to his third son in Taile, and that neither of them shall sell his part, but that either of them shall be heir to other; in this case case, and by this Devise, either of them hath an estate Taile, and if one of them die without issue, his part shall not revert to the eldest, but shall remain to the other son, for it is an implied remainder. Littl. Broo. sect. 431. Broo. Devise 38. Dons. 44.

If there be husband and wife, and they have issue a son and a daughter, and the husband die, and land is devised to the wife and the heirs of her late husband on her body begotten; in this case, and by this Devise the wife hath onely an estate for life, the son an estate in Taile, and so also the daughter in case he die without issue. Coo. super Littl. 26.

For life.

If one devise to J. S. that if he and his heirs of his body be not paid 20 l. rent yearly, he and they shall distraine, &c. by this Devise J. S. hath an estate taile of this rent. But if the Devise be that if J. S. be not paid 20 l. yearly, he shall distrain &c. by this Devise J. S. hath only an estate for life. So if one devise a rent of 10 l. out of his land to be paid quarterly, and say not how long the rent shall continue: this is but an estate for life. *Coo. super Littl. 147.8. 85. If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. for his life, or to J. S. [without any more words] or J. S. & his heir, in the singular number; or J. S. and his children, and J. S. hath children at the time of the Devise; or to J. S. & his successors, (J. S. being a naturall person;) by all these and such like Devises J. S. hath only an estate for life in the thing devised. Fitz. Devise 16. Coo. 6. 16. Perk. sect. 577. But if the Testator have only a Terme of years in the land whereof the Devise is made, and devise this land to J. S. and doth not say for what time; it seems that by this Devise the whole Terme is devised, unless the intent doth appear to be otherwise. And if one devise land (whereof a man is seised in Fee) to J. S. paying 10 l. to J. D. by this Devise, albeit there be no estate expressed, yet J. S. hath the Fee-simple of the land, in respect of the payment of the money. Mich. 13 Ja. B. R. Dyer sect. 307. But if the intent of the Testator appear to be that J. S. shall have the land but for his life, contra; for there the consideration will not alter the estate expressed upon the gift. See before Littl. Broo. sect. 406. 125.

Deed.

If land be devised thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. and his assignes, [without more words] by this Devise is held to be given no more but an estate for life by construction upon a Will, as it is upon a Deed. Coo. super Litt. 9.4. 29. And yet in the New Termes of the Law tit. Devise, the contrary is affirmed, Ideo quare.

If one devise thus, I will that J. S. shall have and occupy my land in Dale, and say not how long; by this Devise J. S. shall have the land for his life. Pasch 9. Jac. Newmans case. But if I devise that J. S. shall enter into my land, and say no more; by this Devise J. S. hath no estate at all, but power to enter into the land only. Dyer 342.

If a man have a son and a daughter and dieth, and lands are devised to the daughter, and the heirs females of the body of the Father; by this Devise the daughter hath hath only an estate for her life; for there is no such person, for she is not heir.

Co. super Littl. 24.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. for his life, and after to the next right heir of J. S. in the singular number, and to his right heirs forever; by this devise J. S. hath only an estate for life. Co. 1. 66.

So if one devise land to J. S. for life, and after to the next heir male of J. S. and to the heirs males of the body of such next heir male; by this devise J. S. hath an estate for life only; but if it be thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. for his life, and after to the heirs, or to the right heirs of J. S. by these devises J. S. hath the Fee-simple of the land; And if it be to J. S. for life, and after to the heirs males of J. S. by this J. S. hath an estate Taile.

If one devise land to J. S. and E. his wife, and after their decease, [or the remainder] to their children; by this devise whether they have, or have not children at the time, J. S. and E. his wife have estates for their lives only. Co. 6. 16. See Goldsb. 138. Plow. 47. 134. Plow. 33.

If one devise his land to his wife for her life, and if she live till his son come to the age of 24. years, that then he shall have the land; And if she dye before he come to that age, then that J. S. shall have it till his son come to that age, and J. S. dye before the wife, and after she dye before the son come to 24. years, in this case the Executors of J. S. shall not have the land till the son come to 24. years of age. Goldsb. 64. Plow. 2.

If one devise a moiety of his land to his wife for life, and the other moiety to his second son, and after by another clause doth devise it all to his son after the death of his wife: by this Devise the son hath only an estate for life after the wives death, and no more. Curia 7. Ja. Co. B.

If one devise his land to J. S. in Fee after the death of J. B. (being his son and heir apparant;) by this Devise J. B. hath an estate for life by implication, and untill the Devise take effect, the Law gives it to him by descent. And so alio it seems the law is where one doth devise his land to J. S. after the death of his wife: that by this Devise the wife hath an estate for life by implication. And therefore if a man devise thus, I give my goods to my wife, and that after her decease, my son and heir shall have the house where the goods are; it is held by this Devise that the wife hath an estate for life in the house by implication; for a man is bound to provide for his own wife. But if a man devise his land to J. S. after the death of J. W. (a stranger to the Devisor;) it seems that by this Devise J. W. hath no estate at all by implication, and that this doth but set forth when the estate of J. S. shall begin, and that the intent of the Testator is that his heir shall have it untill that time. Broo. Devise 48. 52. Littl. Broo. 107. 13. H. 7. 13. New terms of the Law tit. Devise Plow. 158. 414. 521.

If one devise lands thus, I give my land in Dale to J. S. to the intent that with the profits thereof, he shall bring up a child, or to the intent, that with the profits thereof, he shall pay to A 10^l. or to the intent that he shall out of the profits thereof pay yearly 10 l. by these Devises J. S. hath only an estate for life, albeit the payments to be made be greater than the rent of the land: And therefore, it is not like to the case before, where a sum of money is to be paid presently. Co. 6. 16. 3. 20. Broo. Estates 78.

If one devise his land thus, I give my land to A. my cousin in Fee-simple, after her decease to W. her son (who is her heir apparant;) by this Devise she hath an estate for life first, the remainder to her son for his life, the remainder to the heirs of A in Fee-simple: And so also is the Law when the Devise is to any other after that manner. Dyer 357.

If my father be tenant for life of land, the remainder to me in Fee, and I devise this land to my wife, rendering for her naturall life 40 s. to the right heir of my father; by this Devise my wife hath an estate for life after the death of my father. Dyer 371.

If one devise his land unto his Executors, untill his son shall come unto 21. years of age, the profits to be employed towards the performance of his Will, and when he shall come to that age, then that his son and his heirs shall have it; by this Devise the Executors shall have it untill he be 21. years of age, and if he die before that time, untill the time he should have been 21. years of age, if he had lived so long; and [shall] in this case shall be taken for [should.] Co. 3. 20.

If one devise his land to his Executors for the payment of his debts, and untill his debts be paid; by this Devise the Executors have but a chattell and an uncertain interest, and they and their Executors shall hold it untill the debts be paid and no longer. Coo. super Littl. 42.

If one devise his land to J. S. and the heirs males of his body for the term of fifty years; it seems that by this Devise, J. S. hath but a Lease for so many years; if the heirs males of his body shall so long continue, and that for want of issue male, the terme of years shall end: And in this case, the Executor or Administrator, not the heirs males of J. S. shall have it after his death. Coo. 10. in Leonard Lovell's case, 87. 46.

Executors.

Fourthly, in respect of other matters.

If one devise his land thus, I give to J. S. and J. D. and their heirs, my land in Dale equally; or my land in Dale to be equally divided; by these Devises J. S. and J. D. shall have and hold the land, not as Joint-tenants, but as Tenants in common, so that the heir and not the survivor shall have his part that first dyeth: And yet in case of such a limitation by Deed, it is otherwise: And if one devise his land to J. S. and J. D. and their heirs [without more words;] it seems that by this Devise they shall take and hold as Joint-tenants. Adjudged Lowen versus Coxe. Mich. 37. 38. Eliz. Co. B. Dyer 25. Littl. Bro. fess. 133. Littl. 283. Perk. fess. 170. Dyer 350.

And yet if one devise land to J. S. and J. D. and the heirs of either of their bodies lawfully engendred; it seems that by this Devise J. S. and J. D. shall take and hold as Tenants in common and not as Joint-tenants, Dyer 326. And if one devise his land to J. S. and J. D. thus, I will that J. S. and J. D. shall have my lands in Dale, and occupy them indifferently to them and their heirs, Pasche 9. Ja. Newmans case. See Brownlows Rep. 1. part. 131. 169.

If one that hath 2. daughters only give his land to them in Fee; they shall be in by devise as Joint-tenants, and not by descent as Partners. But if he have but one daughter, or a son and heir, and give it so, it is void, and they shall take by descent. Goldsb. 141. Plow. 53.

Devise of goods and chattels. First, in respect of the person that shall take by the Devise.

If one be possessed of a terme of years of land, and devise the same to his wife during all the years, and if she die within the years, then to A and B his two sons, if they have no issue male; but if they or either of them have issue male, then that it shall go to the use of those issues male; and she die, and the two sons die without issue born, one of their wives being privily with child of a son, which after his death is borne; in this case and by this devise this issue male shall have it alfoone as he is born. Hill. 13 Ja. B. R. Adjudged. Blandfords case.

Executors.

Heire.

If one be possessed of a terme of years, and he devise it to another and his heirs, or his heirs males; by this Devise the Executors or Administrators, not the heirs of the Legatee shall have it. Coo. 10. 46. Lampets case. Perk. fess. 558, 556. And therefore, if Lessee for years of land devise all his interest therein to his wife, if she live so long, and after her death, if any part of the term be to come, devise the same to J. S. his son and the heirs of his body; in this case and by this Devise, the Executors and Administrators of J. S. not his heirs shall have it, at least, so long as he hath any heirs of his body: And yet if one possessed of a term of years, devise it to J. S. and after his death, that the heir of J. S. shall have it; in this case J. S. shall have so many years of the term as he shall live, and the heir of J. S. and the Executor of that heir shall have the residue of the term. See Brown. Rep. 1. part. 41. 131.

If one give 10 l. to the Children of J. S. and at the time of the Devise J. S. hath foure children, and after before the death of the Testator he happen to have two more; in this case and by this Devise, the two children he hath afterwards shall have no part of the 10 l. but those four he had before shall have it all. Swinb. 316.

If one give 10 l. to his Parish-Church, and at the time of the Will made, he live in one Parish, and after he doth remove into another Parish, and die there; by this Devise the Parish where he lived before, and not where he died, shall have this 10 l. Swinb. 316.

Secondly, in respect of the thing.

If one devise a third part of all his goods and chattels; by this Devise, some say, doth passe, and is given no more but a clear third part after debts and Legacies paid: but it seems a third part of the whole, is hereby devised, out of which the debts must first be paid by Law. Dyer 598. 164.

If one devise to another all his Goods and Chattels, or all his Plate, or all of any other thing in general; by this Devise doth pass and is given not onely all the Testator hath of that thing at the time of the making of the Will, but also all he hath at the time of his death; and not onely what he hath in possession, but also what he hath not in possession: But if one devise all his goods, or all his plate, &c. in such a place, or in the occupation of IS; by this Devise none other will pass but what are in that place, and in the occupation of IS. Plow. 343. Swinb. 318.

If one have a term of years of a portion of Tithes in Dale, and have a term of years of land in Dale; and he devise all his lands and tenements in Dale, and all his estate therein to IS; by this Devise the portion of Tithes doth not pass, for it is neither land, nor tenement: but by devise of all his hereditaments, perhaps it may pass. Sed Quare. By the opinion of divers Lawyers.

If one devise to IS all his Goods and Chattels, by this devise doth pass and is given all his estate active and passive (except land of inheritance, and free-hold estates, and such things as depend thereupon) as Leases for years, Wardships by Tenure in Capite, or by Knights Service, gold, silver, plate, household-stuff, cattel, corn, debts, and the like; and if one devise to IS all his goods, or all his Chattels, by either of these is devised as much as by both of them. Portman versus Willis. Pasche. 36 Eliz. Co. B. Co. super Litt. 118. Swinb. part. 7. c. 10.

If one give his Goods by Will to his wife for life, and after her decease to IS, this is not good to IS, for a Devise of a remainder of goods is not good. But where the Devise is of the use and occupation of goods onely, there it may be good by way of remainder, March. 106. pl. 183.

If one have goods worth 100 l. and owe 20 l. and giveth to his wife the one half of all his goods to be equally divided between him and his executors, in this case the wife shall have the one half of all the estate, and that without defalcation, Goldsb. 149. pl. 74.

If one devise to IS all his moveables, by this Devise doth pass all his personal goods, both quick and dead, which either move themselves, as horses, sheep, and the like; or may be moved by another, as plate, household-stuff, corn in the garners and barns, or in the sheaf, &c. Swinb. 305, 306, 307. also all Bonds and Especialties; and by a Devise of Immoveables doth pass Leases, Rents, grafs, and the like; but not any of those things that do pass by the devise of moveables; but debts will not pass by either of these Devises, Agree Hill. 9. Car. Co. B.

If one devise to another all his household-stuff, hereby doth pass his plate, coaches, tables, stools, forms, beds, vessels of wood, brass, pewter, earth, and the like; but not his apparel, books, weapons, tools for Artificers, cattel, victuals, corn, plow-gear, and the like; by a Devise of all utensils, it is agreed that plate and jewels do not pass, Swinb. 312. part. 7. c. 10. Dyer 59.

If a man devise to IS one of his horses, or a horse, by this devise IS shall have Election, the election, if there be more than one, which horse he will have: but if the devise be thus, I will that my Executor shall deliver to IS one of my horses; in this case the Executor hath the election, and may deliver which of them he will, Swinb. 302.

If one devise thus, I give to IS my corn growing in such a ground this next year; or the lambs of my flock this next year; by these devises the Legatee shall have no more but what doth grow that year. But if he devise so many quarters of corn, or so many lambs; in these cases so much must be paid howsoever, Swinb. 94.

If one have a Lease for years of land, and devise it to IS for life; by this devise Thirdly, in re- the whole term is devised; and IS the Devisee shall have the whole term if he live spect of the so long, and yet IS shall not have an estate for life by this devise; and so also it time.

seems the Law is upon a Grant by deed after this manner, Co. 4. 66. Plow. 520. Co. 7. 23. And if a man possessed of a term of years of land, devise his term, or his Lease, or the land it self by a devise, in either of these terms the whole term doth pass, Brownl. Rep. 1. part. 41, 45. 2. part. 308, 309. Grandfather, father, and son; the grandfather was possessed of a term of 21 years to come, he devised the land to the son for 21 years, and makes the son his Executor, and dyes; the son being within the age of 21 years, the Father enters into the land, and makes a Lease for 7 years by Indenture, untill the son come to full age, the father makes the son his Executor, and dyes; the son enters by force of the Devise made by the Grandfather; in this case it was adjudged that the son shall avoyd the Lease made by his father, Brownl. 2. part. 308.

If a man be possessed of two houses for years, and devise them to his wife for her life, if she live sole; the remainder to IS; and if she marry, then that she shall have one of them during the rest of the term, [and then addeth these words] and also, I will that she shall have 20 l. a year out of my other lands; in this case, and by this Devise, it seems the Annuity shall continue during the term. Sed quare. for the Judges were divided in this point, Pasche 14. Jac. B. R. Gough and Haywards Case.

If a Legacy be given, and no time is set for the payment or doing of it, if it be simple, it must be paid and done presently; if it be conditional, and upon a condition precedent, it must be paid or done the time the condition is first extant; and if there be a time set for the payment or doing of it, it must be paid or done at the time appointed. See more in Exposition of Deeds, numb. 15. Plow. 340. Swinb. 354.

9. Devise of lands to Executors or others to sell; or that Executors or others shall sell or otherwise dispose them: how this shall be taken, and what sale and disposition shall be good, or not.

Devise of Lands to Executors to sell, to pay debts, legacies, &c. are some of them after one manner, and some after another; for sometimes the Devise is thus, I will that my Executors, or that A B and C my Executors shall sell my land, Co. super Litt. 236. 112, 113. 15 H. 7. 12. Dyer 177, 219. Kelw. 107 108. Perk. Sett. 343. 542. Litt. Broo. Sett. 371. Kelw. 40 45. and sometimes the Devise is thus, I give my land to my Executors to be sold, or to the end that they shall sell it; in the first case, the Executors have onely an authority and no interest, and therefore in that case the land doth descend in the interim to the heir of the Devisor, and he shall have the profits of the land untill it be sold; and if it be never sold, he shall ever have the profits of it; and in this case, they may sell it when they will, if they be not hastned thereunto by order of Court; and when they do sell, they must all joyn in the sale by the Common Law, or otherwise the sale had not been good; and therefore if one or more of them had dyed before the sale, they that had survived or their Executors could never have sold it by this authority; so likewise if any of the Executors had refused the charge of the Will, the land could not have been sold by the rest, unless the words of the Will had been, that his Executors or some of them should sell it; for in that case, some of them even by the Common Law it self might have sold, and now also by the Statute of 21 H. 8. cap. 4. some of them may sell it without the rest; as if one give his land to A for life, and that after his decease it shall be sold by his Executors, and make four Executors, and one of them dye during the life of A, and then A dyeth; in this case the other three Executors may sell. So if one give his land in Tail, and that if the Donee dye without issue, that the lands shall be sold by his sons-in-law, and he have then five sons-in-law, and one of them dye in the life-time of the Donee, and after the Donee dye without issue; in this case, the other four may sell the land, and the sale made thereof is good: And yet if the words of the Will be, That it, shall be sold by A B and C his Executors, or his sons-in-law; in this case, if one of them dye, it cannot be sold by the rest: but in the last case before, where the Devise is, I give my land to my Executors to be sold, &c. the Executors have an interest in the land, and an authority about the land also, and therefore in this case the descent is prevented, and the Executors shall keep it till the sale; neither will any disseisin, fine, recovery, or Feoffment by the heir prejudice their interest, but that they may sell it when they will, but they must sell it in time convenient, or otherwise the heir may enter and put them out by a condition in Law that is annexed to the interest, or perhaps the heir may tender to them the worth of the land, and if they refuse to accept it, he may enter upon them, and out them: and it seems in this case, the mean profits untill the sale is no Assets, but the money made upon the sale shall be Assets in their hand: and in this case, albeit one or more of the Executors dye, or refuse, yet the rest may sell it, even by the Common Law it self, and so also by construction upon upon the same Statute, for the estate surviveth. But it seems they may not sell to him that doth refuse; neither may they in either case transfer their power to sell to any other, nor keep the land themselves, and pay so much of their own money as the land is worth. A Devise was to A for life, the remainder to his son in Tail; and if his son dye without issue of his body, that then the land shall be sold by his Executors, and maketh two Executors and dyeth, A dyeth; in this case it seems one of the Executors cannot sell, Goldsb. 2. pl. 4.

If the Devise be that the Executors shall sell with the assent of I S; in this case if I S dye before he assents the Executors cannot sell, and in his life time they cannot sell without his assent, Brownl. 2. Rep. 100.

If one deviseth by his Will, that his land shall be sold to pay his debts, and say not by whom; in this case it shall be sold by his Executors; and if one devise all his land except one Acre which he doth appoint to pay his debts; by this Devise his Executors or the survivor of them may sell it: but if one say by his Will that I S shall have sam gubernationem puerorum meorum quam, the disposing, letting, and setting of my lands; by this Devise I S hath not power given to him to sell the land, Perk. Sell. 347. Dyer 371. 26.

If one devise that his land shall be sold after the death of his wife by his Executors with the assent of I S, and make his wife and a stranger his Executors, and dye, and after I S dye; in this case, the land cannot be sold; for the authority is determined, Dyer 219.

If one devise that his Executors shall sell the land, and with the money coming or made of it, shall pay such and such Legacies or sums of money, in particular to such and such persons by name; this is not a Legacy for which a Suit lyeth in a Court Christian, but for this, every one that is to have portion may have account against the Executors after the sale, Dyer 151, 152.

If one give lands to another, to give them again to the children of the Testator, or to dispose them at the Will of the Devisees to some of the children of the Devisor; in these cases, the Devisees must dispose it accordingly, and cannot give it to any other, Trin. 2. Car. B. R. And if one give lands to others, to the intent that with the profits thereof they shall educate children, or pay such sums of money, or the, &c. in this case, the Devisees must do accordingly; or they may be compelled thereunto, Coo. 6. 16.

And in all cases of devises of lands to Executors to sell, it is wisdom to make it certain, i.e. that the Executors or the survivor of them, or such or so many of them as take upon them the probate of the Will (if his meaning be so) shall sell it, Coo. super Litt. 112, 113. And it is better to give an Authority than an estate, unless his meaning be that they shall take the profits of the land untill the sale; and if he do so, then it is necessary that he appoint that the mean profits untill the sale shall be Assers in their hands, for otherwise it shall not be so. See more, Brownl. 2. part. 34. 2. part. 47. 100.

The same words that in a Deed will make a condition, and the thing granted thereby to be conditional, will make a condition in a Will, and the thing given thereby to be conditional, Dyer 33. 348. 126. Coo. super Litt. 236. See condition. And therefore these words, Provided on condition, So that, If, and the like, will make a condition in a Will: So that if one devise land to I S on condition, or So that, or If, or provided that he do bring up his eldest son; or pay his wife 20 l. a year for her life, or the like; by these Devises, the estate is made conditional: Also other words that being used in a Deed will not make a condition, yet being used in a Will make a condition, and the estate made by the Devise to be conditional: And therefore, if a man devise his land to his Executors to be sold; or devise his land to them or others to pay 20 l. to I S, or paying 20 l. to I S; in these cases, and by these Devises, the estates are made conditional: and of these conditions regularly the heir, and not a stranger shall take advantage. So as if one devise land to another and his heirs, provided that he pay 10 l. to I S, otherwise that the land shall remain to I D, and his heirs; in this case, if the Devisee do not pay the money, I D shall not take advantage of it, nor have the land according to the Devise, vise, but the heir of the Devisor shall enter and have the land, and put out the Devisee. And if one devise his land to I S for life, on condition to pay 20 l. to I D, and after to I D in Tail; in this case, if I S do not pay the 20 l. it seems the heir shall enter and hold the land during the life of I S, and that I D shall not have it till then; Dyer 33. 348. 126. 128.

10. Devise upon condition; and what words in a Will shall be construed in the sense of a condition, and what not.

And in cases of Devises of Goods or Chattels, other words will make a Devise conditional in divers cases, as [when] as, I give to I S 10 l. when he shall be married; and [whiles] as, I give to I S 20 l. whiles he shall abide with my children, which is as much as if he abide with my children; and [which] as I give him 20 l. which shall marry my daughter; and the ablative case absolute, as, my son being dead, I give to I S 20 l. And of all these conditions regularly, the Executor and no other shall take advantage. But if the condition be such for the matter and substance of it, as is impossible, unlawfull, or the like; there perhaps these words may not make a condition, nor the thing devised conditional, but rather make the whole sentence voyd. Whereof reade Swinb. part. 4. Sect. 5. at large. Swinb. 136.

17. Where a Devise voyd or voydable in his exception, may become good by matter ex post facto, or not.

If one devise his land to his daughter and heir apparent in Fee-simple, this Devise is voyd; yet if in this case the wife of the Devisor be privily with child of a son which is born after his death, now is the Devise become good, for now she is not heir to her father, Fitz. 111. Affize. 27.

If a woman that hath a husband, devise her land by Will during the Coverture, and after her husbands death when she is sole, she do publish and approve it; in this case and by this means the Devise is become good: but if she make and publish it during the Coverture, and after her husband dye and she become sole, this accident without any more will not make the Devise good; the same Law is of the Devise of goods and chattels, Plow. 344.

If an Infant within age devise his lands or goods, and publish his Will, and after he comes to be of full age, he doth publish and approve it again; in this case and by this means the Devise is become good: but if the Infant live to be of full age, and do not publish and approve it, contra, Plow. 344.

If a Legacy of goods or chattels be given on condition to a man incapable; and before the condition is extant, he doth become capable; in this case, and by this means the Devise is become good. See before at numb. 6. more of this matter, Swinb. 340.

18. Where a Devise good in his inception, shall, or may become voyd by matter ex post facto, or not.

By a subsequent repugnant Will.

A Devise that hath a good beginning, is sometimes avoyded and overthrown by subsequent matter in the same Will, and sometimes by subsequent matter in another Will, and sometimes by some other accident ex post facto: For if a man make a subsequent or latter Devise either in the same or in another Will, so contrary and repugnant to the former, that both cannot stand together, this doth overthrow the former, Litt. 168. Co. super Litt. 112. Plow. 540. 541. Co. 8. 94. 6. 33. And therefore if a man do give White Acre to I S in Fee, or his white horse to I S, and after by the same or another Will doth give White Acre to I D in Fee, or his white horse to I D, these latter Devises do overthrow the former, cum duo inter se pugnantia reperiuntur in testamento, ultimum ratum est: And as a latter Will doth overthrow the former, so the latter part of a Will doth overthrow the former part of the same Will. But if the Devisees be such as they may stand both together, and are not directly repugnant, nor do fight one against another, there the latter shall not overthrow the former, but both shall be received: And therefore if one devise his land to I S, and his heirs, and after by the same Will devise a Rent out of the same land to I D and his heirs, or è contra. So if one devise White Acre to A for life, and afterwards give the same Acre to B in Fee; in this case the one may have it for his life, and the other may have the Fee-simple afterwards. See before.

By a waving of the estate devised.

If one devise his land to his son and heir in Fee-simple, or devise it to a stranger for years, the remainder to his son and heir in Fee-simple; and the heir after the death of the Devisor doth (as he may) wave the estate given him by the Devise, and claim the land by descent; in this case and by this means the Devise is become voyd. But if the Devise be to the son and heir in Tail, the remainder mainder to a stranger, there he cannot wave the Devise, and take it in any other manner. And so if a man have onely two daughters (who are his heirs) and he devise his land to them; or have Gavelkind-land, and devise it to all his sons: they may not wave these Devises and take by descent, for by Devise they shall take as joynt-tenants; who otherwise by descent shall take as Parceners, Plow. 545. Perk. Sect. 569. Litt. Broo. 453; Kitchin 127. Dyer 317, 350.

If one devise his land to another in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years, and the Devisee after the death of the Testator doth refuse and wave the estate devised to him; in this case and by this means the Devise is become voyd. And it seems a verbal waiver is sufficient in this case. So if one give goods or chattels to another, and the Devisee refuse it; by this means the Devise is become voyd, and any waiver or refusal will suffice in this case; for a man shall not be compelled Nolens volens to take a thing devised to him, Litt. Broo. Sect. 482. Perk. Sect. 569. Dyer 61. Co. 9. 140. Plow. 543, 544.

If a woman sole devise her lands or goods by Will, and after take a husband and dye during the Coverture; by this means the Devise is become voyd. And yet if she survive her husband, and dye unmarried, now is the Devise become good again, Plow. 348.

If one devise his land to I S and his heirs, and afterwards I S dye the Testator living; by this means the Devise is become voyd. And in this case no verbal declaration of the Testator, that the heirs of I S shall have it will help; for albeit a Devise of land in writing may be revoked by a verbal subsequent declaration, or by any act crossing or controuling that Devise, yet a Devise becoming voyd by that means cannot be made good by any such verbal declaration subsequent to the same Countermand, Plow. 50. 346, 344, 341. So if one give any goods or chattels to I S, and he dye before the Testator; in this case and by this means the Devise is become voyd, and the Executor of I S shall not have it, See infra at numb. 14. And yet if a Devise be of land to A for life, the remainder to B in Tail, and A dye before the Testator; it seems the Devise of the remainder doth continue good notwithstanding, Perk. Sect. 567, 568.

And if one devise lands or goods to the wife of I S, and afterwards her husband dyeth, and she marry with another man, and then the Devisor dyeth; this is a good devise notwithstanding, and not avoyded by either of these Accidents, Plow. 344.

If one devise a Term that he hath to A for life, the remainder to such persons as shall be occupiers of White Acre at the death of A; this Devise albeit in his beginning it be good, yet if the Devisor dye before A, it seems now to become voyd; for he that will take by way of Executory devise, must take as an immediate purchaser, and be capable and known at the time of the death of the Testator, Per Justice Jones, M. 9. Jac. Co. B.

If I give to I S 20 l. if he marry my daughter, and she dye before he marry her; in this case and by this means the Legacy is become voyd, Swinb. 356.

If I give a debt owing me to I S, and afterwards I receive or release the debt; hereby the devise is become voyd, Perk. Sect.

If a man make a Will and give Legacies, and appoint one or more his Executor or Executors, and he or they after his death all refuse to take upon them the Administration: yet in this case the Legacies remain good, and are not become voyd: And in this case the course is to grant the Administration of the goods to him to whom it doth belong, and to annex the Will to the Administration, and then the Administrator is to perform the Will as the Executor ought to do, Litt. Broo. Sect. 300.

It is held also that a Legacy of goods or chattels may become voyd by the injurious dealing of the Legatee against the Testator after the Legacy given: whereof read Swinb. part. 7. Sect. 22.

And when the thing devised is dead, or spoyled, howsoever by this means the Devise is not become voyd, yet it loseth his effect, and is as if it were voyd, Swinb. 357. A Legacy may be extinct and gone by a Contract also, as where the Execu-

In all these cases, when the disposition of the Legacy is pure; and no time is set for the performing of it; or there is a set time for the doing of it, and the Legatee dye before the time: and where the disposition of the Legacy is conditional, and a time set for the doing of it, if the Legatee live till that time, or the condition be performed; in all these cases the Executor or Administrator of the Legatee shall have the Legacy, and the same remedy to recover it that the Legatee himself had, Swint. 350, 355, 356. But if the Legatee dye before the condition be performed, contra; And yet if in that case the Testator's minde shall appear to be that the Executor or Administrator of the Legatee shall have it, or the condition be to be performed by another, and there be no default in the Legatee: or if the disposition be modal: or the Legacy that was at first upon condition, be afterwards repeated without condition, or it be referred to a condition to be afterwards set down, and none is set down; in these cases the Legacy is not lost by the death of the Legatee, but shall go to his Executor or Administrator: As for Example; If one devise 20 l. to W S to be paid within 4 years after the death of the Testator, and the Legatee dye before the four years expired; in this case the Executor or Administrator after the 4 years expired shall recover the Legacy. If one give to W S 20 l. when he cometh to 21 years of age, and he dye before he come to the age of 21 years, in this case his Executor shall not have the Legacy. But if the Devise be thus, I give to W S 20 l. and I will that it shall be paid him at his age of 21 years, and he dye before he come to the age of 21 years; in this case his Executor shall recover the Legacy, Broo. Devise 27, 45. Swint. 350, 355. Dyer 59. Swint. 358, 356. Plow. 346. So if one give to I S 20 l. when he shall be married, and he dye before marriage; in this case his Executor shall not have it. But if one devise thus, I give to W S 20 l. towards his marriage, and he dye unmarried; in this case the Executor shall have and recover the Legacy. So if one do give to W S 20 l. when the Executor of the Testator shall dye; in this case if W S dye before the Executor, the Executor or Administrator of W S shall not have the Legacy. If one devise goods or chattels to I S, and I S dye before the Testator, the Executor or Administrator of I S shall not have this Legacy. See more in Brownl. 1. part. 33.

14. Where an Executor upon a Devise to him hath an Election to have the thing devised as Executor or as Legatee. And when he shall have it in the one right or in the other, and what act shall make a declaration of his Election.

When any Chattel real or personal is given to an Executor by a Will, the Executor hath an election given him by the Law to have and take it in the one right or in the other, viz. as Executor, or as Legatee: and by his special entry, or seizing of the thing, or some special declaration, his election is to be made. And if the Executor do enter generally (as most do) and never make any declaration which way, or by which right he will have it (as most Executors use to do) he shall be said to have it, and the Law shall adjudge it in him as Executor, and not as Legatee. But if by any subsequent words or deeds he shall declare his minde to be otherwise, he shall be in as a Legatee ab initio; And yet if once he do any such act as is proper to an Executor, this is a disagreement to the Legacy ab initio; and after that it seems he cannot take as Legatee, but must take as Executor. And if one Executor of many to whom a term of years of land is devised, occupy the same alone, and the rest intermeddle not with the profits thereof, albeit he make no declaration, it is said this is a good declaration of his election to have it as Legatee. But if a term of years be given to the wife of I S, and I S be made Executor, and he enter generally, and after makes his Testament and never speaks of this term; this is no declaration of his Election to have it as Legatee, neither shall the term be so deemed in him but as Executor. But in these cases this must be heeded, that howsoever the Executor hath power to take as Executor, or as Legatee, yet he cannot take as Legatee to prejudice Creditors in their debts; but the same things they so take as a Legacy, if there be not enough besides, shall be said to be Assets in their hands as to the Creditor for the satisfaction and payment of their debts, Plow. 519, 520, 543. Coe. 10, 47, p. 37, 8. 96. Dyer 277, 367. Park. Sess. 37. 4 373, 575. Brownl. Goldb. 185, pl. 125.

Assets.

If a man devise that after his Debts and Legacies paid, his wife shall have all the residue of his goods and chattels to distribute for his Sarle, &c. and make his wife his Executor; in this case it is said she hath no election, but she must take as Executor, and cannot take as Legatee, Dyer 331.

When a Devise of goods or chattels is well made, the assent of the Executor is necessary to the perfection thereof, for untill then the Legatee may not have or meddle with the thing devised. And this Assent is defined to be the agreement of an Executor or Administrator, that a Legatee shall have the thing bequeathed unto him. And it is either express, i. e. when the Executor or Administrator doth by express words agree to the Devise. Or implied, i. e. when the Executor doth not by words, but by some overt act declare his assent that the Legatee shall have the thing devised unto him, Co. 10. 47. 52. March. 137. pl. 209.

This agreement of the Executor or Administrator is not needfull in the case of a devise of land; for if a man be seized of land in Fee-simple, and deviseth to another in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for term of life, or years; in these cases the Devisee may enter into the land devised without any leave of the Executor or Administrator: and in truth in these cases the Free-hold or estate is said to be in the Devisee before his entry: and therefore if the heir enter first, the Devisee may enter upon him, and put him out, Co. super Litt. 111. Perk. Sect. 576, 578, 579. Swinb. 134. 135. Brownl. 1. part. 132. And in case where land is devised by the custome of a place, if the heir enter first and keep the Devisee out, the Devisee may have a Writ of Ex gravi querela against him for his relief: and this Writ is incident to that custome. But if a Devisee enter first into the land devised unto him, and then the heir of the Devisor enter upon him, then the Devisee may take his remedy at the Common Law as in other cases. And with these things the ordinary Executor or Administrator is not to intermeddle. But regularly a Devisee cannot nor may not have or take any chattel real or personal devised to him without the agreement or delivery of the Executor or Administrator, Perk. Sect. 570. Co. super Litt. 211. Plow. 515. 20. Ed. 4. 9. And by this assent if the Devise be good (for otherwise an assent will not make it good) the Devise is perfected, and the Legacy executed. And yet if the Legatee have the thing devised in his own hands; or if there be a special clause in the Will giving him authority to take it himself; or it be a Legacy to good and godly uses; or the thing given be like to perish on the ground, being corn or the like, and there be assets besides to pay all the debts; in these cases perhaps the assent of the Executor or Administrator may not be necessary; but the Legatee may take the thing devised without his agreement; otherwise not in any case, Swinb. 353. Bro. tit. devise 6. 30. And if a Legacy be given to one of the Executors themselves, he may take it without any assent of his Co-executors, and that before Administration also if he will, Perk. Sect. 572.

If there be many Executors, the assent of any one of them is sufficient; and if there be but one, and he be dead, the assent of his Executor is sufficient; or if he dye intestate, the assent of the Administrator de bonis non administratis is of the first Testator is sufficient; or the Legatee himself in this case where the Executor dyeth intestate, or where he doth refuse to take upon him the Administration, may take Administration himself, and by publick declaration assent to his own Legacy. And if a man be Executor and Legatee both, he may assent to, and take the Legacy, and yet waive the Executorship, and this assent is good. And therefore if the Legatee of a term of years be made Executor, and he enter and claim and occupy the land by force of the Devise, and dye before Probate of the Will: the Executor of the Legatee, and not the Ordinary, shall have this term; and yet it seems the Executor may not do this in prejudice of a Creditor to hinder him of his debt, Dyer 372. 367. See Agreement.

Any agreement in word or deed will suffice to make an assent, and execute a Devise, Co. 4. 28. Let Executors take heed therefore; for if an Executor do but agree that the Legatee of a term of years of land shall take the profits thereof, and that but for a time onely; or say to the Legatee, God send you joy of it: or I intend you shall have it according to the Devise, or the like; this is a good assent to execute cute the Legacy. And if the Executor agree that the Legatee and a stranger together shall take the profits of the land, or the thing devised; this is a good assent. And it seems that whatsoever verbal agreement will amount to an Assentment, may make an assent to a Legacy. See Assentment. If therefore the Executor agree to the Legacy upon certain terms and conditions; this is agreed to be a good and absolute assent to the Legacy, Per 2 Justices, M. 37. 38. Ehz. B. R. Co. 4. 18. Nichols was possessed of a term of a 1000 years, he devised it to E for life, the remainder to I H, and made W husband to E Executor, and dyed; I H devised his interest to I S, and made O his Executor and dyed; after W spake these words, If E my wife were dead, my estate in the land were gone, and then it remains to I H; in this case these points were agreed by the Judges; 1. That the Devise to I H by way of Executory remainder is good. 2. That the Devise by I H to I S is voyd, for it is but a possibility. 3. That an assent to the first Devise is an assent to him in remainder. 4. That if the Executor enter generally, he is in as Executor, and not as Devisee. 5. That in this case W hath made his election to have it as a Legatee in right of his wife by those words. 6. That the assent comes time enough after the death of I H to settle the remainder in O the Executor. 7. But they seemed to encline, that there where the Executor wanteth Assents, he shall not be concluded by an implied without an expreis assent, March. 137. pl. 209.

If a term of years be given to the wife of the Testator during the minority of his eldest son, to the intent that she with the profits thereof shall breed up his children, the remainder of the same term to the same eldest son, and she is made Executrix, and she enter generally, but doth alwayes breed the children of the Testator; in this case it seems that this education of the children shall be taken for an assent against her to vest the estate in the eldest son, Plow. 540. And if a man possessed of a term of years give it to his wife, if she live so long, and after her decease the remainder of years to I S, and make his wife Executrix, and she enter, claiming to have it onely for her life, the remainder to I S according to the Devise; in this case this is a good assent for the execution of the remnant of the term in I S, Plow. 516. Perk. Sect. 574. And if a term be devised to A for life, the remainder to B, and the Executor assent to the Devise of A; in this case this is a good assent to the devise of B, and shall execute the same also, whether the Executor have assents or not, Co. 8. 93. 4. 66. 10. 47. Perk. Sect. 574. So if a man possessed of a term of 20 years, devise it to one for 10 years, and after to another for the remnant of the term; or if the Devise be to one for so many years of the term as he shall live, and after to another for the rest of the time: in all these cases an assent to the first Devisee is an assent to the second also. And so also it seems is the Law of a chattel personal, when the occupation thereof is first devised to one, and then the thing to another, 37 H. 6. 30. And if one that hath a term of years give it to his wife for her life, the remainder to his son, and make her Executrix, and she enter claiming by force of the Devise, and not as Executrix; in this case this is a good assent to execute the Devise to him in remainder, Plow. 519, 541. Co. 3. 96. 10. 47.

If one be possessed of a term of years of land, and he devise it to one of his Executors alone for part of the time, and the remainder of the time after to a stranger: and that Executor alone, albeit he enter generally, doth occupy the land himself, and the other Executors do not intermeddle therewith; in this case it seems this is a good assent to execute the Legacy to him in remainder for the rest of the term. And yet if one give goods to one of his Executors for life, and after to a stranger for life, and this Executor alone get the goods into his own hands, and occupy them alone all his life time; it seems this occupation without some assent, will not execute the gift in the second Legatee, Perk. Sect. 574 575. Fitz. Devise 6.

If one possessed of a Lease for years, devise it to his Executors, and devise a rent out of it to I S, and the Executors pay the rent; this is a good assent to the whole Legacy. But if he devise a rent, or Common out of it for certain years to I S, and after devise the term to I D; and the Executor doth agree that I S shall put in his cartel, or doth pay the rent to I S, (which is a good assent to the Legacy of I S;) this is no assent nor execution of the Legacy of I D; And yet perhaps if he devise a rent at first to I D for part of the term, and another rent to I S for for the residue of the terme afterwards; in this case it seems; that an assent to the first is not sufficient to perfect the Devise of the second Legatee. And yet if a Termor, devise the occupation or profits of his land to J S for 10 years of his Terme; and after devise the land it self to J D for the rest of the term; in this case if the Executor assent to the Legacy of J S, this will be a good assent to, and execution of the Legacy of J D. Plow. 340. 344. Coo. 8. 96. Plow. 341, 342. 312.

If one possessed of a term devise it to I S for life, the remainder to I W, and make I S his Executor; and I S take a release from I W of all his right to the land; this is an implicate assent to the Legacy of I W. Coo. 16. 52.

If a man devise the occupation of a book or any other chattell personall to I S, or that I S shall have the occupation of any such like thing during his life, and that after his decease it shall go to I D for ever, and the Executor deliver the thing to I S; it seems this is a good execution of the Legacy to the second Devisee I D; and therefore after the death of I S he may seise the goods and hold them according to the Devise. Old N. B. 80. 37 H. 6. 30.

If lands, or any rent, or other profit to be taken out of lands, be devised to a man in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years; in these cases the Devisee may enter into, and have and take the thing devised without the leave or agreement of the Executor or Administrator: and so he may whether there be any Executor made or not, and whether the Will be proved or not, for the Ordinary and the Executor have nothing to do with these things. And if the Devisee in any such case be disturbed in the having or taking of such things, he may have the same remedy as men have in other cases. And where the land is devised by custome, if the heire enter before the Devisee, the Devisee may be relieved by a Writ called Ex gravi Quærela; but if the Devisee enter first, and then the heire enter upon him, the Devisee may have his remedy at the Common-Law. Perk. selt. 576, 577, 578, 579. Coo. super Littl. 111.

If lands are given thus; I will that my Executors shall sell my land, and with the money made thereof shall pay 10 l. to my daughter A, and 10 l. to my daughter B, in this case and for this gift A and B may either sue the executors in a Court of equity, or have an action of Accompt against them in a Court of Common-Law. Trin. 9. Jic. Lovets case Dyer 151. 152.

If Lessee for years devise his term to Executors for life, the remainder over to J. S. for the rest of the term: and the executor entereth and doth assent to the Legacy and dye, and the executor of the executor doth take the profits of the land; and keep out the second Legatee; in this case it seems he may have an Accompt against the executor of the executor for the profits of the land. Dyer 277. But if one devise his land to his son and his heirs (except 20 l. a year for seven years to be employed as followeth) and doth appoint his son (being his executor also) to pay that money to his daughters for portions; in this case the daughters may not have an Accompt at the Common-Law, but they may sue the executors in the Spirituall Court or in a Court of equity, and if the executor be dead, they may sue his executor. Trin. 9. Jic. Lovets case.

If one devise a rent out of his land, and do charge the land with a distresse; the Devisee may make use of that remedy and distrain for the rent: but unless power be given him by the Will to distrain, he may not distrain for it. Dyer 348.

If one be possessed of a term of years of land, and devise it to his wife to the end that she with the profits thereof shall breed up his children; in this case this is no Legacy to them, and therefore it seems they have no remedy but in Chancery or some other Court of equity against her, if she refuse to do it. Plow. 345.

And in cases of Devises of goods and chattels, as Leases for years, rents out of such Leases, and the like, the Legatee cannot take the thing devised before he have the Assent of the Executor or Administrator thereunto: And therefore, if in these cases the Executor or Administrator refuse to agree to, perform, and deliver the Legacy, the Legatee might have sued him in the Spirituall Court, or in some Court of Equity to compell him thereunto: And the Legatee might not sue for a Legacy in any of the Courts of Common-Law: But now by the new Ordinance he is to sue at the Common-Law, and not in the Chancery. But enquire how he is to sue at Common-Law, and what the course of practise herein is: And in these Courts and by these means, the Devisee may recover his Legacy against an Executor or Administrator, if he have Assents to pay the debts of the Testator; for otherwise a Legacy is not recoverable at all; but in case where the Executor or Administrator hath once agreed to the Legacy, so as it is executed, it is then so vested in the Legatee, and he hath such a property therein, that he may enter into, or seise and take the thing devised as his own, and if any man keep or take it from him, he may have reliefe as in other cases. Broo. Non-ability 18. Fitz. Excommungment 13.

If another doth claime by Deed of gift the goods a Legatee doth sue for; this may be tryed in the Ecclesiasticall Court. 37 H. 6. 9

If a debt, obligation, or any such like thing in action be devised to another, the Devisee hath no means to recover it, but by a Suit in the Spirituall Court, or in some Court of Equity, to compell the Executor to sue for it himself, or to make the Legatee a Letter of Attourney, to sue for it in the Executors name; for the Legatee cannot sue for it in his own name, unlesse he be made Executor as to that debt. &c. (which is the best course in these cases:) and yet if the Legatee have the Bond or Especialty in his hands, he may deliver it up or cancell it. Perk. sect. 527. Swinb.

If a man devise a term of years of land to J. S. and make another his Executor; and the Executor having enough besides to pay the debts doth sell this term in this case, albeit the sale be good, and J. S. have no remedy nor means to recover the term, yet he may sue the Executor for it, and recover the worth of it in damages in Court of Equity. Plow. 543. 545. And of this opinion were Sir John Walter, and Sir John Bridgman, upon deliberate advise.

And now having done with the first part of a Testament, viz. a Devise; we come to that which doth concern the second part, viz. an Executor.

18. What person may make or appoint an Executor, and what not, and how.

Any person that may make a Testament, and devise his goods and chattels, may make an executor. See before at Numb. 4. part. 1. And a woman that hath a husband, as to the goods and chattels she hath as Executrix to another, and as to her own goods and things in action, viz. debts due unto her upon Obligations, and Especialties made to her alote before, or after her marriage, may make an Executor. Fitz. Executor 28. And he that may make an Executor, may make either one, two, three, or more his Executors at his pleasure. Swinb. 187. Dyer 4. Broo. Executors 155. 19 H. 8. Littl. Broo. sect. 180. 3 H. 6. 7. Swinb. 200. 193.

And he may if he will make one man his Executor for one year, another man his Executor for another year; or one man his Executor untill such a time, and then another his Executor; As one may make A & B his Executors, and that B shall not meddle during the life of A. And a man may make one man Executor for one part of his estate, and another man his Executor for the other part of his estate; or one may make one man Executor as to part of his estate, and die intestate, as to the residue of his estate: Also a man may appoint one to be his Executor, if he will accept it, and if he refuse that, another shall be his Executor. And lastly, a man may make another his Executor upon condition, viz. so as he give Bond to such and such men to perform his Will, or the like: And all these nominations and appointments of Executor are good. See Brownl. 2. part. 282.

19. What person may be made or appointed an Executor, and what not, and by what name.

Any person that may be a Legatee, and take by the Devise of goods and chattels, may be an Executor: And therefore it is said, That any person or persons, male or female, of the Clergy, or Laity, children or strangers, friends or enemies, married, or unmarried, creditor or debtor, bond or free, may be an Executor. See at Numb. 4. part. 2. Numb. 7. Swinb. 222. Fitz. Executors 47. 87. Devise 3. And that a Bastard, an Excommunicate, or an Out-lawed person, may be as able and as absolute an Executor as any other. Fitz. Executor, 11. 88. Non-ability, 18. Broo. Non-ability, 38.

And an Infant or child in utero matris may be an Executor; but he cannot meddle with the Administration of the goods untill he be of the age of 17. years, and therefore the Ordinary must grant the Administration unto some other, untill that time in trust, and for the benefit of the Infant. Coo. 6. 67.

And

And a woman that hath a husband, may be an Executrix to any other person, Fitz. Executor 24.

Also a woman may be Executrix to her own husband, and the husband may be Executor to his own wife, and by this means he may recover all the debts due to her upon Obligations, Recognizances, and the like, made to her before or after the marriage, and the goods that were taken away from her before the marriage; all which the husband shall not have but by Executorship or an Administration of her goods and chattels, Fitz. Executor 24. Broo. Consultation, 5.

And all these persons that may be Executors, may be Executors by that name as they may be Devisors: And yet if there be two of one name, and the Testator make one of that name his Executor, and doth not say, neither can it be discerned which of them he doth intend, in this case neither of them shall be Executor. See Alts Capaditis. See before at Numb. 7. Swinh. 292.

But it is said, that an Heretic, Apostate, Traitor, Felon, Recusant convict, Sodomite, Libeller, Bastard begotten in Incest, or a notorious Usurer cannot be an Executor: Swinh. 222, 223. Cov. 9. 19.

And that if a man be for any of these causes incapable at the time of the death of the Testator, when the Executor is to take upon him the Executorship, that he is for ever incapable; but it hath been held by the Common-Law, that a person attainted, may be an Executor. Broo. Nonability 18. Fitz. Excomungment. 13.

The most apt and proper words whereby to constitute an Executor, are, I make J. S. my Executor, or, I make J. S. the Executor of my Will, &c. But an Executor may be constituted by other words equivalent or by implication: And therefore, if a man say in his Will, I will that J. S. shall be my generall Administrator, or I will that J. S. shall administer all my goods, or I will that J. S. shall dispose all my goods and chattels, or I commit all my goods to J. S. or I commit all my goods to the disposition of J. S. or I make J. S. Lord of all my goods, or I make J. S. Legatary of all my goods, or I leave all my goods to J. S. or I give all my goods to J. S. and make no other Executor; in all these cases, J. S. by interpretation of Law is made Executor of all the goods and chattels of the deceased: So if a man say, Of all my goods I make J. S. and say no more, but omit the word [Executor,] by these words J. S. is made Executor: So if one say, I will that J. S. shall dispose all the goods that are in his hands, by these words J. S. as to those goods is made Executor: So if I deliver goods to J. S. to keep untill my death, and then to distribute ad pias usus, or for my soul, hereby J. S. is made Executor of those goods: So if one say, I will that J. S. shall be my Executor, if J. D. will not, by this J. D. is made Executor in the first place by implication, and if he refuse, then J. S. shall be Executor. But if a man make A. and B. his Executors, and say, I will that J. S. shall be a Coadjutor, or helper to A. and B. ad distribuendum or administrandum bona mea; or I will that J. S. shall be Surveyor, or Suprvisor of my Will; in these cases and by these words, J. S. is not made Executor with A. and B. Swinh. pars. 4. falk. 17, 18, 19. Dyer 4. 19 H. 8. 8. 21 H. 6. 6. Fitz. Executor 43. Broo. Executors, 98. 73. Fitz. Executors, 113. 121. Briele 999.

And yet if he say, I will that J. S. shall have Administration of my goods, or be Executor with A. and B. or be Administrator with A. and B. in these cases and by these words, J. S. is made joint Executor with A. and B. And if one supposing J. S. to be dead, say, I will that J. D. shall be my Executor, because J. S. is dead, in this case and by these words, J. S. if he be living is made Executor first; and if he refuse, J. D. shall be Executor: If one make A. B. and C. his Executors, and then saith afterwards: And I will that B. shall administer my goods alone, or that B. only shall administer my goods; it seems in these cases, B. only is made Executor, and that A. and C. are not made joint Executors with him. 3 H. 6. 6, 7.

In all Cases where a man hath any goods or chattels to administer, and he doth die a naturall or civil death, and dyeth intestate, either in deed i. e. doth make no Will at all, nor appoint any Executor, or in Law; i. e. that doth make one or more

And if a man make a Will and after the death of the Testator, the Executor prove it, and then dye intestate, the Ordinary must grant the Administration of the goods of the first Testator, not administered in the hands of the Executor to some competent person or persons according to his discretion; but where a man hath no goods and chattels to administer, i. e. either he hath none, or if he have, they are none of his, or if they are, there is an Executor named, in verum naturam, capable, and well named, and he doth accept, or at least hath not refused the Executorship; in these cases, the Administration ought not to be granted; or if it be granted, it will be void or voidable at the least: And in cases, where the Administration is grantable by the Ordinary and others as before, such persons having power to grant it, may not grant it to whom they please, but as they are bound to grant it, and cannot refuse so to do, so are they directed and appointed to whom they shall grant it; for it is appointed by a special Law, That the Ordinary shall depute the next friends of the Intestate to administer his goods if they desire it: and the Administration is to be committed to the widow, or next of blood, or both to the Intestate, and where there be divers in equall degree, and they all sue for it, the Ordinary may accept them all or refuse some of them, and commit the Administration to the rest only; and if some of them only sue for it, he may grant it to them alone: So that now the Law and course is to grant the Administration to the nearest of kin to the deceased: Stat. 31. Ed. 3. c. 11. 21. H. 8. c. 5. Littl. Bro. fess. 233. 415. Fitz. Excommement. 13 Coo. 9. 39. 40. 3. 40. Dyer 339. 4 H. 7. 14.

As 1. to the husband or wife; and if there be none such, 2. to the children, sons or daughters; and if there be none such, 3. to the Parents, Father or Mother; and if there be none such, 4. to the brothers or sisters of the whole blood; and if there be none such, 5. to the brothers or sisters of the half blood; and if there be none such, 6. to the next of kin, Uncles, &c. And if these come in time and desire the Administration, the Ordinary may and must grant it to them, and cannot grant it to any other if they be capable of it as most men are: and if divers of these in equall degree desire it, the Ordinary may grant to which of them he pleaseth; howsoever in this case, it seemes most just and equall to grant it to them all unlesse he have some speciall reason to admit some, and to exclude the rest: and if none of these that are next of kin shall desire it, but suffer the time to slip; in this case, the Ordinary may grant it to whatsoever stranger he please: And yet then perhaps the next of kinne may by Suit get the same Administration revoked, and a new Administration granted to him. See infra at Numb. 41.

23. How an Administration may be granted, and what shall be said a good Administration, or not.

An Administration may and must be granted in writing under Seal, for by word of mouth it may not be granted; and it may be granted as well upon condition as absolute: and it may be granted, as well for a part of the estate as for the whole: And therefore, if a man have goods in two Provinces, and he make a Will of his goods in one of the Provinces, and die Intestate for the goods in the other Province, an Administration may be granted for the goods in this Province: Also an Administration may be granted during, or untill a certaine time, or continually. Dyer, 294. Fitz. Admin. 5. 34 H. 6. 14. Plow. 279.

And therefore, if a man make a Will and appoint an Executor for seven years after after the seven years ended, the Ordinary may and must grant an Administration of the goods. So if one do appoint another to be his Executor a year after his death, the Ordinary may and must grant the Administration for that year, untill the power of the Executor doth take place: And all these Administrations are good. See Brownl. 1. part 5. 2. part 119.

If an Executor die after he hath proved the Will, and he hath made a Testament, and appointed an Executor therein; in this case, this Executor also shall be Executor to the first Testator, as he is to the second, and he shall have all the benefit, and be subject to all the charge that the first Executor had and was subject unto; and yet the goods of one Testator shall not be subject to the debts of the other; but each of the Testators goods shall be subject to the payment of his own debts only. Stat. 25. Ed. c. 4. Co. 5. 9. Plow. 86. 34 H. 6. 64. And if in this case, the Executor of the Executor take upon him the Administration of the goods of the first Testator, he cannot refuse the Administration of the goods of the latter: but he may take upon him the latter and refuse the former. Trin. 17. Jac. Co. B. Wolfe & Heidens case. But if the Executor refuse to administer to the first Testator before the Ordinary, or dye before the Probate of the Will, and he hath made a Testament and appointed an Executor therein; in these cases, it seemes the Executor of the Executor shall not administer the goods of the first Testator, but the Ordinary must grant the Administration thereof Dyer 372. And yet if all the residue of the goods of the first Testator be given by the Testament to the first Executor after the debts be paid; in this case albeit he die before Probate of the Will, yet his Executor shall be Executor also to the first Testator, or else he shall have the Administration of his goods and chattels granted unto him: And therefore, if A make his Will, and give Legacies to B. and D. and give all the rest of his goods and chattels after debts and Legacies paid to C. his wife, and make her his sole Executrix, and she die before Probate of the Will, or any election made, nor knowing of the Will; and E. sue out Administration of the goods of A. and pay the Legacies to B. and D. and F. sue out an Administration of the goods of C. in this case, the Administrator of C. and not of A. shall have the goods; for the Law doth judge them in C. after the debts and Legacies paid without any election. Adjudged in Hill. 9. Car. in Dens case. See Brownl. 1. part 91.

If an Executor after he hath proved the Testators Will, die Intestate; in this case, the Administration of the goods of the first Testator not administered in the hands of the Executor must be granted to whom the Ordinary shall think fit: And if the Ordinary please, he may grant the Administration, de bonis non administratis of the first deceased, and of the goods of the second deceased to one and the same person: And herein the Administrator must take care that his Administration have speciall words for the granting of an Administration of the goods of the first Testator, not administered; Broo. Executor 117. 26 H. 8. 7. Co. 1. 96. Dyer 372. Termes of the Law tit. Administration. For howsoever some hold that by the generall Administration, the Administrator shall have not only the goods of the Executor, but the goods of his Testator also, yet it seems this is not taken to be Law at this day. Fitz. Administrator. 9.

If there be two Executors made, and one of them doth refuse before the Ordinary, and the other doth prove the Will, and make a Will himself and appoint an Executor and then die; in this case, it seemes the Executor of the Executor that did prove the Will alone shall have the disposition of all the Estate, and be Executor to the first Testator, and that the surviving Executor shall not meddle therewith, for that his Election by the death of his companion is gone. Dyer 160.

And if one make two Executors, and one of them doth make an Executor and dye, and the other that doth survive hath accepted the Executorship; in this case, the surviving Executor shall have the sole disposing of the estate, and the Executor of the deceased Executor shall not intermeddle therewith: And if therefore the surviving Executor die Intestate, an Administration de bonis non Administratis of the first Testator shall be granted: And if the Executor of the deceased Executor have any of the estate in his hands, the surviving Executor may take or recover it from him : And if two be made Executors , and one of them is incapable ; in this case , he that is capable shall administer alone Litt. Broo. selt. 169. Broo. Executor 179. 99. Fitz. Executor 12. 113. Dyer 187.

If one that is Administrator of another mans goods do make his Will and make an Executor and die ; or do die Intestate , and the Administration of his goods is granted to some body ; in the first of these cases the Executor , and in the last the Administrator , unless he be made Administrator of these goods also shall not meddle with these goods of the first deceased : but the administration of the goods of the first deceased in the hands of the Administrator not administered must be granted again. Dyer 372. 112. Coe. 5. 9. Goldsb. 182. Plow. 118.

And hence it is that if the Administrator of my goods have a judgement for a debt due to me , and he dye before execution , and make an Executor , or die intestate , that in this case his Executor or Administrator shall never have execution of this judgement. And the same law is of the Administrator of my Executor in this case. See Brownlows Rep. 57. 1. part.

24. Where an Executor or Administrator may accept or refuse the Executorship or Administration , and how , and where he may be Executor after he hath refused or not. And what after intermeddling with the goods of the dead shall be said an Administration , and what not.

An Executor or Administrator may accept or refuse the executorship of the administration at his pleasure ; and therefore he may at any time before he hath intermeddled with the estate as Executor or Administrator refuse it ; and if he be sued by any as Executor or Administrator , he may plead , ne unquam Executor ; i. e. he was never Executor or Administrator , and did never administer : and if it be true , he shall by this means avoid the suite : for a man shall not be compelled to take such a charge upon him whether he will or no. Coe. 9. 37. 37 H. 6. 37. 28. 20 H. 6. 1.

If therefore there be many Executors , or an administration be granted unto many ; and one of the Executors prove the Will in the name of the rest , or one accept the administration in the name of all the rest , yet the rest may refuse to accept it , and plead in any Suite against them that they are not Executors or Administrators. But as an Executor or an Administrator after he hath once legally refused the Executorship or administration , can never after intermeddle therewith : so after he hath once legally accepted thereof , (that is) hath done any thing as Executor or administrator , and which is proper only for an executor or administrator to do , he can never after refuse it. And his acceptance of part , in this case , will make him chargeable with all , except it be in the case before of an Executor who may accept of the last Executorship , and refuse the first. Brownlows Rep. 1. part. 82. 2. part. 58. 59. 183. 184. &c.

If an Executor plead , he did never administer as Executor , yet he may afterwards administer as Executor if he please. Goldsb. 31. Plow. 2.

If the Executors being cited to come in and prove their Will , appear before the Ordinary , and refuse to administer and to prove the Will , they cannot afterwards accept it or intermeddle with it. But herein this difference must be observed ; That where there be many Executors named and made , and they being cited some of them only do appear and refuse to accept it : (the rest of the Executors being then living) and after some or one of the rest of the Executors prove the Will , or take upon him the Executorship ; in this case and notwithstanding this refusal , they that doe refuse may afterwards at any time , at least during the life time of their Co-executors that did accept thereof and intermeddle therewith as far forth as either of the rest. Coe. 9. 37. Fitz. Administration 6. 11. Broo. Administration 32. Executors. 117. Coe. 5. 28. Perk. selt. 485. Dyer 160. 11. Ed. 23.

And therefore in this case howsoever the Executors refusing shall not be charged in any suite against , all the Executors for any thing due from the Testator , but they may by their plea avoid it : yet the Executors accepting cannot sue for any thing due to the Testator , nor be sued for any thing due from the Testator , but they must sue and be sued in the names of themselves and their Co-executors that do refuse also. And if there be three Executors , and two of them prove the Will , and the third refuse ; yet this third Executor alone may release any debt due to the the Testator. But if there be but one Executor made, and he alone, or if there be many made, and they do all together refuse before the Ordinary to take upon him or them, the administration; in this case the Testator is so far forth said to be dead intestate, and thereupon therefore the Ordinary may grant the administration of the goods of the deceased, and then the Executor or Executors can never after accept thereof, or intermeddle therewith.

And if one or more of the Executors refuse, and the rest accept; if he or they which accept die before he or they that refused accept; it seems in this case they can never afterwards accept it, but the Administration must be granted.

If one be sued as Executor or Administrator, and he plead to the Suit ne unques Executor, i. e. he was never executor or administrator, if he have not in truth intermeddled before; this plea is a refusal of the executorship or administration, and therefore he can never afterwards accept or intermeddle with the executorship or administration. See the cases before.

Every intermeddling with the goods of the deceased, or with the office and work of an executor, shall not be said to be such an administration as to amount unto an acceptance of the executorship or administration, and so to make a man chargeable as executor or administrator. Co. 9. 37. 5. 34. Dyer 105. Kel. 63. Broo.

And therefore if a man that is an executor or administrator do only lay up and preserve the goods of the deceased; or command another to take away the goods of the deceased from one that hath them in his keeping; or see the deceased buried in a decent manner, and for that purpose use, and if need be sell some of his goods to do it, or make an Inventory of the goods and chattels of the deceased; or prove the Testators Will with his own money; or take his own goods lying amongst the goods of the deceased; or take and use some of the goods of the deceased onely by mistake, or as a trespasser, or by the delivery of another; or take and dispose any of the goods of the deceased, when the executor or administrator doth challenge them as his own & in his own right; or if he redeem any of the goods of the deceased with his own money when they are pledged to the full value, and the day of redemption is past, as neither of these acts will make a stranger an executor of his own wrong; so neither will they amount to an acceptance of the executorship, and make the executor or administrator chargeable as executor or administrator. Administrator 35. 36. Fitz Administrator 7. Broo. Executor 165. 132 H. 6. 6. Dyer 135.

Executor of his own wrong.

But if a man that is an executor or administrator shall sue by that name for any debt due to the deceased; or being sued by that name for any debt or duty due from the deceased, shall implead to the Suite, or plead any other plea besides ne unques Executor; or shall take into his hands the goods of the deceased, and convert them to his own use, and alter the property by sale, gift, or otherwise, and all this as the goods of the deceased; (and so it shall be intended against him if he do not declare the contrary, that he doth take and use them as his own &c.) or if he deliver the goods of the deceased to Creditors or Legataries in satisfaction of their debts or Legacies; or receive any debt due to the deceased, and give a release for the same; or release any debt due to him before it be paid; or pay any debt due from the deceased, except it be with his own money: any or either of these acts will amount unto an acceptance of the Executorship, and therefore after an Executor or Administrator hath done any such act, he can never after refuse the Executorship or Administration.

Two Executors be made jointly by Will, one of them doth release a debt, and after before the Ordinary refused to administer; It was agreed by all the Judges it was too late, for he had made his Election by the release. Brownl. 2. part 58. sect. 25.

If a woman sole be made an Executrix to another, and she marry a husband before she intermeddle with the estate, and then her husband doth administer; this is such an acceptance as will bind her, and she can never afterwards refuse it. Broo. Executor 147.

The Executor or Administrator shall have by vertue of his Executorship or Administration all the chattels real and personall of the Testator, as well those that are in possession, as Leases for years of Land, Rent, Common, or the like, Grants what not.

25. What things an Executor or Administrator shall have by vertue of his Executorship or Administration, And what not.

First in respect of the nature of the thing.

of next Advowsons, and Presentations, Wardships of heirs by reason of tenure in Capite, or Knights Service, corn growing and cut, trees, and grasse cut and severed, cattell, money, plate, household-stuffe, and the like, as also those that are in action, as right and interest of executions upon Judgements, Statutes, Obligations, Causes of action, and the like; He shall have also all other things that are of the nature of chattels. Coo. super Littl. 209. 288. Park. sect. 69. Plow. 293. Dolt. & St. 39. 76. Perk. sect. 833. Coo. 4. 63. 63. 7. 17. Kelm. 118.

And therefore the Executor or Administrator shall have the two years of the heir female that is in Ward; a relief or an advowson that is fallen; and yet if a Bishop have tide to present by the vacation of a Church, and then he dye; in this case the King and not the Executor or Administrator of the Bishop shall present. And if the Lord have a greater estate in the Seigniori than for life or years, it is said the Executor or Administrator shall not have the relief. Coo. super Littl. 79. Dyer 130. 283. Dyer 24. *Broo. And the Executor or Administrator of the Lord shall have Fines assessed upon the Tenants upon their admittances in the Lords time. And if I make a Feoffment in Fee, gift in tail, or lease for life, rendering Rent, and the Rent is behind, and then I dye; in this case the arrerages of Rent due to me in my life time shall go to my Executor or Administrator in the nature of a chattell. Stat. 32. H. 8. cap. 34. Coo. 4. 48. Dyer 373.

So if a Rent be granted out of land to me in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years, and it be not paid to me in my life time; these arrerages shall go to my Executor or Administrator, and not to any other. And so also if a Parson have an annuity in Fee in the right of his Church, and it be behind, and the Parson dye; in this case the Executor or Administrator, not the successor of the Parson shall have the arrerages. F. N. B. 120. L.

And if I be seised of land and possessed of a stock of cattell, and let it to another for years, and he covenant by the Lease to pay me and my wife, our heirs and assigns 100^l. by the year, during the term; in this case after my death, and my wife surviving me, her Executor or Administrator, and not my heir shall have the payments. Dyer 375.

And if one seised of land in Fee make a Feoffment of it to me excepting the trees, and after grant me the trees for years; or if he make me a Lease of the land first for years, and after doth grant me the trees for a number of years, to begin after the end of the term of the land; in both these cases I have the trees in the nature of a chattell, and if I dye my Executor or administrator shall have them. Coo. 4. 63.

And if a man grant to me the next Presentation to the Church of D. in this case if I dye, my executor or administrator shall have it as a chattell. Dyer 283. 34. H. 6. 27.

And my wife shall have so much of her wearing apparell as is necessary and convenient for one in her estate and condition: and therefore that shall not go to my Executor. But so much of her wearing apparell as she hath superfluous and more than necessary for her, shall go to my executor or administrator after my death. See supra at Numb. 7.

And the charters and evidences that do concern any of my chattels which my executor or administrator is to have, shall go with the same chattels. So also any Charters whatsoever, if they be pledged to me for money, shall go to my executor or administrator untill the money be paid. Broo. chattels 12. But otherwise those deeds and evidences that do belong to the heir as incident to the Inheritance, shall not go to my executor or administrator after my death. But matters of trust, and such things as are personall, as offices of trust, wardships by reason of a Tenure in Socage, or Jure naturæ, or the like, shall not go to the executor or administrator after the death of him that hath them. So an Executor or Administrator shall not have the grasse and trees growing on the ground no more than the soile or ground it self whereon they grow. Plow. 293. Coo. 3. 39. 9. 99. So an Executor or Administrator shall not have the Incidents of a house, as glass, doors, wainscot, and the like, no more than the house it self, nor pales, wals, stauks, fish in Ponds, Deere, or Conies in Parks, Pigeons in Pigeon-houses, or the like. Kelm. 118. See before at Numb. 7.

If a Lease for years of land be granted to me and my heirs, or to me and my successors, and I dye, my Executor or Administrator, and not my heir shall have this term, *Coo. 10. 87. Litt. Sett. 740. And if my heir or successor happen to get the Deed, the Executor or Administrator may recover it from him. And if a Lease be made to me for 20 years without naming my Executors or Administrators or Assigns in the Lease; in this case if I dye, my Executor or Administrator notwithstanding shall have it during the term. And if a Lease for years be made to a Bishop and his successors, and he dye, his Executor or Administrator, not his successor shall have it, New terms of the Law ut. assigns. Sett. 746. And if a rent be granted to me, my heirs and executors during the life of I S, and for one half year after, and I dye; in this case the half years rent shall go to my executor or administrator, and not to my heir, M. 7. Ja. Co. B. Was case. Litt. Sett. 739. And if I be seized of land in Fee, and make a Lease for years of it, rendring rent, and then devise this rent to a stranger, and the Devisee dye; in this case his executor or administrator shall have it, Dyer 3. And if a Lessee for life make a Lease for years absolutely; this in Law is a Lease for so many years, if the life so long live; and shall go to the executor or administrator after his death. See Brownl. 19. 30. 1 part. Coo. 7. 12.

If I have a box, chest, or trunk wherein my writings that do concern my inheritance do lye, and the same is open, and not sealed or locked; in this case my Executor shall have it: but if it be sealed or locked, contra, for then it shall go to him that is to have the writings as incident thereto. And yet if there be any money, plate, or any other such like thing in the chest also, my Executor shall have that thing, Broo. Executors 145. 97. Fitz. Executors 111.

The Incidents of a house, as glass-windows annexed with nails or otherwise to the windows; the wainscot fixed by nails, skrews, or irons put through the posts or wals, tables dormant, furnaces of lead and brasse, and fass in a brew or die-house standing and fastned to the wals, or standing in, or fastned to the ground in the middle of the house; (though fastned to no wall) a copper, or lead fixed to the house; the doors within and without that are hanging and serving to any part of the house, shall not go to the executor or administrator to be divided and sold from the house, albeit the executor or administrator have a Lease for years of the house, and by that means hath the house also. But if the glass be from the windows, or there be wainscot loose, or doors more than are used that are not hanging, or the like: these things shall go to the executor or administrator, Coo. 4. 63. 21 H. 7. 26.

If I make a Feoffment to I S of land, on condition that if he pay me, my heirs or assigns, or my heirs, executors or administrators a 100 l. such a day, that the Feoffment shall be voyd, and I dye before the time of payment; in this case, if this money be paid at the day, my executor or administrator, and not my heir, shall have it, Coo. 5. 96. Fitz. Executor 8.

If one be seized in Fee of lands whereon there are trees growing, and he make a Feoffment of the land to me, excepting the trees, and afterwards he doth sell me trees for ever, and after I dye; in this case my executor or administrator shall not have these trees, as they shall in case where the Feoffor doth grant them to me for years. And if I be seized of land in Fee, and I make a Lease for life or years of it, excepting the trees, and afterwards I dye; in this case my executor or administrator shall not have these trees, but they shall go in both cases with the land, Coo. 4. 63. 11. 48.

If a Lease be made for life or years of land whereon a house is standing, or timber is growing, and the house is prostrate, or the timber is cut or fallen down (by whomsoever or what means soever it be) the materials of this house, and this timber is now become a chattel; and therefore if the Lease be without impeachment of waste, it shall go to the Lessee, and after his death to his Executor or Administrator; but if the Lease be otherwise, it shall go to the Lessor, and after his death to his Executor or Administrator. But if the timber be cut for reparations onely, or the Lessee will imploy the materials of the house to build it again, and the Lease do continue, it may be so imployed, and then the Executor or Administrator of the Lessor may not take it, Coo. 4. 63. 11. 81. 84.

If one be seized in Fee-simple of ground whereon trees do grow, and he sell me these trees for money, and afterwards I dye before they be cut; in this case my Executor or Administrator shall have and may cut them, Coo. 11. 50. Perk. Sell. 58.

If the Kings tenant by Knights Service in Capite be seized of a Mannour whereunto an Advowson is appendant, and the Church become voyd, and the tenant dyeth, his heir within age: in this case the King, and not the Executor or Administrator of the tenant shall have the Presentation. And yet if in this case the land be held of a common person, the Executor or Administrator, and not the Guardian shall have it, Coo. super Litt. 388.

In all cases regularly where a man doth sow land, whereof and wherein he hath such an estate as may perhaps continue untill the corn be ripe, if he that doth sow it dye before it be cut and severed, his Executor or Administrator shall have it; as if the husband sow the land whereof he hath an estate in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or for a certain number of years in the right of his wife, and dye ere it be ripe, in this case the Executor or Administrator of the husband, and not the wife shall have it. And if one that holdeth land for the life of I S sow the land, and I S dye ere it be ripe & cut; the executor or administrator of the tenant shall have this corn. And if tenant in Tail or in Dower sow the land they do so hold, and dye ere it be cut; the executor or administrator, not the issue in tail, nor the heir, or him in reversion shall have it. So if the husband make a Feoffment in Fee to the use of himself for life, and after of his wife, &c. and he sow the land, and after dye; his executor or administrator, not his wife shall have the corn. But if a Feoffment be made to the use of the husband and wife together in Fee, or for life, and the husband sow the land; in this case the wife, not the executor or administrator of the husband shall have the corn. So if a Lessee for years certain sow the land a little before the end of his term, and the term end before it be cut; in this case he that is to have the land, not the executor or administrator of the Lessee for years shall have the corn, Dyer. 316. Doct. & St. 35. Perk. Sell. 59.

Dyer 24. So if one make a Feoffment in Fee of land, and the Feoffee doth covenant to do divers things to the Feoffor, Et quoties defectus fuerit, &c. that he shall forfeit to him and his heirs § 1. and the Feoffee doth fail and break his covenant divers wayes, and the Feoffor dyeth; in this case his executor or administrator, not his heir shall have and recover all the forfeitures that are past.

If a Bishop, Parson, Vicar, Master of Hospital, or any body politick be possessed of any goods or chattels in their own right; and dye; these shall go to the executor or administrator, not the successor of such a person. And albeit such things be granted to them and their successors, yet their executors and administrators, and not their successors shall have it. But if a Corporation aggregate, as Dean and Chapter, Mayor or Commonalty, and the like, have any goods or chattels in right of their Corporation, and any of the Heads or Members thereof dye; the executors or administrators of such person shall not have them, but they shall continue in succession with the Corporation, Co. 4. 65. Perk. Sect. 58. Co. super Litt. 46.

An executor or administrator shall have the benefit of a pardon granted to the deceased, and shall have advantage of any error in any outlawry against the deceased, and have restitution of the goods forfeit thereupon, Co. 6. 80. Dyer 201.

The executor or administrator of a woman that hath a husband, shall have by right of his executorship or administration, all Actions, Rights, and Titles to any chattels, and possibilities, and things of that nature which the wife had before the marriage, and which fell to her during the marriage; for these things the husband shall not have by the intermarriage after his wives death, as he shall have all the rest of her goods and chattels, except he have them as executor or administrator to her, as he may be. And if such a woman have any goods or chattels as executrix to another, her executor or administrator, not her husband shall have these also; for she hath these goods in anothers, and not in her own right, Co. super Litt. 351. Plow. 294. 193.

If I have any goods or chattels in joynt-tenancy with another, as if a Lease be made of lands to me and another for years, or a horse or other chattel personal be given or granted to me and another; in these cases if I dye, my executor or administrator shall not have any part of these goods or chattels, but the other surviving joynt-tenant shall have them all. But otherwise it is of the goods and chattels that I and another have in Common. And therefore if I and another have goods and chattels in that nature as before, and he or I grant that which doth belong unto us thereof unto a stranger; in this case the stranger, and him of us two that hath kept his part are Tenants in Common of the things; and therefore if either of us dye, the part of him that dyeth in the goods and chattels shall go to his executor or administrator, and not to the other Tenant in Common, Litt. Sect. 281. Perk. Sect. 55, § 16. Litt. Sect. 320, 321.

If I have a Judgement for land in a real or mixt action, and for damages recovered in the same Suit, and I dye; in this case my executor or administrator, not my heir, shall sue execution for, and recover the damages, but not for the land. So if I recover damages against another for the detaining of my Charters, and dye; my executor or administrator shall recover the damages, but the heir shall have the Charters, and the heir must sue his Scire facias for the Charters ere the executor can sue for the damages, Fitz. Executor 53. 84. 117. Also if I recover any debt or damage in any personal action, my executor or administrator shall recover and have this. See more infra at numb. 39. But the Administrators of an Executor cannot have a Scire facias upon a Judgement given for the Testator, March. Rep. 9.

The power and interest which the Executor hath is wholly by the Will. And hence it is that an Executor, whether he be absolute or conditional whiles he is Executor, may do any thing as Executor (except onely sue for debts and duties due to the Testator) as well before the Probate of the Will as he may do after; for before the Probate he may enter into and seize the goods and chattels whatsoever they be, or give power to another so to do; and if any of them be taken or kept from him, he may have an action of trespass, or a replevin to recover them; he may give or sell any of the goods or chattels; he may pay any of the debts due from, and and receive or release any debts due to the deceased, Coo. 6. 18. 9. 38. 5. 27. Plow. 280. 9 Ed. 4. 47. 36 H. 6. 7. Fitz. Administrator 2. 6. Brownl. 1. part. 76. 77. 73. 53. But it is otherwise in the case of an Administration; for inasmuch as his power & interest is given to him wholly by the Administration, therefore he can do nothing untill the Administration be granted. And yet in this case as to the goods taken away before the Administration, the Administration shall have such a relation as to give the Administrator an action for them. But otherwise after the Administration is granted, the interest and power of the Administrator is equal to and with the power and interest of the Executor. And yet it is otherwise of the power and interest of the Ordinary; For howsoever it seems by the ancient Common Law he might seize, preserve, give, grant, and dispose the goods of the intestate to pious uses, yet might he not sue for the goods or debts due to the intestate, no more than he might be sued for any debts due from the intestate; and at this day he may onely keep and preserve the goods of the deceased untill administration be granted, and sue him in the Court of the Ordinary that doth detain the goods from him, and perhaps may sue him that shall take the goods out of his possession; for he may not sell or give the goods of the deceased, nor receive or release any debts; for in case where there is an Executor made that is capable, &c. he is not to meddle at all with the estate untill the Executor refuse: and where there is no Executor that the party is dead intestate, the Ordinary is presently to commit the Administration to the nearest of the kindred; which when he hath done, his power is at an end, for it is doubted of some whether he may repeal an Administration without cause or not; but it hath been clearly held by all, that he may not dispose of the estate afterwards, and that he hath not power to enforce the Administrator to give portions to children out of the estate, and that if he do go about it, either before or after the granting of the Letters of Administration, the Administrator may have a Prohibition, Coo. 8. 135. 9. 39. Dyer 255. Westm. 2. cap. 20. 31 Ed. 3. c. 11. And accordingly divers have been granted; And yet notwithstanding it seems this course is usual: and Prohibitions not often granted at this day, Hill. 13. Ja. Co. B. Henslowes case. Trin. 3. sac. Co. B. Davis case. Hill. 2. Car. Co. 9. Fotherlies case. An Executor or Administrator may after the death of the deceased enter into the house where the deceased lived, and where he dyed, and where the goods are, and take them away, and justifie it; but he must do it within convenient and reasonable time, as within 30 days after his death, or thereabouts, and in a quiet and fair manner when the door is open, &c. Litt. Sect. 69. Plow. 281. Broo. Executor 129. He may keep any of the goods of the deceased, so as he pay or lay out as much of his own money in and about the Administration of the same estate, Dyer 2. He may, if he want money to discharge Funerals, or pay debts, sell any of the chattels real or personal whereof the deceased dyed possessed; and that albeit the thing in particular be devised; as if a man be possessed of a term of years inter alia, and devise the same term to I S, the Executor or Administrator notwithstanding this devise may at any time before assent given to the Legacy, if he have not assets to pay the debts, sell this term, and the Legatee is remediless. And so he may do also, albeit there be enough besides to pay the debts, and he have no need; but then in this case the Legatee shall have some relief in a Court of Equity against the Executor or Administrator for damages, but the sale is unavoydable, Plow. 543, 544. An Executor or Administrator may retain so much of the estate as to satisfy his own debt first, if any be due unto him. And if he hath enough to pay all the Debts and Legacies, he may pay them in what order he will without danger to himself, or wrong to Creditors or Legataries. And if he hath not enough, he may pay them in what order he will, but not without danger to himself. But if any thing be due to himself, he may pay that first of all, and for others that are in equal degree, he may pay which of them he will first, Plow. 184. 543. Coo. 5. 28. And for the Legataries, he may prefer which of them he will, or pay one of them his whole Legacy, and pay another a part of his, or not pay him any part of his Legacy if there be no assets to do it. But an Executor or an Administrator may not sell any thing that is given in special to a Legatee to pay another Legacy given to another Legatee, nor not compell a Creditor or Legatee to take some of the Goods of the Deceased for his Debt or Legacy, whether he will or no, not devise the Goods he hath as Executor or as Administrator, neither can Executors or Administrators make devision of the Goods amongst them. The addition to Justice Dodridge Treatise 93. Kelw. 62. 37 H. 8. 22. Plow. 525.

An Infant that is an Executor, after the time he is capable, hath as much power as another Executor of full age; for he may sell the Goods, receive Debts, and make releases for the moneyes he doth receive, assent to a Legacy when debts are paid, sue, and be sued as another Executor. And he is only disabled to do any thing to hurt himself; And therefore if he release a debt before he receive it, the Release is void; and if he assent to a Legacy before the debts are paid, the assent is void, and if he do any other act which will be a wasting of the Goods in an Executor that is of full age, it shall not bind him. Co. 5. 28.

And it seems, that howsoever an Infant Executor after seventeen years of age, may sell any of the Chattels personall he hath as Executor, yet that after his age of seventeen years, and before he is one and twenty years of age, that he cannot sell a Lease for years he hath in the right of his Executorship; but that such sale is void. And so was it held by Justice Hutton at Sarum Assises, 21 Jac.

A Woman covert that hath a Husband, and is an Executrix may do any lawfull act as another Executor may do, but she may not do any thing to prejudice her Husband, as release a debt before it be paid; assent to, or deliver a Legacy before the debts be paid, or the like, and yet the Husband himself may do so. Broo. Executor 178. 152. Fitz. Executor 55. Co. 5. 28.

The Office and duty in general of an Executor or Administrator is to dispose of all the Estate of the deceased wherewith he hath to do. 1. Truly not to convert any of it to his own use, but to the use and best advantage of the deceased nor to labour by any undue practise or means to hinder any Creditor of his debt. 2. Lawfully to pay debts and Legacies in that order the Law prescribeth. 3. Diligently, Quia negligentia semper habet commitem infortunium; but more particularly. Co. 8. 133.

The first duty and care of an Executor or an Administrator after he had taken upon him the charge of the Administration of the Goods and Chattels of the deceased, after the Goods are laid up, is to see the body of the deceased laudably interred according to his rank and quality; wherein let the Executor or Administrator take this caution by the way, Not to exceed in Funerall Pomp, especially if it be so that the Estate will scarcely reach to pay the Debts; for let his expences be what they will, the Judges (who in this are to determine what shall be allowed) will allow what they please, and they are pleased in such cases to allow but a small matter, and whatsoever the Executor or Administrator doth lay out more, he must bear out of his own Estate, if he have not enough besides to pay the debts. Dist. & St. 75. Plow. 543. Kelw. 64.

The second duty and care must be to make an Inventory, i.e. a Schedule containing a true and perfect description of all the Goods and Chattels of the deceased at the time of his death, as of his Wares, Merchandizes, Emblements, and the like, with their apprisement and value, and of none else, and of all debts due to him and from him. Doff. & St. 35. Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 3. Dyer 166. Swinb part 6. Sect. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

And this must be made by and before two of the Creditors or Legataries of the deceased (if there be any such and they will do it) and two others, or in case they refuse, by and before two other men of the honest Neighbours. And herein let the Executor or Administrator take this caution by the way, not to intermeddle with the Goods before he hath done this; for howsoever he may do any act as Executor before the Inventory be made, yet the Ordinary may punish this upon him except it be done with the Ordinaries license, who in this case may give what time he will for the doing of it; and untill the Inventory be made and put in, it shall be presumed against the Executor or Administrator that he hath Assets in his hands to pay all men; and besides, untill this be done, he cannot deduct to satisfie his own debt first, and bar other men by Plea. But of the other side when he hath made and exhibited a true and perfect Inventory of all the Goods and Chattels, it shall be presumed against him that he hath so much as is contained in the Inventory and no more, unless more can be proved by Witnesses.

3. The third thing whereof the Executor or Administrator is to take care, is to prove the Will if there be any: and this the Ordinary will compell him to do, but otherwise he may do any thing as Executor, save onely sue actions as well before Probate as after. See Probate infra at Numb.

4. The fourth thing whereof the Executor or Administrator must take care, is to sell and make money of the goods and Chattels, and to receive the debts due to the deceased, and then to pay the Debts and Legacies due to the Creditors and Legataries, wherein the Executor or Administrator must be very cautious and wary. And for this purpose let him observe that all the Debts must be paid before any Legacies be paid or delivered, and if there be not enough besides to pay the debts, any thing given by way of Legacy, may be sold to make money to pay the Debts, and the Legataries must lose their Legacies. And in payment of Debts this decorum must be observed.

1. Amongst persons that are Creditors, the Executor or Administrator himself shall be preferred, so that if any debt be due to him, he may deduct to satisfy himself first, albeit others lose their whole Debt thereby, and especially then when his Debt is in equall degree with other Debts.

2. After the Executor or Administrator is served and satisfied his Debt, then the King is to be preferred, so that if there be any Debt due to him, and he begin his suit for it before any other man can get a Judgement for his Debt against the Executor or Administrator, his Debt shall be paid before any others.

3. After the King is served and satisfied his Debt, then the debts of common persons must be paid. Coo. 9 88. Plow. 184. 545. Dyer 80. Doff. & St. 75. 76. 77. 78. 132. Stat. 33 H. 8. cap. 39. Brown. 1. part 53. 73. 76. 77. 80. 104. 103. 2 part 51. 82. 37.

And these also must be paid in this order or manner.

1. The Debts due by Record, by any Judgement had against the Deceased in any judicial proceeding in any Court of Record.

2. The Debts due by Statutes or Recognizances entred into by the Deceased; for the Debts due upon Judgements must be satisfied before these; fit judicium prius vel posterius

3. The Debts due by Obligations, and penall and single Bills, for these are in equall degree, and these are to be paid after Statutes and Recognizances. And yet if the Statute or recognizance be only for performance of Covenants, & no Covenant is broken, an Obligation for the payment of present money shall be discharged before it.

4. The debts due for Rent upon Leases of Land, or grants of Rents; but some say, that Debts due for Rent in the Testators life time (be the Rent reserved upon Leases made by, or without deed for years, or at will) are in equality of degree, with debts due upon Especialties.

5. The Debts due for Servants Wages and Workmen.

6. The Debts due upon Shop-books and verbal Contracts, and yet it is said by some, that Legacies are to be paid before Debts due by Shop books, Bills unsealed, or contracts by word, Quod non credo, Addition to Just. Dodridge 92.

And amongst Debts also that are in equality of degree, those that are due are to be paid before those that are not due; and those whose day of payment is already come, before those whose day of payment is not yet come: and yet if the Creditor whose day of payment is already come, do not sue for his Debt untill his Debt whose day of payment is at a day to come, become due, the Executor or Administrator may satisfy which of them he will first.

And amongst Debts that are due, and already to be paid, those that are first sued for, are to be first paid: Or if the Creditors begin their Suits together, the Executor or Administrator may pay which he will of them first, and to pay Debts in any other order is dangerous: And therefore for the purpose, if the Deceased are two severall Debts of 10 l. apiece to two severall Creditors by severall severall Obligations, and the Executor or Admistrator hath enough onely to pay one of them, he that can first get Judgment and Execution shall first be satisfied, and if the Executor or Administrator do afterwards pay the other his Debt, he must satisfy the first out of his own Estate.

If one that hath a Debt due to him from the Deceased upon a simple Contract, or the like, sue the Executor or Administrator for it, and there be debts due to others upon Bonds and Bills unsatisfied, in this case the Executor or Administrator may not pay this debt, nor may he suffer the Plaintiff to recover in his Action, for if he do, and if he have not Assets besides to satisfy the debts due upon Bills and Bonds, he must satisfy so much out of his own Estate as he hath so paid, or suffered to be recovered from him, for in the case of an Action brought, he is to plead and to set forth these debts upon specialties, and to say, That he hath no more but what is sufficient to satisfy them, &c. and thereby he shall bar the Plaintiff in his Action.

In like manner it is, if one that hath a debt due to him from the deceased upon an Obligation, sue the Executor or Administrator thereupon, and there be debts due to others upon Judgments, Statutes, or Recognizances, and the Executor or Administrator suffer the Plaintiff to recover the debt due upon the Obligation for want of pleading the Judgments, &c. or doth voluntarily pay that debt, and he hath not Assets besides to pay the debts due upon Judgments, &c. In this case, he must pay so much out of his own Estate towards the satisfaction of the said debts due upon Judgments, &c. as he hath paid of the debt due upon the Obligation.

But here it must be noted, that no Judgment or Statute that is discharged, or is left and suffered to lye by agreement to bar others of their Debts, shall be any bar to others that sue for their due Debts upon Obligations, &c. And therefore if any Executor or Administrator shall plead any such Judgment, &c. in bar of any other Debt sued for by any other Creditor, the Creditor may by special pleading set forth this matter of Covin, and avoid the Plea and Bar of the Executor or Administrator.

Covin.

If one Creditor whose Debt is in equall degree, and presently due and to be paid, begin a Suit against the Executor or Administrator for his Debt, and he hath notice that the Suit is begun against him, or the Action is laid in the County where the Executor or Administrator doth dwell, or (as some have said) in London (in both which cases, it seems he is bound to take notice thereof at his perill) and after this Suit begun he doth make voluntary payment of another Debt in equall degree in all respects, for which no Suit is begun, this is a Dravastavit in the Executor or Administrator, and if he have not Assets to satisfy him who began his Suit first, he shall be compelled to satisfy so much thereof as he doth voluntarily pay to the other, and that out of his own Estate: And yet an Executor or Administrator may make voluntary payment of any Debt due by Record, as by Judgment, Statute, &c. after such a Suit begun, and justify it.

If two Creditors in equall degree to all purposes begin to sue for their Debts at one time; In this case the Executor or Administrator cannot safely make voluntary payment to either of them, unlesse he have enough to pay them both; but his safest way is to pay him first, that in a due and legall proceeding (for he may not covinously help one of them to a Judgment sooner) can first recover it by Judgment and Execution: And yet if in this case no Suit be begun, the Executor or Administrator may make voluntary payment to either of them in equall degree of his whole Debt, albeit he have no Assets left to pay unto the other any part of his Debt.

If A and B. be two Creditors in equall degree, and A. begin his Suit first; and after B. doth begin his Suit, and it hapneth that B. bona fide without any Covin or agreement between him and the Executor or Administrator, doth get Judgment and Execution first; in this case the Executor or Administrator may make payment to B. first of all. But if the Executor or Administrator doth by any Covin and agreement help B. to his Judgment and Execution first, and by this meanes he is first satisfied, if there be not enough left to satisfy A. he must satisfie him out of his own Estate. If two Suits begin at, or about one time upon two severall Obligations, and the Executor is forced to plead to them both before either of them hath a Judgment, so that he cannot plead the Judgment that the other hath against him, and he hath not Assets to satisfie both the debts sued for, and after the Plaintiffs in both the Suits get Judgment and Execution. Quest what the Executor or Administrator may do in this case: And here note by the way, that it is policy for a Creditor that hath cause to sue an Executor, or Administrator, to be doing betimes, and to get Judgment and Execution as soon as he may; for it falleth out in this case, That he that doth first come shall be first served: After all the debts are paid in such order and manner as before, then is the Executor or Administrator to pay and to deliver the Legacies: and herein the Executor may prefer himself so, that if any Legacy be given to him, he may detain and deduct it, albeit there be nothing left to discharge the Legacies given to others, and after he hath satisfied himself, he may satisfie and deliver what Legacies he will, albeit there be not enough to satisfie all the Legatees: or he may pay to each of of the Legatees a part of their Legacy, and deduct a part out of every Legacy where there is not enough to satisfie all the Legacies: But if any particular thing, as a Lease, or a Horse, or the like be given; this must be delivered accordingly, and may not be sold by the Executor or Administrator to pay to others all, or any part of their Legacies: and if there be enough to pay all the Legacies, they must be paid all according to the Will: And it is said by some, that if an Executor or Administrator make no Inventory of the goods, that he must pay all the Legacies, whether he have Assets or not: Doll: & St: 34. Plow: 545. & Wimb: 110. 114.

Fifthly, in making an Account.

The last thing an Executor or Administrator is to take care of, is to make an account (for it is held that an Executor or Administrator is not bound in Law or Conscience to make restitution for personall wrongs) wherein this is to be known, that the Ordinary may, if he wil, call the executor or administrator to account concerning the Goods and Chattels of the deceased, either generally or particularly, as the case requireth; and that with, or without the Creditors or Legataries instigation, within a year, or what time he will; unto which account he may call all the Creditors and Legataries; & therein the executor or administrator must shew what he hath received, and what he hath laid out, and prove it in such sort as the Ordinary shall like: And then if it be found he hath faithfully and fully administrated, the Ordinary may acquit him of the burthen, and then he is discharged of all Suits in the Spirituall Court; but this account and discharge will not help nor avail him at all to discharge him of Suits at the Common Law. Swimb: Part: 6. Sect: 17.

The Office and duty of the Ordinary after the death of any person within his Dioecesse, is if he hear of any Will made, and any Executor appointed, to cite the Executor, and to compell him to come in and prove the Will, and to accept and take upon him the Administration of the Goods, or to refuse it: and if the Executor refuse, or if there be a Will made, and no Executor appointed, the Ordinary must commit the Administration Cum testamento annexo to whom he shall think fit, and take bond of the Administrator to perform the Will. And if there be no will made, he is to grant the Administration of the Goods to the next of kin, if he or they require it; and if not so, to whomsoever besides shall desire it; or if no body seek it, he may grant Letters to whom he will Ad colligendum bona defuncti, and thereby take the Goods of the deceased into his own hands: and then it seems he is to pay therewith the Debts and Legacies of the Deceased, so far as the same will reach, in such order as the Executor or Administrator is to pay them. An Executor or Administrator regularly shall charge all others for any Debt or duty due to the Deceased, as the Deceased himself might have done; and the same Actions

ACTIONS the Deceased might have had, the same Actions for the most part the Executor or Administrator may have also: And therefore he may have an Action of Accedunt, an Action of Trespasse De bonis asportatis in omni respectu: An Action of Debt against a Gaoler upon the escape of a Prisoner; a Writ of Error upon the Statute of 27 Eliz. an Attaint upon the Statute of 23 H. 8. A Writ of Restitution upon the Statute of 21 H. 8. If an Action upon the Case upon the Assumpsit of the Testator, An Indemnitate nominis when the Deceased's Goods are taken upon an Outlawry against another man of his name: An Action of Covenant for breach of a Covenant made to the Deceased: An Action upon the Case upon the Trover and Conversion of the Goods of the Testator. An Ejectione firme for an Ejectment of the Testator out of a Terme. An Action of Debt for the Rent behind in the life-time of the Deceased. An Action of Debt for the Arrearages of an Annuity due to the Testator in his life: And a Ravishment, or Ejectment of Guard for a wrong done to the Deceased. But an Executor or Administrator shall not charge another, or have any Action against him for a personall wrong done to the Testator, when the wrong done to his person; or that which is his, is of that nature as for which Damages only are to be recovered: And therefore an Executor or Administrator cannot sue another for the beating or wounding of the Deceased, or for a Trespasse done to him in his Cattle, Grass, or Corne, or for a Waste done by his Tenant in his Lands; for these are said to be personall Actions, which dye with the person according to rule, Actio personalis moritur cum persona. If the Testament be kept from the Executor, he may have remedy to recover it in the Spirituall Court: So if the Goods of the Deceased be kept from him, he may sue these for them if he will, or he may sue in any Court of Common Law. If any Rent or Arrearages of Rent be due to me upon a grant of Rent out of any Land to me, or reservation of Rent upon any Estate made by me of Land; in these cases, my Executor or Administration may have an Action of Debt for this Rent, or he may distraine for it, so long as the Land chargeable with the Rent, and out of which it doth issue, is in his possession that ought to pay it, or in the possession of any one that doth claime by or under him. *Co. 4. 50. And in case where a man doth sue as Executor or Administrator, he must in his Action name himself, as he is; 2. c. if he be an Executor, he must name himself so; and if an Administrator, he must name himself so: And if there be many Executors, and some accept, and some refuse, if they bring any Action, they must be all named in the Writ: And yet if one Executor have Goods in his possession, and he alone sell them, perhaps for this Contract he may bring an Action for the money in his own name: So also if the Goods be taken out of his possession alone, it is said he alone may sue for them, but the safest way in these cases, is to sue in the names of all the Executors; for the possession of one of them is said to be the possession of all of them. *Co. 5. 33. And therefore if a man bind himself by Obligation or Covenant to pay money or do any such like thing, and do not bind his Executors or Administrators by name; in this case the Executor or Administrator may be sued and may be charged as far forth as if they were named. An action of the case lieth against him upon an Assumpsit, or the simple Contract of the Testator, especially where the ground of the Assumpsit is a true debt, a Rationabile pars bonorum lieth against him; a Detinere lieth against him for the Goods delivered to the Deceased, if the Executor or Administrator do still continue the possession of them: Also an action of debt lieth against him for arrearages of account found upon the Deceased before Auditors. Coo 9. 86. Plow. 182. *F. The Executor or Administrator of a man that recovereth a debt upon a Judgment had by the Deceased, shall be chargeable with restitution, if the Judgment be reversed for Error. Curia 21 Jac. B. R.

An Executor or Administrator shall not be charged for any personall wrong done by the Deceased, and therefore no action may be brought against him for any such cause, as because the Deceased did burn the Deed of the Plaintiff, suffer a Prisoner at his Suite to escape, cut down his Trees, eat up his Grasse, beat or wound the body of the Plaintiff, defame him in his name, or the like; for all these are said to be personall actions that dye with the person, neither is there any remedy to be had against the Executor or Administrator in equity in these cases, neither shall he be charged in any action of Account for any Receipt or Occupation by

by the Deceased. And yet perhaps an action of the Case may lie in this Case; neither will an action of Debt lie against him upon the simple contract of the Deceased, but an action of the case only. Neither will an action lie against an Executor or Administrator upon an arbitrement made in the life time of the Deceased, albeit it be made in writing. Neither will any Action lie against any Executor or Administrator for costs given in the Star Chamber or Chancery against the Deceased in a Suit there, but when the party dieth the same is lost; and where a man doth sue an executor Administrator in a Suit, he must charge him as he is, viz. if he be an Executor he must sue him by that name, if an Administrator, then by that name. And where there be many Executors and have all accepted they must be all sued; but if some of them have refused, perhaps the suit may be good enough against the rest. Adjudge Hill 40 Eliz. But otherwise one Executor cannot be charged without his companions, except it be in the case of Summons and severance, and in some special case where one alone doth the wrong, and the like, as where one Executor alone doth detain the deeds from the heir; for in this case he alone may be charged. All the Executors where there be more then one, be they never so many, in the eye of the Law are but as one man; in which respect the Law doth esteem most acts done by or to any of them, as acts done by or to all of them. And therefore the possession of one of them of the goods and Chattels of the Deceased is esteemed the possession of them all; payment of Debts by or to one of them, is esteemed a payment by or to them all; the Sale or Gift of one of them, of the goods and Chattels of the Deceased, the Sale and Gift of them all; a Release made by or to one of them is a Release made by or to them all; and the assent of one of them to a Legacy the assent of them all. 21. And therefore if there be two Executors and one of them deliver up the Obligation to the Debtor whereby he is bound, the other Executor shall not recover him in a detinue. And yet if in this Case there be any practice between the Executor and the Creditor in this matter, and there be not Assets besides to pay all the Debts and Legacies, here perhaps the other Executor may have remedy in equity against his co-executor and the creditor. But how the Law is of Administrators, Quere; for some think that one of them also may sell Goods, release Debts, plead to Actions, or the like without the other. Goldsb. 141. 54. If one Executor attorn to the Grant of a Reversion or a Rent, this is as good as if they did all attorn and bind all the rest, as in case of assent to a Legacy; for in this case the assent will bind all the rest, albeit there be not enough to pay the debts besides the Legacy given away by assent, but his assent shall not hurt his co-executors in a Devastavit. Dyer 210. One Executor or administrator cannot give or sell any of the Goods or chattels of the deceased to another Executor or Administrator; and therefore they may not make Division of the goods amongst themselves; and regularly one of them cannot sue another of them. And therefore if one keep, give, or sell all the goods; release debts, or the like, in the disturbance of the Execution of the Will, or due Administration of the estate, it seems the other hath no remedy against him, except it be in the Case of Coven before; But if all the residue of the Goods and Chattels after Debts and Legacies paid be given to one of the Executors alone, and after the Debts and Legacies paid, the rest do detain it or any part of it from him, in this case perhaps he may have some remedy against them. 27 H.8.21.6 H.7.5. Plow, 343. *Fitz. 32. Devastavit

Quid
What shall be said a Devastavit and wasting of the goods of the deceased by an Executor, or administrator, and how he shall be charged thereupon.

A Devastavit or Waste in an Executor or Administrator is, when he doth misemploy the estate of the deceased, and misdeemean himself in the managing thereof against the trust reposed in him. And this may be done divers wayes, as

1. When the Executor or Administrator doth bestow more upon the Funerals of the Deceased then is meet, having respect to his degree and Estate.

2. When he doth pay Legacies in money, or assent to Legacies given in other things before the debts are paid, and hath not enough besides to pay the debts.

3. When he doth not pay the debts in that order & manner as is before set down, but doth pay them first he should pay last, and he hath not enough to pay them all.

4. When he doth release a debt or duty due to the Deceased before he doth receive it, or when the Goods of the Deceased being taken from him, he doth release to him that doth take them the action whereby he may recover them.

5. When he doth sell the Goods of the Deceased much under value, especially if it be with covin, as to his near Friends, to his own use, to have money underhand, or the like, but otherwise to sell them under value, especially where he cannot conveniently make more of them, is no waste. Plow. 543. Coo. 532. Doff. and St. 75 Perk se. 488. 570 Kelw. 59.

All these and such like acts as these are said to be a waste in an Executor or Administrator; and being discovered against him by the return of the Sheriff (or as some think by inquest of Office) it will produce this effect, to make the Executor or Administrator chargeable for so much as he hath misemployed and wasted de bonis propriis, so that any creditor may charge him for the debt due to him from the Testator as for his own proper debt, and for so much the Execution shall be made against him upon his own body, Lands, and goods; And yet so, as one Executor or Administrator shall not be charged for the Waste of another; for if there be many Executors, and one of them doth onely commit the Waste, he onely shall be punished for this Waste. Dyer 185. Coo. 5. 32 Old B. of Entries 11. Dyer 210. Doff. & St. 78.

And the Executor or Administrator if he do commit a Waste in the gift or sale of goods, shall answer it alone; for he to whom the goods are given or sold shall not be punished for it, neither shall the executor or administrator of the Executor or administrator be punished for it after his death. And howsoever the Husband shall be charged in a Devastavit for the Waste of himself or his Wife where she is an Executrix whiles they both live together; yet if a Woman Executrix take a Husband, and during the marriage he or she doth commit a Waste, and after she die; in this case it seems the Husband shall not be charged for the Waste himself or his Wife did. See queere of this. For if a void administration be committed and the Administrator do waste the goods, and after the Administration is committed to another, in this case the first Administrator may be charged by the creditors for the waste done in his time. But an Executor or administrator may lawfully sell or convert the goods of the deceased to his own use, so as he convert the money to the use of the deceased in payment of debts, or the like, and pay so much of his own money, as the goods so converted to his use are worth, and these acts are not esteemed a waste in him. Also he may sell any special Legacy that is given, and this is no waste in him, howbeit it is a wrong to the Legatee if there be assets to pay Debts besides. And when he hath enough to pay all the Debts and Legacies, then he may dispose of the whole estate how he will without any prejudice to himself at all. See more Brownl. 1 part 24. 33. 116. 2. part 81.

An Executor of his own wrong is one that is neither lawfull Executor nor Administrator, and yet doth take upon him to do and act such things as are onely fit for, and proper to an Executor or Administrator, as to take the goods of the deceased into his own possession, give and sell them, pay the Debts of the deceased therewith, release the debts due to the deceased and the like. Terms of the Law, Keltw. 59. 93. Dyer 105. 157. 255. Co. 5. 32. Broo Executor 162.

And a man may make himself such an Executor by any such intermeddling with the office and work of an Executor as followeth; 1. By proving the Will with the money of the dead, but to prove another mans Will at my own charge, will no more make me chargeable, as Executor of mine own wrong, then to bury the deceased in a decent manner out of his own estate. 2. By a seising, gaining, keeping and using of the goods of the deceased as a mans own, especially if he convert them to his own use, sell or otherwise dispose them, and every colour of Title will not help in this case; for if a man make a Deed of gift of all his goods and chattels to another, and dieth intestate, and this in truth is fraudulent and in trust, and the Donee after the death of the Donor doth dispose of these goods and Chattels in this case and by this means, he shall be Executor of his own wrong. Goldsb. 116. pl. 12. Brownl. 1. part 103. 2. part 384. 185.

And yet if the Deed of gift be bona fide in satisfaction of a just debt, and the goods be no more then the Debt, it may be otherwise: but if the goods be much more then the debt, there it seems he shall be charged so for the overplus, and that whether he have them in possession or not; and so was the opinion of Justice Jones, at Gloucester. Affises. 9 Car. 4f the Ordinary grant Letters ad colligendum & vendendum the goods of the deceased that are like to perish, and 1. s. to whom the Letters are made, under colour thereof doth take and sell the goods, hereby he may make himself chargeable as Executor of his own wrong: for the Ordinary hath no such power himself, and therefore he may not give that power to another. If a man that is next of kin procure a beggar, or a stranger to take out an Administration, and then to make him a deed of gift of all the goods for a small matter, he may be thus charged for the overplus of the worth of the goods more then he gave. So if a Debtor procure such an administration to be taken out, and then get a Release of his debt from the administrator, this may make him chargeable as Executor of his own wrong for so much as his debt doth come unto. Star. 43. Eliz. cap. 8. Plich. 7 Jac. Co. B. per ch. Justice.

And yet a man may take away his own goods that were in the hands of the deceased without danger. And every having and possession of the goods of the deceased will not make a man executor of his own wrong: For if a man die in my house, and have goods there, and I keep them until I can well be discharged of them, this will not make me chargeable, as executor of mine own wrong. Trin. 17 Jac. per chief Just.

So if I do onely lay up the goods of the deceased to preserve them in safety for him that shall have right to them, this will make me no more chargeable then if I take an Inventory of all the goods of the deceased. Co. 5. 34. Keltw. 63.

So if another man take the goods of the deceased and sell them to me or give them to me, howsoever this will make him chargeable as executor of his own wrong, yet 33, Executor of his own wrong who shall be said to be so. And what act shall make him so to be accounted. And what act such an executor may do, and how he shall be charged or not.

yet this will not make me chargeable so, neither will every disposition of the goods of the deceased make a man executor of his own wrong, for if a man sell some of the goods of the deceased (where there is need) to help forward a decent Funerall of the body of the deceased: this is no such disposition as to make a man chargeable thus. So if I deliver the wife of the deceased her necessary wearing apparel, or if I be wife to the deceased and take it my self. So where I take any of the deceaseds goods into my hands by mistake, supposing them to be mine own, or under colour of Title, as when I have a good deed of gift or sale of them without any fraud or coven: or under a good authority, as when I take them upon a Warrant from the Sheriffe that hath processe out of the Exchequer to take them, or as a Trespassor onely, as when I kill or otherwise abuse the Cattel; such an intermeddling with the goods of the Deceased will not make a man chargeable as Executor of his own wrong, neither may I be so charged in these cases. Kel. 63. 52. 33 H. 6. 21. 32. H. 6. 6. Dyer 167, Coe. 5. 34. 20 Ed. 4. 17. Fitz. Executor 122.

The Third way by which a man may make himself chargeable as Executor of his own wrong, is by delivering of the goods of the deceased to creditors in satisfaction of their Debts, or by selling any of the goods of the deceased to pay the Debts of the deceased, and paying the same with the money made thereof; but to pay the deceaseds Debt with a mans own money will not make him chargeable so. See the cases before.

The fourth way by which a man may make himself so chargeable, is by receiving any of the Debts due to the deceased. Dyer 166.

The fifth way by which a man may make himself chargeable so, is by releasing any Debts or duties due to the deceased.

The sixth way, by delivering any Legacies given by the deceased in kind, or by paying any Legacies, except it be with a mans own money. Dyer 166.

The seventh way, by taking a mans Legacy given to him before the Executor have accepted of the executorship and assented to the Legacy.

The eighth way, by suing as Executor to the deceased, for any debt due to the deceased.

And the ninth way by taking upon him to sell the Lands of the Deceased as his Executor. In all these cases, and by all these and such like means, a man may make himself an executor of his own wrong: so that if an Executor after he hath legally waived the Executorship, or an administrator after his Administration is repealed and revoked, intermeddle with the estate in any such manner, he may be charged as executor of his own wrong: and if a woman take more of her wearing apparell then is necessary and convenient for one of her rank and condition, without Legacy of the husband and licence of the executor, she may be charged thus. Dyer 105. Dyer 166. 33 H. 6. 31.

And if a man under colour of an Administration that is not good, or of a Commission ad colligendum bona defuncti that is not good, or of a Will when in truth there is none at all, or no good Will, do take upon him to intermeddle with the goods and to dispose of the estate in manner as aforesaid, by this means he may make himself chargeable thus. And in these Cases, and by these means, such persons that do so intermeddle, do make themselves to be accounted in Law Executors; but Executors by wrong onely and not Executors by right. And therefore such persons have not the favour nor power of lawfull Executors, as to bring any action for Debt due to the Deceased, to deduct and pay themselves any Debt due to themselves first of all, and to bar other Creditors, and the like. And for so much as they have so disposed and mis-employed, and no more, they make themselves chargeable to any Creditor or Legatee of the Deceased that shall sue them as far forth as a lawfull executor is chargeable. Dyer 255. 166. Coe. 5. 34. 9. 39. Coe. 5. 34. Plow. 148. 145. 33 H. 6. 31. Dyer 210. Plow. 184. Coe. 5. 33.

And albeit, he that doth thus be a Creditor, yet this will not help him; for a Creditor may not enter upon the Goods of the Deceased, and pay himself first, and if hee do so, if there bee a lawfull Executor or administrator made he may sue the Creditor; and if there be no Executor or Administrator made made, the Creditor may by this means make himself chargeable to other Creditors as Executor of his own wrong, for so much as he hath taken into his own hands: And then a man shall be charged the rather in these Cases, and by this means when there is no Executor made, or if there be an Executor made, when he doth refuse to take upon him the Executorship, nor any Administration granted; for when a man dyeth Intestate, and a stranger taketh and useth the goods of the deceased as his own, albeit he pay no Debt or Legacy, nor do any other act as Executor, yet when no other man taketh upon him the Administration, this intermeddling shall make him chargeable as Executor of his own wrong; for in that case the Creditor hath no other remedy: But in case where there is an Executor made, and he doth prove the Testament, and doth take upon him the Administration of the goods, and then a stranger taketh out of the hands of this Executor, or getteth into his own hands all or some of the goods of the deceased, and useth them as his own, this will not make this stranger Executor of his own wrong, for now there is a lawfull Executor against whom the Creditor may have his remedy; and the Executor shall have his remedy for these goods against the stranger; for they are and shall be accounted Assets in the hands of the Executor still, notwithstanding the stranger hath the possession of them: and yet in this case also where there is a rightfull Executor, if a stranger shall take the goods into his hands, claim to be Executor, pay debts and Legacies; and receive debts, and intermeddle as an Executor; in this case, perhaps, and by this expresse Administration as Executor, he may be charged as Executor of his own wrong, albeit there be a lawfull Executor: and if a man die intestate, and a stranger intermeddle with the estate as before, and then the Administration is granted to another; in this case the stranger may be charged by any creditor or Legatee as Executor of his own wrong for his intermeddling before the Administration granted; for the rightfull Executor or Administrator shall be charged with no more then what doth come in to his hands. And if an Administration be granted afterwards to any one that hath so intermeddled with the goods before; this will not purge the wrong done before; and therefore in this Case a Creditor may charge him as Executor of his own wrong, or as a lawfull Administrator at his election, Coo 5. 33. Kelw 59. Pascb 39 Elizabeth. Coo B. Bradbury versus Reynolds. See more, Brownl 1. part 103. 2. part 184. 185.

The Administrator, durante minori etate, is a speciall kind of Administrator, and is in case where an Infant under the age of 17 years (for at that age an Infant is capable of an Executorship) is made an Executor, and the administration of the goods (as the manner is in that case) is committed to one or more of the next friend or friends of the Infant during his minority, which is untill he be of the age of seventeen years; he that hath such an Administration granted unto him is such an Administrator. And he is sometimes generall, i.e. when his administration is granted to him ad opus & usum of the Infant onely. In the first case, he hath as large a power as another Administrator, and therefore he may assent to a Legacy, albeit there be not Assets to pay Debts; he may sell any of the goods and chattels of the deceased, or give them away or the like, as another Administrator may do. Coo 5. 29. 6. 27. 9. 27.

But in the last case it is otherwise; for such a speciall Administrator can do little more then the Ordinary himself, and therefore he may not sell any of the goods or chattels of the deceased, except it be in case where they are like to perish, for funerall expences, or for payment of Debts, nor may he assent to a Legacy where there is not Assets to pay Debts &c. And this administration is ipso facto determined when the executor doth come to the age of seventeen years: And therefore if it be granted during the minority of four Executors, and one of them die, or come to the age of seventeen years, now is the Administration determined: And if the Executor be a woman and she take a husband that is seventeen years of age or upwards; in this case it seems the Administration is determined: and therefore also it is, that if such an Administration durante minori etate be granted after the Executor is seventeen years of age, the Administration is void, See more of this Brownl 1. part 31. 46, 47, 80. 101. 2. part 83. 148.

34. Administrator durante minori etate, what he is and his power and when it shall end.

35. Where an Administrator once committed by the Ordinary may be afterwards revoked; and what shall be said a Revocation of such an Administration, or not; and what acts done before shall stand in force, or not.

It hath been held that the Ordinary after he hath granted Administration of the Goods of a man Intestate to another, may afterwards without cause revoke the same and grant it to another, at his pleasure; and that if the Ordinary grant Letters of Administration to one, and after grant Letters of Administration to another, of the Goods of the same man, that hereby the second Letters of Administration are Ipso facto countermanded, albeit there be no words of Revocation in them. 4 H. 7. 14. Lit. Broo. Sect. 330. 34. H. 6. 14. Dyer 339. Broo. Administrator 7.

But it seems the Law is otherwise, and that after the Ordinary hath granted the Administration according to the charge and direction given him by the Statute, that he cannot afterwards revoke it, and grant it to another without cause; i.e. unlesse the first Administration be illegally granted, as when it is granted to a stranger, and not to the next of kin, or the like, or unlesse the first Administrator cannot, or will not administer; for in these cases he may without doubt grant the Administration to another. And yet in these cases where there is a former Administration granted regularly, all acts that the first Administrator doth lawfully execute and do as Administrator, as sale of Goods, payment or receipt of Debts, making Releases, and the like, are good, and shall bind the next and succeeding Administrator. And therefore, if the Ordinary after the death of a man Intestate, doth grant the Administration of his Goods to a stranger, and the next of kin doth sue by Citation to have it repealed, and the first Administrator hanging that Suit in the Spiritual Court, doth sell the Goods of purpose to defeat the second Administration, and after the first Letters of Administration are revoked by sentence, and the first sentence annulled, and the Administration is committed to another; in this case the second Administrator cannot recover these Goods or have any remedy for them. And yet perhaps if there be any fraud in the case, an Executor may have relief upon the Statute of 13 Eliz. But if the first Suit and sentence be by appeal avoided, then all that the first Administrator doth is void, and the second Administrator may recover the Goods notwithstanding the sale: And if the first Administration be upon condition, all the acts of the Administrator doth before the condition broken, are good; and therefore if he give or sell the Goods, the subsequent Administrator cannot avoid it. See the Stat. 21 H. 8. c. 5. Coe. 6. 18. New Book of Entries 38. Plow. 281. Coe. 6. 18, 19. Dyer 339. Coe. 6. 19.

If a man dye Intestate, and have not Bona notabilia, and the Bishop of the Diocese grant Letters of Administration to one, and after the Arch-bishop doth grant Letters of Administration to another; in this case the effect of the first Administration is suspended untill the other be repealed and declared by sentence to be void. If there be a Will, and it is concealed, and thereupon an Administration is granted, and after the Will is produced and proved; in this case the Administration is Ipso facto determined, and all the acts the Administrator hath done ab initio, are become void. See more in the next Question. See more Brownl. 2. part 83. Coe. 8. 135. Plow. 281. 9 H. 5. 5.

36 What Acts done by one Executor or Administrator, may be avoided by the subsequent Executor or Administrator, and what not.

If a Will be made by an Ideot, and an Executor appointed therein, and the Executor take upon him the Administration, and after the Will is avoided for the weakness of the Testator; in this case it seems that all the Acts the Executor doth before the avoidance of the Will are good and not to be avoided by the Administrator. Dyer.

If there be a Will made, and an Executor appointed, and the Ordinary cite the Executor to come in, and prove the Will, and he doth not come, and thereupon the Ordinary doth grant the Administration to another; in this case all acts done by the Administrator are good, and shall bind the Executor, if he may, and shall afterwards take upon him the Executorship. But otherwise it is where the Ordinary doth grant the Administration before the Executor be cited to appear, or before the time given him to take upon him the Administration; for in this case, nothing that he doth shall bind the Executor. 3 H. 7. 14.

When there is an Administration granted, and it is afterwards upon a Suit by condition only repealed; in this case all acts done by the first Administrator are good and shall bind the subsequent Administrator. Coe. 6. 18, 19. Plow. 282. Coe. 8. 143. 139.

But

But in case where the first Administration is upon a Suit by appeal by sentence annihilated and declared void, there all acts done by the first Administrator are void, and shall not bind the subsequent Administrator: And therefore if the Ordinary of the Diocese grant an Administration that doth belong to the Metropolitan to grant (in which case the Administration is void) all acts done by the Administrator are void, and may be avoided by the succeeding Administrator. But when the Administration doth belong to the Ordinary of the Diocese to grant, and the Metropolitan doth grant it (in which case it is only voidable) in that case, all acts upon and by virtue of the first Administration before the second Administration, are good.

If an Administration be granted to a stranger, and afterwards it is revoked and granted to the next of kin; in this case all lawfull acts done by the first Administrator before, and hanging the Suit, are good and unavoidable by the subsequent Administrator; and yet perhaps if the first Administrator waste the Goods, it may be he may be charged for this by the subsequent Administrator; or by a Creditor: Wilson versus Packman. M. 37. 38 Eliz. B.R.

Where the Executor by the Will is not to administer untill a certain time; in this case the Administration of all the Goods is to be granted untill that time; and all acts done by such an Administrator before that time are good, and shall bind the Executor. So where an Executor is made, or an Administration is granted upon condition, which is after broken, so that the Executorship or Administration is determined; yet in this case all acts done by him before this time are good. Plow. 281, 282. Co. 6. 19. 34 H. 6. 14.

If there be a false and a true Will, and the Executor of the false will prove this Will first, and afterwards the Executor of the true Will doth disprove and avoid the first Will; in this case also he may avoid all acts the first Executor doth. See more in Boownl. 2. part 80. 91. 2. part 147. 4 H. 7. 13. Plow 282.

The same Bars and Pleas regularly, that a man may have to actions brought by the Deceased himself in his life, a man may have to bar the action and Suit of his Executor or Administrator after his death. But an Executor or Administrator may have besides the same Pleas and Bars to Actions the Deceased might have had, as Non est factum; Per Durasse, Non Assumpsit, and the like; divers other Pleas and Bars to Actions in respect of his Estate and condition as Executor or Administrator: For if he never meddle with the Goods and Chattels of the Deceased, and yet he be sued as Executor or Administrator, he may plead Ne ungue, i. e. he did never intermeddle as Executor or Administrator; and if this be found for him, this will bar the Plaintiff: And if he do intermeddle and take upon him the Administration, he may plead if the case be so, that he cannot recover the Goods of the Deceased; for he shall be charged for no more then what he can get in his possession. Or he may plead that he hath fully administered all the Goods and Chattels of the Deceased, and hath nothing left to administer; or he may plead, that he hath paid so much of his own money as the Goods in his hands do amount unto. Or if he be sued for Debts due by Obligations, or such like Especialties entred into by the Deceased, he may plead that there are Debts due, and yet to pay on Judgments had against the Deceased, or that there are Debts due, and yet to pay on Recognizances or Statutes entred into by the Deceased, and that he hath no more then enough to satisfy them: Or he may plead that there are Judgments had against him for other Debts of the Deceased in equal degree with the Debt sued for, and that he has no more then enough to discharge them: so as these former Debts, on, and for which these Judgments were had and Statutes given, be bona fide due, and the Judgments, Recognizances, and Statutes in truth continued for the same; for if there be any fraud in the case, viz. that either the Judgments, Recognizances, or Statutes, were at first entred into, or are afterwards continued of purpose to deceive or delay others of their due Debts, when either the Debt is satisfied, or compounded for lesse, or the like; in these cases, this Plea will not serve; but in this matter being disclosed by the Plaintiffs pleading he will avoid it. Co. 5. 33. Dyer 30. 80. Co. 8. 132. 134. 21 H. 6. 19. Dyer 2. 27 H. 8. 6. Co. 9. 108. 2 H. 4. 21. Brownl. 2. part 118, 19.

37. What shall be said a good bar in Debt, or other Action brought by, or against an Executor or Administrator, and v. not.

And

And if he be sued for a Debt due upon a simple Contract or promise of the Testator, he may plead there are Debts to pay due by Obligations and other Especialties entred into by the Deceased; and that he hath no more then enough to satisfie those Debts, and this will bar the Plaintiff in his action: And therefore if an Executor or Administrator plead a Judgment in Bar of an action of Debt upon an Obligation, he must shew also that the Suit whereupon the Judgment was had, was upon an Obligation; for if it were on a simple Contract, it is no Bar. And if the Executor be sued for Debt on an Obligation, he may plead he made voluntary payment of other Debts due upon Obligations, or gave new security for them in his own name before the Suit began, and that he hath no more then enough to satisfie them. But to plead such a voluntary payment or giving of new security after Suits begun upon this Obligation now in Suit is no good Plea.

If an Action be brought against an Executor or Administrator upon an Especialty for money, it is no good Plea in Bar of this action to plead a Statute or Recognizance with Defeasance to perform Covenants when there is no Covenant broken.

If a Suit be against an Executor or Administrator for a Legacy, it seems it is no good Plea to plead a Bond with Condition for performance of Covenants, or for the doing of any other collaterall thing that is contingent only, and not yet broken. It is no good Plea in an action for an Executor or Administrator to say, that the Deceased was Out-lawed. See more *Brownl. 142. pl. 57. 141. pl. 54. 1. part 19. 75. 50. 80. 2. part 118, 119. 153. 38. Where and in what case an Executor or Administrator shall be charged by his own act or pleading upon his owne Goods, and where execution shall be de bonis propriis & where not.

An Executor or Administrator may make himself chargable of his own Goods, either by omission, as when he being sued upon an Obligation, or the like, and there is a Judgment against him or the Deceased in force, and he hath but enough to satisfie that Judgment, and he doth not plead this in Bar of the present action, but doth suffer the Plaintiff to recover against him; in this case he must satisfie this second Debt out of his own Estate; or by Commission, and that either by doing, as when he doth any act that is a waste in him, and thereupon a Devastavit is returned against him, for in this case he must answer so much as he hath wasted out of his own Estate; or by saying, as when a Suit is against, and he doth plead such a false Plea therein as doth tend to the perpetuall Bar of the Plaintiff in the action, and yet it is of a thing that doth lye within his perfect knowledge, as when he doth plead he is not Executor, nor did ever administer as Executor, and upon tryall of this Issue against him it be found he is a rightfull or wrongfull Executor; in this case he must satisfie this Debt out of his own Estate whether he have assets or not, and the Execution had upon the Judgment had in this Suit shall be De bonis propriis. 2 H. 6. 12. Dyer 185. 80. Coe. 9. 90. 94. 9 H. 6. 57. 34 H. 6. 45. Broo. Executor 141. 105. Lit. Broo. Sect. 29. Kelt. 61. Broo. Executors 164.

And if an Executor or Administrator be sued, and he plead to the action plene administravit, and upon tryall it is found against him; in this case if he have any of the Goods of the Deceased left in his hand, the execution shall be of them, but if he have none of the Goods of the Deceased left, the execution shall be, and he shall be charged for so much as is found to be in his hands de bonis propriis.

But where he is sued upon a promise made by the Testator, and he plead non assumpsit to it, and where he sued upon a Deed made by the Testator, and he plead non est factum to it, or the like; and these Issues upon tryall are found against him: or when he shall confesse the action, or suffer a Judgment to go by default against him, or plead any vaine Plea; in all these cases he shall not be chargable of his own Estate, neither shall the Judgment and Execution in these cases be de bonis propriis, but de bonis Testatoris only for the Debt, and de bonis propriis for the Costs: And yet if an Executor or Administrator shall entreat a Creditor to forbear his Debt untill a day, and then promise to pay him, by this promise he hath made himselfe chargable as for his owne Debt, howbeit it shall be allowed him upon his Account.

But

But in all these cases, and such like, where a man shall be charged of his own Estate, and the execution shall be de bonis propriis, it seems the Judgment is alwaies de bonis Testatoris, and the course is this, the first Execution is against the Executor de bonis Testatoris, and not de bonis propriis: And after a Devastavit returned by the Sheriff against the Executor or Administrator, and not before, a new Execution is directed to the Sheriff to levy the Debt de bonis Testatoris; and if there be none of them to be found in his hands, then to levy them de bonis propriis.

And therefore if an Executor or Administrator be sued by a Creditor, and the Executor or Administrator plead a Plenè administravit generally, or plead specially that he hath no more but to satisfie a Judgment or the like, and upon tryall this Issue is found against him, and it is found he hath in all or part enough to satisfie the Debt; in these cases the Judgment is de bonis Testatoris, and thereupon an Execution is (as in other cases) to levy the Debt de bonis Testatoris in the hands of the Executor or Administrator, and for the Costs de bonis propriis. And upon the return of the Sheriff a speciall Execution doth issue forth to levy the money de bonis Testatoris: Et si constare poterit, that he hath wasted the Goods, then that he shall make the Execution de bonis propriis. And hereupon also the Plaintiff may if he will have a Capias against the body, or an Elegit against the Lands of the Executor or Administrator, and no other course of proceeding can or may be had against the Executor or Administrator in this case. Atworths case, Mich 38, 39 Eliz. 34 H. 6. 45. 46 Ed. 3. 9. Fitz. Executor 9. Coo. 5. 32. 8. 134. Dyer 185. 32.

An action of Debt was brought against two Executors, and one of them did appeare and confesse the action, and the other made default, and thereupon Judgment was given to recover against them both de bonis Testatoris in their hands, and Execution accordingly: and upon this Execution the Sheriff did return a Devastavit against the Executor that made default only, and hereupon a Scire facias went out against him alone, and afterward an Execution against him alone de bonis propriis. See more in Brownl. 2. part. 24. 33. 50 76. 78. 116. 2. part. 187. Dyer 210.

Assets in this case is said to be where one dieth indebted, and maketh his Executor, or dieth intestate, and the Executor or Administrator hath sufficient in Goods or Chattels, or other profits to pay the Debts or some part thereof; this is said assets in his hands, and for so much he shall be charged. Termes of the Law. Coo. super Lit. 374.

All those Goods, and Chattels, Actions, and Commodities which were the Deceaseds in right of action or possession as his own, and so continued to the time of his death, and which after his death the Executor or Administrator doth get into his hands, as duly belonging to him in the right of his Executorship and Administration, and all such things as do come to the Executor and Administrator in lieu or by reason of that, and nothing else shall be said to be assets in the hands of the Executor or Administrator to make him chargeable to a Creditor or Legatee. And herein these things are to be known.

Assets, Quid.

37 What shall be said to be Assets in the hands of an Executor or Administrator to charge him or not.

1. That Assets in the hands of one of the Executors shall be said to be assets in the hands of all the Executors. Ke/w. 51.

2. That Assets in any part of the World shall be said to be Assets in every part of the World: and therefore if that point be in issue, and it appear that there is Assets in the hands of any one of the Executors, or in any County or place whatsoever, the Jury must find that there is Assets. Coo. 6. 47.

3. All Goods and Chattels of what nature or kind whatsoever that are valuable, as Oxen, Kine, Corne, &c. shall be esteemed Assets. But such things as are not valuable, as a Presentation to a Church, and the like, shall not be accounted Assets. Coo. super Lit. 388.

4. All the Goods and Chattels that come to the Executor or Administrator in the right of their Executorship or Administration, and that there are by Law given to them by vertue thereof in the right of the Deceased (for which, see before before (at Numb. 25.) and which are in possession shall be esteemed Assets in his hands. And therefore if a Feoffment be made to the use of the Feoffor for life, and after to the use of his Executors and Assignes for twenty years; in this case it seems this twenty years shall be said to be Assets in the hands of the Executor of the Feoffor. And Goods pledged to the Deceased and not redeemed, or the money where-with it is redeemed, when it is redeemed, shall be said to be Assets in the hands of the Executor or Administrator. And if the Deceased doth appoint that the Executors shall sell his Land to pay his Debts, the money that is made of the Land when it is sold, shall be said to be Assets in his hands. Coo. super Lit. 388. 5. 34. Dyer 362. Kelw. 63. Coo. super Lit. 44. Dyer 362. 20 H. 7. 4. Broo. Assets 12. See before Numb.

5. All the Goods and Chattels in action or in possibility at the time of the death of the Deceased that are afterwards recovered, and are gotten in possession into the hands of the Executor or Administrator when they are so recovered, are esteemed Assets in his hands. But they are never accounted Assets untill they are recovered and come in possession; and therefore if there be Debts owing to the Deceased upon Statutes or Obligations, or otherwise, these are never esteemed Assets in the hands of the Executor or Administrator untill he hath recovered them. Coo. super Lit. 124. 5. 31. Broo. Assets 24. Dyer 264. 121. 2 H. 4. 21. Coo 6. 58 Kelw. 63. Dyer 362.

So likewise if there be debt or damages recovered by a Judgment had by the Deceased, but no execution is done untill execution be made; this shall not be esteemed Assets in the hands of the Executor or Administrator.

So if the Executor bring an action of Trespasse against another De bonis affectatis in vita Testatoris, and he have a Judgment for damages; in this case untill he hath recovered it by execution, it shall not be esteemed Assets in his hands. And if the Judgment be erroneous, and the execution avoidable; in this case albeit it be recovered and gotten in possession, yet it shall not be esteemed Assets. And therefore if one sue another and recover against him as Administrator of I. S. and after a Testament made by I. S. is produced and proved, and thereby an Executor is made; in this case the money recovered by the Administrator shall not be said to be Assets in his hands as to any of the Creditors, because the Executor may recover it from him, or the Debtor will have it again. And if the Executor or Administrator do never recover and get the thing into his possession, he shall never be charged, especially there where he hath done his best to get it and cannot. If one covenant to make a Lease for years to the Deceased his Executors or Administrators, and after his death the Lease is made to the Executor or Administrator accordingly; in this case this Lease shall be said to be Assets in his hands, and he shall be chargeable for so much to any Creditor. And whatsoever the Executor or Administrator must be forced to sue for by the name of Executor or Administrator being recovered, shall be esteemed Assets in his hands. Curia Mich. 13. B. R. Coo. 1. 98. Plow. 84. 292. Coo. 5. 34.

6. Albeit the thing be extinct and gone as to the Executor and Administrator himself, yet it may have his being and be accounted Assets as to the Creditors and Legatees. And therefore if an Executor or an Administrator have a Lease for years of Land in the right of the Deceased, and afterwards he doth purchase the Fee-simple of the Land (whereby the Lease is drowned) yet in this case this Lease shall continue to be Assets as to the Creditors and Legatees still. Coo. 1. 87. Broo. Leases. 63.

And if the Debtee make the Debtor his Executor, or the Debtee dye Intestate, and the Administration is committed to the Debtor; in these cases this Debt shall be said to continue, and shall be esteemed Assets for so much as to other Creditors. And if a Woman Executrix have Goods worth twenty pounds, and she marry with one of the Creditors to whom twenty pounds is owing; in this case it seems the Husband may not retain the Goods to pay himself, but they shall be Assets to other Creditors. And yet if the Debtor make the Debtee his Executor, he may retain so much as to satisfie his own Debt, and that he doth so retain shall not be said to be Assets in his hands as to any other Creditor.

And

And if I. S. have goods to the value of 20*l.* and he is bound to B. and C. in 20*l.* a piece, and he dieth intestate, and after D. doth administer, and then B. dyeth and maketh D. his executor; in this case D. may retain this to satisfy his own debt, and it shall not be said to be assets in his hands as to any other. Barnett's case, Hill. 8. fud. Plow: 184.

7. The goods and chattels of other men in the hands of the executor or administrator that were in possession of the deceased, if he had no right to them, or if he had, and they do not belong to the executors, will not make the executor or administrator chargeable; for these shall not be esteemed assets in his hands. And therefore if the goods of another man be amongst the goods of the deceased, and these come all together into the hands of the executor or administrator; these goods that are the goods of another shall not be said to be assets in the hands of the executor or administrator. And if the executor doth receive a rent that doth belong to the heir, this rent shall not be said to be assets in his hands: and hence it is that if the deceased were outlawed at the time of his death, that his goods and chattels are not to be accounted assets, for they are none of his. Kelw 63. Co. 6. 58. Dier. 362. Doffi & St. lib. 2. cap. 3.

8. If an executor of his own wrong, to whom 20*l.* is owing, doth enter upon so much of the goods of the deceased as is worth 20*l.* intending to pay himself; this shall be esteemed assets in his hands to make him chargeable for so much to any Creditor or Legatee. Co. 5. 30. Dier 2:

9. If the deceased have goods worth 20*l.* and owe 20*l.* to A. and 10*l.* to B. and he compound with A. for 10*l.* in this case he shall be said to have assets, and be charged to pay the debt of B. also. 27 H. 8. 6.

10. If a man have a Lease for years worth 20*l.* per annum at the rent of 5*l.* and he die; in this case not the whole value of the land, but so much as is above the rent shall be said to be assets in the hands of the executor or administrator. See more in Brownlows: Rep. 1. parts 33: 76. 2 parts. 47.

If an executor have goods of 20*l.* value, and he take up an obligation of the testator of 20*l.* and pay the money, now the property of this is in him, and this is not assets to any other. So if he give his owne body, or another for him to the creditor of the Testator for 20*l.* But a promise to pay the 20*l.* will not discharge the Assets; Goldsb: 79. Pl. 15: If one devise his land to his Executors for years, this is Assets in their hands. But if he devise that they shall sell his land; it is not assets till it be sold; and the money received for it shall be Assets. Brownl. 2 parts. 47.

The Probate of a Testament is the producing and insinuating of it before the Ecclesiasticall Iudge, Ordinary of the place where the party dyeth, or other that hath power to take the same. And this is done in two sorts, either in common Form, i. e. upon the oath of the executor or party exhibiting it upon his credulity: that the Will exhibited is the last will and Testament of the party deceased, which is the ordinary course; and this the Ordinary may accept if he will. Or per testes, i. e. Which is when over and besides his oath he doth also produce witnesses or maketh other proof to confirm the same, and that in the presence of such as may pretend any interest in the goods of the deceased, or at the least in their absence after they have been lawfully summoned to see such a Will proved if they think good. And this course is used only where there is a suspicion of the Will, and the Caveat is entered, or where there is a feare of contention and strife between the kindred & friends of the party deceased about his goods; for a Will proved in common form may be called into question at any time thirty years after; and when the Will is thus exhibited into the Bishops Court, the same is to be kept by his Officers, and the Copy thereof in parchment under the Bishops Seale of his office to be certified and delivered, which parchment so sealed is called the will proved. Swinsb. 261. 264.

The probate of the will (as having respect to the goods and chattels) is in some respect necessary; for howsoever as touching any free hold of lands devised it is not all material, and howsoever the Executor before Probate may receive and release debts and do most other acts as Executor, yet he cannot sue for any debt due to the Testator. Co. super Litt. 292. Perk. Sect. 481.

41. Where the Probate of a
Will is necessary, and where not; & by and before whom.
And in what time it must be proved;

And if the Executor delay the Probate, the ordinary may by process compell him to come in and accept or refuse of the Executorship. And when it is proved it must be proved by the Executors or one of them at least; and if all the goods of the deceased be within the same Diocess wherein he lived and dyed, the Executor must prove it before the ordinary of the Diocess, or before his lawfull Commissary or Deputy, or before the Archdeacon or his deputy or Commissary (as their composition is) or if the goods be in a Peculiar, then before him that is Judge of that Peculiar; or if the goods be within two Peculiars then before the Ordinary of the Diocess wherein these two Peculiars lye. But if there be bona notabilia in the case, viz. that the Testator have goods or chattels at the time of his death of the value of 5l. or more lying in two or more Counties, or have good debts upon Especialties (as some say) for otherwise they follow the person; or have any (Especialties as other say) lying in other Counties for debt, so that there be of goods and chattels or good debts to the value of 5l. in any other Diocess then that wherein the Testator led his life and dyed, then the Probate doth belong to the Arch-bishop of that Diocess wherein it is, unless the Ordinary of the same diocess have the Probate by composition between him and the Metropolitan; for otherwise there must be severall Probates for the goods in every Diocess (as anciently was used in these cases.) But if a man dye in his journey in another Diocess, and have more then 5l. goods about him, this shall not be said to be bona notabilia, but the Will may be proved before the Ordinary of the place where the deceased lived and his Estate doth lie. And except it be in cases where men have bona notabilia, the Officers of the Courts of the Metropolitans are not to cite men out of their own Diocess; and to discover this matter, it is the duty of the Ordinary of the Diocess, when any man comes to prove a Will, to give him an Oath, and examine him whether he know of, or doe believe, there are any goods to the value of 5l. lying in any other Diocess at the time of the Testators death, and if he hear of any to dismiss them to the Prerogative Court, and to give them notice of it. Also in some places, the Lords of mannors have the probate of all the Wills within their Mannor by custome of the place; and in those places it must be proved there, and not elsewhere. And when an Executor is bound to prove the Will before the ordinary as before, the ordinary may give him what time to doe it he doth think fit, and when he doth prove it, the Ordinary doth take an Oath of him to administer the goods faithfully, and to take bond of him also if he please; but this some doe omit. CHAP. CLVII.

Of a Parson and Vicar, his Parsonage or Vicarage, and the Profits belonging to them. Of Tithes, and their Kinde. Of the nature of Tithes, and how they are grantable. Who must pay Tithes at this day, and to whom, and who are capable of receiving and retaining of Tithes, and by what Title, and how. Of what things Tithe is to be paid, and of what not, and out of what Land, and how. When, where, and how Tithes payable must be paid and set forth, and when the Parson, &c. may take them? Who must pay Tithe that is to be paid, and may be sued for it? And to whom the Tithe must be paid? Which way the Owner of Tithes, and such like things, may recover them being detained. In what case, and how a person or place may be quit and discharged of Tithes; and what shall be a good discharge, or not? Of other Profits which the Parson and Vicar doth claim. What Tithes the Parson, and what the Vicar shall have.

Of a Parson and Vicar, his Parsonage or Vicarage, and the Profits belonging to them.

He Parson at first was he that had the Charge of a Parishi Church, and was called the Rector of a Church; but he is most properly so called, that hath a Parsonage where there is a Vicarage endowed.

The Vicarage is a certain Portion of the Parsonage allowed to the Vicar for his Maintenance. And this Portion in some places is a sum of money certain: In other places it is a part of the Tithes in kinde, and commonly the smaller Tithes; but in some few places the Vicar hath part of the great Tithes also: And he that hath the right to, and possession of this, is called the Vicar; and he that hath the other part is called the Parson, who in some Parishes is the Minister of the place, one they call a Clergy-man or Minister; and in other places he is a Lay-man, where it is an Impropriation.

The Profits and Fruits of a Parsonage or Vicarage, belonging to the Parson or Vicar, are his Glebe Land, (if there be any) Oblations, Obventions, Offerings and Tithes.

The Glebe is that Portion of Land, Meadow, or Pasture, that is belonging to, and parcel of the Parsonage or Vicarage, over and above the Tithes.

Oblations, Obventions and Offerings seem to be but one thing, and that which was called meerly Spiritual. The Oblations were said to be such things Real or Personal as were offered to God and his Church, by Testament or otherwise; and Obventions did include Oblations, and other things now unknown and lost amongst us; and of this nature it seems the Mortuary is: And the other Profits are the Tithes.

of

Of Tithes, and their kinds

What they are.

Their kinds.

Tithes are a certain part of the fruit or Lawful increase of the earth, Beasts, or mens labours, which in most places, and of most things, is the tenth part, and hath been by the Law given to the Ministers of the Gospel, in recompence of their labour in the execution of their Office.

There are three sorts of Tithes. Some of them are Predial, that is, such as come in, and arise yearly of the fruit and profit of the earth: such as are Wood, Corn, Grain, Hay, the seed of Rape, Parsley, Hops, Saffron, Wood, Flax, Hemp, darnel or cockle, Fennel, Annise, and the like. Such are the fruits of Trees, as Apples, Pears, Plums, Nuts, Cherries, Wardens, Grapes, Mast, Acornes, and the like. Such also (as is before said) are Herbs, as Rue, Sage, Mint, and the like.

Some of them are Personal, and they are such as arise and grow due by the profits that come by mans honest labour and industry in some personal work, Artifice or Negotiation, as by buying, selling, Merchandizing; or by the labour of handicrafts men, such as are Carpenters, Masons, Fishers, Fowlers, Hunters, and the like. So offerings are said to be personal Tithes.

And some Tithes are said to be mixt, such are the profits of some things that arise partly from the labour and care of men, and partly from the earth where the things are fed, of this sort are Cattle, as their young Calves, Lambs, Kids, Roes, the Wool of Sheep, Milk and Cheese of Cowes; so the Eggs and Chickens of Hens, Geese, Ducks, and Swans, and the like.

Amongst Predial Tithes, some of them are said to be greater, as Wood, Corn, Hay, and the like. And some of them are lessor, as the Tithe of Herbs, Flax, Hemp, and the like. And all these of the one sort and of the other, the dispute is under the names of Tithes of Harvest Fruits, of Woods felled, and preserved to grow again; of Wood not in use nor apt for Timber, but for Fire; of Trees planted for fencing of Grounds, in Fields, Pastures, and Hedggrowes; of Turves growing in fennish and moorish Grounds; of pasture ground, of Hay, of Wool, of Lambs, of Calves, of Pigs, of Colts, of Milk, of Cheese, of Fruits, of Trees, of Seeds, Hemp, Flax, onions, Rape, of Pot-Herbs, of Mast of Beech or Oak, of Milks driven by wind or water, of Parks, Warrens, Pools, ponds, of Wild Beasts under custody, &c. of Dove-Cotes or Dove-Houses, of Bees, of Fowlings, of Huntings, of Fishings, of Swans, of Geese, of Eggs, of Crafts and Manual occupations, of Trade by water, Merchandize, &c. And about all these things especially are all the Questions and cases that follow concerning this subject.

Tithes what.

A portion of Tithes are Tithes that were at the first separated and given by the Devotion of a Parishoner, and were not derived out of the Parsonage. And therefore cannot be swallowed up againe by the Parsonage, as a vicarage may be, but it will be distinct still.

Of the nature of Tithes, and how they are grantable.

Tithes by our Law were accounted an Ecclesiastical Inheritance, and collateral to the state of the Land out of which they come, which of common right are to be paid out of all lands, Meadows and Pastures, and whithof their proper nature originally were due only to Ecclesiastical persons by Ecclesiastical Law, and till they were severed, were esteemed merely Ecclesiastical for the substruction whereof, no remedy was given by the Common Law. Neither can any unity of possession extinguish or suspend them, but they remain still in esse, and might be devised or let to any spiritual person. And if a Parson impropriate had inclosed another of part of his Glebe, or had made a Lease of it to him, yet he should have had Tithe thereof still, so that a man might have had Tithe against his own Feoffment, for they were not claimed in respect of any ownership in the Land, but ex debito, by the Law of God. So if a Parson purchase Land within his Rectory. And after lease the Parsonage, the Lessee shall have Tithe of this new purchased Land. And a Lay-man by the Common Law, Law, could not have had an Inheritance descendable and grantable of Tithes as of other Temporal possessions, neither will they pass by the same words in Grants as other Temporal possessions will do. And therefore if one grant a ground cum proficuis & commoditatibus eidem pertinentibus, the Tithes will not pass by this. But now the Law is changed herein, for they and other Ecclesiastical Duties, especially such as came to the Crown by the Statutes of 27 H. 8. 31 H. 8. 1. Ed. 6. are by those Statutes, and the Statutes of 32 H. 8. and 1. & 2 Phil. & Mar. in the hands of Laymen Temporal Inheritances, and are of the nature of other Land; it shall be accounted Assets in the hands of an Heir. The wife shall be endowed of it, the husband tenant by the courtlesie for them. real actions may be brought, and they have all other incidents of Lay-Inheritances. Cook 11. 14. Dier 43. Cook 1. 3. Cook upon Litt. 5. 159.

By way of agreement Tithes may pass for years without deed, but not by way of lease without a deed. But a lease may be for one year of Tithes without deed. Hughes Rep. 354. See Grants.

Who must pay Tithes at this day, and to whom, and who are capable of receiving and retaining of Tithes, and by what Titles, and how.

Tithes by the Common Law are due of common right out of all things; and every man at this day. Alien and Denizen, is bound to pay the same, that cannot shew a special exemption and freedom, by composition, custome, prescription, or some act of Parliament. So the Kings have paid no Tithes sometimes for their Lands in their own hands. So neither the Lord Protector nor his Patentees are to pay Tithes for some of their ancient Forrests. Lands that lye in no Parish, or between to parishes; this is not to pay Tithes. And so the Vicar in some places doth pay no Tithes to the Parson, so long as his Vicarage Land is occupied by himself. Cro. Jur. 60. Cook 2. 44. Broo. Dismes. 10. And it is said, if a Bishop had held Land discharged of Tithes, and made Feoffment or Lease of it, that his Lessee or Feoffee shall not pay for it. Cook 2. 44.

And as to the persons to whom, and capable of receipt of Tithes, albeit by the common Law anciently, no Lay-person was capable of them, save only by way of discharge; as where a Parishioner had compounded with the Vicar or Parson for his owne Tithes, yet at this day any man may have them as other Lay-Inheritances; and Lay-men (as they call them) as well as clergy men, have them. And to make Clergy men capable of them, there were heretofore many things required, as Examination and Allowance by the Bishop, subscription to the Articles of Religion, Institution and induction into the parsonage or Vicarage, to which the Tithes belong. But in these things the Lawes are changed at this day. And therefore it seems such a person once capable of Tithes, cannot be made incapable afterwards, as heretofore, unless it be where he hath one Benefice of 8l. a year, and he take another; for in this case it seems he shall lose the first. But for this, see the Statutes of 21 H. 8. 13. 28 H. 8. 13. Cook 4. 79. & 6. 20.

Pluralitie.

A Parson or Vicar may have Tithes out of his Parish, by a special Prescription. Or he may prescribe to have a sum of Money for tithes within his Parish of any certain man there in lieu of Tithes. And another man also may have Title to a portion of Tithes by Prescription. Bro. 85. Cook 11. 19. Book of Entries. N. B. f. 9. Cook 2. 45. Cook 4. 49. And a man may have his own Tithes of the Parson by agreement between them, for the Parsons life; or how they please.

Prescription.

Of what things Tithes is to be paid, and of what not, and out of what Land, and how.

For Answer to this Question take these Generall rules 1. A man shall pay Tithes of his ground whether he doe manure it or not. 2. When a Parson doth any thing which by Law he is not compellable to doe, which doth turne to the benefit of the Parson, there he shall not have Tithes of the thing in lieu whereof this is done.

Of Trees and

32 H. 8. 7. And so it is to be paid for, and out of all things within (not without) the Parish; that arise, grow, and happen from year to year by the Act of God alone, or by the Act of God and man together: But more particularly, all Lands are to pay Tithe of what nature soever it is, Errable Meadow, or Pasture.

All sorts of Trees, but Timber Trees are to pay Tithe (that is) their tenth of increase, living or dead, used or sold by the owner, for the body, Branches, Bark, Fruit, Root, and Branches that grow out of the Root. And within this Rule all Fruit-trees, as Apple-trees, Pear-trees, Nut-trees, Walnut-trees, and the like, are to yield the tenth of their increase of fruit yearly; and if they be cut down, the tenth of the body, whether sold or kept; and if they be pared, the tenth of their parings, whether sold or kept. So Tithe is to be paid of the fruit, body, bark and branches of all other Trees not apt to Timber, as Willows, Sallows, though they be above twenty years growth, or of any age whatsoever, and were never cut before: So also Tithe is to be paid of Silva cedua; that is, Under-woods, and Coppices felled and preserved to grow again, and which by good Husbandry may grow again. And of all these things the Parson is to have the tenth part, as the owner hath, and at the time when the owner doth receive his nine parts.

For Wood cut
use.

But of the Under-woods of Coppices, parings of Fruit-trees, or other Trees cut onely for Mounds, or for Plough-geer, for hedging and fencing of the Corn-fields or other grounds within the Parish, or for fuel for the maintenance of the Plough or Pale, no Tithe is to be paid for it, although the Vicar have the Tithe Wood, and the Parson the Tithe of the places inclosed. Nor is Tithe to be paid of Under-woods, which are digged up by the Roots: Nor (as it seems) for the Wood of Coppices or Trees that a man doth cut or spend in his own house-keeping, though he spend much; by Hobard Chief Justice. But if the Parson can alledge a special custome for it, he may have Tithe for this also, M. 4 Jac. B. R. March 58. pl. 89.

Timber.

But for Timber Trees, such as are Oak, Ash, and Elm, which are esteemed Timber after they are twenty years old in all Countries; and Beech, Horse-beech, Hornbeam, Maple, Aspe, and Hazle, any of which may be, and are esteemed Timber in some Countries, as the usage of the Countrey, or the plenty or scarcity of other Timber there, is; for these, either living or dead, for their bodies, branches, bark, roots, or germines that grow out of them no Tithe is to be paid at all, in any case; but Tithe is to be paid for all this Timber-wood, if it be cut within twenty years after the first planting of it: No Tithe shall be paid of Aspe in any Countrey, Brownl. 161.

For the opening whereof (in relation to Wood and Trees) further; these things are to be known.

1. If the Parson have Tithe of the Fruit of a Tree, and the same year the owner doth fell the Tree, and make it into Billets or Faggots; in this case the Parson shall not have Tithe for the Tree; for it is a Rule, That he must not have Tithe of one thing twice in one year. 2. Beech in a Countrey where there is abundance of it, is not to be accounted Timber, nor to be Tithe-free, 16 Jac. Co. B. Pinders case. 3. Cherrytrees in Buckinghamshire have bin adjudged Timber and Tithe-free, Pasche, 17 Jac. B. R. 4. If a man lop a Tree under twenty years growth, and after suffer the body to grow past twenty years growth, and then lop it again; in this case no Tithe shall be paid for it, though it were not Tithe-free at the first cutting. Ca. B. by the whole Court, Brownl. 1 part. 33. 5. If Wood be cut to make Hedges, which is not tithable, and there be a little remaining or left of it, no Tithe shall be paid for this remnant. 6. If Wood be cut down and employed for Hop-poles, where the Parson or Vicar hath Tithe Hops; in this case he shall not have Tithe of the Hop-poles. 7. If a great Wood doth consist for the most part of Under-wood, which is tithable, and some great Trees of Beeches or other Wood, grow scattering amongst them; in this case Tithe may be paid, and must be, unless the usage be otherwise of all both great and small together. And so if a Wood do consist for the most part of Timber-trees, and there is some small parcel of Under-wood or Bushes growing in the same Wood: No Tithe shall be paid for this Under-wood or Bushes. Trist. 19. Jac. B. R. Adjudg. 16 Jac. in C. B. Leonards case. 8. No Tithe is to be paid of Common of Estovers, the Wood that he burns in his House. For Wood cut for house-boote hedg-boote, plough-boote cart-boote, and fire-boote. Goldsb. Pl 93.

See for all these matters, within this point of trees and wood, Cook Rep. 11. 48, 49. 81 Plow. 470. Brownlow's Rep. 1 Part. 94 2 Part. 150. D. & St. 169. Where and how this is to be paid and delivered, See more in Chap. 5. Sect. 1.

No Tithes are to be paid of Mines or Quarries, Iron, brass, Tin, Lead, Coals, Stone, Tile, Brick, Lime, Gravel, Marle, Chalk, Clay, and the like, which a man doth find and make in his own Land, for they are parcel of the inheritance, and the Parson or Vicar hath tithes of the grass and corn upon the ground; and it is a rule, the Land must not pay a double Tithe; and besides it is not a yearly profit. Register 51. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 53. 9 Brou. Dismiss. 18.

No Tithes regularly are to be paid for houses of habitation, nor of any rent, reserved upon any demise of them, for tithes are to be paid of things that renew yearly by the Act of God. Of Houses.

But by a special custome, or by an act of Parliament, as in London, where the Parsons have 2s. 6d. out of every pound rent in lieu of Tithe, there it is good enough, Cook 11. 16. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 53. 37 Hen. 8. Ch. 12

If any barren heath, or waste ground, that is barren in his own Nature, and that cannot be fitted for husbandry without an extraordinary charge, although it may pay Tithe of wool, or Lamb, or other things, or the Tithe that it formerly paid, yet it shall pay no Tithe of corn for seven years after they have by their Husbandry improved it, and made it fit for tillage. But if a wood be grubbed up, and made fit to plough, this must pay Tithe presently. So if it become barren by a sudden accident, of inundation, or the like, or by being overgrown with bushes or the like, and it be reduced, this must pay Tithe presently. M. 11. Jac. C. B. Sharringtons Case. Dier. 170. 2 Ed. 6. Ch. 13. Of barren heath & waste ground.

Tithes are to be paid for all new Corn-mills, be they wind or water Mills; and for fulling, Paper, or Apple-mills that are common and publick mills; and whether they be driven by wind or water, some Tithe or other is to be paid for them. But for an old corn mill, that no tithe was ever paid for, no Tithe is to be paid, except personal tithe, as for a trade of profit, and so it will be for the other Mills. But see how it is to be paid Chap. 5. Sect. 1. Of Mills:

Tithes are to be paid of turves that grow in fennish and moorish grounds, when they are used for firing. Of Turves:

Tithes shall be paid of heath, furs and broom, unless the owner can prescribe, or make good a special custome of payment of milk and calves, &c. of the cattel kept upon the ground, M. 29 El. B. R. Adjudge. Of heath, furs, and broom.

Tithe is to be paid of the grass growing on the ground whether it be cut for hay or eat by cattle, to be set out according to the custome of the place. And as to this kind of Tithe these things are to be known. Sect. 3. Of grass, cut or eaten. Rate-Tithe:

1. A Rate-Tithe is to be paid according to the custome of the place for the feeding of Sheep and all other Cattel, (save only Oxen that labour, and the young cattel that are bred for Oxen or Cows) as for horses and Cattel that are fatted; for tithe must be paid for these, for the pasture and profit of the cattel, whether they go on the Common or elsewhere.

2. If two Parishes together have Common because of vicinage, and the cattel of the one side do stray to the other side, and there abide; in this case no tithe shall be paid for this to the Parson of the parish where the Cattel do stray, but to the Parson of the other parish. So if sheep stray out of one into another parish, and there Eane, no tithe is to be paid for this to the Parson of that place; but if they go there by the space of one Month or more, for this a rate-tithe must be paid to that place where they are for a month together. And so in all cases where sheep go awhile in one, and another while in another parish. Trin. 7 Jac. B. R. Brou. Dismiss. 16.

3. If sheep after they be shorn dye before Easter next following, it is said no tithe shall be paid for their wooll unless the parson or vicar that claimes it, can alledge a speciall prescription for it. So no tithes are to be paid of the pelts or fells of sheep which die of the rot without a special prescription for it. Trin. 3 Car. B. R. Aston's Case.

4. Tithe

- Grounds let. 4. Tithe must be paid for all the grounds within the parish; and therefore if the grounds within the parish be let, or the herbage there be sold to a stranger out of the parish, the Tithe must be paid to the Parson, and that by the Owner of the Cattle, unless the course there be otherwise.
- Agistment or tack of cattel. 5. It seems tithe is to be paid for the Agistment, that is, tacking in of cattel of strangers in the parish. And that to be paid by the owner of the land that took them in, and not by the owner of the cattel; for the Parson may not know the owner of the cattel, 17. fac. B. R. But if there be any custome against it, this may prevent it, and make it payable by the stranger.
- Horses. 6. No tithe is to be paid for the herbage or feeding of riding horses, that the Parishoner doth use for his own riding. And if a man let out his pasture Lands, reserving the pasture for one horse to ride about his own affairs, or for husbandry, no tithe shall be paid for the pasture for this horse. But if a man keep or breed a horse or horses in his pasture to sell them, there a tithe shall be paid for the horses pasture. H. 15 fac. B. R. Hides Case.
- Plough cattel. 7. no tithe is to be paid for the grass eaten by the working Oxen or Horses about Husbandry, that are used in the parish about Husbandry. But if the Parishoner use them to other purposes within the parish, or for husbandry without the parish, it may be otherwise. M. 8. fac. Co. B. in Baxters case.
- Sett. 4. Cowes and barren cattel. 8. No tithe shall be paid for the feeding of Cowes that give Milk, nor for barren and dry cattel that are bred for the plough or paille, whether they feed in the inclosed or in the common grounds of the parish. But if a man keep cattel until they are ready for the pail or the plough, and then sel them, and make profit of them, in this case he is to pay Tithe for them; for if the owner feed his ground with cattel that bring no profit to the Parson, he must pay tithes for them. M. 8. fac. Co. B. Baxters Case. Trin. 9 fac. B. R. The whole Court.
- Strangers renting within the parish. 9. If a stranger feed a ground within the parish with his cattel that do bring no profit to the Parson or Vicar, he is to pay tithe for it. And therefore it seems reasonable, that though it be his own ground that is the stranger, and he feed them with his own cattel that do work in another parish, that he should pay as a stranger that doth rent a ground within the parish.
- Esmouth or after-pasture. 10. No tithe is to be paid of the Esmouth or after-pasture, after the grass is mowed and tithe hath been paid of it, unless by covin there hath been more grass left than is usual. Nor is there any tithe to be paid for the herbage of the cattel that eat up the same grass, unless there be some Fraud in the case. Pasch. 17. fac. Co. B. Adjudg. M. 6 fac. Co. B. Smiths Case.
11. No tithe is to be paid for the grass or herbage of the studs, or meers of ground at the lands end, and adjoining to the errable Land, where the land it selfe doth pay tithe.
- And so if lands lye fallow every second or third year, the owner shall pay no tithe for the pasture of this land, nor for feeding upon the stubble, albeit it bee fed with barren cattel. Pasch. 7. fac. Co. B. Adjudg. And yet if he keep it lay beyond the course of Husbandry, in this case he is to pay tithe again.
- Rakings of stubble. 12. No tithe is to be paid for the herbage of the ground whereon corn hath been sown that hath paid tithe, no more then for the rakings of the stubble, Pasch. 7. fac. Co. B. Adjudg.
13. If a man bring in a flock of Sheep to dung the land, and they come by night only and lye there, no tithe is to be paid for this; but if they feed there half their time, they will be tytheable.
- For the time when and how these tithes are to be paid and done, see in Chap. 3. Sett. 1.
- Sett. 5. Of corn sown. Tithes also are to be paid of all such things as come in yearly by the blessing of God, and the industry of the party together. And therefore Tithes must be paid of all kind of corn sown upon the ground; as Wheat, Rye, Barly, Beans, Pease, and the like, to be set out after the custome of the place. So also tithe must be paid of Plants, Herbs, and seeds of Woad, Saffron, Flax, Hemp, and the like. Brownl. 1 part. 149 Pl. 75.

And as to this, these things are to be known:

1. No Tithe is to be paid for the after-rakings, or stubble of corn, when Tithe hath been paid for the corn it self, unless it be where there hath been fraud in cutting it over long:

2. No Tithe is to be paid for the course corn, as Vetches, Tares and the like, which is eaten up by the cattel that do the husbandry there, whether it be eaten green or ripe, or eaten upon the ground where it groweth or elsewhere, unless the Parson have a speciall custome for it.

3. If corne be sowed where woad was sowed, or where other things grew, the tithe shall be paid of this, and in its own kind also. So if Woad or other things be sowed where corne had been sowed, the owner of the Soile must pay his Tithe, and pay it in kind of that which groweth there, as he doth in the change of wheat, beans, barley, &c.

4. If the Soile of an Orchard be sowed with any kind of grain, the parson will have tithe of it; although hee have tithe of the fruit of the trees, for they are of several kinds.

Tithes also must be paid of the calves of Kine, Lambs of Sheep, young Pigs of Sowes, Colts of Mares, Kids of Goats, &c. Also of the Cheese and Milk of Cowes, Sheep, and Goats, and of the Wool of Sheep, & of the Eggs and young of Hens, geese, Ducks, &c. and of the Honey and Wax of Bees, and for dry Cattell, and fat Beasts sold and killed, and according to the course of the place.

Change of grain.

Sett. 9. Of cattell and fowle.

But for the further opening hercof these things are to be knowne.

1. If the Parishioner have but nine Pigs, or six calves, the Parson can have no tithe in kind that year, without a special custome to warrant it, as in many places there is; for these things are intire, and not divideable as wool is. And therefore the Parson must have his Tithe pro rata, either in money the same year, if there be any custome for it, or in kind the next year, and so reckon both the years together. M. 7. Jac. Co. B. And if a parishioner have but one Cow, or milk his Cow every second day; so that he can make no cheese, in this case the custome of the place is to be observed, so that something be paid; otherwise no custome in this case will bind, so for calves, colts, and kids when they are under the number of Tithe in kind; and if there be no custome in it, the Parson must have the tenth when ever it comes.

2. It hath been said that no tithe is to be paid for dry cattell bred for the plough or pail, unless they be sold away before they be put to that use; for tithe must be paid for such cattell and for fattening cattell sold or killed after the custome of the place: M. 17. Jac. B. R. curia, M. 2 Jac. B. R. Webs Case. And though at first they were bred for the plough or pail, yet if after fattened and kild, or sold, Tithe must be paid for them. M. 8. Carols, by three Justices.

Dry cattell.

3. Tithe must be paid of the locks and flocks of Wool, after the Wool made up, if they be more then ordinary, and left deceitfully, otherwise not.

Locks of wool

4. Where sheep be removed from one Parish to another, each Parson must have pro rata, but under three dayes no rate is to be paid, as for example, If forty sheep yeild eighty pound of Wooll, and these have been fed and lyen all the year in one place; in this case the parson of that place must have all the tithe; if the sheep were there but half the year, then he is to have but forty pound of the Wool; if three months only, then but twenty pound of the Wool; and so ratably for four or five months more or less. And the Parson in whose Parish the sheep lay and fed but one month he shall have only the tithe of the twelfth part of the Wool: and if the sheep feed all the year in one parish, and lye in another parish, the tithe shall be divided betwixt the parsons. And if sheep come from one place, and be shorne in a place where they were not before, it seems the tithe must be paid where the sheering is, unless it appear to be paid to the Parson of the place from whence they came. And so of the young of cattell, lambs, calves, pigs, colts and the like, where the dam was removed from one place to another, a rate tithe must be paid to the Parson according to the times of their abode in the several places, from the times of their engendering by the month rate. Broo. Dismes 16.

Rate tithe for wool of sheep, and of young cattell.

5. If any have cattell titheable feeding in any wast place, not commonly knowne to be in any Parish, yet the tithe thereof is to be paid, and to be paid to the Parson of the place where the owner of the cattel doth dwell.

the

6. When the tenth part of the milk is paid, there must be no tithe paid of the cheese which is made of the other nine parts of the milk. And so where tithe is paid for the cheese, no Tithe is paid for the milk.

No Tithe is to be paid for Cattel fed for the use of the house, but if he feed to sell he must pay for them. Goldsb. 147. Pl. 66.

But see more of this, and when, and how this is to be paid and delivered in Chap. 5. Sect. 2.

Sect. 7.
Of Parks, warrens, pools and Dove-houses.

Some tithe is to be paid of Parks, Warrens, Pools, Ponds, and Dove-Houses, and for Coneyes, Pigeons, and Fish. And some would have Coneyes in a Coniger, fish in a pond, or several fishing in the nature of Predial Tithes, and that the tenth of the profit is to be allowed.

But for the opening of this, take these things.

Coneyes, Fish, Pigeons.

1. That where the things bring in a certain profit, and without much charge, as Coneyes, fish, and Pigeons, there is great reason the Parson or Vicar should have the full tithe of them, and in these cases a division may be easily made. But Fish in a River are not titheable but by custome.

2. the Pigeons are a sensible loss to the Parson in the destruction of Corn, and good reason then the Parson should have some profit by them.

3. In some cases, as where Gentlemen have turned their fields into Conigers, and laid down their tillage, the loss of the Parson hath been notorious, and the case grievous hurtful to the Parson and Commonwealth, profitable to none but the owner of the Land; these cases deserve no favour.

Fera Natura.

4. We conceive the Parson will have no remedy in this case by Law; and that in all these cases there is no thing to be had but what the custom or usage yeilds; for Deer and Coneyes being wild, are not reckoned a mans own till they are caught. It is held for law, that Conies are not Titheable but by Custome. And therefore where Parsons have sued for them the Judges were wont to grant a prohibition: March. f. 36. Pl. 87. And a man is to pay Tithe of nothing whereof he hath not a property, except only the personal Tithe which is a small matter: When Pheasants Partridges, Swans and such like wild things of profit become tame, it seems they must pay tithe, but not otherwise. And for such things of pleasure as are of no profit, as Hawks, Hounds, Apes, Thrushes, Poppingjays and the like, no Tithe shall be paid of these.

Matters of pleasure.

Personal tithe. Trades and labours.

Some Tithe hath been by usage paid in the nature of personal Tithe for mens Trades and labours. So Fishers, Fowlers, Hawkers, and the like, not such as Fish, Hunt, and Fowle for pleasure, but such as make a Trade of, and get by Fishing, Hunting, and Fowling, have paid. So Carpenters, Masons, and all handicrafts men have paid; so Merchants, Mercers, Drapers, and all Tradesmen; so men-servants and maid-servants have paid some small matter in the nature of an offering, as the tenth of their clear gain once a year to the Parson: and this to be paid still according to the custome of the place.

And for any other things or for things titheable out of any Land, which by the Lawes, by any Priviledg, Prescription or composition ought to be discharged, no tithe is to be paid. But Custome may make a thing Titheable that otherwise is not Titheable. March. 65.

See more of this, and how these Tithes shall be paid, Chap. 5. Sect. 3.

When, where, and how Tithes payable must be paid and set forth, and when the Parson, &c. may take them?

FOR answer to this Question in the general, the Law saith, that all Tithes and Church duties are to be yeilded and paid according to the usage and custome of the place where they are to be paid. Stat. 27. H. 8. 20. 32 H. 8. 7 And for predial Tithes, the tenth part of the profits are to be set forth and divided from the nine parts in the place where they grow, before the owner taketh away his part thereof: and the owner is to send to the Parson, who is to send his servant when the tithe is to be severed, and see that it be justly done; and then the law doth give him a reasonable time.

time to take it away. But the Parson cannot Tithe himselfe or take his owne Tithe without leave of the owner, and if he doe so, an Action of Trespas will lye against him by the owner of the land. And if Tithe be once set out and divided, the Parson not the Parishioner must look to it, for he must bear the loss of it, if any come to it. And this setting out of the Tithe the Law saith must be effectual; and therefore if the owner set out his tithe, and then take it away again, this is not a good payment of his Tithe: and if the owner sell the whole to another before the tithe be set out, with an agreement to deceive the Parson; this is fraud, and not allowed for a good payment in Law. And this must be heeded as to the manner of Tithing, that the custom of the place is to be observed; for in some places the custome is to leave the Tithe in grass in swathes, in other places in windrowes, in other places in grass-cocks, in other places in hay-cocks, and either way it is good. So for the time when, and place where, the custome of the place must be followed, but the parson shall have reasonable time to take it away. Broo. Trespass 125. Cook 2 Part Instit. 610. Brownl 2 part. 9.

To give to the Parson the Tenth Acre of wood in a Coppice, or the tenth coard (if the coards be equal) is a good payment and setting forth of this Tithe, especially if it be the custome of Tithing wood in the Countrey. Of trees and wood.

The Tithe of the Mast of Oak and Beech, if it be sold, must be answered by the tenth penny; if it be eaten by Pigs, the tenth of the worth thereof must be answered. And the most reasonable way of payment for any thing sold, is to pay the Parson the tenth penny of the money made thereof.

The payment of Tithes and Church duties in the City of London, which is 2 s. 9 d. in the pound of the rent of their Houses, is to be made according to the usage there. Of houses in London.

The Tithe of the new corn-mil must not be the tenth penny of the rent, But the tenth measure of the Corn, or the tenth tole dish, if there be not custome in it. But the Millard for his Fulling-Mil, Rape-Mil, Paper-Mil, Iron, Powder, Lead, Edge, Copper, and Tin Mills; and so for an ancient Corn-Mil, is to pay only personal Tithe as for a Handicraft or Faculty. Pasch. 17. Jac. Johnsons Case. Fitz. Nat. Brev. 41. G. Cas. 2. 44. And if a rate tithe be paid for two Mills in one house, and one of them is made a Corn-Mill; in this case Tithe shall be paid in kind for this Mill. And if one pair of Mill-stones be turned into two pair of Mill-stones, now both of them must pay Tithe, and the privilege is lost. Brownl. Rep. 1. Part. 31. See 1. Of Mills.

The Tithe of the Hay, may be set out and delivered in swathes, windrowes, or cocks as the custome of the place is. Of grass, cut, or eaten.

The Tithe fruit of Apple-trees, Pear-trees and the like trees are to be set out and delivered when they are newly gathered, and if then the Owner do not give the Parson notice and set them out, and they be by his means lost or impaired, the Owner is chargeable to the Parson in treble damages. Fruits of trees as Apples, &c.

The common course of setting out and delivering corne by the common Law, is by the tenth shock, cock, or sheaf; but if the custome of the place be otherwise, the Parson must sit down by it; and if there be a custome to put the corn into shocks, and that every shock be ten sheaves, and that the Parson must have the tenth shock; it must be done by two Justices, B. R. But without a special custom binding the owner of the Land, he is not bound to set the Parsons part of the corn up an end in shocks: Smiths Case. Co. B. the Court. Of corn sown

The tithe seeds and herbs of gardens and fields, as Rape, Hemp, Flax, Parsley, Fen-nel, and the like, and of Sage, Mints, Onions, Leeks, and the like, either of the seed, or of the Herb before the seed time; this must bee paid at the time when the owner doth receive in his nine parts thereof. Of seeds and herbs.

The time when the calves and Lambs are to be paid and delivered, is when they are weanable, and able to live without the Dam, and unless there be any custom herein against the Parson, at this time all these young things are to be delivered. And if the owner sell any calf or lamb, in most places the Parson is to have the tenth penny of the money and so he must, if there be nothing in the custom against it. See 1. Of calves and lambs.

And if the owner kill a calf in some places, the Parson hath the right shoulder, and

And the custome must be yielded to as reasonable, if any thing though never so little, be paid for it, otherwise not.

Of milk and cheese.

The Tithe of Milk and Cheese is to be paid in the season thereof, and so long, and so soon as either of them is taken by the parishioner.

Bees.

The tenth measure of Honey and the tenth weight of Wax, not the tenth Bee, nor the tenth Swarm of Bees is to be paid for Bees.

Of hens, ducks
wild and tame

The Tithe of Chicken and Eggs, of all kind of tame Birds or Fowle, as Swans, Hens, Ducks, Geese, they are to be delivered and paid, or that which is paid for them, according to the custome of the place. But for wild Swans, Geese and Ducks, if they be taken in, and from a certain and known place, they are said to be titheable as Predial Tithes; but if from incertain and unknowne places, they are said to be as personal Tithes. But I suppose no Tithe is to be paid in either case.

Self. 3.
Personal tithes.

For personal Tithes, which is for Trades, Crafts, and manual Occupations, and the profit made thereby. It is provided by a special Law, that all such as use trading, buying and selling, handicrafts (except common Labourers) shall pay their Tithes, as they were used to be paid forty years before the Statute of 2 Ed. 6. and as of right they ought to be paid. And for this the Parishioner doth use at or about Easter (in most places the usual time of payment for smal Tithes) to pay a small sum of money to the Parson or Vicar. And according to the custome of that place men are to pay, for without a custom for it nothing at this day is to be paid for this: by three Judges Co. B. 17. 7ac.

And for all, or any of these things, in case where the Owner may let or sell the thing of which the Tithe is to be had, the best way is to let the Parson or Vicar to have the tenth penny made by the sale, as they have generally of grounds let to strangers out of the Parish; in which case the Parson hath commonly, and must have, if there be no custome against it, the tenth penny of the Rent.

But in no case the Parson or Vicar may take his Tithe before the same be severed from the nine parts and Tithed. And if the owner will not cut his corn till it be spoiled, the Parson is remediless. 12 Ed. 4 D. & St. 189.

Whom must pay the Tithe that is to be paid, and may be sued for it? and to whom the Tithe must be paid?

Self. 1.

FOR answer to the first part of this Question, take these things.

1. That generally he that receiveth the nine parts, is to pay the tenth part to the Parson. And yet if a man that is owner of a Coppice, or other such like thing, and he cut it and sell it all; in this case the Seller must answer the Parson for his tithe and not the buyer. And therefore if A. cut the graft of his ground, and put it all (not setting out Tithe) in a rick in the ground, and three months after he sell it away to B. in this case B. cannot be sued for this tithe. Hill. 16. 7ac. by chief Justice, in Ash. fields Case. And if one sell Underwoods standing, the buyer, not the seller must answer the Tithe. But the Tithe due for sellers before the sale; the seller must answer for this.

Executor.

2. If a Parishioner dye before he pay his tithe, his Executor, if he have Assets, must pay it.

3. If a Parishioner let or sell his ground or herbage, it is said the Parson may sue the owner of the ground, or the owner of the Cattel, at his choise, which is reasonable, if the usage be not against it.

4. If Cattel be pawned or pledged, the Gagee must pay tithe for them. But if I deliver my goods to H. to be redelivered to me I must pay Tithe for them.

And for answer to the second part of this Question, these things are to be known.

1. The Tithes must be paid to him that hath right to them, be he Lay-man, as an Impropiator, or a Clergy man (as we have called them and) be he parson or Vicar of the place.

2. The rule generally is this, that the Tithe must be paid to the parson or Vicar of the Parish wherein it ariseth, and not to the Parson or Vicar of another Parish.

3. The Tithe hapning in the time of the vacation, the succeeding Parson is to have it, but they that gather it in may keep up so much thereof, as to pay them their charge in the collection thereof, and to Ministers that did serve the Cure there. And if one be put into a place, and then he is removed, and another is put in, the first of these shall have the Tythes that hapned in the vacation time, Hil. 18. Jac. Woods Case.

4. If any man have Cattel Tytheable feeding in any waste, or place which is not certainly known to be in a Parish, the Tythe thereof shall be paid to the Parson of the place where the Owner of the Cattel doth dwell.

5. If a man living in the Parish of A, being a common Fisher, Fowler, or Hunter, and Fish, Fowle, or hunt in the grounds of H in B, and take fish there, if this were free and without reward in H then it is a personal Tythe that must be paid to the Parson of A. But if H had money or reward for this, then it is said H must pay the Parson of B. as for a predial Tythe.

6. Personal Tythes are alwaies to be paid to the Parson or Vicar of that place where the person that is to pay the Tythes doth dwell.

Which way the Owner of Tythes, and such like things, may recover them being detained.

FOR answer to this, we are to know, that by the ancient Law of the Nation, Tythes were not recoverable by any man in any place but in the Spiritual Court, and thereby no person but such as they called Spiritual persons, or Clergy men, and this Ecclesiastical Court is gone, But they are now recoverable by all sorts of men alike, and in these waies, First for Predial Tithes, such as are the Tythe of Wood, Grass, Fruit, Hay, and the like divideable things; if these be not duly and truly divided and set forth, as before is shewed they ought to be, the Parson or Vicar may sue for them in any of the Courts by an Action of Debt, wherein he shall recover treble damages upon the Statute of Ed. 6.

But for lesser Tithes of Wool and Lamb, and the like, no Action will lye upon this Statute, nor for money given to the Parson in lieu of them. But for the one and the other, the party grieved may at this day sue in the Chancery, or in the Exchequer, or before two Justices of the Peace, who in most cases for all Tythe, Offerings, Oblations, Obventions, rates for Tythes, and all Arears thereof, are to give relief. Stat. 27. H. 8. 20. 2. Ed. 6. 13. 32. H. 8. 7. Cook upon Litt. 159.

And if the Tythe be once severed and set forth, and they be after taken away by the owner of the Land or a stranger; in this case the Parson may have an Action of Trespass against him. Bro. Dismes 6. Brownl. 2 Part 30. Ministers put in by Authority of Parliament and now put out by the death of him that was ejected, And such who having been presented since the first of Aprill 1653: and are not approved by the Commissioners for Appropriation, and are therefore put out, may be relieved for their Arears by the Commissioners for putting out of Scandalous Ministers by the new Ordinance. August. 29. 1654. Also all such as those Commissioners doe put in, they may helpe them to their dues.

In what case, and how a person or place may be quit and discharged of Tythes: and what shall be a good discharge, or not.

Spiritual persons were some of them formerly discharged of Tythe by their Order. But there are no such discharges now; but a discharge of Tythes may be at this day by the custome of a County, or by a Prescription, or by a Composition, which at first was made by and between the Parson, Patron, and Ordinary, and another, or by an alteration of the place out of which the Tythe doth come, or by an Act of Parliament, and by a unity of possession. Coo. 1 part 33. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 13. 32 H. 8. 7. Cook 44. Brownl. 2 part 20. Or by priviledg, as certain Religious Orders, Templers, and others of which there are none with us. And therefore no such discharge can be amongst us at this day. Brownl. 2 part 33. Or they may be suspended for a certain time, and revived again. Of all which see examples in the cases that follow.

A man may be discharged of payment of Tythe by a custom or prescription: Wherein these things are to be known.

1. Custom

See. 1.

By Custome or prescription.
And what is good or nor.

1. Custom and Prescription do differ but little; custom goes to a place or County, and prescription to a person.

2. A Custom applied to a Country to pay no Tythe in some cases, as the Custom for the Wild, being forty Parishes in Sussex, to pay no Tythe, is good. But generally such a Custom is not good, and a prescription to pay no Tythe, nor any thing in lieu of it, is not good, nor will it discharge, though nothing can be proved to be paid within the time of memory. D. & St. 171. 167. Bro. Prescrip. 92. Cook. 244. And yet one may shew a discharge of his Land another way which will amount to the payment of no Tythe, nor nothing for it.

3. But any man may prescribe de modo decimandi; i. e. to pay money or other thing in lieu of the Tythe in kind for a Manor, Farm, or piece of Land; and if he can prove this time out of mind, this will discharge him. Cook 1. 44. 45. And therefore a Prescription to pay 4 d. or any other sum of money for all his Tythe whatsoever, or all his Tythe Hay, or all his Tythe Corn in such a Farm or such a Close, is good. If one Prescribe that he is to put the Corn of the ground in Hillocks or Cocks, &c. and that for this the Parson is to have no Tythe Corn every second year, or is to have no Tythe in some part of the ground, this is good. So if he prescribe to pay the tenth fleece of Wool, and for this to be discharged of the Tythe of the locks; this is a good prescription. 36. 37. Eliz. Co. B. Jeps case. But if one prescribe because he doth pay Tythe Hay, he is to pay no Tythe Corn; or because he payeth Tythe Corn, he is to pay no Tythe of his Cattel; this is not good. Smiths case Hill 8. Jac. B. R. So if one prescribe to be discharged of Tythes in one place, because he payeth Tythes in another place; or to be discharged of Tythes of Lambs, because he payeth Tythe of Wool; or to be discharged of Tythes of other Cattel, because he payeth 12 d. for a Cow; these are not good prescriptions. Flem. woods case, 7 Jac. Co. B. If a custom be alledged, that the Parson shall have but the tenth sheaf of Wheat for the Tythe of all manner of Corn and Grain; this is not a good custome. Mich. 11. Jac. Co. B. Jacks case. 38. Eliz. Co. B. Adjndgd. So a Custom was alledged, that the owners of a Farm had been used time out of mind to take back 30 sheafs of their Tythe Corn again after it was set out, to their own use; This was disallowed. Custom to pay Tythes in kind for sheep, if they continue in the parish all the year, but if sold before their time, but a half penny for every sheep so sold, it was held no good Custom. But a Custom to pay no Tythes of lopping or wood for fire, Hedges, &c. is a good Custom, B. R. March 79. pl. 128.

4. A Prescription to pay a shoulder of a Buck or Doe, when they are killed, in lieu of all the Tythe of a Park, is good, and will discharge the Park. 3. 7 & 37. Eliz. Shipdams case. And although after the Park be discharged, and converted into tillage or hop round, yet it is held that the Parson shall not have Tithes in kind, but the discharge shall continue. M. 5. Jac. Co. B. Adjndg. M. 11. Jac. Co. B. Cowpers Case.

5. A Prescription to pay a less part then the tenth part, may be good and binding.

6. A Prescription that if one have less then seven Lambs, he shal pay but 1 d. a piece for them, is good. Curia 7. Jac. B. R. Patches case.

7. A Prescription to be discharged of Tithes for every house in London, in lieu of 1 d. of the rent made of the house, is good. Cook 11. 16. And so for any other thing that may be conceived to have a reasonable Commencement, the Law will admit it.

8. One may prescribe, that he, and all those whose estates he hath in the Manor of Dale in Dale, time out of mind, have paid to the Parson of Dale for the time being a certain Pension yearly for the maintenance of Divine Service there, in satisfaction of all the Tithes arising and growing within the Manor of Dale; and prescribes further, that he and all those whose Estates he hath in the said Manor, time out of mind, have been used in regard of the said pension so paid to the Parson, to have all the Tythes happening and arising within the said Manor or any part of it; viz. of all the Lands held of the said Manor or any parcel of it; this is a good Prescription, and may have a reasonable beginning thus, That the Lord was seized of all the Manor before the Tenancies derived out of it, and by some good Composition or Grant between him, the Parson, Patron, and Ordinary, it was granted to him in lieu of this money, which must be intended because time out of mind it hath been so paid. Cook 7. 45.

See 2.

7. 45. But without some special matter alledged, a Lord cannot prescribe after this manner in him and all those, &c. generally.

9. A Prescription to pay money for the Tythe of Milche beasts is good. But a Prescription that for the payment of Money for Milche beasts, he should be discharged from the payment of money for other beasts, or to be discharged of Tithes for all Agistments in the Land is not good. Goldsb. 147. pl. 66.

10. A modus decimandi, cannot be laid as to offerings and such like personal things March 81. pl. 131. Also a Parishioner may be discharged of Tithe by Grant or an agreement with the Parson; if he be a Spiritual Person, he may discharge it for his life; if he be an Impropriator, he may discharge it for all the time he hath the Parsonage. But a Spirituall Person cannot by his agreement bind his successors. And payment of a sum of money in lieu and recompence of Tithes for sixty yeers, or thereabouts is held a reasonable time to make a prescription. Cook upon Litt. 14. Crompr. Jur. 77. Dyer 7. 9. Tythe may be discharged by the alteration of the place or thing out of which the Tithe is to come. For the opening of which take these things.

1. If one prescribe to be discharged of payment of Tithe Hay for such a ground, or the Tithe Corn of such a ground; and the owner change the nature of the ground, the Pasture into Tillage, or Tillage into pasture; in these cases the prescription is gone. Hill. 7. Jac. B. R. Shiptons case Adjudged. But if the prescription be general, 4 d. for all manner of Tithe arising in such a ground, there the alteration will not hurt the prescription. So it is if one prescribe to pay the shoulder of every Buck and Deer of his Park for all manner of Tithe of the Park, and the whole Park be after disparked and sown to Corn, it is said the Prescription is gone, and that Tythes must now be paid in kind; but if any part of it remain a Park, and the rest only be sowed, it is otherwise. 36, 37 Elix. Shipdams Park in Norfolk. So it is said, If all the Parks be suffered to fall down, which is a disparking in Law of the Park, yet the same doth not destroy the manner of Tithing, for the same may be a Park, again. But some doubt of this. And a difference hath been taken, where a Prescription runs to so many Acres of Land certain for in that case the modus continueth: and where to the Park in the name of a Park, in which case it is gone if it be disparked. Pasch. 19. Jac. Co. B. Pools case, and in Brownl. Rep. 1 Part Pasch. 10. Jac. Co. B. 35. It is doubted whether the Tithes be not gone in both cases; and held, that if a man can prescribe for so many Bucks, that this Park is discharged, and if it be disparked, that the prescription is not gone. If a man have a modus decimandi for Hay in Black-acre, and he sow the same acre 7 years together with Corn, this doth not destroy the modus decimandi, but the same shall continue when the same is made into Hay again. Hughes Rep. 194; pl. 278. But the Parson will have Tythe in kind when it is sowed with Corn, &c.

By an alteration of the place or thing out of which the Tithe doth come, or by other alteration. Whether gone or not.

2. And if two Fulling Mills be under one roof, and a rate-Tithe be paid for the Mills (which is a kind of prescription) and after the Mills are altered, and made into one Corn-Mil, in this case the prescription is gone, and Tithe shall now be paid in kind. So if there be but one pair of stones in the Mil, and after there is another pair of stones put in the Mil; now Tithe must be paid in kind, and the manner of Tithing is gone. Brownl. Rep. 1 Part Pasch. 10. Jac. 31.

3. If I have the Tithe of the Hay of a close, or all manner of Tithe there, and the owner of the ground turn it from Meadow, to Tillage, or to hops, or the like, or turne it from Tillage to pasture, the Tithe is not gone, but shall be paid in kind as it falleth. So if one turne wood-ground into Meadow or Tillage, the owner shall pay Tithe in kind, and Tithe is not lost hereby; only if it fall out to be within the case of barren heath, he shall pay for seven years no more then was paid formerly for it, See it before. Pasch. 18. Jac. B. R. Courts in Baxters Case.

4. If one be to day a sum of money for the Tithe of a piece of ground, and the ground be after turned to houses and gardens; in this case the manner of Tithing doth continue. Cook 11. 16.

5. If one turn his pasture into a Coniger, and make coney-borrowes in it, the Tithe will not be gone. But I conceive, it doth continue as it did for the manner of Tithing as before, and no new manner of Tithing, See before Tithe of Coneyes. M.

6 If

6 If the Vicar keep the Glebe in his own hands, it is said, That so long he is to pay no Tithe to the Parson impropriate. But if he lease it to another, then the Lessee must pay Tithe to him, and if he sow the Land, that he must pay Tithe as other men. Brownl. Rep. 69.

Suspension.

7. If a Parson impropriate keep his Glebe in his own hands, he cannot pay Tithe to himself. But if he sell or let it to another he shall pay Tithe as other men. And if a Parson purchase Land within his Rectory, no Tithe is to be payed for this while it is in his own hands. But if he after lease the Parsonage; his Lessee shall have Tithe of this new purchased Land. And if he make a Feoffment or Lease of the purchased Land, his Feoffee or Lessee must pay Tithe again. Cook upon Litt. 139, 11. 14. Bro. Dismes 17. Dyer 43.

And if one purchase a Parsonage and a Manor in the parish discharged of Tithes, and then lease part of the demesnes of the Manor; it is said the Lessor shall have Tithe of this part. Bro. Dismes 17. Sed quare of this.

8. If Land lye in a Forreft in any parish, and is Tithe-free, and the Forreft be if Forrefted, now it shall pay Tithe in kind. Crompt. Jur. 52. Lord Ch. Baron at Sarum Affizes.

The alteration of payment (as if in stead of the money to be paid, another sum, or Tithes in kind have been paid for twenty years past) will not destroy the prescription. Cook upon Litt. 14 Dyer 7.

See, 4.
By Act of Parliament and unity of possession together. Whether gone or not.

Lands may be discharged from payment of Tithes by Act of Parliament, as by a unity of possession of the parsonage, and Lands which did pay Tithes, or by an appropriation or otherwise, in the hand of Religious and Ecclesiastical persons, (as they were called.) So that now at this day by the Statute of 31 H. 8. 13: Such a unity in the said Religious houses and persons will be a discharge to all Patentees from the payment of Tithes of Lands that came to the Crown by the same Statute. But then this unity in the said Religious persons must have been justa, obtained by Right; for if either the Parsonage, Vicarage, Tithes or Lands had come or been united to their houses by disseins, or other tortious and unlawful Acts, this had not been a good discharge within the Statute.

2. It must have been equalis, there must have been a Fee-simple both in the Lands out of which the Tithes were to be paid, and in the Parsonage or Vicarage in them; for if the Abbots, Priors, or other religious persons had held but by Lease, that had not been such a unity as the Statute intended.

3. It must have been libera, free from the payment of any Tithes, for if their Farmers or Tenants, at wil or years had paid Tithes, that had not been a sufficient unity to have discharged the Land 4. And lastly, It must have been perpetua, time out of mind. And then for the infinite impossibility, and impossible infiniteness that such Immunities and discharges, that such religious persons and houses had before time of memory could not be known; such unity had been a good discharge of the Lands in their own hands. And if the Monastery were built in the time of memory, or appropriated within the time of memory, and Tithe were paid before this, it will not serve turne to discharge it:

And at this day such an unity is a good discharge for the Kings patentees, with the Statute of 31 H. 8. But such Lands as came to the Crown by the Statute of 27. H. 8. of dissolution, must at this day pay Tithes, although the Lands in the hands of such religious persons or houses were discharged from the payment of Tithe; for the privileges being personal privileges, were extinguished by the Statute of Dissolution, and there are no words in that Statute to save them: Stat. 31 H. 8, 13 7 H. 4. 6. 32 H. 8. 7. Cook 11. 14. 2. 42. Dyer 278. 349. 277.

Of other Profits which the Parson and Vicar doth claim.

There are some other small profits which Parsons and Vicars claim as belonging to their Parsonages and Vicarages beside Tythe, and money in lieu of Tithe, as Mortuaries, Oblations, Obventions, &c. And as to Mortuaries these things are to be known 1 That no Mortuary is to be paid, but where it hath been used to be paid.

2 There

2. There shall be but one Mortuary paid, and no more.
3. No person that doth keep house must pay them.
4. No Woman that hath a Husband shall pay them.
5. No children must pay them.
6. Where they are to be paid, they must be paid after this proportion, viz. He that dieth having goods under ten marks shall pay nothing; for Goods above that value, and under thirty pound, but three shillings four pence; for Goods above thirty pound, and under forty pound, six shillings eight pence; for goods above forty pound, how much ever it be, but ten shillings.
7. All this account must be made onely out of the Goods remaining after debts paid.
8. The Parson of the place where the party dwells, not of the place where he dieth, must have it. 21 H.8.6. 26 H.8.15.

There is no more to be said for Obventions, Oblations, and Offerings, which seem to be all one, but that they by the Law now in force are to be paid as formerly they have been. 31 H.8.7. 27 H.8.20. 2, 3 Ed.6. 13: Co.11. 16.

Oblations, Obventions, and Offerings.

What Tithes the Parson, and what the Vicar shall have.

IN this, these things are to be known.

1. Of meer Right the Parson is to have all the Tithes if there be no Endowment of the Vicarage. Hughes Rep. 64.
2. In this, Custom is much regarded, for albeit the Composition be, that he shall have Garbs, yet if he never had any more but Hay, he shall have no more now, Adjudge.

3. The Vicar cannot have Tithes, but by Donation, Composition, or Prescription, for all the Tithes de jure appertain to the Parson. March 11. pl. 29.

4. If the Composition be, that the Parson shall have all the Tithe-corn, and the Vicar all other Tithes; and one sow his errable with Saffron, the Vicar not the Parson will have it. Vicar of Farnham case, Co. B.

5. That which the Vicar and his Predecessors have received time out of minde, that he shall have.

6. The Vicar will have Tithe of Saffron, of Land newly sown with Saffron, albeit the Land were sowed before with Corn forty years together. By Justice Popham. Goldsb. 150.

7. It is commonly held, That if the Vicar be to have the Tithes of all the Crofts in such a place, that yet he shall not have the Tithes of the Crofts, parcel of the Parsonage; and if he be to have the Tithes of all the Dove-houses of the place, yet he shall not have the Tithes of the Dove-houses belonging to the Parsonage.

8. If the Vicar by the Endowment, be to have the Tithe-hay of all the Meadows in such a place, yet he shall not hereby have any more but the Tithes of those that were Meadows at the time of the Endowment, and not of those grounds that were made Meadow since the Endowment. By Baron Denham a difference was taken where an Endowment is Local, as where the Vicar doth claim to have all the Tithes in such grounds, and he hath always had the Tithe of that place, and it hath never been sowed, and he hath no Tithes, but the small Tithes of the rest of the Parish by the Endowment, yet if it be new sowed, he shall have the Tithe of the Corn: But if he be to have the small Tithes generally, and he hath always had Tithes in such a place, and it was never sowed, and now it is sowed to Corn, in this case he shall not have the Corn. 8 Car. at Sarum Assises.

9. If a man hath a Modus decimandi for Hay in Black-acre, and he sow it seven years together with Corn, the Parson will have the Corn so long. And the Vicar the Hay, or the Modus decimandi, or Hay in kinde, if he be endowed of it. Hughes Rep. 194. pl. 274.

CHAP. CLVIII.

Of Title and Toll, of Counties and Towns.

Title of Entry,
what:

Title of Entry is properly where a man hath a lawful cause to come upon, and enter into a thing which another hath, but hath no Action to recover it. As when an Estate is made upon Condition, and the Condition broken, or one hath aliened in Mortmain, or die without any Heir so that the Land Escheat; in these cases, the party that is to enter for the Condition broken, or the Lord of whom the Lands are held which are aliened, or in which the Tenant died, is said to have a Title of Entry. But this word is sometimes taken more largely and applied to the Right or Title a man hath to Land by any means whatsoever; and then it is said to be a just cause of possessing that which is our own: For the Law doth put a difference between Title of Entry, and Right of Entry; for Title of Entry is said to be where no wrong is done, as in the cases before. But Right of Entry is where a wrong was done before, as where a man hath wrongfully entred into my Lands, or taken away my Goods, by Disseisin, or the like; in this case I may have an Action, and sometimes an Entry also; but in the other, there is onely an Entry given. And where the Law gives an Action onely, as the onely Remedy to reduce the possession, there it is called a Right of Action, but where an Entry, there a Right of Entry. *Plow. 555. Finch's Ley 105. Toll, what.

Stallage.
Pickage.
Cranage.
Pedage.
Passage.
Pontage.
Pavage.
Murage.
Tronage.
Pessage.

This word Toll in a general sense, doth signifie any manner of Custom, Subsidy, Prestation, Imposition, or sum of money, demanded for carrying out or bringing in of Wares, to be taken of the buyer; and is sometimes used for a liberty to buy and sell within the Precincts of a Manor; and so it seems to be but as a Fair or Market: Sometimes it is used for a Tribute or Custom, to pay a little sum of money for a conveniency of passage, or some other thing. As where it is claimed for the setting up of Stalls in Fairs or Markets, which is called Stallage, or for the digging of the ground there for that purpose, which is called Pickage, or for drawing up of Vessels out of a Ship into a Wharf, which is called Cranage, or for going over such a place on foot, called Pedage, or for passing over a Ferry with Man or Beasts, which is called a Passage, or for passing over a Bridge, which is called Pontage, or for the paving of a City or Causeway, which is called Pavage, or for the making of a Wall in time of War, for defence of the Nation, which is called Murage, or for the weighing of Wool, which is called Tronage, or for a Passage with Wares, which is called Pessage: But this word is most properly taken for a payment used in Cities, Towns, Markets, and Fairs, for Goods and Cattles brought thither to be bought and sold. Co. 8. 46, 47. 11 H. 6. 19. 9 H. 6. 45. Kelw. 138. 145. Fitz Toll. 138. 7 H. 4. 4.

As touching all these things, this is to be known.

Property.

1. That these payments are not incident to Fairs or Markets, but they may be without them; for the sale is good there without payment of Toll, and the Property altered. Curia. B. R. Hill. 17 Jac.

Prescription:

2. They were at the first by the Kings Grant, and now are claimed, and may be had by Prescription.

3. It is held the Lord Protector may by his Prerogative create such a Toll, a small sum of money to be paid for this.

4. But by Custom or Prescription, it may be claimed not onely for sale of Goods, but for a standing in the Fair or Market.

5. The sum demanded must be a sum Incertain.

6. It

6. It is said it hath been adjudged, That he that hath a Toll in a Market or Fair, Distress, by Prescription or Grant of the King may distress for it. Trin. 38 Eliz. B.R. Huddy and Wheelhouse.

7. This Toll for sale in a Fair or Market, is to be paid always by the buyer, unless there be a Custom to the contrary, for then it must be paid as the Custom hath been.

8. Toll is not to be paid for the things a man doth buy for his own expenses, unless the Custom be otherwise.

9. Nor is it to be paid for Goods brought into the Market or Fair, unless he sell it, without a special Custom. See for all these things, *9 Hen. 6. 45. 28 Aff. pl. 53. 2, 3 Ph. & Ma. 7. 31 Eliz. 12. Murage, which is a reasonable sum taken for Toll of every Cart, Wain, Horse laden coming to that Town, for the inclosing of the Town with Walls of defence for the safeguard of the people, in time of War, from Insurrection, Uproar or Tumults. This Portage, Pavage, Keyage, and the like payments are due, either by Grant or Prescription

11. But if a Wall be made, which is not defensible, nor for safeguard of the people, then ought not this Toll to be paid. Co. 2 part. Inst. 122.

CHAP. CLX.

Of Trespass.

Sett. 1.
1. Trespass,
what it is.

How many kinds of it there are.

He word Trespass in our Law is commonly taken for a wrong or offence done by one man to another. And so it is sometimes against the person of a man, and sometimes against that which is his: And both these kinde of wrongs do sometimes lie in not doing somewhat a man ought to do, and sometimes in doing what a man ought not to do. These wrongs are also some of them accompanied with a kinde, or at least with a colour of violence, and some of them are done without any violence, and consist rather of matter of fraud or negligence: For remedy against the last kinde of offences the Action of the Case is provided; and of this we have written largely in Chap. 13, &c. But the remedy that is given for injuries done with force, or colour of force, is by this kinde of Action, of which we are now to treat in this place. And so Trespasses are either extraordinary and greater or ordinary and less: The great Trespasses are killing or wounding a man, pulling down or firing of Houses or Mills, or throwing down of Park-walls or Pales, the burning or destroying of a Frame of Timber prepared for a House, or burning a Cart laden with Goods, or burning of a heap of Wood prepared for Coal, cutting out the Tongue of a Beast, cutting off the Ears of a Man, barking of Fruit-trees, breaking and cutting down, or destroying the Heads or Dams of Ponds or Pool where are Fish, and such like. The lesser are the beating of a man, entering into his Close, taking away his Goods, or the like. Both these are also either to the person of a man, or to that which is his. Of the lesser wrongs done to the person of a man; there are four kinds, or five degrees, whereof we shall speak in this place.

Sett. 2.
Menacing, what it is.
Assault, what it
is.
Battery, what it is.
Maim, what it
is.
Imprisonment,
what it is.

Property.

Menacing or threatening (which is) where one doth threaten to do another any hurt. Assault (which is) where one doth unlawfully set upon and attempt to beat another, but doth it not. Battery (which is) when one doth unlawfully beat another. Maim (which is) where one doth by any violent act offered to another, take from him the use of any of his principal members of his body, whereby his strength is impaired, and he made more unfit to serve the Commonwealth. Imprisonment (which is) where a man is restrained of his ordinary and lawful liberty, that he cannot go about his business, as at other times. The wrongs that are done to that which is a mans (that is) his Goods, they are to his Goods animate or inanimate. Animate, either reasonable, as Wife, Child, Servant, Tenant, Ward, or the like; unreasonable, as Beasts, Fish, or the like. His inanimate good is either his Land or Plate, Household-stuff or the like. These Trespasses are also done either with pretence of Title, by which the Property is altered, or without pretence of Title. They are also said to be Local (that is) annexed to a place, as cutting of Trees, Grass, digging of ground, or the like; or else they are transitory, as the beating of a man, carrying away his Goods, spoiling of Writings, or the like. And for remedy against these kinde of wrongs, this Action or Writ is appointed. Fines Ley 203. 198. Co. 1 part, Inst. 57. 126. Old N.B. 48. Crompt. Jur. 33.

2. Writ of Trespass, what it is.

The word Trespass is sometimes used for the Writ of Trespass, which is where any Trespass is done by one to another, which is supposed to be done with force and arms; and and by this the Plaintiff shall recover damages, according to the wrong done to him; and the Defendant found guilty of this offence, is (rigore juris) to pay a Fine to the Keepers of the Liberty, and to be imprisoned till he pay or compound it. And this Writ must always suppose the wrong to be done, Vi & armis, Finches Ley 198. Old N. B. 48.

All persons, men, women, and children, not disabled to sue in any Action, may, having such a wrong done unto them, as for which this Action lieth, have this Action for their relief. 3. Where, and in what case this Action lieth, or not.

The Church-wardens of a Parish may have this Action against him that doth break or take away any of the Parish Goods, belonging to the Church, as the Communion Cup, Table-cloth, or the like, in the custody of the present or former Church-wardens: But no Parishioner can have this Action for these Goods. And for a wrong done to the Church, by breaking the Bells, Walls, or the like, or to the Church-yard, by cutting of Trees, eating of Grass, or the like, he that is Parson of the Church by Institution and Induction, not the Church-wardens, must have this Action. *Broo. summon a man to appear before us, and then the other Commissioners without me had imprisoned, and made him pay a Fine. It seems I shall be accounted a Trespassor in all this. By Justice Termine at Gloster Assises, 1649. If the Master lock a man up in a Chamber, and give his man the Key, and charge him to keep it, and he knowing of the unjust imprisonment, keep him there, he and his Master both may be sued in this Action for this; and yet if the servant knew not of it, he shall not be charged, 22 Ed. 4. 45. And if a servant do a Trespass by the Masters command, both of them may be sued in this Action. But if the servant do more then he is commanded, as if his Master send him to distrain, and he after he hath taken the Distress doth abuse it, or the like; in these cases the Master shall not be charged for any more then what he gave command to do, but the servant shall be charged with the whole. 21 H. 7. 21. Dyer 365. And if my servant of his own head, without any knowledge or command of mine, doth a Trespass to another man, I shall not be chargeable with it. 13 H. 7. 15. Kelw. 3. As if the Sheriff make a Warrant to his Bailiff to arrest the body, or attach the Goods of J. S. and the Bailiff attach the Goods, or arrest the body of J. N. In this case no Action will lie against the Sheriff, but against his Bailiff for this. Mich. 7 Jac. Co. B. If many come to do a Trespass, and they are all present when the Trespass is done, and some of them do onely look on, and do nothing, yet they be all charged as Trespassors, if they do not declare their dissent to it. But if some of them fall into the company accidentally, contra; for they may not be sued. Hab. Rep. pl. 69.

If one command his servant to do a Trespass which he doth, and then dieth before Action brought; in this case the Master may be sued notwithstanding. 17 H. 4. 19.

If a Court, or Judge of a Court meddle with, and admit of Sutes in Matters wherewith they have nothing to do, nor have colour of Jurisdiction; as if the Court of Common Pleas meddle with matters of the Crown, the Leet or Justice of Peace with Actions between party and party, or the Court of a Manor with Land without the Manor; in these and such like cases where the Court, or Judge, or Justice of Peace, shall send out any Proces or Warrant to arrest, or do any execution, and the party is thereupon arrested, or any execution is done, he may have this Action, not onely against the party, or Ministerial officers that do make the arrest, and do execution, but also against the Judicial officer that doth send the Warrant or Proces: But if the Judge or Judicial officer have Jurisdiction of the cause, and do onely mistake in the manner and order of proceeding; as if in the Court of a Manor where they should hold Plea by Plaint, if they do hold Plea by Writ, or a Capias is awarded in the Common Pleas without an Original, or a Capias is awarded against a Duke, or such a person against whom a Capias doth not lie, or Proces doth issue out in an unjust Sute, and the Sheriff or Officer doth execute this, or a Justice of Peace doth send a Warrant to carry a man to Gaol for Felony, without any Information or Examination; in these and such like cases the party grieved may not have this Action, either against him that doth execute, or him that sent the Warrant; And yet it is said, That if a Justice send a man to Gaol without Examination, that he may have this Action against the Justice Mich. 8 Jac. B. R. And yet if in this case the Proces or Warrant come from a Court of Justice, it seems no Action will lie against the Judges of the Court, for a Court cannot be sued: But if a Justice of Peace shall send his Warrant to an inferior officer to carry J. S. to Gaol, because he doth not pay him a Debt of ten pound he oweth to him, or to J. O. and the officer doth execute this Warrant; in this case J. S. may have this Action against the Justice of Peace and Officer both. Co. 10. The case of the Marshalsey. 8. 6. 22 Ass. 64. Plow. 394. Kelw. 129. 98.

If a Justice of Peace send a general Warrant to arrest a man, and express no cause in it, and the Officer execute it; it is said this Action will lie against the Justice onely, and not against the Officer, M. 8 Jac. B. R.

If the Sheriff have a Capias ad respondendum against me, and make a Warrant to his ordinary Bailiff to arrest me, and he doth so, and the Sheriff doth not return the Writ this Action will lie against the Sheriff, not against the Bailiff for this. But if the Bailiff which which made the arrest, were the Bailiff of a Franchise, contra. 20 H. 7. 1. 2 H. 7. 22. If a Plaintiff in any Sute bring an unlawful Warrant to the Sheriff, and shew him the party, and require him to arrest him; or bring him a good Warrant, and shew him the wrong party, and require him to arrest him; in both these cases the party grieved may have this Action against them both. So also for any thing done against the Goods of the Defendant by the Plaintiffs mis-information, Broo. Tresp. 307. 99. Officer. 8. No Action will lie against an Heir, Executor, or Administrator for a Trespass done by the Ancestor or Testator, Actio personalis moritur cum persona. See Imprisonment.

A Servant or Ward may have this Action against their Master or Guardian, if they do abuse them. 28 H. 6. 25. If many men do a Trespass to me, I may sue all, some, or any one of them at my pleasure, Co. 81. 59. If a man force another man to strike me; or thrust him upon my ground, for this wrong I may have this Action against him that did force, but not against him that was forced. Hob. Rep. pl. 176. Motes case, 2 Car. By Chief Baron at Sarum Assises. If I deliver another my Goods to keep to my use, and he give or sell them to a stranger; in this case, though I may have this Action, or an Action of the Case against him, yet I may not have either of them against the stranger, Lit. sect. 70. Co. upon it. And yet if my servant shall sell or give away my Goods to a stranger, and he take them away without delivery of my servant; it is said in this case I may have this Action against the stranger. Noy 111. 21 H. 7. 39. But if one man take away my Goods by wrong (that is) so take them from me, as by his taking he gets a property in them, and then he doth deliver them over to another stranger; or another stranger doth take them away from him by wrong, so that he gets a property in them; in this case it seems I may not have this Action against the second taker. Broo. Tresp. 329. 21 H. 7. 39. And yet it is said, That if a stranger buy my Goods of one that hath stoln them from me in a Market or Fair, knowing them to be stoln; in this case I may have this Action against him; as well as against the thief, D. & St. 149. If one disseise me of my Land, and afterwards another disseise him, or he make a Feoffment or Lease of it to another, and the second Disseisee, Feoffee or Lessee do Trespass upon the Land; in these cases I may not have this Action against the second Disseisor, Feoffee or Lessee, as I may against the first Disseisor, who must answer me all the Damages done by the rest. Co. 111. 51. 6. 7. 9. 13 H. 7. 15. 10 H. 7. 27.

If I have a free Warren or Feeding in another mans ground, and the owner of the ground disturb me, I may have this Action as well against him, as I might have had it against another that did me Trespass. 5 H. 7. 10. Dyer 285. So the Lessee for life or years may have this Action as well against the Lessor for a Trespass done by him upon the Land, as against any other man. 5 H. 7. 10. So if a Feoffor having made a Feoffment to me upon Condition, enter before the Condition broken, and after the Condition is broken, and then he enter again; in this case, for his first Entry, I may have this Action against him. 10 H. 7. 22. If a Hue and Cry be levied without cause, and an Officer having some cause of suspicion, arrest me; in this case I may not have this Action against him, but against him that first levied it. 21 H. 7. 27. If a Lord distrain upon his very Tenant wrongfully, and the Beasts return to his Tenant, it seems he cannot have this Action against the Lord for the wrong, but he might have relieved them had they been impounded. F. N. B. 96.

This Action will lie for a Maim, Imprisonment, Battery, or Assault done to the person of another: For if another man shall by any violent act, maim me, viz. deprive me of the use of any of my principal Members of my Body, as my Hand, Leg, Finger, Eye, one of my Fore-teeth, or the like, whereby my strength is impaired, and I am made the more unfit for publick service; in this case I may either have this Action, or an Appeal of Maim, which I will; and by either of these I shall recover Damages according to my hurt. But if the hurt be small onely, making a deformity in the Body, as when the Ear or Nose is cut off, or the grinding Teeth put out; in these cases the party hurt, hath no remedy but by this Action. Finches Ley 204. Stamf. lib. 1. cap. 44. See Exod. 21. 18, 19. & 22. 5. If another man do unjustly imprison me, or keep my Wife or Ward from me, I may have this Action.

Imprisonment.

But

But for the further opening of this point of Trespass for an unjust imprisonment, that we may set forth where an Action of Trespass will lie for a false imprisonment, these things are to be known.

Arrest.

1. If a man shall lay hands upon me, and hold me in his arms, keep me in mine own or another mans house, tie me to a Tree or post, put me in a Prison or Stocks, or any other way restrain me of my liberty against my will; all these are Arrests and false Imprisonments for which this Action lieth. So if a known Officer had but said, I arrest you in the Kings name, and had laid no hands on him, this had been an Arrest. But if one do onely bid me stand or stay, and say that he doth intend or mean to arrest me, but doth not lay hands upon me; or if one carry or detain me with my consent, as a Boat-man in a Boat, Coach-man in a Coach, or the like; this is no Arrest, nor will this Action lie for this. And yet if a Coach-man carry me further then I am willing, for this I may have this Action. Cap. 66. 69. Broo. F. Imprif. 37. 10. 43. Ed. 3. 16. But to thrust another in a great throng or a crowd, is not an assault nor actionable. By Baton Thorp at Gloucester Assises. 1654.

False Imprisonment.

2. The liberty of a man is much favored in Law, and therefore if any man restrain me thereof without good warrant, and against Law, I may have an Action of false Imprisonment against him, which is in the nature of an Action of Trespass, F.N.B. Trespass, in toto.

Where an Imprisonment shall be said to be unlawful, upon which this Action will lie or not, but it is justifiable.

3. Then a man is said to be unlawfully imprisoned, when either there is no good cause for his Imprisonment, or he that doth imprison, hath no good Authority to do it, or having good Authority, he doth not pursue it, or he doth arrest at a forbidden time, or in a forbidden place, or the like. But we shall handle this point apart, and shew at large where an Arrest or Imprisonment shall be said to be unlawful or not, in these following cases.

Sett. 6. In respect of the cause or end, & where, and why one may be imprisoned, or not. For Debt, &c.

If I owe another man money, or have done him a Trespas, and he of his own head without any Writ, imprison me, till I pay him his debt, or till I give him a recompence for the Trespas; or if a man imprison me till I pay him money, enter into a Bond or Statute, or make a Release, or the like; in all these cases this Action is given for my Relief, Old Book of Entries, 587. F.N.B. 88. And yet in case where I am duly imprisoned by some legal Warrant, but in a false or feigned Sute, where no money is due, or the money is paid, or the like; in these cases the Imprisonment is lawful, and I may not have this Action for the Imprisonment, 43 Ed. 3. 35. If a man be wounded and like to die, any man may arrest him that gave the wound, and he may be kept till it be seen that the danger is past. But if he be kept after, an Action will lie for this. 16 H. 7. 28. Broo. F. Imp. 6. Brownl. 1 part. 198.

For suspicion of Felony.

If one arrest me upon a suspicion of Felony, when in truth no Felony is done; or if there be any Felony done, there is no more cause to suspect me then any other man in the world; in this case, and for this wrong I may have this Action. But on the other side, if a Felony be done, or noised abroad to be done, and there be some cause to suspect me more then another, and he that doth suspect me doth arrest me, he may justify it, and if I sue him for it, he will avoid the Sute: But for the opening hereof, take these things.

1. One man may be justly suspected more then another of a Felony, if either he be a suspicious person, and generally thought to be a thief, and doth live near the place where the Felony was done, or the goods stolen be found in his hands, or there be Hue and Cry after such a kinde of man, or if upon the Hue and Cry he flie, or if he were seen near about the time or place, where and when the Felony was done, or if a Felony be done, and the common report is that 7. S. did it; this is sufficient to ground an Arrest upon. Brownl. 1 part 3. For these and many such like causes, one may be suspected before another.

2. In this case, he that hath cause to suspect, not another, may arrest the party suspected; for if I suspect another man for the Felony done, and tell a third person of it; in this case this third person, albeit he be an Officer, may not arrest him upon my suspicion. And yet if haply upon my relation, he also do suspect him, then he may arrest him upon his own suspicion, for it is a principle of Law, That one man cannot arrest for Felony upon another mans suspicion.

3. He that doth suspect, be he officer or other man, may arrest the party suspect of his own head, and without any Warrant from a Justice of Peace. But the common course is at this day to do it by the Warrant of a Justice of Peace, and this now in respect of the common usage may be lawful and justifiable, Communis error facit jus.

4. If the party suspected will not submit and yield himself, but resist, the party that doth arrest may justify the beating of him; and if it cannot be avoided in the apprehending of him, but that he must kill him, he shall not be punished for it. Murder justifiable.

5. The party that doth arrest may justify the breaking of any house to take him, after demand of the opening of the doors. Breaking a House.

6. The party arresting after the arrest made, may bring the prisoner to a Justice of peace, Constable, or to prison, at his choice.

7. If he bring him and deliver him to a Constable, the Constable may justify the detainment of him.

8. If the Constable after he is delivered to him, let him go, yet the arrest of the party was justifiable.

9. If it be an Officer that doth bring the prisoner to the Goal, the Goaler is bound to receive him, but if it be not an Officer it is said the Goaler may chuse whether he will receive him without the Mittimus of the Justice of peace: however (in my opinion) as he may lawfully, so he shall do well to receive him in this case.

10. If the Officer let the prisoner go after he is delivered to him, it seems he that did first arrest him, may arrest him again.

11. If the Goaler will not receive the person suspect because he is not brought by the Justice Warrant, the party arresting may carry him back, and take course to secure him.

12. If the prisoner be sick he may keep him in his house a while, till he be fit to be carried, and if he be dangerous or desperate, he may secure him a while in the Stocks, or manacle him, if need be.

13. If the Constable arrest a man for Felony and he flee, and another man without command of the Constable arrest him, it hath been said that this arrest is unlawful, Sed quere, for I doubt it, Broo. F. Impr. 24. 27. Trespass. 9. 207. 335. 13 Ed. 4. 9. 7 H. 4. 3. 14 H. 8. 1. 27 H. 8. 23. Pl. 40: 13 H. 7: 10: 5 H. 7: 4: 19 Ed. 49: 22 Ed. 4. 25.

Watchmen and Constables, and such like Officers may arrest night-walkers that are suspicious, and keep them all night, and if there be cause, as if they be dangerous, the Officers want help, or the like, put them into the Stocks till the morning, and then bring them to a Justice of peace to be examined. But if such Officer shall arrest and use me so without any cause of suspicion at all, I may have remedy by this action, St. 5 Ed. 3. Ch. 14. 4 H. 7. 15. Co. 9. 68. Night-walkers.

If I binde my self to pay money, and agree that if I pay it not the Debtee himself shall take and imprison me till I pay it, if he do so I may have this Action for it, 28 Ed. 3. 3. So if a keeper suffer me (being his prisoner) voluntarily to escape, upon my promise that if I render not my self again by a day, that he shall arrest me, and I do not, and thereupon he do arrest me, I may have this Action against him, Co. 3. 44. By agreement.

If I be a Ward to one by Tenure, and he by himself or some other seize me, and keep me, no Action lieth for this, Plow. 294. Broo. Impr. 13. 21 H. 6. 5. Old B. entries. 584. Ward.

If one Imprison me for a Fine imposed upon me in a Leet, except it be in case where the Lord can prescribe to imprison for a Fine; in this Case I may have this Action. And yet regularly wheresoever a man is fined in a Court of Record, he may be imprisoned, for imprisonment is incident to a Fine till it be paid, Broo. Impr. 97. Co. 8. Fine.

Godfreys Case. If a man be mad, and like in his fury to do mischief to himself or others; in this case his Friends may binde or shut him up to prevent it, or if one be like to be drowned or burned, any man may pull him up out of the fire or water with violence To prevent hurt.
Mad-man.

to save him, no action will lie for this, Plow. 18. Br. F. Impr. 35. Old B. Entries 555. So if men be fighting, or about to fight, and like to kill one another, any one may take and keep away one of them from the other, and if need be lock him up in a house for a reasonable time, till the heat be past, to the end that he may not kill nor be killed, & no action will lie for this, for it is justifiable. For the better understanding of this, take these cases. 1. If two men be fighting, any man may stand between them to part them. To keepe peace and prevent murder.

2. And

2. And yet if in this case a man shall use them more extremely then he need, or do any thing before there is need; for this he may perhaps be liable to this Action. And therefore if an Officer shall, upon a few hot words, take one of the parties and put him in the Stocks; or if an Officer after an affray is past, and when no hurt is done, shall carry one of the Affrayers to prison, or when there is cause shall keep the Affrayer longer then is needful, he may be liable to this Action, Bro Impr. 3.

3. If one be about to do a Robbery, threaten to kill another, abuse an Officer, or be taken in incontinencie, or the like, the Officer may arrest him, and carry him to a Justice to put in Bail, or be ordered according to Law.

4. If the Justice do nothing with him, yet the Arrest is lawful by the Officer, 5 H. 7. 6. Bro. F. Impr. 20. 13 H. 7. 10. Old B. Entries, 554.

If any men ride armed terribly, or any Insurrection be, all Officers of the Peace, and others in their assistance, may arrest, imprison and disarm them, Bro. Tresp. 184.

Escape.

If one arrest me on a Justice of Peace's Warrant, and I get away from him against his will, he may take me again where-ever he can find me, and justifie it. So likewise may a Sheriff his Prisoner in Execution for Debt. And yet if the Sheriff shall suffer him voluntarily to escape, and after arrest him again; this second Arrest is unlawful, and this Action may be had for it. Otherwise it is (as it seems) upon a second Arrest by a Justice of Peace's Warrant, Bro. Impr. 8. Co. 3. 44.

Sureties of the Peace.

A Justice of Peace may require any man to give Sureties of the Peace or Good-behaviour; and if he refuse to do it, may cause him to be imprisoned. And if a man arrested by the Warrant of a Justice of Peace to bring a man to give Sureties for the Peace or Good-behaviour, shall refuse to put in Bail, the Officer without any new Warrant may carry him to Gaol. And if the Warrant from the Justice be, to bring him before him, or some other Justice of Peace of the County, the Officer, not the Prisoner, shall have the choice to what Justice of Peace to bring him: It therefore he bring him to one he is not willing to go to, or if he refuse, carry him to Gaol, he may not have this Action against him for this, Co. 5. 59. Old B. Entries, 598, 599, 560. Bro. Tresp. 177. 5 H. 7. 6.

Officers.

A man may be imprisoned for divers other causes, and in divers other cases; as for divers offences done against the Common-Law; as an Officer for neglect of his duty, an Officer or any other for disobedience or contempt to a Court, an Officer for making of a false Return, and the like. And therefore if a man be duly imprisoned for any such cause, he may not have this Action for this Imprisonment. But if one be imprisoned for any other cause for which Imprisonment doth not lie, the party grieved may have this Action, Bro. Impr. 2. 7. Also a man may be imprisoned for divers causes, and in divers cases, by authority of divers Acts of Parliament; as for Arrearages of Account before Auditors, in cases of Witchcraft, Forgery of Deeds, Forcible Entry, Riot, Rout, unlawful Assembly, for lack of Distress sufficient, or refusing to pay a Rate or a penalty for an offence done, Officers for refusing to execute their Office, or to account, Alehouse-keepers for selling Ale after they are suppressed, Officers or others for not obeying the Orders and Warrants of Justices of Peace in or out of Sessions, Foresters, Regrators, Ingrossers, Rogues, and many others. And therefore in all these cases where the Law doth warrant an Imprisonment, and the party is duly imprisoned according to that Law, he may not have an Action of False Imprisonment against him that doth arrest him, or for this Imprisonment. But for any threatening of a hurtful blow, as to hold up his fist in anger, and saying, I could find in my heart, &c. or, I will sell thee to the ground, if the man threatened be within his reach: Or for pushing or striking at, though he miss the mark, or thrusting a man, as for menaces and assaults, this Action doth lie. By Baron Thorp, at Gloucester, 1654.

Sec. 7.
In respect of the authority by which it is done.

Then an Imprisonment is said to be unlawful, and gives this Action, when albeit the cause may be good, yet,

1. He that makes the Arrest doth it without any colour of authority at all; as when a Creditor of his own head without authority from any Court shall arrest the Debtor for his Debt. Or,

2. If he have a colour of authority, yet he hath no good authority; as when a Court

Court or Officer, shall give a power, not having it, to arrest a man's body, on a Corporation, without a custom, shall make a Law of Imprisonment, and under this authority a man doth arrest, as a Constable shall arrest a Scold, and put her in the Cucking-stool before she is presented in a Court, and he have a Warrant to do it. Or 3. When a Court or Officer hath a good power, but doth not well make it out; as if the Judges of the Common-pleas by word, without a Writ, command the arrest of a Debtor, or send a Writ without a Seal, and the Sheriff doth execute it; and yet a known Officer in a Corporation may Arrest by his Mace without any precept. Or 4. When the Authority is well made forth, but it is not well pursued and executed; as when a warrant is made to three Commissaries of Division, and two of them do it, it seems this is not good, but all or one of them may do it, and this is good, or if the Warrant be to cause one to finde sureties of the Peace, or to arrest him, and the Officer do arrest him before he requite sureties, and he refuse it. So if the Warrant be to arrest him if he doth not give sureties; and he doe give sureties, and yet the Officer doth arrest him afterwards. And yet it doth not help in these cases, if when the arrest is made, it be done without Warrant, or without a good Warrant. If the party arresting do afterwards procure a good Warrant, this will not make the arrest Lawful. *Co. 4. 64. 8. 67. 10. H. 7. 17. 26. Broo. Tresp. 339. 5 Ed. 4. 12. Broo. F. Impr. 17. 1. Any other man as well as a Constable may arrest a man out-lawed, or suspect of felony, and no Action will lie for this. Plow. 49. Dien. 120.

2. A Watchman or Constable Ex Officio, may arrest suspicious persons walking by night, and secure them. But other persons that are not Officers it seems may not do so; if therefore such persons shall do so, the party arrested may have this action. Co. 2. 68. 4 H. 7. 5. 18. Stat. 5 Ed. 3. 14.

3. Constables and such like Officers, may Ex Officio arrest Persons breaking the Peace, or committing lewdness together. But other men cannot do so, unless it be in case of an affray and danger of murder, to part them, and keep them asunder only till the heat be past. And therefore if I and another be fighting, and one that is not officer take me and put me in the stocks; I may have this action against him. Fischerly. 336. Fitz. Barre. 102. 12 H. 7. 18. Broo. F. Imp. 28.

4. If a Constable make a Deputy, and the Deputy arrest me in case where the Constable may arrest me; it seems this is lawfull and not Actionable. M. 13. Jac. B. R. Phelps Case.

5. If a Sheriff, Constable, or any such like officer, in the execution of his office (being to arrest me) require others to aid him, and they do so, I may have this action no more against them then against the officer himself, for men are bound in these cases to assist. Co. 3. 66. 5. H. 7. 15. Broo. Tresp. 335.

6. A Justice of peace himself may require any man to give sureties of the peace or good behaviour when he hath cause, and if the party refuse, he may himself arrest and imprison him. Broo. Tresp. 177.

Any person, Lay or Ecclesiastick, but Bishops and Peers (who are privileged persons) may be arrested; and for these also, if a Sheriff have a Capias out of the Common-pleas to arrest such a person, and he do arrest his body, hereby the Sheriff may not be charged in this Action. *Fieri non debet sed factum valet. B. If a Sheriff or any of his Officers arrest a man upon a Writ after the day of the return thereof is past, this is unlawful, and the party arrested may have this action. And so some say the Law is, if he do arrest before the day of the Test of the Writ, Co. 8. 66. Dier 242. And yet if a man be arrested on a Capias or a Latitat the morning of the same day whereon the Writ is returnable; it seems this is a good and justifiable arrest, Trin. 3. fac. per two Judges.

2. If a Warrant of a Justice be to arrest and bring a man to the next Sessions, and the Officer do thereupon arrest him after the Sessions, this is an unlawful arrest, Trin. 9. Car. B. R.

3. If one have a Warrant to arrest me from a Justice of Peace or the Sheriff, and before the Warrant is executed the Sheriff or Justice of Peace is discharged of his Office, and the Officer hath notice of it, and yet he do afterwards arrest me upon this Warrant, in this case I may have this Action, Dier 41.

By the new Act of Parliament, 19 April 1650: all Arrests on that day, save only for Felony, breach of the Peace, and profanation of the day, are made unlawful, and the Arresters
to be punished

4. An arrest may be upon any day of the week, and upon any part of the day or night; and yet let the Officer see to it, for if he use to make arrests on the Lords day, or if he arrest a Minister going to, or returning from the Church, or in the Church, especially whiles he is about the service of God; this is an offence that was punishable in the Star Chamber, and is punishable by binding the offender to the good behaviour, Co. 9. 66. Trin. 3. fac. per 3 Justices. Stat. 1. R. 2. Ch. 15. 50 Ed. 3. 5.

5. If a Warrant be from a Justice of Peace directed to an Officer to cause me to finde sureties of the Peace, and I hearing of it, do voluntarily binde my self before a Justice of Peace, and have a Superfedeas from him, and give notice hereof to the Officer, and yet he do afterwards arrest me, I may have this action against him, Polson de pace. 20.

Se8. 11.
In respect of the place.

1. An arrest may be in any place, Church, House or Field, only let the Officer see to it, that he do it not in the Church, especially that he disturb not the service of God; for however the arrest be good, yet the thing done is a misdemeanor punishable, so also let him take heed that he enter not into another mans house to make his arrest, when it is in a suit brought by a private person, and not in case of the Commonwealth, wherein one may justifie the entering into and breaking of a house, if a man cannot otherwise do it. And let him see he do it within his own Precinct, for in these cases he may make himself liable to this action. And yet in case of arrest in another mans house, the Arrest is good, and the Officer not punishable for this by any Action of the party arrested, but the Owner of the house may bring this Action for his entry into the house, Co. 9. 66. 14 fac. B. R. per Ch. Justice.

2. If the officer arrest a man in a franchise or privileged place, (within his Precinct otherwise) this arrest is good. And yet the Lord of the Franchise may have an Action of the case against the Officer for intruding into his Franchise, Co. 9. 66. Ch. 7. ff. B. R. in 15 fac.

Escape.

3. In some cases the Sheriff or other Officer may go out of his County or Precincts as the Sheriff upon the escape of a prisoner, or a speciall Writ to remove a prisoner. But if a prisoner be with his Keeper only in another County where the Sheriff hath not to do, and unless it be in the cases before; this is an escape, and the prisoner may have this action against the Sheriff, Dier 66. Also the Justice of Peace may specially command an Officer out of his Precinct, and by such speciall command an officer may Arrest out of his precinct, Broo. F. Impr. 26. Westm. ch. 1. 34.

Se8. 12.
In respect of matter subsequent to the Arrest.
False return.
Refuse bail.

If a Sheriff or a Bailiff of a Franchise Arrest me upon a Capias ad Respondendum, and afterwards he do not return the Writ, or do return him Non est inventus; in these cases I may have this Action, Co. 5. 90 Kelw. 3. 66. 89. H. 7. 11.

If the Sheriff or his Bailiffs Arrest me, and I am bailable, and offer them sufficient bail, and they refuse it, for the imprisonment afterwards this action lieth, Dier 25 Pl. 60. F. N. B. 152.

If

If any Officer after I am to be discharged, having put in bail or otherwise, Keep me, or having let me go, Arrest me again for undue Fees; I may have this Action for the detainment afterwards. But for due Fees it seems the Officer may keep the prisoner till he pay them. For Fees.

If one after he hath arrested me, when he should carry me to a Justice, or to a Goal that I may be in a way of Triall or delivery, he keep me at his house, or in another place, unless it be in a case of necessity, and so long as the necessity shall continue; I may have this Action against him, Kewl. 45. Plow. 38. Bro. F. Impr. 25. Brownl. 2 part. 41. Stat. 5. H. 4. ch. 10. Keep the prisoner from trial.

If a known sworn common Bailly Arrest me by a Warrant from the Sheriff, and I submit to the Arrest, and desire sight of the Warrant, and he will not shew it, nor declare the contents of it (that is) shew the cause, at whose suit, and for what sum, and in what Court, &c. I may have this Action against him, and if it be another Bailiff, he must shew the Warrant it self, otherwise the party arrested may have this Action against him. But in case where I do not desire the sight of the Warrant, or do not submit to the Arrest but strive to escape, in this case the Bailiff is not bound to shew the Warrant, or declare the contents of it, Cook. 9. 69. 6. 55. 21 H. 7. 23. 14 H. 7. 9. Refuse to shew his Authority.

If a Justice of Peace send for a man about a Felony, and then presently send him to Goal without any examination; it seems this Action will lie for him against the Justice of Peace, M. 8. Jac. B. R. If the Sheriffs Bailly having Arrested me upon an Execution, I pay the money and get a Superfedeas from the Sheriff to discharge me, and the Bailiff pretending he cannot read the Superfedeas or the like, refuse to deliver me; I may have this Action against him, Trin. 37 Eliz. Co. B. Stringers Case. And by Just. Whislock at Glouc. Assises. 6. Car. 13 H. 7. 16. 1 H. 7. 28. So if the Sheriff himself after he hath arrested me, and I get and shew him a Legall discharge, as a Superfedeas from above, the Plaintiffs Release, and a power from him to deliver me; he shall notwithstanding keep me prisoner still, in this case I may have this Action against him. M. 13 Jac. B. R. Wisbers Case. 12 Barr 253. Not examination of a Felon.

If one do wrongfully beat or hurt me, or cause me to be hurt by setting his dog upon me, or the like; I may have this Action against him, Finchesley 263. But for the further opening of this point take these following cases. Sett. 13. Battery and Assault.

1. If one hurt me against his will, or by accident, as at a Training, Tilt, Foot-ball, Fence, or other play, by the glance of an Arrow, cast of a Stone or the like, I may have this Action against him: and yet if the thing done, be done by an unavoidable necessity, wherein he that doth it is no waies faulty, as if he run upon my Sword, or Musket as I am about to discharge it, and thereby hurt himself, or the like; for these things no Action will lie. Hob. Rep. pl. 176 Bro. Tresp. 178. 294. 6 Ed. 4. 7. 10 Ed. 4. 6. So if one be forced to strike me, or thrust upon me, I may not sue him that was forced for this, 9 Ed. 4. 37. 21 H. 7. 27. Accidents.

2. If one make but an Assault upon me first (and what an assault is we have shewed before, and shall do after) I may then beat him and justifie it, but I may not wound him, and it is not material in this case whether I be in any imminent danger or not, Old B. Entries 644. Necessity unavoidable.

3. If one go about to enter into my house, or to take away my goods against my will, I may in defence thereof gently put him back, and if that will not do, I may beat him and justifie it. So it seems if a man have taken my goods I may presently retake them, and if he will not deliver them, do as before. But if a man go about to stop or turn my water-course, or enter into my Close against my will, I may not make this resistance. And yet in these cases I may molliter manus imponere upon the Trespassor to keep him off, and justifie this, Curia Pas. 7 Jac. B. R. Old B. entries. 554. 553. 14 H. 7. Baron Henden at Glouc. Assises. 17 Car. Brownl. 1 part. 218. Of his own wrong.

4. A friend also may justifie the beating of a stranger in the defence of the life and person of his friend, as a Wife for a Husband, a Husband for a Wife, a Father for a Childe, a Childe for a Father, a Servant for a Master or Mistress, but not a Master for a Servant; and in these cases they may disarm him that doth make the assault, till the heat be past, Bro. Tresp. 37. Old B. entries 553. 554. In defence of ones House and Goods.

Wound, what.

5. Albeit in these cases the beating of another is justifiable, yet the wounding, that is, the breaking of the flesh and letting out the blood is not justifiable; 16 Ed. 4. 11. 21 H. 8. 39. 27. Kellw. 92. 9 Ed. 4. 28. Bro. Tresp. 37.

Rogue.

6. Moderate correction may be given to a Rogue according to the Statute, and no Action will lie for this battery.

Correction of Children, Scholars, &c.

7. A Master may give moderate correction to his Apprentice, Scholar, or Servant, and no Action will lie against the Master for this; but if the correction be excessive, this Action will lie, Bro. Trespas. 353. 349. Old B. entries. 555.

Opposers of Authority.

8. If any man arrested upon a Writ, or for felony, shall not submit to the Arrest but resist, and there be no other remedy, they that Arrest may beat or wound him; and if any others shall go about to prevent the Arrest, or after Arrest to release the prisoner, they that make the Arrest may justify the beating of the opposers, 5 H. 7. 5. 4 H. 7. 18. 21 H. 7. 39. 2 Ed. 4. 6. Fitz. Corone 263.

9. If two be fighting together, any man that stands by may go between them and do his best to part them, and justify this; but he may not justify the beating or hurting of either of them, unless he do first beat or strike at him, Per Justices Jones, Lent Assizes at Glouc. 5. Cap.

10. If a man trouble a Congregation at Divine Service. the Minister or any other for him may as it seems lay hands upon him, and put him out of the Church and justifie it, Old B. entries 554.

Self. 14. Assault, what.

If another man do unlawfully set upon me, attempt to beat me, strike at me though he do not hit me, or hold up his weapon to strike at me being within his reach, thrust or push me, cast stones at me, though he do not hit me cast, drink in my face or upon my clothes, beset my house, tear my clothes or the like, this is an assault for which I may have this Action. So if one Ravish me being a Woman, this is a foul assault and an Imprisonment also, for which I may be relieved by this Action. But if one offer to take away my hunting dog from me by force, or strike at me at a great distance, so that he could neither hit me nor put me in fear of being hit or stricken, or if one strike at me, hurl stones at me, or do any such like act as before, merrily or accidentally, and not purposely and seriously, in these cases and for these cases it seems no Action will lie, Finchessley 29. 40 Ed. 3. 40. Bro. Trespas 336. 236. 9 Ed. 4. 26. 23 Ass. 60: Old B. entries 553.

Menace and lying in wait.

If one do threaten me to my face or behind my back, to kill or beat me, or lie in wait and watch to do so, inasmuch that I dare not follow my business as at other times, and I have any speciall loss by this, I may have this Action for my remedy. But if he threaten only to sue me or the like, or if I have no speciall loss by the threatening; no Action will lie for this, 18 Ed. 4. 28. 10 Ed. 4. 28. 7 Ed. 4. 24. 3 H. 6. 18. And yet if a man furiously pursue me, that I cannot avoid him, having fled from him as far as I can; I may then threaten to kill him, if he will not depart, and justifie it, Bro. Trespas 28.

Violence offered to a man in his Wife, Child, Servant, &c.]

Thus we have done with the Trespasses that are done to a mans own person; now we are to speak to the Trespasses that are done to him in that which is his, that is, his Wife, Child, Servant, Tenant, Ward, House, Land, Goods or Cattel.

If one carry or keep away my Wife from me against my will, I may have this Action; and yet if my Wife be like to be drowned or be sick, or otherwise in imminent danger, and another take her up and bring her home to my house, or any safe place to succour and preserve her, or if one at her request take her up and carry her from a fair, to ease her; no Action will lie for either of these things. So it is said if I abuse my Wife, and a friend take her and carry her to sue out a Divorce, or to have a Warrant of the Peace against the Husband when there is cause, that for this I may not have this Action, sed Quare of this, 21 H. 7. 27. 9 Ed. 4. 33. F. N. B. 91. Old B. entries 553. 20 H. 7. 2. So if one take or keep away my Ward from me being his Guardian or my Son and Heir, knowing it to be so, I may have this Action. So if one take away my Son or Daughter: So if one threaten or lie in wait for my Servants to kill or maim them, that they dare not follow their business, or maim or hurt my Servant that he doth not, nor can do me the service he did formerly, whereby I have any speciall loss, I may have this Action for remedy against this loss. But if

if the threatening be only to sue my Servants, or the like, or whatever it be, if I have no special loss by it, no Action will lie for it, Old B. Entr. 552. 20 H.7.5. 9 H.7.7. Bro. Tresp. 388.609. So if one take or keep away my Servant from me, knowing him to be my Servant. And so likewise it is if one threaten my Tenants at will, so that they depart from my Lands, and I have any special loss thereby, I may have relief by this Action. But if my Lessees for life or years be so threatened, no Action will lie by me for this threatening. Old B. Entr. 569. 593. 582. 583. So if I be a Gaoler, and one take away my Prisoner from me; or I be a Lord, and one take away my Villain from me; or I be a Soldier and have taken a Prize in War, and another take it from me, I must have this Action.

If any man enter into, burn or break my House, pull down or break down my Walls, or break or carry away my Wainscot, Doors, Furnaces or Windows of my House, enter into my Orchard, Garden, Close or Lands, and tread, ear, plow, root up, cut or spoil the Corn, Grass, Wood, Hedges or Trees thereon growing, or rob me of the Fruit of my Garden or Orchard, set up Pales or a Fold in my Ground, dig or carry away my Land, Coals, Mines or Stones, fill my Ditches: If one dig, root up, break or take away my Poles, Hedges, Gates, Pales, Fences; or if one break, spoil, or take away my Money, Plate, Corn, Grain, Chest, Householdstuff, Wood cut, Weapons, Ship, Boat, Wain, Writings, Bottles, Wooll shorne, or the like Goods, or unlawfully distrain any such thing of mine, or abuse it after it is taken as a Distress, or suffer his Goods to lie in my House, or upon my Ground Damage-fesant: If one kill, beat, hurt, chase or take away my Cattel, Hound, Hawk, Mastiff, Pheasants, Partridges, Poppinjays, Thrushes, or the like, being tamed and using my House, pull or shear my Sheep, strike my Horse in travel, and by that means it throw me down, take away Goods waived, or an Estray or Felons goods belonging to me, or unlawfully arrest or distrain my Cattel, or abuse them being distrained, or suffer his Cattel to be upon my Ground Damage-fesant: If one kill, hurt, or take away my Deer, or any such like Beast, my Cocks, Hens, or my Partridges, or any such like Fowl, while it is tame and using about my House, my young Pidgeons or Hawks out of their nests or boxes: If one hunt in my free Warren, destroy my Fish, or disturb my Fishing, hinder me in my Fold of my Cattel, put any thing in the water I use for my self or my Cattel to infect it: If one do stop Ditches, and thereby or otherwise cause the water to overflow or run over my Ground, take Wine out of my Bottles and put water in the room, dig Trenches overthwart the way to hinder my going to my Ground, or let out the water out of my Mill-pond that I cannot grinde, break or cut my Sluces or the head of my Pond, and let out my Fish; or break the head of another Pool, and let so much water into my Pond, that it doth overflow, and the Fish do go out: If any man take away my Tythes, being Parson: In all these cases before, and such like cases, I may have this Action for my remedy, Brownl. 1 par. 30.

It is said also, that for taking excessive Toll of me by a Millard, I may have this Action; and that if one disturb me in a Market or Fair where it is due, I may have this remedy. Bro. Tresp. 41. and F. N. B. Tresp. in toto. Old N. B. Tresp. in toto. Co. 9. 112. But for this see more afterwards. If a Devisee of a Term or Goods, enter into the Lands or take the Goods before the assent of the Executor, he may have this Action against him, Bro. Tresp. 25.

If I have a Fishing or a Warren in another mans Ground, and the Owner of the Ground or another take, hunt, kill or destroy my Fish or my Game, I may have this Action for my relief, 12 H.8.3. Kelw. 30. If I have Fish in a Trunk or Pond, and a stranger take them away, I may have this Action against him. If I have Hounds, Spaniels, Mastiffs, Greyhounds, or such like useful Dogs, and any man take them from me, or hurt them with me, I may have this Action against him, Hob. Rep. pl. 363. 12 H.8.3. 18 H.8.2. And yet if one have a Dog that doth use to kill my Conies in my Warren, or a Hawk that doth use to kill my Pidgeons about my Pidgeon-house, and I kill him; no Action will lie against me for this. Sir Persival Willoughbies Case. Bro. Tresp. 387. Madhursts Case, M. 2 Jac.

If I have a Deer, Hare or Cony, or any such like beast; a Pidgeon, Swan, Hawk, Pheasant, Partridge, Parrot, Black-bird, Thrush, Popinjay, or the like Bird that is tame and Wrong done to a man in his House or Lands, or Goods or Cattel.

Sett. 15. In respect of the case, and where this Action will lie for such a thing done, or not. Matters of pleasure.

Wild Beasts and Birds and doth use my house, and any man do take them from me, and hurt them with me, I may have this action. But if any man take any such creature whiles it is wilde, no Action will lie for this, nor if once they were tame and after become wilde again. If one take away my Hawk in flight, or my Deer out of my Warren whiles I am in hunting of him, I may have this action, 12 H.8.3. 3 H.6.5. 18 H.8.2. Broo. Trespass. 407. 215. Hob. Rep. pl. 363.

If one come into my Warren or priviledged place, though it be not my Ground, and there hunt, kill or take away my game of Fish, Beasts or Fowl, or kill my Cones, in my own ground that is no Warren; I may have this action against him. And if a man spring a Fesant in his own Warren, and it flie into another mans Ground which is no Warren; he may enter the ground and take the Hawk and Fesant; but if they flie into another mans Warren, there his entry is a trespass. But if one kill my wilde hares or conies out of my free Warren and out of my Ground, I can have no action for this 12 H.8.3. Kelw. 30. F. N. B. 87. 38 Ed. 3. 10 Broo. Trespass. 1111:

Damag fefant.

If a mans goods or Cattel be in my house or ground Damage Fesant, albeit it be against the Owners will and without his knowledge, yet I may have this Action for the trespass, or Distraine them Damage fefant at my choise, Kelw. 3. 13 H. 7. 10. Old B. entries. 570, 571. As if a lessee of my house suffer his Goods a longer time then is reasonable, after his lease ended, I may Distrain them, some say I may also bring this Action against him: but it is best to make an entry first, 13 H. 7. 9. And if the owner of the Cattel enter and take them away before he have tendred amends to me for the Trespass, this is a second Trespass for which I may have this Action also, 21 H. 7. 27. If a stranger put in his beasts into the Common where I have common, I may not have this action against him, but I may Distrain them Damage Fesant, Co. 9. 112. 15 H. 7. 13.

Cattel.

If a man himself or with dogs chase or hunt my Cattel in mine or another mans Ground, I may have this action; and yet the owner of the ground wherein my Cattel are doing Trespass, may gently by himself or his Dogs chase them out, and justifie it. But if he do them hurt thereby, this Action will lie, Hill. 16 Jac. B. R. Per. 3 Justices in Burges Case. M. 5 Jac. B. R. Glover's Case. Co. 4. in Terringtons Case. Broo. Trespass. 421. Co. 8. 67. And if ones Pigs be in my ground, I may chase them out with a Dog, if I do not hurt them, Hill. 16 Jac. B. R.

If a mans Cattel be in anothers ground doing trespass, the owner of the ground is not bound to put them into the pound, but may put them out, and if they be thereby lost he shall not answer them, M. 5, Jac. Sr Chr. Hndsons Case.

Goods confounded that cannot be known.
Tenant at will.
Waste,

If a man take my Corn and put to his, so that it cannot be distinguished which is his and which is mine, and then I carry away all, it seems this Action will not lie against me for this, 22 Car. at Glouc: Assises, per Serjant Wilder:

If my tenant at will of my Land do commit any voluntary waste, as burn the houses or the like, I may have this action against him. But otherwise it is of a negligent or permissive waste, Co. 5. 31: Dier 171. Lit. Set. 71 Broo. Trespass. 362. And if such a Tenant cut under-wood, not timber, at seasonable times, or having a Mine, dig and sell there, no Action will lie for either of these things against him, Broo. Trespass. 327. But for cutting Trees this Action, not waste lyeth. Also this action will lye against my servant for taking away or spoiling my goods in his hands and possession. Goldsb. 72. Pl. 18. 66. Pl. 10.

Goods delivered upon trust, or come without taking into a mans hands.

Regularly where a man hath my goods by my delivery upon a trust, as when I deliver to another my goods to keep, or I deliver Goods to a Carrier to carry, or the like; if he convey or keep them from me, or spoil, or sell them, or negligently suffer them to be spoiled, I cannot have this action for my remedy, but some other action, Co. 5. 14. 2 H. 7. 11. 16 H. 7. 3. And yet if my shepherd willfully destroy my sheep, or my Butler willfully spoil my plate, or I deliver my Cattel to one to plow or compass his land, and he kill them; in these cases I may have this Action against him, Co. 5. 14. 31. 2 H. 7. 11: Broo. Trespass. 343. 327. 395. 72. Litt. Set. 72. So if another do it by the Licence of such a person. And by these cases it seems this Action should lie against the Carrier in the first case, Sed quare. If I be a Taverner, Mercer or Draper, and my servant using to sell my goods give away my Goods, it is said I may not said, I may not have this Action, nor any other against the taker, but must take my remedy against my servant. Broo. Tresp. 205. See quere. If my Wife convey away my Goods, and I die, my Executor may not have this Action, but must have some other remedy. M. 8 Jac. 6. B. If one give me leave to put my Corn in his Barn, and I agree that he shall keep the Key, and he sell the Corn; it is said, I cannot have this Action against him, but some other. By Serjeant Wilde, 22 Car. at Glocester Assises. If my Goods happen to be in an Executors hands amongst the Testators Goods, unawares of the Executor, no Action of Trespass will lie against him for this. But after notice given to the Executor, and a Demand of the Goods, and Refusal, some other Action will lie. 21 H. 7. 17. Broo. Tresp. 311.

We have shewed before, that this Action will lie for the owner of a House, against him that shall take away or spoil any of the Incidents of his house, as Furnaces, Doors, Waincoats, Pale, Glass, or the like: And for this it is to be known, That all things that are annexed and fastned to a House by Nails, Scrues or Pins, or by Morter or Stones, as Glass, Wainscot, Tables, Shelves, Vaults, Furnaces, Doors, Locks and Keys, and the like, are so inseparably incident to the House, that be they put on by whomsoever, they cannot be taken away by the Lessee for life or years, before or after the end of his Term, but he must subject himself to this Action; but he that hath any Estate in Fee-simple or Fee-tail of such a house, may pluck it down if he will, and so may a Lessee that holds it for life or years, without Impeachment of Waste, 21 H. 7. 26. Co. 463. 21 H. 7. 13. See more in Property, cap. 17.

If a Man do voluntarily take away my Goods or Cattle, and keep them till I pay him money, either without colour or with colour, as under pretence that it is his Herriot, Waiff, or Estray, when it is not so, this Action lieth; and if he will not restore them till I pay Money or Bond, I shall have a Recompence for it all in Damages in this Action, Broo. Tresp. 354. M. 8 Car. B. R. Cannons case. So if a man shall any way take away or spoil my Goods. If a man drive my Cattel into another mans ground, I may go into the ground and fetch out my Cattel, and yet by this I am a Trespassor to the owner of the ground, and for this he may bring this Action against me, and I must take my Counter-remedy against him that drave them in, Dodridge in his Treatise. 21 H. 7. 27. D. et St. 34. Co. 2 pars. 54. But if the owner of the ground drive my Cattel, or carry my Goods without Authority into his ground, I may (especially in a fresh pursuit) go into his ground and fetch them out, and for this he can have no Action against me, and yet in this case I may not go into his dwelling-house to take my Goods again, nor had the Goods been delivered by me, could I have entered into his Close to take them again. 21 H. 6. 39. 2 Ed. 4. 35. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. Old B. of Entries, 561. If ones Cattel in drift break a way into my ground, where the Inclosure is good, or into my house, the door being open, the Driver may fetch them out, but I may have this Action for the Entry, being a Trespass, Broo. Tresp. 321. If I be driving Cattel to Pound, and they escape into another Parish, or another mans ground against my will, and I do presently fetch them out, no Action will lie against me for this, Broo. Tresp. 325.

Wheresoever I may justifie the taking of my Cattel, I may justifie the taking of their yong ones, if they have any. Broo. Tresp. 323. If one take away my Goods from me, I may then presently take them from him, and justifie it, Kelw. 62. Broo. Tresp. 185. And if I deliver to one Goods to deliver to me on Request, and he deliver them to another, it is said, I may take them away from him, 21 H. 7. 13. Broo. Tresp. 118. 186.

If my dead Goods be in danger of spoiling, as my Corn in the Harvest, and my Neighbor out of his good will doth take it up, or bring it to his own, or my Barn; or if he trench my Meadow where need is and doth mend it, or if a Strangers Cattel be in my Corn, and he drive them out: In all these cases, and for these things, done without my leave, I may have this Action. And yet if my own Cattel be in my Corn, and another man drive them out, no Action will lie for this. If a house be on fire, I may take any mans Goods out of the house, or fire, to preserve them, and no Action will lie for this. And if my Horse be fallen in a Pit, and in danger, any man may justifie the pulling of him out of the Pit, Kelw. 88. 2 H. 6. 37. 21 H. 7. 27. 12 H. 8. 2, 15. 8 Ed. 4. 35. 13 H. 8. 16.

If a Ship be in danger of drowning, the Marriners may cast out the Goods to save men and justifie it: So when a House is on fire, the Neighbors may take out the Goods to preserve them, Daffins case. 6 Jac. 21 H.7.27. If one assault me with a weapon, I may (it seems) take away his weapon and deliver it to a Constable to keep the peace, and justifie it, N. B. of Entries 651.

It is a rule that no man may enter into my House or Ground without my authority or licence, or authority of Law. And if he doth, he is a Trespassor to me, and I may have this Action against him, 12 H.8.2. But in many cases a man may enter into my House or Close, and be blameless. For the opening hereof, therefore take these cases.

1. If another man have a Horse, Timber, or other Goods in my House or Ground, and he enter into it, to see or take it away without my leave, I may have this Action against him; and albeit he had a Lease of the Land a little before, yet if it be now ended, this will not help him, 21 H.7.13. 19 H.7.9. 14 H.8.1. 9 Ed.4.35. And albeit I did command my servant to deliver the thing to him, yet this will not excuse the Entry, 18 Ed.4.25. If I be an Executor, I shall have a reasonable time to fetch away my Goods out of the House wherein I may enter and take them. And yet if I be a Lessee of a house for the life of 7. S. or 7. S. Lessee for life make me a Lease for years, and 7. S. die; in these cases, if I have Goods in the house, and take them away in convenient time, no Action will lie against me; otherwise it is if I suffer them to stay too long; and the Judges shall set down what time is reasonable, not the Jury, 22 Ed.4.27. By Justice Haughton, 2 H.6.15, 16. Brownl. 1 part. 224.

2. If a man take away my Cattel or Goods, and put them into his ground, I may follow them and take them again; otherwise it is if they were taken away by a stranger, or I deliver them to him, or they be in his dwelling-house, see before. And yet it is said, if a man have my Goods in his house, and his door be open, that I may go in and fetch them out. Howes case, M. 9 Jac. B.R. Broo. Tresp. 118. 186. 21 H.7.13.

3. If a man be assaulted and like to be killed, and he flee through my ground to save his life, I cannot sue him for this, 37 H.6. 37.

4. If a man lop a Tree, and some of the Lops unavoidably fall into my ground, and he go into my ground, and fetch them out, I cannot have an Action for this, either for the fall or entry; but the necessity must be unavoidable, else an Action will lie for both, Broo. Tresp. 310. Hill. 8 Jac. By Justice Dodridge. And yet if there be two Tenants in Common of a Tree that doth grow between two men, and one of them doth cut and seise it all; in this case the other cannot go into the others house or ground to seise it.

5. If one be bound to repair a Bridg which cannot be done without his coming upon my ground do it; in this case he may do so at a seasonable time without danger of this Action, Broo. Tresp. 260. So if one grant me to dig a trench in his ground to lead water to my house, if it be stopped, I may go into his ground to amend it, 13 H.8.15. 9 Ed.4.25.

6. If I do license 7. S. to deliver Wood to 7. D. in such a Close, and 7. D. come into the Close to take it, it seems this is justifiable, Broo. Tresp. 241.

7. The Parson may come into my ground, being a Parishioner, and shall have a reasonable time to order and fetch his Tithes, Bro. Tresp. 345. 325. 49.

8. If I have a Mill, and the water that drives it, runs through another mans ground, and something is done there to obstruct my water; in this case I may go into his ground to see, and if any be, to remove it, and if it be a house, I may abate it, and justifie it, 9 Ed.4.35.

9. If my Tenant when I am coming to distrain, drive his Cattel into another mans ground, or into some other ground of his own, held of another man; in these cases I may enter into the ground and take them.

10. In case of a common danger, as if water that runs by a Town be stopped, that it may endanger the drowning of the Town, I may go into any mans ground to give it a passage, and if a House be on fire, any man may pull down part of it to save the rest; or pull down it, or perhaps other houses to prevent the burning of many others. So in case of Enemies, Soldiers may justifie the making of Bulwarks. So Fishers may justifie the going into any mans ground to amend or dry their Nets. So men may go into any mans ground to hunt or kill Foxes, Otters, Grayes, and the like Vermin, and all this without the License of the owner, Dyer 36. 12 H.8. 2. Broo. Trespass 40. 21 H.7. 27. 13 H.8. 16. 8 Ed.4. 35, 18. But a man may not do so to kill Hares: Also to keep the peace and prevent mischief, any man may enter into anothers ground, or (as it seems) his house either. So also to apprehend Felons, any man may enter into another mans ground or house, and break the house also if need be: Also a man may turn his Plough upon his Neighbors Land in the Field, if it cannot be avoided in Plowing, Broo. Trespass 354. 327. So to make a perambulation, the Minister and Parishioners may after their usual manner go into mens grounds. N. B. Entries 652. Old B. Entries 558. See more after where this Action will lie against an Officer.

11. If a Mans Horse or Beast be like to be drowned, I may go into any mans ground to save him, and if he be like to be killed, I may go into into his house to preserve him, 12 H.8.2. 13 H.8.5. And yet if I go into another mans ground to save his horse from stealing, or his Tithes from being spoiled by weather or Pigs, he may have this Action against me, 21 H.7.27. 9 Ed.4.35. To save Men or Cattel in danger.

12. If one be unlawfully imprisoned in my house, and he break the house, and get out, I cannot have this Action against him, 9 Ed.4.35. 21 H.7.37.

13. If one have sheep stohn, he may go into any mans ground where he doth suspect the sheep are, to see the sheep whether they be his or not. By Justice Berkley, M. 8 Car. To look for stohn Goods.

14. If the Sheriff have a Replevin against my Goods, the Plaintiff may come with him into my Close to shew him my Goods, 3 H.6. 37.

15. If I have Cloth in a Tailors or Sheremans shop, and the door be open, I may go in to see it, Hewes case. M. 9 Jac. B. R. To see a Man Goods.

16. If I make a Lease of my dwelling-house, rendring Rent, or one is bound to pay me money on an Obligation in my dwelling-house; in this case he may come into my house to do it, when I am there to tender. But if it be to be done in another mans house. Contra. Plow. 71. 18 Ed.4.25. 9 Ed.4.25. To pay Money.

17. If I or the Commonwealth have a way through anothers ground, or title of Common there, or cause to distrain there; in these cases I may come into the ground to use or do it, and no Action will lie against me for this in any of the cases before, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Old B. of Entries 559, 560. And yet if I be besides the way, or take more common then my due, this Action will lie for this exceeding. To take his Way, Common, &c.

18. If a man have business with me to shew me a deed for preventing a difference, or the like, and I being in my house or ground, he come in to speak of the matter; it is said this is not actionable, Broo. Trespass 23. Sed Quere. For if he do it without licence or invitation, it seems to me actionable.

19. In many other cases the Law gives power to enter into House or Land, as Travellers or others, may go into a common Inn or Hostry, a man may Distrain for his Rent, or Damage-felant, a man that hath right to an Estray, may seise him, a man that hath a Reversion of Land may go into it to view it, a man that hath power to sell Land, hath power to view it and value it; a Commoner may go on the Common to see his Cattel: The Kings Purveyor might have taken up Cattel for the King, and no Action will lie against these men for any of these things.

But in all these, and such like cases, where a man may justifie his Entry into another mans house or ground, for some special purpose, he must see he do not abuse his power there. And therefore in all the cases before of power given to enter into Lands, if he shall break the Hedges, leave open the Gates, or otherwise abuse his power, he shall be punished as a Trespasser from the beginning. And in the last cases, if a Traveller or other, shall stay in the Inn over-long, break or take away any of the Household-goods, break the Windows of the Inn, or the like, or the party distraining in the next case shall work, kill, or otherwise abuse the Distress, or in the next case he shall hurt, sell, or kill the Estray, or in the next case, if he in Reversion shall break the house to come in, or being come in at the doors, stay all night, cut down Trees, or dig the ground, or the Purveyor sell the Cattel or Goods taken up; in all these, and the like cases before, the Law doth reckon all that is done unlawful, and the party grieved may have this Action for his relief.

Debt.

And yet if one enter into an Inn, and do not pay for his victuals he collect for, or being distrained, and he offer the Rent, for which he was distrained, and the Distrainer will not deliver the Distress; in these cases, and for these causes the offender is not reputed a Trespasser ab initio, but in that thing onely.

Action of the Case.

And in the first case the In-keeper shall have an Action of Debt, or on the Case, for his money; in the latter, an Action of Trespass, or Trespass on the Case for his Relief. Co. 8. 146. 5. 76. D. & St. 113. Dyer 36. 134. 5 H. 7. 11. 16 H. 7. 14; 21 H. 7. 22. 9 H. 6. 29. 11 H. 4. 73.

Action of the Case.

In like manner it is of an authority given by one man to another, if he to whom it is given, exceed and abuse it, as I give one leave to enter into my house or close, and he break the House, or cut down Trees, or I give one power to take one, and he take two of my Horses, or I give one power to ride my Horse to Dover, and he ride him further; in these, and such like case, he is a Trespasser onely in the excess. And if there be violence, or colour of violence in the Act, it is punishable by this Action. But if the injury be rather in matter of Fraud, it is punishable by an Action of the Case, Broo. Tresp. 327. 295. 71. And in all these and such like cases before set forth, the Action may be avoided by setting forth the matter in a special Plea.

By inevitable necessity or accident.

If one do me a Trespass against his will; as if his Cattel come unawares into my ground, yet I may have this Action against him; and yet if my Dog of his own accord without any provocation of mine, kill or chase a mans Cattel, I shall not be charged with this, unless it be sheep, and the Dog have been used to chase and kill them, and I have had notice of it. Dyer 29.

By Cattle in Corn.

If all the Neighbors in a Village take their Corn out of their Field, and one perverse fellow leave his Corn there of purpose, and the Neighbors put their Cattel in the Field, and the Cattel eat his Corn, he may not have this Action for this. Broo. Tresp. 352.

By the fall of Lops.

If a man lop a Tree, and some of the lops by chance, and against his will, that doth lop, fall into my ground, or on my hedg, and he fetch it out again presently; yet in this case, and for this I may have this Action for one and other: But if there be an inevitable necessity, or it fall out by the Act of God onely, or by a strange wind, or the like, no Action will lie for this, Broo. Tresp. 310. 10 Ed. 4. 2. 10 Ed. 4. 6, 37.

To catch a bir in passing on the way.

If one have a way through my ground where no inclosure is, and he drive his Cattel there, or through the Corn field, where the way is, and they catch a bir as they go against the drivers will, being as careful as he can, no Action will lie for this: But if the driver bait, or keep the Cattle there, I may have this Action against him, or the owner of the Cattle, Broo. Tresp. 321. 351.

To part Cattle.

If my Cattle be with another bodies so together that I cannot part them, and I drive them to a convenient place to shift and part them: No Action will lie against me for this, Broo. Tresp. 354. 327.

To Plough Land.

If a man in Earing be necessitated to turn his Plough upon my Land according to the fashion of the Countrey, and the Sallow hap thereby to turn up some of my Land, or the Cattle hap to catch a bit of my Grass or Corn on my Land, no Action will lie for this. Broo. Tresp. 354. 327.

Upon an Estate made by an Infant, Feme-covert, &c.

If an Infant make a Feoffment, and make a Letter of Attorney to give Livery of Seisin, and the Attorney do enter; he is a Trespasser, and for this the Infant may have this Action. But if the Infant give Livery of Seisin with his own hands, he cannot then have this Action against the Feoffee. So if he sell Goods, and the Vendee take them without his Delivery, by this he is a Trespasser: But if the Infant deliver the Goods with his own hand to the Vendee, contra. Broo. Tresp. 16. 338. Perk. Sess. 16, 17.

If an Infant, Feme-covert, or Man per duress grant a Rent charge out of his Land, and the Grantee by colour thereof distrain upon the Land, the Cattle of the Infant, Husband that hath in right of his Wife, or him that granted by duress; in all these cases this Action lieth against him that distraineth, 21 H. 7. 39. Broo. Tresp. 151.

To skour a Ditch.

If a man have an ancient Ditch in my ground, and he come at seasonable times to skour it, and doth skour it, keeping the old breadth, I cannot bring an Action against him for this. By Baron Henden at Glocester Assises, 17 Car.

Trespass, punishable in Hay.

If a man give me leave to set a Rick of Hay in his ground, till I can conveniently sell it, and after two years time he makes a Lease of the ground to another, and he turns turns in his Cattle, and doth eat up my Hay; in this case I can have no Action against him, for by making the Lease, it seems the License is determined, Hill. 17 Jac. B.R. Sir William Webe case:

The Parson shall have a reasonable time to prepare and fetch his Tiche on my Land: But if he leave it on my Land any long time after my Corn is gone, and my Cattle spoil it, he hath no Remedy, 12 Ed. 4. 6. In Tiche.

If a new Gate be set up in the High-way, where none was before, and I being a Traveller break it to peeces; this is justifiable, and no Action will lie against me for this, Adjudged. Cur. B.R. James and Haywoods case. So for any other Nufance. In Gates. Nufance.

A man that will maintain this Action for any wrong done to, or in his Lands or Goods, must have a good Ownership and Property, or at the least a good and lawful Possession in the thing wherein the Trespass is supposed to be done: And for this, take these things. Set. 18. The Ownership and Possession of the thing wherein the Trespass is done.

1. A man may gain a Property into Goods, two ways. First, Either by Act of the Party, as by Gift, Sale, Legacy, and the like: Secondly, Or by Act of Law, as by Waiving, Straying, Shipwrack, Forfeiture, Executorship, Administration, Trespass, and Recovery of damage, Sealing and open Sale, by Tenure, Custom, as Herriot, and the like. Justice Dunderidge, 2 part. f. 72, &c.

2. A Lessee for years after his Lease is ended, may have this Action for a Trespass done upon the Land before the Lease was ended. Plow. 431. Broo. 456.

3. Any man that hath but a bare possession of, and no Title to Land, may have this Action against him that hath no right. Plow. 431. 546. Broo. 456. Co. 5. 85.

4. No man can have this Action for a Trespass done upon his Land, until he be possessed of the same by Entry: And therefore if Land descend to an Heir, or a Lease to begin at Michaelmas, or one hath a title of Entry for a Condition broken, or the like, and a Trespass is done upon the Land before the Entry of the Heir in the first, the Lessee in the second, or him that hath title to enter in the third case; in these cases the party grieved, may not have this Action. H. 7. 22. Plow. 142. 12 Ed. 4. 37.

5. If Lessee par. ante vis or Lessee for years keep himself in possession of the Land after the Term and Estate ended, the party that is to have the Land, cannot maintain this Action till he have made his actual Entry, and then onely for the Trespass done after, and not before his Entry. Plow. 133. 136. Broo. Tres. 363. Co. 1. 57. H. 7. 22.

6. If an Office finde Land in a Subjects hands to Elsehear, he that is in possession of the Land, cannot afterwards bring this Action for Trespass done in the Land. Plow. 489. 19 Ed. 4. 2.

7. If one give or sell me Goods, and before I get the possession of them, another man doth take them away or hurt them; in this case I may have this Action for my Remedy. Broo. Tres. 303.

8. If I borrow a Horse to ride a journey, and the owner or a stranger take away the Horse from me before I have done my journey, it seems I may have this Action; and albeit I abuse him, or ride him out of the way, yet he cannot take him from me till I have done my journey. Lives case.

9. A man may have this Action for a Trespass done in Goods, wherein he hath onely a possession and no property: And therefore it is no good Plea to this Action, that the goods be the goods of a stranger, and not of the Plaintiff. 4 Ed. 4. 75. 3 H. 6. 32.

If a man cut or carry away my Trees, I may have this Action against him: And for this, take these things. By cutting off, or taking away Trees.

1. If a Tenant in Tail sell his Trees growing upon the Land, and die before they be cut, in this case the Vendee may not cut and take them away, but he will be liable to this Action, by the Heir, or by him in Reversion. But otherwise it is of Trees sold by Tenant in Fee-simple. Perk. Set. 58, 59.

2. If I grant to another Estovers in my Wood, by the view and delivery of the Bailly, and he take them without leave of the Bailly: Or if he have power to take in my Wood to any use without asking, and he take more then he doth put to that use, I may have this Action. Broo. Tres. 327. And yet if he cut it before he do use it, to the end it may be more reasonable and fit for use, no Action will lie for this, 10 Ed. 4. 3. Brownl. 1 part. 44.

3. If

3. If I be a Lessee for life or years of Land, and a stranger cut down Timber, or do any other waste, I may bring this Action against him, and shall recover treble damages, because I must be charged so much in the Action of Waste against me.

4. If one sell me all his Trees in such a Close, and after he cut them down himself, and then I fetch them away, no Action will lie for this, Dyer 305. So if after this sale he selleth his Close to another, and I do then cut and carry away the Trees, I may justifie it. Broo. Tresp. 400.

5. If I sell a Wood, except forty Oaks, to be taken away by me in two years, and I do not cut them within the time, and then he do cut all, and do not leave me forty Oaks; in this case I am without Remedy. Broo. Tresp. 30. 399.

Waste.

6. If my Lessee for life or years do a Waste in the Lands leased, I may not have this Action, but must have Remedy by an Action of Waste. And yet if I make a Lease for life or years of a Close, excepting the Trees, and the Lessee or a stranger do Trespass in the Trees, Acorn or Fruit thereof, which in this case I am also to have; for this, this Action and not an Action of Waste lieth, Co. 5. Sir Thomas Palmers case. See more in Property, cap 17.

By cutting, taking away of Corn or Grais.
Executor.

If a man cut or carry away my Emblements, viz. my Corn or Grafs, I may have this Action against him. But for the further knowledge hereof, take these things.

Husband and Wife.

1. If a Tenant in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or at will, sow his Land, and die before he reap it, his Executor shall reap it: So where-ever an Estate dependeth on a life, If a Lease be made for life, the Remainder in Fee, and the Lessee for life make a Lease for years, the Lessee for years sow the Land, and after the Lessee for life die; in this case the Lessees Executor, not he in Remainder, shall have the Corn, Co. 5. 85. So if Tenant in Dower sow her Land and die, her Executor shall reap it. 20 H. 3. 1. Perk. 512. But if she sow her Land, and then take a Husband, and he die before it be cut; in this case she, not her Husbonds Executor, shall have it. Broo. Emblements 16.

Co. 5. 116. Co. upon Littl. 55. And if the Lessor of a Tenant at will, determine the will himself after the Corn is sowed, the Tenant at will, not the Lessor, shall have the Corn, Co. upon Littl. 55. But if the Tenant at will, himself determine the will, contra. And if such a Tenant after he is discharged shall enter again, and then sow the Land; in this case the Lord, and not the Tenant, shall have it. Co. 5. 116. Dyer 173. And if any Tenant do onely ear and dung the Land, and it be not sowed before his death, he loseth the Corn. Littl. 68. Co. 5. 116. Perk. 512. 37 H. 6. 25. And albeit the Corn be cut, yet he that hath right to it shall have it.

2. If a Tenant for years in Certain, who knoweth the end of his Term, sow the Land, and his Term end before the Corn be ripe and cut; he that hath right to the Land, not the Tenant, shall have the Corn. Littl. 68. Co. upon it.

3. If a man under colour of a Lease, or other Conveyance, supposing him to be good, when he is not, doth sow the Land; not the owner nor his Executor, if he die, but he that hath right to the Land, if he shall enter, must have the Corn. Law case. 9 Jan. 1111. 1111.

4. If two be Tenants in Common, and one die, and his Wife hold in Common, and sow the Land, and die; in this case, neither the other Tenant in Common, nor the Heir, but the Executor of the Woman, shall have the Corn, Perk. 513.

5. If a Parson die before the Corn is reaped, when the Glebe Land is sowed, and another Parson made; in this case, not the Successor, but the Executors or Administrators of the first Parson dead, shall have the Corn: But the Tithes accreving, during the Vacation, must go all to the Successor. 21 H. 8. 30. 34 H. 6. 33.

Property.
Executor.

6. If a Disseisor, or a Disseisor of a Disseisor, or a Feoffee, Donee or Lessee of the first or second Disseisor, sow the Land, and cut and carry away the Corn, or cut and carry away the Grafs or Trees; or gather and carry away the Fruits, Apples, Nuts, &c. or give or sell, either the one or the other; in these cases after the Regress of the Disseisor, the Property of it all is in him, and he may take it where ever he finde it; and if he die his Executor shall have it: And so it seems is the Law for Flax or Hemp, or any other Annual profit; and if it be gone he shall recover damages in Trespass. Co. Inst. 1. part 55. 11. 512. Dyer 31. Perk. 519. Co. 5. 85.

Husband and Wife.

7. If one be seised of Land in the right of his Wife, in fee or for life, and he sow the Land, Land, or he make a Lease for years, and the Lessee sow the Land, and after before the end of the Term the Husband or Wife die, his Executors, or the Lessee, or his Executors, shall have the Emblements, 7 H. 4. 17. So if a Joint estate be made to the Husband and Wife, and the Husband sow the Land and die, his Executor shall have it, Co. 1. part 55: Dyer 316. If Land be leased to a Husband and Wife at will and after they be divorced Causa pracontractus, and the Land be sowed before the Divorce; in this case the Husband, not the Lord, shall have the Corn, Co. 5. 116. If the Wife of a Copie-holder that holdeth Durante viduitate, according to the custom sow the Land, or make a Lease, and the Lessee sow the Land, and before it be cut she take a Husband; in this case the Lord or his Executors, not the Husband shall have the Corn, Co. 5. 116.

Executors.

8. If one seised of Land in Fee have issue a daughter, and die, his Wife being privily with childe of a son, and the daughter sowe it, and after the son is born, the daughter in this case shall reap it, though the son enter before the Corn be ripe, Co. 1. 55.

9. If a Tenant by Statute sow the Land, and after some extraordinary increase happeneth that he is satisfied; in this case the Tenant shall notwithstanding reap it, Co. 1. part 55.

10. If the estate of the Tenant, though incertain, be upon a defeasible Title by a right paramount, or if the estate of the Tenant determine by his Act, he that hath right or entrench, not the Tenant, shall have the Corn. And therefore if one enter upon Land on a Condition in Deed, or a Condition in Law, as if Lessee for life or years of Land, alien it in Fee, or do waste; or if a Feoffment or Lease be made on Condition, and the Condition be broken: or the Lord of a Copy-holder enter for a Forfeiture on his Tenant. So where one commits Felony and forfeit, and an entry is made for the Common-wealth; in all these cases the Feoffor, Lessor, Lord, or Keepers of the Liberties shall have all the Emblements that are growing, and not cut upon the Land at the time of his Entry upon, or recovery of the Land, But if it be cut and so severed from the Land before the entry, contra. So where ever one doth recover Land in an Action, he shall have the Corn upon it, Co. 5. 115. 4. 31. Park, seil: 315. Co. upon Lis: 55. 5 H. 7: 16. See more in Property, ch. 17. And in all or most of these Cases where any man doth cut or take away the Emblements that doth belong to me; I may have this remedie by this Action of Trespass. Brownl. 1. part 221.

This Action wil lie against a Sheriff his Bailiffs or under-Officers, or any other such like Officers. But for the further opening of this point, take these cases following.

Against an Officer.

1. If a Sheriff have a Writ against the Lands or Goods of another man, and he mistake and execute it upon my Lands or Goods; as if he take my Horse under my servant in a sute against him; or repleive my Goods for another mans, I may have this Action against him. And it will not excuse the Officer in this case to say, that the Plaintiff in the suite, or any other man did affirm, that the Lands or Goods were the Lands or Goods of the Defendant, Dyer 295. Kelw. 129 119. D. & St. 149: 150. Brownl. 1 part 210. 226.

Seil. 19.
For mistaking the Goods.

2. If another mans Lands or Goods be leased or pledged to me, and the Sheriff take them as his Lands or Goods, I may have this Action against the Sheriff, Brownl. Trespass 264.

3. If the Sheriff or any of his Officers having Proces against my Land or Goods, exceed his Authority, as upon a common Proces, Capias ad respondendum, Lasisat, or the like Proces, or a Capias ad Satisfaciendum, Fieri facias, or the like Execution against me; if in the Executing of these Writs he brake open my House, Doors or Chests, which is more then he can justifie, for he may not (as it seems) in this case do more then come in when the Door is open, and cannot pull the latch or open it; in these cases I may have this Action against him, Co. 5. 93. 8 Ed. 4. 4: 18. Ed. 4.

For breaking my House.

41. Hob. Rep. pl. 62. Brownlow. 1 part 117.

4. If upon such a Writ, Proces or VVarrant against my Lands or Goods, in Executing whereof or otherwise, where an Officer may break my house, as upon an Habere facias Seisnam, or Possessionem, or Capias ut legatum, or to apprehend Felons or Adulterers, or to search for stolen Goods, or upon a Capias ad Satisfaciendum, to take another man in my house; in these and such like cases, if he break open my my house or Doors before he hath first demanded the opening of the Doors, I may have this Action against him, 1 H. 7. 6. 13 Ed. 4. 9. Co. 3. 90. 68. Bro. Trespass 248. Brownl. 1 part. 59. 221.

5. If in all these and such like cases the Officer do but his duty, no action will lie against him; & therefore if the Officers of the County Court within their Jurisdiction, attach meys Goods by Warrant of the Court, and take them with them, or leave them with the owners, or others in their places do according to their duties, they may justify it, 9 H. 7. 6.

If a Sheriff execute a writ the returne day it is a good Execution. Goldsb. 142. pl. 56. See Distress. If a writ come to him to doe Execution of the goods of I S and he make Execution of the goods of I N, he is a Trespassor, and albeit the Plaintiff himself did direct him to these goods; this will not helpe him unless there be practice between him and I N. and so in case of Replevin upon the goods of a wrong man. Also the party grieved may have this action against him that did misguide him, Brownl. 1 part. 211. So if a Bayliff execute Procees made to him by the Steward of a Court where the Court had not Jurisdiction. Brownl. 1 part. 210.

6. If one inform a Constable that A hath robbed B, and he doth thereupon enter into the house of A to search for the Goods stolen, and in truth no Robbery is done; in this case the Lord-Keeper held, That this Action will lie against the Constable; but the two chief Justices held the contrary, Hill. 3 Jac. in the Star Chamber. See Authoritie. Licence.

7. If a man have taken my Goods, and impounded them in his own Close, and a Replevin come, and the owner of the Ground resist it, if then the Officer break the Close to do it, this is not Actionable, 21 H. 7. 27. 4 Ed. 4. 35.

8. If an Officer do any such Act as belongs to his Office without the precinct of his command, as a Constable without his Parish, regularly he is by this a Trespassor, and this is actionable; and yet if an Officer attach my Goods within his Jurisdiction, and I rescue them, and carry them without his precinct; in this case it seems upon a fresh pursuit, I may go after them, and take them again, Bro. Trespass. 23.

If one distrain my Cattel or Goods without any cause or colour, or for a Debt on a Bond, or Fine, or a Amercement in an Court-Lett that is not legally set, or any such like cause that is not good or Just. Or if a man having distrained my Goods, will not tell me requiring it, and offering to give satisfaction, for what cause he distrained, or if having cause to distrain, he do distrain beasts not distrainable, as beasts of the Plough, or sheep of the Fold. Or if having distrained beasts distrainable, he after abuse them, as if being a Horse or Ox he work it, or being unruly he fetter it; or tie it to the Pound, so as it be thereby hurt, or if he put the distress in an unknown place that I cannot tell how to relieve it. Or if he take them out of one County and put them in a pound in another County; or if he distrain them in the high-way, or a place not distrainable; in all these cases I may have this Action, Co. 8. 147. D. & St. 112. F. N. B. 47, 48. And yet it is said, if a Lord distrain upon his very Tenant without any just cause, that he may not have this Action for this wrong. And it is said, if the Lord distrain for Rent, and the Tenant offer the Rent, that no Action but Detinue lieth. Bro. Trespass 29. H. 7. 11. Bro. 344. 220. If my servant take a distress for me, and the owner of the Cattel desire me to deliver them, and if he pay not the money by a day, that he shall have them again; in this case it is said, if he pay not the monie, that my man may take them again, Bro. Trespass 29. If I be about to distrain for a Rent, and the Tenant seeing me coming to distrain, drive his Cattel into another mans ground, not held of me, and I distrain them there, no Action will lie against me for this, Old Entries. 570. If a Distress be taken from me after I have distrained, I cannot for this have this Action, But I may have a Rescous, M. 7 Jac. Co. B. Brownl. 1 part. 12. 221. 224. There are divers Trespasses which by certain Statutes are to be further punished, then by single Damage. As

1. For breaking cutting or destroying the Head or Damme of any Poole, Mote, Stews, or Pits wherein are Fish, and for fishing in any such Place against the owners will, a man is to be imprisoned 3 months, and then put to sureties for his good behaviour 7 yeares, or else to continue in prison till he so doe; and he is to pay to the partie grieved treble damages.

2 For

About a Distress.

5. Several Trespasses for which the Trespassor is to be further punished then to give single damage to the partie wronged. Destroying Fish-ponds taking away Fish.

2. For breaking into, and hunting in any Park, or inclosed ground to hunt and kill the Deer there, or Coney there, or to take away any Hawk, or any Hawk Egges out of any mans Woods, a man is to be punished in the same manner and measure. 5 Eliz. 21.

Robbing Parks of Deer and Coney.

3. If it be for killing Deer, he is to be bound with two good Sureties, or in stead of treble damages, the party grieved may recover of him ten pound for his satisfaction. And when he is satisfied for the wrong, he may, if he will, release him of the Good-behavior. 7 Jac. 13. 3 Jac. 13.

Taking Hawks and Hawks Eggs.

4. For wilful cutting of the head, or dam of any Pool, Mote, or Stew, or the head, or pipe of any Conduit, or burning of any Cart or Wain load of Coals, or other Goods, or burning of any heaps of Wood prepared for Coals, Billet, or Talwood. And for cutting out the Tongue of any tame Beasts; and for cutting of a mans Ear (except it be by an affray, &c.) And for barking of a mans Fruit-trees. For any of these offences, the offender must pay to the party wronged treble damages for his amends, and pay ten pound penalty to the Lord Protector. 37 H. 8. 6.

5. For cutting and taking away Corn growing, robbing an Orchard or Garden, digging up or taking away any Fruit-trees, breaking any Hedges, Pales, or other Fences, cutting or spoiling any Woods, or Under-woods standing and growing, or the like, the offender is (and such as receive the things, are) to give such amends to the party wronged, as any Justice of Peace shall set down: And if he do not perform the Order of the Justice of Peace; or the Justice think him unable to make amends by money, he is to be whipped. 43 Eliz. 7.

There are divers things to be pleaded in avoidance of this Action: There is the general Plea, which is Not guilty, and there are divers special Pleas; and the special Pleas are some of them of one nature, and some of another, for some of them found in a way of justification, when the matter doth contain a good Reason to maintain the lawfulness of that he did, for which he is now questioned: Some of them found in a way of excuse onely, and will free a man from any punishment for the thing so done at that time: And some of them found in acquittal of a man altogether, and contain so much, that he is not guilty at all: And some of them found in discharge of him of the Action whereto he was once chargeable and liable. And the Defendant must be very careful, for if he have matter of justification or excuse to plead, he must be sure to plead it specially; for in those cases if he plead Not guilty; it will be found against him, Co. 5. 85. upon Littl. 282. 283. Brownl. 1 part. 224.

6. What shall be said to be a good Plea in Bar, and avoidance of this Action, or not.

Special Pleas by way of Justification, are such as set forth some special thing, by which he doth justify the thing he doth with another mans Lands or Goods; as that he did it by authority. And this may be given either by the Law, or by the party: Wherein to make it good, there must be two things. First, A good Authority: Secondly, It must be well pursued.

Self. 21.
Matter of Justification.

In Trespass for Entry into Land, it is a good Plea to make a good Title to the Land or Common in it, and so for Goods. N. B. E. in toto. O. B. E. 566, 567, 565, 590, 580.

It is a good Plea to a Trespass for an Assault and Battery, to say that the Plaintiff began, &c. N. B. of Entries 644. And to this Action for Imprisonment, Assault or Battery, That he did it by necessity, in an Arrest to enforce obedience, or the like, Old Book of Entries, 599. 598. 560. It is a good Plea in Trespass for taking a Horse, to say, he borrowed it for a time, or a purpose which is not yet out or done. Broo. Trespass 337. In Trespass for cutting Trees, it is a good Plea, That the Plaintiff hired him to do it, Broo. Trespass 383. In Trespass for taking of Goods, it is a good Plea to say, That the Plaintiff left them in the Defendants house, and after there was an Agreement between them, that he should keep them till the Plaintiff had paid him ten pound, which he hath not paid him, 21 H. 7. 13. But it is no good Plea to say, That the Goods were the Goods of a stranger, and not the Goods of the Plaintiff, 4 Ed. 4. 75. 3 H. 6. 32. In Trespass for Entry into a House, it is a good Plea to say, He entered to apprehend a Felon, and took his Goods that were there, Old Book of Entries 580. In Trespass for taking of Goods, it is a good Plea to say, He did it by Warrant, as Bailiff of a Court-Leet for a Forfeiture, &c. N. B. of Entries, 665.

For Assault.

or

or be distrained for rent services, Old B. of entries 604. 605. 603 That he distrained for Subsidie, Fifteens or the like, Old B. of entries 601. So that he took them by vertue of any Procees out of a Court enabled with power to make out such Procees, Old B. of entries, 598. 599. 600. That he took the goods for Harior, Waif, Estray, Wreck, or the like. Old B. of entries, in voce 584. Or that he distrained them for pownage, or the like; or for levying of expences for Knights of the Parliament, or the like, Old B. of entries 599. See Authoris.

His Freehold.

In Trespass for entry into Land, it is a good plea to say, That it was his Freehold or the Freehold of another from whom he had Authority to do what he did. Br. ch. 47. 23. New B. of entries, 645. 587. So if it be for putting in of Cattel; it is a good Plea to shew he hath right of Common there, and under colour thereof he put in his Cattel, Bro. Tresp. 30.

If one have Com upon anothers Land, and he take it, and the Owner of the Land sue him; he must justifie, and may not plead Not guilty, Co. 5. 87.

In Trespass for taking Cattel; it is a good bar to set forth a good sale to the Defendant, and that he thereby took them Bro. Tresp. 328. For cutting Trees, it is a good plea to say that the Plaintiff gave them to the Defendant, Bro. Tresp. 42.

There are divers other Pleas that enure by way of bar, as a Judgement had and Damages recovered against the defendant for the same Trespass, in another Action of the same or another nature, Fitz. Corona. 110. And if an Action be brought against a man for a Trespass by assault and battery done by him, it is a good plea to say it was done by him and another, and the plaintiff hath recovered Damages of the other. But if the beasts of A and B come together into my Ground; in this case I may recover severally, and this plea will not hold. Hill. 18 Jac. B. R. Hunnys Case.

Arbitrement.
Accord.

Arbitrement may be also pleaded in bar of this Action.

Also Accord with satisfaction may be pleaded in bar of this Action. For the clearing whereof take these things.

1. The thing given and received must be valuable and satisfactory, a charge to the giver, and a benefit to the receiver. And therefore if one plead, that wheras there were divers Trespasses committed by each of them, one upon another, and by mediation of friends they agreed one should go quit against the other, this is no plea, neither will it bar in the Suit. So in an entry on the Statute of Rich. That the Plaintiff shall reenter and have his Land in peace, and that he shall deliver in the Writings that he hath that do concern the Land, Dyer 356. 16 Ed. 4. 8. 9 Ed. 4. 19. Fitz. Accord. 3. 4. So if it be in Trespass for Goods taken, and the Defendant plead an Accord made that he should have his goods again, 9 Ed. 4. 19. 30 H. 6. 4. So if it be that the Defendant should do his endeavor to make the Plaintiff and another (who was at odds with him) agreed, or (as it seems) to shew that he did make an Accord between him and the stranger, unless he shew withall that he is at some charge to do it. And yet if the Defendant give the Plaintiff a pottle of Wine in satisfaction of the Trespass, and he agree to it, this is a good accord and a bar in the Action, Fitz. Accord. 1. 19, H. 6. 29. Fitz. bar 26.

2. It must be perfectly and completely finished and Executed, and satisfaction made according to the agreement before any Action brought: and therefore if the Defendant plead an Accord that he must make Windows, and pay 10 l. at a day to come, and he set forth that he hath made the Windows, but he hath not set forth he hath paid the 10 l. this is no bar, 17 Ed. 4. 2. 6 H. 7. 10. In Trespass the Defendant pleaded an Accord to pay 6 d. to the Plaintiff, and to give him counsel when he shall require it; this is no good Plea, 17 Ed. 4. 2. Old N. B. f. 122. Tender of money without payment is no good plea in bar of this Action.

3. It must be in the life-time of him that did the wrong; and therefore if the Accord be between the parties, and be executed by the Heir or Executor of the Trespassor, this is no bar where this Action may lie against the Executor, Dyer 356.

4. The Party to whom the wrong is done must accept the amends according to the agreement, for it seems notwithstanding the Accord, he may refuse it; and tender of amends without an acceptance thereof, is no plea to this Action, but being accepted accepted, is. For as wrongs and injuries cause discord and variance, and beget Suits; so by an Accord between the parties this may be recompenced, and this recompence begetteth Peace, Co. 9. 79. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Dyer 356.

5. If divers do a Trespafs, and one make a good Accord, this will discharge and be a bar to all the rest, Co. 9. 79.

6. If a stranger, as one of the Parents or Friends of the Trespaffor, give the amends in recompence; it seems this is as good as if the party himself did give it. In Detinue for a Chest and Charters therein, by the delivery of the Plaintiff, the Defendant plead an Accord, that he should keep the Chest untill the Plaintiff come to Bristol; and there it shall be opened, and if any Deeds be there that do concern a House of which the Plaintiff had enfeoffed the Defendant, that he shall keep it still, and saith that he never came to Bristol; and it was awarded a good concord. But quere Fitz. Bar 166. Accord. 2. 7 Ed. 4. 23.

7. If one be Amerced for a private Nuisance or Trespafs done to the Lord in his Leet, and he receive the Amercement, though it be Extortion, and he could not have recovered it; yet it seems if he after bring an Action for this Nuisance, this acceptance of the Amercement may be pleaded in bar. Fitz. Bar. 187. 221. Broo. Tresp. 195. 61. 66.

8. In a writ of false imprisonment, the Defendant saith it was agreed between the Plaintiff and him that he should bring the Defendant to such a place which is the same imprisonment, and it seems this was no good Plea. Fitz. Bar. 14. Brownlow's 1 part. 133. 2 part 130. 131. 132.

That the Plaintiff hath a Replevin depending in another Court for the same Trespafs, is a good Plea, Broo. Tresp. 357. But it is not a good Plea that he hath been indicted for the same thing, and paid a Fine to the King. And yet that he hath been Indicted, Arraigned and Acquitted, is said to be a good Plea, sed quere. So, that he hath been (being a Tenant) Amerced for the Trespafs at the Lords Court already, and paid the Amercement, is said to be a good Plea, Co. 4. 43. 9. H. 6: 50. Broo. Tresp. 405. 17 Ed. 4. 8. But I doubt this case.

If it be for Cattel Damage-feasant in his Ground, it is a good Plea to say the Plaintiff did drive the Cattel into his ground, Broo. Tresp. 148. Kelw. 30.

A License may be pleaded in avoidance of this Action, as if it be for an entry into House or Lands, taking of Goods or the like, he may plead a License so to do from the Owner, as that he invited me into his house, gave me leave to go through his Close, &c. Broo. Tresp. 533. Co. upon Lis. 368. But then there must be these things in the case

Matter of excuse and discharge.
Sect. 22.
License.

1. A good License, for if a Tenant at will shall License me to cut down Trees upon the Land, or a Shepherd that hath Sheep to keep shall License me to kill them; this will not excuse me in a suit for this, Broo. Tresp. 295.

2. This License must be pursued. 11 H. 7. 21. Old B. entries. 596. 597. 505. Broo. Tresp. 194. 19 H. 6. 65.

To an Action for a Battery, it is a good plea to say that he did it of his own wrong, that is, that the Plaintiff did begin the Affray first, &c. 34 H. 6. 16. 41. Aff. pl. 21. Books of Entries in toto.

If the Action be for suffering a mans Goods to lie in his house Damage feasant, it is a good excuse for the Defendant to say that he was Tenant to a Lessee for life, that lived far from him, that he could not hear of his death in a long time after he was dead, and therefore the Goods were not removed so quickly. In Trespafs for a hurt, It is a good Plea to say that the Plaintiff and Defendant agreed to run at Tilt, Barriers, or to play at Backsword, Foot-ball or the like, and by that means the hurt came, Fitz. Bar. 244. In Trespafs for Damage by Cattel, it is a good Plea to say that the mounds of the close adjacent were the Plaintiffs, and for lack of repair thereof they came into the Plaintiffs Ground, Old N. B. 561. 562. 563.

But if the beasts were turned in, the Plaintiff may shew it by his reply, Old N. B. 503. 563. It is a good plea to shew a pardon by Act of Parliament, Old B. Entries 396. In an Action for Toll, it is a good plea to say, time out of Mind such men have been discharged and ought to be discharged of Toll in Fairs or for passages, &c. Old B. Entries 605.

In trespass for beating a servant, it is a good Plea that he was not his servant at that time, Old B. Entries 605. For entering into a Close, that the Defendant being Lessee for life, made a Feoffment in Fee, and so a Forfeiture or an Escheat. Old B. Entries 577. 581. That the Goods were pledged to him, or him that delivered them to him for money not yet paid, Old B. Entries 598. For Fishing it is a good Plea to say he hath a fishing there, and under colour thereof he doth fish, Old B. Entries 596.

The Defendant in this Action hath many Pleas to plead in avoidance of this Action by way of excuse. As to an Action of Trespass for the Defendants Cattel breaking into the Plaintiffs Close, it is a good Plea to say that they came in through the mounds of the Plaintiff, for want of Sufficient repair, For further knowledge of which point, these things are to be known,

1. This is not a good Plea for any but for him that hath some interest into the adjoining Ground, as having Title of Common there, or being Lessee for years, or at will of it, having his Cattel there at Tack, or having leave to put in his Cattel there; and therefore this will not bar the Action of the case of a stranger where his Cattel had nothing to do in the next Ground towards which the Inclosure was so bad.

2. Neither is this any good Plea for him that hath some interest in the Ground adjoining, where he did put in his Cattel first of all into the Plaintiffs Ground, and not into his own, for the Cattel must goe in of themselves.

3. It is no Plea that there is no good Inclosure, unless he say that the Owner of the Ground time out of mind did use to inclose it.

4. It is sufficient proof to maintain this Plea, that the mounds were bad at the time, though it cannot be proved that the Cattel went in through those bad mounds, for that shall be presumed unless the contrary appear, Dyer 365. Bro. Tresp. 192. 255. 148. 145. 136. 345. In Trespass for breaking pales, that they were set up in his Chase, and kept his Deer from feeding, &c. Old B. Entries 594. If a man that ought to make the Hedge between him and me, go over it and break it down, so as my Cattel get in his Ground, I may plead this in avoidance of his Action. Juss. Dodridge. Trin. 18. Jac. B. R. If the Action be for taking my Cattel, I may justify that the Ground was a Free-hold, and the Cattel were in my Ground Damage-feasant, and therefore that I Distrained them, Old N. B. 570. 569. 571. In an Action for cutting Timber that I was seised of the place and Timber, and sold the Timber to the Defendant, and he took it. Old B. Entries 606. For taking Goods it is a good Plea to say that the Defendant being possessed thereof, delivered them to a stranger from whom the Plaintiff took them, and the Defendant took them from the Plaintiff, Old B. Entries 573: or to say that he did lawfully Distrain them for Rent or the like, Old N. B. Entries 608.

That I am Parson of A and a Parishoner set out his Tithes, and the Plaintiff took them away, and I took them from him, this is justifiable, Old B. Entries 374. To say that the Plaintiff gave him the Goods, Old B. Entries 376. or to say he took them as Waif, Estray, or as Wreck for the Lord, &c. Old B. Entries 612. 611. 577. Sale in Market overt to the Defendant by the Plaintiff or a stranger Old B. Entries 606. 605. A Release of the Party Trespased to the Trespasor, is a discharge in Law, and may be pleaded in bar of this Action.

Release.

Matter of discharge.
Release of one.

If divers do a Trespass together, and the party to whom it is done release it by generall or speciall words to one of them, this is a discharge of all the Trespasors, and every one of them may plead it in bar if he can get and shew it, for they are but one Trespasor, and each of them is answerable for the whole fact, but a release is a good satisfaction in Law as a satisfaction in Deed: Hob. Rep. pl. 96. But see more of this in Release chap. 19. in my Book of Common Assurance. Old B. of Entries 602. Authoritie. Licence. Tender of amends, that is, offer of a recompence for a Trespass done, is a good plea in this Action. But therein these things are to be done.

Amends.

1 That if one distrain my Beasts Damage-feasant, and I offer him a competent recompence before the Beasts be taken, or before they be Impounded, this is a good bar, and so may be pleaded in the Action of Trespass: but such a tender after the Impounding of the Beasts is not so. Co 5. 76. 2 And

2. And yet in all Actions Quare Claufum fregit, if the Defendant do tender fufficient amends before the Action brought, and in his Plea to the Action difclaim to make any Title or claim to the land, and the Trespafs be by negligence or involuntary, by this (being proved) the Plaintiff fhall be barr'd, Stat. 21. Jac. chap. 16. And it was the opinion of two Juftices, Popham & Williams, Trin. 3. Jac. B.R. that the common Law was fo before this Statute.

The Defendant in this Action may plead Not guilty in all thefe following cafes.

1. VVhen the thing fupposed to be done for matter of Fact, is not true.
2. VVhen the matter as it is, is not a Trespafs; but fome other offence, nor is this Action of Trespafs given for it, but fome other Action.

But in all other cafes the Defendant may not pleade Not guilty, but muft pleade Specially, and fhew the fpecial matter by way of excufe or juftification, as the cafe is. And therefore he muft pleade and juftifie Specially in all thefe following cafes; as where an Imprifonment or entry is given by authority of Law, or by authority from any party, as for an Imprifonment by the Statute of Trespaffors in Parks, putting a man off his ground, arrefting a man as Conftable to keep the peace, thrufting a man out of a Church that doth trouble the Congregation in Service: That he parted an affray, and kept the quarreller apart, during the heat. *Old B. And in thefe cafes where the Defendant hath caufe of Excufe or Juftification, and fhould plead fpecially, he pleade the generall plea of Not guilty, it will upon the evidence (the cafe appearing fo) pafs againft him: for he may not give the speciall matter in Evidence. But this must be understood with two cautions,

1. That whensoever a man cannot have advantage of the speciall matter by way of pleading, there he shall take advantage of it in the Evidence. For example, the rule of Law is, that a man cannot justify in the killing or death of a man, and therefore in that case he shall be received to give the special matter in evidence, as that it was de defendendo, or in defence of his house in the night against thieves and robbers, or the like.

2. That in any Action upon the Case, Trespass, Battery, or of false imprisonment against any justice of peace, Major or Bayliff of City or Town corporate, Headborough, Portreve, Constable, Tythingman, Collector of subsidie or fifteen in any of the Courts at Westminster, or elsewhere, concerning any thing by any of them done by reason of any of their Offices aforesaid, and all other in their aid or assistance or by their commandment, &c. they may plead the generall issue, and give the speciall matter for their Excuse or justification in Evidence.

In an Action of Trespass or other suit against any person, for taking of any Distress or other Act doing, by force of the Commission of Sewers, the defendant in any such Action shall and may make Avowry, Conuſance, or Justification generally, that it was done by Authority of the Commission of Sewers for Lot or Tax assessed by that Commission, &c. And the Plaintiff shall reply he did it of his own wrong without such cause, and both these Acts were made for avoiding of prolixity and captiousness of pleading, tending to the great charge and danger of Officers and Ministers of Justice, &c. Co. upon Lis. 282. 183.

If any Action be brought against any person for doing any thing by vertue of an Ordinance of Parliament by the persons enabled to do it, or others by their command or in their aid, it must be laid where the fact was done, not elsewhere, and the Defendant may plead not guilty, and give in evidence the Ordinance of Parliament: and if it appear not to be done in the same Country where it is laid, the Jury shall finde for the Defendant; and if the verdict pass with the Defendant, or the Plaintiff be nonsuit, or suffer a discontinuance, the Judges shall give to the Defendant double costs, Ord. 2. Dec. 1646. If any Officer or their assistants be sued for any thing done by Authority of the Ordinance of 9 February 1647. he must be sued in the Country where it was done, he may plead the generall issue, and he shall recover double costs, See the Ordinance. The like remedy is given in divers other cases by divers other Ordinances of Parliament.

And now by the late Act made, 23 Octob. 1650. The Defendant may plead the generall issue of Not guilty, or some such like generall Plea, and give the speciall matter in evidence.

CHAP. CLXI.

Of Trial.

His word Trial seems to be taken two ways in our Law. 1. For the manner and order of Proceeding in the hearing and determining of matters in difference. 2. For the manner of finding out and discovery of a thing doubtful and in question; or to find out by due examination the truth of the point in issue between the parties, whereupon Judgment may be given, Co. sup. Lit. 125.

And as the Question between the parties is always twofold, so is the Trial thereof. 1. Trial, what. For it is either quæstio Juris, as upon general Customs of England, which is of it. Common-Law, or the sense of a Statute; and that is always tried by the Judges; either upon a Demurrer, special Verdict, or Exception: For, Cuiuslibet in arte sua perito est credendum, & quod quisque novis in hoc se exerceat. Or it is quæstio Facti: Or it is matter of Record, and then it is tried by the Record it self. And for this, as there are diverslity of matters and things to be tried, so there are divers manner of Trials, and the Trial is always to be according to the nature of the thing to be tried.

There are divers ways and means of Trial of matters of Fact, when they are pleaded and come in issue. Sec. 1:

1. By Peers: For the Trial of a Peer of the Realm, in Treason, is by Peers upon their Honor, without oath. By Peers.

2. By Judges: For, the Customs and Usages of Courts by the Judges of the same Court, if they be there pleaded; and the Nonage of an Infant and Maihime by Inspection, and the reasonableness of a Fine of an Offender, or upon Surrender of a Copihold-estate, the reasonableness of a Custom, and such like things, shall be tried by the Judges. By the Judges: Inspection, what

3. By Witnesses: And then it is usually done by two Witnesses. In Dower, and Appeal of the death of the Husband, if his death be in question, it shall be tried by proof of Witnesses before the Judges. So the proof of a Summons, or the Challenge of a Juror must be tried by proof of Witnesses; and divers other things must be tried by the examination of parties and Witnesses. And of this nature is the Trial by Wager of Law: which see in Law. By Witnesses: Wager of Law: Examination.

Also some Trials have been by Parliament; and sometimes by Battel, now out of use. Many things also are tried by Certificate; as the doing of Service by him that holdeth by Escuage in Scotland, was to be tried by the Kings Marshal of his Army, Bastardy, Excommunication, Entry into Religion, Marriage, and the like, were tried by the Certificate of the Ordinary: But these must now be tried the ordinary way, and so must Wills and Administrations. The Priviledges and Liberties of Courts of Record, Cities and Burroughs, must be tried by their Charters and Records. But the most common and frequent way of Trial of all matters of Fact, is by a Jury of twelve men; and sometimes greater, called a Grand Assise; or lesser, called a Petit Assise. For all these things, see at large, Co. upon Lit. 125. 6. Plow. 230. Co. 9. 30. 31. 35. 40. & 11. 10. 44. Plow. 82. D. & S. 20. Crompt. Jur. 65, 66, &c. Stat. 28 Ed. 3. 13: Bro. ch 397. Co. 10. 104. Rep. 1 par. 36.

The Trial of all Criminal matters is by the Country; and the party accused hath this benefit to be tried by his neighbors, and cannot be denied it unless it be his own fault, as where he is mute, and will not put himself upon the Country; for then without further Trial, Judgment de pain fort & dure is passed by the Judges upon him. Mute:

3 In what place a Trial by Jury shall be.

For the places of Trial of matters, these things are to be known.

1. This is a general Rule ; That the Trial must be always in that County and place where the Jury may have the best knowledge of the matter. And therefore if the thing lie in the notice of two Counties, the Jury shall be made equally out of both Counties. But out of more then two Counties it cannot be made.

2. Questions of Title of Land (except it be in some special cases, and by special order of the Judges) are to be tried in the County where the Land doth lie. For the Law is, That all real and mixt Actions, as Waste, Ejectione Firme, and the like, must be brought in the County where the Land lieth. But for Debts, Detinue, Account, Actions of the Case, Trespass for Battery, and the like, they use to lay it in any County, and accordingly it may be tried.

3. The Judges of the Court wherein the Action is depending ; may order the Trial of all Actions to be where they please.

4. All Criminal matters are to be tried where the offence is done. See for this more, 49 Aff. p. 11. 21 H. 6. 3. 7 R. 2. 10. 26 H. 8. 12. 27 H. 8. 4. 28 H. 8. 15. 33 H. 8. 12. 33. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 14. 14. 18 Eliz. 11. 7 Jac. 1. 21 Jac. 12. Co. upon Lit. 124. 7. 1. 9. 19. 9 Ed. 3 f. 1. c. 4.

5. If done beyond Sea, it may now be tried in England. See Aff. Sept. 20. 1649.

Issue, what.

This word hath divers' uses. It signifyeth sometimes the Children begotten between a man and his wife : Sometimes profits by Fines, Amerciaments, &c. Sometimes profit of Land ; and sometimes the Point of matter depending in Suir, whereupon the parties join and put their Cause to the Trial of the Judge or Jury, to make an end of the Suit. And this is sometimes upon a Point in Law, and then it is called a Demurrer ; and sometimes it is upon a matter in Fact, when a thing alleadged by one is denied by the other. And then also it is either general, as Nor guilty, or the like : Or special, when it is joined upon some special matter ; sometimes about matter of Record, sometimes about matter of Writing, and sometimes about matter of Fact, as about a Person, Time, Place, or the like. Sometimes also it is in the Affirmative ; sometimes in the Negative. And for all this, see Finches l^y, 397. Co. 11. 107. 13 Ed. 1. 39.

Enquest or Inquest, what.
Jurors, what.

An Inquest is the Enquiry that is made by a Jury of men sworne to that purpose. And some do divide it into an Inquest of Jury, and Inquest of Office. The Jurors are the men that are sworne in this Jury, which sometimes are twelve, and sometimes twenty four ; who are sworne to deliver and find the Truth upon such Evidence as shall be given in to them touching the matter in question.

Se^d. 3.

4. The proceedings in Civil causes.

And by such men are matters of Fact (for the most part) tried with us in England, in causes both Criminal and Civil. For in causes Civil, after each party hath said what they can one against another in pleading, if there arise any Doubt about any matter of Fact, it is to be referred to the discretion of twelve indifferent men to be impannelled by the Sheriff for the purpose ; and as they bring in their Verdict, so Judgment passeth. And this the Judge is to declare as the Law is, upon the matter of Fact : For the Judge saith, the Jury finds the Fact thus, then the Law is thus, and so we judge. For the Rule is, Ad questionem Facti respondent Juratores, & ad questionem Legis respondent Judices.

5. The proceedings in Criminal causes.

And for Criminal causes, the course in that is, That at the great and general Assises, and at the general Sessions of the Peace, where are many Causes, there is (amongst the rest) one Jury called the Grand Jury, that commonly is of twenty four of the most substantial men out of every Hundred within the County returned by the Sheriff, and they are to consider of all Bills of Indictment preferred to the Court : which they do either approve by writing these words upon them, [A true Bill ;] or disapprove, by writing upon them, [We are ignorant.] And such as they do approve, if they be proceeded upon, are then further to be referred to another Jury. They may also upon their own Presentment without Indictment charge any man with any crime ; and this will be of the force of an Indictment, and the same Proceeding in this as upon an Indictment : For the party accused may traverse the offence, and bring it to be tried by a Petit Jury. Other lesser matters there in these Courts are proceeded upon without a Jury. And there some things are challenged for for insufficiencie, that must be tried by the Court: Some things are removed by Certiorari into a higher Court, and then there it must be tried. And that thing to which there is a Traverse put in, must be tried and ended by a Petit Jury: which (for the most part) in all Civil and Criminal causes; are but twelve. And these ought to be Free-men, not Vilains or Aliens; and lawful men, not outlawed men, and also men of worth and honesty.

What Jurors ought to be.

But if the Suit be between an Alien and Denizen, in this case the Jury must be the one half of Aliens, and the other half of Denizens, which is called Trial medietate lingue. The Disseisin of an Office in any Court, or raising a Record in any Court, by the Filizers and Attornies of the Court.

Medietate lingue, what.

And the Answer of such a Jury in any Criminal or Civil matter referred to them, is called their Verdict. See for all these things, Finches ley 399. Westm. 2: 38. Stat. 28 Ed 3: 9. 11. 26 Ed 3: 13. 11 H. 4: 9. 34 Ed 3: 8. 27 Ed. 1: 2. Co. 6: 47: 7. 14. upon Lit. 155. 271. with many others.

Verdict, what.

And these Jurors in Civil matters are to see that they be not corrupted. For if they be, they may be severely punished by a Writ called a Decies tantum, which is a Writ lying against a Juror in any Inquest, when he taketh money or other reward of the one party or the other, to say or give his Verdict upon his side. And this any man that will, may sue against the Juror in the Lord Protector's and his own name; and if it be found, he is to lose ten times so much as he took, to be divided between the Lord Protector and Informer. And so it lieth against an Embraceror, one that doth procure another to be so perjured. See for this, Crompton Jur. 308. 38 Ed 3: 13. 39 Ed 3: 8. F.N.B. 171. Co. 7: 14. And if the Jury give a false Verdict, and Judgment be given upon it, the party grieved may have a Writ of Attaint against them. But for this see my Second Part of the Marrow of the Law, f. 169, &c.

Decies tantum, what.

Attaint, what:

Vine is a neighbour-place near at hand, out of which the Jury must come for the Trial of the thing in question committed or done neer thereabouts. For every Trial must be out of that Town, Parish, Hamlet, or place known out of the Town, &c. within the Record within which the matter of Fact issuable is alleadged, which is most certain and neereft thereunto, the Inhabitants whereof may have the more certain knowledge of the Fact. As if the Fact be alleadged to be done in a certain street called Kings-street in the City of Westminster in the County of Middlesex; in this case the Vine cannot come out of the street, for it is neither Town, Parish, nor Hamlet nor place, out of the neighbourhood whereof a Jury may come by Law, nor shall it come out of Westminster, but out of the Parish of S. Margaret, because that is most certain. See for this, Co. upon Lit. 125. 158. Hob. Rep. f. 8, 9. Stat. 25 H. 8: chap. 16.

Self: 4. Vine, or Veneu what.

This word Issues is sometimes taken for the Forfeiture for not appearing upon a Distress infinite, which is the value of the Land from the Test of the Writ to the day of the Return: But it is also taken for the Forfeitures of those Jurors, that being duly summoned to appear, do make a default, which is more or less, as please the Judges of the Court. And these Issues being returned upon a Tenant in Fee-simple, in tail, or for life of another or himself, or in the right of his way; the Land he then hath will be chargeable for it, and any mans Cattel upon this Land may be distrained for it. See for this, Co. upon Lit. 104. 22 H. 6: 4. 35 H. 8: 6. 2 Ed 6: 22. 8 H. 6: 9. 27 Eliz. 6: 7. 1 Jac. 26. 4 H. 8: 7.

Issues, what.

Exemption of Juries, is a privilege that some men have to be exempted from the service in Juries. And this some have by dignity, as Barons, and such as are above them in degree; who are not to serve in ordinary Juries, but for Trial of a Peer, or the like. Others by a Writ, when they are very old, then they may have a Writ of Exemption or of Ease to be quit of all such publick service, as De non ponedis in Assis, and the like. Or it may be by the Kings Grant: Or it may be by Custom, as Tenants in ancient Domes. But which way soever this notwithstanding, in case of a Grand Assise, Perambulation, Attaint, and some other special cases, such men as common persons in the three last cases may be forced to serve. See for this, 12 Ed. 4: 18. Co. 6: 53. Crompton Jur. 20. Brownl. Rep. 1 par. f. 30. Marlb. ch. 4: 5 H. 8: 46.

Exemption of Juries, what.

Writ of Ease. De non ponedis in Assis & Juratis, what.

Sec. 5.
Tales, what.

A Tales is a supply of men impanelled upon a Jury or an Inquest, when they do not appear, or when upon their appearance they are challenged for the Plaintiff or Defendant. Which supply, as it seems, was heretofore used to be made by Writs of Decem tales, Octo tales, &c. one of them after another as there was need, until the full Jury did appear. But now by a new Statute, the Judge upon motion made to him may (in case but one of the principal Pannel do appear) presently cause a supply to be made of so many men as are wanting, of them that are there present standing about the Court. And hereupon the very Act of Supply is called, A Tales de circumstantibus. 35 H.8.6. 14 Eliz.9. 4 & 5 P.& M.7.9. Ca.10.99. 20 Ed.4.11. Stamf. 155. 37 H.6.12. 14 H.7.2.

Triers, what.

Triers be such as be chosen to examine whether a Challenge made to the whole Pannel, or any one of the Pannel or Jury, be just, or not. For the course is, sometimes to try a man by his Oath, and sometimes by others of the Jury: If any of the Jury, after some of them be sworn, be challenged; those that are sworn, are to say whether he that is challenged be indifferent, or not. But if the first or second man be challenged, then the Court doth use to appoint some of them (who it pleaseth) that shall be afterward sworn, to try the indifferencie of the person challenged. 27 H.8. 28. 49 Ed.3.1. 3 H.6.36. 21 H.7.29. 28 H.8.26. Fines ley 112.

Hundredors,
what.

Hundredors are men dwelling within the Hundred where the Land lieth, fit to be returned of a Jury upon any controversie, Crompt. Jur. 217.

Pannel or Array, what.
Array the Pannel.

The Pannel or Array, is nothing else but a Schedule or Roll containing the names of the Jurors that are returned in the Jury by the Sheriff to pass upon the Trial of the matter. And so array the Pannel, is nothing else but to set forth one by one the men that are impanelled. For this, see Plow. 177. St. 18 H.6.14. 42 Ed.3.11. Co. upon Lit. 158.

Sec. 6.
Venire facias,
what.

Venire facias is a Writ Judicial going out of a Record, and lieth where two parties plead and come to issue upon the saying of the Country: For then the party, Plaintiff or Defendant, shall have this Writ directed to the Sheriff to cause to come twenty four lawful men of the County to say the truth upon the Issue taken. And if they come not at the day of the Writ returned, then shall go forth against them a Habeas corpora, and then a Disfringas and other Writs, to bring them in to try the matter. The which two last Writs are usually made with this clause, Nisi prius Iudicarii venerint, &c. and is returnable after the time of the Judges coming in their Circuit, and then it is usually dispatched by their Commission of Nisi prius. Old N. B. f. 157.

Nisi prius,
what.

Nisi prius, is a Writ Judicial lying where the Inquest is pannelled and returned before the Justices, upon request of either party to the Sheriff, to cause the Jury to come before the Justices in the same County for the case of the Country. 14 Ed.3.15. F.N.B. 120.

Challenge,
what.
The kinds
of it.
Array.
Polls.

Challenge is an exception to things or persons. To things, as Declarations, Pleadings, &c. For which see Pleadings. To persons, when in an Assise or Jury the Plaintiff or Defendant doth except against all, or some, or one of them. And this last Challenge is sometimes to the whole Array or Pannel, and sometimes it is the Polls only, (i.) to some, or one, or more of the Jurors. And this Challenge also is sometimes peremptory, (i.) without cause, which the Law doth give in some special case as an advantage: As a Prisoner arraigned for Felony (in favour of life) may challenge twenty of the Jury that are to try him for his life, which he may do without shewing any cause; and then these twenty must be put out, and others put in their room. Or else it is upon Cause. And amongst Causes some are principal, and some inferior. A principal Challenge is, where it is apparent the Pannel or Person challenged is partial, being made in favour to one side, or in malice to the other, and so not indifferent. As if a Sheriff or Juror be a Brother, Son, Son-in-law, or Tenant of the one party, or be of kin in the ninth degree, though he cannot be Heir to the Land in question. And if a Juror be of kin nearer or further off, and of the whole or half blood, so the pedigree can be conveyed in a certainty, it is a good Challenge. And so it is if the Juror were put in at the parties naming to the Sheriff, or the Sheriff or Juror be within the parties Fee, or his Servant, or within his Distress; whether whether a mediate, as holding of q. s. who holdeth of the party, or immediate Tenant, or not his Tenant, but he is to come to his Hundred, or the party hath a Rent-charge going out of his Land, or the party is to be Heir to him of other Land: All these are good Causes of Challenge, and are (as it seems) principal Challenges. So in personal Suits, That the party hath been Arbitrator of his side, and in that matter; That he hath an Action of Battery depending against the party; That there is an Action of Debt depending by the party against him; That he hath taken money to give his Verdict for the one party; That he hath given his Verdict beforehand, or that he hath given his Verdict formerly in the same matter: These are said to be principal Challenges. So it is said of those things that do only induce it; as that he is the parties Servant, Attorney, or Counsellor, Steward of his Manor, of the same Society, or hath given his Verdict before in a like matter. In all these and the like cases the other party may challenge him for this: And this being found by his own confession, upon his oath or otherwise, or by the Triers to be true, he will be laid aside. The inferior causes are such, as though they be found to be true, are more questionable. But in all Challenges, these Rules must be kept.

1. All Challenges must be taken before the Jurors be sworn.
2. If one challenge a Juror, and it be found against the Challenger, he may not now challenge the Juror for a second cause.
3. If one challenge the Array, and it be found against him, he may not afterwards challenge any of the Polls without shewing cause presently, and this shall be tried presently.
4. No Challenge shall be admitted against the Triers appointed by the Court. See for all this, Co. upon Lis. 6. 156, 157, 158. Plow. 124, 125. Co. 1. 6. Finches ley 400. 7 H. 4. 10. 18 Aff. pl. 12. 21 Ed. 4. 61, 67. Stat. 27 H. 8. 26. 25 H. 8. 3. 22 H. 8. 14. 33 Ed. 1. Crompt. Jur. 681. 97. 25 Ed. 3. 3.

Rules concerning it.

Treat doth signifie as much as taken out or withdrawn; and is applied to a Juror, as a Juror is challenged for any cause, and for that cause he is Treat, that is, withdrawn, removed or discharged. Old N. B. 159.

Treat, what.

This is (as it seems) where the Bailiff of a Tenant in an Affise pleadeth, &c. and loseth by the Affise, and the Tenant himself hath a Release or some other Discharge to plead, then he may by this means have the Parties and first Jurors to appear again; and if it be found, he that recovered before shall lose the Land and yield double damages: Terms of the Law.

Sec. 7. Certificate of Affise, what.

This word Evidence sometimes signifieth authentical writings of Contracts. And sometimes any Proof, be it by testimony of Witnesses, Writings, Records, or otherwise offered to a Jury for proof of a matter in question and at issue, Co. 9: 9. And Proofs for to determine matter of fact, and to be offered to a Judge and Jury, are of two sorts. First, living, as by Witnesses; and to a Jury one Witness is sufficient: And dead, as matters of Record, as Letters-Patents, Fines, Recoveries, Inrollments, and the like; Writings sealed and delivered, as Feoffments, Leases, Releases, &c. and without Seal, as Courts-Rolls, Accounts, and the like. Co. upon Lis. 283. 115. 6. For when a cause or suit in a mans proceeding comes hitherto, as that the contrary part denieth any deed or thing as not done, or not to be so as is alleadged on the other side, and then he joineth in the affirmative and offereth to prove the same, each of them are to give the best Evidence that they can to make his own saying good and true. And if the case be between the King and a Prisoner, he is first to say what he can himself; and then all that can say any thing against him, are to be heard upon oath; and then others may be heard for him, but not upon oath: And according to this Evidence on both sides, or without any Evidence at all, the Jury are to give their Verdict according to their oaths. Co. 9: 9. Dyer 21. Crompt. Jurisd. 218.

Evidence or Proof, what.

Witnesses.

For answer hereunto, these things must be known.

1. Such persons as are infamous, as are persons attainted of Felony, or of a false Verdict, or of a Conspiracie, or of Perjury, or in a Pramunire, or of Forgery upon the Statute of 5. Eliz. chap. 14. and not upon the Statute of 1 H. 5. 3.

But all other persons, albeit they be Kinsmen never so near, Tenants, Servants, Masters, Counsellors and Attornies, are allowed for competent Witnesses, *Co. upon Lit. f. 6. and how, and by whom.

For Answer to this, take these things.

1. Some things ought to be pleaded, and may not be given in Evidence. And for this, see Co. upon Lit. 282, 283.

2. Records may prove themselves and other things, but may not be proved by Witnesses. But any thing done in the County-Court, Court-Baron, or Hundred-Court, may be proved by Witnesses.

3. A Fine or Common-Recovery may be given in Evidence without being under the Great Seal, or Seal of the Court, and without vouching the Roll of the Recovery. And yet the Jury (as it seems) may choose whether they will find it upon this Evidence, or not. Plow. 410.

4. In a Plene Administravit, an Account given to, and allowed by the Ordinary, was not allowed for a good Evidence, nor is it to be received. The Court, Pasche 7 Jac. Co. B. So a Pedigree by a Herald of Arms is not to be admitted for proof of an Heir; but it must be proved by Deeds, Records, or Witnesses. The Court, Pasche 8 Jac.

5. Depositions taken in the Ecclesiastical Court, cannot be given in Evidence, though the parties be dead. March Rep. f. 120.

6. A Church-book is not to be given in Evidence. Brownl. 1 par. 207.

Shop book.

7. None that keep a Shop-book, his Executors or Administrators, may give it in Evidence for Wares or Work, for above a year before the Action brought, unless they have a Bond or Bill for the Debt, or brought an Action thereupon within a year after the Wares delivered, or Work done. But this is to be observed amongst others, and not between Merchant and Merchant, Tradesman and Tradesman, or Merchant or Tradesman, St. 7 Jac. 12.

8. By the new Statute, 23 Octob. 1650. one may give in Evidence upon a general Issue, any matter special that he might have pleaded in the Action.

9. Justices of Peace, Constables, Bailiffs, Churchwardens, Surveyors of Highways, and such like Officers, may plead the general Issue, and give the special matter in Evidence, St. 7 Jac. 5. 21 Jac. 12. Ord. 31 March, 1654.

Self. 8.

What shall be said a good Evidence or proof to maintain a point in issue, or not.

For Answer to this, take these Cases.

If in a Plene Administravit the Defendant give in Evidence, that part of the goods were pledged, and he redeemed them with his own money, and paid as much of his own money towards the Testators debts; this was held good. Co. super Lit. 283.

Dyer 2.

If the Issue be a Recognizance or not, and a Recognizance with a Defeasance is given in Evidence; this is a good proof. Plow. 14.

If the point in Issue be, That he was never Executor, and the other prove an Administration committed to him; this is a good Evidence. Dyer 305.

If in a Detinue the Defendant plead he doth not detain, and he prove a Gift of the thing from the Plaintiff, this is a good Evidence. But otherwise it was, if he had shewed that they were pledged for money, and the money not paid; for this must have been specially pleaded. But now this will be good also upon the new Act for general pleading. Co. super Lit. 283.

If in Waste the Defendant shew the thing done was by a Tempest, or by Lightning; this is a good Evidence. And so now to say, That he did repair it before the Action brought: But this heretofore must have been specially pleaded, Co. sup. Lit. 282.

If

If in debt upon a Bond, the Defendant plead, Non est factum, it is not his Deed; and the Defendant prove the Seal was broken off and put on again, or prove a Rasure of the Deed; either of these is a good Evidence, and will bar the Plaintiff. Co. 5. 119. 11. 27.

If the point be upon a transitory Trespass done at a day or place certain, and the proof is that it was done at another day before, or at another place; this is good enough. But otherwise it is, if the proof be that it was done at a time after the time laid in the Action, Co. super Lis. 283.

If the Issue be an Agreement, a special Agreement proved will maintain it. So of a Feoffment, a Feoffment on Condition will maintain it. Plow. 8.

If the Issue be in a Suit against an Executor or Administrator, Assets in London; proof of Assets in any place in the world is good to maintain it, Co. 6. 47. And if it be in case of an Heir on a Suit grounded on a Specialty against him, the Issue is Assets by descent; it will make it good to prove Assets in any place in England. And if Assets in one County be the point, it is good enough to prove Assets in any County, Dyer 271. Crompt. Jur. 12.

If the Defendant plead payment to a Bond or Bill, and it appears the Debt is very old, and it hath not been demanded, nor any Use paid for it for many years, nor is there any badg of the continuance of it; in this case it is, upon the common presumption that it is paid, held a good Evidence, and the Juries do use to find for the Defendants. (Experience.)

In Trover and Conversion of Goods, and Not guilty pleaded, it is good Evidence for the Plaintiff as to the point of Conversion of the Goods, that the Plaintiff demanded them, and the other denied or refused to deliver them. Plow. 14.

A Licence to alien Land, or a Pardon for an Alienation of Land, was held by a common presumption, a good proof that the Land was held in Capite. M. 7 Car. B. R. Sir Jo. Constables Case. But if a Lease for life be the point, and it is proved, and no Livery of Seisin given upon it; this is no good Evidence, Co. sup. Lis. 283. So if the point be a Gift in Tail made by J. S. and the proof is of a Deed made by J. D. this is not a good Evidence. So if the point be a Lease parol, and a Lease in writing is given in Evidence; these are not good. Bra. Gen. Issue, 81. Plow. 14.

If in Debt on a Bond, and not his Deed pleaded, he shew that the Bond was joint, this is not good, Co. sup. Lis. 283. And yet perhaps now by the new Act, this special matter may be given in Evidence; for he may give in Evidence any thing that he may plead especially; and this pleaded specially would have barred. So in an Assise, and no wrong pleaded, and a Release after the Disseisin is given in Evidence. So where the Issue in Trespass is Not guilty, and the Defendant give in Evidence a Licence, Kelw. 55. 59. Or give in Evidence son assault demesne, that the Defendant began. But if he plead de son assault demesne, he may not give in Evidence, Not guilty. Idem.

To prove the sealing and delivery of a Deed, and not know the party that did it, is not a good Evidence; and yet if they know him when they see him again, it is well enough. Kelw. 59.

If Executors in a Plene Administravit had given a Judgment in Evidence; this was not good, but must have been pleaded specially; but it seems is good now. Kelw. 59.

If the Action of Waste be laid in cutting and selling Trees, and the Evidence in mooting or rooting up of Trees; it seems not good. M. 7 Jac. Co B.

If a Feoffment be the Issue, and a Deed is shewed with this Indorserment, That J. S. Attorney of the Feoffor did give Livery according to the Deed, and no Letter of Attorney proved or inserted in the Deed, but the Feoffor recites in his Will that he had conveyed his Land; this (it seems) is not good. Gibbins Case, P. 7 Jac. B. R.

In an Action of the Case upon a Promise, and Non assumpsit pleaded, Payment could not have been given in Evidence, as now it seems it may. (Three Judges.) So in Debt for Rent, That the Lessor had entred into part of the Land, Goldsb. f. 81.

One brings an Action of Trespass in a Close abutting on a certain Mill, &c. If he prove not the Buttals, he is gone. The Court, Goldsb. 125.

If there be two Batteries made between the Plaintiff and Defendant at divers times;
the

the Plaintiff to maintain the Issue, must prove the Battery made the same day he hath laid in his Declaration, and may not be admitted to give another day in Evidence, Brownl. 1 par. 233.

See. 9.
Verdict, what.

Verdict is the Answer of the Jury made upon any cause Civil or Criminal, committed by the Court to their consideration or Trial: which is general, as Not guilty, or Guilty; or special, when they find Special, and for the doubtfulness of it refer it to the Judges for their advice. Co. 9. 12. 119. 6. 46.

What shall be said to be a good Verdict,
or not.

If a Verdict find the matter or substance of the Issue, it is good enough, though it vary in circumstance. See Co. upon Lit. & Dyer 55. March. 9.

Notwithstanding a Jury, after they be agreed, do eat or drink at their own charge, or at his charge for whom they do find; this is not Finable, and the Verdict is good. But if it were before they were agreed, at the charge of him for whom they find; this would make the Verdict void. But if it were at their own charge, or his against whom they find, it is Fineable, but the Verdict is good, Co. upon Lit. 127. And yet if they eat and drink at their own charge before they be agreed, it is said the Verdict is naught, Dyer 3. 20 H. 7. 3. Hughes 1 Rep. 353.

If the Action be against a Lessee for cutting of Trees on a Covenant, and he say he cut twenty Trees, and the Jury find ten, it is a good Verdict: For if the matter of the Issue be found, it is well enough. As if one be indicted, that he of malice premeditated killed J. S. and the Jury find him guilty of manslaughter; this is a good Verdict. So if a Plaintiff alleadg the avoidance of a Church by privation, and the Jury find it to be by death, it is good, Co. upon Lit. 282.

The Jury must not find any thing contrary to what is agreed in pleading between the parties, either expressly or implicitly; and if they do, the Judges may reject it. As in Waste supposed in A. if the Defendant plead that A. is a Hamlet in B. and not a Town of it self; in this he confesseth the Waste: The Jury that are to try this Issue, whether it be in B. &c. shall not be admitted to find no Waste done, for that were against the Record, 9 H. 6. 56. Co. upon Lit. 22.

If upon a Trespass local, as Grass cut down in the County of S. where the Trespass was in the County of D. and the Defendant plead Not guilty (as he may) and the Jury find him guilty in the County of S. this Verdict is void, and no Judgment shall be given upon it, 9 H. 6. 63.

If they find a matter in certainty or ambiguously, it is void: As in a Plene Administravit, if they find the Executor have Goods in his hands, and find not to what value: So if they find part of the Issue, and find nothing for the residue, it is void. But if they give a Verdict of the whole Issue and more, it is good enough. Utile per inutile non vitiatur, Co. on Lit. 227.

If the Plaintiff after Evidence given, and the Jury departed from the Bar, deliver any Letter, Evidence, or Escrow to the Jury, not before given in Evidence at the Bar: if it pass with him, this will avoid the Verdict; but if it pass against him, contra, &c. So if they carry away any Writing unsealed, this will not avoid it, though this be a Misfeasance, Co. upon Lit. f. 227, 281. See more, Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 49. 2 par. 150. 190. 9 H. 6. 57. 20 H. 7. 3. Dyer 3.

Witnesses.

As to Witnesses, these things are to be known. First, Those that are served by Process out of any Court of Record to come in as Witnesses, and are tendred reasonable charges, must appear if they have no let, under pain of Ten pounds, and to give recompence to the party grieved according to his damage, 5 Eliz. 9. Wherein this is to be known, 1. It sufficeth to leave a Note of the Process at the house of the Witness. 2. If the charges tendred be not enough, if the Witnesses accept it, he is bound to appear: But otherwise not, if he do not leave sufficient to bear his charges. 3. He that sues upon this Statute, must aver that he is dammified, March Rep. 43. 4. A Lawyer that was of Counsel, may be examined upon oath as a Witness to the matter of the Agreement, not to the validity of an Assurance, nor to his Counsel that he gave, Mar. R. 83. Secondly, If a Witness commit wilful Perjury, he loseth Twenty pounds, shall be imprisoned six moneths without Bail, stand in the Pillory, and be disabled to be a Witness, 5 Eliz. 9. Thirdly, The penalty of him that shall procure such Perjury, Idem. Fourthly, How Witnesses to prove a Deed were called in before 5 Eliz. see St. 12 Ed. 2. 2.

Of Upholsters, View, Victuallers, Universities, and Vilains.

View is, where an Action is brought for Land, and the Defendant doth not well know what Land it is that the Demandant asketh; then the Tenant shall pray the View, (that is) that he may see the Land which he claimeth.

Then the Court will send Veyors to view the place in question, for the better decision of the Right. And if the Defendant deny, this is called a Counterplea of the View.

View, what.

Veyors, what.

Counterplea of the View.

How Upholsters must prepare, make and sell Featherbeds, Bolsters, Pillows, Quilts, Matresses, and Cushions, see Stat. 11. H. 7. 18. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. 23.

For Victuallers, Victuals, and Hostlers, these things are to be known:

1. Victuallers must sell their victuals at the prices the Justices of Peace shall set down in their Sessions. Stat. 13 R. 2. 8. 25 H. 8. h.

2. If they do not assise, they must sell at reasonable rates, respecting the times.

3. They may not make Agreement to sell their Victuals at a certain price, Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 8. 15.

4. No Victualler, whilst he is a Victualler, may exercise any Judicial office in that place.

5. The Inholder may keep his Guests horse, till he be paid for the meat of him and his horse. And if he stay so long till it come to the worth of the horse, he may sell the horse and pay himself, by a Custom in London, Brownl. 2 par. 154. But out of London it seems he cannot sell the horse, nor do more then keep him as a Pledg; nor can he work him, Brownl. 2 par. 154.

No Inholder or Hostler may take any thing for Litter for horses; nor may they take of any man more then what is reasonable, having respect to the Markers, for any kind of provision for man or beast. Nor if he live where a Baker is, may he make his Horse-bread himself; and if he do, he must make it of the due assise and weight. See for all this, 8. 13 R. 2. 8. 13 Ed. 3. 6. 21 Jac. 22. 5 Elix. 5. 27 Elix. 11. 28 H. 8. 14. 37 H. 8. 13. 34 H. 8. 7. 4 H. 4. 25. 12 Ed. 4. 8. 25 H. 8. 11. 32 H. 8. 11.

7. The Inholder is to look to the goods of his Guest, whilst they are in his house. And for this these things are to be known. 1. He is not to be charged with the goods of any one that doth not loddg in the Inne: And therefore if a Neighbor come to dinner there, he shall not answer for his goods; so if any Neighbor come in to tipple there. 2. He shall not answer for any goods, but what are lost by his default. 3. He shall not be charged for the goods of any but such as loddg in the Inne: And therefore if a Haberdasher come to an Inne and there sell divers Hats, and then go to a Fair and leave divers Hats there, and they be lost; the Inn-keeper shall not be charged. And yet one loddged there and left a Trunk a while, and went away and did not lie there; the Trunk was stolen, and the Inn-keeper charged with it. 4. If the Owner desire his horse may go to grass, and is be lost, the Inn-keeper shall not answer it; but if the Inn-keeper put him to grass of his own head, it is otherwise. 5. Albeit the Inn-keeper deliver the key of his chamber to his Guest, yet he shall be charged if the goods be lost, Brownl. 1 par. 144, 145. 6. An Inn-keeper must receive a Traveller, or else the Traveller may sue him. 7. The Inn-keeper is not bound to receive his horse or goods, unless he receive the Master also. See Assise upon the Case.

CHAP. CLXIII.

Of Uses.

1. Use, what.

Cestuy que use.
 Trust or Confidence, what.

Use is, the profit or benefit of Lands or Tenements: Or as others define it, The equity and honesty to hold the Land, in conscientia boni viri: Or as others define it more fully, It is a trust or confidence reposed in some other, which is not issuing out of the Land, but as a thing collateral annexed in privity to the Estate of the Land, and to the person touching the Land; so that he for whom he is trusted shall take the profit of the Land, and the Terre-tenant shall dispose of it according to his direction. As for an example: If a Feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs, to the use, profit or behoof of W. S. and his heirs; in this case heretofore J. S. had the estate and property of the Land, but W. S. had and was to have the profit in honesty and equity. So if one agree with W. S. for a piece of Land for Twenty pounds, and pay him the money, but hath no assurance of the Land, yet the equity and honesty to have this Land is in him that hath contracted and paid his money for it. And this Trust was called the Use of the Land. And hence came the course in Conveyances, to set down in the Habendum to whole use; as, Habendum to A. and his heirs, to the use of A. and his heirs. And he for whom this Trust is, and that ought to have the profit of the Land by Conveyance as aforesaid, is called Cestuy que use. There is a Use also of Goods and Chattels, which is properly called a Trust or Confidence; for one may have such things to the use of another. Co. 1. 121, 122. See the Addition to Just. Dodds Treatise. Co. super Lit. 271, 272.

2. The kinds.

A Use is either express, (i.) when the use or intent is openly declared and expressed between the parties upon the making of the Estate of Land whereunto the use is annexed: As when a Feoffment is made of Land to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of W. S. and the heirs of, or heirs males of the body of the said W. S. or to the end or intent that W. S. and his heirs, or W. S. and the heirs of his body shall take the profits of it, and the like; or when I covenant to stand seised of the Land to the use of my wife for life, and after of my eldest son and the heirs of his body, or the like. Or it is implied, (ii.) when the Use is not declared upon the agreement between the parties; but is left to the construction, and made by the operation of Law: As when a man seised of Land makes a Feoffment in Fee, or doth levy a Fine, or suffer a Common-Recovery of it to another without any consideration, and it is not agreed nor declared to what use or intent it shall be; this by construction of Law shall be to the use of the Feoffor, Conusor, or Recoverer: But if there be any consideration of money or other thing paid or given, or any Rent or Tenure reserved, then by construction of Law it shall be to the use of the Feoffee, Consee, or Recoveror; for otherwise the Law presumeth that the intent of him that did part with the Land was so, viz. That the other should have the property of the Land to his use, and that he himself should take the profits of it. So when one doth bargain and sell his Land for money to another, and no Use is expressed; in this case the Law doth say, it shall be to the use of the Bargainee and his heirs. Doct. & St. 95. Perksell. 533. Co. 2. 58. 9. 11. Dyer 18, 146.

A

A Use also is either in esse, and that in Possession, Reversion, or Remainder; as when a Feoffment is made to J. S. to the use of J. W. and his heirs, or to the use of J. W. and after to the use of J. D. and the heirs males of his body, and after to the use of S. T. and his heirs for ever. Or it is in posse, or in contingencie; as when by possibility it may happen to be in Possession, Reversion, or Remainder: As where a Use is limited to me for life, and after to him that shall be my first son in Tail; this is only the possibility of a Use, for it may or may not be. Co. 1. 121.

3. The nature, incidents, and original of it.

A Use at the Common-Law, before the Statute hereafter spoken of was made, was, and where that Statute doth not take place, is nothing but a meer confidence and trust collateral to, and distinct from the Land annexed in Privy of Estate, and to the person touching the Land, to this purpose, That Cestuy que use should take the profit of the Land, and the Feoffee or Terre-tenant that was trusted should make Estates, and otherwise dispose of the Land as the Cestuy que use in his life, or at his death by his last Will and Testament should direct and appoint; and if he made no disposition, then that it should go to his heir. So that the Feoffee had the Freehold or sole property of the thing in him; and Cestuy que use had neither jus in re, nor jus ad rem, (For if he against the Will of the Feoffee had entred into the Land, he had been a Trespassor:) but a bare confidence or trust, for which the Cestuy que use had no remedy but in Chancery upon breach of the trust, and there to have the Feoffee imprisoned until he perform the trust according to the Order of the Court. And these Uses to some purposes were reputed in Law as Chattels, and therefore were devisable by Will; and to some purposes as Hereditaments, and a kind of Inheritance, of which there was possessio fratris &c. And to some purposes neither Chattels nor Hereditaments; for they were not esteemed Assets in the Heir or Executor, neither were they reputed as Commons, Rents, Conditions, and such like Inheritances which are discontinued or taken away by the Alienation of the Terre-tenant, Escheat, Disfeisin, &c. But a Use is not so. Co. in Chudleighs Case, in toto; and Shelleys Case. Kelw. 160. Dyer 12. Bro. Feoffm. at uses in toto. Consc. 29.

And to every of these Uses there were two inseparable Incidents; Confidence in the Person, and Privy in the Estate, expressed by the parties, or implied by the Law: And when either of these failed, the Use was either gone for ever, or suspended for a time at the least. And therefore if the Feoffee to use, upon good consideration, had enfeoffed another of the Land that had not notice of the Use, the Use had been gone for ever; because howsoever here was a Privy of Estate, yet here was no Confidence in the person. But if the Feoffment had been without Consideration to such a one; in this case the Use had remained still, because the Law did imply a Notice. Trin. 17 Jac. Cancellaria.

So also it seems the Law was, when it was made in consideration of marriage only. And if a Disseisor, Abator or Intruder had come to the possession of the Land whereof the use was, albeit he had notice of the use, yet the use was suspended during their possession, and they should not have been seised to use as the Feoffee was; for they come not to the Land in the per, but in the pos. And if a Lord by Escheat, Lord of a Villain, or one that had entred for Mortmain, or that had recovered in a Cessavit, &c. had come to such Land, and had notice of the use, the use had been gone for ever; for these came to the Land in the pos and above the use. And Tenant in Dower and by the Courtesie should not be seised to uses in being; for all these wanted Privy of Estate. And if there had been Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee to the use of another, and the Tenant for life had made a Feoffment in Fee to one that had notice of the uses; this second Feoffee should not have stood seised to the first uses.

So if the Husband had made a Feoffment in Fee of the Land of his Wife, upon Consideration, and without any Use expressed, the Wife should not have had a Subpana, because the Feoffee was not in Privy of Estate of the Wife. And if Cestuy que use for life or in tail, the Remainder in tail, with divers Remainders over in use, had made a Feoffment to one that had notice; he should not have been seised to the first uses, causa qua supra. But otherwise it is of Commons, Advowsons, and such like appendants or appurtenants: For if Tenant in tail, or Husband in right of his Wife make a Feoffment of a Manor, or of part of it with an Advowson appendant; the Advowson at least, after Presentment, shall pass as appendant to the Manor, or to part of the Manor, and not to the Estate of the Land which is discontinued by the Feoffment. So if a Disseisor, Abator, Intruder, or the Lord by Escheat, or the like, shall have these things as annexed to the Land, or the possession of the Land. So that there is a difference between a Use, a Warranty, and such like things that are annexed to the Estate of the Land in privy; and Commons, Advowsons, and other Hereditaments that are annexed to the possession of the Land.

The original of it, and why so much lands were put in use.

And these Uses began first when the custom of Property began and was brought in, that one man knew his own from another mans, and then was to enjoy his own, and not to be deprived of it without consent or order of Law. For then he that had Land, had two things in him; a possession of the Land, and power to take the profits of it. And those being to be distinguished, he might give the Freehold or Possession to another, and take the profits to himself; D. & S. 96. Co. l. 123, 124. Stat. 27 H. 8. ch. 10. in the Preamble.

The mischief of Uses.

And they were the rather allowed by the Law for a time as reasonable, because they gave a man power to dispose of his Land by Will, which otherwise he could not have done but in some special cases by Custom of the place. But in time this use was turned into an abuse; and the greatest part of all the Lands in the Kingdom, especially in the time of the Broil between the Houses of York and Lancaster, were put in Use, partly of fraud, and partly of fear. Which produced not a few inconveniences: For thereby many were deceived of their just and reasonable rights, as namely, A man that had cause to sue for his Land, knew not against whom to bring his Action, or who was Owner of it; the Wife was defrauded of her Thirds, the Husband of being Tenant by the Courtesie, the Lord of his Wardship, Relief, Harriot and Escheat, the Creditor of his Extent for Debt, the poor Tenant of his Lease, and other Purchasers of their purchase. For these rights and duties were given by the Law from him that was owner of the Land, and none other, which at this time was the Feoffee of trust; and so the Feoffor, the old owner of the Land, should take the profits, and leave the power to dispose of the Land at his discretion to the Feoffee: And yet the Feoffee was not such a Tenant of the Land, as his Wife might have Dower, or the Land be extended for his Debt, or that he might forfeit it by Felony or Treason, or that his Heir should be in Ward for it, or any duty of Tenure fall to the Lord by his death, or that he could make any Estates of it. Also Lands were many times conveyed by last Wills, by words only, and sometimes by Tokens only in time of great extremity of weakness: And many perjuries for Trial of secret Uses, were daily committed.

Uses and Feoffment united.

All which having been espied, have been laboured to be cured and holpen by divers particular Acts of Parliament in all succeeding ages. Stat. 1 R. 2. ch. 9. 4 H. 4. 7. 11 H. 6. 3. 1 R. 3. 1. 4 H. 7. 17. 1 H. 7. 1. 19 H. 7. 15. 27 H. 8. 10. But the makers of these Laws finding the continuances of these Uses so mischievous, that they did over-reach the policie of all Laws: For a general remedy, and a perfect cure of all the said mischiefs and abuses, have at last provided; That where any are, or shall be seised of any Lands to the use or trust of any other, by reason of any Bargain, Sale, Feoffment, Fine, Recovery, Contract, Agreement, or otherwise, by any means whatsoever, Cestuy que use or trust, that hath any such use in Fee-simple for term of life or years, or otherwise, or any use in Reversion or Remainder, &c. shall have the possession of the Land in such quality, manner and condition as he had the use or trust: And where any one is seised of Lands to the use or intent that another shall have a yearly Rent out of the same Lands, Cestuy que use of the Rent shall be deemed in possession thereof of like estate as he had the use. By which Statute the use and possession of Land is now at this day coupled, conjoined and married with an indissoluble knot, so as they cannot now stand apart and divided, but he that hath the one must have the other, and the one doth ensue the other as the shadow doth the body: And therefore now upon Fines, Recoveries and Feoffments, the Estate doth settle as the use and intent of the parties is declared by word or writing before the act done.

As for example, If a Writing be made between two or more, that one of them shall levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, or suffer a Recovery to the other, to the use and intent that one of them, or another man shall have it for life, and after another in Tail, and after a third in Fee-simple; in this case the Law setteth the Estate according to the use and intent declared: So that now what Estate a man hath in the use, the same he hath in the possession.

But herein for the more full understanding of this Statute, and the Law at this day, it must be observed, that this Statute doth not extend to all manner of uses, neither are all uses executed and united to the possession hereby. For to every execution of a use within this Statute, four things are requisite.

To what uses the Statute of 27 H. 8. doth extend, and to what not.

1. That there be a person seised,
2. That there be a Cestuy que use in esse.
3. That there be a use in esse in Possession, Reversion, or Remainder.
4. That the Estate out of which the uses do arise, be vested in Cestuy que use. So that when these four, viz. Seisin in the Feoffees, Cestuy que use in rerum natura, Use in esse, and that the Estate of the Feoffees doth vest in Cestuy que use, then there is an execution of the use within this Statute. But if any of these fail, there is no execution of the use within this Statute. Co. 1. 126. 136. Plow. 351. And therefore it is agreed, that this Statute doth not execute any use but only uses in esse: So that the right of a present, and a future or contingent use are excluded until they come in esse, and then the Statute doth execute them. Also if no alteration be of the Estate of the Land before; and if Cestuy que use in tail with divers uses in remainder had made a Feoffment, and died before the Statute, no execution should have been of this right of a use until Entry by the Feoffees. Co. 1. 126. Dyer 58. 88. 330. So if Cestuy que use in possession had made a Feoffment before the Statute, no right of the use in possession or remainder shall be executed by the Statute, until the regrest by the Feoffees. So if a Feoffment had been made before the Statute to the use of the Feoffee for life, and after to the uses of others in remainder, and the Feoffee had made a Feoffment in fee to another; this use shall not be recontinued, or the repossession of the Land executed unto it by this Statute.

So that the right of uses in esse, and uses in contingencie, until they happen to be in esse, remain at the Common-Law as they were before the Statute. And therefore if the Estate of the Feoffees be in such cases divested by Disseisin; or the King, or a Corporation, or an Alien, or a person attaint, &c. be enfeoffed of the Land before the use come in esse; or if the Land be aliened bona fide upon consideration to one that hath notice of the use; this use can never be executed until these Possessions be removed by lawful Entry or Action of the Feoffees. And if their Entry and Action be barred, the use is gone for ever, and the party grieved thereby hath no remedy but in Chancery. And therefore if Cestuy que use in tail, the Remainder in tail restrained with a clause of perpetuity be disseised, no use in contingencie can be executed by this Statute.

And if before the Statute a Feoffment had been made in Fee to the use of J. S. for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of J. N. and the Feoffees had been disseised, and then the Statute had been made, and after J. N. die, and after his death J. S. die; this use shall never be executed in the right heir of J. N. Co. 1. 138.

And so also if a Disseisin be after the Statute, and before the death of J. N. no possession shall be executed in the right heir of J. N. Also uses that need no execution by the Statute, as when a man doth convey Land to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of J. S. and his heirs; this doth not need help of this Statute: Also uses that are against the Rules of the Common-Law, shall not be executed by this Statute. And therefore if a Feoffment be made to the use of A. for life, and after to the use of every person that shall be his heir one after another for term of his life. So if one make a Feoffment to the use of another in tail, with divers Remainders over, with a Previso that neither of them shall discontinue or alien, &c. These uses shall not be executed, because these Limitations are wholly void. And in these cases (it seems) there is no remedy to be had in Chancery against the Feoffees.

So that out of all this appeareth, that some Uses are executed presently, as Uses in esse; and some are executed by matter ex post facto, if they be according to Law, and come in esse in due time. But if they be Uses invented and limited in a new manner, and not according to the antient Common-Law, they are altogether void, and extinguished and abolished by this Statute. And where Lands are conveyed to others in trust after this or the like manner, viz. That the Feoffees shall take the profits, and deliver them to the Feoffor and his Heirs, &c. or that the Feoffees shall convey it to the Heir of the Feoffor at his age of twenty one years: And where Lands are conveyed to certain uses expressed and declared, and there be other secret uses and intents agreed upon between the parties; these uses or trusts are not within this Statute, neither will the Statute execute them, but they remain as they were before the Statute, determinable in Chancery.

Also Leases for years of Lands in use that have their being before, and are granted over in use, are not executed by this Statute. And therefore if a Lessee for years of Land grant or assign over his Estate to A. and B. and their Assigns, to the use of the Grantor and his wife for the term of their lives; this use or trust is out of the Statute, and not executed thereby: And therefore in this case all the Estate is in A. and B. and the Grantor hath nothing but a use, for which he hath his remedy in Chancery. Dyer 369.356. Crompton 747.69.

So if one be seised of Land in Fee, and he bargain and sell it, or make a Lease of it to another in trust, and for the benefit of a third person; this is but a Chancery-trust &c. in this third person, as was held clearly, M. 8 Car. B. R. And yet if a Feoffment be made to the use of J. S. and his Assigns for the term of twenty years, this term of years shall be executed by the Statute: And so in all such like cases and questions of Trusts and Uses that are not within the Statute of Uses, the Law is now as it was before the same Statute was made, and all those matters are determinable in Chancery. For as the questions of Uses and Trusts that are within the Statute, are to be decided and ruled by the Judges of the Common-Law; so are all other questions of Uses and Trusts that are out of the Statute, to be ruled and decided by the Judges of the Chancery.

4. What shall be said a good use of Land, or not; and when and where such a use shall be raised, altered or created, or not. First in respect of the manner of raising it, and the several ways whereby Uses may be raised.

To make a good Use, or to make a Use to rise, especially such a Use as may be within the Statute, respect must be had to divers things, Co. super Lit. 271: P. l. w. 301.

First, to the ways or means of creating and raising of Uses: wherein it is to be observed, that albeit the quality of the Uses be changed in most cases by the Statute of Uses, yet Uses, and Uses within this Statute are, and may be raised as they might before the Statute, either by transmutation of the Estate, as by Fine, Feoffment, Common-Recovery, &c. or out of the Estate of the Owner of the Land, as by Bargain and Sale, by Deed indented or inrolled, or by Covenant to stand seised to Uses upon good consideration.

And therefore a Fine, Feoffment, or Recovery may be had of Land, to the use and intent that either of the parties thereunto, or others, shall have it for any time or estate; and by this means what Uses, and consequently what Estates a man will, may be raised and created. And in these cases the Conusor, Feoffor, or Recoverer may appoint the Use of the same Fine, Feoffment, or Recovery to whom he will, without any respect of marriage, money, kindred, or the like; for in this case his will guideth the equity of the estate, Brumf. 2 par. 76. 201. Dyer 186.

Or if a man make a Lease to A. for life, to the use of B. for life; this is a good use and estate in B. during the life of A. Co. 6.68.

Or if a man by Bargain and Sale for good consideration sell his Land to another, hereby the Use will rise according to the Estate bargained and sold, unto the Bargainee. But in this case if it be an Estate of Freehold, as of Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life, that is sold; the Bargain and Sale must be made by Deed indented and inrolled within six moneths after in some of the Courts at Westminster, or in the Sessions Rolls of the Shire where the Land lieth, (except it be in Cities and Corporate-Towns where they use to inroll Deeds) otherwise no Use will rise by it. But if it be an Estate or term for years only that is sold, there the Use will rise well enough without without any such matter, Dyer 155. Co 2. 36. 7. 40. 8. 93. 4. 70. See Bargain and Sale. Co 2. 34. 8. 94. Or if a man seised of Land in Fee, covenant to stand seised of it to the use of his wife, children, brethren, or other kinsfolk for life, in Fee-simple, Fee-tail: Or if one seised of Land in Fee-simple, covenant to stand seised of it to the use of a woman he is to marry, or to the use of a woman his son or other kinsman is to marry, or the like: hereby the Uses, and consequently the Estates will rise accordingly. And in these cases there is no need it should be by Deed indented, &c. or that the Deed be inrolled; for Uses may be raised by Deed poll, as well as by Deed indented.

Uses may be raised by Covenant for Jointures: But power to make Leases cannot pass in this manner. But this must be done by Fine, Feoffment, or Transmutation of Possession, if there be a Covenant that the Owner will stand seised to these uses. And this also is the opinion and practice of the Chancery, Car. Rep. 22. 30. But if a man by Deed convey Land to his second son, thus: I do give and grant this Land to J. S. my second son, and his heirs after my death, and no Livery made; the son shall take nothing by this Covenant, nor will any Use arise, Mar. 50. pl. 78.

Also Uses may be created (as some hold) by word or Parol-agreement, as well as by Deed or writing: For it is said it hath been adjudged, That if a man say to his son and a wife that his son is to marry, that in consideration of the same marriage they shall have the Land to them two in tail, that hereby a good Estate-tail will arise after the marriage: And that where one doth by word without Deed grant to his son and his wife in tail Land in consideration of their marriage, that it was agreed by all the Judges, that the Use did rise upon this agreement. Crompt. Jur. 61. 60. Plow. 301. 308. and the better opinion of the Judges in Corbins Case, 38 Eliz. Howsoever it is safe in these cases to do it by Deed and in writing: For, Dyer 296. Plow. 22. seem to oppugn this.

And if a man make a Feoffment, levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery to the use of his last Will, or to the intent to perform his last Will, or to the use of such person and persons, and of such estate and estates as he shall limit by his last Will, and then afterwards by his last Will declare the Uses, these are good Uses, and this is a good way of raising of Uses. Lit. sect. 462, 463. Co. 6. 17.

So if a man devise his Land by Will to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of J. D. and his heirs; it seems that the Use will rise to J. D. and his heirs by this means. And if a man by verbal agreement, in consideration of money or the like, sell his Land to another, or agree and promise that the Bargainee shall have it for any time, howsoever that hereby no Use nor Estate will arise (if it be a Freehold that is sold) within the Statute, because it is not by Deed indented, &c. yet it seems a good Use will arise at the Common Law, and that the Bargainee shall have relief in Equity for his Purchase. See Stat. 27 H. 8. of Uses. Fitz. Devise 22. Dyer 229. Conscience.

The second thing whereunto respect must be had, is to the persons trusted, or to him to whom the Conveyance is made: For to every good Use there must be a person seised to use, and he must be a person capable of such a Seisin. And for this it must be known, that any sole person that may make an Estate to himself, may make an Estate to other uses. Also a man may be seised of his own Land to other uses, as in the case of a Covenant to stand seised to uses. But the King, or any Body Corporate, Alien born, or person attaint, cannot be seised to other uses no more by an original Feoffment to use, then when they come by the Land in use at the second hand: In which case (as hath been shewed) neither such Persons, nor Disseisors, Abators, or Intrudors, or Lords of Villains, or by Escheats, shall be seised to other uses: But in all these cases the uses are void, and the parties shall hold the Land to their own uses, or to the uses of the Feoffors &c. and not to the use of Cestuy que use. And a Bargainee of Land for valuable consideration, cannot be seised of the Land to any other use but his own. Co. 1. 122. 127. 135. Plow. 238. Dyer 8. 283. Resolved in Doctor Atkins Case, 44 Q. Co. B. Dyer 155. Lit. Bro. sect. 60.

Secondly in respect of the persons trusted, and what persons may not be seised to the use of another, but to their own use.

Thirdly in respect of the persons for whom the trust is, or the Cestui que use.

The third thing to be respected is the Cestui que use: For to every good use, as there must be a person seised to use, so there must be a person to whose use he is seised, and he must be capable also. And for this it must be observed, that any man that is capable of an Estate directly and immediately to himself, is capable of the same Estate by way of use. But if the use be limited to a Corporation, there must be a Licence had, otherwise it will be an alienation in Mortmain. (See before.) And if future uses upon Contingencies be limited to such persons as are not in being, these uses, howsoever they are good at the Common-Law, yet they are not good within the Statute, neither doth the Statute execute them at all until they come in possession. And if a Feoffment be made to J. S. and his heirs to the use of the Parishioners of Dale; this use is void, for they are incapable by this name; and it shall be to the use of the Feoffor. Co. 1. 136. Bro. Mortmain, 37. Brownl. 1 par. 193. St. 12 H. 7. 27. 49 Ed. 3. 4.

Fourthly in respect of the estate and possession of him that doth create the use.

The fourth thing to be regarded, is the Estate of him that doth raise the use, in the Land whereof the use is raised. For howsoever the Tenant in Fee-simple of Land may create what uses he will in Fee, for life, or years upon it, and such uses are good, and the Tenant in tail or for life may perhaps grant their Land for their own lives to the use of a third person: Yet if a Tenant in tail for good consideration covenant to stand seised to the use of himself for life, and after of his eldest son in tail, no use will rise by this Covenant. So if Tenant in tail of an Advowson in gross, grant it by Deed to one and his heirs, to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of another in Fee; this Grant is void by the death of the Tenant in tail. And if such a Tenant in tail bargain and sell his Land by Deed indented and inrolled, hereby the Bargainee hath an Estate descendible to his heirs, but determinable upon the death of the Tenant in tail. And if one covenant by Indenture to stand seised to the use of B. of White-acre, which he hath not then, but he doth afterwards purchase it; by this no use will rise. And if one that hath but a term of years grant it to J. S. to the use of himself for life, &c. this is no good use within the Statute, but a Chancery-trust only. Hil. 38 Eliz. Co. B. Curia. Ca. 2. 52. Pasch. 13 Jac. Co. B. Seignior Savers vs. Smith. Co. 10. 96. Telvertons Case, 37 Q. B. R.

Fifthly in respect of the estate and possession of him that doth take by the Conveyance.

The fifth thing to be respected, is the Estate of him that doth take by the Conveyance out of which the uses are derived: For howsoever where a man doth grant in Fee-simple to another and his Heirs, he may limit what uses he will upon this estate; and if a man make an Estate for life to another, he may limit an use thereupon; yet if a man make a Gift in tail to another, he can limit no use thereupon, Dyer 369. Co. 2. 78. Co. super Lit. 19.

And therefore if one grant his Land to J. S. and the heirs of his body, to the use of J. S. and his heirs in Fee; this limitation of use is void, and J. S. hath hereby an Estate in tail. And if a Feoffment be made to J. S. to have and to hold unto him and the heirs of his body, to the use of him, his heirs and assigns for ever, this use is void. Trin. 14 Jac. B. R. Adjudged, Cooper and Franklins Case.

And where one doth bargain and sell Land for money, (in which case the Law doth make an express use) no other use can be appointed. And therefore if A. for money bargain and sell Land to B. and his heirs, to the use of A. for life, and after of B. in tail, and after of A. in fee; all these uses are void, for a use cannot rise out of a use. Dyer 169. Cromp. Jur. 53. Lis. Bro. seff. 284.

So if A. make a Lease to B. for years rendring Rent, to have and to hold to the use of the Lessor; this use is void, as being against reason also. And if a Feoffee to use before the Statute of Uses, had bargained and sold the Land to one who had notice of the former use, no use had been made hereby; for there might not be two uses in being of the same Land at one time. Dyer 155: Co. 1. 136, 137.

And if A. enfeoff B. to the use of C. and his heirs, with Proviso, that if D. pay to C. an hundred pounds, that C. and his heirs shall stand seised to the use of D. and his heirs, this last use is void; for the use must arise out of the Estate of the Feoffee, and not out of the Estate of the Cestui que use. See Brownlows Reports, 1 par. 40.

The sixth thing whereunto respect must be had, is the Cause or Consideration. For howsoever in cases where Uses pass by way of transmutation of possession, as by Fine, Feoffment or Recovery, there the Consideration is not at all material, for he that doth make the Estate, may appoint the Use to whom he will, without any respect to marriage, kindred, money, or other thing: For in this case his own will and consideration guideth the use and equity of the Estate. Yet in Bargains and Sales, and Covenants to stand seised to Uses, it is otherwise: for there Consideration is so necessary, that nothing will pass, neither will any Use rise without a Consideration; i.e. some matter that may be a cause or occasion meritorious which amounteth to a mutual recompence in Deed or in Law, which must be expressed or implied in the Deed whereby the Use is created, or else supplied by averment and proof: For howsoever in this case an Averment shall not be allowed and taken against a Deed, that there was no Consideration given, when there is an express Consideration upon the Deed; yet when the Deed expresseth no Consideration, or saith [for divers good Considerations] or the like, there an Averment of a good Consideration given shall be received, for this is an Averment that may stand with the Deed; and without Consideration Inrollment will not help. And therefore if one bargain and sell his Land to another by Deed indented and inrolled, without any Consideration; it seems no Use will rise by this to the Bargainee. Dyer 169. Cromp. Jur. 62. Dyer 146. Cal. 176. 11. 25. Dyer 312.

Sixthly in respect of the cause or consideration of it, and what shall be a sufficient consideration to raise or alter a use, or not;

Averment

So if one [for divers good Causes and Considerations, or for divers great and valuable Considerations] bargain and sell his Land to another, or covenant to stand seised of his Land to the use of another that is not of his kindred, no use will rise by this, unless it be proved that money or something else was given for it. 41 Q. adjudg. But if a man by Deed in consideration of money, as [in consideration of the sum of an hundred pounds to him paid, or in consideration of a competent sum of money to him paid, or otherwise promised to be paid, or in consideration of other Land, or of giving of Counsel, or the like] bargain and sell, or by such like words grant his Land to another in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years; in these cases the Use will arise to the Bargainee well enough. Plow. 301. Bro. Fait. Inroll. 92. D. & S. 99: Cromp. Jur. 60. 61. Dyer 90. Cromp. Jur. 61.

And therefore if I covenant with with B. that when he doth enfeoff me of White-acre, I will stand seised of Black-acre to the use of him and his heirs, and he doth enfeoff me accordingly; in this case the use of Black-acre will rise to B. and he and his heirs shall have it according to the agreement.

So if I agree with my Lessee for years, that if he pay me a hundred pounds within his term, that I will stand seised of the Land to the use of him and his heirs, and he do pay me the hundred pounds accordingly; in this case the Use will rise, and he and his heirs shall have it according to the agreement. Bro. Exposition of words, 44. So if I covenant that my son shall marry the daughter of A. and A. promise to give me a hundred pounds for the marriage-portion, and I covenant that if the same marriage do not take effect, I and my heirs will stand seised of the Land to the use of A. and his heirs, until the hundred pounds be paid; in this case a good Use will rise of the Land accordingly, if the marriage do not take effect.

But in all these and such like cases, the Covenant must be by Deed indented, and it must be inrolled; otherwise no Uses will arise. And when the Deed is inrolled, it shall take effect as from the beginning by Relation, to avoid all intervenient Estates and Charges whatsoever. And in like manner it is, if one for no cause, or for no consideration, as [because he is of his antient acquaintance, or because there hath been entire love or great familiarity between them, or because he hath been his Chamber-fellow, School-fellow, or Fellow-servant, or because he hath done him good service, or because he was his Master and taught him, or to the end that he may pay his Debts and Legacies, and discharge his Funerals, or for divers good causes and considerations:] If one for any of these, or any such like cause and consideration covenant with another that he will stand seised of his Land to the use of that other and his heirs, or that he and his heirs shall have the Land, &c. By this Covenant, whether it be inrolled or not, no Use at all will rise. Plow. 302: 2 H. 7. 20.

Relation

Covenant.

So if one covenant to stand seised to the use of J. S. (who is his Bastard-son) and his heirs, no Use will arise hereby. And yet perhaps upon such a Covenant as this, whereupon no Use nor Estate doth arise, an Action of Covenant may lie. Dyer 374. Co. 7. 11. 10. 143. 1. 83. Plow. 301. Lit. Bro. sel. 284. Co. 1. 154.

But if one [in consideration of nature, kindred, blood, or marriage with ones self, or any of his blood, payment of debts, or for the like cause] or without any such express Consideration at all, covenant to stand seised to the use of himself, his wife, children, brothers, sisters, or cousins, or their wives; these are good Considerations, and the Uses and Estates thereupon thus raised and made are good. And therefore if one covenant by his Deed, without expression of any Consideration, to stand seised of his Land to the use of himself for life, and after of his Wife for life, and after of his Child in tail or for life, and after of his Brother in tail or for life, or in fee, or in any such like manner; these Uses will rise, and the Estates will be well made hereby accordingly.

So if I agree with another, That if he marry my daughter, that from the time of the marriage they shall have my Land to them and their heirs; in this case, and by this agreement, if he do marry my daughter, they will have my Land according to the agreement. So if I being about to marry with a woman, covenant with J. S. to stand seised of my Land to the use of my self for life, and after to the use of the woman I am to marry for her life, and after to the use of the heirs of my body begotten on her; these are good Uses and Estates that are made by this Covenant. Plow. 301. Bro. Feoffment, al. uses, 54.

But here by the way this difference must be observed, where a man doth covenant in consideration of a Marriage to be had, to stand seised to Use, and the Marriage doth not take effect, there no Use shall arise. Curia, Trin. 10 Car. B. R. Hoskins Case. So also if the parties disagree at their age of consent: And so was it held in the Lord Herberts Case. But where one doth covenant to make a Feoffment, or levy a Fine to such Uses, and the Feoffment is made, or Fine levied accordingly; there notwithstanding the Marriage doth not take effect, yet the Use shall arise: for there he is in by the Fine or Feoffment, in which case there needs no Consideration. And therefore if A. covenant with B. that in consideration C. is his Kinsman, and in consideration of a Marriage to be had between C. and E. he will make a Feoffment and other Assurances to the use of himself for life, the Remainder to C. and E. and the heirs of their two bodies, and after Assurances are made accordingly by Fine or Feoffment, but they do not intermarry, but marry others; in this case notwithstanding E. shall have a Moity of the Land.

So if I covenant (in consideration of the love I bear to my Wife) to stand seised to the use of her and her heirs of my body begotten, and after to the use of my Brother; hereby the Use will rise to my Brother also, albeit he be not within the express Consideration. Co. 7. 40. 11. 24. Dyer 374.

So if one covenant with his two Sons for the love he doth bear to them, to stand seised of his Land to the use of himself for life, and after of his Wife for life, and after of his two Sons in tail one after another; in this case the Consideration is sufficient to raise the Use to the Husband and Wife also.

So if one (in consideration of the love he doth bear to his Brother) doth covenant to stand seised to the use of his Brother, and the Wife of his Brother for life, or in tail; in this case the Consideration is sufficient to raise the Uses to them both. So if I covenant (in consideration of the marriage of my son with the daughter of another) to stand seised to the use of my self for life, and after of my son and his wife in tail; these are good Uses, and will rise accordingly.

If I covenant with J. S. to stand seised to the use of him, his Executors, &c. (he being none of my kindred) for twenty years, and after to the use of my Son in tail; in this case the Use will not rise to J. S. but it will rise to my Son well enough. For albeit the Consideration of money given by one, may be a Consideration to all the Estates; yet the Consideration of blood, &c. is singular, and will raise the Use of that only to which it goeth. Plow. 307. Dyer 174.

But

But if I Covenant with B in consideration of the marriage of my son with the daughter of B to stand seised to the use of R (a stranger) for life, and after to the use of my son and his wife in Taile; in this case the use shall rise to R, albeit he be a stranger, and that for the supportance of the remainder, which cannot be without a particular estate: and in all these, and such like cases, no inrolement of the Deed is necessary. If I (in consideration of 100*l.* given to me by my son,) Covenant with him to stand seised of Land to the use of him and his heirs; in this case, no use will rise without inrolement by the implied consideration, because there is an express consideration, Et expressum facit cessare tacitum. Cook 11. 24, 25. 7. 40. Inrolement.

And yet if I Covenant, that in consideration that I S is my son, and hath paid me 100*l.* that I will stand seised of Land to the use of him and his heirs; in this case, the use will arise without inrolement. Manrels case Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Broo. Feoffmental use, 15 Plow.

And if I Covenant in consideration of 100*l.* and of a marriage, to stand seised to the use of my self for life, and after of my son in Taile; hereby the use is raised, and the possession charged without inrolement. Manrels case. 4.

So also where a Feoffment is made, fine levied, or recovery suffered, and no use declared thereupon; and the same is without any consideration of fine or Rent; by this the use is not changed, for it doth result to the Feoffor, Conusor, and Recoveree, and he hath the estate as he had it before; but if in these, and such like cases, there be but a penny or a penny worth of consideration given, or any Rent reserved upon the Feoffment; the use will rise well enough to the Feoffee, &c. Cook 1. 24. Doct. & St. 97. 99, 101.

And if any Tenure be created, as where a Gift in Taile, Lease for life or years is made; in these cases, albeit there be no consideration given, yet the use will rise well enough to the Donee or Lessee, and especially, if any Rent be reserved, for that is a kind of consideration: But if a Lessee for years grant over his term to another without any consideration at all, it seems by this no use at all will rise to the Grantee, and therefore that the Grantee shall hold all it to the use of the Grantor; sed Quere.

The Seventh thing whereunto respect is to be had, is the manner and form of words used in the making and raising of uses, wherein there is much regard to the mind and intention of parties. Seventhly, in respect of the manner and frame of the words used in the raising of uses, and what manner of uses may be made, or not.

For if one Covenant in consideration of 20*l.* paid him by I S, to stand seised of Land to the use of I S and his heirs: or if one covenant that I S and his heirs shall have his Land; if this Deed be inrolled, this is a good bargain and sale to raise the use, and will do it as well as when it is made by the words [bargaine and sell.] Cook 8. 95.

So if one for good consideration by words of Demise and Grant, make a Lease of his Land for a term of years; hereby the use will rise to the Lessee as well as if the Lease were made by the words, bargaine and sell, Et sic de similibus. Cook 2. in Sir Rowland Heywoods case.

And yet if one by words of bargaine and sell, convey his Land to his son, no use will arise by this, except there be money paid, and the Deed be inrolled. Wards versu. Lambert. Co. B. Pasche 37. Eliz. Inrolement.

And if one, in consideration of Money grant his Land to his son, or any other by the word [enfeoffe]; no use will rise by this, unless Livery of Seisin be made thereupon, because the intent of the parties in these cases doth appear to be to pass it in another manner: And if in the last case Livery of Seisin be made, then the use shall be guided by Law, that is, if nothing be given, it shall be to the use of the Feoffor, and not amount to a limitation of use to the son. Resolved in Stiles case. 37. Eliz.

If one Covenant with his son, that his Land shall remain, or that his Land shall descend to him; this is a good Covenant to raise the use according to the limitation: 21. Hen. 7. 18. Plow. 308. 301. Broo. Feoffmental use, 16.

Uuuuuu

And

And yet if one covenant with his Son upon his marriage, that his Land shall remain, revert, or descend to his son in Fee, or in Fee-Tail, by this no use will be raised, because it is so incertain; but perhaps this may amount to a covenant, whereupon the son may have an Action of Covenant.

Covenant.

If I Covenant for me and my heirs, that I and my heirs, and all others that are seised, shall be thereof seised to the use of &c. this is a good covenant to raise the use, albeit it be in words of the future tense.

If I Covenant with my eldest son and strangers, to convey my Land to the same strangers to the use of my self for life, and after of my son in Tail &c. and I grant by the Deed, that the said persons seised of the said Land, shall be from thence seised to the said uses, and none other use, and no other conveyance is made; it seems this is sufficient to raise the use: And yet if I be seised of Land in Fee, and covenant with IS, that AB and CD and their heirs, shall stand and be seised of this Land to the use of &c. it seems this is not a good Covenant to raise the uses:

Dyer 374.

If a Feoffment, or other Conveyance be made to the use of the Feoffor and the heirs of his body, on the body of M the wife of ST, and for default of such issue, to the use of him and the heirs of his body of S the now wife of WK, and for default of such issue, then to the use and performance of his last Will for 10 yeares immediately after his death, and after the term ended, to the use of the Feoffees and their heirs during the life of W (eldest son of the Feoffor,) and after his death, to the use of the first issue male of the body of the Feoffor lawfully begotten, and the heirs of the body of such first issue male, and for default of such first issue male, to the second issue male &c. [in the same manner;] these are good limitations of uses. So if a use be limited to IS for life without impeachment of waste & after to the use of B & C, their executors & administrators for the term of twenty yeares, & after, to the use of C & the heirs males of his body &c. these are good uses. So if a use be limited after this manner, viz. to the use of a mans last Will and Testament, or to the use of such person and persons, and of such estate and estates as he shall limit and appoint by his last Will and Testament; or to the use of such person and persons, or to such uses and purposes as he shall by any writing under his hand and seal declare and appoint; these are good limitations. If I Covenant with another in consideration of blood &c. that I will stand seised of my Land to the use of such of my sons, or such of my cousins, as the Covenant shall name, in this case, after a nomination made, the use will rise well enough. Cook 1. 120. Cook 1. 90. Cook 6. 18. Litt. selt. 462. 463. Cook 1. 176.

Incertainy.

But if I (for and in consideration of 10*l.* or the like good consideration) Covenant to stand seised of Land to the use of such persons as the covenantee shall name; in this case, albeit the covenantee do nominate some of my cousins, or blood, yet no use will rise by this for the incertainy of it. If a Feoffment or other conveyance be to the use of IS and his heirs, provided that if the Feoffor pay 10*l.* at such a day, that then it shall be to the use of the Feoffor and his heirs; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly. A use may be limited to a woman durante viduitate sua, and this is good. Cook 4. 3.

If a man be seised of two Manors, and covenant to stand seised of the same to the uses following, viz. of the one to the use of the covenantor for his life, and after to the use of his wife for life, and after to the use of his eldest son in Tail &c. And for the other Manor, to the use of his second son in Tail &c. these are good limitations, and the uses will rise accordingly. Cook 11. 23.

If a man seised of Land in Fee agree with another, that a Fine shall be levied of it, and that the same shall be to the uses following, viz. that IS (the Conusor) shall have one yearly Rent of 50*l.* during his life to be issuing out of the same Land, and as touching the Land charged with the Rent &c. to the use of ID (the Conusee) until default of payment of the said yearly Rent, and then to the use of IS and his heirs for ever; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly, Et sic de similibus. Cook 2. 69, 70.

If a Feoffment be made by IS to the uses in certain Indentures Tripartite of the same date, and therein is declared that it shall be to the use of A for life without impeachment ment of Waste, and after to the use of such Farmors, or Tenants to whom he shall demise any part of the premises for life, or lives, or for any term of years, as in any such demise shall be limited and appointed; and after to the use of the performance of the last Will of the said L, and to the use of such person or persons severally to whom the said L by his last Will and Testament shall appoint any estate; and after to the use of &c. these are good uses, and the estates shall rise accordingly. Brownl. 2. part 51.

A use may be limited upon condition, and the condition may be annexed to one of the uses, and not unto another. Cook 4 14.

If Lands be conveyed to IS and the heirs of his body, to the use of IS and his heirs, or to the use of a stranger and his heirs: this use will not rise in this manner. And yet if lands be conveyed to IS, and his heirs, to the use of him and the heirs Males of his body, and after to the use of a stranger and his heirs, it seems this is a good limitation. Cook super. Littl. 19.

If one grant Lands by Deed to husband and wife, To have and to hold to the use of the husband and wife, and of the heirs of their two bodies; this is a good estate Taile by this limitation, albeit he do not say Habendum to them and their heirs &c. but Habendum to their uses; but otherwise it were if the use were limited to a stranger in this manner. Hill. 6 Car. B. R. Adjudge.

If Lands be conveyed by IS to ID, to the use of IS, or to the use of his wife for life, or to the use of any other for life, the remainder to another in Taile, or for life, the remainder to a third, his Executors &c. for six months, and after the six months ended, to the use of a fourth and his heirs; these are good limitations, and the estates will rise accordingly. Dyer 314.

If a use be limited to the Conusee of a Fine, or a Recoverer in a Recoverie until he make a Lease for Fourty years, and after to the use of the Recoverses or Conusors and their Heirs; this is a good limitation, and the use will rise accordingly. Dyer 290.

Contingent uses, or uses in posse may be created as well as uses in esse; and therefore if Lands be conveyed to the use of a man, and the wife he shall afterwards marry, or to the use of his first, second, or third wife, or to the use of IS for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of ID, and ID is then living; or to the use of IS for life, and after to the use of him that shall be his first heir male, and the heirs of the body of such heir male &c. all these, and such like, are good uses; but they are uses at the Common-Law still, and are not executed by the Statute until they come in esse. Cook 1 in Chudleighs case, 135.

The last thing whereunto respect is to be had, is the Nature and Quality of the Use: And herein it is to be known, that a man may at this day by act executed in his life time, or by his last Will and Testament at his death, give his Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments to any person or persons not corporate, and their heirs, for any Religious, Charitable, or Civil Use, as well as for any private Use. Cook 1.

Eightly, in respect of the Nature and Quality of the Use. Charitable uses.

And therefore a man may so dispose of his Lands for the finding of a Preacher, erecting or maintenance of a School, Relief and comfort of Maimed Souldiers, sustenance of poor people, reparations of Churches, High-ways, Bridges, discharging of the poor Inhabitants of a Village of the common charges, to make a stock for poor Labourers in Husbandry, and poor Apprentices, and for the marriage of poor Virgins, or other such like uses, and these uses are not prohibited by any Statute.

And it is good Policy upon every such Feoffment or estate to reserve to the Feoffer and his heirs some small Rent, or to set down some small Consideration: But these uses are not such uses as are executed by the Statute of uses, neither are they to be resembled to the uses aforesaid; for in this case, if there be any mil-employment of the Lands, or breach of the Trust by the parties trusted, Redress is to be had by the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper by a special course of proceeding. For which, see the Statutes of 39 Eliz. chap. 6. 43 Eliz. chap. 9. 7 Jac. chap. 3.

Superstitious Uses.

But if any man have heretofore given, or heretofore shall give any Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments by act executed in his Life, or by his last Will at his Death to any person singular, or corporate, in Fee-simple, Fee-Tail for life, or years, to the intent, or upon condition to maintain any superstitious Use, as to finde a Chaplain, and have the service of a Priest to say Masse, or to have a Priest or other man to Pray for the Soul of any dead man in such a Church or other place, or to have or maintain perpetual Obites, Lamps, or Torches, &c. to be used at certain times to help to save the Souls of men out of the supposed Purgatory; all these and such like uses are void: And the Lands that are so given to such superstitious uses, are to be forfeited, and given to the King, and he shall have them; and yet so, that if there be any charitable use intermixed with the superstitious use, and they may be distinguished, the King shall have only so much as is given to the superstitious use, and not that which is given to the charitable use also: For which, see Adams and Lamberts Case at large, Cook 4 104. Stat. 15 Rich. 2 chap. 5 37 Hen. 8 ch. 4. 1 Edw. 6. ch. 14.

5. Declaration of Uses: And where a use of Land may be declared upon any Assurance, and what shall be said a sufficient declaration of such a use, or not.

As touching the Declaration of Uses, i. e. the manifestation or agreement of the Parties, to what uses and intents the Assurance made shall be, these things are to be known:

1. That uses may be declared or averred on a Fine, Feoffment, or recovery of Land; but on a bargain and sale of Land, no use may be declared or averred, but what the Law doth make, Cook 1. 175, 176. Dyer 169.

And upon a Covenant of uses, no other use may be declared or averred, but what is contained within the Deed.

2. Every one may declare and dispose the use of Land according to the estate that he hath in the Land; for the declaration and disposition of the use doth ensue the ownership of the Land sicut umbra sequitur corpus, Cook 2. 55. Dyer 290.

And at this day the use doth draw the Land to it, as the body or principal the shadow or accessory: And therefore the owner of the Land, or he from whom the land doth move, ought to limit and declare the use of the land; as if the Husband and Wife levie a Fine of the Land, whereof he is seised in the right of his wife; the Husband alone may declare the use of this Fine, and this declaration shall binde the wife, albeit her assent to the limitation of the uses do not appear, if her dissent doth not appear; but in this case, it is most proper to have a declaration of the uses by the husband and wife both; for she alone, because she is sub potestate viri, cannot alone declare or limit any use; neither can the husband alone limit any use against her good will, because he hath not the estate of the Land: And therefore, if A and B his wife be seised of land in the right of his wife, and she without the consent of her husband, covenant by Indenture with C and D, 14 Marris 14 Eliz. that a fine shall be levied of this Land, and that it shall be to the use of her self for life without impeachment of waste, and after to the Comsees for their lives, to the intent that they shall suffer 1 s to take the profits for his life with divers remainders over; and afterwards, and before the fine levied, the husband alone by another Indenture 31 Febr. 22 Eliz. (wherein the wife is named a party) without the consent of his wife, doth agree that a fine shall be levied to the use of him and his wife, and after to the uses limited by the wives Indenture, and after the fine is levied accordingly; in this case, albeit the variance be in one particular only, and the limitations in all the rest of the uses and estates do agree, yet all the same limitations by both Indentures are void, and the use upon the conveyance is left to construction of Law, and therefore shall be to the wife and her heirs for ever: And yet if the husband and wife agree in the limitation of the uses for part of the land, and differ in the rest, the limitations for so much as they agree in, are good, and void for the residue: And in these cases where the declaration is good, the wife and her heirs shall be bound by it. So if two Joynt-tenants are, and they, or two others having several estates, joynt in a fine, and one of them declare the use in one manner, and the other doth declare the use in another manner; this declaration is good for either of their parts, for the declaration shall be governed according to their estates. And if an Infant, or a man de non sane memorie, doth declare the use of a fine levied by him, this declaration is good, and shall binde him so long as the fine shall continue in his sorte.

Husband and Wife,

Joynt-tenants,

Infant.
De non sane
memorie.

3 This declaration of Uses may be made either by Deed indented (which is the most usual and safe way,) or by Deed Poll: As where the parties do by such a writing agree that an Assurance passed, or to be passed, shall be to such and such uses: as that a fine shall be levied by such a time, and that it shall be to the use of one for life, another in Tail, and another in Fee. Cook 2 73. 5 29

Or it may be made by a verbal agreement without any writing at all; as where an agreement is so had and made between two or more, that a Fine or Recovery shall be had, and it shall be to such and such uses, and the same is had accordingly; in this case, this is a sufficient declaration being proved; but it is not safe in these cases to depend upon slippery memory.

4. This declaration by word or writing, may be made before, at, or after the time of making the Assurance: and therefore one may covenant or agree that I shall recover against him, or that he will levy a Fine, or make a Feoffment to I of such land, and that the same shall be to the use of &c. Cook 2 69 70. 6 29 63 Dyer 290 Co. 7 40. Co. 98. Dyer 136.

And if one make a Feoffment; he may declare the uses of it at the same time, and that within the same, or in another Deed at his pleasure: And if the Assurance be past, and no declaration of uses had before, or at the time of passing it, a declaration may be subsequent, viz. That the same Assurance was, and shall be, and the Recoverers &c. shall stand and be seized to such and such uses; for an Indenture subsequent may direct and declare the uses of a Fine or Recovery precedent. But herein these diversities are to be observed; when precedent Indentures are made to direct the uses of a subsequent Assurance, and after the assurance made accordingly, there no Averment shall be taken by word, that the same Assurance was to other uses then are declared by the Indenture: But against an Indenture subsequent, declaring the uses of an Assurance precedent, an Averment may be taken, that there were other uses expressed and limited, before or at the time of the Assurance, then are contained in the Indenture. If a precedent Indenture be made to direct the uses of a subsequent Assurance, when the Assurance comes, the land is bound, and the Conusor or Recoverer cannot by any act of his, after the Recovery had, charge or avoid it; but if the declaration be subsequent; if in the interim, between the Assurance had, and the declaration of the uses, the Conusor or Recoverer sell, give or charge the Land to others; this subsequent declaration will not subvert the mean estates, charges or interests, unless it can be otherwise proved, that by a certain and complete agreement of the parties, the Assurance was had and made to these uses.

Averment.

5. When the agreement for the limitation of uses is precedent, whether it be by writing or word, it is but directory, and doth not bind the estate until the same Assurance be afterwards had, and therefore by a new agreement or declaration made in the same manner as the former, viz. in writing, if the former be so, and between the same parties either before, or at the time of the same Assurance passed, new uses may be made, and the former uses changed; but when the same Assurance is pursued accordingly, and no intervenient alteration is made, it shall be expounded to be to the same uses, and shall bind the parties, and no naked Averment shall be received of any latter or other agreement contrary to the Indentures.

6. The declaration of the uses must be certain, and that especially in three things; in the persons to whom, in the Lands, &c. of which, and in the estates by which the uses are declared; and if there want certainty in either of these, the declaration is not good; and it must be complete of it self without any reference to Indentures or other writings to be made afterwards; for then it is but an imperfect communication, and no complete declaration.

7 Where an Indenture precedent is to limit the uses of a subsequent Fine or Recovery, and it is not pursued in some circumstance of time, person, quantity or the like; yet if no other new mean agreement may be proved, the Assurance shall be in judgment of Law to the uses contained in the same Indenture; but if the variance be in these particulars, and the form of the Indenture be not pursued, there an Averment without writing may be taken, that the fine or other Assurance was to other uses then are contained in the Indenture; and if none such can be made, then it is left to construction of Law. And therefore if A be seised of divers Manors in Fee, and by his Indenture dated 10. Martii. 21. Eliz. doth covenant with B and C. That he, before the end of Trinity Term next, will by Fine or other Conveyance assure one of these Manors to them, and that the same Assurance shall be to the use of A and E his wife, and of the heirs of A, and the 28 day the Deed is inrolled, and the 29 day of the same month, he doth by another Indenture covenant with the same C and D to convey all the same Manors to the same C and D before the Annunciation next, and that the same Assurance shall be to the use of A and his heirs males of his body, and for default of such issue, to the use of divers others in remainder, and by this Indenture doth covenant, that if he shall not sufficiently convey this land by the day, that he will stand seised to the same uses &c, and no Fine is levied by the end of Trinity Terme, but the 17 of September following, a note of a Fine is acknowledged to B and C and the heirs of B, of the land within the first Indenture, and the 18 of the same month, another note of a Fine is acknowledged to C and D of the same, and other land in the last Indenture, and both these Fines are entred in Ostabis Mich. following, in this case, these Fines cannot be directed and declared by both Indentures, and therefore it seemes the declarations are void.

6. Averment of Uses; & where a use of land may be averred upon any assurance; And what shall be said a sufficient averment, or not.

As touching Averment of Uses; i.e. the proof of uses by witnesses, these things are to be known, That where any use is expressed upon a Charter of Feoffment, no other use contra or preter the use which is expressed, shall be admitted. But in cases of Fines and Recoveries, wherein no uses are expressed, other uses then what Law construction will make, may be shewed and proved to be agreed upon, and the same assurances shall be to such uses, as by proof shall be made to appear to be the intent of the parties: As if a man and his wife sell her land for money, and after levy a Fine to the Vendee and his heirs; in this case it may be averred it was for money, and this shall carry the use to the Vendee without any declaration of use, which otherwise would result to the woman and her heirs; and yet if a Fine be with a Grant and Render, no averment to prove it to be to other uses, then what are contained in the Fine, shall be received. Cook 9 8 5 20 25. Doll. & St. 95. Cook 2 57.

And where the uses of a Conveyance be declared by Indenture before, or at the time of the same Conveyance, no averment shall be received of any other uses then what are contained in the Indenture: But if the Indenture of declaration be subsequent, there an averment lyeth and shall be received that there were other uses agreed upon, at, or before the time of the conveyance made. Cook 9 8.

And where no agreement is made to levy a Fine, or suffer a Recovery, before, or at a time certain, and that it shall be of such and such lands, and to such and such persons, and after it falleth out the Fine or Recovery is not had by that time, or not of the same land, or not between the same persons; in these cases an averment may be had of other uses and of another agreement.

7. To what use an assurance of land shall be by construction of Law, and how the limitation of the Uses of land by a Deed shall be construed.

Where the uses of an assurance are certainly agreed upon and declared between the parties thereunto, there regularly it shall be to such uses as are declared and agreed upon, and to none others. But if a conveyance be made of land by Fine, Feoffment or Recovery, and no uses thereof declared and agreed upon, the Law will limit and appoint the use according to equity and conscience. And therefore if a man levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, or suffer a Recovery of Land without any consideration, the Law will adjudge the use to be in the Feoffor, Conusor and Recoverer who doth part with the Land. And so if a man make a Feoffment to the intent to perform his last Will, or to the use of his last Will, or to such persons as he shall limit by his last Will; in all these cases the use shall be in the Feoffor and his heirs whiles he doth live, to dispose at his pleasure. Doll. & St. 95. Park. Sett. 533. Cook 1 24. Dyer 18. Crompt. Jur. 62. Cook super. Litt. 271.

And so if one make a Feoffment of Land to I. S. and his heires, to the use of W. S. for 20 years, and limit the use no further, in this case the residue of the use after the 20 years, shall be to the Feoffor and his heirs: But if in these cases there be any consideration of money or the like, though never so little given, or any rent reserved upon the Feoffment, the Law will adjudge the use in the Feoffee, Conusee, or Recoveror. Bakers Case Co. B. Hill. 37. Eliz.

And

And yet in that case also, if other uses be expressed upon the Deed, it seems it shall go to the uses expressed; as, if A for 20 l. paid by B, enfeoff B and his heirs to the use of C and his heirs. Doll. & St 95.

If the husband and wife levy a Fine of the wives land without consideration, and without any declaration of use, the Law will adjudg this to be to the use of the wife and her heirs; but if they sell her land for money, and after levy a Fine thereof to the Vendee, this shall be to the use of the Vendee and his heirs. Coo. 2. 57. 58.

And if a man be seised of Land, of the part of his Mother, and without any consideration make a Feoffment in Fee of it, this shall be said to his use in the same nature he had it before.

So if two Joint-tenants be of land, the one in Fee simple, the other but for life, and they without any consideration levy a Fine of it, and make no declaration of use; the use shall be to them of the same estate as they had before in the land.

So if A tenant for life of land, and B in reversion or remainder, levy a Fine of this land, generally this shall be to the use of A for life, and to the use of B in Fee afterwards as it was before.

So if A be seised in Fee of an Acre of ground, and he and B joyn together and levy a Fine of it to another without any consideration; this shall be to the use of A and his heirs only.

If one make a gift in taile, or Lease for life, or years, albeit it be without any consideration of Fine or Rent, yet the Law will adjudg the use in the Donee or Lessee, and not in the Donor or Lessor. Perk. Sect. 533.

If one at this day by Deed indentured, bargain and sell his land to another for money, and doth limit no estate, but the Deed is Habendum to him only, and not Habendum to him and his heirs, or to him and the heirs of his body, or to him for life: howsoever in this case, before the Statute of uses was made, it was otherwise; yet now the common received opinion is, that by this there doth passe only an estate for life, and not a Fee simple. Plow. 539. Cook 1. 87. Yet see Litt. Broo. 538. Crompt. 7th nr. 47. 27 H. 8. 6. Cook 1. 110.

If a Feoffment be made to IS and his heirs to the use of ID without any more words; by this limitation ID hath only an estate for life: So if a Feoffment be made to IS and his heirs to the use of ID for ever, without saying, [And his heirs] hereby ID hath only an estate for life: and so of other uses the construction shall be according to the rules of Law. Cook super Litt. 42. Dyer 169.

If a use be limited to IS and his heirs until A shall come from beyond the Sea, and attain his full age and dye, in this case if he come from beyond Sea, attain his full age or dye, the use shall cease. Pasch. 3 Eliz. B. R. the Lord Mordants Case.

If one covenant to stand seised to the use of A his eldest son, and the heirs males of his body, and after to the use of B his second son in taile in the same manner, or according to the limitation to A; by this, B hath an estate taile to him and the heirs males of his body. Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Rigways case.

If a Feoffment in Fee be made to the use of a man and his wife for their lives, and after to the use of their next issue male to be begotten, in taile, and after to the use of the husband and wife, and of the heirs of their two bodies begotten (they having no issue male then;) by this the husband and wife are tenants in special Taile executed; and after they have issue male, they are tenants for life, the remainder to the son in taile, the remainder to them in special taile. Cook super Litt. 28.

If one make a Feoffment to the use of himself for life, and after his decease to the use of A her whom he doth intend to marry, until the issue he shall beget of her shall be of the age 21 years, and after the issue cometh to that age, then to the use of the wife during her widow-hood, and the husband dye without issue: by this the wife shall have an estate, at least during her widow-hood. Dyer 300.

If I covenant with B that in consideration he will marry my daughter, that from the time of the marriage I will stand seised to the use of my self for life, and after to the use of C a stranger, and the heirs males of his body, and after to the use of B and my daughter, and the heirs of their two bodies; in this case albeit the use limited to C the stranger be void, yet it seems B and my daughter shall not have the Land till the death of C without issue, but that my heirs shall have it till that time. Cook 1.

If I covenant with B to stand seised to the use of my self for life, and after my death to the use of C (a stranger) for the term of 20 years, and after the end of the term to the use of my son in tail; in this case the use limited to C is void, and my son after my death shall have the land: But if the words of the Covenant be, [And after the end of 20 years,] in stead of, [And after the end of the term,] my son shall not have the Land until the 20 years be expired. Cook 1. 155. See more in exposition of Deeds.

8. Where and how uses of Land may be extinguished and destroyed or suspended, or not; and where the ancient uses shall be revived by the entry of the Feoffees, or not.

All such uses as are not within, nor executed by the Statute of 27 H.8. but remain at the Common Law, may be destroyed, discontinued or suspended as uses before the Statute might have been. And therefore contingent uses may be extinguished or suspended at this day. As, if a man seised of land in Fee have three sons, A, B and C, and he make a Feoffment of his land to divers Feoffees to the use of them and their heirs during the life of A, and after to the use of the first son that A shall beget, and the heirs males of the body of such first son; or if a Feoffment be made to the use of a man and the wife that he shall marry, or the like; if in these cases the Feoffees make a Feoffment over, before the contingent uses happen to be in esse, as before A have any son, or the man take a wife, &c. albeit it be to one that have notice of these uses, yet the uses are destroyed for ever, and the Feoffees cannot enter and revive them contrary to their own Feoffment. And if in these cases the Feoffees before the contingent remainder vest be disseised, hereby the uses are suspended; but then by the Re-entry of the Feoffees the ancient uses will be revived again: And therefore if the Feoffees release to the Disseisor, and so bar themselves of their entry, the uses are extinguished and shall not be revived, and the party grieved hath no remedy but in Chancery against the Feoffees for breach of trust. And if the Feoffees in the first case before, dye before A have any son born, the contingent remainder is gone: As where a Feoffment is made to the use of the Feoffor for life, and after to the use of the right heirs of I S in Fee, and the Feoffor dye before I S; in this case the remainder is gone, for a remainder cannot be without a particular estate no more of a use than of an estate made in possession: and such a remainder must vest during the particular estate, or at least eo instanti, when the particular estate doth end. Cook 1. Chudleighs case.

If a Feoffment be made to the use of I S and the wife he shall afterwards marry, and of the heirs males of their bodies; and I S make a Feoffment of this land to another before he take a wife; hereby the contingent remainder is destroyed. Co. 1. 136.

If A enfeoff B and his heirs to the use of C and D his wife, and the heirs of the survivor of them, and C makes a Feoffment to E and dyeth; this Feoffment doth destroy the contingent remainder. Hillar. 2. Carol. Scaccar Adjudged.

When the estate out of which the uses do arise is gone, the uses are gone also: As, if a Lease be made to A for his life to the use of B for his life, and A dye; hereby the estate of B is gone. Dyer 186.

Also uses of lands may be gone by Revocation, whereof see in the next part.

9. Where a power to revoke uses of land shall be good, and how they shall be taken; and what Revocation by reason of such power shall be good, and what not. Brownl. Rep. 2. part 157.

Provisoes and Powers of revocation of uses of lands are very frequent in voluntary conveyances (whether by Feoffment or otherwise) that passe land by way of raising of uses, and are executed by the Statute of 27 H.8. and the inheritances of many depend thereupon. Cook super. Lit. 237. 7. 11. 12. 10. 143. 1. 110. 173. 107. Dyer 372.

As, if a man seised of land in Fee have divers sons, and he covenant to stand seised of that land to the use of himself for life, and after of his eldest son in tail, and for want of such issue, to the use of his second son in tail, &c. with a Proviso, that it shall be lawful for him at any time during his life to revoke any of the said uses, and to limit and appoint other uses, &c.

Or if A by Indenture between him and B his heir apparant an Infant, covenant with B for the advancement of his blood, &c. to stand seised to the use of himselfe for life, and after to the use of his said heire apparant, and the heires males of his body, and after to the use of his right heires; provided that if A by himself or any other during his life shall deliver or offer to B a Ring of gold, to the intent to make void all the said uses, that then the same uses shall be void, and he may limit new uses. Or if A by Indenture Covenant with B to stand seised to the use of himself, and his wife, and his daughter for their lives, and after &c. provided that if the said A during his life, and after the debts mentioned in the Schedule annexed to the Indenture shall be paid, shall be disposed to determine, disannul, change, alter, enlarge, diminish or make void the uses or estates, or any of them, of the premises or any part thereof, and by writing indented under his Hand and Seal subscribed in the presence of three Witnesses shall declare his mind to be so, that then the same uses shall be void: All these and such like Provisoes being coupled with a use, are allowed to be good, and not repugnant to the former estates. But in case of such a Feoffment or other conveyance whereby the Feoffee or Grantee is in by the Common-Law, as where A doth enfeoffe B and his heires to the use of B and his heires, it said such a Proviso is meerly repugnant and void.

And as touching these Provisoes or Revocations, these things are to be known;

1. These Revocations are favourably interpreted, because many mens Inheritances depend upon it: And therefore he that hath this power may revoke part of the uses at one time, and part at another time; and the revocation of the old may be made by the making of new uses without any expresse revocation: And by the same conveyance whereby the old uses be revoked, the new uses may be created and limited, and then the former uses do cease ipso facto by this revocation without any entry or claim. As if one covenant to stand seised to the use of himself and his wife for their lives, and after to the use of A his daughter for life, and after to the use of B his Daughter in tail, &c. provided that if he shall be minded, &c. he may by writing &c. make void the same uses, and declare the uses to others; and he doth make void the use to his wife at one time and no more, and after by deed doth limit and appoint new uses of the whole by a new Covenant to stand seised to other uses; these are good revocations; for there needs no real and expresse revocation of former uses, but the creating of new uses is in Law an actual revocation of the old uses, as the making of a latter is ipso facto a revocation of a former Will.

2. The Proviso must for the substance of it be pursued in the revocation, and all incident circumstances thereof must be observed, as sealing, subscription of names, witnesses, and the like; otherwise the revocation will not be good. And therefore if the Proviso be, that if the Covenantor shall be minded to revoke, and shall declare his mind by writing indented under his Hand and Seal, delivered before three Witnesses, the uses shall be void; in this case a revocation by word without writing, or by a writing and not indented, or by writing indented and not under Hand and Seal, or under Hand and Seal, and before two witnesses only, is not good. And yet if a Proviso be, that if the Covenantor shall at any time during his life by writing, under his Hand and Seal, delivered before two witnesses revoke the same &c. the old uses shall be void, and the Covenantor by his last Will and Testament in writing under his Hand and Seal before two Witnesses doth give the Land to another, and make no expresse revocation of the former uses: this is a good revocation in Law. If the Proviso be, that if the Covenantor be minded at any time during his life to revoke the same uses &c. and shall pay or render to A B 20s. in such a place; in this case tender of this 20s. in that place at any time is not good, unlesse he happen to meet with A B at the place, for then tender at any time is good, but otherwise the Covenantor must give notice to A B what time hee will render the twenty shillings, in that place, otherwise the revocation is not good. Trinit. 18. Jacob. Com. B. Tibbit and Lees Case. Cook 8. 921.

with Proviso to revoke the uses with the consent of the mothers, if they or either of them be then living, and one of them dye; in this case a revocation, by the consent of the surviving mother is sufficient. Trin. 18 Jac. B.R. Savil and Sterlings case.

3. When the Covenantor doth make void such uses by vertue of such a revocation, he is seised again of the Land in Fee-simple, as he was at first, without any entry or claim.

4. This power of revocation, whether it be present, as those before and most are, or future, as when they are upon contingent, as if the Covenantor over-live I S or the like, when it is reserved to the party himself that made the uses, may by his Fine or Feoffment be utterly extinguished: As if he make a Feoffment, or levy a Fine of the land, whereunto the uses and Proviso are annexed, by this the Proviso is extinct: and yet so, as if he make a Feoffment, or levy a Fine of part of the Land only, this shall extinguish his power but to that part only: But if the power be reserved to a stranger, it seemes the Fine or Feoffment of him that made it, will not extinguish it. This power also when it is present may be extinguished by a Release made by him that hath the power, to any one that hath any estate of Franktenement in the land in possession, reversion, or remainder; or it may be avoided by Defeasance, whether it be present or future. Cook 1. 111. 112. 113. super. Litt. 237.

Release.

Defeasance.

10 Other trusts and Confidences of lands and of chattels real and personal, the nature of such trust, the duty of them that are trusted, and the remedy to be had against them for breach of their trust.

If one convey his lands to certaine friends in trust, to the intent that they shall convey it to such persons as he shall set down in his last Will and Testament; Or if a man deliver money to a friend in trust to purchase land for him and his heires, to the end that he may have the profits thereof for his life, and to the end it may be conveyed to them afterwards: Or if a man deliver money to his friend to buy land for him that doth deliver the money in his owne name: Or if a man enfeof his friend and his heires of land, to the intent that he shall alien the Land to whom I S shall appoint; Or if land be conveyed to me in Mortgage, and I pay all the money, but I (to prevent the Joynture of my wife, or for some such like cause) name a friend Joynt-Purchasor with me, and so the conveyance is made to us both; if in any of these cases, or in any other such like case the friend trusted prove false, and do not perform the trust, but turn the profits of the land to their own use, or refuse to settle it according to the trust, or the like, the party grieved must have his remedy in Chancery, for these are not Trusts or Uses within the Statute, nor such for which there is any remedy at the Common-Law: And in that case where the land is settled to the intent that the friends trusted shall settle it where I S shall appoint, if I S do not appoint how it shall be settled, it seems the Possessors shall have it to their own use. Cromp. Jur. 48. 59. 58. 54. Dyer 160. Fitz. Accompt. 122.

And if a man give or grant his goods or chattels, as Leases for yeares or the like, to friends in trust, to the use of himself for life, and after to perform his Will, or the like; these are such uses and trusts as are not within the Statute of uses, and for the breach of which there is no remedy at the Common-Law, but in Chancery only. So if an Obligation or Statute be made to A B to the use of C D; this is a trust of the same nature: and if A B release the Obligation without the consent of C D, or get the money into his own hands, C D shall have relief in Chancery. Cromp. Jur. 65. Dyer 369. Broo. Feoffment at use 60. Cromp. Jur. 62. 45. 11. Ed. 4. 2. 7. Ed. 4. 29.

And in all these cases, and such like cases, the general rules by which uses were governed at the Common-Law are still in force and to take place, as those by which uses and trusts are now for the most part governed.

As, 1. If there be any cause to sue for or about the lands or goods wherewith the parties are trusted, as if they deny or delay to perform the trust, they must be compelled thereunto by Suit in Chancery. 7. E. 4. 29. Cro. Jur. 62. 63. 65. 11. E. 4. 24. E. 4. 37.

2. The Cestuy que use or party for whom the trust is, cannot of himself dispose of the lands or goods, for the property and interest in Law is in the Trustees; and if it be an Obligation or Statute that is made to the use of another, Cestuy que use cannot release release it, but the Trustee must release it. Cromp. Jur. 62, 63, 65. 11. Ed. 4. 24. Ed. 4 37.

3. If the party trusted so with lands, goods or chattels, give, grant or sell the same lands, goods or chattels to one that hath knowledge of the same uses or trusts (as it is alwaies presumed he hath where the trusts are expressed upon the same Deed, by which the lands, [goods or chattels are given or granted,) or if the things so given or granted, be granted upon the same trusts, or to the same uses, or without any consideration at all; in these cases he to whom the thing whereabout the trust is, shall have the same thing upon the same trust, and to the same use as he that did give or grant the same had it. But in case where no trust or use is expressed upon the Deed, the Purchaser or Buyer hath no notice or knowledge of the use or trust, and he gives a valuable consideration for the thing, there for the most part the sale is good, and the party grieved thereby hath no remedy, but against the party first trusted in Chancery, and the Purchaser shall have and enjoy the thing so bought to his own use for ever; but he that is the party trusted will be forced in Chancery to make the party grieved an amends in damages for this breach of trust: And if there be any practice, packing, or combination between the buyer and the seller in the matter, there perhaps the Suit may hold against them both, and the Buyer may be forced to restore the thing it self. And yet if A enter into a Statute to B and C to the use of B, and A having notice of this use doth get a release from C: in this case it seems B must have his whole remedy against C, and shall have no remedy against A. 11 Ed. 4. 8.

4. If the Trustor or Cestuy que use in these cases commit Felony, &c. so that the things if he had the property of them were forfeit, in this case it seems that neither they nor their heirs, executors &c. nor yet the Lord, &c. shall have them, but the Trustees shall keep them for ever. Broo. Feoffments at use 34.

5. If the Cestuy que use or Trustors dye, and appoint how the same things shall be disposed of, the Trustees are bound to see it done; as if the Trustor appoint it shall pay his debts, or provide Legacies, the parties trusted must take care it be so employed; and in this case the Debtors and Legatees also may compel the Trustees in Chancery. 15 H. 7. 12. Cromp. Jur. 54.

6. In all these cases regularly the thing whereof the trust is, is in equity at the disposing of him that is the Cestuy que use, unlesse he do otherwise appoint it, and if at his death he make no disposition thereof it shall go to his heire, executor &c. Dyer 49.

7. In all these cases the Trustees shall have their reasonable allowance in Chancery for whatsoever they have laid out about the land, &c. in Suits or otherwise for the profit of the Trustor. 8 H. 7. 11.

Out of all which may appear how dangerous it is for a man to meddle with any lands, goods or chattels so conveyed or settled in trust, for the Cestuy que use or Trustors have no property in the thing; and therefore they cannot sell or give it, and the Trustee hath it but to anothers use: And it is not safe therefore to deal with either of them alone, nor yet indeed safe to deal at all in these cases, unlesse the buyer may have the Consent, sale, and assurance, or the Release, &c. of the Trustors and Trustees altogether: And if there be any woman Covert, or Infant within the Trust, it is most of all dangerous. And if goods or chattels be given to, or to the use of a Feme Covert, or Infant, and certain friends are trusted therewith, if they do sell or give away these goods or chattels contrary to the Trust, they must be sure to answer it: if therefore they sell them, let them see that the money made thereof be as beneficial, and be bestowed for the wife or children, for it seems it is not sufficient in this case, that the money made thereof be paid to them. Mar. f. 44, pl. 69. 7 Ed. 4. 14. Fitz. Subp. 5.

CHAP. CLXIV,

Of Usury.

Usury, what.
The kinds.

Sec. 1.

Lawful Usury.

Unlawful usury.

The punishment of it.

1. What Contract shall be said to be usurious, against the Statutes and void. Or not.

Usury is the certain gain of a thing above the Principal, or that which is lent, exacted only in consideration of the loan, whether it be of money, corn, meat, apparel, wares or the like. Or (as another defineth it) it is a certain profit that is received for the use of a thing lent.

Of this there are two parts, a tolerated or lawful Usury, or a forbidden and unlawful Usury.

The first is where there is no more taken directly or indirectly for loan of any moneys, wares, merchandize, or other Commodities whatsoever, then the value of six pounds for the forbearance of one hundred pounds for a year, and so after that rate for a greater or lesser sum, or for a longer or shorter time.

The unlawful Usury, is, Where there is taken directly or indirectly for loan of any money, wares, merchandize, or other Commodities whatsoever, above the value of six pounds for the forbearance of one hundred pounds for a year, and so after that rate for a greater and lesser sum, and for a longer and shorter time.

And the punishment of it is this, That he that takes it, is to lose three times so much as the value of that which he did so take; and all the Bonds, Contracts and Assurances for the having of more then after the rate of six pound for the hundred, are void. Stat. 21. Jac. 17. 37 H. 8. 9. 39. Eliz. 8. 13. Eliz. 8. Aft. 8. Aug. 1651. Plow. 282. He may be punished also by Indictment and Fine. See my Just. of Peace. And so some hold of all Usury, and that all Usury is against our Law, which seems to be the better opinion. See Cook 1. part. Inf. cap. 70.

For the answer of this Question, and Exposition of the Statutes concerning Usury, take some Rules, and some Cases. The Rules are these.

1. That an usurious Contract may be made up by Fines, Recoveries, or any kind of Assurance, as well as Bonds, and they are all void, of what kind soever they be, Cook 1. 80. But a Judgment cannot be avoyded by a plea of an usurious Contract, as that the Defendant had one hundred pound of the Plaintiff, and agreed to give him twenty pound for the loan of it a year, and therefore that the Plaintiff desired a Judgment for the same, which is that for which the Suit is by Scire Facias. Adj. Judg. Midleron v. Huth. 11. 39. 40. Eliz. B. R.

2. Where the first Contract is usurious, all the Assurances that depend upon it are void. Pasch. 7. Jac. B. R. Corstess case.

3. If a man do not pursue his Contract, and take what he hath agreed upon, he cannot be punished by the forfeiture of the treble value, but the Contract and Assurances thereupon are void. Curia B. R. Trin. 3. Car. and cannot be by taking something in the by, as a pawn for a Security. Trin. 13. Car. B. R.

4. Nothing that is given to the Broker in the by, will make the Contract usurious, By Just. Bridgman, Hill 7. Car.

6. No usurious Contract can be regularly where the Principal is lost, especially if it be in a bargain of Land, unless it be where by notorious circumstances the contract doth appeare corrupt. Corstess case Pasch. 7 Jac. B. R. Brownl. 1. part 180.

7. If the Original Contract be not usurious, no matter ex post facto; .i. no matter done afterwards can make it so. Thurslies case Hil. 7 Jac. Com. R. Brownl. 1. part 73. 8. No

8. No Stranger not privy to the corrupt contract shall be punished for it. Brownl. Rep. 1. 85.

9. He that is bound in a Counter-bond to his Surety, cannot Plead in discharge of that, that the first Obligation was upon an usurious contract. Adj. Robinsons versus May. M. 39. 40. Eliz. B R.

10. When a Deed is perfected and delivered as a Deed, it cannot be avoided by any subsequent agreement as usurious; but if it be part of the original contract, and made together, it may make all void, and may be pleaded in avoidance of any Deed. Brownl. Rep. 1. part 491.

11. A Woman that hath a Husband, or a man and his Wife and Third person cannot make an usurious contract within these Statutes. Trin. 13. Carol. Feme Coverts. B. R.

12. Where, upon the first Contract the Lender is not sure of any benefit, but he doth secondarily hope for some at the will of the Borrower only, this is not corrupt. Cook. 5. 69.

For the further Opening and Illustration of which Rules, take these Cases:

1. One borrowed 100*l.* and for this, mortgaged Land above 8*l.* value by the year, on condition, that if the Mortgagee pay such a day (which is at the years end) the money, the estate to cease; this was an usurious contract. But if it were on condition, that if he pay the 100*l.* before that day, contra, for then he may pay it when he will, and have his Land, and the Lender is not sure of any such recompence, as the nature of Usury is; for hear it shall be taken only to be a penalty to the Borrower, and an Assurance to the Lender: So also, if one lend 100*l.* and take security by Statute or Obligation, that the Borrower at a years end shall pay the Lender 20*l.* for it, this is usurious: But if it be, that if he pay it not within a year, then he shall pay him 20*l.* it seems this is not usurious; If one come to another to borrow 500*l.* of him and tell him he is unable to pay it together, and therefore desires to pay it in 12 or 13 years, and offers for his kindness to give him 200*l.* over and above, if so be he will let him have it so with the use of it, and then they cast the Principal, Use, and the 200*l.* in an Annuity, and so agreed at last upon an Annuity for 14 years of 80*l.* per annum, which they agreed would pay the Principal, Use, and 200*l.*; this is an usurious contract, and therefore all Statutes and Bonds made to perform it must needs be void. Adjudge Corflets case, Pas. 7. Jac. B R.

2. If one take 10*l.* in the 100*l.* for use, and also in the same Contract, he cause the Obligor to take from him a Lease for 30 years of a House, at 60 pound Rent, whereas in truth it is worth but 20*l.* by the year, this is an usurious contract. Carria. Sanders case, B R.

3. If upon the Loan of Money a Fiefment be made of Land for security of the Money, and Bonds besides for the payment of the Interest after the rate of the Statute, and the Land be worth by the year more than the Interest, this is a corrupt contract: But if it be agreed the Fiefor shall take the profits of the Land, contra; and if the Fiefsee take not the profits it shall be presumed to be so, unless the contrary be shewed. Witchel and Guisel, M. 8. Car. B R.

4. The 17 of July 1579. a Rent of 20*l.* by the year was granted for the Loan of 100*l.* and it was to be paid every half year, the first payment to begin at Christmas, 1580. on condition, that if he pay the 100*l.* the 17 of July 1580. then the Rent to cease; this contract was not usurious; for the Grantor might have paid the 100*l.* before the first day of payment of Rent, and then the Grantee had had nothing for the Loan of his 100*l.* all that time: But if there had been a private collateral agreement between the parties, that they should not pay the 100*l.* or redeem it, and that Clause were put in to evade the Statute, then the contract had been usurious notwithstanding, and so in all like cases. Cook. 5. 9.

5. One, the 6 of December, borrowed 30*l.* till the second of June then next following, to be paid then for it 33*l.* for the Principal and Loan, if the son of the Obligor shall be then living; and if he die before, then that he shall pay 27*l.* which is less than the Principal; this contract was agreed to be usurious and naught. Cow. 5. 70.

6. If

6. If one borrow 100.l. after the rate of the Statute, and the borrower do after pay part of the Principal, and all the Use within the year, and the lender receive, or the lender sue for it within the year, this is no usury; for if the original Contract be not usurious, no matter ex post facto, that is, afterwards, can make it so. Hill. 7. Jac. B R. Curia et H. 7. Jac. Cook, B.

7. If one borrow of me 6.l. and bind himself to pay me 6.l. by a day; and bind himself moreover, that if he do not pay me the 6.l. by the day, that then he shall pay me 10.l. for that 6.l. this is no usurious Contract; for all Obligations with Conditions for Money lent, are to this purpose. Thurflies case, Br. Oblig. 79.

8. If A enfeoff B upon loan of 100.l. to the use of B and his heirs, provided, that if A pay 100.l. at the years end that it shall be to the use of A and his heirs, and that land is of the value of 20.l. by the year, if in this case it be agreed the Feoffee shall take the profits, this is usury; but if it be agreed the Feoffee shall take it as it may be besides the Deed, contra. ch. just. M. 4. Car.

9. Scire facias was to execute a Judgement; The Defendant pleaded, that he borrowed of the Plaintiff 100.l. to give him 120.l. for the loan thereof a year; and the Plaintiff for his Assurance would have the Defendant confess this Judgement of 120.l. and so pleaded the statute of Usury in Bar, upon which the Plaintiff demurred, and Judgement was given for the Plaintiff, and agreed to be too late, and that it should have been pleaded in the first Suit. Middletons and Halls case, Trin. 39. Eliz. B R.

10. — Debt was brought for 60.l. on an Obligation; The Defendant pleaded the statute of Usury, and shewed, that a Ship went a Fishing to the New found land, which Voyage might be performed in 8 Months; and the Plaintiff delivered 50.l. to the Defendant to pay 60.l. upon the Return of the Ship to Dartmouth from Fishing; and if the Ship should not come to the New found land, but by reason of Leakage or tempest should return to Dartmouth, then that he should pay the Principal Money, and if the Ship should never Return, that he should pay nothing; and it was adjudged no usury: for if it staid two years at the New found land, he was to Pay but 20.l. Pasch. 6. Jac. Sharpley versus Hurrel. Co. B.

11. Warnes was indebted to Ader 100.l. upon an usurious Contract; and Ader was indebted to Ellis in 100.l. just debt, for which Warnes and Ader were bound to the Plaintiff, and debt being brought upon this Obligation, Warnes pleaded the usury between him and Ader to avoid the Bond; and Ellis replied, that he knew nothing of it; and it was adjudged against the Defendant. Trin. 2. Jac. Co. B.

12. CHAP. CLXV.

Of an Outlawry.

IT is the punishment of a man, that being called into Law, and lawfully sought, doth contemptuously refuse to appear. And this is, and may be in and upon personal Actions, or in and upon Appeals and Indictments. In personal Actions, as Account, Debt, Replevin, Detinue, Action upon the Case, Trespass, Covenant, Annuity. And in personal Actions it is and may be either before Judgement had in the Suits, or after Judgement; and in both Cases it is after Writs of Exigent and Proclamation go forth, and upon the

A Writ that lyeth against a man that is Outlawed in any Suit, commanding the Sheriff to take the Party for not appearing on the Exigent, and to bring him to prison, that he may answer for his contempt, and there he must stay without Bayle or Mainprise, which is called a general Cap. ut legatum.

Or else, there may go forth a Writ called A Capias ut legatum ut inquiras de bonis et cattellis, for a special Capias ut legatum, to require the Sheriff to take his Body (as before) and withal to enquire of his Goods and Chattels which are forfeited by the Outlawry, and to seize them into the Kings hands, and to his use: And this may be directed to the Sheriff of any County.

And by this Outlawry, all his Goods and Chattels are not only forfeit, and therefore he can make no Testament of them; but he is disabled to sue in any Action as long as the Outlawry is of Record against him.

Disability to sue.

And in this case hath a man no remedy but to Reverse the Outlawry, if he can finde any Error in the proceedings, or else to get the Kings pardon.

How to be avoyded.

But if it be after Judgement, he must pay the Debt, or agree with the party plaintiff before he can have any pardon from the King.

And if it be before Judgement, the party must first come into the Court, and yield his body to the Prison, and the Plaintiff shall be summoned to come in by Seire facias, to proceed upon the first original; and if he come not, the Pardon shall be allowed; if he do, they shall Plead.

And if it happen to be Reversed for Error, the party Outlawed shall have Restitution of his Goods that are in the Sheriffs hands, or were sold by him before.

And then is the Party indicted Attainted, and from that time doth lose his Land by Escheate.

If a man be Outlawed in a personal Action, or upon an Appeal of Maim, or Indictment of Trespass; by this the Party Outlawed doth lose and forfeit to the Lord Protector, all his Goods and Chattels that he hath at the time of the Outlawry pronounced, as Leases for years, Wardships of Tenants in Capite, (if any were) Cattel; Household-stuff, Plate, Money, Jewels; also, all Debts by Especialty and otherwise, all Statutes, Recognizances, and Obligations, and all things else as Emblements of Corn and Grass, and whatever else is included within Chattels, that he hath to his own use, and in his own right.

So also he loseth the profits of his Land for his life, the which the Lord Protector may take so as notwithstanding he may not Manure it. 9 Hen 6 20 30 H 6 20 19 H 6 47 30 Ass pl 1 Stamf lib 3 chap 27 Cook 7 1 22 4 95 5 59 63 5 Hen 7 16 Plow 541 Broo Forfeiture 75 24 26

And yet in 6 Car. in the Court of Wards in the Lord Brooks case, it was held by the Judges assistants, That where the Lord Brook had bargained and sold Land to A B C and D for years, and C and D were Outlawed, that by this C and D had forfeited but their Moyitie, and that they were Tenants in Common with the King.

But Inheritances and Freeholds, nor the Trees upon the Land, Doors, and other incidents annexed to the Land, nor Debts upon a simple Contract, nor such causes of Action as for which Damages onely are to be recovered, as for Battery; nor Actions for Goods taken away, nor for matters of Account are not forfeited hereby.

So neither are things wherein the party Outlawed hath only a special Property, as a Pledge, Distress, Lease mortgaged, or the like, these are not forfeited hereby.

So neither are those things forfeited which one hath to anothers use, as the Goods or Chattels one hath as Executor or Administrator to another. Park 388 5 H 7 16 Cook 4 63 20 H 7 13 16 Edw 4 4 50 Ass pl 1 29 Ass pl 47 50 Ass pl 5 28 Edw 3 92

Excom-

Of Excommunication:

EXcommunication was a censure by the Ecclesiastical Judge, by which a man was deprived of the use of the Sacraments, and sometimes of the fellowship of men. And thus if a man had remained forty dayes, and had not reconciled himself to his Ordinary, upon a Certificate of the Bishop into Chancery, there did issue out thence a Writ called an Excommunicato capiendo, to the Sheriff to apprehend him, by which he was to be imprisoned without Bayle or Mainprise until he did submit and were absolved, and then he had a Writ of Excommunicato Deliberando; And by this he was to be delivered again after he had submitted. But these things about Excommunication, now that Bishops are gone, are out of use.

CHAP. CLXVI.

Of Waiver, Waif, Estray, Treasure-Trove and Warranty.

His word Waiver (as it seems) is sometimes applyed to an estate or something that is made and conveyed to a man, and so it signifieth nothing else but the refusal to accept of the thing so made and conveyed. And sometimes it is applyed to a plea, and then signifieth a refusal to stand to a former plea pleaded, and the pleading of a new: for which, last sense tread 13 Ed. 4. 8. 20 H. 6. 22. Relw. 37. 21 Ed. 3. 49. 5 H. 7. 9.

Waiver, what.

Sect. 1.

For answer to this Question, take these Cases.

1 If a Joynture be made to a Woman after marriage, she after her husbands death may waive it by word in the Country; and this is good. Cook 3. 27. Dyer 61.

Where one may waive a thing fallen to him, and how, or not.

2 If an estate be made to a man and his wife in special Taile, and the husband devise to the wife for life; in this case if she will, she may waive the estate tail, and take by the devise. Cook 9. 140.

3 A man or a woman cannot by the Common-Law waive or refuse any estate of inheritance made to him or her by any verbal Waiver or disagreement in the Country, but that he or she may afterwards again in a Court of Record accept it. See more in other Titles. Cook 3. 26. Dyer 51.

4 Where a particular estate is given with a remainder, there regularly he that hath the particular estate shall not be allowed to waive it, for the prejudice of him in remainder; but if one have a reversion, contra, for that is not hurt by the waiver. 41 Ed. 3. Ch. Inst. B. R. 13. jur.

5 Infant, or if he dye before agreement, may waive an estate made to him. So may not a man; De non sana memory, after he hath purchased Lands; but if he dye before agreement, his heire may avoid and waive it. Cook 1 part. D. & S. Inst. fol. 23.

6 One cannot waive, or alter a Title of Inheritance that a man hath in the Country, though his title be but by Prescription or Custome. Cook upon Litt. fol. 114.

If a Feoffment be made to an Infant issue in tail, he may waive it at his full age. Cook on Litt. 348.

Of Waif, Estray, &c.

Waif, what.

WAif is, when a Thief hath Feloniously stolne goods, and being neerly followed with Hue and Cry, or else overcharged with the burden or trouble of the goods, for his ease, or more flyeth away, and leaveth the goods or any part of them behind him; then the Kings Officer, or Reeve, or Bailiff of the Lord of the Manor, who by Custome, Prescription or Charter hath such a Franchise of Waif, may seise the goods so waived to the Lords use, who may keep them as his own proper goods.

For the further opening of which, these things are to be known,

Restitution.

1. That if the Owner come with fresh Suit after the Felon, and sue an Appeal, or he or any other for him, do give in evidence against him at his Arraignment upon the Indictment, and he be by this meanes attainted thereof, &c. or outlaw him for want of appearing; in these cases the owner shall have restitution of his goods so stolen and waived.

2. In this case it is wisdom in the Lord to seize the goods presently, for if the owner seize it before him, though it be twenty years after, he shall have it, though he made no fresh Suit after the Felon; but if a stranger take it away before seisure, an Action of Trespass doth lye. See Doff. & St. 176. 177. Stat. 21 H.8.11.

3. And it seems, that Lords that will have these Waifs, must cause them to be cryed in Churches and Markets thereabout; and then if they be not claimed within the year and day after, they are forfeit. Dalton De Officio Vice-Comitis, fol. 34.

4. But if the Prisoner had not the goods with or about him at the time of his flight, having hid or left them in his own or any other house, or left them in any ones custody, or in any Manor, or hid them in any place before his flight, then they are no waifs nor forfeit, but the owner may take them. Cook 5. 109. 21. H.8.11.

5. These Waifs belong to the King, unlesse there be some that have a Patent from the King for it, or can prescribe for the having of them time out of mind; and the only Remedy of getting them is by seizure only. Cook of Coppholds 51.

Soll. 2.

6. If Cattel stolen be driven by the thief, and men coming to take him, he flyeth and whiles they run after him; the goods go out of one Manor into another, now the Lord of the Manor where they were left first, by his Bailiff must seize them in the other Manor, before the Bailiff of that Manor had seized them, unlesse that other Manor were the Lord Protector, for there the Law gives him seison without any actual seizure. Dyer 338.

Wrack.

Wrack is where a Ship laden is cast away upon the Coasts, so that no living Creature that was in it when it began to sink escapeth to land with life; then all these goods are said to be wracked, and they belong to the Lord Protector, if they be found, except the Lord of the Soyl adjoyning can entitle himself to them by Custome or Charter. See Admiral.

Estray, what.

An Estray is where any tame Beast is found wandring about from its place within any Lordship, and not owned by any man.

As touching which these things are to be known,

1. Estrayes were Originally the Kings, and came from him; now may be had by Prescription, as Waifs may; or they may be claimed and had by the Kings grant, and he that hath the one shall have the other.

2. It is to be ordered thus; The Lord of the soyle, after he hath seised it, and put a Withe about its neck, and made open Proclamation two Market dayes adjoyning at three Market Townes, as some say; and (as others say) at two of the next Market Villages, shewing the Marks of the Cattle, if the Owner do not come within a year and a day after and claim them, it is the Lord Protector, the Lords of the soyle, or his that hath a Charter from any King, or can prescribe for it. And if the owner do come come within the year and the day, he is to give reasonable satisfaction for the keeping of it, and to have it again. And they that have it may detain it till he pay for the keeping of it.

3 Till the year and day be expired, the Lord hath no Property in it; and therefore if it be taken away before this time, the Lord or his Bailiff may not have an Action of Trespass for it, but the Owner of it may have an Action of Trespass. Property.
Trespass.

4 If the thing be the goods of an Infant, woman covert, Executrix or one beyond the sea, or in prison, yet are they subject to this hazard and loss, as much as the goods of any other person.

5 If the thing before the year be out, and after Proclamation, estray into another Manor, and be seized there as an Estray, the first Lord hath lost it, and he cannot go in to the other Manor to re-take it.

6 The Lord or his Bailiff is bound to give the Beast meat till the year and day be up, and he cannot use it; if an horse or ox, may not work it, if a Gelding he may not fetter him, but if it be a Cow he may milk it.

For all this, see Broo. Estray 3. 4. Dyer 338. 12 H. 8. 10. Fitz Nat. Brev. 90. Cook 9. 23. 5. 108. 7. 16. Doll. & Stat. 176. Brownl. 1. Rep. 236. 2 part 219.

Of Treasure-trove.

Treasure Trove is where any Money, Gold, or Silver, Plate or Bulloigne is found in any place under ground, and no man knoweth whose it is, in this case the Lord Protector will have it: But if any have a Patent from any King for it, or can prescribe for it, he will have it. Treasure trove,
what.

But if it be found above ground or in the sea, it is the mans that found it, and no Treasure trove: and yet it is held, that if it be Gold, Silver, Coyn, Plate or Bullion, where-ever it be found, it is Treasure trove. But for Mines of mettall (unless they be Mines of Gold and Silver, or Mines mixt wherein is most of the Gold and Silver Oar, which belong to the Lord Protector) they do belong to the owner of the ground wherein they are. Plow. 322. 314. Stamf. Prer. ch. 42.

Of a Warranty.

A Warranty is a certain Covenant real annexed to lands or tenements whereby a man and his heirs are bound to warrant the same. Or it is where a man is bound to warrant the land or hereditament that another hath. And he that doth make this Warranty is called the Warrantor, and he to whom it is made the warrantee. Finch. lty 39. Cook super Litt. 365. 1 Warranty,
what.
Warrantor.
Warrantee.

There are two kind of warranties,

1. A warranty in Deed, or an expresse warranty, which is when the same is expressed; .i. when a Fine or Feoffment by deed is levied or made in Fee, or a lease for life is made by deed, comprehending warranty, or which hath an expresse clause of warranty contained in it, as when a Conusor, Feoffor or Lessor doth covenant to warrant the Land to the Conussee, Feoffee or Lessee; which is in these words, Ego IS & heredes mei warrantizabimus & in perpetuum defendemus VV S & heredibus suis tenementa predicta contra omnes homines in perpetuum. And by the Statute of Bigamis Dedi is made an expresse warranty during the life of Feoffor. Cook 1. 2. super Litt. 365. 4. 18. 2. The kinds,

2. A warranty in law, or an implied warranty, which is when it is not expressed by the party but sacite made and implied by the Law, whereof see divers examples infra. The warranty in Deed also is either lineal, which is thus described, A Covenant real annexed to the Land by him which either was owner, or might have inherited the Land, and from whom his heir lineal or collateral might by possibility have claimed the Land as heir from him that made the warranty. Or else it is collateral, which is thus described; A warranty made by him that had no right, or possibility of right to the Land, and is collateral to the title of the Land. Also there is a warranty which doth commence by disseisin or wrong, of all which see divers examples afterwards. And note that all these things here are to be applied to warranties of Lands and concerning freeholds, and inheritances, for there is a warranty of Goods and Chattels in contracts, of which we treat not here. Cook super 383, 384, 370, 365.

3. The fruit and effect of it, and what use may be made of it.

The fruit and effect of this warranty in deed is, that it doth always conclude and bar the warrantor himself of the Land so warranted for ever, so that all his present and future Rights that he hath or may have therein are hereby extinct. Cook super Litt. 265. 372. 365. 384.

And therefore, if the Father be disseised, and the son in his life time release all his right to the Land to the disseisor, and make a warranty of the Land in the Deed, and then the father dieth, and the right of the Land descendeth to the son; in this case albeit the release doth not bar the son, yet the warranty doth bar him. Cook 4. 121. 10. 97.

And for the most part also, it doth conclude and bar the heirs of him that made the warranty, to whom the same warranty doth descend, to demand the same Land against the warranty; for if it be a lineal warranty, it is a bar of an estate in fee simple without any Assets, i. without any other Land descended to him in fee simple from the same ancestor that made the warranty; and with Assets, it is a bar of an estate in tale. And if it be a Collateral Warranty, it is with or without Assets a bar of an estate in fee simple or fee tale, and all possibility of right thereunto, and yet so as it doth not pass any estate or right, but only bind the right so long as the warranty is in force: for if the warranty be avoided, the right may be revived. But neither the lineal or collateral warranty can enlarge an estate.

And therefore if a Lessor by Deed release to his Lessee for life, and warrant the Land to him and his heirs, this doth not make his estate greater, neither will it bar Titles of Entry or Action in cases of Mortmain, consent to a Ravisher, Mortgage, or Dower. Cook super Litt. 389. &c.

And therefore if an Ancestor of the Lord hath title to enter upon an Alienation in Mortmain, and he release, or make a feoffment with warranty; this warranty will neither bar him nor his heir.

So if a collateral Ancestor will make a warranty which doth after descend upon one that hath title of entry upon a condition broken; this will not bar his entry, &c. neither will it bar any Right that shall commence after the warranty made. And the warranty that doth commence by Disseisin, doth not bind or bar any estate with, or without Assets.

And in Cases where the lineal or collateral warranty is a bar, there if the party be impleaded by him or his heirs that made the warranty, the party impleaded that is Tenant of the Land, may plead and shew forth this warranty against him, and demand Judgement, whether he contrary to his own warranty shall be suffered or received to demand the thing warranted; and this in pleading is called a Rebutter.

Rebutter, what.

Cook super Litt. 265. Cook 10. 98, 99. Dyer 42. Cook super Litt. 101.

And if he be impleaded or sued by another for the Land, then he to whom the warranty is made or his heirs may vouch, i. call in the warrantor or his heirs to warrant the Land.

Voucher, what.

And this is an interpleader in the nature of an Action brought by the warrantor against the warrantee, wherein he that doth vouch, (called the voucher) is demandant, and he that is vouched (called the vouchee) is made tenant or defendant to the Action, and the voucher is as it were out of the suit.

Voucher.

Vouchee.

Tenant by the Warranty, what.

Summons ad Warrantum, what.

And this second Tenant the vouchee is called the Tenant by Warranty.

And hereupon shall issue forth to the Sheriff a Writ to summon the Vouchee to appear, called a Summons ad Warrantum.

And if the Vouchee appear, he must plead to the Voucher; and if he shew cause why why he should not warrant; that must be tried, and this shewing of Cause is called a Counterplea to the Voucher: but if he plead in avoidance of the warranty, it is called a Counterplea to the warranty.

Counterplea to the Voucher. what.
Counterplea to the Warranty. what.

And if he cannot gain say the warranty, the stranger shall recover the Land demanded against the Voucher; and he shall recover as much other Land against the Vouchee of the Lands he hath or had at the time of the voucher.

Recovery in value, what.

And this Recovery of other Land is called a Recovery in Value.

And if the Vouchee hath at the time of the Voucher and Recovery no Lands descended to him to answer the warranty, but hath afterwards Land happening to him by descent from that Ancestor, then he may have a resummons and recover the Land that doth after happen.

But if the Sheriff return upon the summons, that the Vouchee is summoned, and he doth make default, then he shall have a Magnum caput ad valentiam, when if he make default again, the Judgement shall be given against the Voucher, and he shall recover over in value against the Vouchee; and if the Vouchee appear and then make default, the Voucher shall have a Parvum caput ad valentiam; and then if he make default, Judgement shall be given as before.

But if the Sheriff return upon the summons, he hath nothing whereby he may be summoned, then may the Voucher have a Writ called Sequatur sub suo periculo; whereupon shall go an Alias and Pluries; and if the like Return be made, the demandant shall have Judgement against the first tenant, but he cannot recover in value against the Vouchee.

Sequatur sub suo periculo, what.

And if the case be so the Vouchee had a Warranty from some other for the Land, he may Deraign. i. maintain the Warranty over, and shall recover in value over also against his Voucher in the same manner as before.

Deraignment del Warranty. what.

Or the Warrantee to whom the Warranty is made or his heirs may at any time before they be impleaded for the Land, if they will bring a Warrantia Charta upon the Warranty in the Deed against the Warrantor or his heirs; and hereby all the Land the heir of the Warrantor hath by descent from the Ancestor that made the Warranty at the time of this Writ brought, shall be bound and charged with the warranty into whose hands soever it go afterwards; so that if the Land warranted be after recovered from the warrantee, he shall recover so much land over again of the other land of the heir of the warrantor or of the warrantor himself if he be living. And albeit the warrantee or his heirs do recover in this Writ, yet he may after upon occasion Vouch the Warrantor or his Heirs notwithstanding. F.N.B. 134. Cook super Litt. 102.

Warrantia Charta, what.

And herein observe it is good Policy, if a man suspect any thing, to bring this Writ of Warrantia Charta betimes, because it binds all the Land of the warrantor from the time of the Writ brought, and not any of his other Lands he had before that time, that are now aliened.

The words Dedi & concessi, or Dedi only in a Feoffment do make a warranty when an estate of franktenement or inheritance doth pass by the Deed. But the word Concessi only, or Demisi & concessi, do not make such a warranty. And by force of the Statute of Bigamis chap. 6. Dedi is made an exprels warranty during the life of the Feoffor. Cook super Litt. 383, 384. Cook 4. 81.

4. What words and clauses in a deed will make a warranty. Or not.

The word Warrantize, or warrant, is the only apt and effectual word to make an exprels warranty or a warranty in Deed, and therefore this word only is used in fines. And the words Defendo, or Acquiesco, albeit they be commonly used in Deeds, yet of themselves without the other will not make a warranty. Litt. Sect. 733. Cook 5. 17, 18.

If a man by Deed doth grant to warrant Land to IS and his heirs, and the warrantor doth not bind his heirs to the warranty; or doth not warrant to IS and his heirs, but to IS only; or doth warrant to IS and his assigns, and not to IS and his heirs; or doth bind himself and his heirs to warrant the land, but doth not say how long, nor against whom; these are good warranties, but how they shall be taken, see afterwards. Dyer 42. Cook super Litt. 383.

A war-

5. To what things a warranty may be annexed and extended. And to what not. And how.

A warranty in Deed may be annexed to estates of inheritance or freehold, and that not only of corporeal things which pass by livery, as houses, lands, and the like, but also of incorporeal things which lie in Grant, as Advowsons, Rents, Commons, Estovers, and the like, which issue out of Lands or Tenements, and that not only to inheritances in esse, but also to such as are newly created, as a man (some say) may grant a Rent &c. de novo, out of land for life, in taile, or in fee, with warranty. Cook super Litt. 366. 389.

So a warranty in Law may extend to a Rent newly created, and therefore if such a Rent be granted in exchange for an Acre of Land; this exchange and warranty thereunto annexed is good.

But a warranty may not be annexed to an estate or Lease for years, albeit it be a Lease of one thousand years, nor to any other Chattel, and therefore in all actions the which Lessee for years may have as trespass &c., a warranty cannot be pleaded in bar.

A warranty may be made upon any kinde of conveyance, as upon fines, feoffments, gifts, &c. also a warranty may be made by and upon releases and confirmations made to the tenant of the Land, albeit he that makes the release or confirmation, hath no right to the Land, &c. Cook super Litt. 372. 385. Litt. Selt. 738. 745. 706.

And yet some say, That by a Release or Confirmation where there is no estate created, or transmutation of the possession, a warranty cannot be made to the Assignee.

But if A be seised of Land in fee, and B doth release to him, or doth confirm his estate in fee with warranty to him, his heirs, and assigns; in this case all men agree this warranty to be good; and so also it seems it is in the case last before, and that both the party himself, and the Assignee may vouch.

6. What shall be a good warranty in Law. And how it shall bar and binde.

A warranty in Law may be good in his creation, albeit it be made without Deed, for if a man by his last Will and Testament devise Lands to another man for life, or in taile rendering Rent; to this estate there is a warranty in Law annexed. Cook super Litt. 384. 386.

The words Dedi & concessi; or Dedi only in a Feoffment, make a good warrant in Law. Cook super Litt. 384.

But the word Concessi only in fine or feoffment, doth not make a warranty in Law. FN B 134. Cook 4. 80.

And albeit there be an expresse warranty in the Deed, yet this doth not take away the implied warranty of the Law.

And this warranty in Law by Dedi & concessi, or by Dedi only, is a general warranty during the life of the Feoffor.

Partition. Exchange.

Every Partition and Exchange implyeth in it, and hath annexed to it a special warranty in Law, and how it shall bar and be extended, see in Exchange. Cook super Litt. 102. 384.

Every Tenure by Homage Ancestrel, i. where a Tenant and his Ancestors have held Land of a Lord, and his Ancestors time out of minde by Homage hath a warranty in law annexed to it, by which the Lord is bound to warrant it to the Tenant and his heirs. Cook 4. 80.

If one make a Gift in Taile or Lease for life of Land by Deed, or without Deed, reserving a Rent, or of a Rent-service by Deed; in these cases there is annexed an implied warranty against the Donor or Lessor, his Heirs and Assignes. Cook super Litt. 334.

When Dower is assigned to a Woman, there is a warranty in Law included, which is that the Tenant in Dower being impleaded, shall Vouch and recover in value a third part of the two parts whereof she is Dowable. Cook super Littleton, 384.

And this warranty in Law is of the nature of a lineal warranty, and shall binde as a lineal warrant only, for it doth never bar any Collateral Title. Cook super Litt. 384.

And

And hence it is, that this warranty and assents in some cases is a good bar, as if tenant in taile exchange for other lands which are descended to the issue, and he hath accepted of them, or if not, that other lands are descended to him. But if tenant in taile of lands make a gift in tail or lease for life rendering rent, and dye, in this case this is no bar. And yet if other assents in Fee simple descend, this warranty in Law and assents is a good bar.

To every good warranty in Deed that must bar and bind, these things are requisite,

1. That the person that doth warrant, be a person able, for if an Infant make a Feoffment in fee of land, and thereby doth bind himself and his heires to warrant the Land; in this case albeit the Feoffment be only voidable, yet the warranty is void. Cook super Litt. 367.

2. That the warranty be made by deed in writing, for if a man make a Feoffment by word, and by word bind him and his heires to warrant the Land, this is not a good warranty. So if a man give lands to another by his last will, and thereby bind him and his heires to warrant it; this warranty, although the will be in writing, is void. Litt. Sect. 703. Cook super Litt. 386.

3. That there be some estate to which the warranty is annexed, that may support it: for if one covenant to warrant land to another, and make him no estate, or make him an estate that is not good, and covenant to warrant the thing granted; in these things the warranty is void. Cook 10. 96. & super Litt. 384.

4. That the estate to which the warranty is annexed, be such an estate as is able to support it, and therefore that it be a lease for life at the least: for if one make a Lease for years of land, and bind himself and his heires to warrant the land; this is no good warranty, neither will it have the effect of a warranty: but this may amount to a covenant on which an action of covenant may be brought. Cook super Litt. 378. 26 H. 8. 9.

5. That the warranty descend upon him that is heir of the whole blood by the common Law to him that made the warranty, and not upon another: for if Tenant in tail in Burrough English (where by custome the youngest son is to enherit) discontinue the tail, and have issue two sons, and the Uncle release to the Discontinuee with warranty, and dieth; this is no good warranty to bind the son. Cook super Litt. 12. Litt. fol. 161. Sect. 735.

So if in this case tenant in tail discontinue the taile, with warranty &c. having two sons, and dye seized of other lands in the same Burrough in Fee-simple, to the value of land in taile; the younger son is not barred by this warranty.

So if one give his land to his eldest son, and the heirs males of his body, the remainder to the second son, &c. and the eldest son doth alien with warranty, having issue a daughter, and dye; this is no good warranty to bar the second son. Litt. fol. 161.

So if Tenant in taile have issue two daughters by divers venters, and dye, and they enter; and a stranger doth disseise them, and one of them doth release all her right, and bind her and her heires to warrant it; in this case the warranty is not good to bar the sister: but if they had been by one venter, contra. Litt. Sect. 737.

So if two brothers be by demy venters, and the eldest doth release with warranty to the disseisor of the Uncle, and dieth without issue, and the younger dyeth; this is no good warranty to bar the younger brother, for a warranty must evermore descend upon him that is heir at the common Law to him that made it. Cook super Litt. 387. Litt. Sect. 718.

6. That he that is heir do continue to be so, and that neither the descent of the title nor the warranty be interrupted, for if one bind him and his heires to warrant, and after is attainted of Felony, and dye; this warranty doth not bind his heir. Litt. Sect. 745. 746.

So if tenant in tail be disseised, and after release to the disseisor with warranty, and after

7. What shall be said a good warranty in deed. Or not. And how it shall bar and bind. Infant.

after the tenant in taile is attainted of Felony, and hath issue and dye; this warranty will not bind the issue.

7 That the estate of free-hold that is to be barred, be put to a right before or at the time of the warranty made, and that he to whom the warranty doth descend, have then but a right to the land, for a warranty will not barre any estate of Freehold or inheritance in esse, in possession, reversion or remainder, that is not displaced and put to a right before, or at the time of the warranty made, though after at the time of the descent of the warranty, the estate of freehold or inheritance be displaced and divested. And therefore if there be father and son, and the son hath a rent-service, suit to a mill, rent charge, rent-seck, common of pasture, or other profit apprender out of Land of the father, and the father maketh a Feoffment in Fee with warranty, and dyeth, this shall not bar the son of the rent, common, &c. And albeit the son after the Feoffment with warranty, and before the death of the father hath been disseised, and so being out of possession the warranty had descended upon him, yet this warranty should not bind him. Cook 10. 96, 97. super Litt. 388. 21 H. 7.

So if my collateral Ancestor release to my tenant for life with warranty and dye, and this warranty descend upon me, this shall not bind my reversion or remainder. But if in the case before, the son be disseised of the rent &c. and affirm himselfe to be disseised by the bringing of an Assize (for otherwise he shall not be said to be out of possession of a rent, or the like) and after the father doth release with warranty and dye; in this case the collateral warranty shall bind and bar the son of his rent &c. And if in the last Case my tenant for life be disseised, and my Ancestor doth release to the disseisor with warranty and dye; this is a good warranty to bar and bind me.

8 That the warranty do take effect in the life time of the Ancestor, and that he be bound by it, for the heire shall never be bound by an expresse warranty, but where the Ancestor was bound by the same warranty, and therefore a warranty made by Will is void. Litt. Sect. 734.

9 That the heir claim in the same right that the Ancestor doth: for if one be a successor only in case of a corporation, he shall not be bound by the warranty of a natural Ancestor. Cook super Litt. 370.

10 That the heire that is to be barred by the warranty be of full age, at the time of the fall of the warranty: for if my Ancestor make a Feoffment, or a release with warranty, and at this time I am within age, and after he dye, and the warranty descend upon me within age, this warranty shall not bind me: But if I become of age after the warranty of my Ancestor, and before his death; in this case the warranty may bar me. And in the first case it will bar me also, whiles it is in force; but I may by any entry avoid it. And the same Law is of a woman covert. And yet if the entry of an Infant or a woman covert be not lawful, when the warranty doth descend; in this case the warranty shall bind them as well as any other, for such a warranty cannot be avoided but by entry and avoiding the estate. And where the husband is within age at the time of the descent of a warranty to his wife, and the entry of the wife is taken away, there the warranty shall bind the wife. Litt. Sect. 726. Cook 1. 67. 140. super Litt. 380.

If Lands be given to A for life, and after to the next heire male of A, and the heires males of the body of that heire male, and A having issue B, makes a Feoffment of the land with warranty to I S; this is a good warranty and a bar to the issue, for a man may be barred of his right by a warranty, which he could never avoid: as where Lessee for life is disseised, and a collateral Ancestor of the Lessor doth release to the Disseisor with warranty and dye, and this doth descend upon the Lessor; by this he is barred. Cook 1. 66. 44 Ed. 3. 30. 44 Ass. pl. 35.

A warranty made for life or in tail is good, and shall bind for so long only: as if Tenant in taile of land let it for life, the remainder to another in Fee, and a collateral Ancestor doth confirme the estate of the tenant for life and dye, and the tenant in tail hath issue; this is a bar to the issue during the life of the tenant for for life. And in this case upon a voucher the recovery in value shall be put for life only. Litt. Sect. 738. Cook Super Litt. 387.

If one make a Gift in taile, and grant to warrant the land given according to the Gift; this warranty is good no longer then the estate doth last. And no warranty that a Donor can make in this case can bar him of the land if the Donee die without issue, and the estate determine. Cook 10 96.

And where a warranty doth bar, it is entire, and doth extend to all the Land, and to all persons upon whom it doth descend, and is a bar of all the right that every one of them hath in the land; so that if they have all right jointly or severally, or one onely hath all the right, and the rest none, he that hath the right is barred. And therefore if lands be given to A, and the heirs of his body; and for want of such issue, to E his sister, and the heirs of her body; and A doth make a Feoffment with warranty, and die without issue, having two sisters, E and S; this is a bar to E for the whole, albeit the warranty descend on her and another. Cook 8. 52. Super Litt. 373

If there be tenant for life, the remainder to his son and heir apparant in tail, and the father doth make a feoffment in fee with warrantie, and dieth; in this case this is a warranty, and will bar the son, albeit it be made of purpose to bar him. But if by agreement and covin between him and A and B, he makes a lease to A, who makes a feoffment in fee to B, to whom the father doth release with warranty, thinking by a collaterall warranty to bar his son; this is no bar, for this warranty began by disseisin; and if in the first case the son doth enter in the life time of the father, upon the land, he doth avoid the warranty. Cook 5. 79

If the father be tenant for life, the remainder to the next heir male of the father, and to the heirs males of the body of such next heir male; and the father makes a feoffment to I S with warrantie, and dieth; it seems this warranty is a good bar to the heir; and in this case the heir cannot enter in the life time of his father; for he cannot be heir male unto his father untill his fathers death. Cook 1. 66.

If tenant for life make a feoffment with warranty, or be disseised, and release with warranty, and he in reversion being heir to the tenant for life, doth not enter, but suffers the lessee for life to die, and thereby the warranty to fall and descend upon him: in this case, this warranty generally is a barre without any assents. But if he that doth so alien &c. be tenant by the courtesie, this is no bar to the heir without assents in fee simple, from the tenant by the courtesie; and then it is a bar for so much. Cook Super Litt. 366, 365. Cook 1. 67. Stat. Glouc. chap. 6. Litt. Sect. 724. 725.

And if the heir for want of this assents, at the time doth recover the land from his mother, and after assents doth descend from the father; in this case the tenant shall recover the same land of the mother again. And if she that doth so alien, &c. to be tenant for life of the inheritance, or purchase of her deceased husband, or given unto her by any of the Ancestors of her Husband, or by any other person seised to the use of her Husband, or of any of his Ancestors; in this case her alienation, release, or confirmation with warranty shall not bind the heir, whether he hath assents or not. Stat. 11. Hen. 7. chap. 20. Litt. Sect. 727. Cook Super Litt. 365.

But if a man convey lands to the use of himself, B his wife, and the heires of his body, and they have issue C. and the father dieth, and C disseiseth his mother, or getteth a feoffment from a disseisor, and then suffereth a recovery with a single voucher, and after the wife doth release to the recoverer with warranty; in this case the warranty is a bar to the issue, and not void by the Statute of 11. H. 7. Co. 3. 58.

If the Husband that is seised of lands in the right of his Wife levie a fine, or maketh a Feoffment in fee with warranty, and the Wife dieth and then the Husband dieth; this warranty shall not binde the heir of the Wife without assents of other land in fee simple from the father, albeit he be not tenant by the courtesie; but it is before her death that he doth make the estate and the warranty. But a Fine levied by the Husband and Wife, in this case is a good bar to the heir. Cook Super Litt. 366, 381. Stat. Glouc. ch. 6. Litt. Sect. 332.

If tenant in taile that is in of another estate, either by disseisin, or by the feoffment of a disseisor, doth suffer a common recovery, and a collateral Ancestor of the Tenant in taile doth release with warranty to the recoverer, and after the recoverer doth make a feoffment to uses executed by the Statute of 27 Hen. 8. and after the collateral Ancestor dieth, in this case albeit the estate of the land be transferred in the post before the descent of the warranty, yet it shall binde. So if he, to whom the warranty is made, suffer a common recovery, and after the Ancestor dieth. But if tenant in Dower enfeoffe a villain with warranty, and the Lord of the villain enter into the land before the descent of the warranty, and after the woman dieth, this warranty shall not binde the right of the Heir. So if a collateral warranty be made to a Bastard and his heirs, and living the Ancestor, the Bastard dieth without issue, and the Lord by Escheat doth enter, and after the Ancestor dieth, this warranty shall not binde. Cook 3. 62. 22 Ass. pl. 37. 29 Ass. pl. 34.

A Collateral Warranty may descend upon an issue in taile before the right descend, and yet be good with this difference, that the right be in esse in some of the Ancestors of the Heir at the time of the Descent of the warranty: As, if Tenant in taile discontinue the taile in fee, and the discontinuee is disseised, and the brother of the Tenant in Taile releaseth all his right &c. to the disseisor with warranty, and dieth without issue, and the Tenant in taile hath issue and dieth, in this case the issue is barred. But otherwise it is where the right is not in esse in the heir or any of his Ancestors at the time of the fall of the warranty, as if Lord and Tenant be, and the Tenant make a Feoffment in fee with warranty, and after the Feoffee doth purchase the Seigniori, and after the Tenant doth cease, in this case the Lord shall have a Cessavit, for a warranty doth never bar any right that doth commence after the warranty. Litt. Sess. 7 Hen. Cook super Litt. 388.

8. What shall be said a lineal warranty. And how such a warranty shall bar.

If the case be so, that if no such warranty had been made by the Father or other Ancestor, the right of the Lands or Tenements so warranted, had or might have descended or come from the same Ancestor, and that from and by him that made the same Warranty, such a Warranty is a lineal Warranty. Litt. Sess. 703. 711.

As if a man be seised in fee of Land, and make a feoffment of it to another, and bind him and his heirs to warrant the Land, and hath issue and die, and the warranty doth descend upon the issue, this is a lineal warranty, for that if none such had been, the right of the Land had descended to him as heir to his father, and he must have made his descent by him. Cook super Litt. 371.

And if there be Grandfather, Father and Son, and the Grandfather be disseised, and the Father release to the disseisor being in Possession with warranty &c. and dieth, and after the Grandfather dieth, this is a lineal warranty to the Son, and albeit in this case the warranty descend before the right, yet it is a good bar. And if there be two brothers, and the father is disseised, and the eldest brother doth release with warranty, and die without issue, and after the father dieth, and the warranty doth descend to the younger son, this is a lineal warranty to him. Litt. Sess. 707.

And if Lands be given to A for life, the remainder to his right heirs, and he doth make a feoffment with warranty and die, this is but a lineal warranty. And if two parcenors be, and the eldest enter into all the Land to her own use, and then doth make a feoffment with warranty and dieth without issue, this, as to her own part, is a lineal warranty, but as to her sisters part is a collateral warranty. Cook 1. 66. 67.

And in every case where one doth demand any estate taile, if an Ancestor of the issue in taile, whether he had possession of the Land or not, hath made a warranty, and if the issue, that were to bring a writ of Foremedon, may or might have by possibility by some matter that might have been done, conveyed to himself a title by force of the Gift by him that made the warranty, this is a lineal warranty. Cook 8. 32. New terms of the Law, tit. Warranty.

As if a man be seised of land of an estate taile to him and the heirs of his body begotten, and make a feoffment of it, and bind him and his heirs to warrant it, and hath issue and dieth; this warranty descending upon the issue is a lineal warranty.

And if lands be given to one and the heirs males of his body, and for want of such issue to the heirs females of his body, and the Donee doth make a feoffment with warranty, and hath issue a son and a daughter and dieth; this warranty is lineal to the son, and if the son dieth without issue male, it is a lineal warranty from the father to the daughter. But if the Brother in his life time release to the discontinuee &c. with warranty &c. and after dieth without issue; this is a collateral warranty to the daughter. Litt. Sect. 719.

If Lands be given to the Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of their two bodies engendred, and they have issue, and the Husband discontinue and die, and after the Wife doth release with warranty and die; this is a lineal warranty. Litt. Sect. 714.

And if Lands be given to a man and a woman unmarried and the heirs of their two bodies, and they intermarry, and are disseised, and the husband doth release with warranty and dieth, and after the wife dieth; this is a lineal warranty to the issue for all the Land. Cook super Litt. 375.

And if Tenant in Taile have issue three sons and discontinue, and the middle brother doth release with warranty, and die without issue, and after the father dieth, and after the elder brother dieth without issue, so that the warranty doth descend to the younger brother; this is a lineal warranty to him. Litt. Sect. 718.

And if a father give land to his eldest son and the heirs males of his body, &c. the remainder to the second son, &c. if the eldest son alien in fee with warranty, &c. and hath issue female, and dieth without issue male; this is a lineal warranty to the second son. And in all these Cases of a lineal warranty if the right of the estate to be barred be the right of an estate in fee simple, it is a bar without any assents; for the rule is, That as to him that demandeth fee simple by any of his Ancestors, he shall be barred and bound by a lineal warranty that doth descend upon him, unless he be restrained by some Statute. Litt. Sect. 711, 712. Doct. & Stud. 152, 153. Cook 8. 52.

But it doth not bind the right of an estate in fee taile without assents, for in that case the rule is, That as to him that demandeth fee taile by Writ of Formedon in the Descendor, he shall not be barred by a lineal warranty, unless he hath assents by descent in fee simple of other land from the same Ancestor that made the warranty; and then it is a bar for so much only as doth descend to him, no more. And yet if the issue in taile do alien the assents descended and die; in this case the issue of that issue is not barred by this warranty and assents. But if the issue to whom the warranty doth descend, bring his Writ of Formedon, and is barred by Judgement by reason of the warranty and assents; in this case albeit he alien the assents afterwards, yet the estate taile is barred for ever. Cook super Litt. 393 See Brownl. 1 Part 153.

If Tenant for life do alien in fee with warranty, or be disseised and release to the disseisor with warranty and die, and the warranty descend on him in reversion or remainder; this is a collateral warranty. So if the Lessee for life be disseised, and a collateral Ancestor of him in reversion release with warranty and die, and the warranty descend on him in reversion; this is a collateral warranty. for that is collateral which is collateral to the title of the Land. Cook 1. 67. 21 Hen. 7. 10. Litt. Sect. 725.

And if a man seised of Lands in fee have issue two sons, and the father dieth, and the younger son doth enter, and doth alien the land with warranty, and die without issue; this is now a collateral warranty that is descended on the elder brother. Litt. Sect. 707. Doct. & St. 152.

And if a son be disseised of his own land, and bring an Assise, and after the father doth release to the disseisor with warranty and dieth; this warranty that doth descend to the son is a collateral warranty. 21 Hen. 7. 10.

And

9. What shall be said a collateral warranty. And how such a warranty shall bar.

And if a Father disseise his son of the Land he hath of his own Purchase without any intent to alien afterwards and to bar his son, and after he doth make a feoffment with warranty and die before the entry of his son, so that the warranty doth descend, this is a collateral warranty. Litt. Sect. 704.

If there be father and two sons, and the father is disseised, and the younger son doth release with warranty to the disseisor and die without issue, and then the father dieth, in this case the warranty now descended, is a collateral warranty. Litt. Sect. 707.

If a Lease be made for life to the father, the remainder to his next heir, and the father is disseised and doth release with warranty and dieth, this is a collateral warranty to the heir. And if the husband discontinue the right of his wife, and an Ancestor collateral to the wife to whom she is heir doth release with warranty and die, and after the husband dieth, this is a collateral warranty, and a bar to her. Cook super Litt. 388.

And in every case where a man doth demand an estate taile by a Writ of Formedon, if any Ancestor of the issue in taile which hath or hath not possession, maketh a warranty, and the issue that is demandant cannot by any possibility that may be done convey to him a title by force of the gift from and by him that made the warranty; this is a collateral warranty: as if Tenant in taile discontinue the taile and die, having issue, and the uncle of the issue doth release with warranty to the discontinuee, and die without issue, so that the warranty doth descend on the issue in taile; this is a collateral warranty. So if such a discontinuee make a feoffment in fee, or be disseised, and the uncle release with warranty to the disseisor, or feoffee, and die without issue, and the warranty doth descend on the issue; this is a collateral warranty. Cook 10. 96. Litt. Sect. 709. Plow. 234. K. 111. 78.

If a Tenant in taile have three sons, and discontinue the taile in fee, and the middle brother doth release to the discontinuee with warranty, and after the Tenant in taile dieth, this is a collateral warranty to the elder brother. Litt. Sect. 708.

If one have issue three sons, and giveth land to the eldest, and the heirs of his body; and for want of such issue to the middle, and the heirs of his body; the remainder to the third, and the heirs of his body; and the eldest doth discontinue the taile in fee with warranty, and die without issue; this is collateral to the middle son. In the same manner it is in case where the middle son hath the same land by force of the same remainder, because his elder brother made no discontinuance but died without issue of his body, and after the middle brother doth make a discontinuance with warranty, &c. and dieth without issue; this is a collateral warranty to the youngest son. And in this case if any of the sons be disseised, and the father that made the Gift, &c. releaseth to the disseisor all his right with warranty; this is a collateral warranty to that son upon whom the warranty doth descend. Litt. Sect. 716.

If Lands be given to A, and the heirs of his body, and for want of such issue to E his sister, and the heirs of her body, and A doth make a feoffment with warranty, and die without issue, having two sisters E and S; this is a collateral warranty to E. Cook 1. 52. Litt. Sect. 713.

If lands be given to a man and the heirs of his body begotten, who taketh a wife and hath issue a son by her; and the husband doth discontinue the taile in fee and dieth, and after the wife doth release to the discontinuee with warranty and dieth, and the warranty doth descend to the son; this is collateral to him. If Tenant in taile discontinue the taile in fee, and the discontinuee is disseised, and the brother of the tenant in taile doth release to the disseisor with warranty in fee, and dieth without issue, and the tenant in taile hath issue and dieth; this is collateral as to the issue. If tenant in taile have issue two daughters, and die, and the elder enter into all to her own use and thereof make a feoffment in fee with warranty, and die without issue, this warranty as to the other sisters part is collateral, but not as to her own. Litt. Sect. 741.

If the husband and wife, tenants in special taile, have issue a daughter, and the wife dye, and the husband by a second wife have issue another daughter, and discontinue teneth in bee, and dyeth, and a collateral Ancestor or the daughters release to the Discontinuee with warranty and dyeth, and the warranty descend upon both the daughters; this is a collateral warranty to them. Cook super Litt. 373.

If lands be given to one, and the heires males of his body, and for want of such issue to the heirs females of his body, and the father dy, and the brother release with warranty, and dye without issue; this is collateral to the daughter.

If tenant in tail make a Lease for life, the remainder to another in Fee, and a collateral Ancestor doth confirm the estate of tenant for life with warranty and dye, and after the tenant in tail die having issue; this is a good binding collateral warranty during the estate for life.

And in all these and such like cases of a collateral warranty, whether the right be the right of an estate tail, or the right of an estate in fee simple that is to be barred, it is a bar without any assents; for in this case the rule is, That a collateral warranty is a bar to him that demandeth fee simple, and also to him that demandeth fee taile, without any other descent of lands in fee simple, so that the heir on whom the same warranty is descended, can never have the land so warranted whiles the warranty doth continue in force, but is bound thereby, except it be in some special cases restrained by Act of Parliament, as where the husband alone during his wives life, or after her death, being Tenant by the courtesie, makes a Feoffment by Fine or Deed of his wives land, which she hath by descent or purchase, with warranty; this will not bar her heir without assents of other Lands in fee simple descended from the same Ancestor that made the warranty. Litt. Sect. 712. Cook super Litt. 374. Cook 10. 96. Stat. of Glouce. chap. 3. Cook super Litt. 365. Stat. 11 H. 7. chap. 20.

Or where a wife after her husbands death shall alone or with her succeeding husband alien, release, confirm or discontinue with warranty, the land she holdeth in dower or in tail of the gift of her former husband, or any of his Ancestors; this warranty is voidable, and will not bind with assents.

If the son purchase land &c. and after let it to his father or any other Ancestor for years or at will, and he by his Deed doth infeoff a stranger, and that with warranty, and after dyeth, whereby the warranty doth descend upon the heir; this warranty doth commence by disseisin. Litt. Sect. 699. 700. 701. 702. Finch. 82. Cook super Litt. 367.

So if tenant by Elegit, Statute Merchant, Guardian in Chivalry, or Socage, or because of Nurture, make a Feoffment with warranty, and this warranty doth descend on his heir; this warranty doth commence by disseisin.

So if one that hath no right at all enter into my land, and make a Feoffment to another with warranty.

So if one Coparcenor enter into the whole land, and make a Feoffment in fee with warranty; this warranty as to the one moyety doth begin by disseisin.

So if father and son purchase lands to them jointly &c. and the father alien the whole to another with warranty &c. and after the father dieth; this warranty as to the one moiety doth begin by disseisin.

But if the purchase be to them two and the heirs of the son, it is otherwise; for if the son enter in the life time of the father, the warranty is avoided for all: but if he do not enter, then as to the fathers moiety it is a collateral warranty. And if the purchase be to the father and son and the heirs of the father, and the father alien with warranty &c. in this case the warranty is good for the whole.

If the father be tenant for life, the remainder to his son and heir in fee, and the father by covin and consent, of purpose to bar the heir by a collateral warranty, maketh a lease for years, to the end that the Lessee should make a Feoffment in fee that the father may release to the Feoffee with warranty, and all this is done accordingly, and the father dyeth, and the warranty doth descend to the son; in this case the warranty shall be said to begin by disseisin. But if the father in this case make a Feoffment in fee with warranty and dye; this is a good warranty to bind the son, albeit it be done of purpose to bar him. Cook 5. 80 super Litt. 366. 367.

10. What shall be said a warranty that doth begin by disseisin. And what such a warranty doth work.

So if one brother make a gift in taile to another, and the Uncle doth disseise the Donee, and enfeof another with warranty, the Uncle dieth, and the warranty descendeth on the Donor, and then the Donee dieth without issue; this warranty doth begin by disseisin.

So if the father and son, and a third person be Joint-tenants in fee, and the father maketh a Feoffment in Fee of the whole with warranty, and dyeth, and then the son dyeth; in this case as to the part of the third person, and to the part of the son, the warranty shall be said to begin by disseisin.

But releases at this day by a tenant for life to a disseisor or any other without covin, albeit it be to the intent to bar him in reversion, shall bar him; for intent without covin and disseisin shall not avoid a warranty.

And examples of Warranties that do begin by disseisin, have these qualities.

1. That for the most part the disseisin is done immediately to the heire that is bound by the warranty.

2. The warranty and disseisin are simul and semel. And yet if a man disseise another, with intent to make a Feoffment with warranty, albeit the Feoffment be made twenty years after the disseisin, yet it shall be said to be a warranty, that doth begin by disseisin.

But in all these cases of warranties that do begin by disseisin, this is the rule, That they are altogether void and without force as to all others but to the parties themselves that do make them, and therefore they do not bar or bind any others at all of their right that have any.

And the same Law is of a warranty that doth begin by abatement or intrusion; that is, when an abatement or intrusion is made of purpose to make a Feoffment in fee with warranty.

And so also it is where the tenant dyeth without heire, and an Ancestor of the Lord doth enter before the entry of the Lord, and make a Feoffment in fee with warranty; in this case this shall not binde the Lord, because it doth begin by wrong.

11. How a warranty shall be taken.

All warranties in general are favourably taken in Law, because they are part of mens assurances. Every warranty in Law is taken for, and hath the effect of a lineal warranty.

The warranty that is made by Dedi & Concessi, or Dedi only in a feoffment, is and shall be taken for a general warranty against all persons to the Feoffee and his heirs, during the life of the Feoffor only, albeit there be no service reserved by the Deed nor heir named: but it shall not extend to the Assignee of the Feoffee. And if there be any service reserved on the Deed, then it shall extend against the heir also. Cook 4.81. §. 17.

The warranty in Law that is made upon the gift in tail, or lease for life, rendering rent, is a special warranty against the Donor and Lessor, and his heirs and assigns, so that the Donee or Lessee may vouch the grantor after the grant of the reversion, or the grantee of the reversion after the attornment of the Tenant at his election. Cook 4.81. super Litt. 384.

The warranty in Law that is made upon an Exchange, is special in divers respects, for it extendeth reciprocally to, and against the heirs of both parties, and it doth extend only to the same land that is given in exchange, and none other, and no use can be made of it but by Voucher, for no Warrantia Carta doth lye upon it. So also the warranty that is made in dower is taken to extend only to the other two parts of the land. Cook 4.121. super Litt. 384.

The warranty in law that is made upon the tenure of Homage Ancestrel, extendeth reciprocally to the heirs, and against the heirs of both parties. Cook super Litt. 384.

If a Feoffment be made of land to three jointly, and the Feoffors do warrant the land to the Feoffees, and every of them; this warrantie shall be joint and not several. But if the estate be several, as if one grant white acre to A, and black acre to B, and grant to warrant the land to them, and either of them; in this case the warranty shall be several. Cook 5.59.

If a

If a man of full age, and an infant join in a Feoffment with warranty, this shall be taken for a good warranty as to the whole for him that is of full age and void for the infant, and not void in part, and good in part. Cook super Litt. 367.

If a man make a Feoffment in fee, and bind his heirs, but not himself to warranty, in this case and by this his heirs shall not be bound, and it seemes also that it will not bind the warrantor himself. But if a man bind himself to warranty, and not his heirs by the Feoffment; in this case the Feoffor himself is bound to the warranty, but not his heirs, for it is a maxime of Law, That the heir shall never be bound to any expresse warranty, but where the Ancestor was bound by the same warranty. Cook super Litt. 47. 385. Dyer 42. Kelw. 108. Cook 6. 69.

If one make a Feoffment to B and his heirs, and thereby doth grant to warrant the land, and doth not say to B and his heirs; yet this warranty shall be taken to extend to them. But if the Feoffor doth grant to warrant the land to B, and doth not say to his heirs, this shall not extend to his heirs. And if in this case the warranty be to B and his Assignes, it shall not extend to his heirs, neither shall the Assignes take the advantage of it after the death of B. And if the warranty be to B and his heirs, and not to his Assignes also; this shall not extend to his Assignes. If one make a Feoffment to A, habendum to him and his heirs, and bind himself and his heirs to warrant the Land in forma prædicta; in this case the warranty shall extend to the Feoffee and his heirs.

If one grant to warrant land to another and his heirs, and doth not say against what persons, this shall be taken for a general warranty against all men. Cook 1. 1.

If one make an estate, and grant to warrant the land, but doth not say how long; this shall be taken for as long as the estate to which the warranty is knit doth last.

If a warranty be made against any special persons, it shall extend to them, and no further, and it shall extend in all cases for, and to all titles, and entries upon title; and it shall not, in any such cases extend to tortious and unlawful entries. Dyer 328.

If a man be seised of rent-sock, issuing out of the Manor of Dale, and he take a wife, and the husband doth release to the terre-tenant, and warranteth tenementa prædicta, and dieth; this warranty shall extend to the rent as well as to the land; and therefore if the wife sue for her thirds of the rent, the terre-tenant may vouch the heir. Cook super Litt. 366.

And regularly the warranty doth extend to all things issuing out of the land, viz. to warrant it in the same manner and plight as it was in the hands of the Feoffor, and he shall vouch as of lands discharged. And therefore if grantee of a rent grant it to the tenant of the land on condition, and the tenant doth make a Feoffment of the land with warranty; in this case the warranty shall not extend to the rent, albeit the Feoffment be made of the Land discharged of the rent. Cook super Litt. 388, 389.

And if a woman have a rent-charge in fee, and she doth intermarry with the tenant of the Land, and a stranger doth release to the tenant of the land with warranty; this warranty shall not extend to bar any action to be brought after the death of the wife for the rent. But if in this case the tenant make a Feoffment in fee with warranty and dieth, the Feoffee in a curiam vita brought by the wife shall vouch as of lands discharged at the time of the warranty made.

So if tenant in tail of a rent-charge purchase the land and make a Feoffment with warranty, and the issue bring a Formedon of the rent, the tenant shall not vouch, &c.

All those that are parties to the warranty, i. e. such as are named in the Deed regularly, shall take advantage of the warranty; as if one doth warrant land to another, his heirs and Assigns; in this case both the heirs and the assigns shall take advantage of it, and they both may vouch or rebut, or have a warrantia carta, so as they come in privity of estate, for otherwise the heirs or Assigns cannot vouch, or have a Warrantia carta, and yet he may rebut notwithstanding in divers cases. Cook super Litt. 365. 5. 17.

11. Who may take advantage of a warranty And how. And against whom it may be taken. Assignes.

But

But those that are not named for the most part shall not take advantage of the warranty, and therefore if land be warranted to I S, and not to him and his heirs, or to him and his assigns, or to him his heirs and assigns; in this case neither the heir nor the assignee may vouch or have a Warrantia Carta; and yet in some cases where it is so, the assignee or tenant of the land may rebut.

The warranty annexed to an Exchange, a Partition, by Dedi, and by homage Ancestrel, doth alwayes go in Privity, and therefore an assignee in these cases can take no advantage of it. And yet in cases of Exchange and Dedi, an Assignee may rebut. But the assignee of a lessee for life may take advantage of the warranty in Law annexed to his estate. Cook super Litt. 384.

If one grant to warrant Land to another, his heirs and Assignes; in this case the heirs or Assigns, heir of the Assignee, or Assignee of the heirs of the Feoffee, or Assignee of Assignees in infinitum, shall take advantage of the warranty. Cook 5.17. super Litt. 384.385.

And therefore if one enfeoff I S to have and to hold to him, his heirs and assigns, and warrant the land to him his heirs and assigns, and A doth enfeoff B and his heirs, and B dyeth, in this case the heir of B shall vouch as Assignee to A. And if one enfeoff A and B, Habendum, to them and their heirs, and warrant the land to them, their heirs and assigns, and A dye, and B doth survive and dye, and his heir enfeoff C; in this case C shall take advantage of this warranty as Assignee. If one enfeoff A with warranty to him, his heirs and assigns, and A doth enfeoff B, and B doth re-enfeoff A; in this case neither A or his Assigns shall ever take any advantage of this warranty. And yet if B enfeoff the heir of A, he may take advantage of the warranty.

If one make a Feoffment by deed with warranty to the Feoffee, his heirs and assigns, and the Feoffee doth make a Feoffment over to another by word without deed: in this case the second Feoffee shall have all the advantage of this warranty, for an assignee by word shall have the same advantage that an Assignee by Deed shall have.

If a Feoffment be made with warranty to a man and his heirs and assigns, and he make a gift in tail, the remainder in fee, and the Donee make a Feoffment in fee; this Feoffee shall not vouch as assignee, but he must vouch his Donor upon the warranty in Law; and yet he may rebut.

If lands be given to two brethren in fee simple, with warranty to the eldest and his heirs, and the eldest dye without issue; in this case albeit the other brother be his heir, yet he shall have no advantage at all by the warranty, because he comes in above the warranty. But generally all that claime under the warranty shall take advantage thereof by way of rebutter, albeit they can take no other advantage by it.

If one make a Feoffment to two, their heirs and assigns, and one of them doth make a Feoffment in fee, this Feoffee in this case shall not take advantage as assignee.

An assignee of part of the land shall take advantage of a warranty, as if a man make a Feoffment of two acres with warranty to him, his heirs and assigns, and the Feoffee doth make a Feoffment of one acre of it to another: in this case the second Feoffee shall take advantage of the warranty as assignee. And therefore herein there is a difference between the whole estate in part, and part of the estate in the whole or in any part, for if a man have a warranty to him, his heirs and assigns, and he make a lease for life, or gift in tail; in these cases the lessee or donee shall not take advantage of the warranty as assigns: but they may vouch the lessor or donor upon the warranty in Law. Cook super Litt. 385.

But if a lease for life be made, the remainder in fee; such a lessee may vouch as assignee upon the first warranty. Cook super Litt. 384.

If the father have a Feoffment made to him and his heirs with warranty, and he make a Feoffment to his son and heir with warranty; in this case the son may take advantage of the first warranty after the fathers death. Cook super Litt. 384.

If a man enfeoff a woman with warranty, and they intermarry and are impleaded, and upon the default of the husband, the wife is received; in this case she may vouch her husband. Et sic e converso. Cook super Lit. 390.

If a woman enfeof a man with warranty, and they intermarry and are impleaded; the husband in this case shall vouch himself and the wife. Cook super Litt 390.

He that comes into the land meerly by act of Law in the post, as the Lord by Escheat or the like, shall never take advantage of a warranty; and therefore if tenant in dower enfeof a villaine with warranty, and the Lord of the villain enter: or a Feoffment be to a Bastard with warranty, and he dye without issue, and the Lord enter by Escheat; in these cases the Lord shall never take advantage of these warranties. 26 H. 8. 3. 22 Aff. pl. 37. 29 Aff. 34. Cook 3 62 63.

But otherwise it is where a man comes to land by limitation of use or a common recovery, which is by the act of the party, for if tenant in taile being in of another Estate, .i. by disseisin, or Feoffment of a disseisor suffer a common recovery, and a collateral Ancestor of the Tenant in tail doth release with warranty to the recoveror, and after the recoveror doth make a Feoffment to uses, which are executed by the Statute of 27 H. 8. and after the collateral Ancestor dieth; in this case the terre-tenants may take advantage of the warranty by way of rebutter, albeit the estate be transferred in the post.

- So if he to whom the warranty is made, suffer a common recovery, and after the Ancestor dieth; the recoveror may take advantage of this warranty by way of rebutter, for any man that hath the possession of land, albeit he have no deed to shew how he came by the possession of it, or how he is Assignee, may rebut the Demandant, and so bar him and defend his own possession: And therefore the tenant by the courtesie, donee in tail that is in of anothers estate, an Assignee by force of a warranty made to a man and his heires, Feoffee of a Donee in tail may rebut and bar the Demandant by the warranty.

If one enfeof another of an acre of ground with warranty, and hath issue two sons, and dyeth seized of another acre of land of the nature of Burrough English; in this case albeit the warranty descend upon the eldest son only, yet both the sons may be vouched. And so also it is of heires in Gavelkind; the eldest shall be vouched as heir to the warranty, and the rest in respect of inheritance. Cook super Litt 376. 1 Ed. 3. 13. 5 H. 7. 2.

And in like sort the heir at the common Law, and the heir of the part of the mother shall be vouched, or the heire at the Common Law may be vouched alone at the election of a Tenant. And in like sort the heire at the Common Law shall be vouched with the heire in Burrough English. And so also a bastard shall be vouched with a mulier. And if a man die seized of certain lands in fee, having issue a son and a daughter by one venter, and a son by another, and the eldest son entreth, and dieth, & the land doth descend to the sister in this case the warranty doth descend on the son, and he may be vouched as heir, and the sister also may be vouched as heir to the land.

If two make a Feoffment with warranty, and the one dye; the survivor shall not be charged alone with the warranty, but the heire of him that is dead shall be charged also. And if two be bound to warrant land, and both of them dye; the heirs of both of them ought to be vouched, and shall be equally charged. And if the heir be vouched in the ward of three several persons, the one of them only shall not be charged, but they shall be charged equally. Cook 3 14. super Litt 386. 16 H. 7 13. 48 Ed. 3 5.

If a woman an heir of the disseisor enfeof me with warranty, and after she is married to the disseisee; in this case I may take advantage of this warranty against the disseisee and rebut him upon it if he sue me for the land. So if the husband and wife sue me for the land of his wife, and I have a warranty of a collateral Ancestor of the husbands descended to him; in this case I may make use of this to bar the husband and wife. Cook super Litt 365.

A warranty lineal or collateral may be defeated, determined or avoided in all or in part. And this is sometimes by matter in law, & sometimes by matter in deed. Con L 392

If the estate to which the warranty is annexed be gone, the warranty annexed thereunto is gone also. And therefore if an estate tail to which a warranty is annexed be spent, the warranty is determined. And if a man make a gift in tail with warranty, and after the Donee doth make a Feoffment and dye without issue, the warranty is gone. Cook

13. When a warranty shall be said to be defeated, determined or avoided. And how. Or not.

So if tenant in tail discontinue the tale, and the discontinuee be disseised, or make a Feoffment on condition, and a collateral Ancestor of the issue release to the disseisor, or feoffee on condition, with warranty, and after the discontinuee doth enter upon the disseisor, or on the Feoffee for the condition broken; in these cases the warranty made by the collateral Ancestor is gone. So if a Seigniority be granted with warranty, and the tenancy escheat so that the Seigniority is extinct; hereby also the warranty is defeated. So if a collateral ancestor heretofore had released with warranty, and then had entered into Religion, this warranty had bound; but if after he had been de-arraigned the warranty had been defeated. Brownl. 2 part 169.

If the father make a Feoffment to his son and heir apparant, with warranty and die, so that the warranty doth descend upon the son; hereby the warranty is gone. And yet if a feoffment be made to a man and his heirs, and he dyeth, leaving issue daughters: in this case the warranty shall be divided and is not determined. Cock super Lit. 384. Broo. Warranty 27.

If tenant in tail doth make a Feoffment to his Uncle, and after the Uncle doth make a feoffment in fee with warranty &c. to another, and after the feoffee of the Uncle doth re-infeoff again the Uncle, and after the Uncle doth infeoff a stranger in fee without warranty, and dyeth without issue, and the Tenant in tail dyeth; hereby the warranty made to the first Feoffee is defeated. So if the Uncle make the warranty to the Feoffee, his heirs and assigns, and take back an estate in fee, and after doth infeoff another. But if one make a feoffment with warranty to the Feoffee his heirs and assigns, and the Feoffee doth re-infeoff the Feoffor and his wife, or the Feoffor and a stranger; in these cases the warranty is not defeated, but doth continue still. So if two do make a feoffment with warranty to one, his heirs and assigns, and the Feoffee doth re-infeoff one of the Feoffors; in this case the warranty is not gone. And if in the first case the Feoffee make an estate to his Uncle in tail or for life, saving the reversion, or a Lease for life the remainder over &c. in this case the warranty is only suspended. Lit. Sell. 743. Cook super Lit. 390. Lit. Sell. 744. If one make a Feoffment or release with warranty, and after is attainted of Treason or Felony; hereby the warranty is gone; and albeit he do afterwards obtain his pardon, yet the warranty is not revived. Cook super Lit. 391. If a feoffment with warranty be made to two or more, and they being Joyntenants do after by deed make partition; by this the warranty is determined. Cook 6. 12. So if two Jointenants be, and one of them disseise the other, and he that is disseised doth recover in an assise and hath judgment to hold in severalty; hereby the warranty is determined. Adj. Judg. Hill. 22 Jac. B R Enface and Sholes Case. So if A and B be Jointenants of white acre for life, and A by fine doth grant to B totum & quicquid habet in tenementis, hereby the warranty is gone. But if a partition be made by Judgment upon a Writ by force of the Statute of 13 H. 8. this doth not defeat the warranty fallen to them, but it shall be divided between them, and they shall all of them take advantage of it.

If one infeoff three, with warranty to them and their heirs, and one of them release to one of the other two; hereby the warranty is gone for that part. But if one of them release to the other two; in this case the warranty is not gone, but doth continue, and they may vouch upon it. Cook super Lit. 385.

If one infeoff two men and their heirs, and one of them doth make a feoffment in fee; hereby the warranty is not determined, but the other may take advantage of it notwithstanding. Cook super Lit. 385. If the party that hath the warranty, or the estate to which the warranty is annexed, release to him that is bound to warrant all warranties, or all covenants real, or all demands; by either of these releases the warranty is gone. So also if by a Defeasance made between the parties it be agreed the warranty shall be void, by this defeasance the warranty may be avoided also. Or if it be so agreed that the Warrantee or his heirs &c. shall not vouch, or have a Warrantia carta by this the warranty is avoided in part. Cook super Lit. 393. 392. Lit. Sell. 748.

If tenant in tail doth infeoff his Uncle, which doth infeoff another in fee with warranty, if in this case the feoffee release the warranty to his Uncle; hereby the warranty is extinct. But if a gift in taile be made with warranty, in this case a release made by the Tenant in tail of this warranty will not extinguish it. Cook super Lit. 391.

Release.

Defeasance.

If the parties between whom the warranty is, intermary, hereby the warranty is suspended during the Coverture in some cases. Cook super Litt. 390.

If tenant in tail doth make a Feoffment in fee with warranty, and disseiseth the Discontinuee, and dieth seised, this doth suspend the warranty. Cook super Litt. 330.

If two make a Feoffment in fee, and warrant the land to the Feoffee, and his heires, and the Feoffee doth release the warranty to one of the Feoffors; this doth not determine the warranty of the other as to the moyety. So if one doth enfeoff two with warranty, and the one of them doth release the warranty; this doth not extinguish the warranty for the other moiety, but it doth continue still.

A warranty also may lose his force by taking benefit or making use thereof; for after a man hath once taken advantage thereof, in some cases he can make no further use of it: of which read Cook super Litt. 393.

Of Waste.

THIS word, (waste) is sometimes taken for a wrong done by a Tenant to him in Reversion, where a Tenant for his own or anothers life, in Dower, for years, or by the courtesie of England, or a Guardian in Chivalry, when he to the prejudice of him in reversion, or the heir, doth make waste or spoile in the Houses, Woods, Gardens, Orchards or Lands he doth hold. And so it is either voluntary, when the Tenant doth willingly do it: or it is permissive and negligent, when the Tenant doth suffer it to be done. Termes Ley. Cook upon Litt. 1. part 53. 57.

This word is sometimes also taken for the Action or Writ that is given to relieve a man against such a wrong done, which is defined to be a Writ lying where any Tenant nant for life, years, in dower, by the courtesie, or Guardian in Chivalry, doth make waste, then he in Reversion shall have this Writ.

And this is either in the Tener, when it is brought against him that hath the present estate, or in the Tennis, when it is brought against him that had but now hath not the estate in the land: and by this Writ in the Tener, the waste being found, he shall recover treble damages, and locum vastatum, the place wasted, (i.) The Lessee for life or years that is convicted of this offence, shall lose, and the Plaintiff in this suit, if he recover, shall recover treble damages, and the place wasted: that is, if it be in a whole house, the house, the whole house; if it be in one or two roomes parsum, those roomes; if it be in a Close, as much of the Close as is wasted; if it be in Trees or Hedge-rows, the circuit of the root and no more; and if it be in the corner of a Wood here and there, that corner of the Wood only; but if it be in divers places of the Woods parsum & circumquaque, here and there, perhaps the whole wood; and this he shall recover, discharged of all incumbrances. So that if Lessee for life make a Lease for years, and after enter into the Land and make waste, and the Lessor recover the Land, in this Action he shall avoid the Lease made before the waste done. And if Lessee for life do waste, and after grant a rent out of the Land, and after in this Writ the Land is recovered, the Lessor shall hold it discharged. But if the waste be before the grant of the Rent, contra. Cook upon Litt. 233. But if it be in Tennis nothing can be recovered but damages. And if the waste be done by a Guardian in the Wards land, to the value of twenty shillings, the Ward may sue this Writ, and shall hereby gain his liberty; and the Guardian shall lose the wardship of body and land: And if this be not sufficient, the Ward also shall recover damages besides. *Martb. chap. 23. But a Tenant for life, or he that hath a lease estate then of fee simple, or fee-tail, may not have this Action. Noy 26. Cook upon Litt. 273. But it will not lye for an heir or grantee, for a waste done by the Tenant in the time of the Ancestor or Grantor: Nor can the Grantor, after this grant, bring an Action of Waste for a waste done by the Tenant before or after the Grant until Attornment; nor after Attornment will it lye for any waste done before Attornment; though it were not punished before by the Grantor. Dyer 31. Cook 6. 68. Perk. 93. 48 Ed. 3. 15. 9 H. 7. 20. And yet it is said, it an Action of waste be depending, and the ancestor dye, that the heir may finish this Action. Stat. 11 H. 6. 5.

And if two Copartners be of a Reversion, and a waste is committed, and one of them dye; in this case the Survivor and the Aunt may maintain the Action. Cook 1 part 53. A body politicke, and the Successor or Grantee of such a body that hath a Reversion, may have this action. But yet such persons cannot have this Action for any waste done in the time of their Predecessors. F.N.B. 54.

If a Lease be made for life, the remainder in tail to another, the remainder in fee to Lessee for life, and the Tenant for life do waste; he in the next remainder shall have the action against him, F.N.B. 90. Cook 1. 45.

And if there be tenant for life, the remainder to another for years, the remainder to a third in fee, or in tail to a third, or a third have the reversion, and the Tenant for life doth waste; in this case the action may be brought against him presently; but execution for the land may not be had till the Lease for yeares be ended. But if the mean lease be a lease for life, no Action will lye till the death or surrender of the Lessee. Remoto impedimento emergit Actio, Cook 5. 76. 2. 92. Fitz N. B. 59.

And if one make a Lease for life, and after grant the Reversion for years, no Action on will lye during the yeares. But, if after a Lease for life the Lessor shall make a Lease for yeares to begin after the estate for life ended: this is no impediment. Fitz Waste 18.

Also the Lord that hath a Reversion by Escheat, and one that had had a Reversion granted from the King, and he that hath a Reversion by devise; though the Tenant have not returned, may have this Action for waste done by Tenant, F.N.B. 60. And yet it seems in Kelw. 109. That this Action is not maintainable without a privity which is not in the case of the Lord in by Escheat.

If Tenant in tail make a lease for life of the Land, and the lessee for life do waste; the Tenant in tail shall have the Action. Brownl. 1. part 238.

If two Jointenants, Partners or Tenants in common be, and one of them before partition made, make a Lease to a stranger, and he do commit waste, they must both of them bring the Action; but he only that made the lease shall recover the damages. Joynder in Action.

And if A and B be Jointenants for life, the fee simple to B, and they two make a Lease for life, and the Lessee do waste; in this case they two must joyn in this Action. Jointenants. *13 H.7. 15. And if Tenant for life and he in Reversion or remainder in Fee joyn in a Lease for life or years, and this Lessee do waste, they must both joyn in this Action, and the first Lessee for life shall recover the place wasted, and the first Lessor the treble damages. *27 H.8.13. 22 H.6.24. If the Lands be granted to two, and the heirs of one of them, and the Tenant for life do waste; in this case the other Jointenant cannot have this Action, but his heirs may. F.N.B. 87. Cook 1 part 53. 200.

If a woman covert have any cause to bring this Action, she and her husband must joyn in it: and if they two make a Lease of their, or of the wives land, and the husband dye, and she take another husband, and the Lessee do waste, the husband and wife must bring the Action. Husband and Wife.

So if three Copartners divide the land, and one of them hath a Reversion to her part, and then she marry a husband, and after the Tenant do waste; in this case the husband and wife must joyn in the Action. 9 H.6.43. F.N.B. 57.

If there be husband and wife in remainder in special taile, and the wife dyeth without issue; in this case the Husband cannot now have this Writ against the Tenant; and if the Suit were begun, it will now abate by her death. Abatement. Cook upon Litt. 285.

This Action lyeth against a Tenant for life, either his own or another's life occupant, a general or special tenant in Dower, or by the Courtesie, a Tenant for years, though but for one year or half a year. *Glouc. chap. 5. In respect of the persons that do the wrong and against whom it lyeth, or not. And for what waste. Sec. 3

It lyeth against Lessees for life and yeeres, for waste done by themselves or strangers, and that whether they come by their estate by lease or devise. Plow. 10. Cook 1 part 53.

If Lessee for life make a Lease for yeers, and the Lessee for yeers do waste; he in reversion must have his remedy against the Lessee for life, and he shall have his counter remedy against the Lessee for yeers by Action of the Case. Pasch. 38. Eliz. B. R.

If Lessee for yeeres grant away part of his term, the Action must be brought against the first Lessee, and not against this Lessee of part of the term.

If

If Tenant in Dower, or by the Courtesie, assign or grant over his or her estate, and afterwards the Grantee do or suffer waste, the Tenant, not the assignee, must be sued. F. N. B. 56.

If a Lessee for life or yeares grant over his estate in the Land, but doth still take the profits of it, or grant it over to that end, that he in reversion may not know against whom to bring his Action; in this case he may bring his Action against the Lessee or his Assignee at his choice. Stat. 11. H. 6. 5. Cook 5. 77.

It lyeth against a Lessee for life or years, after he hath assigned his terme for the waste done by him before the Assignment. But for the waste done after the Assignment, the Action must be brought against the Assignee; and so each of them are to be charged for his own time. And yet if the Lessee begin a waste, and then grant over his estate, and the Grantee continue the wasting; in this case the Action may be laid against the Assignee. F. N. B. 56 Old N. B. 37.

If Tenant per antea vie do waste, and the life dye; yet the Tenant may be punished in this Action, Cook 1 part 285. Cook 7 2. 5 12.

If the Tenant grant his estate over on condition, and the grantee do waste, and the Tenant enter for the condition broken; the Action must be brought against the Grantee, Cook 1 part 54.

Executors. It will not lye against Executors or Administrators for a waste done by the Testator, for moritur cum persona, Kelw 105 F. N. B. 57.

And yet it will lye against the Executors of a Lessee for years, for waste continued by them: as if a Lessee for yeers begin a new waste by digging a Mine or the like, and devise the term to another; and the Executors enter and continue the waste, go to dig in the Mine or the like, and after assent to the Legacy; this Action will lye against the Executors for the continued waste, Cook 5 12. 10 Ed 4 1. Brownl 1 part 238. 2 part 133.

Infant. This Action lyeth against an Infant, not only for a waste done by himself, but also for a waste done by a stranger. Cook 1 53.

Husband and Wife. This Action lyeth against Husband and Wife. If a Lease be made to the wife alone for life or yeers, and she or her husband do make waste, this Action must be against them both while they are living, and it will not lye against one of them, F. N. B. 57. But if it be a Lease for life, and she dye, the Action is gone, and will not lye against the husband, albeit he did joyn in the waste: and yet if the husband be possessed of a term in the right of his wife, and he do waste, and then the wife dye; in this case he may be sued for this waste, Cook 1 part 54. Cook 5 75. 2 H. 4 3. And if she be Lessee, and take a husband that doth waste and dye, she may be charged for this. F. N. B. 58 59. N. B. 36.

If lands be given to husband and wife, and the heires of the body of the husband, or the heires of the body of the wife, and he dye, and she do waste; or she dye and he do waste; in this case the heire may have this Action against the husband or wife, as the case is F. N. B. 57.

It is said, That if a Husband and wife have a joynt estate, and the husband do waste and dye, and the wife agree to the estate, that the Action will lye against the surviving wife, for this waste of the husband. Sed quare Cook 1 53. N. B. 36 58 59. Brownl Waste 11.

Tenant in dower by the Courtesie. Sect. 4. If a Tenant in Dower, or by the Courtesie, grant over her or his estate, and afterwards waste is done; for this waste the Action must be brought by the heire against the Tenant, not the Assignee; and yet if such a Tenant by the Courtesie grant over his Estate to a stranger, after he hath attorned to the Grantee of a Reversion upon a Grant thereof made before, and the Assignee doth waste, in this case the Action must be brought against the Assignee, and not against the Tenant by the Courtesie. So if the wife Tenant in Dower grant her estate to a stranger, and after the heir grant the Reversion in Fee to another, and the Tenant attorn, and after the Assignee doth waste; in this case the Action must be brought against the Assignee or the Tenant in Dower; not the Tenant her selfe; for in both cases after the heire hath granted away his Reversion, the Tenants after Assignment of their Estates shall not be charge, Cook 1 part 54 3 10.

If there be two Jointenants, or Tenants in common, in Fee or for life, of a Wood or Common of Turbary, or fishing, or the like; and one of them doth waste against the will of his companion, he may sue the other, and he may be sued for this: otherwise it is of Partners. Cook 1 part 200.

If Tenant for life be disseised of his estate, and the Disseisor commit waste; the Lessee for life, not the Disseisor shall be charged in this Action for this wrong. Bro. Waste 36. N B 37.

If a stranger against the will of the Lessee, Tenant in Dower, &c. do waste; this Action may not be brought against the stranger, but the lessee or tenant for this waste; and he shall by an Action of Trespasse recover as much as he loseth against the stranger. De St 34 Cook 1 part 54.

It lyeth against the Guardian in Chivalry, for waste done by himself; but not for waste done by a stranger. Cook 67. 1 part 54. And so also his Grantee of the Wardship; but against each of them for the waste in his owne time only. And yet it is said, it will lie against the Assignee of this Guardian, for the waste done by the Guardian. Cook 5 12. Fitz Waste 10. If two Jointenants be of a Ward, and one of them do waste, both of them must be sued for it. Cook 1 part 54.

It is said it will lye against a Guardian in Socage for waste done by himself; though not for waste done by a stranger. F N B 59. But the contrary is affirmed by Cook 1 part 54.

Voluntary and negligent wastes are alike punishable. Dyer 281. The Lessee or Tenant is bound by Law to keep the houses in as good case and plight as they are when he comes to them; and if he doth not so, but suffer any part of it by his negligence to grow ruinous; this is waste for which the Lessor may sue the Lessee in this Action. Bro. Waste 130.

But for the further opening of this point, take these things.

1 To suffer it to decay, is waste; albeit there be no Timber upon the thing to repair it; for the Tenant must procure timber at his own charge.

2 To prostrate, abate or break down any of the houses, either the whole or part (that is) any of the principal walls, or walls of partitions in chambers; or else, whether they be of stone or mud, is waste. Bro. Waste 26. Kelm 37 10 H 7 2 5 F N B 59. And yet to throw down the posts or frame of a house remaining of an old building, or set up for a new building, it seemes is no waste. Bro. Waste 107.

3 If the house be uncovered by tempest, and the Tenant do not repair it in convenient time, this is waste. Cook 1 part 53.

4 To suffer the house to be burnt by negligence or mischance, is waste. Cook 1 part 53.

5 If the house be ruinous when the Tenant comes first into it, and hee pull it downe, and do not build it up againe, this is waste. Cook 1 part 53.

6 It is waste in the Tenant (as some say) to build up a new house though with timber of his own; yet others doubt of this: And if after it be new builded the Tenant suffer the house to decay, this is another waste. And yet to pull down an old house ready to fall, and to set up another with his own charge of the same length and breadth, is in the Tenant no waste. So neither to set up a house with his own timber that was blown down by wind or tempest, though it be lesser then the former house. Bro. Waste 39 98 Cook 1 part 53 12 H 4 6 11 Ed 2 Statute.

7 To take away, pull off, or break downe the Wainscots, Doors, Windowes, Benches, Furnaces, or any other the inseparable incidents of the house, being set up and fastned by the Lessor or Lessee, or whomsoever, is waste. Cook 4 94 1 part of his Inst 53.

8 To suffer the houses, covered at the time of the tenants taking to it, to be uncovered so long, as that thereby the principal pieces of timber of the house (viz.) the Beames, Rafteres, Sparres, Planchers, &c. do putrifie and rot, is waste. But the not covering of a new frame of building uncovered when the tenant comes to it, is not waste. And if it be uncovered when the tenant comes to it, though by this means meanes the house fall down, it is no waste: and if the uncovering do not produce the effect of marring the timber, this is not a waste. Cook 1 part 53 Broo Waste 69 455 82. 12 H 44. 10 H 72. F N B 59.

9. If the house be prostrate by tempests, floods, or burnt by lightning, or be prostrate by enemies, without any default or power to prevent it in the Tenant, or if at his coming into it, it be so ruinous, that it cannot be kept up, and it fall down, and the Tenant build it up again with such materials as remaine, and other timber of his own; or (as some say) the timber upon the ground, and build it no larger then it was, this is no waste. Cook 1 part 53, 54 Broo Waste 117 82. Yet I doubt of the last, for he is not in these cases bound to repaire it, nor are these spoiles any such waste, for which the Tenant is at all punishable. Cook 10 139 11 41 4 64 F N B 59 Broo Waste 19 130 Dyer 36 F N B 60 20 H 7 2.

In Trees and Woods.

The Tenant is to preserve the Timber Trees on the Land, and if he make spoyle in them, this is waste; for which he in reversion shall have this remedy.

But for the further opening of this point take these things.

1 To cut or break down or root up Trees that are or may be timber; as Oak, Ash, which are timber in all Countries; or other trees in some Countries where Timber is scarce: Elme whether young or old, above or under twenty yeares of age; to sell, build a new house or a new roome, or to any other purpose then towards the necessary repair of the old house or housing, being on the land at the time of the Lease, and in decay by age or tempest, is Waste. 15 H 7 21 Kelw. 95 11 H 4 11 12 H 7 1 Dyer 314 11 H 61 F N B 99 7 H 6 40 Cook 1 part 53.

2 To cut down timber for reparations at unseasonable times that it dye; or to cut it, and after to sell it, or employ it to any other use, is waste: And though after sale he buy it again, and imploy it to reparations; yet it is said this wil not help the case. 12 Ed 3 Waste 28

3 Some say, To cut downe timber to build new houses, broken or burnt down by fire, water, enemies, or the like hand of God, is waste; because he is not bound to repaire it; nor is it any waste in the Tenant. Dyer 36 Perk. 738. It hath been said, That if a Tenant cut down timber-trees, before there is need of reparations, and keep them till the timber be somewhat seasonable; or to cut down more then enough, so he keep it for that use, and do not mis-employ it, is no waste. M 37 6 38 Eliz. per curiam. But it seems the contrary hath been adjudged. M 39 40 Eliz. Com. B. in Gorges case. But if an apparant need appear, it may be cut a little before it be used. Cook 1 139 11 48 6 64 F N B 59.

4 So it is said, That to cut down timber for necessary reparations, and then to sell it and use his own, or so much thereof for reparations, or repair the houses with the money, is waste. 12 Ed 3 Waste 20. I doubt this first case. Cook 1 part 53.

5 To cut down timber to repaire the houses decayed by the Tenants default, it is waste, and a double waste, F N B 59. Cook 1 53. If a house be ruinous at the time of a Lease, and after fall, and the Tenant cut down timber to repaire it; this is no waste Cook 1 part 54.

6 To cut young timber trees to repair, when there is enough of fitter timber besides, is waste. 11 H 6 1 13 H 7 21 F N B 60.

7 To cut down all the under woods in a wood where no high-woods are growing amongst it, is waste. Broo. chap. 411. So, to cut down such a wood, and then to suffer Cattel to crop it, being newly felled, and kill it, or to root and stub it up, this is waste, F N B 59 Cook 1 53.

8 To cut down timber trees for fire-boot and hedg-boot, when there is enough other hoot, is waste, per two Justices. P. 7 7 ac. B. R.

9 To cut down such trees for fire, as are not fit for fire, being timber, and only hollow and dry at the top, is said to be waste: but if they be hollow and dry and dead, that they bear not fruit nor leaves in Summer; if then the Tenant cut down such trees for fire-boot this is not waste. And by this, it seems, otherwise they are not to be cut down for fire-boot, Dyer 332 Cook 1 part 53. And yet trees that will never be fit for timber (it seems) may be cut for that use, 11 H 6 1.

10. If a man lease his land wherein is an open Mine, to another, with all the Mines in it, for years; and the Lessee cut timber trees upon the land, to uphold the earth about the Mines, to keep it from falling; it seems this is no waste, Pasch 17 Jac Cook B.

11. To cut down more fire-boot, hay-boot, hedg-boot and house-boot (to keep it as he found it) than is necessary; or to cut down the green wood, when there is sufficient dry and dead wood, is waste, Broo Waste 130 FNB 59 Cook 1 part 53 88.

12. It is said, That to cut down Willows, Beech, Birch, Maple, or Aspe that grow in the sight and view of a Manor-House, or are a safeguard to it, is waste, 40 Edw 3 25 Cook 1 part 53.

13. To cut great Hazles in a Wood and Country, where is no other wood, may be (as some say) waste, 40 Edw 3 25 Broo Waste 21.

14. To shroud timber trees at seasonable times; to cut down, or fell Willow, or other trees that will not be timber, dead wood, or under wood, for fire, is no waste, FNB 59 60.

15. To fell Copices and under-woods, to sell every five, ten, or twenty years, as the course of the Country is, and Tenants have been used to do, is no waste, 10 H 7 2 FNB 59 60 11 H 6 1.

16. To cut or moote Thorns or Bushes growing in a ground for the bettering of it, is no waste, Dyer 37 43. So to cut up black-thorn to burn; though it be in a Champion Country, where fuel is scarce, M 8 Jac Curia. And yet it is said, it may be waste, to cut white-thorn in such a country; unless it be for reparations. So to suffer it to be destroyed. So it is said by some, That to cut down, or grub up quick-set hedges in a country where fuel is scarce, may be waste, Broo Tresp 136 134 411 Cook 1 part, folio 53. for that may be waste in a field-country, that is not waste in a woodland country. The breaking of a hedge in other cases, is no waste, Broo Waste, 34 See Brownl 1 part 2 part 46 167.

To cut down Fruit-trees, Apple-trees, or Pear-trees, or Plum-trees, or the like, growing in an Orchard or Garden; though it be for reparations, is waste. So to take away, cut, or pull up such trees half broken by the wind, or otherwise, while they do yet bear fruit, or the young springs of them that may bear fruit, is waste, 10 H 7 2 48 Edw 3 44 Broo Waste 19. And yet it is no waste to cut, or destroy such fruit-trees growing in the fields, out of an Orchard or Garden, nor in an Orchard and Garden when they are utterly subverted and fruitless, Broo Waste 82 39 Cook 1 part 53.

To dig or eare up the ground, to make gutters or gripes to the hurt of the ground, may be waste. So to eare up ancient deep Meadow, not ploughed in any mans memory; grub up wood and turn it into earable, or turn earable into a Wood, is waste, Dyer 37 Cook 1 p. 53. But to dig or gripe a foggie Meadow, for the bettering of it, is no waste: Or to let ones earable, or other ground lye fresh; or let Thorns or Weeds over-grow it; or to plough up ground that hath been ploughed within the memory of man; or that is sometimes earable, and sometimes Meadow; or sometimes Meadow, and sometimes Pasture; this is no waste, Dyer 361 FNB 59 2 H 6 11 Hill 8 Jac BRTresbams case. If the Tenant being bound to repair the Banks, for lack hereof suffer the water to overflow, and much to hurt the ground; this may be waste: But if the over-flowing be by some extraordinary flood, contra, Cook 10 139 1 part 53.

If the Tenant shall open, or dig new Quarrs for Coal, Stone, Brick, Metal, Gravel, Lime, Clay, or the like; this is waste; unless there be special words in his Lease, to warrant it: But it is no waste for the Tenant to dig forwards, in an old Mine that was open before. And if a Lease be made with the Mines; yet if the Lessee open any other Mines, than what was open before; this is a waste: But if no Mine were opened before; then it is said the Lessee may open the Mines, and not do waste, Cook 5 12 1 part 53 54. It is no waste to dig the Land for Gravel, and such like necessities for reparations, Cook 1 part 53 54. To sow earable ground to Woad, is said to be waste; because it will bear no corn the next year; Tresbam's case. To suffer earable to be drowned,

drowned, so that it turn to clay; or to suffer Medows to be drowned, so that it turn to be hereby Rushie, and little worth, may be waste, 20 Hen 6 1 Brownl 1 part 241.

In Parks or other things.

To suffer the Walls, or Pale of a Park to be so decayed, that it want inclosure, that the Deer are, or may be dispersed, may be a waste, Broo 130 Cook 1 part 53. So to kill or destroy all the Fish in a Pond, may be waste, 6 R 2 Statham. So to take so many young out of a Pigeon-house, Warren, Park, Vivarie, Estagnes, or the like, not maintaining that store that was there when the Tenant came first, may be a waste, Cook 1 part 53. It is said, That to suffer a mud-wall, thatched, or tyled, to be uncovered, whereby it perish and fall, is a waste. Bro Waste 39. But if it be uncovered when the Tenant comes to it, it is said to be no waste; and so though he take it down, Bro Waste 94 Cook 1 part 53. But none of these things will be waste in a Tenant, where he doth them by the leave or command of the Landlord, Dyer 37 Kelm 37. 8 H 8 5. nor when his Lease is without impeachment of waste.

In respect of the Case. Sec 6.

If one demise a Close, Habendum the Close with the Trees; and the Lessee cut the Trees, this is a Waste: for the Trees do not pass by the Habendum, being not in the premises of the Deed, Pasch 7 Jac Co B Sir Francis Leakes case.

Trespass.

If one make a Lease for years or life, by words of Demise and Grant of a Close with all the Timber-trees except Oaks, and the Lessee cut the trees that are not Oaks, this is waste, Dyer 375 314 Cook 11 48. If the Lessor make his Lease to the Lessee excepting the Trees, and the Lessee cut the trees; in this case the Lessor must have an Action of Trespass for the Wrong, and not an action of Waste: for the Trees were not let, Dyer 19 Purfrayes case M 9 Jac Goldsb 1 pl 1. If the Lessor be bound to repair; and the Lessee do it himself; this is not waste, Cook 1 part 54. If the Lessee cut down timber, or pull down houses, and the Lessor take it away, yet the action lieth against the Lessee for this, Cook 4 64 11 48. So, if a Lessee cut timber for Repair, and sell it, and then buy it again and repair the Houses with it, yet the Action will lie for the cutting of it, Broo 112. If the Lessee have covenanted not to do waste, and he do waste; yet the Lessor may have this Action, and remedy upon his Covenant also, M 9 Jac. Covenries case. If the Lessor Covenant with the Lessee that he shall take as much timber as he will, and he cut Timber: it seems either this is no waste, or the Covenant may be pleaded by way of Rebuttal, Purfrayes case, M 9 Jac. If the Lessor and Lessee together, do such an act as is waste, no action will lie for this. So if the Lessor himself do the thing, Dyer 37 Kelm 37 Perk 182 203. So, if the Lessee do it by leave or warrant from the Lessor, 18 H 8 5. If the Lessee do any thing upon the Land, which is a waste, before the Lease begin, it seems this is not actionable, Perk Sett 602. If the ruine be caused by the extraordinary hand of God, as by Fire, Wind, or Water; this Action will not lie for this, Cook 64 Broo Waste 31.

If the Lease be made without impeachment of waste, the Lessee cannot do waste.

Without Impeachment of Waste, How it shall be taken.

Sec 7.

But for the opening of this clause, Without Impeachment of Waste, and to shew the Law herein, these things are to be known.

1. An Impeachment of Waste, doth signifie a restraint from committing of Waste in Lands or Tenements: And without Impeachment, doth signifie a liberty to do waste, and an estate without any such restraint, Cook 11 82.

2. These, or the like words inserted into the Deed, are said to be annexed to the Estate, do change the quality of the Estate, and make the Tenant, herein, in the nature of a Tenant in tail; and it addeth a priviledge thereunto, and they give the Lessee a power and interest to make waste, and to dispose the thing to his own use; so that now he hath a general property in that thing wherein before he had only a special property; so that now he may cut down Trees, or pull down Houses, and then, or if they be thrown or cut down by others, he may take the Wood and Timber to himself: And if the Lessor sue this Action for this waste, the Tenant may bar him with this clause, Cook 11 81. 2 81 114 Marlb chap 23 Plow 135 141. Cook 6 63.

3. But it must be those very words, or of the like sense: For if the words be without without Impeachment of waste by any Writ of waste, these words are not so large, they do not give such a power to the Tenant, nor alter the Property, but only discharge the Action; so that the Landlord can bring no Action against the Tenant for the waste done Dyer 204 Cook 11 82 83.

4. The words must be inserted in the same Deed whereby the Estate is made, or another Deed made at the same time; for if he make his Lease without this Clause, and after willeth that the Lessee shall hold without Impeachment of waste, it is said, these words work nothing to discharge Action or give an Interest, Cook 11 82 83 Plow 556 557.

5. And yet if A make a Lease for years to B, and among other Covenants doth insert this. And the said A doth for him and his heirs covenant with B that he, his executors and assignes, shall at all times during the said term, fell, cut down, all the wood, trees and hedges growing upon the land, and the same carry away and convert to his own use, without any let of the Lessor, his heirs or assignes; it is thought that these words will amount to this clause, and discharge the Lessee; And this was the Opinion of divers Councillors, M. 10 Car. If a Lease be made with this clause, Proviso, quod non prosterneat domum voluntarie; if in this case the Lessee throw down any of the houses, it will be waste, Plow. 153. 9 Hen. 6. 35. So if one make a Lease for life, and by Deed grant, that if any waste be done, it shall be redressed by neighbours, and not by Suit or Plea; yet an Action of waste will lye, Cook 1 part 53.

6. This priviledge where it is, may be lost; for it is annexed only to privity of Estate. And therefore if one that hath this priviledge annexed to his Estate, agree to change his Estate, the priviledge is gone. And therefore, if he that hath a Lease for years, with this clause in his Deed, accept of a Deed of confirmation of his Estate, without this clause: Or if a Lease be made to a man for another's life, with this clause, the remainder to him for his own life without this clause; the priviledge by the extinguishment of the estate is gone. So if Tenant in tail, after possibility of issue extinct (which holdeth after this manner) granteth away his estate to another; by this the priviledge is gone, Cook 11. 83. And yet it is held, if Lessee for years, having this clause in his Lease, do assign over his term, to a stranger, that this priviledge is not gone; but shall go to the Assignee, and the Assignee of the Assignee in infinitum; for the Tenant in tail hath only a personal priviledge, or priviledge in Law: but this is an actual priviledge, annexed by the Lessor to the Estate, and shall go with it. And of this opinion were divers Councillors in Mich. Term 10 Car.

A man makes a Feoffment to the use of himself and his wife, et alterius eorum diutius viventis absque impetitione vasti durantibus vitis ipsorum; in this case if the husband die, the wife shall hold the land without Impeachment of waste, Goldsb. 31.

Some have said, That this Action lyeth not, except the damage come to six-pence; and that the Plaintiff cannot have Judgement where the waste comes but to twelve-pence; others where it comes but to three-pence; for de minimis non curat Lex. And yet Cook in his 1. part of his inst. f. 54. saith, That waste done in trees, to the value of three shillings four-pence, is adjudged waste; and that many little wastes may make up a Value. And it seems, by the common practice, it will lye for any value; only the Plaintiff must be sure to declare for enough; otherwise the Declaration is not good. But if so he declare: then if the Jury find but one peny damage, it is good, Broo. Waste 20. 70. 74. Plow. 329. 9. H. 6. 66. 38. H. 8. 7.

If Tenant in tail bring this Action, and hanging the Action, the Estate in tail determine, and the Plaintiff become Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct: hereby the action of Waste is gone. So if the Tenant or he in Reversion die, the Action is gone; and if the Suit were begun, it must abate. So, if after the waste is done the Reversion be put out of that estate, wherein it was, as if it be granted away to a stranger; and in this case the taking of it back again will not revive the Action. If he that hath the Reversion grant it to the use of himself, and his wife, and his heirs; the waste in these cases is dis-punishable, Cook 1 part 53.

The Pleas to this Action may be either general or special; the general Plea is Nul Waste fait. The special Pleas are many, either in a way of Justification, or Excuse, as the case is. It is a good Plea, if the waste be laid to be in not reparations; that it was repaired before the Action brought: This must be pleaded specially. But to say, it was repaired after the action was brought, is no good Plea, Cook 5. 119. 13. H. 7. 20. Cook 4. 64. 11. 48. So it is a good Plea to any waste, that the Lessor gave authority to do it, Kelw. 37. Broo. Done 13. It is no good Plea to say, That the Plaintiff did covenant to deliver Timber from off the thing to do it, and refused; for the Defendant in this case, may take it. But if the agreement were, That he should have it from another thing, perhaps the Plea may be good, Broo. Waste 36. Brownl. 1 part 240. 241.

Pleas: What shall be said a good Plea in this Action, or the

It is a good Plea to say, The House, or Trees, were burnt or spoyled with fire, with water, or by wind; that the ruine was caused by some extraordinary Act of God, Broo. waste 31. Cook 4. 64. So it is a good Plea to say, the house fell before the Lease; or that the Lease is surrendered to the Lessor, and he hath accepted it; or that the Plaintiff hath entred upon the land, and before his entrie there was no waste done; or that the Plaintiff himself did the waste; or that the house was so decayed, at the time of the Lease, that it could not be upheld; or that the house fell with tempest, or was burnt; or that the Plaintiff hath granted away his Estate, and before the Grant there was no waste done; or that the Plaintiff hath by good words released it; or that the Lease was made without Impeachment of waste, 12. H. 4. 6. 8. H. 5. 8. Broo. waste 18. 29. 33. 54. Finches ley 55. But it is no good Plea for the Defendant to say, He had nothing in the land at the time of the waste done, Broo. waste 22.

It is no good Plea in this action, for cutting down timber, or pulling down the house, that the Lessor took away the timber or materials, Cook 4. 64. 11. 48. Nor that the Lessor hath a Covenant from the Lessee, not to do waste, Curia M. 9. jar, in Covenories case.

It is not a good Plea. for the Tenant, in an Action of waste, for cutting Timber, to say, That he cut it, and keeps it till there shall be need. Adjudg. Gorges vers. Stanfield, M. 39. 40. Eliz. Cook B. Nor to say, He cut for necessary reparations; unless he say withal, That he employed it to that purpose, Dyer 332. And yet no doubt, it may be justified to cut it a little before it be used, when an occasion of use is apparently at hand.

Evidence.

It is a good Plea, to say, He cut it to make Posts to part Inclosures; if he can withal prescribe, that there have been alwayes such an Inclosure there, Dyer 332. And in all these cases, upon the general issue, the Defendant may give in Evidence, any thing that is no waste, as by Enemies, Tempest, Lightning, or the like. But he cannot give in Evidence, justifiable waste, as to repair the house, or the like; nor that which is in excuse, as, That he repaired it before the Action brought; and so for the like, Dyer 276. 212. Cook upon List. 283. 12. H. 8. 1. 29. Edw. 3. waste 30. But now by the late Act of 23. Octob. 1650. Not guilty, or some such other general issue may be pleaded, and the special matter may be given in Evidence.

Estreupement.
Prohibition.

Estreupement is sometimes taken for the Waste it self, and sometimes for a Writ in the nature of a Prohibition to forbid the making or doing of any Waste, F. N. B. 60. 61.

Standils.

AS to this these things are to be known,
1 He that doth fell or cut any Copice or Underwoods, or wood or trees in waste ground, if it be not above twenty four yeares growth (unlesse it be in some special cases) must leave standing and unfelled in every acre twelve Standils or storers of Oak, if there be so many there, or otherwise so many of Elme, Ash, Asp, or Beech to make them up twelve. And those of such as are like to make timber, and were left the time the wood was cut last before, and if there be not so many of them, then so many others of those that are standing at the time of the fell of the most lively trees, and those standils so left must be preserved and not cut until they be ten inches square within three foot of the ground, under pain of three shillings and four pence for every tree so cut and not left before, or not preserved or cut after; and if the wood be above twenty four yeares growth, then he must leave standing twelve great Oaks, or if these be not so many, other trees, and these must afterwards be preserved and not cut down twenty years after (except it be to repair the Owners house, water-works, garden, Pales of Parks, or the like) under the pain of 6 s 8 d for every tree not so left, and being left, not after preserved. Stat 13 El 25 35 H 8 17.

2 He that is Lord or owner of a wood wherein others have common, cannot fell any part of it, (except it be for his own private use, (i.) for reparations of his house, for fire, or the like) until he hath a fourth part divided from the rest, and fenced and inclosed inclosed by agreement between him and the Commoners and Tenants, or (if they Inclosure. cannot agree upon the division) by order of two Justices of the Peace, and then he may sell the fourth part (but he must leave and preserve the Standils as before) and Standals.

after that division and felling, the Commoners are to have Common there, but in all the other three parts they must take their common as before time, and therein during the Inclosure, the Lord is to have no Common. Stat. 13 El 25 35 H Common.

the house of the Owner of the wood, or to which the wood doth belong, under paine of forty shillings for every acre. 35 H 8 chap 17 13 El 25.

of twenty four yeers, he must enclose it or preserve it nine yeers, under pain of 3 s

Game, there he must inclose or preserve it four yeers only, and no more under the like pain. But if any stranger spoile the bounds, he must bear the penalty, nor the Ow-

Tree

For Trees these things are to be known,

1 The property of the Trees upon the ground of a Lessee for years or life be partly in him that hath fee, for the body of the timber trees standing and fallen are his, but the boughs and fruit are the Tenants, and the trees, when dead, for fireboot, also so much of the timber as is necessary for house-boot, plow-boot, &c. The bodies of trees not timber, the Lessee may cut down and burn also. See Waste Sect. 5. Tres. passe Sect. 18. Property.

2 If one that is Lessee for years have a Lease without impeachment of Waste, here the trees fallen, and standing are the Tenants or Lessees, and not the Lessors. See Waste. See Estates for years, and House-boot, &c.

CHAP. CLXIX.

Of Wayes and Bridges, and Women.

Way, what.

The Kinds.

Way is a passage for men to travel in. And there be three kinds of wayes.

1 A foot-way; and this was the first way.

2 A foot and horse way, and this is commonly called a pack and a prime, because it is both a foot way, which is the first and Prime way, and a pack and drift way also, which doth contain the other two. And also 3. A Cart-way; and this is it which in the Law Books is called Chimin. And from hence doth come the word Chiminage, which doth signify Chiminage, what.

Pedagium, what.

Sect. 1.

a Toll due by Custome for the having of a way through a Forrest (which is sometimes in ancient Records called Pedagium.) And this way also is twofold.

1 Publick, the which is called the Lord Protector's high-way, or the Royal way, which is the way that leadeth from one Village to another, and to Market Townes; this is a way for all men, and wherein every man ought to passe to and fro without let; which is called the Lord Protector's high-way, because the Lord Protector hath at all times passage in it for himself and all his people, and he may punish all the Nunces and abuses done in it.

2. Private, and then it is either vicinalis; (i.) That which doth belong to a Village or Town, or that which is in, or leadeth to or from a Village, or doth serve for a Village, to lead to the high-way, Church, Church, Market, field, or the like. And this way is called, Common. 2 Particular. And this way is where one or more, hath by grant or Prescription, through another mans ground, either from one close to another, or from his house into the field, high-way or the like: And this way is sometimes appendant (that is) adjoining to some other thing, as house or land, and appertaining thereunto; as if a man hire a close or pasture, and hath a Covenant for ingresse and egress to and from the said close, through the ground of some other man, through which otherwise he might not passe: or it may be that which is called Real, which is when a man purchaseth a way through the ground of another man, for such as do, or shall dwell in such a house, or for such as shall be owners of such a Manor for ever; Or it is in grosse (i.) Such a way as a man doth hold principally and solely by it self: As where one doth Covenant for a way through the ground of another man for himself and his heires. So that there are high-ways, common-ways, and private ways. Terms of the Law. Cook upon Litt 56. Kyth. fol. 137. 35.

As touching the Lord Protectors High-way, these things are to be knowne,

1 That the Protector hath not, nor claimeth more therein but the free passage of him and his subjects as an easment, the which if any man do deny or interrupt them in, he may be punished for it.

2 The nature of ways, and the interest of the Protector and Subject in the High ways.

2 That the subject hath not, nor claimeth more therein of right, but a liberty and freedom for his travel and passage, the which he may justifie by Prescription, and no man can deny it to him.

3 The subject can make no other use of it but for his travel, and therefore he may not build houses or lay his soyle or blocks upon it, but he will be punishable for it, nor will a Prescription in this case enable him so to do

Prescription.

4 The soil and the freehold of the same and all the profits thereof, as trees, grasse, and the like, do belong to the Lord or Owner of the Soil or Manor, and not to the L. Protector or his Subjects in general, nor to him whose ground is next adjoining: And therefore the Lord or owner of the soyle may lay the Hills there, or do any thing for the bettering of the high-way; or he may take the profits, the Trees, Mines or the like, so as he do not prejudice the way thereby; for this he may not do, albeit he pretend a prescription for it. And the Franchise of the high-way doth belong to the Lord of the soil, and he shall have a Purpresture. And hence it is that by the Common Law the Lord or Owner of the Soil, is bound to cut down the trees and bushes therein that do offend. And hence it was that if one had given a Manor, rendring rent, and within this Manor there had been a great street, that the Donor might have distrained for his rent in this street, for it was reputed within the Fee, until the Statute of Maribridge came, which did forbid the taking of a distresse in the high-way; and yet in cases where the high-way doth go through a mans several grounds, the Owner of the ground and not the Lord of the Manor shall have the trees and profits of the high-way. *Inter Cantrel & Church, Hillar. 42. Distress.

Trees.

And any man (as it seemes) by Prescription may have Common of Common. pasture and feeding for his Cattel in the high-way, albeit the soile belong to another.

5 The Lord Protector and subject hath such a right to this easment, that they cannot by any act they can do, suspend or extinguish it.

Extinguishment.

6 As touching the private wayes to common fields and the like, it is held, that the freehold of them, and all the profits thereof do belong to him that hath the ground next adjoining, and therefore that he may cut the trees, and take the profits thereof.

7 As touching the partieuclar way, this with all the profit thereof doth belong to the Owner of the Soile, but he that hath the way hath interest in the same according to his Title by Prescription or grant; but this is such an interest as may by Acts done by him that hath this title, be suspended or extinguished. *Fitz. & Broo. Action of the Case.

8. The Inhabitants of a Parish by the Common-Law are to Repair all the High-ways of the Parish, unless Prescription do binde any other to it. March 26.

Every man by the Common-law may Prescribe to pass and repass in the Lord Protectors High-way; and by prescription men may have a private way: and therefore the Inhabitants of a Village, being but Tenants at will, may prescribe to have a way to Church, or to Market, or into their Fields; and if they say, that the Custom and Usage of the Village of D, hath been time out of minde, that the Inhabitants of the same Village have had a way over such a Ground or Close, this is good. Also, one or some few men, may prescribe to have a way to his Field or Close, through another mans Close. And in these cases it is held, men may prescribe to have a way through a Church or Church-yard, and therefore much more through a common house, or through an Orchard or Garden. But in all these cases when a man is to make or set out his title by his prescription, he must take care how he doth prescribe; viz. By what Persons, and in whose Names to make the prescription, and to set forth the particulars, what way he doth claim, and which way it is to go: As if a man claim a way from his house, to such a Close called B, he must set forth what way, whether Horse or Foot way he claimeth, and by and through what places his way is to go, or otherwise his pleading will be faulty, Dyer 71. 18. Edw. 4. 3. Broo. prescript. 76. Cook 6. 60. 18. Edw. 4. 8. Broo. prescript. 91. & 76.

To erect a House, or Wall upon the High-way, to set up a House of Office, to lay Soyl or Carrion in or upon the high-way, if it be an annoyance to the Traveller; to dig a ditch athwart the way, or any way to straiten and lessen the way, not to scour the ditches, but to suffer them to fill, that the water doth overflow into the way, or otherwise not to repair but to suffer the way to be decayed; all these, and such like things, in case of the Lord Protectors high-way, are disturbances, and wrongs to the Lord Protector and his Subjects. By the Common Law and Custom of England, no Carrier or other man ought to draw or carry above 2000 weight, and with a Waggon having but two wheels and but four horses, and he that doth draw more and hurt the wayes, may be fined and imprisoned for it. And now by the new Law, if he draw with more than 5 Horses, or 6 Oxen and a Horse, it is under pain of 20*s.* Ord. April 12. 1644. March 135. pl. 220. For the punishment and redress whereof, no one man in particular may have an Action of the Case, for then every man might have an Action. But this is to be punished and redressed most properly at a Leet, or the Upper-Bench, or in the Exchequer at the Sheriffs Turn by Presentment, or at the Sessions by Indictment; in which case any Subject that will, may be a prosecutor in the Lord Protectors Name: Or if the common Nuisance in this case be in erecting, any man may prosecute the thing erected. If the fault be in not repairing, the party that ought to repair, must be punished: as, if it be the Inhabitants of the Parish that should repair, and they do not, they must be punished: and if any man be bound by his Tenure or otherwise to repair, and do not, he is to be punished for it, and yet the Lord of the Soyl may have a private Action against a man that shall dig in the soyle of the Lord Protectors high-way: Also if any man in particular shall meet with any special harm by the publick Nuisance, as if a man lay a tree, or dig a pit in the high-way, and my Horse stumble at it and hurt me, or himself thereby, albeit there be a great deal of room besides in the high-way; in this case he may have a special action of the case, Agreed in Sir Edward Duncombes case, Trin. 10. B. R. But if the high-way lead through a Corn-field, or such like place, and a man hath land on both sides, and he inclose on both sides leaving the way broader than it was before, this straiting of the way in this case is not punishable: And yet in this case of a common field, if the high-way lying in it be ill for travelling, the Passengers may go into the land adjoining, and if the next land be deep, into the next to that, and if the land be inclosed, and the way deep, he may break the inclosure, and go on the other side, Cook 9. 113. 3. 73. 27. H. 8. 27. 13. H. 8. 16. Cook upon Litt. 56. 27. Broo. Action of the Case, 93. 5. Edw. 4. 2. 2 Ed. 4. 9. Kyth. 34. 35. 3. H. 6. 26.

The same things for the most part that are Disturbances to a man in the Protectors high-way, are Disturbances to men in other wayes, but they are not to have the same Remedy; for if the Inhabitants of a Village have a way to their Church, or otherwise, therwise, and they are disturbed by any means that they cannot use their way as formerly they have done; in this case every man of them may have an Action of the Case against the disturber; and every Commoner may have against a Stranger, that doth disturb them in their Common: for otherwise they were without Remedy; for they cannot punish this wrong in a Leet: and if any one, or more men have a private way to a Close, &c. and another disturbe him in it, he is to have an Action of the Case, or in some cases an Assise of Nuisance: Or if his way be stopped, he may open it, or go besides it; and therefore in an Action of Trespass for breaking of ones Close, the Defendant pleaded, That time out of mind he hath had a way through it, and that the Plaintiff being owner of the land hath plowed it, and stopped the way with thorn; whereby the Defendant being barred of his ancient way, went besides it upon the land adjoining to his way. And this was adjudged a good Plea in Horn and Winslades case, M. 6. Jac. B. R. But in these things some take Differences, and say, Where a man hath the Freehold of the thing whereto the way is appendant, or appurtenant, there he must have an Assise, and where not, an Action of the Case: And where the way is wholly stopped, there the party grieved shall have an Assise; but where it is but urained only, there an Action of the Case: and where the stopping is by the Ter-tenant an Assise lyeth, but when it is by a Stranger, an Action of the Case lyeth: and where one doth not repair so that I cannot pass, there I must have an Action of the Case, but where he doth erect or levy any Nuisance in it, I must have an Assise, F. N. B. 183. 184. Br. Nuisance 13. Dyer 250. Cook 5. 73. 27. H. 8. 27. 14. H. 8. 32.

Action of the Case.

Trespass.

Amongst Copy-holders, who can have no Assise nor Action of the Case for wrong done in their wayes, it is usual to enquire at their Courts, and to pain the parties that do wrong, and to Assesse the pain; for in this case they may do so; because they have no other remedy, Kyack 35.

Sett. 3.

All men that have Ditches adjoining to the high-ways, are bound to cleanse them, though there be no Prescription against them for it. (But for the Ditches that do not adjoin, those they are not bound to cleanse, unless there can be alledged some Prescription against them in it.) And it seems to me by the same Reason; that those that have trees, whose boughs do over-hang and annoy the high-ways, are bound to lop them, yet the Opinion of Ribbit is contrary, in 8. Hen. 7. 5. But now by the Statutes, they are bound to scour their Ditches, and cut their Trees and Bushes, under pain of ten shillings for every default, 8. Hen. 7. 5.

5. Of Amendment of Wayes and Bridges. And how it shall be. Prescription.

The Constables and Church-wardens of every Parish, with some of the Parishioners must upon Easter munday or wednesday, yearly appoint and choose Surveyors for that year for amending the high-ways: those Surveyors are to see to the amendment of the wayes, and for that end to require the ayd and help of the neighbourhood, according to the Statutes, which see at large, 2. & 3. Ph. & M. cap. 8. 18. Eliz. chap. 9. 3. Jac. cap. 19.

Surveyors.

But now by a new Additional Law, made by the Lord Protector and his Council, 31 March 1654. There is a further Provision for the Repair of the high-ways. The Heads whereof are these:

1. That two, or more of every Parish that have 20*l.* a year, or 100*l.* in Goods, must be chosen yearly in every Parish the first uesday after the 25 of March for Surveyors.
2. They are to be sworn before a Justice of Peace.
3. They must look so, and amend all the High-ways and Bridges in the Countries, Streets, and Pavements of Towns, and reforme Nuisances therein.
4. They may with consent of one Justice, make and levy any Rate not exceeding twelve pence a pound upon the Inhabitants of the Parish to amend the high-way.
5. With this Money they may hire men and Plowes and amend the High-ways, &c.
6. Take Materials in any mans Entable or Pasture.
7. Force men to frow their Ditches, turn their Waters, &c.

Cccccc 2

8. If

8. If the Parish be Poor and not able to do it, it shall have help from other Parishes.

9. If any thing be given to the Repair of High-ways and mis-employed, the Justices at their Quarter Sessions may order it.

10. These Surveyors may seize and keep every Horse, or Mare, above 5 in a Plow, or Horse, Ox, that is above 6 Oxen and one Mare in a Plow or Cart that passeth through the Town, and keep it 7 dayes till the Owner pay twenty shillings a Horse, Mare, or Ox above the same number, and if the Owner will not pay it, he may sell the same, and pay the twenty shillings, and give the Owner the rest.

By-laws.

11. The Parish may also make By-laws for their High-ways, and being confirmed at the Quarter Sessions must be obeyed.

12. All the Fines and Forfeitures by this Law, and the former Laws, are to go, and be employed by these Officers towards the Repair of the High-ways. But for all these things, see them at large in my Justice of Peace Office, the Third Edition.

By the Ancient Common-Laws, Villages are bound to Repair their High-ways, and may be punished for their Decay, and if any do break down, straiten, corrupt, or mar the High-ways, he is punishable in the Kings Bench, or before Justices of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer, Lect, or the like, 27. Aff. 65. Crompt. jur. 76.

So all Purprestures or Nuisances made upon the Protector's high-way by Land or Water, to the damage of the Protector and his people, is unpunishable there. idem And he that hath land adjoyning to any high-way, by the common-law (before any statutes) was and is chargeable of common-right to cleanse and scour the ditches adjoyning to the high-way. H. 8. 7. Brio. Nuisance 28. If a man inclose the high-way and put it within his own ground, the parish is not to repair it, but he must repair it himself, Trin. 10. Car. B. R. per curiam in Sir Edw. Duntombes case. By an ancient Statute the high-ways from one Market town to another ought to be enlarged, and all the Bushes and small Woods neere it to be cut down, that there be no lurking places for Thieves within two hundred foot of either side; and if by default of the same any Robbery were done, the Lord of the place ought to answer it, and if any Murder, the Lord shall be fined. And for the ways within the Kings Forreills and demean lands ought to be enlarged, and by the statute it is provided, That if a Park be taken from the high-way, the Lord shall set his Wall or Pale two hundred foot from the high-way, or that he may make such a Wall, Dike, or Hedge, that Offenders may not pass to and fro to do evil, Stat. of Wincestr. 13. Edw. 1. 5. and 1. 1. idem

Bridges.

Pontibus reparandis, what

Pontage, what.

If Bridges be decayed, and any one or more is bound by Prescription to repair them, he or they shall be compelled to it. And for this purpose it seems is the ancient Writ in the Register called Pontibus Reparandis, which is a Writ directed to the Sheriff, to will him to command one or more to repair a Bridge to whom it belongeth. And for this was the Pontage, which doth signifie either a Contribution towards the maintenance or re-edifying of Bridges, or a Toll taken for this purpose of all those that pass over Bridges, West. 2 chap. 2. 39, Eliz. 24. Crompt. jur. p. 199. Regist. Orig. fol. 153. Four Justices, whereof one of the Quorum, may take order for amendment of Bridges in the high-ways, and compel them to it that ought to mend them; and if it be uncertain who ought to do it, they may set a Rate upon the Neighbor-hood, and make them do it, and appoint Surveyors to see it done: But no man unless it be in this course shall be distrained to make any Bridges, but such as have been used to do it, St. 21 H. 8. 5. H. 3. cap. 15. For Example, If a man covenant with another and enters into Bond for the performance of his covenant, the Bond is said to be collateral Assurance, because it is external, and that which is without the nature and essence of the covenant. And Crompt. 185 saith, That to be subject to the feeding of the Kings Deer is collateral to the Soyl within the Forrest. So the liberty to pitch shades or standings for a Fair in the Soyl of another man, is collateral to the land. The private woods of a common person cannot be cut down without the Lord Protectors license, for it is a prerogative collateral to the soyl.
